Tennent (ten'ent), Gilbert. b. in County Armagh, Ireland, Feb. 5, 1703; d. July 23, 1764. American Presbyterian clergyman, noted as one of the leaders of the religious revival known as the Great Awakening (1739-40); son of William Tennent (1673-1745). He came (c1717) to America, was licensed (1725) and ordained (1726) by the Philadelphia Presbytery, and by his powerful exhortations helped create the atmosphere in which the Great Awakening flourished after the arrival (1739) of the English preacher George Whitefield. He played a leading role in the Presbyterian schism of 1741 and in 1743 became the head of a minority-wing church at Philadelphia.

Tennent, Sir James Emerson. [Original name, James Emerson.] b. at Belfast, Ireland, April 7, 1804; d. at London, March 6, 1869. British traveler, politician, and author. He was returned as member of Parliament for Belfast in 1832, and was colonial secretary at Ceylon (1845-50), and permanent secretary of the Board of Trade (1852-67). He published Picture of Greece (1826), Letters from the Aegean (1829), History of Modern Times (1830), Christianity in Ceylon (1850). Ceylon, Physical, Historical, and Topographical (1859), and others.

Tennent, William. b. in Ireland, 1673; d. May 6, 1745. American Presbyterian clergyman. Graduating (1695) from the University of Edinburgh, he was ordained (1706) a priest in the Church of Ireland, came (c1717) to Philadelphia, was admitted (1718) to the Presbyterian ministry by the Synod of Philadelphia, was a pastor (1720-26) at Bedford, N.Y., and served (1726-46) at Neshauniny, Pa. In 1736 he built his "Log College" at Neshauniny, where he prepared candidates for the Presbyterian ministry (it was a precursor of Princeton). His teachings were influential in precipitating the Presbyterian schism of 1741.

Tennent, William. b. in County Armagh, Ireland, June 3, 1705; d. March 8, 1777. American Presbyterian clergyman: son of William Tennent (1673-1745). He arrived (c1717) in America, was educated at his father's school, the "Log College" at Neshauniny, Pa., prepared for the ministry under his brother, Gilbert, was ordained (1733) by the Philadelphia Presbytery, and served (1733-77) as pastor at Freehold, N.J.

Tennessee (ten'ē.sē, ten'ē.sē). [Called the "Volunteer State."] State of the SE United States, bounded by Kentucky and Virginia on the N, North Carolina on the E, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi on the S, and Arkansas and Missouri (separated by the Mississippi River) on the W; a Southern State.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Tennessee is divided for administrative purposes into 95 counties. The state sends ten representatives to Congress, and has 12 electoral votes. Leading cities are Chattanooga, Knoxville, Memphis, and Nashville. Capital, Nashville; area, 41,961 sq. mi. (42,246 sq. mi., including water); pop. 3,291,718 (1950), an increase of 12.9 percent over the 1940 figure. The state ranks 34th in area, and 16th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The state is mountainous in the E, containing the Great Smoky Mountains. A small area in this region has been set aside as Great Smoky Mountains National Park (ab. 720 sq. mi.; established 1930), half in Tennessee and half in North Carolina; it includes thick forests of virgin red spruce and a remarkably varied collection of flora. Clinchmans Dome (6,642 ft.) in this grouplies on the North Carolina and Tennessee boundary. West of the mountains is a portion of the Cumberland Plateau (or Cumberland Mountains). The Cumberland Gap, a famous pass through the plateau, used by Daniel Boone, is situated in the NE. Lookout Mountain, in the SE near Chattanooga and extending into Georgia and Alabama, was the scene of a battle during the Civil War, in which Union forces won (Nov. 24, 1863) a victory. The principal river of the state is the Mississippi, on the W boundary. The Cumberland River enters the state in the NE and forms a loop across the N part before reentering Kentucky. The Tennessee River is formed in the E part of the state, near Knoxville, by the Holston River and the French Broad River and flows SW into Alabama and Mississippi before turning N and flowing through W Tennessee and into Kentucky. The river and its tributaries have been developed for electric power, storage, flood control, and navigation by the Tennessee Valley Authority, created by Congress in 1933. Much of the region (ab. 41,000 sq. mi.) under this system lies in W and E Tennessee. Of the dams belonging to the system Norris Dam, N of Knoxville and on the Clinch River, was the first major undertaking; it created a large reservoir, Norris Lake. The climate of the state is mild, although the mountain regions sometimes experience severe cold.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Agriculture is the chief occupation of the state, which raises as its main products cotton, corn, tobacco, hay, wheat, and livestock. Oats, potatoes (white and sweet), peas, peanuts, and sorghum are also raised. Lumbering is a major occupation. Mining is important, coal being found in considerable quantities. Phosphate rock, stone, zinc, marble, iron, petroleum, clay, natural gas, and manganese are also found. Textiles and chemicals are the leading manufactures. Clothing, food products, and nonferrous metals are other industrial products. Memphis is an industrial center with a great cotton market and outstanding rail and port facilities. Chattanooga is an industrial, rail, and port center. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 509 million dollars; from mineral output, as high as 85 million; from manufacturing, as high as three billion.

History. The state is believed to have been explored by De Soto; included in the Carolina grant of 1663 made by Charles II of England. La Salle erected (c1682) a fort there, and the English erected (c1756) Fort Loudoun ab. 30 mi. S of Knoxville. Settlement by Virginians and North Carolinians began in 1769. The region was part of North Carolina, and its settlers fought in the Revolutionary War, participating in the battle of Kings Mountain, an American victory which took place (1780) in South Carolina. After the Revolution North Carolina prepared to relinquish (1784) the region to the U.S. The inhabitants of the region, fearing that the terms of the transfer allowing acceptance by the U.S. within two years might leave them without a government, set up an independent state called Frankland, and later Franklin. This state existed until 1789. The territory was again ceded to the U.S. by North Carolina in 1790, becoming the Territory South of the River Ohio; entered (June 1, 1796) the Union as the 16th state; seceded in 1861, although sentiment in the E part of the state was opposed to secession. Tennessee was the scene of many battles (second in number only to those in Virginia) during the Civil War, notably the battle of Shiloh, a Union victory (1862), commemorated by Shiloh National Military Park (3,729 acres; established 1894); and in Georgia part of the Chattanooga campaign a Confederate victory (1863), commemorated by Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park (8,149 acres; established 1890), which extends into NW Georgia. Other Civil War battles in the state were those of Fort Donelson, Island Number 10 (in the Mississippi), Memphis, Murfreesboro, the relief of Chattanooga and Knoxville, and the battles of Franklin and Nashville. The state was readmitted to the Union on July 24, 1866.

Culture. Development in the state is more rural than urban (ab. 44 percent of the 1950 population was classified as urban). A sizable proportion of the total population consists of Negroes. The program of the Tennessee Valley Authority has had considerable influence on the life in the state. Supporters of the program claim that it has raised the income level of the inhabitants and has increased the economic potentialities of the state. The program has, however, been opposed by the light and power interests. Somewhat W of Knoxville is the Oak Ridge area, a government reservation of 50,000 acres where large-scale production of U-235 was begun in 1944. Since 1947 research and training in nuclear studies have been carried on there. Memphis was long dominated by a single political leader, E. H. Crump; it is known for its annual Cotton Carnival. The state's institutions of higher learning include the state-supported University of Tennessee, at Knoxville, with branches at Memphis and Martin; East Tennessee State College, at Johnson City; Memphis State College, at Memphis; Middle Tennessee State College, at Murfreesboro; Austin Peay State College, at Clarksville; Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, at Cookeville; Agricultural and Industrial State College for Negroes, at Nashville; Fisk University (for Negroes), at Nashville; the University of the South, at Sewanee; Vanderbilt University, at Nashville; Ward-Belmont School, at Nashville. The state motto is "Agriculture, Commerce." The state flower is the iris.

Tennessee, Army of the. Union army in the Civil War. It was commanded after the battle of Shiloh by Henry W. Halleck, and later by U. S. Grant, William T. Sherman, James B. McPherson, Oliver Howard, and John A. Logan.

Tennessee, Little. See Little Tennessee.

Tennessee Pass. Pass in the Rocky Mountains, in C Colorado, N of Leadville. Elevation, ab. 10,424 ft.

Tennessee River. Principal tributary of the Ohio River. It is formed near Knoxville, Tenn., by the union of the French Broad and Holston rivers, and flows SW in Tennessee past Chattanooga, then W through Alabama, touching the NE corner of Mississippi, and then N through Tennessee and Kentucky, to join the Ohio at Paducah, Ky. It is navigable for its entire course. Nine dams have been constructed in the river (seven by the Tennessee Valley Authority) for power development and flood control. Length, 652 mi.

Tennessee's Partner. Story by Bret Harte, originally published (1869) in the Overland Monthly and included in The Luck of Roaring Camp and Other Sketches (1870).

Tennessee Valley Authority. [Called the TVA.] Government corporation established by act of the U.S. Congress in 1933 for the purpose of planning and developing the Tennessee River watershed in the interest of regional electric power distribution, flood control, and industrial and agricultural activity. The TVA, which is administered by three directors, has constructed more than a score of dams (nine of them on the Tennessee River itself) for generating hydroelectric power distributed variously through cooperatives, local governments, and private utility companies. It also distributes fertilizers to farmers. The TVA is financed by federal appropriations and by the sale of its bonds, services, and products.

Tenney (ten'i), Charles Daniel. b. at Boston, June 29, 1857; d. at Palo Alto, Calif., March 14, 1930. American missionary in China, educator, and diplomat. Graduating from Dartmouth College in 1878 and from Oberlin Theological Seminary in 1882, he served (1882-86) in China under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, was vice-consul and interpreter (1894-96) to the U.S. consulate at Tientsin, served as the first president (1895-1906) of the Imperial Chinese University (later Peiyang University) at Tientsin, was secretary (1900-02) of the Tientsin provisional government, and later served in the American legation at Peiping (Peking).

Tenney, Sanborn. b. at Stoddard, N.H., Jan. 13, 1827; d. at Buchanan, Mich., July 9, 1877. American naturalist and geologist.

Tenney, William Jewett. b. at Newport, R.I., 1811; d. at Newark, N.J., Sept. 20, 1883. American editor and author. He edited Appleton's Annual Cyclopaedia (1861-82), and wrote Military and Naval History of the Rebellion in the United States (1865) and other works.

Tenniel (ten'el), Sir John. b. at London, 1820; d. Feb. 25, 1914. English artist and cartoonist. He was a member (1851-1901) of the staff of Punch. He illustrated Alice's Adventures in Wonderland and Through the Looking Glass. He was knighted in 1893.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hér; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʒn, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Ten Nights in a Barroom and What I Saw There. Melodramatic temperance narrative by Timothy Shay Arthur, published in 1854. The novel was dramatized and remained popular for many years on the American stage.

Tennyson (ten'tsən), Alfred. [Title: 1st Baron Tennyson; commonly called Alfred, Lord Tennyson.] b. at Somersby, Lincolnshire, Aug. 6, 1809; d. at Aldworth House, near Haslemere, Surrey, Oct. 6, 1892. English poet, laureate of England (1850 et seq.). He was the son of George Clayton Tennyson, vicar of Great Grimsby and rector of Somersby and Enderby. He published with his brother Charles a collection of juvenile poems (Poems by Two Brothers) in 1827, and was a student at Trinity College, Cambridge (1828-31), with Arthur H. Hallam, Richard Monckton Milnes, R. C. Trench, and others, where he wrote the prize poem Timbuctoo (1829). He lived at various places till 1850, when he married Emily Sellwood, after an engagement lasting nearly 20 years, and settled at Twickenham; he afterward lived at Aldworth (Sussex), and from 1853 at Farringford (Isle of Wight). He received a state pension in 1845, succeeded William Wordsworth as poet laureate in 1850, and was raised to the peerage in 1884. He lived a secluded life, and died of old age after a short and painless illness. He was buried in the Poets' Corner, near Geoffrey Chaucer, in Westminster Abbey. He wrote Poems, Chiefly Lyrical (1830); including Mariana, Recollections of the Arabian Nights, and The Ballad of Oriana, Poems (1832); including The Lady of Shalott, The Miller's Daughter, Ænone, The Palace of Art, The May Queen, The Lotus Eaters, and A Dream of Fair Women, Poems (1842); including Ulysses, Two Voices, The Talking Oak, Morte d'Arthur, The Gardener's Daughter, and Locksley Hall, The Princess (1847, 1850), a work on the emancipation of women notable for its songs ("Tears, idle tears," "The splendor falls on castle walls," "Home they brought her warrior dead," "Sweet and low") and ridiculed by W. S. Gilbert in Princess Ida, In Memoriam (1850), a collection of elegiac poetry, written between 1833 (when his friend and prospective brother-in-law Hallam died) and 1850, which was very popular as a searching for the meaning of death and immortality and which probably brought Tennyson the laureateship, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington (1852), Charge of the Light Brigade, Maud, and other poems (1855), Idylls of the King (1859-85), a romantic retelling of the Arthurian legends, A Welcome to the Princess Alexandra (1863), Enoch Arden and Other Poems (1864), The Golden Supper (1869), The Window, or the Songs of the Wrens, with music by Sir Arthur Sullivan (1871), Queen Mary (a drama, 1875), Harold (a drama, 1876), The Falcon (a short play, acted 1879, published 1884), The Cup (a short play, acted 1881, published 1884), The Promise of May (acted 1882, published 1886), Becket (a drama, 1884), The Lover's Tale (1879; including as its fourth part The Golden Supper), Ballads and Other Poems (1880), Tiresias and Other Poems (partly new, 1885), Locksley Hall Sixty Years After (1886), Demeter and Other Poems (1889, including "Crossing the Bar"), The Death of Ænone, Akbar's Dream, and Other Poems (1892), and The Foresters, Robin Hood, and Maid Marian (a drama, 1892). Tennyson's reputation as a poet, attacked on various grounds by the late Victorian poets and critics, particularly because of his conservatism and his lack of adequate discernment of artistic values as well as on several other counts, has recently risen again.

Tennyson, Frederick. b. 1807; d. at Kensington, London, Feb. 26, 1898. English poet; brother of Alfred Tennyson. He published a volume of poems entitled Days and Hours (1854), and also Isles of Greece (1890) and Daphne and Other Poems (1891). He was coauthor with Alfred Tennyson of Poems by Two Brothers (1827).

Tennyson, Hallam. [Title, 2nd Baron Tennyson.] b. at Twickenham, England, Aug. 11, 1852; d. Dec. 2, 1928. English author and colonial governor; son of Alfred Tennyson. He was private secretary to his father, governor and commander in chief of South Australia (1899-1902), first acting governor general of the Commonwealth of Australia (1902), and governor general of Australia (1902-03). He published Alfred, Lord Tennyson: a Memoir (1897) and edited Tennyson and his Friends (1911).

Tennyson, Lionel Hallam. [Title, 3rd Baron Tennyson.] b. Nov. 7, 1889—. English soldier and author; son of Hallam Tennyson and grandson of Alfred Tennyson. Author of From Verse to Worse (1933) and others.

Teno (te'nō). Finnish name of the Tana.

Tenochtitlán (tā.nōch.tē.tlān'). Chief seat of the Aztecs, occupying the site where Mexico City now stands. It was founded c1325 on what was then an island in Texcoco Lake. Causeways were built to the adjacent mainland, and these appear to have been the only approaches. Many of the streets were occupied by canals, and the houses were subject to frequent inundations. Water was supplied from Chapultepec by an aqueduct. The most remarkable building was the teocalli, or great temple; most of the other edifices were low and built of adobe. The Spaniards under Hernando Cortés entered peaceably, but were subsequently driven out, and took the place, in 1521, only after a terrible siege, in which a great part of the city was destroyed. The new capital was built on its site.

Tenos (tē'nos). [Also: Tino, Tinos.] Island of the Cyclades, belonging to Greece, in the nomos (department) of Cyclades, SE of Andros and NE of Syros: one of the most prosperous of the Greek islands. It exports wine and marble. Chief place, Tenos (St. Nicolo). Length, ab. 17 mi.; area, 79 sq. mi.; pop. 11,621 (1940).

Ten Persecutions, Ten.

Tensas (ten'sō). River in SE Arkansas and NE Louisiana, which joins the Ouachita ab. 26 mi. NW of Natchez. Length, ab. 225 mi.

Tensaw (ten'sō). Offtake or bayou of the Alabama River, in Alabama, which flows parallel with Mobile River and empties into Mobile Bay.

Tenskwatawa (ten.skwā'tā.wā). [Sometimes called Elskwatawa; original name, Lalawethika.] b. probably at what is now Oldtown, Ohio, c1768; d. c1834. American Indian, noted as a Shawnee prophet, and believed to have been the twin brother of Tecumseh. Proclaiming himself a prophet (1835), he used his two assumed names, and gained fame for the mystic rituals and religious revivals which accompanied his teachings. He lost his stature as a leader after the battle of Tippecanoe (1811), was granted a pension by the British, lived in Canada until 1826, and subsequently in the U.S.

Tenterden (ten'ter.dən). Municipal borough and market town in SE England, in Kent, ab. 20 mi. SW of Canterbury, ab. 53 mi. SE of London by rail. It is in the midst of a hops-raising region. 4,225 (1951).

Tenterden of Hendon (hen'dən), 1st Baron. Title of Abbott, Charles.

Tenth Legion. Legion of the Roman army, celebrated for its valor, in the time of Julius Caesar.

"Tenth Muse." See Sappho.

Tenth of Tebet (tā'vēs.tā.vāth'). See Tebet, Tenth of.

Ten Thousand a Year. Novel by Samuel Warren, published in 1841.

Tent on the Beach, The. Collection of poems, chiefly narrative, by John Greenleaf Whittier, published in 1867.

Tents of Israel (tā'zā.cl). Novel by G. B. Stern, published in 1924 and issued in America under the title The Matriarch (1925). It is the first volume in her trilogy of Jewish life. The Matriarch (1932). The Matriarch was dramatized in 1931.

Tentyra (ten'ti.rā) or Tentyris (ten'ti.ris). Ancient Greek names of Dendera.

Teobaldo Visconti (tā.ō.bāl'dō vēs.kōn'tē). Original name of Pope Gregory X.

Teoñilo (tā.ō'fē.lō). Italian and Spanish form of Theophilus.

Teófilo Otoni (tā.ō'fē.lō ō.tō'nē). [Also, Teophilo Ottani.] City in E Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 20,204 (1950).

Teos (tē'os). In ancient geography, an Ionian city in Asia Minor, situated on the W coast, ab. 25 mi. SW of Smyrna. Its ruins contain a noted temple of Dionysus, a beautiful Ionic hexastyle peripteros on a stylobate of three steps.

Teotihuacán (tā'ō.tē'wā.kān'). [Also, San Juan Teotihuacán.] Town in S Mexico, in México state, ab. 27 mi. NE of Mexico City. In the vicinity are many remarkable ruins, including two very large and many small pyramids, and a walled enclosure called the "Citá-del." Tradition assigns these remains to the Toltecs, and they are certainly older than the Aztec period. 1,353 (1940).

Teoyaoimiqui (tā'ō.yā'ō.n ē'kē). One of the death gods of Aztec religion. He was particularly a patron of dead warriors.

Tepanec (tā.pā'nek). [Also, Tecpanec.] Nahuatl-speaking tribe or city-state settled at Azcapotzalco, on the W shore of Lake Texcoco, in Mexico, in the late 14th century. They raided and took the lands of the Texcocoans and controlled those people from c1378 to 1428. The Tepanec in turn were conquered by the Aztec in the mid-15th century and were absorbed into the Aztec state.

Tepe Gawra (te'pe gou.rā'). Archaeological site in Mesopotamia, near Mosul, Iraq, and not far from the site of ancient Nineveh. It was discovered (1927) by Ephraim A. Speiser of Dropsie College and the University of Pennsylvania and excavated by him in the following years until World War II interrupted the work. The various levels uncovered indicate a civilization at this place as early as the 5th millennium B.C. An acropolis (c4300 B.C.) was built by a people possessing a culture that included landscape painting, musical instruments, and advanced pottery-manufacture; by 4000 B.C. this people seems to have been superseded by another. Some contact with contemporary cultures of India is indicated by discovery of parallel artifacts.

Tepehuan (tā.pā.hwān'). [Also, Tepeguan.] Tribe of Mexican Indians living principally in the state of Durango, in NW Mexico. Their language, Tepehuan, belongs to the Piman group of the Uto-Aztecan family of languages.

Tepepán Man (tā.pās.pān'). Fossilized human skeletal remains found near Tepepán (a village NW of Mexico City) in 1947. They are believed to be between 15,000 and 25,000 years old and to be evidence of the earliest Indian physical type in the New World.

Tepec (tā.pēk'). Former territory of Mexico, on the Pacific coast N of the state of Jalisco, to which it was attached, now part of the state of Nayarit.

Tepec. City in W Mexico, capital of Nayarit state, ab. 18 mi. from the Bay of San Blas. 17,547 (1940).

Teplíce-Sanov (te'pli.tse.shā.nōf). [Also: Teplíce; German: Teplitz, Teplitz-Schönau (tep'li.tshē'nou).] City and spa in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Ústí, in N Bohemia, situated in a valley S of the Krusné Hory (Erzgebirge) between Most and Ústí ab. 46 mi. NW of Prague. Its springs have been known since the early Middle Ages. The city was pillaged by the Hussites in 1421 and was long contested between Germans and Czechs. It suffered again in the Thirty Years' War. It became famous as a spa in the early 18th century. The rulers of Russia, Prussia, and Austria concluded an alliance against Napoleon here on Sept. 9, 1813. The city has various industries. There are lignite mines in the vicinity. Pop. including suburbs, 45,153 (1947).

Teplitz (tep'li.tz). Alliance of. Treaty of alliance between the monarchs of Russia, Austria, and Prussia against Napoleon, signed at Teplitz (now Teplíce-Sanov) on Sept. 9, 1813.

Tequendama (tā.ken.dā'mā). Falls of. See under Bogotá River.

Teques (tā'kās). Los. See Los Teques.

Ter (ter). River in NE Spain, flowing into the Mediterranean E of Gerona. Length, ab. 109 mi.

Terah (tē'ra). In the Bible, the father of Abraham (Gen. xi).

Teramo (te'rā.mō). [Former name, Abruzzo Ulteriore I.] Province in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Abruzzi e Molise. Capital, Teramo; area, ab. 752 sq. mi.; pop. 249,532 (1936).

Teramo. [Ancient name, Interamna; medieval name, Aprutium.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Abruzzi e Molise, the capital of the province of Teramo, S of Ancona: manufactures of woolen articles, felt hats, and furniture; trade in olive oil. The cathedral, in Romanesque style, dates from the 12th century. Destroyed by the Normans in 1155, it was a Ghibelline town in the Middle Ages, and opposed Charles of Anjou. Buildings of tourist interest escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 33,796 (1936); of town, 16,229 (1936).

Te Rangī Hīroa (te.rāng'ē hē.rō'ā). [English, Sir Peter Henry Buck.] b. in New Zealand, 1880; d. at Honolulu, Dec. 1, 1951. New Zealand ethnologist. The son of an Irish father and a Maori mother, Ngārangī-Ki-Tua ("tidings that reach afar"), of the Ngāti-Mutunga tribe, he grew up in two cultures. After graduation (1904) in medicine from the University of New Zealand, he became a health officer. He learned Maori folklore and Maori oratorical style in order to persuade his mother's people to adopt European sanitation. He served (1904-14) a Maori constituency in the New Zealand Parliament. In World War I, he was medical officer with a Maori battalion that saw action in France and Gallipoli. During the long voyage home around the Cape of Good Hope, he obtained an unprecedented set of physical measurements of living Maori by measuring the members of the battalion. He served as director of Maori hygiene (1919-27). His growing interest in Polynesian culture was shown by publications on the material culture of the Maori and the Cook Islanders. These led to association with the B. P. Bishop Museum at Honolulu, first as ethnologist in 1927, and after 1936 as director of the museum. Author of numerous works on Polynesian ethnology.

Terauchi (te.rā.ō.chē), Count Juichi. b. in Yamaguchi prefecture, Japan, in August, 1879; d. June 12, 1946. Japanese army officer. He served as army minister (1936-37), commander in chief of the Japanese forces in north China (1937), and a supreme war counselor (1938-40). He was the Japanese army representative at the Nazi convention at Nuremberg, Germany (1939). He commanded all Japanese forces in the SW Pacific (December, 1941). At the end of World War II, he surrendered at Suigun, Indochina.

Terauchi, Count Seiki. b. in Choshu, Japan, 1852; d. at Tokyo, Nov. 5, 1919. Japanese general and statesman, remembered chiefly as a conservative militarist and for his "firm" policy in the subjugation of Korea after the latter had been annexed (1910) to the Japanese Empire. As prime minister (1916-18), he made himself known as an exponent of authoritarian methods in government.

Ter Borch (tēr.bōrch), Gerard. [Also, Terburg (tēr.bērch').] b. at Zwolle, Netherlands, c1603; d. at Dvender, Netherlands, 1681. Dutch genre and portrait painter.

Terceira (tēr.sā'ra). Duke of. [Title of Antônio José de Souza; additional title, Count of Villafior]. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, March 10, 1792; d. there, April 27, 1860. Portuguese general and politician. He conquered the Azores in 1831 in behalf of Maria da Glória, landed at Oporto May 26, 1832, and defeated the Miguelists several times in 1833 and 1834. He also served as minister of war and as premier.

Terceira. One of the principal islands of the Azores, belonging to Portugal, situated NW of the island of São Miguel. Grain, citrus fruits, pineapples, and tobacco are grown; lace and embroidery work is done by the women. A regency for Queen Maria was established here in 1829, during the Portuguese civil war. It was the site of a major American air base in World War II. Chief city, Angra do Heroísmo; area, ab. 155 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 50,000.

Tercero (ter.sā'rō). River in C Argentina, in the state of Córdoba, flowing E to join the Paraná River. Length, ab. 270 mi.

Terek (te'rek; Russian, ter'rik). Former oblast (region) of Caucasian Russia, on the N slope of the Caucasus Mountains, S of Stavropol. Capital, Vladikavkas.

Terek Pass. Pass over the mountain barrier between the U.S.S.R. and China, across the Tien Shan. This pass is used by caravans to this day, and was probably once used by Marco Polo.

Terek River. River in the U.S.S.R., in the Stavropol Territory of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, which flows W and by a broad delta enters the Caspian Sea. Length, ab. 380 mi.

Terence (te'rens). [Full Latin name, Publius Terentius Afer.] b. at Carthage c185 B.C.; d. c159. Roman comic poet. He went early to Rome as a slave of Publius Terentius Lucanus, and was soon liberated, thereupon taking his patron's name. He became a friend of the younger Scipio and of Laelius, and went to Greece after bringing out his plays. The material of his works was rather freely adapted from the Greek playwrights Menander and fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, n.ē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, nōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; th, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Apollodorus. He left six comedies: Andria, Heryra, Heautontimorumenos, Eunuchus, Phormio, and Adelphi. Terentia (tĕr'en'shi.ə). First wife of Cicero, from whom she was divorced in 46 B.C.

Teresa (tĕrĕ'sə). Saint. See Theresa or Theresa, Saint. Teresina (tĕr.əzĕ'nə). [Also, Therézina.] Capital of the state of Piauí, in NE Brazil: river port for cotton and other agricultural products. 53,425 (1950).

Tereus (tĕrĕ'us). In Greek legend, a king of Thrace; son of Ares. He married Procne and Philomela, and was transformed into a hoopoe (or hawk) for mistreating them.

Terezin (tĕr.ə'zin). [German, Theresienstadt.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Ústí, in N Bohemia, situated on the Ohře (Eger) River, near its junction with the Labe (Elbe), S of Litoměřice and ab. 32 mi. N of Prague. The town has a grain and fruit trade. It was a fortress from 1780 to 1882. In the years 1940-45 the old fortress was used by the Germans as a concentration camp for Jews. 1,446 (1947).

Tergeste (tĕr'jes'tĕ). An ancient name of Trieste.

Terglou (tĕr'glou). German name of Triglav.

Ter Gouwe (tĕr'gou'wĕ). See Gouda.

Terhune (tĕr'hūn'), Albert Payson. b. at Newark, N.J., Dec. 21, 1872; d. at Sunnyside, near Pompton Lakes, N.J., Feb. 18, 1942. American writer; son of Edward Payson Terhune. He served (1894-1916) on the staff of the New York Evening World, and was park commissioner (1925 et seq.) of the state of New Jersey. Many of his novels and short stories are concerned with dogs, particularly collies, and outdoor life; he owned the Sunnyside Kennels, drawing much of his material from the events there. His works include Syria from the Saddle (1896), Lad: A Dog (1919), Buff: A Collie (1921), His Dog (1922), Lad of Sunnyside (1928), A Dog Named Chips (1931), The Way of a Dog (1934), Unseen (1936), and Loof (1940).

Terhune, Anice Morris. [Maiden name, Stockton.] b. at Hampden, Mass. —. American pianist and composer; wife of Albert Payson Terhune. Among her works are the comic opera Nero (1904) and The Woodland Princess (1911), piano pieces, and songs.

Terhune, Edward Payson. b. at New Brunswick, N.J., Nov. 22, 1830; d. 1907. American Presbyterian clergyman.

Terhune, Mary Virginia Hawes. See Harland, Marion.

Terlizzi (tĕr.lĭt'sĕ). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, ab. 16 mi. W of Bari: marketing center of an agricultural district (almonds are a local specialty). Pop. of commune, 21,612 (1936); of town, 21,082 (1936).

Termagant (tĕr'ma'gŏnt). [Also, Termagant.] Name given to the god of the Saracens in the medieval romances, moralities, and folk dramas. He was popularly believed by Christians to be a blustering, bullying Mohammedan god. The word "termagant" is now commonly applied to a noisy, scolding woman.

Terman (tĕr'man), Lewis Madison. b. in Johnson County, Ind., Jan. 15, 1877—, American psychologist. He served as professor (1916-42) and executive head (1922-42) of the psychology department at Stanford. He made the Stanford revision of the Binet-Simon intelligence tests, assisted in the revision of the U.S. army mental tests for use in schools, and conducted various researches on gifted children. His writings include The Teacher's Health (1913), The Measurement of Intelligence (1916), and Marital Happiness (1938); coauthor of The Terman-McNemar Test of Mental Ability (1942), The Gifted Child as Adult (1947), and other works.

Termes (tĕr'mĕz'). Latin name of the Tormes.

Termez (tĕr'mĕz'). City in S U.S.S.R., in the Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic, C Asia, situated on the N bank of the Amu Darya, opposite Afghanistan. It is an important frontier post, linked with the Trans-Caspian rail system and by highway with Samarkand. Industries include the processing of foodstuffs and cotton. Termez has a desert climate, and is noted in the U.S.S.R. for its extreme summer heat and the highest shade temperature ever recorded in the U.S.S.R. (118° F.). Pop. 25,000 (1933).

Terminalia (tĕr.mi'nā'lĭ.ə). Ancient Roman festival celebrated annually in honor of Terminus, the god of boundaries. It was held on the 23rd of February, its essential feature being a survey of boundaries.

Termini Imerese (tĕr'mĕ.nĕ ĩ.mĕ.rā'sĕ). [Also: Termini; ancient name, Thermae Ilimeraeae (or Ilimerae)] Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Palermo, situated on the N coast ab. 20 mi. SE of Palermo: mineral springs; fisheries; sulfur refinery. The cathedral dates from the 17th century, the Church of Santa Maria della Misericordia from the 15th century. Much contested in ancient times between Syracusans and Carthaginians, it finally became a Roman town; there are remains of a Roman theater. Pop. of commune, 20,845 (1936).

Terminos (tĕr'mĕ.nŏs), Laguna de. Large lagoon in SE Mexico, in Campeche state, communicating with the Gulf of Campeche. It was so called by the pilot Alaminos, in 1518, because he supposed it to mark the W limit of Yucatán. Length, ab. 45 mi.

Terminus (tĕr'mĭ.nus). In Roman mythology, the god who presided over boundaries and landmarks. He was represented with a human head, but without feet or arms, to intimate that he never moved from whatever place he occupied. He was given a place in the temple of Jupiter, and for this reason is sometimes interpreted as an aspect of Jupiter.

Termoli (tĕr'mŏ.lĕ). [Ancient name, Buca.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Abruzzi e Molise, in the province of Campobasso, situated on the Adriatic Sea SW of Pescara: seaport; fisheries. The old town is surrounded by medieval walls, and has a cathedral, in Romanesque style, dating from the 12th century. The apse of the cathedral was damaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 8,755 (1936); of town, 6,573 (1936).

Termonde (tĕr.mŏnd'). [Flemish, Dendermonde.] Town in NW Belgium, in the province of East Flanders, situated at the junction of the Dender and Schelde rivers, ab. 17 mi. NW of Brussels: shipyards; soap and oil factories; agricultural trade. The Church of Our Lady dates from the 15th century, and there is a medieval town hall. The town came to the county of Flanders in 1264. In 1667, under siege by the forces of Louis XIV, the town was defended by opening its sluices and flooding the adjacent country. It was captured by Marlborough in 1706, and by the French under Marshal de Saxe in 1745. The fortifications were razed in 1784. The town was pillaged by the Germans in 1914. Pop. 9,306 (1946).

Ternant (tĕr.nān), Chevalier Jean de. d. 1816. French officer. He served in the American Revolution, and was minister to the U.S. during Washington's administration.

Ternaux-Compans (tĕr.nŏ.kŏn.pān), Henri. [Original surname, Ternaux.] b. at Paris, 1807; d. there, in December, 1864. French bibliographer and historian. He held diplomatic positions in Spain, Portugal, and Brazil, and at one time was a deputy in the French parliament. His library of books and manuscripts relating to the early history of America was one of the largest ever brought together. His publications include Bibliothèque américaine (1836), a catalogue of books relating to America published previous to 1700, and Voyages, relations et mémoires originaux pour servir à l'histoire de la découverte de l'Amérique, French translations of documents from his collection (2 series, in 20 vols., 1836-40).

Terneuzen (tĕr.nĕ'zĕn). See Neuzen.

Terni (tĕr'nĕ). Province in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria. Capital, Terni; area, ab. 826 sq. mi.; pop. 191,559 (1936).

Terni. [Ancient name, Interamna.] City and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria, in the province of Perugia, ab. 47 mi. N of Rome: iron and steel works. Its metal industries were developed in the second half of the 19th century; more recently it has become the seat of large chemical works (calcium carbide). There are some smaller industries, among them woolen and jute manufactures. Hydroelectric power is available from the nearby cascades of the Velino River (Cascate delle Marmore). The city has remains of Roman walls and of an amphitheater, and a cathedral dating from the 13th (with additions from the 17th) century. The churches of Sant'Alò, San Salvatore, San Francesco, and San Pietro are Romanesque structures of the 12th and 13th centuries. There are a number of Renaissance palaces. Originally a Volscian town, it was later incorporated into the Roman domain; it came to the States of the Church in the 14th century. During World War II heavy damage was done to the cathedral and to the churches of San Francesco and San Lorenzo; repairs have been completed or are under way on these and other buildings of interest to tourists. Pop. of commune, 68,890 (1936); of town, 37,295 (1936).

Terni, Falls of. English name of Marmore, Cascate delle.

Ternina (ter.nē'nā), Milka. b. in Croatia, Dec. 19, 1863; d. 1941. Dramatic soprano. In 1899 she sang the part of Kundry at Bayreuth, a role in which she was afterward heard at the first production of Parsifal at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. In 1901 she sang in the first American performance of Tosca at the Metropolitan Opera House, and this became one of her most important roles. Among her other roles were Leonore (in Fidelio), Aida, Gwendoline, Selika, Brunhild, Elsa, and Elizabeth.

Ternitz (ter'nits). Town in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, SW of Vienna, situated on the Schwarza River. 7,037 (1946).

Ternopol (tēr.nō'pōl; Russian, tyr.nō'pōl). [Polish, Tarnopol.] Oblast (region) in SW U.S.S.R., in Europe, in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 225 mi. SW of the city of Kiev, in the area that belonged to Poland prior to World War II. The land is mostly hilly and the people are chiefly farmers. Wheat, flax, barley, oats, wine grapes, tobacco, and sugar beets are the major crops, and large numbers of hogs are raised. There are no important mineral resources in the area and the industries are chiefly related to the processing of agricultural products. Capital, Ternopol; area, ab. 5,300 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 1,395,000 (1933).

Ternopol. [Polish, Tarnopol.] City in the U.S.S.R., capital of Ternopol oblast (region) of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated on the Siret River ab. 73 mi. SE of Lvov, 33,000 (est. 1940).

Terodant (ter'ō.dānt). See Taroudant.

Terpander (tēr.pān'dēr). b. at Antissa, Lesbos, Greece; fl. mid-7th century B.C. Greek musician and poet. He was undoubtedly a historical person, but very little is known about him, and some of what is told may be legend rather than fact. He is said to have won the laurel for music at the Carnean Games in 676 B.C., and to have been summoned to Sparta 650 B.C., in conformity with a revelation by the oracle at Delphi, to bring about peace between contending groups in that city-state. He has been called the father both of Greek classical music and of lyric poetry, and it seems certain that he was in fact a poet, a composer, and a player of stringed instruments. Strabo wrote that to the four strings which the lyre formerly had Terpander added three more; but others understand that his innovation was in the form of the nome, or ode recited to music, which he divided into seven parts, where previously there were four. Terpander has in fact been credited with the origination of musical notation, but this is considered very doubtful. He was, in any case, the earliest Greek musician of whom we have even fragmentary historical knowledge.

Terpsichore (tēr.p.sik'ō.rē). In Greek mythology, one of the Muses, the patroness of lyric poetry, the choral dance, and the dramatic chorus developed from it. In the last days of the Greek religion her attributions became restricted chiefly to the province of lyric poetry. In art this Muse is usually represented as bearing a lyre.

Terra (ter'a). Latin word for "land"; for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Terra (ter'a), Gabriel. b. at Montevideo, Uruguay, 1873; d. there, Sept. 15, 1942. Uruguayan lawyer, politician, and president (1931-38) of the republic. He overthrew the 1917 constitution and became dictator (1933), introduced (1934) a new constitution increasing executive powers, and suppressed a Nationalist Party revolt (1935).

Terrace Island (ter'as). See Dunlop Island.

Terracina (ter.rā.chē'nā). [Ancient names: Tarracina, Anxur.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Latina (formerly Littoria), situated on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 58 mi. SE of Rome: seaside resort. It has a port exporting agricultural products, stone quarries, and large-scale fisheries. Roman remains include ruins of a temple of Jupiter, and baths. The Cathedral of San Cesario rests on foundations of an ancient temple of Augustus. The Church of San Domenico dates from the 13th century. An ancient Volscian town, it was taken by the Romans in 406 B.C. It came to the States of the Church in 882. A number of popes, starting with Urban II, contributed to the development of town and harbor. The cathedral was slightly damaged in World War II; the Church of San Domenico and the Annunziata were unharmed; considerable looting of small objects from the museum is attributed to the Germans. Pop. of commune, 23,549 (1936); of town, 15,642 (1936).

Terra del Fuego (ter'rā del fwā'gō). See Tierra del Fuego.

Terra di Otranto (ter'rā dē ō'trān.tō). Former name of Lecce province.

Terrail (ter'āy'), Pierre. Original name of Bayard, Chevalier de.

Terralba (ter.rāl'bā). Town and commune in Italy, on the island of Sardinia, in the province of Cagliari, situated near the coast, ab. 44 mi. NW of Cagliari: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 11,767 (1936); of town, 7,028 (1936).

Terralla y Landá (ter.rā'yā ē lān'dā), Esteban de. [Pseudonym, Simón Ayanque.] b. in Spain; fl. latter half of the 18th century. Peruvian poet, who lived in Mexico before his arrival (1787) in Peru. His verse, often satirical of Lima society, includes Lima por dentro y fuera, Testamento cerrado, and Testamento, codicilo, última voluntad.

Terra Mater (ter'a mā'tēr). [Also, Terra.] In Roman mythology, a goddess, the personification of the earth. She is the same as Tellus, Latin writers also referred to the Germanic earth goddess, Nerthus, as Terra Mater.

Terranova di Sibari (ter.rā.nō'vā dē sē'bā.rē). See under Sybaris.

Terranova di Sicilia (sē.chē'lyā). Former name of Gela.

Terranova Pausania (pou.zā'nyā). See Olbia.

Terranuova Bracciolini (ter.rā.nō'vā brāt.chē.lē'nē). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Arezzo, situated near the Arno River, between Florence and Arezzo: agricultural commune; paper mill. Pop. of commune, 11,655 (1936); of town, 2,931 (1936).

Terrasa (ter'rāsā). See Tarrasa.

Terrasson (ter.rāsōn). Town in SW France, in the department of Dordogne, situated on the Vézère River, ab. 30 mi. E of Périgueux: agricultural trade. The town was damaged in World War II. 3,751 (1946).

Terre (ter), La. [Eng. trans., "The Soil."] Novel by Émile Zola, one of the Rougon-Macquart series, published in 1887.

Terre des hommes (ter.dā.zōm). Poetic and philosophical essays (1939; Eng. trans., Wind, Sand and Stars, 1939) on the heroism of the professional aircraft pilot, by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry.

Terre Haute (ter'e hōt). City in W Indiana, county seat of Vigo County, on the Wabash River ab. 72 mi. SW of Indianapolis. It is an important manufacturing center for paint and varnish, steel plates, glass, and brick and tile, and is the seat of a state teachers college. It was settled by French colonists; the name means "high land" in French. Pop. of city, 64,214 (1950); of urbanized area, 78,028 (1953).

Terrell (ter'el). City in C Texas, in Kaufman County, ab. 32 mi. SE of Dallas: processing center for cottonseed, lumber, dairy products, and wheat. 11,544 (1950).

Terrell Hills. City in S central Texas, in Bexar County, NE of San Antonio: residential suburb. 2,708 (1950).

Terre Neuve (ter nēv). French name of Newfoundland.

Terreiro (ter.rē'wār). Town in C France, in the department of Loire immediately E of St.-Étienne. It is an industrial town, belonging to the metropolitan region of St.-Étienne. 5,781 (1946).

Territoire (ter.rā.twār). French word for "territory"; for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Territoires du Sud (ter.ré.tu.wā dū süd). [English, Southern Territories.] Name applied to the French territories of S Algeria taken collectively. The area includes Touggourt, Ghardaia, Ain-Sefra, and Oasis Sahariennes. There is little or no administrative connection between these territories and the three northern departments of Algeria, except that they have the same governor general. Several unsuccessful attempts have been made to bring the two areas into closer cooperation. Each territory is under a military command which directs all administrative and civil affairs and which is responsible to the governor general. The administration is still predominantly military in character. Total area, ab. 767,435 sq. mi.; pop. 816,993 (1948).

Territorio (ter.ré.to'ryō). Spanish word for "territory"; for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Territorios Españoles del Golfo de Guinea (ter.ré.to'ryōs es.pā.nyō'lās dā gō'lfo dā gē.nā'ā). A Spanish name of Spanish Guinea.

Territory of New Guinea (nū gin'ī). See New Guinea, Territory of.

Territory of Papua (pap'ū.ā). See Papua, Territory of.

Territory of Western Samoa (sā.mō'ā). See Western Samoa, Territory of.

Terror (ter'or). Arctic exploring vessel which sailed from England with the Erebus under Sir John Franklin in 1845. A document was discovered on the shore of King William Island by Captain Francis L. McClintock, stating that both ships were abandoned about a year after the death of Sir John Franklin in 1847, and that the survivors had started for the Great Fish River (now called the Back River). They all perished on their journey southward. No traces of the vessels have been found. The Erebus and Terror had previously been the vessels of the antarctic expedition under command of Sir James Clark Ross.

Terror, Reign of. See Reign of Terror.

Terry (ter'ī). Alfred Howe. b. at Hartford, Conn., Nov. 10, 1827; d. at New Haven, Conn., Dec. 16, 1890. American Civil War general with the Union army. He became a colonel of militia in 1854, served at the first battle of Bull Run, at the capture of Port Royal, and at the siege of Fort Pulaski in 1861, took part as brigadier general in the operations against Charleston in 1862, was a division and corps commander in Virginia in 1864, served at Drury's Bluff, Bermuda Hundred, the siege of Petersburg, and elsewhere, captured Fort Fisher by assault Jan. 15, 1865, served at the capture of Wilmington, and as corps commander under W. T. Sherman in 1865, and later was department (Dakota and the South) and division commander. In 1876 he commanded a successful expedition against Sitting Bull.

Terry, Charles Sanford. b. at Newport Pagnell, Buckinghamshire, England, Oct. 24, 1864; d. at Aberdeen, Scotland, Nov. 5, 1936. British historian and authority on Johann Sebastian Bach. He was a professor of history (1903 et seq.) at Aberdeen University. Author of J. S. Bach (1928), Bach's Orchestra (1932), The Music of Bach (1933), and many other scholarly works on the composer.

Terry, Eli. b. at East (later South) Windsor, Conn., April 13, 1772; d. Feb. 26, 1852. American clockmaker and inventor. He established (1793) a clockmaking shop at Plymouth, Conn., turned (c1800) to the early mass production of clocks, thus inaugurating the first American clock factory, and in 1807 became a member of the firm of Terry, Thomas and Hoadley. He sold (1810) his interest to his partners, Seth Thomas and Silas Hoadley, founded his own firm at Plymouth Hollow (now Thomaston), Conn., and in 1814 perfected a shelf clock, constructed wholly of wood, which sold widely and in a little more than a decade brought him a fortune estimated at some 100,000 dollars.

Terry, Dame Ellen Alicia (or Alice). b. at Coventry, England, Feb. 27, 1848; d. July 21, 1923. English actress. She made her first appearance on the stage with Charles Kean's company in 1856 in the parts of Mamillius in The Winter's Tale and I Prince Arthur in King John. She appeared in London in 1863 as Gertrude in The Little Treasure. In 1864 she married George Frederick Watts and left the stage, but reappeared in 1866 after separating from n him. In 1867 she made her first appearance with Henry Irving, and was associated with him in all his successful Shakespearian productions, and as Camma in Tennyson's The Cup and Rosamonde in his Becket. From 1863 to 1874 she retired to live with E. W. Godwin, her two children being born in this period. After her divorce from Watts, she married (1877) C. C. Wardell; they separated in 1881; in 1907 she married James Usselman (stage name James Carew), but again the marriage failed and they parted in 1910. She visited America eight times, seven with Irving. Her Beatrice, Viola, Juliet, and other Shakespearian roles were remarkable for their charm. Her memoirs, The Story of My Life, appeared in 1908. She carried on a notable correspondence with George Bernard Shaw.

Terry, Sir Richard Runciman. b. at Ellington, Northumberland, England, Jan. 3, 1865; d. at London, April 18, 1938. English organist, choirmaster, and musicologist. He was music director (1901-24) at Westminster Cathedral. Among his compositions are five masses, motets, and a requiem mass. His publications include Catholic Church Music (1907) and a Shanty Book. He edited the official English Roman Catholic hymnal.

Terry Alts (alts). Body of rebels who appeared in County Clare, Ireland, about the beginning of the 19th century.

Terryville (ter'ī.vil). Unincorporated community in W Connecticut, in Litchfield County, in Plymouth town: manufactures of locks.

Terschelling (ter.schel'ing). Island in NW Netherlands, belonging to the province of North Holland, the third island from the W of the five large islands fringing the NW coast of the Netherlands. It is 16 mi. long and is separated from the mainland by the shallow Waddenze. Pop. of the commune of Terschelling, 3,288 (1939).

Tersteegen (ter.shā'gen), Gerhard. b. at Moers, Germany, Nov. 25, 1697; d. at Mülheim, Germany, April 3, 1769. German hymn writer.

Tertiary Era. Name sometimes used for the Cenozoic Era. See table at end of Volume III.

Tertium Quids (ter'sham kwids). Jeffersonian Republicans both in and out of the national government who between 1806 and 1808 turned against Jefferson on the ground that he had violated pure republican principles. They supported Monroe in preference to Madison for the succession to the presidency, and attacked Jefferson's embargo program. The leading Tertium Quid in the national legislature was John Randolph; the most prominent theoretician of this disaffected group was John Taylor of Caroline.

Tertry (ter.trē). [Former spellings, Tetry, Testri.] Small place in N France, situated near the So mme river, N of Soissons. Here, in 687, Pepin of Héristal overthrew the power of Neustria.

Tertullian (ter.tul'yan). [Full Latin name, Quintus Septimius Florens Tertullianus.] b. at Carthage, in Africa, c160 A.D.; d. c230. Ecclesiastical writer, one of the fathers of the Latin Church. He became converted to Christianity (c192), lived in Rome and Carthage, and became a Montanist (c203). His chief work is his Apologisticus, a defense of Christianity called forth by the persecutions under Septimius Severus. Among his other works are Ad Martyres, De Baptismo, De Poenitentia, De Spectaculis, De Patientia, De Præscriptione, Adversus Marcionem, De Virginibus velandis, and Adversus Prævean. His writing is marked by vigorous Latin, some of it epigrammatic and now proverbial: "Certum est quia impossibile est," "Semen est sanguis Christianorum."

Tertullianists (ter.tul'yan.ists). Branch of the African Montanists of the 3rd and 4th centuries A.D., who held the doctrines of Montanism as modified by Tertullian. The divergence of the Tertullianists from orthodoxy seems to have been much less marked than that of the original Asiatic Montanists. They called themselves Pneumatics, or spiritual men, and the orthodox Catholics Psychics, natural or sensual men.

Terudant (ter'ud.ant). See Taroudant.

Teruel (tä.ró.el'). Province in NE Spain, bounded by Zaragoza on the N, Tarragona on the E, Castellón on the SE, Valencia on the S, and Cuenca and Guadalajara on the W; part of the region of Aragón. The province is thinly settled; cattle and sheep raising prevail over agriculture. Capital, Teruel; area, 5,721 sq. mi.; pop. 239,435 (1930).

Teruel. Town in NE Spain, the capital of the province of Teruel, situated on the Guadalquivir River, ab. 138 mi. E of Madrid; leather, soap, and chinaware manufactures; flour mills; distilleries. The cathedral and the aqueduct date from the 16th century. Teruel was the scene of fierce fighting in the Spanish Civil War of 1936-39. Pop. 16,172 (1940).

Terwagne (ter.wāny'), Anne Joseph. Original name of Thérôigne de Méricourt.

Terzaghi (tér.ză'gi), Karl. b. at Prague, Oct. 2, 1883—American consulting engineer, a specialist in soil mechanics. He served in the Austrian air corps in World War I, was professor (1918-25) at the American College at Istanbul, and taught (1925-29) at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He lectured (1938-46) on soil mechanics and engineering geology, and in 1946 became professor of civil engineering practice at Harvard and lecturer and research consultant in civil engineering at the University of Illinois. He served as consultant (1926-29) to the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads at Washington, D.C., and was active (1930-38) in the development of hydroelectric and irrigation projects in the U.S.S.R.

Teschén (tesh'en). German name of Ceský Těšín, Czechoslovakia, and of the adjoining town of Cieszyn, in Poland.

Teschén Conflicts. Disputes (1919-20, 1938-39) between Czechoslovakia and Poland over a small area now within the NE border of Czechoslovakia. It became a scene of intermittent clashes in 1919 and, despite an offer of a plebiscite by the Supreme Allied Council, the dispute continued until 1920, when an international conference won the consent of both countries to a division of the territory. Poland raised the issue again during the Czech-German crisis of 1938-39, and won brief control over the area at that time.

Teshup (tă'shup). [Also, Teshub.] Ancient Hittite thunder god, often mentioned on the cuneiform clay tablets unearthed in 1907. These preserve, among other things, an ancient treaty alliance of 1290 B.C. between the Hittite and Egyptian kings, in which Teshup is mentioned as the chief Hittite deity. The seal shows the king being embraced by the thunder god. He is depicted as an old bearded man carrying a thunderbolt and wearing a cap decorated with horns.

Těšín (tye'shén). Czech name of Cieszyn; see also Ceský Těšín.

Těšín Český (ches'kě). See Ceský Těšín.

Tesla (tes'la), Nikola. b. in Croatia, 1857; d. at New York, Jan. 7, 1943. American physicist and electrician. He came to the U.S. in 1884, worked for the Edison Co., and in 1888 completed his development of induction motors based on his discovery of the rotating magnetic field. He invented a number of methods and appliances in the line of electrical vibrations aiming at the production of efficient light with lamps without filaments, and in the field of wireless communications. On his discovery of the action of air or gaseous matter when subjected to rapidly alternating electrostatic stresses is based the modern art of insulating currents of very high tension. He also constructed steam engines and electrical generators (oscillators) with which otherwise unattainable results are secured.

Teslić (tes'lich). Town in central Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Herzegovina, SE of Banja Luka; coal mines and ironworks. Pop. ab. 2,000.

Teso (tă'sô). [Also: Ateso, Bakedi, Bateso, Itesyo, Wamia.] Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of W Uganda and E Kenya, in E Africa, occupying the E shores of Lake Kyoga and Lake Victoria. They are not to be confused with the Lango of Uganda, who are also known as Bakedi, a Bantu name for Nilotic peoples. Their population is estimated at more than 400,000 (based on M. A. Bryan, Distribution of the Nilotic and Nilo-Hamitic Languages of Africa, 1945, and I. Schapera, Some Problems of Anthropological Research in Kenya Colony, 1949). They are divided into numerous villages, ruled by independent chiefs. They have exogamous patrilineal clans. They practice hoe agriculture and herding, with the cattle complex, and their principal crop is millet.

Tessé-la-Madeleine (te.să.lă.măd.len). See under Bagnoles de l'Orne.

Tessier (te.syă), Gaston. b. at Paris, June 15, 1887—French trade-union leader, head (1919 et seq.) of the French Confederation of Christian Workers. He was vice-president of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, was active before World War II in numerous official agencies, including the national economic council, and took part in the Resistance movement during World War II.

Tessin. French (te.sən) and German (te.sën') name of Ticino (canton) and the Ticino River.

Tess of the D'Urbervilles (tes; dër'bér.vilz). [Full title, Tess of the D'Urbervilles: a Pure Woman.] Novel by Thomas Hardy, published in 1891. Mrs. Minnie Madden Fiske appeared in 1897 in a dramatization of this story.

Testa (tes'tă), Count Tommaso Gherardi del. See Gherardi del Testa, Count Tommaso.

Testaccio (tăs.tăt'chô), Monte. Hill in the S part of Rome, SW of the Aventine Hill, on the left bank of the Tiber. It is ab. 115 ft. in height above the surrounding area, and 2,500 in circumference, and is formed entirely of the fragments of pottery vases, chiefly amphorae, from the extensive warehouses which once lined the neighboring quay. The potters' stamps on the fragments show that this rubbish heap was still used in the 4th century, and it is believed to have been begun about the inception of the empire.

Testament (tes'tă.ment). See New Testament and Old Testament.

Testament of Cressid (or Creseide) (kres'id). See Cressid or Creseide, Testament of.

Testament of Love. Prose work, by Thomas Usk but wrongly attributed by Thomas Speght to Geoffrey Chaucer. It purports to be written by a prisoner in danger of being hanged (Usk was executed in 1388).

Teste (test), La. See La Teste.

Teste, M. Central character and object of philosophical contemplation in La Soirée avec M. Teste (1893; Eng. trans., An Evening with Mr. Teste, 1925), by Paul Valéry. The character represents pure and absolute intelligence.

Teste-de Buch (tes.te.dg.büş), La. Former name of La Teste.

téstör (tes'tër), A. Hungarian title of Guardman, The.

Teslari or Teslry (tes.tră). See Terlry.

Tesuque (te.sô'kă). Small Pueblo Indian village in New Mexico near Santa Fe. The inhabitants (less than 200) speak Tewa, a language in the Tanoan family.

Tet (tet). [Also, Tet Nguyen Dan.] New Year's festival of the Vietnamese (Annamese). It falls between Jan. 20 and Feb. 19 in the Western calendar. It lasts for seven days, during which all work ceases.

Tête Noire (tet.nwâr). Alpine pass on the frontiers of Savoie and Switzerland, leading from Martigny to the valley of Chamnix. Elevation, ab. 4,997 ft.

Teternikov (ti.tyer'nyi.kof), Fyodor Kuzmich. See Sologub, Fyodor.

Tethys (te'this). Sea goddess of Greek mythology; daughter of sky and earth. She became the consort of ocean, and mother of all the rivers and 3,000 oceanids.

Tethys. Third satellite of Saturn, discovered by J. D. Cassini in March, 1684.

Tetmajer (tet.mă'yer), Kazimierz. [Also, Przerwa-Tetmajer.] b. at Ludzimierz, in the Tatras Mountains, 1865; d. at Warsaw, Poland, 1940. Polish poet and novelist. His works include, besides volumes of lyrical verse, several cycles of Tatras legends, some of which appear in Tales of the Tatras (Eng. trans., 1941).

Tet Nguyen Dan (tet' gô'yen dân'). See Tet.

Teton Range (te'ton, -ton). Mountain range in NW Wyoming, near the border of Idaho, N of the Snake River. The highest peak is Grand Teton (13,766 ft.).

Teton River. River in N Montana which joins the Missouri NE of Fort Benton. Length, ab. 150 mi.

Tetouan (tă.tuân'). See Tetuân.

Tetovo (te'tô.vô). [Turkish, Kalkandelen.] Town in S Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Macedonia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Vardarska, situated on the Savska River, a tributary of the Vardar River, E of Skopje. 16,919 (1948).

Tetrapolis (te.trap'ô.lis), Chaldean. The four ancient cities Babylon, Erech, Akkad, and Calne.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, färe; net, nê, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; yñ, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Tetrapolitan Confession (tet.ra.poli.tan). Confession of faith presented (1530) at the Diet of Augsburg by the representatives of the four cities (whence the name) Konstanz, Lindau, Memmingen, and Strassbourg. It resembled the Augsburg Confession, but inclined somewhat to Zwinglian views.

Tetrazzini (tä.trät.tsě'ně), Luisa. [Married name, Bazzeli.] b. at Florence, Italy, June 29, 1871; d. at Milan, Italy, April 28, 1940. Italian opera singer. She made her debut in 1895, and toured in South America, Europe, England, and the U.S. She won great success by her brilliant rendering of such roles as Elvira in Puritani, the Queen in Les Huguenots, Lucia, Violetta, and others.

Tetricus (tet'ri.kus). Pretender to the Roman Empire who usurped the throne in Gaul (c267-270 A.D.).

Tetschen-Rodenbach (tech'en.bô'den.bách). German name of Děčín-Podmokly.

Tettenhall (tet'en.hól). Urban district in C England, in Staffordshire, ab. 2 mi. NW of Wolverhampton: residential suburb. 7,742 (1951).

Tetuán (tä.twán'). [Also, Tetouan.] Capital of Spanish Morocco, situated near the Mediterranean, ab. 25 mi. S of Ceuta, with which it is connected by rail and highway. The town dates from the rebuilding of native settlements by Moslems expelled from Granada, Spain, in 1492. Here on Feb. 4, 1860, the Spaniards under Leopoldo O'Donnell gained a decisive victory over the Moroccans. 93,658 (1945).

Tetuan (tä.twán'), Duke of. A title of O'Donnell, Leopoldo.

Tetzel (tet'sel), Johann. [Also, Tezel.] b. at Leipzig, Germany, c1465; d. there, July 4, 1519. German Dominican monk and inquisitor. He was famous as a preacher whose picture of punishment avoidable by the purchase of indulgence brought much money into the coffers. In 1517 he embarked on a mission to sell indulgences that aroused the anger of Martin Luther, who published his 95 theses at Wittenberg. Tetzel answered in 106 theses, but found lack of support among more solid Roman Catholics and retired in disgrace to a Leipzig convent. His career has been the subject of much partisan writing from both Protestants and Roman Catholics.

Teubner (toi'b'nér), Benediktus Gotthelf. b. at Grosskraussnitz, Germany, June 16, 1784; d. at Leipzig, Germany, Jan. 21, 1856. German publisher, founder (1824) of the firm of B. G. Teubner at Leipzig, which specialized at first in low-priced Greek and Roman classics. His sons-in-law and successors extended the firm's activities to popular publications in many fields of philosophy, science, art, literature, and history. Its best-known product is the collection Aus Natur und Geisteswelt (1898 et seq.).

Teucer (tä'sér). Either of two heroes of Greek legend. One was the first king of Troy. Another was the son of Telamon and half brother of Ajax; noted as an archer. After his banishment by Telamon, he was said to have founded Salamis in Cyprus.

Teufelsdröckh (toi'fels.drék), Herr. German philosopher, the central character in Thomas Carlyle's Sartor Resartus.

Teufels Lustschloss (toi'fels lüst'shlös), Des. [Eng. trans., "The Devil's Countryhouse".] Comic opera in three acts by Franz Schubert, with a libretto by August von Kotzebue, composed in 1814.

Teuffel (toi'fel), Wilhelm Sigismund. b. at Ludwigsburg, in Württemberg, Germany, Sept. 27, 1820; d. at Tübingen, Germany, March 8, 1878. German philologist, literary historian, and archaeologist. He served as professor of classical philology at Tübingen from 1849. His chief work is Geschichte der römischen Literatur (1868-70).

Téul (tä'ül). [Full name, Téul de González Ortega (dā gón.sá'les ér.tā'gā); also, Gran Téul.] Town in C Mexico, in Zacatecas state, ab. 17 mi. SW of Tlalangenjo. It was the capital and largest town of the Nayarits, and was burned by the Spaniards c1530. Pop. 2,425 (1940).

Teulada (tä.ä.lä'dä), Cape. [Italian, Capo Teulada.] Cape at the S extremity of the island of Sardinia, W of Cape Spartivento.

Teumman (tä.öm'mán). fl. c640 B.C. King of Elam. He was defeated by the Assyrian king Assurbanipal; and in the triumphal procession of Assurbanipal, Teumman's head was suspended by a string from the neck of one of his chief allies and friends.

Teutobod (tü'tō.bod). King of the Teutones, defeated by Marius at the battle of Aquae Sextiae (modern Aix) 102 B.C.

Teutoburger Wald or Teutoburgerwald (toi'tō.bür.gér.vált'). Low, wooded mountain range in NW Germany, extending from the vicinity of Osnabrück in Hanover SE through North Rhine-Westphalia. It is known in different parts as the Lippischer Wald, Osnig, and by other names. A victory was gained in this range (exact locality undetermined) in 9 A.D. by the Germans under Arminius (Hermann) over the Romans under Varus, the Roman army being nearly annihilated. Peak elevation, ab. 1,535 ft.

Teutones (tü'tō.nēz). [Also, Teutoni (-nī).] Ancient Germanic people which, with the Cimbri, defeated three Roman armies in the years 109-105 B.C., and were nearly destroyed by Gaius Marius at Aquae Sextiae (modern Aix), 102 B.C. The Teutones are mentioned later as dwelling near the lower Elbe River and eastward.

Teutonic Order (tü.ton'ik). Military order founded at Acre in Palestine in 1190, and confirmed by the Holy Roman emperor and the Pope. After 1410, when the order was defeated by the Poles and Lithuanians at Tannenberg, its importance decreased; in 1525 the last of its possessions was given up when the grand master Albert became duke of Prussia.

Teutsche Merkur (toi'ch'e mer.kör'). Der. German literary and critical journal founded (1773) and edited by Christoph Martin Wieland. In 1789 he changed the title to Der neue teutsche Merkur and continued it under this name until 1800, when he turned it over to Karl August Böttiger, who carried it on for another decade. The Merkur, patterned after the Mercur de France, was Germany's first literary magazine (the critical part was relegated to a supplement) and wielded great influence in its day. Wieland published most of his works in it.

Teve (tä'vä). [Also, Wateve.] Subgroup of the Shona, a Bantu-speaking people of SE Africa. They inhabit C Mozambique.

Tevere (tä'vä.rä). Italian name of the Tiber.

Teverone (tä'vä.rō'nä). Name applied to the Aniene River, in Italy, in its lower course.

Teviot (tē'vi.ot, tev'i.ot). River in S Scotland, in Roxburghshire. It rises on the Dumfriesshire-Roxburghshire boundary, ab. 13 mi. SW of Hawick, and flows NE through Roxburghshire to a confluence with the river Tweed at Kelso. Length, ab. 37 mi.

Teviotdale (tē'vi.ot.däl, tev'i-). Valley of the river Teviot, in S Scotland, in Roxburghshire. It is an important sheep-raising area.

Tewa (tä'wä). North American Indian language spoken in five Pueblo villages in N central New Mexico and in one village in NE Arizona. It is a member of the Tanoan language family.

Te Wang (te' wäng'). Chinese name of Te, Prince.

Tewfik Pasha (tü'fik pash'a, pa.shä'), Mohammed. b. Nov. 15, 1852; d. in his palace near Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 7, 1892. Khedive of Egypt (1879-92); son of Ismail Pasha whom he succeeded. From his accession until 1882 Egyptian finances continued under Anglo-French control. In that year occurred the rebellion of Arabi Pasha; its suppression by the British marked the cessation of French influence, and the virtual establishment of a British protectorate. The revolt of the Mahdists led, in spite of British expeditions, to the loss (1884-85) of the upper Nile and Sudan regions. He was succeeded by his eldest son, Abbas Hilmi Pasha (Abbas II).

Tewkesbury (tō'ks'bēr.i). [Latin, Etoecassa.] Municipal borough and old town in W England, in Gloucestershire, situated at the influx of the Warwick river Avon into the river Severn, ab. 10 mi. NE of Gloucester, ab. 152 mi. NW of London by rail. It is near the Gloucestershire-Worcestershire boundary. Tewkesbury was engaged in the woolen-textile industry until c1850. The abbey church, chiefly of the 12th century, is one of the most important of English Romanesque structures. The exterior is marked by its massive tower, its beautiful radiating choir-chapels in the Decorated style, and the curious recessed porch and window of the west front. A victory was gained here in the "Bloody Meadow," 1/2 mi. S of the town, on May 4, 1471, by the Yorkists under Edward IV over the Lancastrians under Margaret of Anjou and Prince Edward; by it Edward was reestablished on the throne. 5,292 (1951).

Tewkesbury Chronicle. Chronicle, chiefly of English ecclesiastical history, compiled (1066-1263) at the abbey of Tewkesbury.

Tewksbury (tûk's'ber'i, -bêr'i). Town in NE Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, E of Lowell, 7,515 (1950).

Texarkana (tek's'ar.kā'nā). City in SW Arkansas, county seat of Miller County, twin city of Texarkana, Tex.: rail shipping point for cotton, livestock, and dairy products. Industries include lumber, cotton processing, metalworking, and I woodworking, 15,875 (1950).

Texarkana. City in NE Texas, in Bowie County, E of Dallas, twin city of Texarkana, Ark.: lumber, clay-products, and clothing in industries. It was established in 1873. The name is a combination of the first three letters of Texas, the first three letters of Arkansas, and the final three letters of Louisiana (which state is situated close by), 24,753 (1950).

Texas (tek's'as). [Called the "Lone Star State."] State of the SW United States, bounded by Oklahoma on the N, Arkansas on the NE (separated by the Red River), Louisiana on the SE (separated by Sabine River), the Gulf of Mexico (separated by the Rio Grande) on the SW, and New Mexico on the W: a Gulf State, sometimes classed also as a Southern State.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Texas is divided for administrative purposes into 254 counties. The state sends 21 representatives to Congress, and has 23 electoral votes. Among the leading cities are Amarillo, Austin, Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth, Galveston, Houston, Port Arthur, San Antonio, and Waco. Capital, Austin: area, 263,644 sq. mi. (267,339 sq. mi., including water); pop. 7,711,194 (1950), an increase of 20.2 percent over the 1940 figure. The state ranks first in area, and sixth (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The state comprises a low coastal region indented by many bays, a prairie region toward the C area, a C hilly region, high plains in the N and W (including the Llano Estacado, or Staked Plain, in the W), and a mountain region W of the Pecos River. The mountains include the Santiago Mountains, the Davis Mountains, and the Guadalupe Mountains, in which is situated Guadalupe Peak (8,751 ft.), the highest point in the state. The N tip of the state is called the "Panhandle" because of its resemblance on the map to the handle of a pan. The chief rivers of Texas, in addition to the Red River, on the N and E boundaries, and the Rio Grande, on the S and SW boundaries, are the Canadian, flowing across the "Panhandle" section; the Sabine, in the E, flowing into the Gulf of Mexico; the Trinity, in the E, flowing into Galveston Bay; the Brazos, in the C section, flowing SE into Matagorda Bay. The climate varies considerably from one section to another; the temperature rarely drops to the freezing point along the coast, although it frequently does so in the NW. Rainfall is scanty in the W, and large sections here have been made suitable for agriculture by means of irrigation.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Texas is one of the leading agricultural states of the U.S., ranking first in the production of cotton, beef cattle, mules, and sheep. It also ranks high in the production of peanuts, citrus fruits, corn, winter wheat, oats, pecans, rice, sorghum, potatoes and sweet potatoes, onions, and tomatoes. Other vegetables and fruits are also grown. Texas is tremendously rich in minerals, taking first place in petroleum, sulfur, and helium production among the states. Coal, natural gas, natural gasoline, silver, potash, limestone, salt, granite, sandstone, and gypsum are also found. Wool, petroleum, meat, cotton yarn, and lumber are the chief manufactures of the great new industrial area which has grown up in the state. Houston, the state's largest city, ships more oil and cotton than any other port in the world. Galveston, Port Arthur, and Corpus Christi are also busy ports. Dallas is the financial capital of the SW and a center for women's fashions. The heart of the state's livestock industry, Fort Worth has large stockyards and is also a major oil-refining center; manufactures airplanes. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as two billion dollars; from mineral output, as high as two billion; from manufacturing, as high as two billion.

History. Texas was first explored (1528) by a Spaniard, Cabeza de Vaca. An attempt at settlement was made (c1635) at Matagorda Bay by La Salle, who gave the French a basis for claiming the region as part of Louisiana, but the region was left to the Spanish. They established a number of missions in Texas during the 18th century. The U.S. relinquished (1821) its Louisiana Purchase claim to Texas, which was considered a part of Mexico. American colonization began during this period. In 1835 American settlers numbered ab. 20,000. They were eager for self-government and a rebellion against Mexico broke out. The colonists adopted a declaration of independence on March 2, 1836. Santa Ana and his Mexican troops massacred (March 6, 1836) the American garrison at the Alamo, although the Americans defended the fort to the last man. The Mexicans advanced to Goliad and there too were victorious. On April 21, however, the tide was reversed when General Sam Houston and his army defeated Santa Ana at San Jacinto near the site of what is now Houston. This defeat was so decisive that the establishment of the Republic of Texas was secured. The republic was set up with Houston as president and was recognized by some foreign nations, but many inhabitants favored annexation to the U.S., and on Dec. 29, 1845, Texas joined the Union as the 28th state. Mexico regarded the annexation as a declaration of hostilities, and the Mexican War resulted, terminating (1848) in the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. Texas seceded on Feb. 1, 1861, despite the opposition of General Houston; was the scene of various Civil War battles including the last, at Palmito Hill (1865), more than a month after Lee's surrender. The state was readmitted to the Union on March 3, 1870, after nullifying secession in 1866. Texas suffered from considerable disorganization during the Reconstruction period.

Culture. The development of the state is more urban than rural (ab. 63 percent of the population was classified as urban in 1950). The state has a large foreign-born population consisting chiefly of Spanish-speaking Mexicans. Dallas is the cultural center of the state, possessing a symphony orchestra, little theater, museum of fine arts, and the Hall of State (a museum of Texas history). Amarillo, Austin, Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, and Waco also have cultural interests and facilities. Beaumont, in the extreme SE, is near the site of the Spindletop oil well where the first bonanza gusher was drilled (1901). At Corpus Christi, a seaside resort as well as an important port, is a U.S. naval air station where thousands of men were trained in World War II. Uvalde has become known as the home of former Vice-President John Nance Garner. At San Jacinto is a national memorial monument commemorating the battle there and housing the San Jacinto Museum of History. Among the state's many institutions of higher learning are the state-supported University of Texas, at Austin, with branches at Galveston, Dallas, and Houston, and the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas, at College Station, with branches at Stephenville and Arlington; Baylor University, at Waco, with a branch at Houston; Southern Methodist University, at Dallas; Texas Christian University, at Fort Worth. The state motto is "Friendship." The state flower is the bluebonnet.

Texas and New Orleans Railroad Co. v. Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, 281 U.S. 548 (1930) (nû ôr'le.ânz, ôr.lênz'). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the provisions of the Railway Labor Act of 1926, which in part guaranteed collective bargaining to railway workers. The case is notable as one of the few instances in which a labor union invoked the use of the injunction to safeguard its legal rights.

Texas City. City in E Texas, in Galveston County, SE of Houston, on the Gulf of Mexico: center for the smelting of Bolivian tin ore; oil refineries and chemical plants. The city suffered a major disaster on April 16, 1947, when a freighter, laden with ammonium nitrate, exploded in the harbor, causing the death of 512 persons. Property damage was estimated at 50 million dollars, 16,620 (1950).

Texas Rangers. Mounted military and police force of importance in the history of Texas. It originated in 1835, as the American settlers in Texas moved toward a declaration of independence from Mexico, and at first consisted of less than 100 men, organized into three companies. During the ten years of the republic, the Texas Rangers guarded the border and fought hostile Indians, and during the Mexican War they did notable service, being especially useful as scouts because of their intimate knowledge of the terrain. During the Civil War some of them fought as a unit of the Confederate forces. Perhaps their greatest service was rendered during the Reconstruction years, when a variety of bad men, Mexican interlopers, Indians, and feuding factions made law and order more than a little difficult to uphold. In 1874 they were organized along the lines of a formal constabulary, divided into six companies with an enrollment of 75 men each. For a long while their services continued to be much needed, and were so valiantly performed as to win wide admiration. But as desperadoes died out, as cattle wars subsided, as the vast spaces of Texas became dotted with populous cities, the need for this glamorous cavalry diminished and came to an end, and in 1935 the Texas Rangers became a part of the state highway patrol.

Texas v. White, 7 Wallace 700 (1869) (hwit). U.S. Supreme Court decision notable for its pronouncement on the nature of the federal union and the theory of secession. During the Civil War the government of Texas disposed of some U.S. bonds, in payment of supplies for the Confederate government. The reconstruction government of Texas brought suit to enjoin the defendants from receiving payment on these bonds, on the ground that the state government of the Confederacy was not a legal government and therefore the disposition of the bonds was illegal. The decision of the court, upholding the claim of the reconstruction government of Texas, represented a major triumph for the Radical Republicans. Noteworthy was the court's declaration on the Union. "The Constitution," it said, "in all its provisions, looks to an indestructible Union, composed of indestructible States. . . . Considered therefore as transactions under the Constitution, the ordinance of secession, adopted by the convention and ratified by a majority of the citizens of Texas, and all the acts of her legislature intended to give effect to that ordinance, were absolutely null. . . . The obligations of the State, as a member of the Union, and of every citizen of the State, as a citizen of the United States, remained perfect and unimpaired."

Texocans (teks.kō'kanz). Nahuatl-speaking tribe settled at Texcoco on the E shore of Lake Texcoco in Mexico. They became established as an independent city-state early in the 12th century, and thereafter their history was interwoven with that of the Aztec. They allied with Cortés in 1520 and assisted in the downfall of the Aztec nation in the Spanish conquest of Mexico.

Texcoco (tes.kō'kō). [Full name, Texcoco de Mora (dā mō'ra); also: Tezcoco, Tezcucō de Mora.] Town in S Mexico, in México state, formerly near the E shore of Lake Texcoco, ab. 16 mi. E of Mexico City. It was the seat and home of the Texcocans, who called it Acolhuacán or Tenayucán. At this place, in 1521, Hernando Cortés organized the siege of Mexico City and built the brigantines with which he assaulted that city from the lake. 5,437 (1940).

Texcoco, Lake. [Also, Lake Tezcucō.] Largest of the cluster of lakes in the valley of Mexico, situated E of Mexico City. At present it is nearly dry, though formerly it was ab. 12 mi. long and 7 mi. wide. The town of Texcoco is now far inland from the E shore. Low and flat lands around it mark its ancient limits, which were many times as great as its present lake bed; Mexico City was then on an island in it, approached by causeways, and Texcoco, Tlacopán, and other towns were on its shores. The water was deep enough in 1520 to float the ships of Hernando Cortés. During the Aztec and early colonial periods it was frequently swelled by rains, causing disastrous floods in Mexico City; one of these floods lasted three years (1629-32). The shrinkage is due to filling in with sediment, drainage, and evaporation. Until 1893 the drains of Mexico City opened into the lake, and its polluted waters, forced back through them during the rains, caused considerable outbreaks of disease in the city. This has been remedied by extensive drainage works and a drainage canal, and it is now proposed to empty the lake entirely. Texcoco is the lowest of the valley lakes, and its waters are brackish. Salt is extracted at a large evaporation works at the N end of the lake. It has no fish, but the singular amphibian called the axolotl was formerly abundant. Area, ab. 43 sq. mi.; elevation, ab. 7,320 ft.

Texcotzingo (tes.kōt.sēng'gō). Hill ab. 5 mi. E of the town of Texcoco, Mexico. The place is marked by a few ruins. Some small artificial pools are erroneously called the Baths of Montezuma.

Teixeira or Teixeira (tē'shā'ra), Pedro. See Teixeira, Pedro.

Texel (tek'sel, tes'el). Island in NW Netherlands, belonging to the province of North Holland; the largest and the southernmost of the West Frisian islands. Opposite it, on the mainland, is the town of Den Helder. As on all other West Frisian islands, the part of the island fronting on the Waddenzee is flat, while high dunes, continuing the North Holland dunes, front on the North Sea. Pop. of the commune of Texel, 8,101 (1939).

Texier (te'syā), Charles Félix Marie. b. at Versailles, France, Aug. 29, 1802; d. at Paris, July 1, 1871. French archaeologist and traveler.

Texoma (tek.sō'ma), Lake. See under Denison Dam. Teyde (tā'yā), Pico de. [Also: Pico de Teide, Pico de Tenerife; English, Peak of Tenerife (or Tenerife).] Volcano in the island of Tenerife, Canary Islands, and the culminating mountain of the group. Elevation, ab. 12,182 ft.

Teyte (tā'tē), Maggie. b. at Wolverhampton, England, April 17, 1859—. English concert and operatic soprano. She made her debut (1907) as Zerlina at Monte Carlo, sang during the following two seasons with the Opéra-Comique, Paris, and was a member of the Beecham Opera Company, the Covent Garden Opera Company, London, and the Chicago Opera Company, first appearing (1911) in America as Cherubino in Le Nozze di Figaro at Philadelphia. She toured the U.S. on several occasions.

Tezcatlipoca (tes'kā.tlē.pō'kā). One of the principal deities in Aztec Indian mythology and religion. In one of his aspects he presided over the first of the four eras of the earth's history. He was the creator, also identified with the sun and the four directions, and to him were made the sacrifice of prisoners of war, chosen for their handsomeness and bravery. As a god of night he was the tutelary of witches and thieves. He also had powers over drought and fruitfulness of crops.

Tezcatzoncatl (tes'kā.t.sōn.kā'tl). One of the important pulque cult gods (of which there were 400) of Aztec Indian religion. He presided over the making of pulque.

Tezcucō (tes.kō'kō) or Tezcucō de Mora (dā mō'ra). See Texcoco.

Tezcucō (tes.kō'kō), Lake. See Texcoco, Lake.

Tezel (tes'sel), Johann. See Tetzl, Johann.

Thach (thach), Edward. See Blackbeard.

Thacher (thach'ēr), George. b. at Yarmouth, Me., April 12, 1754; d. at Biddeford, Me., April 6, 1824. American jurist and politician. He was a delegate from Massachusetts to the Continental Congress, was a member of Congress from the Maine district of Massachusetts (1799-1801), and was judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts and of Maine.

Thacher, James. b. at Barnstable, Mass., Feb. 14, 1754; d. May 23, 1844. American physician, historian, and medical writer. He served (1775-83) as a surgeon's mate and subsequently as a surgeon in the Revolutionary forces, taking part in the Penobscot expedition and in the siege of Yorktown. He established (1784) his medical and surgical practice at Plymouth, Mass., where he also devoted himself to medical writing and antiquarian and historical labors. Author of a diary, A Military Journal during the American Revolutionary War (1823), reprinted (1856 et seq.) as The American Revolution. His medical works include The American New Dispensatory (1810) and The American Medical Biography (1828). Other books by him are An Essay on Demonology, Ghosts, and Apparitions (1831) and History of the Town of Plymouth (1832).

Thacher, John Boyd. b. at Ballston Spa, N.Y., Sept. 11, 1847; d. Feb. 25, 1909. American politician, book collector, and historian. He was in business at Albany, N.Y., where he served (1886-88, 1896-98) as mayor. His work as a bibliophile is represented by the some 900 incunabula he collected which are now at the Library of Congress; he also brought together a complete set of autographs of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Author of The Continent of America (1896), The Cabotian Discovery (1897), and Christopher Columbus (3 vols., 1903-04).

Thacher, Thomas Anthony. b. at Hartford, Conn., Jan. 11, 1815; d. at New Haven, Conn., April 7, 1886. American classical scholar, professor of Latin at Yale from 1842.

Thacher, Thomas Day. b. at Tenaflly, N.J., Sept. 10, 1881; d. at New York, Nov. 12, 1953. American jurist. He was appointed (1925) judge of the U.S. district court of southern N.-w. York, served as solicitor general (1930-33) of the U.S., and was appointed (1943) judge of the New York state court of appeals. He was head of the commission that revised (1935-36) the New York City charter.

Thackeray (thak'e.ri), Anne Isabella. See Ritchie, Lady Anne Isabella.

Thackeray, William Makepeace. [Pseudonyms: Mr. Brown, George Savage Fitz-Boodile, Major Goliath Gahagan, Charles Jeames de la Pluche, Michael Angelo Titmarsh, Charles James Yellowplush, The Fat Contributor, The Honourable Wilhelmina Amelia Skeggs, Ikey Solomons, Junior, Mr. Spec., Miss Tickletohy, T. T., Launcelot Wagstaff, Théophile Wagstaff, and others.] b. at Calcutta, India, July 18, 1811; d. at London, Dec. 24, 1863. English novelist and satirist. The son of a high official in the service of the East India Company, Thackeray was brought to England in 1817 after his father's death. He received the education of a gentleman at Charterhouse School and Trinity College, Cambridge, but he did not distinguish himself in formal studies at either institution. Having left the university without a degree in 1830, he passed the ensuing winter at Weimar. On his return to England he undertook to read for the bar at the Middle Temple, but he soon abandoned the law to dabble in journalism and art. In 1833 he lost the bulk of his 20,000-pound inheritance through the failure of a Calcutta agency house. Reduced from affluence almost to penury, he removed to Paris, where for three years he sought unsuccessfully to make himself a painter. He married Isabella Shave in 1836 and the following year returned to England to try his fortune as a writer. He had already gained some recognition as a contributor to the Times and Fraser's Magazine and as the author of The Paris Sketch Book, when his wife lost her mind after the birth of her third child in 1840. She lived until 1894 without recovering her sanity. Though Thackeray continued to write voluminously after the breakup of his home, producing such stories as The Great Hogarty Diamond (1841) and Barry Lyndon (1843) and such travel narratives as The Irish Sketch Book (1843) and Notes of a Journey from Cornhill to Grand Cairo (1843), it was not until the appearance of "The Snobs of England" in Punch during 1846-47 and above all of the monthly parts of Vanity Fair during 1847-48 that he became famous. He consolidated his reputation with three other major novels, Pendennis (1848-50), The Newcomes (1853-55), and his great historical romance, The History of Henry Esmond (1852), while he amused his readers with a series of Christmas books, the best of which is The Rose and the Ring (1854). Lectures on The English Humourists (1851) and The Four Georges (1855) made him personally known to admirers both in England and in the U.S., which he visited in 1852-53 and 1855-56. The fees that he received for these performances, for such later novels as The Virginians (1857-59) and Philip (1861-62), and for his editorship of The Cornhill Magazine (1860-62) enabled him to leave his daughters substantially the same fortune that he had inherited as a young man; but apart from his familiar essays contributed to The Cornhill Magazine, collected as The Roundabout Papers, and his unfinished romance Denis Duval (1864), the writing of his last years is markedly inferior to that of his prime.

Thaddaeus (tha.d'e.us) or Thaddeus (thad'ē.us). See Saint Jude.

Thaddeus (thad'ē.us). See Faddeevski.

Thaddeus of Warsaw (wōr'sō). Novel by Jane Porter, published in 1803.

Thags (thugz). See Thugs.

Thai (ti). See also Siamese.
Thai. [Also, Tai. (Thai is the Siamese and Lao form, Tai the form used by the Shan, White Tai, Black Tai, and other northern groups. Commonly, however, either spelling is used to refer to any or all of the Thai-speaking tribes.)] Widely distributed people of continental SE Asia, speaking similar languages and sharing a common basic culture. From their original seat in China S of the Yangtze River, where they had already developed a valley civilization based upon plow cultivation of irrigated rice, they began early in the Christian era to spread, under Chinese pressure, to the W and S. In the W the Shans reached N Burma in large numbers in the 7th century; in 1229 the Ahoms founded a kingdom in Assam. In the S the ancestors of the Siamese achieved political dominance in N Thailand (Siam) in the 13th century; from there they expanded to the S against the opposition of the Khmer (Cambodians), reaching the sea by the end of the 13th century. Slightly later another group, closely related to the Siamese, occupied the central Mekong valley; their descendants are the modern Lao and Laotians. Thai settlements are also found in Kweichow, Kwangsi, and Yunnan provinces in China and in Tonkin (North Viet-Nam) and N Laos in Indochina (Dioi, Nung, Viet-Nam and Black Tai, Tho, Nhang, and others). The linguistic family comprising the languages spoken by the Thai peoples is also called Thai. These languages are tonal, monosyllabic, and isolating. Thai has certain affinities with Chinese and is sometimes grouped with it in the Sino-Tai family.

Thailand (tī'land, -land). [Official name formerly Siam; Siamese, Muang-Thai.] Constitutional monarchy in the peninsula of Indochina, in SE Asia. It is bounded by Burma on the W and N, by Laos on the E and N, by Cambodia on the SE, and by the Gulf of Siam and the Federation of Malaya on the S. The principal river is the Menam, or Chao Phraya. In the C part of the country are extensive lowlands, but elsewhere there are numerous hill and mountain areas, many of which are densely forested. The climate is tropical, with long, hot, rainy summers and short, warm, dry winters. Rice is the staple crop, grown in paddies as elsewhere in the Orient. Coconuts, fish, fruits, and vegetables also supply food. The chief exports are rice, rubber, teak, and tin; imports consist chiefly of manufactured products. There are over 2,000 mi. of railroads; highway mileage of improved roads is less. Rivers are important transport routes. Culturally and linguistically, Thailand belongs to the Indo-Chinese culture area of SE Asia; the prevailing religion is Buddhism. The king is the head of the nation, but the government is in the hands of a president and a council, both elected by popular vote for a term of four years. In the 16th century the country was enlarged, and trade commenced with Europe. Ayutthaya was sacked by the Burmese in 1767, and the capital transferred to Bangkok 1782. Western civilization has been introduced in recent times. French advances and claims along the E frontier led (1893) to serious complications, nearly involving England. The French in July entered the Menam River and blockaded Bangkok; and in October Thailand ceded to France abt. 103,000 sq. mi. E of the Mekong River. The Franco-Siamese treaty of March 23, 1907, provided for the cession to France of Battambang, and several other Cambodian towns. On March 13, 1909, the tributary states of Kelantan, Trengganu, and Kelah, on the Malay Peninsula, were ceded to Great Britain. The name was officially changed from Siam to Thailand in 1939, back to Siam in 1946, and again to Thailand in 1949. The country was seized by Japan in 1941, and declared war on the U.S. and Great Britain the following year. Japan gave Thailand four of the unfederated Malay States, Kedah, Kelantan, Perlis, and Trengganu and two Shan states from Burma, but these were returned (1945) to British and Burma after the defeat of Japan in World War II. Capital, Bangkok; area, 198,271 sq. mi.; pop. 17,442,689 (1947).

Thais (thā'is). fl. in the last part of the 4th century B.C. Athenian courtesan; mistress of Alexander the Great. She is alleged (unloubtedly erroneously) to have incited him to set fire to Persepolis. She was afterward mistress of the King of Egypt.

Thais (tá.ēs). Opera in three acts by Jules Massenet, with a libretto by Louis Gallet, first produced at Paris, March 16, 1894. The work, based on a novel by Anatole France, is best known for the orchestral Meditation.

Thaisa (thá'í.sə). Daughter of Simonides and wife of Pericles in Shakespeare's Pericles.

Thai-tsu (tí'tsu'). See Tai-tze.

Thakombau (thá.kóm'bau). d. 1882. Fijian chief who came nearest to earning the title King of Fiji. Appearing first in the 1830's as son of the exiled ruler of Mbau on Viti Levu, he won the name Thakombau ("overthrower of Mbau") by reconquering his father's domain. In 1850 he declared war on all Christians. Only four years later, however, after a deposed chief of the rival district of Rewa had returned from exile and organized a threatening revolt, Thakombau espoused Christianity. This had the effect of uniting the heathens against him. With the help of George Tubou of Tonga, he got the upper hand, only to be threatened later by a Tongan invader, Moafu. The first constitution, drawn up under British influence in 1871, named Thakombau ruler of the whole Fijian archipelago, but in 1873, the chiefs, weary of civil wars, ceded sovereignty to Britain. Thakombau was retired on a pension of 1,500 pounds a year.

Thakura (tá'kú.ra), Ravindranatha. See Tagore, Sir Rabindranath.

Thalaba the Destroyer (thál'a.bə). Descriptive poem (1831) by Robert Southey.

Thalberg (tál'berk), Sigismund. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, 1812; d. at Naples, Italy, April 27, 1871. German pianist and composer for the piano. His compositions include various fantasias, nocturnes, and other works for piano.

Thale (tá'le). Town in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony-Anhalt, Russian zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, situated in the Harz Mountains ab. 5 mi. W of Quedlinburg; ironworks and lumber mills. It is a health resort, with saline springs, 18,082 (1946).

Thales (thá'lez) or Thaletas (thá.le'tas). b. in Crete; fl. about the 7th century B.C. Lyric poet and musician of Sparta.

Thales. b. at Miletus, Asia Minor, c640 B.C.; d. c546. Greek philosopher, astronomer, and geometer, one of the seven wise men of ancient Greece, and the earliest of the Ionian natural philosophers. He regarded water as the principle of all things. He is said to have predicted an eclipse of the sun for May 28, 585 B.C.; and to him were attributed various discoveries in geometry and astronomy. His reputation as an abstract philosopher, it is said, brought the criticism that he was impractical; according to the story, he then went into the olive-oil business and made a fortune. He is memorable, not only for his actual discoveries, but for being the first to base a philosophy on natural phenomena alone without recourse to the supernatural.

Thalia (thá.lí'ə). In Greek mythology, the Muse of comedy and of idyllic poetry. In later art she is generally represented with a comic mask, a shepherd's crook, and a wreath of ivy.

Thalia. Asteroid (No. 23) discovered at London by J. R. Hind, Dec. 15, 1852.

Thalia (tá.le'ə). German literary magazine founded and conducted by Johann von Schiller. The first number came out at Mannheim as Rheinische Thalia in 1785, the next three at Leipzig as Thalia in the period 1785-91, and the last four as Neue Thalia in 1792-93. Its appearance was sporadic, and the chief part of its content was written by Schiller himself.

Thallo (thál'ə). In Greek mythology, the Attic name of one of the Horae, whose names as fertility spirits vary locally. Thallo presided over the growth of vegetation.

Thälmann (tál'mán), Ernst. b. at Hamburg, April 16, 1886; d. (officially reported killed in an air raid) at Buchenwald concentration camp, Germany, Aug. 28, 1944. German Communist leader. A transport worker, he joined the Social Democrats in 1903 and the Independent Social Democrats in 1917, became a Communist in 1919, was a member (1924-33) of the Reichstag, and served as chairman (1925 et seq.) of the German Communist party. In 1932 he ran for the presidency against Paul von Hindenburg, obtaining five million votes. He was arrested (1933) and placed in a concentration camp.

Thalping (thál'ping). [Also: Thablaping, Thapi, Thaping.] Subgroup of the Tswana, or western Sotho, of SW Bechuanaland in S Africa.

Thalwil (tál'vél). Village in N Switzerland, in the canton of Zurich, on the S part of the Lake of Zurich. It has silk factories. 7,965 (1941).

Thame (tām). Urban district and market town in S England, in Oxfordshire, situated on the river Thame ab. 12 mi. E of Oxford, ab. 40 mi. NW of London by rail. It has the remains of an abbey founded in the 12th century. 3,585 (1951).

Thame River. River in S England, in Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire. It rises in Buckinghamshire and flows SW into Oxfordshire to join the river Thames (of which it is a main tributary) at Dorchester. Length, ab. 30 mi.

Thames (temz, thāmz). Navigable river in E Connecticut, formed by the junction at Norwich of the Quinebaug and Yantic rivers. It empties into Long Island Sound below New London. Length, ab. 15 mi.

Thames (temz). [Also: Isis; Latin, Tamesa, Tamesis.] Principal river in Great Britain, in S and SE England. It rises on the E slope of the Cotswold Hills, near Cirencester, in Gloucestershire. It flows mainly E, forming a part of the whole of the following boundaries: Gloucestershire-Wiltshire, Berkshire-Oxfordshire, Berkshire-Buckinghamshire, Middlesex-Surrey, and Essex-Kent. Broadening into a considerable estuary, it flows into the North Sea. For part of its course to its junction with the river Thame it is called also the Isis. The chief places on its banks are Oxford, Abingdon, Reading, Great Marlow, Windsor, Eton, Staines, Chertsey, Kingston-on-Thames, Richmond, Brentford, London, Gravesend, and Sheerness. The principal tributaries are the rivers Cherwell, Thame, Colne, Lea, and Rodon on the N, and the Kennet, Mole, and Medway on the S. Above London it passes through some of the richest agricultural country in England; below London it is one of the greatest arteries of shipping in the world. It is navigable for ocean-going vessels to London Bridge; it is tidal to Teddington. Length to Sheerness, ab. 228 mi.; width at London Bridge, 900 ft.; at Gravesend, half a mile.

Thames. River in SW Ontario, Canada, which flows into Lake St. Clair ab. 32 mi. E of Detroit. The two branches of the river, N and S, rise in SW Ontario and meet at the site of the city of London. Near its banks, on Oct. 5, 1813, American troops under W. H. Harrison (cavalry under R. M. Johnson) defeated allied forces of the British (under H. A. Proctor) and Indians (under Tecumseh, who was killed in the battle). Length, 163 mi.

Thames and Severn Canal (sev'ern). Canal in W. England, in Gloucestershire and crossing a few miles of the N projection of Wiltshire. It extends E from Stroud (connected with the river Severn by canal) to Lechlade, on the river Thames. Length, ab. 30 mi.

Thames Embankment. Wide macadamized thoroughfare, with foot pavements on each side, constructed (1864-70) by the Metropolitan Board of Works in London along the N bank of the Thames, from Blackfriars Bridge to Westminster. Strictly speaking, this is the Victoria Embankment, while the Albert Embankment (finished 1868) extends from Westminster Bridge to Vauxhall Bridge on the S bank, and the Chelsea Embankment (finished 1873) extends from the Chelsea Hospital to the Albert Suspension Bridge on the N bank. These embankments have a granite wall on the river side.

Thames Tunnel. Tunnel under the Thames at London, near the Tower, opened in 1843.

Thamesville (temz'vil, thāms'-). Unincorporated community in SE Connecticut, in the town of Norwich, in New London County. 5,518 (1950).

Tammuz (thām'uz). See Tammuz.

Thamyris (thām'y.ris). In Greek legend, a Thracian singer. He boasted that he could surpass the Muses, and for this presumption was deprived by them of his sight and of the power of singing.

Thanatopsis (than.a.top'sis). Poem by William Cullen Bryant, published in the North American Review in 1817, and later revised.

Thanatos (than'a.tos). Ancient Greek personification of death. He was not worshipped as a god. In ancient Greece as elsewhere in the world, death personified was a folk concept. Later he became prominent in literary allusion.

He was regarded as a healer and remover of pain; he was inexorable in his purpose, and unbrilliant. Hesiod said he was even hated by the gods. In the Iliad he is the son of Nox (night) and the brother of Hypnos (sleep).

Thane (thān), Elswyth. b. in Iowa, c1900—. American author; wife (married 1927) of Charles William Beebe. Her books include Riders of the Wind (1925), Echo Answers (1927), His Elizabeth (1928), and Kissing Kin (1948). She is author of the play The Queen's Folly. Her novel The Tudor Wench (1933) was produced as a play (1934) at London; another novel, Young Mr. Disraeli, was produced as a play at London (1935) and New York (1937).

Thane of Cawdor (kă'dôr). See Cawdor, Thane of.
Thanes (thān'z). Isle of. Former island, in SE England, in Kent, situated from the NE extremity of that county. It is separated from the mainland by a bifurcation of the river Stour, and contains Margate, Broadstairs, and Ramsgate (so called from Ruim, an old name of the island). It was formerly separated from the mainland by a broad tidal channel, but is now linked to it by several highways and two railways. Length, 9 mi.; width, ab. 5 mi.

Thanet, Octave. Pseudonym of French, Alice.

Thanksgiving Day (thānks'gīv'ing). American national holiday, usually celebrated on the fourth Thursday in November; traditionally a time of family gathering at the dinner table to a feast of turkey. It presumably dates back to a thanksgiving proclamation issued (1621) by Governor William Bradford in commemoration of an unusually good harvest. It was observed occasionally as a national holiday by proclamation until, at the urging of the writer and editor Sarah J. Hale, President Lincoln established (1863) the annual national holiday.

Thann (tān). Town in E France, in the department of Haut-Rhin, on the Thur River ab. 23 mi. SW of Colmar. It is the center of a winemaking region and has manufactures of cotton, machinery, and chemical products. The town, including the Church of Saint Kiebaud (14th and 15th centuries), suffered severe damage in World War II. 6,017 (1946).

Thaon-les-Vosges (tā.ōn.lē.vōzh; -vōzh). Town in l France, in the department of Vosges, on the Moselle River ab. 6 mi. N of Épinal. It has dyeworks. 8,191 (1946).

Thapsacus (thap'sak.us). [In the Bible, Tiphshah; modern village, Dibse.] In ancient geography, a town in Syria on the W bank of the Euphrates. The Euphrates was crossed here in the expedition of Cyrus the Younger, by Darius, and by Alexander the Great.

Thapsus (thap'sus). In ancient geography, a town in N Africa, situated on the coast ab. 30 mi. SE of what is now Sousse. Here Julius Caesar totally defeated (46 B.C.) the Pompeians under Cato, Scipio, and Juba, and ended the African phase of the civil war.

Tharandt (tā'rānt). Town in E Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony, Russian Zone, formerly in the free state of Saxony, ab. 9 mi. SW of Dresden. 4,559 (1946).

Tharaud (tā.rō), Jean. b. at St.-Junien, France, May 9, 1877; d. at Versailles, France, April 9, 1952. French novelist, collaborator with his brother Jérôme Tharaud.

Tharaud, Jérôme. b. at St.-Junien, France, March 18, 1874—. French novelist. Author, with his brother Jean Tharaud, of Le Colporteur débile (1898), Dingley, l'illustre écrivain (1902), La Maitresse servante (1911), La Fête arabe (1912), Rabat (1918), Marrakech (1920), and others. He taught French at Budapest (1899-1903), joined his brother in newspaper work (1903), and with him carried out secretarial duties for the writer and politician Maurice Barrès.

Thar Desert (tār, tur). [Also, Indian Desert.] Desert in Pakistan, lying between the valley of the Indus River and the Aravalli Hills. It is virtually uninhabited in its N and more arid portion and only sparsely settled by nomad herders in its S part. Length, ab. 400 mi.; width, ab. 200 mi.

Thargelia (thār.jē.li.a). Ancient Greek festival celebrated at Athens on the 6th and 7th of the month Thargelion, the harvest month, in honor of Apollo. There were choral competitions in his name. Two important rites were features of the celebration: the bringing in of unripe first fruits, cooked, and the offering of bread made from the first grain; and the scapegoat ritual. A man (usually a condemned criminal) was feasted, paraded through the city, flogged with green branches, and then either stoned out of the city or killed.

Tharrawaddy (thar.a.wōd'). District in Pegu division, S central Burma, N of Rangoon. It has a large production of rice, teak, rubber, and tobacco. Capital, Tharrawaddy; area, 2,815 sq. mi.; pop. 593,909 (1941).

Thasos (thās'os). Island in the N part of the Aegean Sea, S of E Macedonia. It belongs to the Greek nomos (department) of Kavalla, and is ab. 4 mi. from the mainland. The surface is mountainous. It was colonized from Paros about the end of the 8th century B.C., was long noted for its gold mines, belonged to the Athenian confederacy, revolted c465 B.C. but was besieged and subjugated by Cimon, was subject to Philip V of Macedon, and was a free city under the Romans. Chief town, Thasos; area, 152 sq. mi.; pop. 15,246 (1940).

Thasos. [Also, Limin.] Chief town and ancient capital of the island of Thasos, situated on the N coast. Pop. ab. 1,500.

Thatari (thāt'a.rī). Medieval name of Sassari.

Thatch (thach), Edward. See Blackbeard.

Thatcher (thatch'ər), Becky. Character in The Adventures of Tom Sawyer (1876), a novel by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain.

Thatcher, Benjamin Bussey. b. at Warren, Me., Oct. 8, 1809; d. at Boston, July 14, 1840. American author. He was editor (1833) of the Colonizationist and Journal of Freedom and lectured in behalf of colonization in Liberia.

Thatcher, Henry Knox. b. at Thomaston, Me., May 26, 1806; d. at Boston, April 5, 1880. American rear admiral. He served in the attacks on Fort Fisher, and commanded the western Gulf squadron in the naval operations against Mobile in 1865.

Thau (tō), Étang de. Lagoon in the department of Hérault, S France, situated near the Mediterranean (with which it communicates by a canal) near Sète. Length, ab. 12 mi.

Thaulow (tōu'lō), Fritz. b. at Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, Oct. 20, 1847; d. at Paris, Nov. 5, 1906. Norwegian painter. He was one of the organizers of the Salon in the Champ de Mars at Paris in 1890. Until 1892 he painted Norwegian subjects almost exclusively, but after that date worked in France. His subjects were usually landscapes. He was appointed Norwegian commissioner for the fine arts at the Exposition Universelle at Paris in 1900.

Thaumaturgus (thō.mā.tēr'gus), Saint Gregory. See Saint Gregory Thaumaturgus.

Thaxter (thaks'tēr), Celia Lighton. b. at Portsmouth, N.H., June 29, 1835; d. at the Isles of Shoals, near Portsmouth, Aug. 26, 1894. American poet. Author of Poems (1872), Among the Isles of Shoals (1873; prose sketches), Drift-Weed (1879), Poems for Children (1884), Idyls and Pastorals (1886), and An Island Garden (1894; prose sketches).

Thaxter, Roland. b. at Newtonville, Mass., Aug. 28, 1858; d. April 22, 1932. American botanist, teacher, and author; son of Celia Lighton Thaxter. He served (1891-1919) as assistant and then full professor of cryptogamic botany at Harvard, where he became (1919) honorary curator of the Farlow Herbarium and Library. He was the American editor (1907-32) of the Annals of Botany and wrote Contribution Towards a Monograph of the Laboulbeniaceae (5 vols., 1896-1931).

Thayendanegea (thā.yen.dā.nā.gē.a). Indian name of Brant, Joseph.

Thayer (thā'ēr, thār), Abbott Henderson. b. at Boston, Aug. 12, 1849; d. May 29, 1921. American animal, figure, and landscape painter. He was for two years president of the Society of American Artists. Among his pictures are Virgin Enthroned and Caritas. He made special studies of protective coloration in the animal kingdom.

Thayer, Alexander Wheelock. b. at South Natick, Mass., Oct. 22, 1817; d. at Trieste, July 15, 1897. American author, known as a biographer of Ludwig van Beethoven. He was graduated from Harvard in 1843 and from the law school there in 1848, was for a number of years assistant librarian at Harvard, and in 1849 went to Germany, where he spent much of the remainder of his life. He was for a time music critic of the New York Tribune, and from 1862 to 1882 was U.S. consul at Trieste. His chief work, Ludwig van Beethoven's Leben, was written in English, translated into German by Deiters, and published in three volumes (1866, 1872, 1879). The fourth volume was completed by Deiters and Riemann, and the fifth by Riemann alone. Henry E. Krehbiel's edition in English was brought out in three volumes in 1921.

Thayer, Eli. b. at Mendon, Mass., June 11, 1819; d. at Worcester, Mass., April 15, 1899. American educator, inventor, and antislavery agitator. In 1848 he founded Oread Institute, a collegiate school for young women, at Worcester, Mass. He has been called "the Father of Kansas" on account of his efforts so to influence colonization that it should be admitted to the Union as an antislavery state. From 1857 to 1861 he was a member from Massachusetts of the House of Representatives.

Thayer, Ernest Lawrence. b. at Lawrence, Mass., Aug. 14, 1863; d. at Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 21, 1940. American journalist and ballad writer, noted as the author of the poem Casey at the Bat (1888).

Thayer, Ezra Ripley. b. at Milton, Mass., Feb. 21, 1866; d. Sept. 14, 1915. American lawyer and teacher; son of James Bradley Thayer. He practiced law at Boston, and served (1910-15) as dean of the Harvard Law School.

Thayer, James Bradley. b. at Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 15, 1831; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 14, 1902. American lawyer and teacher. He became (1856) a member of the Boston bar, and served (1874-1902) as professor at the Harvard Law School, where he gained a reputation as the most prominent American authority on the law of evidence and constitutional law. Together with James Barr Ames, John C. Gray, and Christopher C. Langdell, he initiated the case system of the teaching and study of law. Author of A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law (1898), John Marshall (1901), and Legal Essays (1908).

Thayer, John Milton. b. at Bellingham, Mass., Jan. 24, 1820; d. March 19, 1906. American soldier and politician. He became (1855) the first brigadier general of the Nebraska territorial militia, was named (1861) a colonel of the 1st Nebraska volunteers, and emerged from the Civil War a brevet major general of volunteers. He served (1867-71) as one of the first U.S. senators from Nebraska, was named (1875) governor of Wyoming territory, holding that post until 1879, and was governor (1887-91) of Nebraska.

Thayer, Joseph Henry. b. at Boston, Nov. 7, 1828; d. Nov. 26, 1901. American Biblical scholar, professor at Andover Theological Seminary (1864-82) and at the Harvard Divinity School (1884-1901).

Thayer, Sylvanus. [Called "the Father of the Military Academy."] b. at Braintree, Mass., June 9, 1785; d. there, Sept. 7, 1872. American soldier and educator. He became a member of the corps of engineers, served in the War of 1812, and was superintendent (1817-33) of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where his introduction of high standards of instruction, discipline, administration, and efficiency, the groundwork of the present-day institution, earned for him his sobriquet. He served (1833-63) as engineer superintending the erection of fortifications and the improvement of harbors along the New England coast, and in 1867 founded and endowed the Thayer School of Engineering at Dartmouth College.

Thayer, Tiffany Ellsworth. b. at Freeport, Ill., March 1, 1902—?. American novelist and motion-picture scenarist. He began his career as an actor and was later engaged in advertising and publishing at New York. He wrote for motion-picture studios at Hollywood from 1932 to 1936, and after 1938 was a radio writer. Among his novels and collections of short stories are Thirteen Men (1930), Illustrious Corpse (1930), Call Her Savage (1931), The Greek (1931), Thirteen Women (1932), Doctor Arnold (1934), Kings and Numbers (1934), Cluck Abroad (1935), One-Man Show (1937), and Little Dog Lost (1938).

Thayer, Whitney Eugene. b. at Mendon, Mass., Dec. 11, 1838; d. at Burlington, Vt., June 27, 1889. American organist and composer. He served as organist at various Boston churches and at the New York Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church (1881-86), taught at Boston, and composed a cantata, a fugue, a mass, organ pieces, and a course of study for the organ.

Thayer, William Roscoe. b. at Boston, Jan. 16, 1859; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 7, 1923. American historian and biographer. He served (1888-89) as an instructor in English at Harvard, and was editor (1892-1915) of the Harvard Graduates' Magazine. His works on Italian history include The Dawn of Italian Independence (2 vols., 1893), A Short History of Venice (1905), and The Life and Times of Cavour (2 vols., 1911). He also wrote The Life and Letters of John Jay (2 vols., 1915), Theodore Roosevelt: an Intimate Biography (1919), and The Art of Biography (1920).

Thayer, William Sydney. b. at Milton, Mass., June 23, 1864; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 10, 1932. American physician and teacher; son of James Bradley Thayer. He served (1897-1921) as professor of clinical medicine and then as professor of medicine and physician in chief of the hospital at the Johns Hopkins Medical School. During World War I he was with the medical corps of the American Expeditionary Forces. Author of Lectures on the Malarial Fevers (1897) and Osler and Other Papers (1931).

Theaetetus (thē.ē.t'us). d. 369 B.C. Athenian mathematician, a disciple of Socrates. He is the principal character in one of the most famous of Plato's dialogues, named for him.

Theagenes (thē.aj'e.nēz). Tyrant of Megara, who ruled about the end of the 7th century B.C.

Theagenes and Chariclea (kar.i.klē'a). [Also, Aethiopica.] Ancient romance by Heliodorus, written in the 4th century. It recounts the loves and adventures of Theagenes, a Thessalian, and Chariclea, the daughter of Persina, queen of Ethiopia. It was rendered into English prose by Thomas Underdown, and into French by Jacques Amyot.

Theatins or Theatine (thē'a.tinz). Monastic order of regular clerks, founded (1524) at Rome, principally by the archbishop of Chieti, Italy, with the purpose of combating the Reformation. There were also Theatin nuns. The order flourished to some extent in Spain, Bavaria, and Poland, but its influence is now confined chiefly to Italy.

Théâtre, the. First London theater. It was a wooden building erected by James Burbage, the father of Richard Burbage, in 1576, on the site of the priory of Saint John the Baptist, Shoreditch, which had been destroyed during the Reformation. It was taken down in 1598, and the Globe, Bankside, was built from the materials.

Théâtre d'Art (tä.ätr dar). Experimental theater founded (1890) at Paris for the production of symbolism and poetic drama with simplified settings. It gained importance (1890-93) as the first theater to depart from naturalistic stagecraft with productions of Percy Bysshe Shelley's The Cenci, Christopher Marlowe's Dr. Faustus, Maurice Maeterlinck's L'Intruse and Pelléas et Mélisande, Oscar Wilde's Salomé (1896), and other poetic plays.

Théâtre de la Foire (de lä fwär). Theater set up by provincial comedians at the fairs of St.-Germain and St.-Laurent, outside of Paris. These theaters had no privileges, in the interests of commerce, which the regular theaters had not. The plays were originally given by marionettes, and their performance can be traced as far back as 1595. Le Sage, Fuselier, Dominique, Dorneval, Boissy, Sedaine, and others wrote for it. Le Sage alone writing more than 100 little pieces, with or without songs.

Théâtre de l'Œuvre (de l'vër). Experimental theater founded at Paris in 1893 to combat the influence of naturalism and introduce imaginative drama, known for its productions of Ibsen's Peer Gynt and Rosmersholm, Hauptmann's The Sunken Bell, Maeterlinck's Monna Vanna (1902), and Paul Claudel's L'Annonce faite à Marie (1912).

Théâtre de Monsieur (de mē.syè). See Monsieur, Théâtre de.

Théâtre du Vieux Colombier (dü vyè kolôn.byä). Leading French experimental theater, after the Théâtre Libre, founded in the spring of 1913 by Jacques Copeau. The acting company, headed by Louis Jouvet and Charles Dullin, worked together as a unit before the opening, thoroughly studying the texts of the plays scheduled and developing their techniques, believing that an effective actor must maintain a harmony between his mental and physical state. In the first season the group, opening with He w od's A Woman Killed with Kindness, gave 14 productions, including classics by Molière and Shakespeare as well as contemporary plays. World War I interrupted the company's activities, but the French government sent Copeau and his group to America. Here, subsidized by Otto Kahn, the company performed in French at the Garrick Theatre in New York City (1917-19). Returning to Paris (1920), it added plays by such moderns as Gide, Duhamel, and Vildrae to its repertoire and revived plays by Gogol, Me i n e, Goldoni, and Ostrovski. The group used a formal, permanent architectural stage suitable for all types of production. Financial difficulties forced the closing of the theater in 1924, but an acting school founded in 1921 by Copeau as an adjunct to the theater continued to flourish; and in April, 1931, a group of Copeau's students under the leadership of his nephew Michel St. Denis, known as the Company of Fifteen, reopened the theater with Obe y's Noah and Rape of Lucrece. On the eve of D-Day (1944), the theater performed Sartre's Huis-Clos.

Théâtre Français (frāñ.sā). See Comédie Française, La.

Theatre Guild. Society, formed at New York in 1919, for the presentation of distinguished plays; since 1927 it has also produced plays outside New York. Its first play was Jacinto Benavente's Bonds of Interest; with the presentation of John Ferguson, by St. John Ervine, the group scored its first big success. The world premiere of G. B. Shaw's Heartbreak House in 1920 established the Guild solidly, and in the years since then it has produced (since 1925 in its own theater, and in other playhouses) outstanding plays by authors both foreign and American, including Shaw, Eugene O'Neill, Sidney Howard, Maxwell Anderson, William Saroyan, and others.

Théâtre Italien (tä.ätr ä.tä.lyan). [Also, Les Italiens.] Name given to the old Italian opera house in the Rue Le Pele tier in Paris.

Théâtre Libre (lēbr). See under Antoine, André Léonard.

Theatre of the Revolution. Theater of the new Russian realism, founded by V. E. Meierhold in 1918 as an actor's laboratory. Here its founder worked out his principles of constructivism in production, notably in Toller's Masse-Mensch (Man and the Masses). Meierhold soon found that most of his actors, trained under Stanislavsky, were unable to follow completely his new antinaturalistic methods of staging; he withdrew as director in 1920, and set up his own theater bearing his name. A synthesis of Meierhold's and Stanislavsky's methods soon prevailed at the Theatre of the Revolution, and it became the chief exponent of the new Russian style of "Socialist Realism."

Théâtre Pigalle (tä.ätr pē.gäl). Theater at Paris, adjoining the Place Pigalle, built by Baron Henri de Rothschild in 1929. It was furnished with every modern mechanical device, and had four stages on two different levels. It usually produced intimate comedies and dramas, but also housed operettas. The theater opened with Sacha Guitry's Story of France in 50 scenes, and one of its most successful productions was Jules Romains's Donogoo (1934-35).

Theatre Royal. A name of the Drury Lane Theatre. It was the first London theater so named.

Theatre Unbound. Intellectual, political, satirical revue cabaret at Prague (1929-35), founded by the Czech comic team of Voskovec and Weirich. These two intellectual clowns wrote all their own material and also managed their cabaret theater, creating a new type of imaginative revue for intellectuals. Their farce pieces, which were topical, political, and satirical, held up a mirror to a generation. One of the farces, The Ass's Shadow, was so anti-Nazi that the German minister at Prague filed a protest with the Czech government.

Thebae (thē'bē). Latin form of Thebes.

Thebaid (thē'bā.id). In ancient geography, the domain of Thebes in Egypt, or Upper Egypt.

Thebaid, The. Epic poem (c80-692 A.D.) by Statius, relating to the expedition of the Seven against Thebes.

Thébaïde (tä.bā.éd). La. Play by Jean Baptiste Racine, produced June 20, 1664, by Molière's company.

Thebaïs (thē'bā.is). Greek epic poem of the Theban Cycle, of unknown authorship, relating to a legendary war between Argos and Thebes.

Theban Cycle (thē'ban). Group of legends or epics relating to the war between Argos and Thebes.

Theban Legion. In Christian legend, a legion (possibly from the Thebaid) in the army of Maximian which refused to obey the emperor's order to persecute the Christians, and was twice decimated and finally exterminated for its disobedience.

Thebaw (thē'bō). See Thibaw.

Thebes (thēbz). [Also: Diospolis Magna; Old Testament name, No; Latin, Thebae.] City of ancient Egypt, situated on both sides of the Nile, ab. 480 mi. S of the site of modern Cairo. Thebes proper was on the E bank, and the Libyan suburb (Pathyris or Memnonia) on the W bank. The village of Luxor now stands on the site. The remains of antiquity here are of great interest. The Colossi, or statues of Memnon as commonly called, are two huge seated figures, originally monolithic, of Amenhotep III (15th-14th century B.C.), standing, with others now ruined, before the ruined temple of that king. They are ab. 50 ft. high, and are raised on sandstone pedestals measuring ab. 10 ft. They are much weather-beaten and broken by earthquake shocks, but have suffered still more from vandalism. The northernmost figure is the famed vocal statue of Memnon, which is said to have emitted a sound when touched by the rays of the rising sun. The temple of Ramses I and Seti I, or of Amen-Ra, is entered by a dromos, or passage, of sphinxes between two pylons, the second of which is followed by a similar dromos before the fine prostyle colonnade, whose columns are of the early type resembling stalks bound together. The portal opens on a columned hall surrounded by chambers, beyond which lies a large hall with four columns, preceding the now ruined sanctuary. On both sides of the main temple there are other halls and rooms; those on the west may have formed part of the royal palace. The sculptures, which refer to Ramses I, Seti I, and Ramses II, are of high interest. The tomb of Seti I (d. 1292 B.C.), No. 17 of the Tombs of the Kings (commonly called Belzoni's tomb, from its discoverer), is, like its fellows, a rock-cut tomb. At its entrance, which is a mere shaft in the face of the cliff, a long, steep stair descends, followed by a narrow passage, another stair, and another passage, at the end of which there was a deep pit, the continuation of the passage beyond which was walled up, stuccoed, and painted over with scenes continuing those on the side walls. Beyond is a first hall with four pillars, elaborately sculptured and painted; then another hall, and a series of passages by which is reached the great hall, 27 ft. square, with six pillars. A vaulted chamber 19 by 30 ft. continues this hall, and contained the alabaster sarcophagus of the king. Other columned chambers flank this one, and still other passages and chambers extend on a lower level into the mountain, the total length open being 470 ft., and the depth below the entrance 180. The sculptures, historical, mythological, and ceremonial, with particular reference to the rites of royal burial, are exceedingly remarkable. With allowance for endless differences of detail, this may be taken as a type of the Tombs of the Kings. The Tombs of the Queens, Temple of Ramses III, Memnonium, Temple of Luxor, Temple of Karnak, obelisks, and sphinxes are also noteworthy. Thebes is first mentioned in the XIXth dynasty. It supplanted Memphis as the great Egyptian center, was at its peak in the XVIIIth, XIXth, and XXth dynasties (Thutmose III, Amenhotep III, Seti, Ramses II, Ramses III), was afterward supplanted by cities of the Delta, and declined under the Ptolemies.

Thebes. [Modern Greek, Thevai; Latin, Thebae.] In ancient geography, the chief city of Boeotia, in Greece. It is said to have been founded by Cadmus (hence Cadmea, the citadel), and is famous in connection with Amphiion, Sethus, Laius, and Oedipus, and the expeditions of the Seven against Thebes and of the Epigoni. It was early settled by the Boeotians from Thessaly, quarreled with Athens at the end of the 6th century B.C., was allied with the Persians in the Persian War, and was defeated by Athens at Oenophyta in 456. Thebes was the bitter enemy of Athens in the Peloponnesian War, had a severe struggle with Sparta in the battle of Coronea in 394, had to yield to Sparta, 382-379; defeated Sparta at Leuctra in 371, and at Mantinea in 362, and held the hegemony in Greece under the leadership of Epaminondas. The city took part in the Sacred War, was allied with Athens in the defeat at Chaeronea in 338, and was severely treated by Philip II of Macedonia; it rebelled in 335, but was retaken by Alexander and destroyed. It was rebuilt by Cassander, but lapsed into insignificance under the Roman Empire. In the Middle Ages it was again an important city, noted for its silk manufactures, and was plundered by the Normans of Sicily and others. It was the reputed birthplace of Tiresias, Amphiion, Hercules, and Bacchus.

Thebes. [Also: Thevai, Thivai.] Town in C Greece, in the nomos (department) of Boeotia, ab. 35 mi. NW of Athens on the railroad line to Salonika. It is on the site of the ancient city of the same name. 12,298 (1940).

Thecla (thek'la), Saint. fl. 1st century A.D. Saint of Iconium, in Asia Minor, said to have been a disciple of the apostle Paul. According to the apocryphal Acta Pauli et Theclae, she was accused of being a Christian, but the pyre on which she was to be burnt was extinguished by rain. Subsequently she lived through such ordeals as being cast into a pit of wild animals, and one of serpents, and being tied to wild bulls.

The Dalles (dalz). [Former names: Fort Dalles, Dalles City.] City in N Oregon, county seat of Wasco County, near the Dalles, a cataract of the Columbia River, ab. 72 mi. E of Portland, near Bonneville Dam; shipping point for grain, livestock; processing center for brined cherries and salmon. It occupies the former site of Fort Lee, and was platted in 1854. Pop. 7,676 (1951).

The Ford (förd). Former name of Charles City, Iowa.

The Hague (häg). See Hague, The.

The Helder (hel'dér). See Den Helder.

The Hill. A former name of Woodruff, S.C.

Theiler (thi'lér), Max. b. at Pretoria, South Africa, Jan. 30, 1899—. American physiologist. He served (1923 et seq.) as an assistant in the Harvard department of tropical medicine, and joined (1933) the Rockefeller Foundation. He developed a vaccine for use against yellow fever that was widely used during World War II and for this work was awarded the 1951 Nobel prize in physiology and medicine.

Theiner (ti'nér), Augustin. b. at Breslau, April 11 1804; d. Aug. 10, 1874. German Roman Catholic historian.

Their Wedding Journey. Novel by William Dean Howells, published in 1871.

Theiss (tis). German name of the Tisza.

The Lakes. [Also, Lakes.] Urban district in NW England, in Westmorland, ab. 12 mi. NW of Kendal. It has no direct rail connections, being reached by rail to Windermere, ab. 260 mi. NW of London. Wordsworth lived in the vicinity, and is buried at Grasmere in the urban district. 6,094 (1951).

Thélème (tä.lem'), Abbey of. In the Gargantua of François Rabelais, an imaginary abbey under the rule of free will, situated in Theléma by the Loire River. The customs in force there were to be in direct opposition to those of any convent in existence. The one rule of its order was "do what you wish."

The Matlocks (mat'locks). See Matlock.

Thembu (thäm'bō). [Also: Amatembu, Matembe, Tembu, Tembuki.] Bantu-speaking people of the southern Nguni group of S Africa, inhabiting E Cape of Good Hope province of the Union of South Africa, and resembling the Xhosa in culture.

The Meadows. Unincorporated community in N central Kentucky, in Fayette County, NE of Lexington; residential suburb. 3,742 (1950).

Themis (thē'mis). Ancient Greek goddess, originally a sort of earth goddess; daughter of Uranus and Gaea (sky and earth). She was the mother by Zeus of the Horae and the Fates and of Prometheus. Early mythology says that she received the oracle of Delphi from Gaea, and the prophetic gift remained one of her attributes, for she warned her son Prometheus of what was in store for him. Later she became a sort of abstract personification of law, custom, and justice.

Themis. Asteroid (No. 24) discovered by De Gasparis at Naples, April 5, 1853.

Themistocles (thē.mis'tō.klēz). b. in the latter part of the 6th century B.C.; d. c.460 (perhaps as late as 447). Athenian statesman and commander. He became a political leader in opposition to Aristides, who was ostracized in 483, and, recognizing the continued Persian threat, was instrumental in increasing the naval resources of Athens. He induced the Athenians to leave Athens, a militarily indefensible position, for Salamis and the fleet, and brought about the victory of Salamis in 480. He continued to urge the fortifications of Athens and of the Piraeus, and the development of the naval power of Athens, and was as a result ostracized c.471. He was charged with complicity in the treason of the Spartan Pausanias, who planned to rule Greece with Persian aid. He lived in exile in Argos, Coreyra, Epirus, and elsewhere, and went to Persia in 465, where he was well received by Artaxerxes, who pensioned him. He is said to have committed suicide.

Thénard (tē.nār), Louis Jacques, Baron. b. at Loupèrière, near Nogent-sur-Seine, France, May 4, 1777; d. at Paris, June 21, 1857. French chemist, professor (1804 et seq.) in the Collège de France. He discovered Thénard's blue, used in coloring porcelain, and is generally credited to have discovered (1818) hydrogen peroxide. He wrote Traité élémentaire de chimie (1813). He worked with J. L. Gay-Lussac.

The Neck. A former name of Tottenville.

Theobald (thē.ō.bōld, tib'ald). d. 1161. English prelate, archbishop of Canterbury (1139-61). In the struggle for the English throne he supported Stephen and obtained a reconciliation between Stephen and the future Henry II, but he opposed any encroachment by Stephen on the ecclesiastical prerogative. He forwarded his archdeacon Thomas à Becket, suggesting his appointment as chancellor to Henry, but Becket's policies were a disappointment to him.

Theobald, Lewis. b. at Sittingbourne, Kent, England, 1688; d. Sept. 13, 1774. English playwright, translator, Shakespearean commentator, and historical writer. He published Shakespeare Restored (1726), in which, with some justice, he attacked Alexander Pope for his edition (1725) of the plays; he edited Shakespeare (1733), his edition being one of the best early readings. He was the original chief subject of Pope's Dunciad, in revenge for Shakespeare Restored.

Theobald (thē.ō.bōld), Samuel. b. at Baltimore, Nov. 12, 1846; d. Dec. 20, 1930. American ophthalmologist and teacher. He began (1871) the practice of ophthalmology and otology at Baltimore, where he took part in founding (1874) the Baltimore Eye and Ear Dispensary and establishing (1882) the Baltimore Eye, Ear, and Throat Charity Hospital. He served (1880-1925) as ophthalmic surgeon to the Johns Hopkins Hospital, invented (c1877) lachrymal probes, and initiated the use of boric acid in the treatment of eye diseases. Author of Prevalent Diseases of the Eye (1906).

Theocritus (thē.ōk'ri.tus). b. at Syracuse; lived in the 3rd century B.C. Greek idyllic poet, credited with being the inventor of pastoral poetry. He lived in Syracuse, Cos, and Alexandria. His idyls represent the life of herdsmen, shepherds, and fishermen.

Theodelinde (thē.ō.dē.lin'd; German, t̥ä.ō.dē.lin'dē). fl. c.900. Bavarian princess and Lombard queen.

Theodonis Villa (thē.ō.dō'nis vil'g). Latin name of Thionville.

Theodora (thē.ō.dō'ra). b. at Constantinople, in Cyprus; d. 547 or 548. Actress and courtesan (according to the usual account) who married (c523) Justinian I and became on his accession (527) Byzantine empress. She took an important part in the administration of the affairs of the empire, and is usually credited with having preserved the throne for her husband by keeping him from leaving Constantinople at the time of the Nike riots (532).

Theodora. [Called Theodora the Elder.] fl. about the beginning of the 10th century. Roman noblewoman, influential in Italy and in papal affairs; mother of Marozia.

Theodora. [Called Theodora the Younger.] fl. in the 10th century. Roman noblewoman; daughter of Theodora the Elder. She was influential in Roman politics.

Theodore (thē.ō.dōr). fl. 7th century. Antipope in 687.

A Roman archpriest elected by a faction of the people on the death of Conon (687), he was set aside by the legitimate election of Sergius I.

Thēdōre (tā.ō.dōr). Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1645.

Theodore I (thē.ō.dōr). b. (of Greek parents) at Jerusalem; d. May 14, 649. Pope from 642 to 649, an opponent of the Monothelites.

Theodore II, b. at Rome. Pope in 897. He reigned for 20 days during the month of December.

Theodore I (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also: Theodore I Lascaris.] d. 1222. Byzantine emperor; son-in-law of Alexius III. He was raised to the throne at Nicaea (1206), after the storming of Constantinople (1204) by the Venetians and Crusaders. He was the first of the emperors reigning at Nicaea and defended the empire against the depredations of the Latin rulers, the Turks, and other attackers of his realm.

Theodore II (of the Byzantine Empire). [Also: Theodore II Lascaris.] d. 1258. Byzantine emperor; son of John III (d. 1254). Theodore II appears to have been a man of marked ability, but his health was infirm and his reign short. In two energetic campaigns he defeated the Bulgarians at Adrianople (1254) and in Macedonia (1256), recovering Thrace for the empire.

Theodore I (of Corsica). See Neuhof, Baron Theodor Stephen von.

Theodore II (of Ethiopia). [Original name, Kasa (or Kassa).] b. c1818; committed suicide at Magdala, Ethiopia, April 13, 1868. King of Ethiopia. He is said to have been educated for the priesthood, but became a partisan leader. Repeated successes resulted in the conquest of Tigre and the proclamation of Theodore as king in 1855. He also conquered Shoa and waged war with the Gallas. At first a reformer, he became at last a cruel despot. His imprisonment of the British consul C. D. Cameron and other Europeans brought about the intervention of the English. Ethiopia was invaded by British troops under R. C. Napier in 1868, and Magdala was stormed April 13, 1868, Theodore killing himself.

Theodore, Column of Saint. See Columns of Saint Mark and Saint Theodore.

Theodore, Edward Granville. b. at Port Adelaide, South Australia, Dec. 29, 1884; d. at Sydney, Feb. 9, 1950. Australian politician and mining executive. A member (1909-25) of the Queensland legislative assembly, and leader of the Labour Party and premier (1919-25) of Queensland, he entered (1927) the federal parliament, and served as treasurer (1929-30, 1931) of the Australian commonwealth.

Theodore of Mopsuestia (mop.sō.es'chi.a). b. at Antioch, in Asia Minor, c350; d. 428. One of the three "Greek Doctors" of the Nestorian Church. He was ordained priest by Diodorus of Tarsus in 382, defended the heretical ideas of Diodorus, and served as bishop of Mopsuestia from 392 to 428. An exegetical writer and the teacher of Nestorius, he was subsequently condemned for his Pelagianism and Nestorianism.

Theodore of Tarsus (tār.sus). d. 690 A.D. English prelate, of Greek origin. As archbishop of Canterbury (668-690), he established the Roman diocesan system in England.

Theodoret (thē.ō.dōr.ēt). [Latinized, Theodoretus (thē.ō.dōr.ētus).] b. at Antioch, in Asia Minor, c393; d. c457. Greek theologian, church historian, and exegete, a member of the school of Antioch. He became bishop of Cyrrhus (near the Euphrates) c423, was deposed c448, and was restored by the Council of Chalcedon in 451. He wrote commentaries, controversial works, a continuation of the history of Eusebius, lives of ascetics, letters, and other works.

Thēodoric (thē.ō.dōr.ik; French, tā.ō.dōr.ēk). See Thierry.

Theodoric (thē.ō.dōr.ik) or Theoderic (thē.ō.dōr.ik). [Called Theodoric the Great; known in legend as Diehtich von Bern.] b. in Pannonia, c454; d. Aug. 30, 526. King of the East Goths; son of the Amaling prince Theodemer. He passed his boyhood as a hostage at Constantinople, with his father invaded Moesia in 473, and succeeded his father (c474). He started on the invasion of Italy late in 488, repeatedly defeated the Gepidae, and defeated Odoacer at the Isonzo (Aug. 28, 489), at Verona (September 30), and on the Adda (Aug. 11, 490). On Feb. 27, 493, a peace was concluded according to which the two kings were to live together in Italy, Odoacer as the military subordinate of Theodoric. But in March Odoacer was slain by Theodoric at a banquet, and the latter became the sole ruler in Italy and the founder of the East-Gothic power there with its capital at Ravenna. He introduced many reforms. He put to death Boethius and Symmachus. In medieval German romance, in which he figured as a legendary hero, he is celebrated as Dietrich von Bern.

Theodoric. fl. 12th century. Antipope in 1100 in opposition to Paschal II. He was put forward by the imperial faction favoring Henry IV on the death of the antipope Guibert (Clement III), who died shortly after the accession of Paschal.

Theodorus Studita (thē.ō.dōr.us stū.dī'ta). Saint. [English, Theodore the Studite, Theodore Studita.] b. 759; d. 826. Monk and scholar of the Eastern Church. He was at one time abbot of the monastery of the Studium, at Constantinople. He resisted the Iconoclast emperors, and was four times banished. He died in exile.

Theodosia (thē.ō.dō'sha). Ancient name of Feodosiya.

Theodosian Code (thē.ō.dō'shan). Collection of Roman laws from the time of Constantine to that of Theodosius II, comprised in 16 books, first published 435 A.D. It was an attempt to systematize the laws and was later used in the writing of the Justinian Code (Corpus Juris Civilis).

Theodosiopolis (thē.ō.dō.shi.op'ō.lis). Ancient name of Erzurum, city.

Theodosius (thē.ō.dō'shus). Executed at Carthage, 376 A.D. Roman general, distinguished for his services in Britain, on the Danube, and in Africa; father of Theodosius I.

Theodosius I. [Full name, Flavius Theodosius; called "Theodosius the Great."] b. at Cauca, in northern Spain, c346; d. at Milan, Jan. 17, 395. Roman emperor; son of Flavius Theodosius, a general (chiefly noted for his campaigns in Britain) of Valentinian I. He commanded in Moesia in 374, was made joint emperor by Gratian and ruler over the East in 379, defeated the Goths and other invaders, and after 382 enrolled the Goths in the empire. After the death of Gratian in 383, he had as colleagues Maximus (383-388), Valentinian II (388-392), and Eugenius (392-394). He defeated Arbogast and Eugenius at the Frigidus near Aquileia in 394, and became sole emperor. He established his sons Arcadius and Honorius as his coregents in the East and West. In ecclesiastical history he is noted for his submission (390) to Ambrose, and for his campaign against Arianism.

Theodosius II. [Called The Calligrapher.] b. 401 A.D.; d. 450. Emperor of the East (408-450 A.D.); son of Arcadius whom he succeeded. A man interested principally in scholarly pursuits, he was controlled largely by his sister Pulcheria and his wife Eudocia. He carried on war with Persia. During his reign the empire was invaded by the Huns under Attila. The Theodosian Code (438) was formed by his order.

Theodosius III. d. after 717. Byzantine emperor (716-717). A tax collector who was placed on the throne by the navy, he was deposed by Leo III.

Théodé Pass (thē.ō.dūl). See Matterjoch.

Theodulf (thē.dūlf). b. in Spain, c760; d. at Angers, France, Dec. 18, 821. Ecclesiastic and writer. A Goth by descent, he was a member of Charlemagne's court, where he was regarded as second only to Alcuin for learning. He received (798) from Charlemagne the bishopric of Orléans and several abbeys. He wrote on the Mass, and on baptism, and engaged in theological controversy over the Filioque, writing De Spiritu Sancto. He composed various poems and hymns, including that for Palm Sunday, Gloria, laus, et honor.

Theognis (thē.og'nis). b. in Megara; fl. in the middle or last part of the 6th century B.C. Greek elegiac poet. Less than 1,400 lines of his work are extant.

Theogony (thē.og'ō.ni). The. Ancient Greek poem of 1,022 lines, attributed to Hesiod, treating of the origin of the order of nature from chaos and the origin of the gods.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; τη, then; ð, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Theologus (thē.ō'g.us), Gregory. See Saint Gregory of Nazianzus.

Theon (thē'on). fl. in the latter half of the 4th century A.D. Alexandrian mathematician and astronomer; father of Hypatia. He wrote a commentary on the Almagest.

Theophanes (thē.ō'f.a.nēz), Saint. [Surname "the Confessor."] b. at Constantinople, c.758; d. 818. Monk and scholar of the Eastern Church, educated by the emperor Constantine V (Constantine Copronymus). He became (780) a monk, his wife becoming a nun. He founded a monastery on the island of Kalymnos and another at Cyzicus, of which latter he was elected abbot. Banished to Samothrace by the Iconoclast Emperor Leo V (Leo the Armenian), he died in exile. His feast is kept on March 12 in the Greek Church.

Theophano (thē.ō'f.a.nō), Saint. b. 866; d. 893. Religious figure of the Eastern Church; first wife (880 et seq.) of the Byzantine emperor Leo VI. Her relics are in the patriarchal church of Constantinople, where her feast is celebrated.

Theophilus (thē.ō'f.i.lus). d. c.195 A.D. Bishop of Caesarea in Palestine. With Narcissus of Jerusalem he presided at the synod of Caesarea to settle the controversy over the dates of Easter. He opposed the Quartodecimans, who favored observance of the Passover date whether or not it fell on Sunday, and upheld the Roman custom.

Theophilus. [French, Théophile; Italian and Spanish, Teófilo; Portuguese, Teófilo; German, Theophilus, Gottlieb.] In Christian legend, the administrator of a bishopric at Adana, Asia Minor, said to have made a contract with the devil, and to have traveled to hell to get the contract back.

Theophilus Bird (bērd). See Bird, Theophilus.

Theophorus (thē.ō'f.g.us), Ignatius. See Saint Ignatius.

Theophrastus (thē.ō'f.ras'tus). b. at Eresus, Lesbos, c.372 B.C.; d. c.287 B.C. Greek philosopher, a disciple of Aristotle whom he succeeded as head of the Peripatetic school. He wrote on the History of Plants, and other botanical works, but is best remembered for his 30 short Characters, vivid vignettes of such types as The Flatterer, The Grumbler, and The Boastful Man. His scientific-philosophical work is, however, important in the development of scientific thought.

Theophrastus. Pseudonym of Creech, William.

Theophrastus Such (such), The Impressions of. Series of essays by George Eliot, published in 1879.

Theopompus (thē.ō'p.om'pus). b. in Chios, c.378 B.C.; d. about the end of the 4th century B.C. Greek historian and rhetorician, the aristocratic and pro-Macedonian leader in Chios. His chief works are Hellenics and Philippics, historical works extant only in fragments.

Theory of the Leisure Class, The. Economic treatise by Thorstein Veblen, published in 1899. It is an institutional analysis of the leisure class, tracing it from its inception in a barbaric era through its development in the modern period of conspicuous and wasteful consumption as a badge of status.

Theotocopuli (tā'ō'tō.kō'pō.le), Domingo. See Greco, El.

Theotocos (thē.ō'ō.kos). [Also, Theotokos.] The mother of God: a title of the Virgin Mary, used at the Council of Ephesus (431).

The Pas (pāz, pā). Town in W central Manitoba, Canada, situated on the Saskatchewan River. The town is on the railroad line running N to Churchill on Hudson Bay, and is a trading center for the trappers of the surrounding area. 3,376 (1951).

The Point. Former name of Keokuk.

Thera (thēr'a, thēr'a). [Also: Thira, Santorin.] Island in the S part of the Cyclades, belonging to Greece, in the nomos (department) of Cyclades. It rises steeply from the sea, and has long been celebrated for volcanic activity. Eruptions caused the appearance of the islets Palaea Kaumene in 199 or 196 B.C., Mikra Kaumene in 1573, and Nea Kaumene in 1707. Thera sent forth the colony of Cyrene in 631 B.C. It produces wine and pozzuolana, a volcanic rock used in cement manufacture. Area, 30 sq. mi.; length, 10 mi.; pop. 17,257 (1940).

Theramen (thē.ām'e.nēz). Executed 404 B.C. Athenian politician and military commander. He was one of the leaders in the establishment (411 B.C.) of the oligarchic rule of the 400, which he later opposed, served at Cyzicus, Arginusae, and elsewhere, and was instrumental in procuring the condemnation of the Athenian generals after Arginusae. He was one of the negotiators (405-404 B.C.) for peace with Sparta, became one of the 30 tyrants, and was forced to drink poison through the influence of Critias.

Theremin (thēr'e.min), Léon. b. 1896—. Russian inventor. The Theremin, an electronic instrument invented by him, produces musical notes of varied pitch and tone-color and has often been demonstrated in concerts and recitals. It is not touched by the player, who controls the sound by motions of his hands near the instrument.

Theresa or Teresa (tē.rē'sa, -za; Spanish, tã.rã'sã), Saint. [Spanish, Teresa de Ávila.] b. at Ávila, Spain, March 28, 1515; d. at Alba de Tormes, Spain, 1582. Spanish saint and author. She entered the Carmelite order in 1534, began the Carmelite reform (Discaled Carmelites) in 1562, and became famous for her mystical experiences. Her works, including El Camino de la perfección (Way of Perfection) and El Castillo interior (Castle of the Soul), were published in 1587.

Theresa Christina Maria (tē.rã'zã krēs.tē'nã mã.rē'ã). b. at Naples, Italy, March 14, 1822; d. at Oporto, Portugal, Dec. 28, 1889. Empress of Brazil; wife (1843-89) of Pedro II.

Thérèse Defarge (tã.rez de.fãrzh). See Defarge, Thérèse.

Thérèse de Lisieux (dē.lē.zyē), Saint. [Called "The Little Flower"; original name, Marie Françoise Thérèse Martin.] b. at Alençon, France, Jan. 2, 1873; d. at Lisieux, France, Sept. 30, 1897. French nun. She was educated at Lisieux with her sisters (three of whom became nuns), and entered the Carmelite convent at Lisieux in 1888, where she died at the age of 24, known for her simplicity of soul and love of God. She was mistress of novices for two years before her death. She was canonized in 1925; her feast is observed on October 3.

Thérèse Desqueyroux (dã.kã.rō). Novel (1927; English trans., Therese, 1928) by François Mauriac.

Theresienstadt (tã.rã'zyen.shät). German name of Subotica, Yugoslavia; also of Terezín, Czechoslovakia.

There Was a Child Went Forth. Poem by Walt Whitman, untitled in the 1855 edition of Leaves of Grass, included in a subsequent edition as Poem of the Child That Went Forth, and Always Goes Forth, Forever and Forever, and given its present title in 1871.

Therézina (tã.rē.zē'nã). See Teresina.

Therma (thēr'mã). An ancient name of Salonika.

Thermae Himeræae (thēr'mē him.ēr.ē'e) or Himerenses (him.ēr.eu'sēz). Ancient name of Termini Imerese.

Thermaic Gulf (thēr.mã'ik) or Thermaicus Sinus (thēr.mã'i.kus s'i.nus). See Salonika, Gulf of.

Thermidor (thēr'mi.dōr; French, ter.mē.dōr). Name adopted in 1793 by the National Convention of the first French republic for the 11th month of the year. It consisted of 30 days, beginning in the years 1 to 7 on July 19, and in 8 to 13 on July 20.

Thermidorian (thēr.mi.dō'ri.ãnz). More moderate radical party in the French Revolution, who took part in or sympathized with the overthrow of Robespierre and his adherents on the 9th Thermidor, year 2 (July 27, 1794), and who supported the subsequent reaction to the Terror.

Thermopolis (thēr.mop'ō.lis). Town in NW Wyoming, on the Big Horn River, county seat of Hot Springs County; health resort. It is a trading and shipping center for livestock. 2,870 (1950).

Thermopylae (thēr.mop'i.lē). In ancient geography, a narrow pass from Thessaly to Locris, between Mount Oeta and a marsh bordering the Maliaicus Sinus (Gulf of Laia). The configuration of the land has been somewhat changed in modern times. Through it passed the only road from N to S Greece. Here occurred (480 B.C.) one of the most famous conflicts of the Persian Wars. A small army of Greeks under the Spartan Leonidas defended the pass against a vast army under Xerxes. Their position was betrayed, and Leonidas sent away his troops, except for 300 Spartans and 700 Thespians, who remained and were slain. Here, too, in 279 or 278 B.C., the allied Greeks attempted unsuccessfully to prevent the passage of the Gauls under Brennus; and here, in 191 B.C., the Romans under Glabrio defeated Antiochus III of Syria. The place was also noted for its hot salt springs.

Théroigne de Méricourt (tã.rwãny' d. mã.rë.kör). [Also: de Marcourt; pseudonym of Anne Joseph Tervagne; called the "Amazon of Liberty," the "Belle Liégeoise," and the "Pury of the Gironde."] b. at Marcourt, Luxembourg, Aug. 13, 1762; d. at Paris, June 9, 1817. Heroine of the French Revolution, an adherent of the Girondist party. She played a prominent part in the taking of the Bastille, the expedition of the women to Versailles in October, 1789, the storming of the Tuilleries on Aug. 10, 1792, and other demonstrations. She became insane in her later years, following a public whipping (1793) inflicted on her by the women of the Jacobin party.

Theron (thër'ôn). Tyrant of Agrigentum in Sicily (488-472 B.C.). He ruled also over Himera.

Theron Ware (wâr). See Damnation of Theron Ware, The.

Thersites (thër.s'itëz). In Greek legend, the most impudent of the Greeks assembled before Troy. He assailed the name of Agamemnon and was beaten by Odysseus. When he taunted Achilles, Achilles killed him. Shakespeare introduces him in Troilus and Cressida.

Thervings (thër'vingz). About the year 230, when they were living on the north shore of the Black Sea, the Goths divided themselves into two great branches, the Thervings and the Greutungs. These two peoples also had other names which are much better known in history. The Thervings were called Visigoths (i.e., West Goths), and the Greutungs Ostrogoths (East Goths).

These Twain. Novel by Arnold Bennett, published in 1916, the final volume in the second "Five Towns" trilogy (also known as the "Clayhanger" series).

Theseum (thë.së'um). Temple at Athens, probably a temple of Hephaestus (Vulcan). It is one of the three most perfect surviving Greek temples. It is a Doric peripteros of Pentelic marble, of six by 13 columns, on a stylobate of three steps, measuring 45½ by 134 ft. The columns are 19 ft. high and 3 ft. 5 inches in base diameter.

Theseus (thë.sëz, thë.së.us). In Greek legend, the chief hero of Attica; son of Aegeus, king of Athens. While Theseus was still an infant, Aegeus hid his sandals at sword under a rock and told the mother that when the boy was strong enough to lift the rock, to send him to him at Athens. When he reached the age of 16, Theseus lifted the rock, and then set out for Athens, where he was recognized and acknowledged by Aegeus. He captured the Marathonian bull, and when the Athenians sent their tribute of youths and maidens to Minos, he went with them and slew the Minotaur with the help of Ariadne, daughter of Minos, who fell in love with him. She gave him a sword, and a clew of thread with which he found his way through the Labyrinth. He sailed away with Ariadne, but abandoned her on the island of Naxos. After this came the incident of the black and white sails, when Theseus forgot to hoist the white sails on the journey home as a sign to his father that he still lived, and Aegeus drowned himself. Theseus thereupon became king of Athens in his father's place. He accompanied Hercules to fight against the Amazons. He was one of the Argonauts, took part in the Calydonian boar hunt, and performed other marvelous exploits. He was slain by Lycomedes, king of Skyros.

Theseus. Duke of Athens, a character in Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Thesiger (thës'i.jër), Frederic Augustus. See Chelmsford, 2nd Baron.

Thesiger, Frederick John Napier. See Chelmsford, 1st Viscount.

Thesmophoria (thes.mô.fô'ri.ä). Ancient Greek festival in honor of Demeter, celebrated by women (perhaps only women) October 24-26. The ritual drama of the abduction and recovery of Persephone was enacted. Pigs and cakes were cast into pits and allowed to rot; at sowing time they were taken up and mixed with seed for fertilizer. Women refrained from intercourse preceding the festival, ate no pomegranate seeds during it, and wore no ornamentation. Phallic cakes, sold in the markets during the celebration, bore testimony to its fertility significance.

Thesmothoros (thes.môf'ô.ros). Epithet of the Greek goddess Demeter as law-giver, or as the giver of riches, i.e., as the giver of crops and the riches accruing therefrom.

Thespieae (thes'pi.ë). In ancient geography, a city in Bocotia, Greece, ab. 8 mi. SW of Thebes. With Plataea it refused to give earth and water to the heralds of Xerxes, and it sent to Thermopylae 700 men who remained and perished with the Spartans. The Thespians fought again against the Persians at Plataea in 479, and against Athens at Delium in 424. The walls of the city were later destroyed by Thebes. Thespieae was noted for the worship of Eros and the Muses.

Thespian Maids (thes'pi.än). The Greek Muses. They were so called because their games were performed at Thespieae, at the foot of Mount Helicon.

Thespis (thes'pis). fl. in the middle of the 6th century B.C. Attic poet, the reputed founder of tragic drama. He is said to have introduced monologues and perhaps dialogues into the dithyrambic choruses, which until then had responded as a unit to the leader.

Thesprotia (thes.prô'shâ). [Also, Thesprotis (thes.prô'tis).] In ancient geography, a region in SW Epirus, Greece, lying near the sea.

Thesprotia. Nomos (department) in NW Greece, in Epirus. Capital, Hegoumenitsa; area, ab. 615 sq. mi.; pop. 47,565 (1951).

Thessalonians (thes.ä.lô'n.i.änz), Epistle to the. Title of two of the Pauline epistles in the New Testament. The main theme of both epistles is the second coming of Christ.

Thessalonica (thes'ä.lô.ni'kä, -lon'i.kä). Ancient name of Salonika.

Thessaloniki (thes'ä.lô.në'kë). [Also: Salonika, Saloniki, Thessalonike.] Nomos (department) in N Greece, in Macedonia. Capital, Salonika; area, ab. 2,435 sq. mi.; pop. 458,271 (1951).

Thessaly (thes'ä.li). [Also, Thessalia (thes.ä'li.ä).] District which in ancient times formed the NE division of Greece. It was bounded by Macedonia on the N (separated by a range of mountains including Mount Olympus), the Thracian Sea and Magnesia (or including Magnesia) on the E, Doris and Aetolia on the S, and Epirus on the W (separated by Mount Pinus). Thessaly contained the mountains Ossa, Pelion, and Othrys, and was traversed by the Peneus River. Many of its cities, mountains, and valleys were celebrated in Greek legend. It was aristocratic and pro-Persian in its tendencies.

Thessaly. [Also, Thessalia.] Dhiamerismon (district) in NE Greece; it includes the nomoi (departments) of Larissa and Trikkala. Area, ab. 5,207 sq. mi.; pop. 577,247 (1940).

Thetford (thet'ford). Municipal borough and market town in E England, in Norfolk, situated on the Little Ouse River, ab. 31 mi. NE of Cambridge and ab. 94 mi. NE of London by rail. It produces farm machinery, and was formerly engaged in the woolen-textile industry. Thetford was the capital of East Angia, 4,445 (1951).

Thetford Mines. Mining center in Quebec, Canada, in Megantic County, ab. 68 mi. S of the city of Quebec. It is the most important city in the Canadian asbestos-mining region, which supplies ab. 65 percent of the world's asbestos. 15,935 (1951).

Thetis (thët'is). In Greek mythology, the chief of the Nereids, and mother by Peleus of Achilles. She was beloved of the gods but given to Peleus, a mortal, because of the prophecy that her son would outshine his father. It was to the wedding of Thetis and Peleus that Eris sent the apple of discord.

Thetis. Asteroid (No. 17) discovered by K. T. R. Luther at Düsseldorf, April 17, 1850.

Theunis (té.nëz), Georges. b. 1873—. Belgian statesman. He served as an artillery officer in World War I, and had charge at Paris and London of liaison with the French and British in the matter of the supply of ammunition for the Belgian army. Attached as an expert to the Belgian delegation at the Versailles peace conference, he served as chief Belgian delegate on the reparations commission, and was minister of finance (1920), and minister of finance and prime minister (1921-25). He was president of the international economic conference at Geneva in 1927. He served as minister of national defense (1932), prime minister (1934–35), and governor (1942–44) of the National Bank of Belgium.

Theuriet (tê.rye), André. b. at Marly-le-Roi, France, Oct. 8, 1833; d. at Bourg-la-Reine, France, April 23, 1907. French novelist and poet. Among his works of poetry are Chemin des bois (1867) and Nos oiseaux (1886). His novels include Mademoiselle Guignon (1874), Une Ondine (1875), La Fortune d'Angèle (1876), Raymonde (1877), Le Filicel d'un marquis (1878), Le Fils Maugars (1879), La Maison des deux Barbeaux (1879), Sauvageonne (1880), Mariage de Gérard (1884), Bigarreau (1886), Deux sœurs (1889), Reine des bois (1890), Jeunes et vieilles barbes (1892), La Chanoinesse (1893), Flavie (1895), Dans les roses (1899), and Mon oncle Flo (1906).

Thévali (thê've). See Thebes, Greece.

Thévenot (tê.v.nô), Jean de. b. at Paris, June 16, 1633; d. in Persia, Nov. 28, 1667. French traveler; nephew of Melchisédech Thévenot. He made journeys in the East (1655–59), and traveled again in the East, particularly in Persia and India (1664–67).

Thévenot, Melchisédech. b. c.1620; d. 1692. French scholar. Author of Relations de divers voyages (1663–72).

Theveste (thê.vês'tê). Ancient name of Tebessa.

They Knew What They Wanted. Play by Sidney Howard, produced in 1924 and published in 1925. It was awarded the 1925 Pulitzer prize in drama.

They Never Come Back. American title of Sado.

They Shall Not Die. Play by John Wexley, produced in 1934. It was based on the Scottsboro trials.

Thiakhi (thy'â'kê). See Ithaca, Greece.

Thibaud (tê.bô), Jacques. b. at Bordeaux, France, Sept. 27, 1880; killed in a plane crash at Barcelonnette, France, Sept. 1, 1953. French violinist.

ThibaudEAU (tê.bô.dô), Antoine Claire, Comte de. b. at Poitiers, France, March 23, 1765; d. at Paris, March 1, 1854. French politician and historian. He was a deputy to the Convention in 1792 and a member of the Mountain, became president of the Council of Five Hundred in February, 1796, and was ennobled by Napoleon I. He lived in exile (1815–30) under the Bourbons, and was made a senator by Napoleon III. Among his works are Mémoires sur la Convention et le Directoire (1824), Mémoires sur le Consulat (1826), and Histoire générale de Napoléon Bonaparte (1827–28).

Thibaudet (tê.bô.dê), Albert. b. at Tournay, in Burgundy, France, April 1, 1874; d. at Geneva, Switzerland, April 16, 1936. French literary critic. Author of important critical studies on Mallarmé (1912), Flaubert (1922), Mistral (1930), Stendhal (1937), and others, and for years conductor of the department "Réflexions" in the Nouvelle Revue Française. A trained geographer and historian, he began writing as a supporter of the symbolists, broadened his interests under the influence of the philosopher Henri Bergson, and became, by general agreement, one of the most influential critics of postwar Europe. Five volumes of the Réflexions and Histoire de la littérature française de 1789 à nos jours have been published since his death.

Thibault (tê.bô), Antoine. Character in the cyclical novel Les Thibault (10 vols., 1922–40; Eng. trans., The World of the Thibaults, 1939–41) by Roger Martin du Gard. Elder son of Oscar, Antoine stands as intermediary between his old-fashioned father and Jacques, his disoriented younger brother. He is a physician by profession.

Thibault, Jacques. Character in the cyclical novel Les Thibault (10 vols., 1922–40; Eng. trans., The World of the Thibaults, 1939–41) by Roger Martin du Gard. Younger son of Oscar, and brother of Antoine, he is unable to adjust to the world of 1900–14. He becomes a revolutionary and dies in World War I.

Thibault, Jacques Anatole. See France, Anatole.

Thibault, Les. Cyclical novel (1922–40; Eng. trans., The World of the Thibaults, 1939–41) by Roger Martin du Gard. It is the story of the fortunes of a family of Parisian bourgeois. The individual volumes are Le Cahier gris (1922), Le Pénitencier (1922), La Belle Saison (1923), La Consultation (1928), La Sorellina (1928), La Mort du père (1929), Été 1914 (1936), and Epilogue (1940).

Thibault, Oscar. Character in the cyclical novel Les Thibault (10 vols., 1922–40; Eng. trans., The World of the Thibaults, 1939–41) by Roger Martin du Gard. He is a conservative, active in various charitable and "uplift" organizations, whose inability to comprehend the changes taking place in the world around him contributes to the discomfort and bewilderment of his sons, Antoine and Jacques.

Thibaut IV (tê.bô). b. at Troyes, France, 1201; d. at Pampeluna (now Pamplona), Spain, 1253. Count of Champagne (1201–53) and king of Navarre (1234–53), noted as a poet.

Thibaw (thî.bô'). [Also, Thebaw.] b. 1858; d. in India, 1916. Last king (1878–85) of Burma. He ascended the throne as a result of a palace revolt during which some 70 or 80 princes, princesses, and high officials were murdered. His reign was marked by resistance to British commercial infiltration and to demands made by the British Indian government on behalf of British companies. His protection of anti-British refugees from India and other evidences of hostility led to the third Burmese War (1885–86), occupation of Mandalay, the capital, and the king's dethronement and deportation to India, where he died.

Thibet (tî.bet'). See Tibet.

Thibodaux (tib.ô.dô'). Town in SE Louisiana, parish seat of Lafourche Parish; marketing center of a farming district. 7,730 (1950).

Thief River Falls (thêf riv'êr fôlz). City in NW Minnesota, county seat of Pennington County, at the confluence of the Red Lake and Thief rivers; shipping point for dairy products, livestock, and hay. 6,926 (1950).

Thiele (tê'le), Friedrich Karl Johannes. b. at Ratibor, Germany, 1865; d. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, 1918. German organic chemist. His partial valency theory (of unsaturated compounds) is of historical importance, though it has been superseded by electronic views. His experimental work includes the discovery of semicarbazide and of fulvene derivatives.

Thielen (thê'len), Benedict. b. at Newark, N.J., April 29, 1902—. American novelist and short-story writer. His novels and collections of short stories include Deep Streets (1932), Women in the Sun (1933), Stevie (1941), The Lost Men (1946), and Friday at Noon (1947).

Thielt (têlt). See Tielt.

Thiene (tye'nâ). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Vicenza, ab. 12 mi. NE of Vicenza, at the foot of the Alps; silk and woolen industries (the latter dates from the period of Venetian rule in the 17th century). The castle, in Venetian Gothic style, dates from the 14th century. Pop. of commune, 10,954 (1936); of town, 8,840 (1936).

Thienen (tê'nên). Flemish name of Tirlémont.

Thierry I (ti.êr; French, ty.e.rê). [Also: Théodoric, Thierry.] d. 534. King of Austrasia; son of Clovis I, and one of his successors in 511.

Thierry II. [Also: Théodoric, Thierry.] d. 613. King of Burgundy and later of Austrasia (612–613); second son of Childobert II.

Thierry III. [Also: Théodoric, Thierry.] d. c.691. King of the Franks; a younger son of Clovis II.

Thierry IV. [Also: Théodoric, Thierry.] d. 737. King of the Franks (720–737), one of the "Rois Fainéants." The government was administered by Charles Martel.

Thierry, Amélie. [Full name, Amédée Simon Dominique Thierry.] b. at Blois, France, Aug. 2, 1797; d. at Paris, March 26, 1873. French historian and politician; brother of Augustin Thierry. He was for a time professor at Besançon, after the revolution of 1830 was prefect of Haute-Saône, and later held other political offices. He wrote Histoire des Gaulois (1828), Histoire de la Gaule sous l'administration romaine (1840–47), Histoire d'Attila (1856), Récits de l'histoire romaine (1860, 1864), Tableau de l'empire romain (1862), and Saint-Jérôme (1867).

Thierry, Augustin. [Full name, Jacques Nicolas Augustin Thierry.] b. at Blois, France, May 10, 1795; d. at Paris, May 22, 1856. French historian; brother of Amédée Thierry. After a brief stay in a provincial college, he returned to Paris and for a while worked in collaboration with the philosopher Saint-Simon. Then he contributed several original papers to various periodical publications. These papers he subsequently combined, and composed in this way his Histoire de la conquête de l'Angleterre par les Normands (1825) and his Lettres sur l'histoire de France (1827). In 1826 he became completely broken down in health, and was left blind and paralyzed. The remainder of his literary work was done with the aid of secretaries. Other works by him include Dix ans d'études historiques (1834), Récits des temps mérovingiens (1840), and Essai sur l'histoire de la formation et des progrès du tiers-état (1853).

Thierry and Theodoret (ti.e'ri; thē.ō'dō.ret). Play by John Fletcher and Philip Massinger, published in 1621, but written a few years earlier.

Thierry d'Argenlieu (tye.rē dār.zhā.llyē), Georges. See Argenlieu, Georges Thierry d'.

Thiers (tver). Town in C France, in the department of Puy-de-Dôme, situated in mountainous surroundings ab. 24 mi. E of Clermont-Ferrand. It is a center of the cutlery industry, and known also for the manufacture of paper and toys. The Museum Fontenille-Mondière is mainly devoted to cutlery. The Church of Saint Genès dates from the 12th century. 15,409 (1946).

Thiers, Louis Adolphe. b. at Marseilles, France, April 15, 1797; d. at St.-Germain-en-Laye, near Paris, Sept. 3, 1877. French statesman and historian. He studied law at Aix, and in 1821 went to Paris, where he became a journalist. In 1830 he established with François Auguste Marie Mignet and Armand Carrel the National, a journal which contributed greatly to the downfall of the Bourbons. He was a prominent supporter of Louis Philippe, and held various cabinet positions from 1832 to 1836 (premier, February–August, 1836). In March, 1840, he again became premier, and resigned in October. He was a conspicuous member (1848–51) of the Constituent and Legislative assemblies, and was arrested by Napoleon III at the time of the coup d'état in 1851. In 1853 he was elected to the Corps Législatif, where he led the opposition to the imperial régime. He protested against the declaration of war in 1870, on the ground that France was not ready. He conducted the negotiations for an armistice with Germany, was elected to the National Assembly, and was chosen chief of the executive power on Feb. 17, 1871. He negotiated the peace with Germany, suppressed the insurrection of the Commune, and by his extraordinary energy and financial management, freed his country of foreign occupation before the stipulated time. On Aug. 31, 1871, he was declared by the Assembly the first president of the Third Republic for a term of three years, and resigned on May 24, 1873. Author of Histoire de la révolution française (1823–27) and Histoire du consulat et de l'empire (1845–62).

Thiès (ties). Town in Senegal, French West Africa, on the railroad ab. 165 mi. E of Dakar. It is an important rail junction, where the lines from St.-Louis and from Bamako and Kayes meet on the way to Dakar. 24,000 (1945).

Thiess (tēs), Frank. b. at Eluisenstein, in Livonia, March 14, 1890—. German writer. His work is marked by stress on robust activity, particularly boxing, on the one hand, and psychological and erotic problems on the other. Das Tor zur Welt (1926) and Abschied vom Paradies (1927) are teen-age stories. His other works include Die Verdammten (1922), Angelika ten Swaart (1923), Das Gesicht des Jahrhunderts (1923), Der Leibhaftige (1924), Erziehung zur Freiheit (1929), and Tsushima, Roman eines Seekrieges (1936).

Thietmar von Aist (tēt'mār fon ist). See Dietmar von Aist.

Thieving Magpie, The. English title of Gazza Ladra, La.

Thijm (tīm), Karel J. L. Alberdingk. See Deysse, Lodewijk van.

Things We Are, The. Novel by John Middleton Murry, published in 1922.

Thingvellir (thēng'vett'li'r). Locality in SW Iceland, ab. 25 mi. NE of Reykjavik. It is noted as the site of the assembly of the first Icelandic Althing (parliament) in 930 A.D.; subsequent parliaments met here until the 18th century.

Thobraid Arann (tē'bri ar'ān). Irish name of Tipperary.

Thionville (ti.ōn.vēl). [German, Diedenhofen; Latin, Theodonis Villa.] Town in NE France, in the department of Moselle, on the Moselle River ab. 18 mi. N of Metz. It is one of the centers of the iron and steel industry in the Lorraine region, and has a trade in wine, farm products, and timber. It was occupied by the French in 1558 and withstood sieges in 1643, 1792, 1814, and 1815; taken by the Germans in 1870. The old fortifications were razed in 1902. The town suffered damage in World War II. 17,596 (1946).

Thionville, Merlin de. See Merlin, Antoine Christophe.

Thira (thē'rā). See Thera.

Third Connecticut Lake (kō.net'i.kut). See under Connecticut Lakes.

Third Estate. [French, Tiers État.] In France, that portion of the nation which belonged neither to the nobility, nor the clergy (the two privileged classes), nor the peasantry. It consisted chiefly of the burghers who sent representatives to the States-General. The name was made famous by the struggles of the representatives of this order in the last French States-General for power equal to that of the other orders, and their final assumption of supreme authority, consummating the French Revolution.

Third International. See Comintern.

Third Reich. [German, Drittes Reich.] Unofficial designation of Hitler's Germany adopted primarily under the influence of a treatise, Das Dritte Reich (1923) by Arthur Moeller van den Bruck, which had great popularity in Germany. The concept in its original form was derived from Christian tradition, where it was identical with the millennium referred to in Rev. xx. It assumed political significance in the teachings of Joachim of Floris who, in the 12th century, divided all time into the ages of the Father, the Son (from the birth of Christ to 1200), and the Holy Spirit, the last-named being the "Drittes Reich" and implying a universal reordering of peoples and nations. The idea of a third realm (or Reich) was familiar to Lessing. National Socialism interpreted it anew, in the manner of Hegel, as representing a synthesis after the thesis and antithesis of the Holy Roman Empire and the German Empire of the Hohenzollerns.

Thirkell (thēr'kēl), Angela Margaret. [Maiden name, Mackail.] b. Jan. 30, 1890—. English novelist. Her novels, set in Anthony Trollope's imaginary Barsetshire and portraying the contemporary English middle class, include August Folly (1936), Coronation Summer (1937), Summer Half (1937), The Brandons (1939), Cheerfulness Breaks In (1940), Northbridge Rectory (1941), Marling Hall (1942), Peace Breaks Out (1947), Private Enterprise (1947), and Love among the Ruins (1948).

Thirlby or Thirleby (thēr'bi), Thomas. b. c.1506; d. in Lambeth Palace, London, Aug. 26, 1570. English cleric, active also as an ambassador during the reign of Henry VIII. Early recognizing the king's supremacy in ecclesiastical matters, he was appointed (1533) king's chaplain, signed (1540) the decree annulling Henry VIII's marriage to Anne of Cleves, and was appointed (1541) bishop of Westminster. He was a privy counselor (1542), was temporarily ousted from office (1549) for heresy, but became bishop of Norwich (1550) and bishop of Ely (1554). As he had remained a Roman Catholic in most basic doctrinal matters, he enjoyed favor in Mary's eyes. However, having opposed restoration of ecclesiastical power to the crown under Elizabeth, and having refused to take the Oath of Supremacy, he was deposed (1559) from his see. He continued to preach against the Reformation, and was committed (1560) to the Tower of London.

Thirlwall (thēr'wōl), Connop. b. at Stepney, London, Feb. 11, 1797; d. at Bath, England, July 27, 1875. English historian, critic, and prelate. He was bishop of St. David's (1840–74). His chief work is a History of Greece (1835–44).

Thirty, Battle of the. Fight between 30 Bretons and as many Englishmen, pitted by Jean de Beaumanoir and Bombarough, an Englishman, against each other, to decide a contest. The fight is said to have taken place in France in 1351. The English were beaten.

Thirty Clocks Strike the Hour. Collected short stories by V. Sackville-West, published in 1932.

Thirty Tyrants. Aristocratic body which usurped the government of Athens (404–403 B.C.). The most notable was Critias. They were expelled by the democratic party under the lead of Thrasybulus.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔh, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Thirty Tyrants. Popular name given collectively to the body of pretenders to the Roman Empire under the reigns of Valerian, Gallienus, and others. Among them were Tetricus and Odenathus.

Thirty-Years' War. Religious and political war in central Europe which involved Germany and various other countries. It was caused by the friction between the Protestants and Roman Catholics in the Holy Roman Empire; the immediate occasion was the infringement by the court of Austria of the rights of the Bohemian Protestants, who in May, 1618, rose in revolt under the lead of Count Heinrich von Thurn. In 1619 the Emperor Matthias died, and was succeeded in the Hapsburg dominions and as emperor by Ferdinand II, but Frederick V, the Winter King, elector of the Palatinate, was chosen as a rival king by the Bohemians. In November, 1620, the Catholic League defeated Frederick at the White Mountain; in 1622 Tilly and the Catholic League were victorious at Wimpfen and Höchst; in 1625 Christian IV of Denmark became the leader of the Protestants; in 1626 Tilly defeated Christian IV at Lutter am Barenberge, and Wallenstein, the Imperialist general, defeated Mansfeld at Dessau. In 1629 the Edict of Restitution was issued by Ferdinand II. In 1630 Wallenstein was dismissed, and Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden became the Protestant leader. The events of 1631 were the storming of Magdeburg by Tilly and the victory of Gustavus at Breitenfeld; of 1632, the successes of Gustavus, the reentry of Wallenstein to the Imperialist service, and the victory and death of Gustavus at Lützen (November 16). By now the war's complexion had changed from one of religious struggle to one of outright political effort to destroy the power of the Hapsburgs by winning land in the empire. In 1634 Wallenstein was murdered, and the Imperialists won a victory over the Swedes at Nördlingen. In 1635, the treaty of Prague was signed between Saxony and Ferdinand II, and France, under the lead of Richelieu, entered the war on the Protestant side. The victory of the Swedes at Wittstock in 1636 was followed by the death of Ferdinand II. He was succeeded by Ferdinand III in 1637. The victory of the Swedes near Leipzig in 1642 was succeeded in 1643, 1644, and 1645, by a series of generally French and Swedish victories under Condé, Turenne, and Torstenson. In 1648 the war was terminated by the treaty of Westphalia. In general the Protestants were strong in northern Germany, the Roman Catholics in southern Germany. Spain was the chief ally of the emperor; France, Sweden, and Denmark were the principal allies of the Protestants. The main profits of the war fell to France and Sweden. Germany suffered severely in loss of life, property, and morale, and the Holy Roman Empire became thereafter a minor factor in European politics.

This (this). In ancient geography, a city in Upper Egypt, near Abydos or perhaps identical with it.

Thisbe (thiz/bē). See under Pyramus and Thisbe.

This Side of Paradise. Novel by F. Scott Fitzgerald, published in 1920. A romantic treatment of the younger generation, it is usually regarded as one of the leading novels of the "jazz age."

Thisted (tēstēth). See Tisted.

Thistle, Order of the. See Order of the Thistle.

Thistles, A Few Figs from. See Few Figs from Thistles, A.

Thistles, Figs and. See Figs and Thistles.

Thistlewood (this'l.wud), Arthur. b. at Topholme, near Lincoln, England, 1770; d. on the gallows at Newgate, London, May 1, 1820. English anarchist. Always an exponent of extreme violence, Thistlewood plotted several revolutions, none of which succeeded. Apparently unbalanced (after, but not necessarily because of, reading Thomas Paine's works), he joined the revolutionary Spencean Society, and organized (1816) a public demonstration at Spa Fields; the proposed revolution failed. Imprisoned but acquitted, he plotted the assassination of Robert Stewart, Viscount Castlereagh, and other ministers (this plot being known as the Cato Street Conspiracy, so called from the loft at which they stored their arms), but was betrayed, probably by George Edwards, a fellow conspirator, tried, and found guilty of high treason. He was hanged and publicly decapitated, but not quartered (although the law then still provided for quartering in cases of high treason).

Thistlewood Conspiracy. See Cato Street Conspiracy.

Thivai (thi've). See Thebes, Greece.

Tihlaro (thi'ä'rō). [Also: Bathlaru, Batlaro, Tiharo.] Subgroup of the Tswana, or western Sotho, of SW Bechuanaland in S Africa.

Thoburn (thō'bērn), Isabella. b. at St. Clairsville, Ohio, March 29, 1843; d. at Lucknow, India, Sept. 1, 1901. American missionary and educator in India; sister of James Mills Thoburn. The women's college of Lucknow University, the Isabella Thoburn College, is named for her.

Thoburn, James Mills. b. at St. Clairsville, Ohio, March 7, 1836; d. Nov. 28, 1922. American Methodist Episcopal missionary and author; brother of Isabella Thoburn. He served (1859-88) in various missionary enterprises in India, and was missionary bishop (1888-1908) for India (later for Southern Asia). Author of My Missionary Apprenticeship (1887), India and Malaysia (1892), Life of Isabella Thoburn (1903), and India and Southern Asia (1907).

Tholen (tō'len). Island in Zealand, Netherlands, NW of the Schelde estuary and ab. 22 mi. NW of Antwerp. Length, ab. 9 mi.

Tholuck (tō'lūk), Friedrich August Gottreu. b. at Breslau, March 30, 1799; d. at Halle, Germany, June 10, 1877. German Protestant theologian and preacher.

Thom (tom), William. b. at Aberdeen, Scotland, c1798; d. at Hawkhill, Dundee, Scotland, Feb. 29, 1848. Scottish poet. He worked as a weaver (1814 et seq.) at Dundee, Newtyle, Aberdeen, Inverurie, and London; like Burns, he was for a short time lionized by society and literary lights at London. Author of Rhymes and Recollections of a Handloom Weaver (1844). Some of his best poems are The Blind Boy's Pranks, The Mitherless Bairn, The Maniac Mother's Dream, The Overgate Orphan, Autumn Winds, Bonnie May, Yon Bower, The Wedded Waters, and Jeanie's Grave.

Thoma (tō'mā), Hans. b. at Bernau, Germany, Oct. 2, 1839; d. at Karlsruhe, Germany, Nov. 7, 1924. German portrait, landscape, historical, and genre painter, etcher, and lithographer, director (1890 et seq.) of the museum and academy at Karlsruhe. Among his better-known works are Bernau, Valley of Albe near St. Blaise, Pleasures of Summer, The Artist, Eve in Paradise, Allegory, Solitude, and The Mother and Uncle of the Artist.

Thoma, Ludwig. [Pseudonym, Peter Schlemihl.] b. at Oberammergau, Germany, Jan. 21, 1867; d. at Tegernsee, Germany, Aug. 26, 1921. German writer of stories, novels, and plays dealing with rural Bavarian life. The son of a forester, he grew up among peasants, and even as a lawyer at Munich continued to deal with them; he depicts them, and the bureaucrats of his profession, with realism and humor. His Lausbubengeschichten (1905-07) are best known among his stories; Die Lokalbahn (1902), Moral (1908), and Lötlchens Geburtsstag (1911) have been popular comedies; and Andreas Vost (1905) and Der Wäitler (1911) are novels. He was editor (1909 et seq.) of Simptreissimus. He published his Erinnerungen in 1919.

Thomar (tō'mär). See Tomaro.

Thomar, Conde de. Title of Costa Cabral, António Bernardo da.

Thomas (tom'ās), Saint. [Also, Didymus.] One of the 12 apostles; according to tradition, an evangelist in Parthia and India, where he suffered martyrdom. His skepticism when he first heard of the Resurrection of Christ, and his expressed wish to see the actual marks of the Crucifixion on the body of Christ, have given rise to the term "doubting Thomas," used to describe anyone who is needlessly or inordinately skeptical of a proposal or stated fact.

Thomas (to.mā), Albert. b. at Champigny-sur-Marne, Seine, France, June 16, 1878; d. at Paris, May 7, 1932. French political leader, director (1920-32) of the International Labor Organization. A follower of and collaborator with J. L. Jaurès in several publications, and elected (1910) to the Chamber of Deputies as a Socialist, he was placed (1914) in charge of munitions production, became (1915) undersecretary of state for artillery and munitions, and was minister of armament (1915-17). In 1917 he went on a special mission to Russia to convince Alexander Kerensky of the necessity for a Russian military offensive.

Thomas (tom'as), Albert Ellsworth. b. at Chester, Mass., Sept. 16, 1872; d. at Wakefield, R.I., June 18, 1947. American journalist and playwright. He was a staff member (1895-1939) of the New York Tribune, Evening Post, Time, and Sin. Author of Her Husband's Wife (1910), What the Doctor Ordered (1911), Come Out of the Kitchen (1916), The French Doll (1922), Close Quarters (1926), Merely Murder (1937), and other plays. His collaborations include The Champion (1920); with Thomas Loudon), Her Friend the King (1929); with H. G. Rhodes), and A Very Great Man (1932); with Jack Haussman).

Thomas (to.mă), Ambrose. [Full name, Charles Louis Ambrose Thomas.] b. at Metz, France, Aug. 5, 1811; d. at Paris, Feb. 12, 1896. French composer, director (1871 et seq.) of the Paris Conservatory. Among his works are the operas Raymond (1851), Mignon (1866), and Hamlet (1868); ballets, masses, and ensemble music.

Thomas (tom'as), Amos Russell. b. at Watertown, N.Y., Oct. 3, 1826; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1895. American homeopathic physician, teacher, and writer.

Thomas, Arthur Goring. b. at Rotton Park, Sussex, England, Nov. 20, 1850; d. March 20, 1892. English composer. His most important works are the operas Esmeralda (1883) and Nadeshda (1885), the choral ode The Sun Worshipers (1881), the cantata The Swan and the Skylark (1894), and songs.

Thomas, Augustus. b. at St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 8, 1857; d. at Nyack, N.Y., Aug. 12, 1934. American playwright. For a number of years he engaged in journalism, and was the editor of the Kansas City Mirror. His plays include Alabama (1891), In Mizoura (1893), Arizona (1899), The Earl of Pawtucket (1903), Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots (1905), The Witching Hour (1907), As a Man Thinks (1911), The Copperhead (1918), and others.

Thomas, Calvin. b. near Lapeer, Mich., Oct. 23, 1854; d. Nov. 4, 1919. American scholar and educator, professor of Germanic languages and literatures (1896 et seq.) at Columbia University. He was connected with the University of Michigan as instructor, assistant professor, and professor of German (1878-96). His publications include a German grammar (1895), The Life and Works of Schiller (1901), An Anthology of German Literature (1907), History of German Literature (1909), and editions of Goethe's Faust and other German classics.

Thomas, Cyrus. b. at Kingsport, Tenn., July 27, 1825; d. at Washington, D.C., June 26, 1910. American entomologist and ethnologist, archaeologist of the Bureau of American Ethnology from 1882. He was professor of natural history at the Southern Illinois Normal University (1872-75), entomologist of the state of Illinois (1874-75), and a member of the U.S. entomological commission (1877-79). He published numerous monographs and papers upon economic entomology, upon North American ethnology and archaeology, especially on the Mound Builders and on the early Mexican Indian cultures, and a History of the Indians of North America.

Thomas, David Alfred. See Rhonda, Viscount.

Thomas, Dylan Marlais. b. at Swansea, South Wales, Oct. 27, 1914; d. at New York, Nov. 9, 1953. British poet. His books include Twenty-Five Poems (1936), Map of Love (1939), The World I Breathe (1939), Portrait of the Artist as a Young Dog (1940), Deaths and Entrances (1946), and Collected Poems . . . 1934-1953 (1953).

Thomas, Edith Matilda. b. at Chatham, Ohio, Aug. 12, 1854; d. Sept. 13, 1925. American poet. Among her works are A New Year's Masque and Other Poems (1885), The Round Year (1886), Lyrics and Sonnets (1887), The Inverted Torch (1890), In Sunshine Land (1895), The Dancers, and Other Legends and Lyrics (1903), and The Flower from the Ashes (1915).

Thomas, Frederick William. b. March 21, 1867—. British Orientalist. He served as assistant librarian (1898-1903) and librarian (1903-27) of the India Office, professor (1927-38) of Sanskrit at Oxford, and lecturer (1908-35) on comparative philology at University College, London. Author of British Education in India (1891), Mutual Influence of Muhammadans and Hindus in India (1892), Indianism and Its Expansion (1942), and The Nam Language (1947).

Thomas, George Henry. [Called the "Rock of Chickamauga."] b. in Southampton County, Va., July 31, 1816; d. at San Francisco, March 28, 1870. American Civil War general with the Union army. He was graduated from West Point in 1840, served in the Seminole War, was distinguished in the Mexican War at Monterey in 1846 and Buena Vista in 1847, was an instructor at West Point (1851-54), and served in Texas until the Civil War. He was appointed colonel in May, 1861, and served under Robert Patterson. Appointed brigadier general of volunteers and transferred to the Department of the Cumberland in August, 1861, he gained the victory of Mill Springs (Jan. 19, 1862), distinguished himself at Perryville (October 8) and as commander of the center at Murfreesboro, and became famous for his defense of the Union position in the battle of Chickamauga (Sept. 19-20, 1863), whence his sobriquet, the "Rock of Chickamauga." On Oct. 19, 1863, he was made commander of the Army of the Cumberland, and he fought at the battle of Chattanooga and with W. T. Sherman in the invasion of Georgia in 1864. He was sent to Tennessee to repel J. B. Hood's invasion in September, 1864, and defeated Hood at Nashville (Dec. 15-16, 1864). He was promoted to major general in the regular army and led various operations, including the capture of Jefferson Davis, in 1865. He was commander of military divisions and departments in Tennessee and elsewhere, and lastly of the military division of the Pacific (1869-70).

Thomas, Isaiah. b. at Boston, Jan. 19, 1749; d. at Worcester, Mass., April 4, 1831. American printer. The founder (1770) of the Massachusetts Spy, the chief newspaper of the intercolonial revolutionary movement, he withdrew to Worcester, Mass., in April, 1775, to provide the rebel government with a press. After the war he made that small inland town for a time the most important publishing center in the U.S. He introduced better books in every field and sold them cheaply by means of mass production, and subsidiary shops and retail outlets in Albany, Baltimore, Portsmouth, and other towns. Among the periodicals published by him were the Royal American Magazine (1774-75) and the Massachusetts Magazine (1789-96), which by the variety and quality of their offerings revolutionized the periodical field. He was the leading American publisher of juveniles, including the New England Primer and Mother Goose's Melody, and was the first American printer to produce a considerable body of material from musical type. His folio Bible was regarded as the most beautiful book ever published in America, and his small Bibles were the first to be kept in standing type and sold cheaply by an American printer. Among the other works which came from his press were dictionaries, school books, almanacs, and law and medical works, and the first native American novels. He founded (1812) the American Antiquarian Society, the first research organization in the country. His History of Printing in America (2 vols., 1810; 2nd edition, 1874) is still the standard work for the period which it covers.

Thomas, James Henry. b. at Newport, England, Oct. 3, 1874; d. at London, Jan. 21, 1949. English labor leader and politician. He worked as messenger boy, locomotive engine wiper, railroad fireman, and railroad engineer. He was general secretary (1918-24, 1925-31) of the National Union of Railwaymen. A member (1910-36) of Parliament, he served as secretary of state for colonies (1924, 1931, 1935-36), lord privy seal (1929-30) and minister of employment, and secretary of state for the dominions (1930-35). Expelled (1931) from the Labour Party for joining the MacDonald government, he was forced to give up his public career in 1936 after he had permitted certain budget secrets to leak out.

Thomas, Jesse Burgess. b. at Shepherdstown, Va. (now in W.Va.), 1777; d. May 3, 1853. American jurist and politician. He served (1809-18) as a federal judge in the Illinois territory, was one of the first U.S. senators from Illinois, serving from 1818 to 1829, and introduced (1820) the amendment, later incorporated in the noted Missouri Compromise, prohibiting slavery north of the line 36°30' except for the territory embraced in the proposed state of Missouri.

Thomas, John. b. at Marshfield, Mass., Nov. 9, 1724; d. in Canada, June 2, 1776. American physician and Revolutionary general. He was a member (1746-60) of the British military medical service, practiced medicine (1760-75) privately at Kingston, Mass., and was commissioned (1775) a brigadier general by the Continental Congress. He commanded (1775-76) the American lines at Roxbury, Mass., compelled the British evacuation of Boston by his occupation (1776) of Dorchester Heights, was advanced (1776) to the rank of major general, and placed at the head of the Continental forces attempting the assault of Quebec.

Thomas, John Charles. b. at Meyersdale, Pa., c1891—. American baritone. Starting in Gilbert and Sullivan roles in DeWolf Hopper's company in 1914, he sang with success in light opera and musical comedy until 1924, when he made his debut in grand opera at Washington. In 1925 he went abroad, where his voice and artistry led to an invitation, which he accepted, to join the Belgian Royal Opera, with which organization he sang for several years at Brussels. Back in the U.S., he sang with the Philadelphia and Chicago opera companies, and in 1934 made his first appearance with the Metropolitan Opera Company at New York. He made many appearances in opera also at San Francisco and Los Angeles, but achieved an even greater success as a concert singer, and eventually reached a vastly greater audience by radio.

Thomas, John Jacobs. b. at Ledyard, N.Y., Jan. 8, 1810; d. at Union Springs, N.Y., Feb. 22, 1895. American pomologist and author. A nurseryman in New York state, he served (1853-c1894) as associate editor of the Country Gentleman, was the first president of the Western New York Horticultural Society, and helped found the American Pomological Congress (later Society). His outstanding work, The Fruit Culturist (1846), which appeared in revised and expanded form as The American Fruit Culturist (1849), ushered in systematic pomology in America.

Thomas, Joseph. b. in Cayuga County, N.Y., Sept. 23, 1811; d. Dec. 24, 1891. American author. He was educated as a physician, and was for a time professor of Latin and Greek at Haverford College. He collaborated in the compilation of A New and Complete Gazetteer of the United States and of Lippincott's Pronouncing Gazetteer of the World (1855), and edited A Comprehensive Medical Dictionary (1864; revised 1886) and Lippincott's Pronouncing Dictionary of Biography and Mythology (1870-71).

Thomas, Lorenzo. b. at Newcastle, Del., in October, 1804; d. at Washington, D.C., March 2, 1875. American general. He served in the Seminole War, was chief of staff to W. O. Butler in the Mexican War and later chief of staff to Winfield Scott, and was adjutant general in the Civil War. He was appointed by Andrew Johnson secretary of war ad interim in 1868, but did not serve, E. M. Stanton refusing to give up the office and Congress backing him to the extent of impeachment proceedings.

Thomas, Lowell. b. at Woodington, Ohio, April 6, 1892—. American radio news commentator and author. He headed a mission sent to Europe by President Wilson to compile a historical record of World War I, compiled a historical record of the German revolution, was attached successively to Belgian, French, Italian, Serbian, American, British, and Arabian armies, and wrote accounts of the Palestine campaign and the Arabian revolution. He has been a news commentator on radio (1930 et seq.) and television (1940 et seq.). Author of With Lawrence in Arabia (1924), The First World Flight (1925), Pageturn of Romance (1943), Back to Mandalay (1951), and other books.

Thomas, Martha Carey. b. at Baltimore, Jan. 2, 1857; d. at Philadelphia, Dec. 2, 1935. American scholar and educator, a prominent advocate of women's suffrage. She was graduated from Cornell University in 1877, and studied at the Johns Hopkins University and at the universities of Leipzig, Zurich, and Paris. She was the first woman to obtain the doctorate of arts summa cum laude from a European university. In 1885 she was appointed dean and professor of English at Bryn Mawr College, and president in 1894. She was the author of The Higher Education of Women (1900), The College (1905), and others.

Thomas, Norman Mattoon. b. at Marion, Ohio, Nov. 20, 1884—. American Socialist politician. He was ordained (1911) in the Presbyterian ministry and resigned (1931). He was founder (1918) and editor (1918-21) of World Tomorrow, associate editor (1921-22) of The Nation, and director (1922) of the League for Industrial Democracy. He ran as Socialist candidate (1928, 1932, 1936, 1940, 1944, 1948) for president of the U.S. Author of The Conscientious Democracy (1930), War—No Profit, No Glory, No Need (1935), What Is Our Destiny? (1944), Appeal to the Nations (1947), and other books.

Thomas, Philemon. b. in North Carolina, 1764; d. at Baton Rouge, La., 1847. American military officer and politician. He was leader of the West Florida insurrection against Spain (1810-11), and was a member of Congress from Louisiana (1831-35).

Thomas, Philip Evan. b. in Montgomery County, Md., Nov. 11, 1776; d. at Yonkers, N.Y., Sept. 1, 1861. American railroad promoter. Beginning as a hardware merchant at Baltimore, he became a banker, and subsequently turned his interest to the use of the railroad for general transportation purposes. He was a leading promoter of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad (chartered Feb. 28, 1827, and incorporated April 24, 1827), which he served (1827-36) as first president. His was the second railroad in the U.S. chartered to carry passengers, receiving its charter two months after that granted to the Mohawk and Hudson Railroad.

Thomas, Robert Bailey. b. at Grafton, Mass., April 24, 1766; d. at West Boylston, Mass., May 19, 1846. American editor and publisher, noted as the founder (1792) of The Farmer's Almanac (later called The Farmer's Almanac and The Old Farmer's Almanac), which he continued to publish up to the time of his death. The Almanac was one of the most popular publications of the day; in one decade alone (1820-30), more than 200,000 copies were sold by backwoods vendors in addition to sales in the cities.

Thomas, Seth. b. at Wolcott, Conn., Aug. 19, 1785; d. at Plymouth, Conn., Jan. 29, 1859. American clock-maker. In 1807 he joined with Silas Hoadley and Eli Terry in the large-scale production of clocks, manufactured at Plymouth, and in 1812 established his own clock factory at Plymouth Hollow (now Thomaston), Conn., forming (1853) the Seth Thomas Clock Company.

Thomas, Sidney Gilchrist. b. at London, April 16, 1850; d. at Paris, Feb. 1, 1885. English metallurgist and inventor, best remembered as the discoverer (1875) of the Thomas-Gilchrist process (named for him and his cousin and collaborator P. C. Gilchrist) for eliminating phosphorus from pig iron through a basic lining of lime in the Bessemer converter.

Thomas, Theodore. b. at Esens, Germany, Oct. 11, 1835; d. at Chicago, Jan. 4, 1905. American conductor. He first appeared (c1841) as a violinist. He was brought to the U.S. in 1845, and was first and solo violin in concerts and opera till 1861. From 1855 to 1869 he gave a series of concerts of chamber music; and his symphony concerts at New York, begun in 1864, were given every season (except from 1869 to 1872) until 1878, when he became director of the College of Music at Cincinnati, Ohio. He returned to New York in 1880, and made it the headquarters of his orchestra till 1891, when he removed to Chicago. He was instrumental in developing the musical taste of the country by his series of orchestral concerts, as well as by his work as conductor of the New York and Brooklyn Philharmonic Societies, of the New York Chorus Society, the Cincinnati festivals, the Chicago Orchestra, and others.

Thomas, Theodore Gaillard. b. on Edisto Island, near Charleston, S.C., Nov. 21, 1831; d. at Thomasville, Ga., Feb. 28, 1903. American gynecologist and obstetrician. He served (1863-90) as professor of obstetrics and then gynecology at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (New York), and wrote a noted textbook, Practical Treatise on the Diseases of Women (1868). Among the first to make an organic differentiation between the cervix and the body of the uterus, he devised the surgical operation of laparotomy, and was the first to excise a small ovarian tumor by cutting through the vagina.

Thomas à Becket (a bek'et), Saint. [Also: Saint Thomas Becket, Saint Thomas of London.] b. at London, c1118; killed in Canterbury Cathedral, Canterbury, England, Dec. 29, 1170. English ecclesiastic. The son of a well-to-do merchant, he was trained originally to be a notary, and entered (c1142) the household of Theobald, then archbishop of Canterbury. In this service he distinguished himself, and, following the accession of Henry II, he was appointed (1155) chancellor, after having studied law on the Continent under Theobald's patronage. As chancellor, Thomas was close to Henry II and had much influence with him; he proved himself a brilliant and devoted minister and a courageous knight. Despite his protests, he was appointed by Henry to succeed (1162) Theobald as archbishop of Canterbury. Once he had been invested with his office, he abandoned the courtly ways appropriate to a chancellor for those of a man of the church; and while previously he had loyally taken the part of Henry, he now concentrated on furthering the cause of the church. Since the aims of state and church were often at variance, Thomas à Becket was inevitably involved in many disputes with Henry, finding himself again and again in opposition to the sovereign. Disagreement between them broke out in 1164, over the Constitutions of Clarendon. These were drawn up by Henry to codify the allegiance of the church to the state; Thomas at first refused to accept them at all, but was urged by Pope Alexander III to submit. However, he drew up counter rules, in which he insisted that clerics were to be tried in ecclesiastical councils, even for secular misdemeanors. He also asserted the belief that clergy of any rank should be responsible to higher authorities only within the church, the only overlord of an archbishop being a pope. Henry's persecution of Thomas having now become very active, Thomas removed himself to the Continent, where he won the Pope's annulment of the Constitutions of Clarendon. In Thomas's absence, Henry had his son Henry (d. 1183) crowned king of England by the archbishop of York, an attempt to circumvent a possible excommunication and also an open breach of tradition; at the same time Henry divided his continental holdings between his sons Geoffrey and Richard, the youngest, John (Lackland), receiving no portion. This acted to further dispute between Henry and Thomas after the latter's return to England when it had seemed that a reconciliation had been effected. Thomas's attempt to excommunicate the bishops involved in the crowning roused Henry, who was in Normandy when he heard of it, to further exasperation. The king's rashly expressed desire to be relieved from the power of this "turbulent priest" was overheard and acted upon by four overzealous knights. On Dec. 29, 1170, Richard le Breton, Reginald Fitzurse, Hugh de Morville, and William Tracy assaulted Thomas within the cathedral and murdered him. Upon his death, Thomas was almost immediately idealized as a martyr, and Henry was forced to make many of the concessions toward the freedom of the church which the archbishop had tried to achieve. Thomas was canonized in 1172, and two years later the king did public penance at his tomb. He remained a popular saint all through the Middle Ages; the Trinity Chapel of Canterbury, to which his bones had been transferred in 1220, was the goal of many pilgrimages (including the fictional one of Geoffrey Chaucer's Canterbury Tales). T. S. Eliot's verse play Murder in the Cathedral (1935) was written about his martyrdom.

Thomas a Kempis (a kem'pīs). [Also: Thomas Hammerken (a hamer'ken or hemer'ken); also, Thomas Hämmerlein.] b. at Kempen, Germany, c1380; d. near Zwolle, Netherlands, July 25, 1471. German mystic and ascetic writer, generally regarded as the author of De imitatione Christi (Imitation of Christ, 1486). He entered the Augustinian convent Akenberg, near Zwolle, in 1407, and became superior in 1423 and again in 1447.

Thomas Allworthy (ól'wér'wñi). See Allworthy, Thomas.

Thomas Aquinas (a.kwí'nās), Saint. See Aquinas, Saint Thomas.

Thomas Balderstone (ból'dér.stón, -stŏn). See Balderstone, Thomas.

Thomas Chiffinch (chíf'ínch), Master. See Chiffinch, Master Thomas.

Thomas Clifford (kli'f'örd), Sir. See Clifford, Sir Thomas.

Thomas Gradgrind (grad'grínd). See Gradgrind, Thomas.

Thomashefsky (tom.a.shef'ski), Boris. b. at Kiev, Russia, May 12, 1868; d. at New York, July 9, 1939. American actor and producer in the Yiddish theater. He arrived (1881) in the U.S., where he introduced the Yiddish theater. He induced Leon Kobrin to translate Shlake-speare's plays into Yiddish and presented them at the National Theater, which he built at New York, and wrote and appeared in numerous sketches and operettas including The Green Millionaire and his last venture, Boris and Bessie (1937).

Thomasin von Zirkläre (tō'mä.zën fon tsirk'lä're). d. c1235. Middle High German poet. He came from Friuli, Italy, and wrote (1215-16) a didactic poem in ten books called Der velsche Gast. It sets forth what he considered to be the proper conduct for gentlefolk of that time.

Thomas Mountains (tom'ās). See Lowell Thomas Mountains.

Thomas of Britain. fl. c1185. British poet. He wrote his Roman de Tristan for Queen Eleanor, wife of Henry II of England. He is thought also to have been the Thomas who wrote a version of the King Horn legend.

Thomas of Brotherton (broth'ér.tŏn). [Title: Earl of Norfolk.] b. 1300; d. 1338. English nobleman and marshal of England (1316); son of Edward I by Margaret. He acted as warden of England during the absence of Edward II in Scotland (1319), and supported him in the struggle against Thomas of Lancaster (1321). However, when Queen Isabella invaded England (1326) with Roger Mortimer, he joined their forces and, for so doing, received grants of estates appropriated from the Despensers. He married his son to Mortimer's daughter, but, becoming discontented, joined the conference of magnates at London (1329) and welcomed Edward III to the throne.

Thomas of Erceuldoune (ér'sel.dŏn). See Thomas the Rhymer.

Thomas of Lancaster (lan'kās.tér). [Titles: Earl of Lancaster, Leicester, Derby, Lincoln, and Salisbury.] b. c1277; beheaded March 22, 1322. English leader of the barons from the time of Edward II's accession; son of Edmund Crouchback, Earl of Lancaster (1245-96). Defeated in a tournament by Piers Gaveston, the king's favorite, he became an enemy of Gaveston. He attended the Parliament of 1310, and became one of the 28 "ordainers" who forced Edward II to delegate authority to them, and had Gaveston banished. He forced (1312) Edward II and Gaveston to flee from Newcastle, and assumed the responsibility for the beheading of Gaveston. Pardoned (1313) by Edward II, Lancaster refused to be reconciled with Hugh le Despenser (1262-1326) or to accompany Edward II in the expedition (1313) against the Scots. He gained complete control of Edward after the defeat by the Scots at Bannockburn, but showed less interest in administration than in his private war with John, Earl Warenne (1286-1347). He accompanied (1318) Edward to the siege of Berwick, but departed later, and was accused by the king's party of taking bribes from the Scots. He forced Edward to consent to the banishment (1321) of the Despensers, but delayed (1322) in going to the aid of his supporters in the south who were threatened by the royal army. Taken by the king's forces at Boroughbridge, he was condemned as a traitor without a hearing, and beheaded the next day on a hill outside Pontefract.

Thomas of Woodstock (wud'stok). [Titles: Earl of Buckingham, Duke of Gloucester.] b. at Woodstock, England, Jan. 7, 1355; murdered at Calais, France, between Sept. 8 and 24, 1397. English politician; seventh and youngest son of Edward III and Philippa of Hainaut. By his marriage to Eleanor de Bohun, he came into the inheritance of Essex, Hereford, and other regions. As uncle of Richard II, he struggled for a time after Richard's accession for control of the political situation, eventually joining John of Gaunt, his older brother, in determined opposition to Richard. From 1386 to 1389, when Gaunt was in France, he was the principal leader of the anti-royal faction and thus practically ruler of England. He succeeded in having Michael de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, condemned and banished, and successfully faced the force brought against him by Robert de Vere, one of the king's supporters. Richard reassumed the government in 1389 and Gloucester made his peace with the king, but in 1397 he was found to be involved in a plot to overthrow Richard and was arrested. He was transported to Calais and there was killed, supposedly on the king's order.

Thomason (tom'a.son), John William, Jr. b. at Huntsville, Tex., 1893; d. at San Diego, Calif., March 12, 1944. American marine corps officer and writer. Commissioned (1917) a second lieutenant, he served with the Second Division during World War I and later in the West Indies, Central America, and China. Author of Fiz Bayonets (1926), Red Pants (1927), Marines and Others (1929), Job Stuart (1931), Salt Winds and Gobi Dust (1934), Gone to Texas (1937), Lone Star Preacher (1940), and other books.

Thomas Tallis (tom'as tal'is), Fantasia on a Theme of. See Fantasia on a Theme of Thomas Tallis.

Thomas the Bastard. See Fauconberg or Falconberg, Thomas.

Thomas the Rhymer. [Also: Thomas of Erceuldoune, Thomas of Earlstoun, Thomas Rymer, Thomas Risor, Thomas Learmont; called "True Thomas."] fl. c1220-97. Scottish poet, noted in folklore and Arthurian legend as a prophet and a guide to the mysterious halls beneath the Eildon Hills. According to the popular story, the queen of the elves came to him as he sat under the Eildon tree, and carried him to elfland, where they lived in happiness for seven years, at the end of which time she brought him back to the Eildon tree and told him of many things that were to happen in the wars between England and Scotland. He was called "True Thomas" from the truth of these prophecies. He finally disappeared in a forest, following a hart and hind, and was seen no more. The Romance and Prophecies of Thomas of Erceuldoune was edited by Murray for the Early English Text Society (1875). Sir Walter Scott attributed to him the poem Sir Tristrem, a 13th-century romance, which he edited from the Auchinleck manuscript in 1804; but it is now thought not to be his. There are five versions of the Scottish popular ballad Thomas Rhymer, which tell the story of Thomas and the queen of elfland, collected by Child in his English and Scottish Popular Ballads. This same story is told also of Ogier the Dane and Morgan le Fay.

Thomaston (tom'as.ton). Town in W Connecticut, in Litchfield County; known since the early 19th century for the manufacture of clocks, begun by Seth Thomas and Eli Terry. Other industries produce brass goods and machine parts. 4,896 (1950).

Thomaston. City in W Georgia, county seat of Upson County; peach-shipping center. 6,550 (1950).

Thomaston. Town in S Maine, in Knox County. 2,810 (1950).

Thomasville (tom'as.vil). City in S Georgia, county seat of Thomas County; processing and shipping center for cotton, tobacco, and lumber. 14,424 (1950).

Thomasville. City in W North Carolina, in Davidson County; furniture manufactures. 11,151 (1950).

Thomas Wyatt (tom'as w'fat), The Famous History of Sir. Play by John Webster and Thomas Dekker, printed in 1607. It appears to be an abridgment of the first part of a play called Lady Jane.

Thomé (to.mā), Francis Lucien Joseph. b. at Port Louis, Mauritius, Oct. 18, 1850; d. at Paris, Nov. 16, 1909. French composer. He wrote operas, many pantomimes, ballets, and operettas including Endymion at Phœbe, incidental music for plays, and piano pieces, of which Simple aveu and Sous les feuilles are widely known.

Thomists (th'om'ists). Followers of Thomas Aquinas. He held two sources of knowledge, faith and reason; the doctrines of unconditional predestination and efficacious grace; and a physical as well as a moral efficacy; and denied the doctrine of the immaculate conception. His theology, embodied in his great work Summa theologiae, was based on a philosophical system rather than on either the Bible or the traditional teaching of the church. It was an attempt to reconcile Aristotelian philosophy with the Christian faith. It is of very high authority in the Roman Catholic Church, and its influence is great even outside of that church.

Thompson (tomp'son, tom'-). Town in NE Connecticut, in Windham County. 5,585 (1950).

Thompson, Alice Christiana. See Meynell, Alice Christiana.

Thompson, Benjamin. [Title, Count Rumford.] b. at Woburn, Mass., March 26, 1753; d. at Auteuil, near Paris, Aug. 21, 1814. American scientist, and administrator in Bavaria. Having been refused a commission in the Continental Army, he offered his services to the British, and in 1776 was sent to England with dispatches from General William Howe. Here he was given a place in the administrative service by Lord George Germaine, secretary of state for the colonies, and rose to the post of undersecretary of state (1780). He was elected a fellow of the Royal Society in 1779. On the retirement of his patron, he returned in 1781 to America, and raised in New York the "King's American Dragoons," of which he was commissioned lieutenant colonel. He returned to England before the close of the Revolutionary War, and in 1784 accepted a confidential appointment with the rank of aide-de-camp and chamberlain at the court of the elector of Bavaria. He reorganized the military establishment of Bavaria, and introduced important economic and other reforms, with the result that he was rapidly promoted to the highest offices in the state, including those of commander in chief of the general staff, minister of war, and superintendent of the police. He was created a count in the Holy Roman Empire in 1791. Owing to ill health he left Bavaria in 1798, and was for a time a private agent of Bavaria in England. He removed to Paris in 1802, and in 1804 married as his second wife the widow of the French chemist Antoine Lavoisier. The rest of his life was spent at his wife's villa at Auteuil. He gave 5,000 dollars to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a like amount to the Royal Society of London to found prizes bearing his name for the most important discoveries in heat and light. He left to Harvard the funds for the Rumford professorship of the physical and mathematical sciences as applied to the useful arts.

Thompson, Carmi Alderman. b. in Wayne County, W. Va., Sept. 4, 1870; d. at Cleveland, Ohio, June 22, 1942. American lawyer and government official, who served (1912-13) as treasurer of the U.S. He was secretary of state (1907-11) of Ohio, and served (1911-12) as assistant U.S. secretary of the interior. He was appointed (1926) a special commissioner by President Coolidge to survey conditions in the Philippines.

Thompson, Daniel Pierce. b. at Charlestown, Mass., Oct. 1, 1795; d. June 6, 1868. American lawyer and author. He served (1853-55) as secretary of state for Vermont. He compiled The Laws of Vermont . . . Including the Year 1834 (1835), and was the author of historical novels based on early Vermont history, such as The Green Mountain Boys (1839), The Rangers (1851), and Locke Amidst (1847).

Thompson, David. b. at London, April 30, 1770; d. near Montreal, Feb. 10, 1857. Canadian explorer and fur trader, the first white man to descend the Columbia River from its source to its mouth. He made a map of the Canadian west and surveyed (1816-26) the boundary between Canada and the U.S.

Thompson, Denman. b. at Girard, Pa., Oct. 15, 1833; d. at West Swanzey, N.H., April 14, 1911. American actor. He made his first appearance on the stage at Lowell, Mass., in 1852. In 1875 he appeared in Joshua Whitcomb, a sketch by himself of the New England farmer, which was afterward elaborated into a full play, The Old Homestead, first produced in 1886, with which his name is chiefly associated.

Thompson, Dorothy. b. at Lancaster, N.Y., July 9, 1894—. American journalist and author, at one time married (1928-42) to Sinclair Lewis. She was engaged (1917-20) in social work, was a newspaper correspondent at Vienna (1920-24), and Berlin (1924-28), and later was a political columnist for the New York Herald Tribune syndicate (1936-41) and Bell Syndicate (1941 et seq.). Author of The New Russia (1928), I Saw Hitler (1932), Political Guide (1938), Let the Record Speak (1939), Listen, Hans (1942), and other books.

Thompson, Edward Herbert. b. in Worcester County, Mass., Sept. 28, 1863; d. May 11, 1935. American archaeologist. During various explorations (1885-1909) he uncovered important Maya ruins in C Yucatán. Combining dredging and diving, he recovered archaeological objects of great importance from the "Sacred Well" of Chichén-Itzá. Author of Children of the Cave (1929) and People of the Serpent (1932).

Thompson, Sir Edward Maunde. b. in Jamaica, West Indies, May 4, 1840; d. Sept. 14, 1929. British editor, a director and principal librarian of the British Museum (1888-1909). He entered the service of the British Museum in 1861.

Thompson, Elizabeth Southerden. See Butler, Elizabeth Southerden Thompson, Lady.

Thompson, Ernest Seton. Original name of Seton, Ernest (Evan) Thompson.

Thompson, Francis. b. at Preston, Lancashire, England, D.c. 18, 1859; d. in a London hospital, Nov. 13, 1907. English poet and essayist. He was educated at Ushaw College, near Durham, and studied (1876-82) at Owens College, Manchester. Between 1882 and 1888 he made several unsuccessful attempts as book agent, shoemaker, soldier, errand boy, and match seller, to earn a living, finally going to London, where, driven by the misery of extreme poverty, he became an opium addict. He was reduced to starvation, and attempted (1888) suicide, but he also composed his first poems, some of which were published by Wilfred Meynell in his magazine, Merry England. Thompson spent the rest of his life in the home of Wilfred and Alice Meynell, receiving care from them or in hospitals and monasteries to which they sent him. Author of Poems (1893), containing his famous "The Hound of Heaven," Sister Songs (1895), and New Poems (1897); and of the prose works Health and Holiness (1905), Life of Saint Ignatius Loyola (1909), Essay on Shelley (1909), and Life of John Baptist de la Galle (1911). Among his best-known poems are Daisy, To a Snowflake, Arab Love-Song, All's Vast, The Poppy, The Sun, A Fallen Yew, Any Saint, and In No Strange Land.

Thompson, George. b. at Liverpool, England, June 18, 1804; d. at Leeds, England, Oct. 7, 1878. English abolitionist, who first opposed slavery in the British colonies and later went to the U.S., where he organized several antislavery groups. He was associated (1834) with W. L. Garrison and J. G. Whittier in the U.S. in the establishment of the American Anti-Slavery Society. Publicly censured by Andrew Jackson, he found his life endangered and fled. He was warmly received in Scotland, and later returned (1851) to the U.S. He served (1847-52) as a member of Parliament.

Thomson, George Julius Poulett. Original name of Scrope, George Julius Poulett.

Thompson, Jacob. b. in Caswell County, N.C., May 15, 1810; d. at Memphis, Tenn., March 24, 1885. American politician, U.S. secretary of the interior (1867-61) under Buchanan. He was a member of Congress from Mississippi (1839-51), governor of Mississippi (1862-64), and a Confederate agent in Canada.

Thompson, James Maurice. [Also, Maurice Thompson.] b. at Fairfield, Ind., Sept. 9, 1844; d. at Crawfordsville, Ind., Feb. 15, 1901. American poet and critic. In his youth he lived in Georgia. He served in the Confederate army, was a member of the Indiana legislature in 1879 and state geologist of Indiana (1885-88), and for some years was literary editor of the New York Independent. Author of Hoosier Mosaics (1875), The Witchery of Archery (1878), Byways and Bird Notes (1885), A Tallahassee Girl (1887), The Story of Louisiana (1888), The King of Honey Island (1893), and Alice of Old Vincennes (1900).

Thompson, John. b. at Partridgefield (now Peru), Mass., Nov. 2, 1802; d. April 19, 1891. American broker, banker, and publisher. He established (1833) a brokerage office at New York, where he founded (1842) Thompson's Bank Note and Commercial Reporter and formed (1863) the First National Bank, of which he was president until 1877. He was later president (1884 et seq.) of the Chase National Bank, which he had helped found in 1877.

Thompson, John Reuben. b. at Richmond, Va., Oct. 23, 1823; d. at New York, April 30, 1873. American poet and editor. He practiced law at Richmond, was owner (1847-53) and editor (1847-60) of The Southern Literary Messenger, and literary editor (1867-73) of the New York Evening Post. His poetry, which evokes the traditions of his native state, first appeared in collected form as Poems (1920).

Thompson, Sir John Sparrow David. b. at Halifax, Nova Scotia, Nov. 10, 1844; d. at Windsor Castle, England, Dec. 13, 1894. Canadian statesman. He entered the Nova Scotia legislature in 1877, was elected to the Canadian parliament in 1885, 1887, and 1891, was appointed minister of justice in 1885, and became premier of Canada in 1892. In 1887 he was legal adviser to the British plenipotentiaries on the Fisheries Arbitration Commission at Washington. In 1893 he was a British arbitrator on the Bering Sea Commission at Paris.

Thompson, John Taliaferro. b. at Newport, Ky., Dec. 31, 1860; d. June 21, 1940. American army engineering officer, inventor of firearms and airplane improvements. He directed (1908-14) the ordnance department war plans for the U.S. War Department, and supervised (1917-18) the design and manufacture of all small arms for the U.S. He was coinventor (with J. N. Blish) of the Thompson submachine gun (popularly known as the Tommy gun).

Thompson, Joseph Osgood. b. at Weymouth, Mass., July 29, 1863—. American physicist. He was associate professor (1894-1918) and professor (1918-28) of physics at Amherst. He formulated the law of elastic lengthening in metals.

Thompson, Joseph Parrish. b. at Philadelphia, Aug. 7, 1819; d. at Berlin, Sept. 20, 1879. American Congregational clergyman, theological writer, and Egyptologist. He was pastor (1845-71) of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, and one of the founders of the New Englander and of the Independent.

Thompson, Launt. b. in Queen's County (now County Laoighis), Ireland, 1833; d. at Middletown, N.Y., Sept. 26, 1894. American sculptor.

Thompson, Mortimer Neal. See Thomson or Thompson, Mortimer Neal.

Thompson, Richard Wigginton. b. in Culpeper County, Va., June 9, 1809; d. at Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 9, 1900. American politician. U.S. secretary of the navy (1877-81) under Hayes. He was a Whig member of Congress from Indiana (1841-43 and 1847-49).

Thompson, Robert Ellis. b. near Lurgan, Ireland, April 5, 1844; d. at Philadelphia, Oct. 19, 1924. American educator, editor, and economist. He was the first editor of the American Supplement to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Thompson, Silvanus Phillips. b. at York, England, June 19, 1851; d. June 12, 1916. English physicist, principal and professor of physics in the City and Guilds Technical College, Finsbury, from 1885. He published Elementary Lessons in Electricity and Magnetism (1881), Dynamo-electric Machinery (1885), Light, Visible and Invisible (1897), Michael Faraday (1898), Design of Dynamos (1903), and others.

Thompson, Smith. b. at Stanford, N.Y., Jan. 17, 1768; d. at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Dec. 18, 1843. American jurist and politician. U.S. secretary of the navy (1818-23) under Monroe. He was chief justice of the Supreme Court of New York (1814-18), and associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1823-43).

Thompson, Sylvia. b. Sept. 4, 1902—. English novelist and lecturer. Author of The Rough Crossing (1918), A Lady in Green Gloves (1924), The Hounds of Spring (1925), The Battle of the Horizons (1928), Chariot Wheels (1929), Winter Comedy (1931), American title, Portrait by Caroline, Summer's Night (1932), Helena (1933), American title, Unfinished Symphony, Breakfast in Bed (1934), Golden Arrow (1935), A Silver Rattle (1935), Third Act in Venice (1936), Recapture the Moon (1937), The Adventure of Christopher Columbin (1939), and The Gulls Fly Inland (1941).

Thompson, Thomas Perronet (or Peronnet). b. at Hull, England, March 15, 1783; d. Sept. 6, 1869. English politician and mathematician.

Thompson, Waddy. b. at Pickensville, S.C., Sept. 8, 1798; d. at Tallahassee, Fla., Nov. 23, 1868. American politician. He was Whig member of Congress from South Carolina (1835-41), and U.S. minister to Mexico (1842-44). He wrote Recollections of Mexico (1846).

Thompson, William Boyce. b. at Virginia City, Mont., May 13, 1869; d. June 27, 1930. American mining promoter. The developer of Western copper properties, he subsequently acquired an interest in Bethlehem Steel. He went (1917) to Russia as business manager and later head of the American Red Cross mission, made an attempt to obtain U.S. aid for the Kerensky government, and after the latter's fall supported Allied recognition and aid of the Soviet government. He founded (1919) the Farm and Research Corporation at Yonkers, N.Y. (renamed in 1923 the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research) and organized the Boyce Thompson Southwestern Arboretum in Arizona.

Thompson, William Hale. b. at Boston, May 14, 1869; d. at Chicago, March 18, 1944. American politician. He entered politics in 1900, serving one term as an alderman (1900-02) and one as county commissioner of Cook County (1902-04), before becoming mayor of Chicago in 1915, serving two terms at that time, until 1923. After one term out of office, he was reelected in 1927, serving until 1931. He relied for power on a highly efficient political machine, and perhaps his only notable achievement as mayor was in the improvement of the city's parks. When he bid for reelection in 1927 he made an issue (for a variety of political reasons, it is supposed) of an alleged trend toward the revision of textbooks used in the teaching of American history at Chicago and other cities in the direction of excusing the policies of the British government which led to the American Revolution, and denigrating some of the patriot leaders of that time. Not content with adducing the facts, Mayor Thompson pulled out all the stops of patriotism, representing the revision of textbooks as a new British invasion under King George V, whom he promised to toss out of Chicago as George III had been tossed out of the early Republic. These tactics aroused a good deal of international amusement and some resentment, but they unquestionably helped Thompson's return to the city hall. After 1931, however, his hold on public favor declined; he was defeated when he ran for the governorship of Illinois in 1936, and thereafter played no influential role in politics.

Thompson River. River in British Columbia, Canada, rising in the mountains in the E central part of the province and flowing SW to join the Fraser near Lytton. It is famous for its beauty and its game fish. Much of the Canadian National Railway line to Vancouver runs along the river. Length, 304 mi.

Thompsonville (tomp'son.vil, tom'-). Unincorporated community in N Connecticut, in Hartford County, in Enfield town: carpet factories, 9,633 (1950).

Thompsonville. Former name of Sioux City, Iowa.

Thomsen (tôm'sen), Julius. [Full name, Hans Peter Jørgen Julius Thomsen.] b. at Copenhagen, Feb. 16, 1826; d. there, Feb. 13, 1909. Danish chemist, professor (1866-91) at the University of Copenhagen. He was especially noted for his studies in thermochemistry. His works include Thermochemische Untersuchungen (4 vols., 1882-86).

Thomson (tom'son). City in E Georgia, county seat of McDuffie County: manufactures of textiles and boxes. 3,489 (1950).

Thomson, Sir Basil Home. b. April 21, 1861; d. March 26, 1939. English colonial administrator, police commissioner, and author. After being called to the bar, he entered the colonial service, holding posts in Fiji, Tonga, and British New Guinea, and acting as prime minister of Tonga. He was governor of the prisons at Northampton, Cardiff, Dartmoor, and Wormwood Scrubs. He served as secretary (1908-13) to the prison commission, and as assistant commissioner (1913 et seq.) of the London metropolitan police. As director of the special inquiries branch at Scotland Yard he was responsible for locating and investigating enemy agents and radical agitators. Author of Diversions of a Prime Minister (1894), South Sea Yarns (1894), Discovery of the Solomon Islands (1901), Savage Island (1902), Story of Dartmoor Prison (1907), The Prisons (1908), The Skene Papers (1909), Queer People (1922), Mr. Pepper, Investigator (1925), The Allied Secret Service in Greece (1931), and The Story of Scotland Yard (1935). His Reminiscences appeared in 1921.

Thomson (tôn.sôn). César. b. at Liège, Belgium, March 18, 1857; d. 1931. Belgian violinist.

Thomson (tom'son), Charles Edward Poulett. [Title, Baron Sydenham.] b. at Wimbledon, Surrey, England, Sept. 13, 1799; d. at Kingston-on-Thames, England, Sept. 4, 1841. English politician and economist, noted for his advocacy of free trade and for his efficient administration as governor general of Canada. He was a member of Parliament (1826), and vice-president (1830) and president (1834) of the Board of Trade.

Thomson, Sir Charles Wyville. b. at Bonydsie, Linlithgowshire, Scotland, March 5, 1830; d. at Edinburgh, March 10, 1882. Scottish biologist. He lectured on botany at Aberdeen (1850-53), and was professor of natural history at Cork, Belfast, and Edinburgh. With W. B. Carpenter, he conducted the deep-sea dredging expeditions in the warships Lightning and Porcupine (1868-69). He is best known as the director of the scientific staff of the important Challenger expedition for deep-sea exploration (1872-76). In 1877 he published The Voyage of the Challenger, descriptive of its general results.

Thomson, Christopher Birdwood. [Title, Baron Thomson of Cardington (kârd'ing-ton).] b. at Nasik, India, 1875; killed near Beauvais, France, Oct. 5, 1930. English soldier and politician. He served (1899-1902) in the Boer War, was military attaché (1915-17) at Bucharest, and served (1919) in Palestine. As secretary of state for air (1924) in the first Labour government he encouraged governmental plans for air-power development. He was killed in the crash of the dirigible R-101.

Thomson, Elihu. b. at Manchester, England, March 29, 1853; d. March 13, 1937. American electrical engineer and inventor, electrician (1880 et seq.) of the Thomson-Houston and General Electric companies. His researches and inventions covered a wide range in electricity and electrical engineering; he invented electric welding, a three-phase alternating-current dynamo, a wattmeter, a cream separator, and other devices.

Thomson, George Paget. b. at Cambridge, England, 1892—. English physicist; son of Sir Joseph John Thomson. He is noted for discovering simultaneously with, but independently of, Clinton Joseph Davisson the diffraction properties of electrons, for which they shared (1937) the Nobel prize in physics. He headed (1940-41) the first British Committee on Atomic Energy. He served as professor (1922-30) of natural philosophy at the University of Aberdeen and professor (1930 et seq.) of physics at the Imperial College of Science. Author of Applied Aerodynamics (1919), The Atom (1930), and Wave Mechanics of the Free Electron (1930).

Thomson, Hugh. b. at Coleraine, Ireland, June 1, 1860; d. at Wandsworth Common, London, May 7, 1920. English illustrator who was very popular between 1900 and 1920. He contributed to the English Illustrated Magazine; later he illustrated numerous books, including Sense and Sensibility, Henry Esmond, Silas Marner, As You Like It, Quality Street, The Admirable Crichton, and The Scarlet Letter.

Thomson, James. b. at Ednam, Roxburghshire, Scotland, Sept. 11, 1700; d. near Richmond, England, Aug. 27, 1748. British poet. He was educated at Edinburgh, and studied for the church, was private tutor for a short time, and held several sinecure offices. He wrote The Seasons (Winter, 1726; Summer, 1727; Spring, 1728; Autumn, 1730), generally held to be the first considerable treatment of nature in the manner of the later Romantic School as opposed to the personifying methods of the classical group. He also wrote The Castle of Indolence (1748), in Spenserian stanzas and acclaimed by critics not only as Thomson's best work, but as the best use of the stanza since Spenser, and Ode to the Memory of Sir Isaac Newton (1727), Liberty (1734-36), and the plays Sophonisba (1730), containing the famous line which killed the piece after the critics had burlesqued it sufficiently, "O Sophonisba, Sophonisba O," parodied by everyone as "O Jemmy Thomson, Jemmy Thomson O" and Agamemnon (1738), the masque Alfred, in conjunction with David Mallet (1740), which contains the song "Rule Britannia," claimed by Mallet but usually ascribed to Thomson, and Tancred and Sigismunda (1745). Thomson's popularity has waned, but it is said that at one time every home had at least three books: the Bible, Pilgrim's Progress, and The Seasons.

Thomson, James. [Pseudonym: B. V., i.e., Bysshe Vanolis (from Shelley's middle name and an anagram of Novalis); called the "Poet of Despair."] b. at Port Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 23, 1834; d. at London, June 3, 1882. Scottish poet, known as "the poet of despair." He was an army school teacher in Ireland when he fell in love, but the death of his sweetheart in 1853 drove him into a deep pessimism, unrelieved by recourse to narcotics and drink. He became a lawyer's clerk in 1862, later came to America as a mining agent, was a war correspondent in Spain, and during the last years of his life worked as a journalist. He is best known as the author of The City of Dreadful Night (1874, 1880), one of the most impressive poems in English in its sustained note of melancholy. He also wrote Vane's Story, A Voice from the Nile (1884), and Shelley, a Poem (1885).

Thomson, John Arthur. b. in East Lothian, Scotland, 1861; d. Feb. 12, 1933. Scottish biologist. Regius professor of natural history (1899-1930) at Aberdeen, he attempted to popularize biology and to demonstrate a correlation between religion and science in his lectures and writings. His works include What Is Man? (1923) and Science and Religion (1925). He edited The Outline of Science (4 vols., 1922).

Thomson, Sir Joseph John. b. near Manchester, England, Dec. 18, 1856; d. at Cambridge, Aug. 30, 1940. English physicist and mathematician; father of George Paget Thomson. He was Cavendish professor of experimental physics in the University of Cambridge (1884-1918), and professor of physics at the Royal Institution, London (1905-18). He served as master (1918 et seq.) of Trinity College at Cambridge. Thomson's experiments in the conduction of electricity through rarefied gases led to his discovery of the electron, a discovery underlying the conception of the basically electrical nature of the universe and the electron theory of valency; he made other important discoveries in ballistics, radioactivity, and other physical fields. He published The Motion of Vortex-Rings (1883), The Applications of Dynamics to Physics and Chemistry (1888), Recent Researches in Electricity and Magnetism (1893), Elements of the Mathematical Theory of Electricity and Magnetism (1895), The Discharge of Electricity through Gases (1898), Conduction of Electricity through Gases (1903), Electricity and Matter (1904), and The Electron in Chemistry (1923). He was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1906.

Thomson or Thompson, Mortimer Neal. [Pseudonym. Q. K. Philander Doesticks, P. B.] b. at Riga, N.Y., Sept. 2, 1831; d. June 25, 1875. American humorist and journalist. The originator of the comic figure "Doesticks," whose popularity was launched when he contributed letters (later published as Doesticks, What He Says, 1855) to Detroit and New York newspapers, he became (1855) a staff member of the New York Tribune, edited (1858) the New York Picayune, and was an editor (1873-75) of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly. His works include The History and Records of the Elephant Club (1856), Nothing to Say (1857), The Witches of New York (1859), and such parodies as Plu-ri-bus-lah, a Song That's-by-No-Author (1856), a burlesque of Longfellow's Hiwatha, and The Lady of the Lake (1860), which parodied the work by Sir Walter Scott.

Thomson, Virgil. b. at Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 25, 1896—. American composer and music critic. After studying piano, voice, the organ, composition, and conducting at Harvard University and elsewhere in the U.S., he went to France, where one of his teachers was Nadia Boulanger. During a later stay at Paris (1925-32), he was much influenced by the group of French composers known as "the Six," and especially by Erik Satie, toward a simplification of his style, which in his earlier years had leaned heavily toward dissonance. Many of Thomson's songs were composed to French poems, and his orchestral work, with tenor, Oraison Funèbre (1930) is a setting of a sermon by Bossuet. His early career was aided by receipt of fellowships from Harvard, from the École Normale de Paris, and from the Juilliard School of Music. In 1934 the production at Hartford, Conn., under the auspices of the Friends and Enemies of Modern Music, with an all-Negro cast, of his Four Saints in Three Acts, an opera with libretto by Gertrude Stein, won wide acclaim. The opera had many performances at that time and in the years following, at New York, Chicago, and other cities, and was revived in 1952. Thomson often took the podium as guest conductor of leading orchestras at New York, Boston, Chicago, London, and Paris, and after a further period abroad, mostly at Paris, he became in 1940 music critic of the New York Herald Tribune. His own numerous works include two symphonies; notable orchestral suites such as The Plough That Broke the Plains (1936) and The River (1937), both written to accompany documentary motion pictures; numerous choral works, one of the best known being a setting of Countee Cullen's Medea Chorus; much chamber music, many songs, sonatas for piano, violin, and other instruments, ballets, and compositions for the organ. He won the 1949 Pulitzer prize in music for his accompanying score to the documentary motion picture Louisiana Story.

Thomson, William. b. in Cumberland, England, Feb. 11, 1819; d. Dec. 25, 1890. English prelate and author, archbishop of York (1862-90). He wrote Outline of the Necessary Laws of Thought (1842), and theological works.

Thomson, William. See Kelvin, 1st Baron.

Thomson, William Mitchell. See Selsdon, 1st Baron.

Thonga (thông-gi). See Tonga.

Thonon-les-Bains (tôn.nô.lê.bân). Town in SE France, in the department of Haute-Savoie, situated on the S shore of the Lake of Geneva, NE of Geneva. It is a health resort, with thermal springs, and a tourist center in the French Alps. The Church of Notre-Dame-de-Compagnon dates from the 17th century. 13,181 (1946).

Thor (thor, tór). [German, Donar; Icelandic, Thorr.] In Old Norse mythology, the god of thunder. He was the son of Odin, the supreme god. He was the champion of the gods, the friend of mankind, and the enemy of the giants. He always carried a heavy hammer, called the Crusher, which returned to his hand of itself; and he possessed a girdle which had the virtue of renewing his strength. Thursday is named for him (Thor's day).

Thorbecke (tór'bek'e), Jan Rudolph. b. at Zwolle, Netherlands, Jan. 15, 1798; d. at The Hague, Netherlands, June 4, 1872. Dutch liberal statesman. He was premier (1849-53), 1862-66, 1871-72).

Thorborg (tór'börg'), Kerstin. b. at Venjam, in Dalecarlia, Sweden, May 19, 1906—. Swedish contralto. She started her career with the Royal Opera, Stockholm, first appeared (May, 1936) at Covent Garden, London, in Wagner's Ring cycle, and made her American debut (Dec. 21, 1936) at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, as Fricka in Die Walküre.

Thoreau (thō.rō, thōr'f), Henry David. [Original name, David Henry Thoreau.] b. at Concord, Mass., July 12, 1817; d. there, May 6, 1862. American writer. He was graduated from Harvard in 1837, taught school at Concord from 1838 to 1841, and lived in the home of Ralph Waldo Emerson for two brief periods. He became a member of the Transcendental Club and was an associate of transcendentalists including Margaret Fuller, Frederic Henry Hedge, James Greeman Clarke, Amos Bronson Alcott, and George Ripley. For a year (May, 1843, et seq.) he lived on Staten Island, where he was a tutor to the children of William Emerson. He contributed to The Dial, the Boston Miscellany, Putnam's Magazine, and other publications. From July 4, 1845, to Sept. 6, 1847, he lived alone in a small house which he built with his own hands on the northwest shore of Walden Pond, Concord. He was arrested (1843) for refusing to pay a poll tax and was jailed for one night. The account of his imprisonment is set forth in his essay Resistance to Civil Government (1849; also known as Civil Disobedience and On the Duty of Civil Disobedience). In 1847 he returned to his father's house at Concord, where he lived for the remainder of his life, except for journeys to Cape Cod, Maine, Canada and other places. His essay "Life without Principle" was published in the Atlantic Monthly in 1863. Among his works are A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers (1849), Walden, or Life in the Woods (1854), Excursions (1863; with a memoir by R. W. Emerson), The Maine Woods (1864), Cape Cod (1865), Letters to Various Persons (1865; with a notice by Emerson), A Yankee in Canada (1866), Poems of Nature (1895; edited by H. S. Salt and F. B. Sanborn), and his Journal (14 vols., 1906). His collected writings were published (1906) in 20 volumes.

Point of View and Mode of Life. Having no taste for the methods people commonly use to support themselves, Thoreau devoted most of his life to daily walks in the woods and fields of Concord and boat excursions on the local rivers. He made an exhaustive daily study of the local natural phenomena and recorded them at great length with poetic appreciation in his Journal. Most of the material in his books derives from his Journal, which is the backbone of his life's work, done for his private satisfaction and written consistently on a high philosophical, aesthetic, and semiscientific level. Meanwhile, he supported himself by surveying, by making pencils in his father's shop, and by other forms of skilled labor, and he prided himself on his ability to earn a satisfactory living without yielding up his independence as a walker, riverman, thinker, poet, student of nature, and occasional lecturer. He once described himself as "a mystic, transcendentalist and natural philosopher." Since he was in open rebellion against the economy of the times and most social customs, he was regarded as a misanthrope by local people. There was a large measure of truth in the local attitude, for Thoreau, perhaps in self-defense, consciously set himself against and repudiated civil habits and institutions. Just before Walden was published in 1854, and for the remaining eight years of his life, he took an active interest in the antislavery movement, harbored runaway slaves, spoke at mass meetings, and wrote some of his time's bitterest condemnations of slavery as a legal property device, particularly as it was reflected in the official Massachusetts policy. He wrote and spoke passionately in defense of John Brown. His horror and hatred of slavery developed logically out of his love of the freedom of nature and his private war against the tyranny of property and the insipidity of social customs based on property.

Thorenbürg (tõ'ren.bürk). German name of Turda.

Thorez (to'rez), Maurice. b. at Noyelle-Godault, Pas-de-Calais, France, April 29, 1900—. French political leader, head of the French Communist Party since 1930. A miner by occupation, he joined the Communist Party in 1920, becoming a member of its central committee in 1924, of its political bureau in 1925, and its general secretary in 1930. He was elected (1928, 1935) to the executive committee of the Communist International. He was a member (1929-39) of the Chamber of Deputies, the Consultative Assembly (November, 1944), both constituent assemblies (1945-46), and the National Assembly (1946). He held cabinet posts under the Fourth Republic, as minister of state (November, 1945-January, 1946) under Charles de Gaulle, and as vice-premier (January, 1946-May, 1947). During World War II, he was mobilized but left his unit and was sentenced to death in absentia for desertion (1939); he stayed at Moscow (1939-44) before being amnestied (October, 1944) and returning to France (November, 1944).

Thorfinn Karlsefni (thor'fin kãrl'sev.ni). fl. at the beginning of the 11th century. Scandinavian navigator, said to have explored the coast of New England (c1004-96), and to have attempted a settlement in what is now SE Massachusetts.

Thorgilsson (thor'gils.sõn), Ari Frodi. See Ari Frodi Thorgilsson.

Thorhout (thor'hout). See Torhout.

Thorn (tõrn). German name of Torun.

Thorn, Conference of. Fruitless congress held (1645) at Thorn (now Toruń) between representatives of the Roman Catholic, Lutheran, and Reformed churches in Poland.

Thornaby-on-Tees (thor'nã.bi.on.tēz'). [Also, Thornaby.] Municipal borough in NE England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Tees opposite Stockton-on-Tees, ab. 236 mi. N of London by rail. 23,413 (1951).

Thornbury (thor'n'bēr.i), George Walter. b. at London, 1828; d. there, June 11, 1876. English writer. Among his works are Lays and Legends (1851), The Buccaneers, or Monarchs of the Main (1855), Shakespeare's England (1856), Art and Nature at Home and Abroad (1856), Songs of the Cavaliers and Roundheads (1857), Every Man His Own Trumpeter (1858), Life in Spain (1860), British Artists from Hogarth to Turner (1861), and Life of J. M. W. Turner (1861).

Thorndike (thor'n'dik), Ashley Horace. b. at Houlton, Me., Dec. 26, 1871; d. April 17, 1933. American educator and scholar; brother of Edward Lee Thorndike and Lynn Thorndike. He was an instructor and associate professor of English (1898-1902) at Western Reserve University, professor of English at Northwestern University from 1902 to 1906, and held a similar post (1906-33) at Columbia University. An authority in the field of Elizabethan drama, he was the author of The Influence of Beaumont and Fletcher on Shakespeare (1901), Tragedy (1908), Shakespeare's Theatre (1916), Shakespeare in America (1927), and English Comedy (1929). With William A. Neilson, he was cocditor (1913-15) of The Tudor Shakespeare, and collaborated with him on The Facts About Shakespeare (1913).

Thorndike, Edward Lee. b. at Williamsburg, Mass. Aug. 31, 1874; d. at Montrose, N.Y., Aug. 9, 1949. American psychologist noted for his contributions to educational psychology; brother of Ashley H. Thorndike and Lynn Thorndike. He was graduated (B.A., 1895) from Wesleyan University (Connecticut) and (B.A., 1896; M.A., 1897) from Harvard where he studied psychology under William James and became interested in the ability of animals to learn. Transferring to Columbia University he continued his studies in animal intelligence under James McKeen Cattell and received his doctorate (1898). His thesis, Animal Intelligence, published in 1898 and republished in 1911 with other related studies, was the first scientific study of animal intelligence and learning, and marked the beginning of animal psychology. For a year (1898-99), Thorndike was instructor in education and teaching at Western Reserve University. In 1899, he began his lifelong association with Teachers College at Columbia (instructor of genetic psychology, 1899-1901; adjunct professor of educational psychology, 1901-04; professor of educational psychology, 1904-40; director, division of psychology, Institute of Educational Research). When he became an instructor at Teachers College Thorndike applied the techniques of his studies of animals to children and young people and his interests shifted toward human subjects. In 1901, with Robert S. Woodworth, he published an important paper on the transfer of training, The Influence of Improvement in One Mental Function Upon the Efficiency of Other Functions, which led to a critical reappraisal of the curriculum and the demolition of the faculty theory and the theory of formal discipline. In 1903 the first edition of his Educational Psychology appeared (republished 1937, 1914) in which he developed his laws of learning, "the laws of readiness and effect," which stressed the effect of chance associations when accompanied by success or failure and provided a basis for a progressive education movement. He produced works reporting on his research on the nature of man's intelligence and his ability to learn throughout most of his productive life including The Original Nature of Man (1913) showing the influence of Galton, The Learning Process (1913), Adult Learning (1928), and Fundamentals of Learning (1932). Interested in individual differences and their causes, he set forth standards for measuring them quantitatively in An Introduction to the Theory of Mental and Social Measurements (1904). He prepared many tests and measurements that were widely used not only in the school room but in the business world, including intelligence tests, vocabulary tests, handwriting scales, and achievement tests. During World War I he was chairman of the Committee on Classification of Personnel in the Army. His use of statistical methods in psychology and education led, in part, to the spread of surveys of city, county, and state educational systems which resulted in improved school administration especially with regard to the classification and promotion of children and the differentiation of courses of study according to the ability of the child. The Measurement of Intelligence (1926) brought to a close his major research in this area of his interest. For a number of years Thorndike was concerned with the improvement of school tests in which the new principles of learning and new methods of teaching were concretely set forth in a series of arithmetics, spellers, and dictionaries. In his dictionaries (Thorndike-Century Junior, 1935, 1942; Thorndike-Century Senior, 1941; Thorndike-Century Beginning, 1945) Thorndike developed a new pattern of making school dictionaries with readable type, understandable definitions, and pronunciations based on modern phonetic principles. His earlier researches in vocabulary (The Teacher's Word Book, 1921; A Teacher's Word Book of 20,000 Words, 1931; The Teacher's Word Book of 30,000 Words (with Irving Lorge), 1944; A Semantic Count of English Words (with Irving Lorge), 1938) laid the scientific basis for his improvement in methods of selecting and defining words and in arranging definitions. In later years, Thorndike studied the differences of communities in the same way that psychology studies the differences of individuals in Your City (1939), and stated the facts of psychology for students of economics, political science, and law in Human Nature and the Social Order (1940). In 1942 he delivered the William James Lectures at Harvard which were published as Man and His Works (1943). His last book, Selected Writings from a Connectionist's Psychology was published in 1949. Thorndike was an outstanding exponent of the value of quantitative measurement in the study of human affairs; to him qualitative differences were merely quantitative differences that man had not yet learned to measure.

Thorndike, Lynn. b. at Lynn, Mass., July 24, 1882—. American historian; brother of Ashley Horace Thorndike and Edward Lee Thorndike. He was a teacher at Western Reserve (1903-24) and professor at Columbia (1924 et seq.). Author of The Place of Magic in the Intellectual History of Europe (1905), The History of Medieval Europe (1917), A Short History of Civilization (1926), University Records and Life in the Middle Ages (1944), and other books. He published the monumental A History of Magic and Experimental Science (6 vols., 1923-41).

Thorndike, Dame Sybil. b. at Gainsborough, England, 1882—. English actress. She appeared in Shakespearean plays in the U.S. (1903-07) and at the Old Vic, London (1914-18), and afterward added roles from other dramatists to her repertoire.

Thornhill (thörn'hil). Two wards (Thornhill North and Thornhill South) of Dewsbury county borough, in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated in the SW quarter of Dewsbury, ab. 184 mi. N of London by rail. 11,040 (1931).

Thornhill, Sir James. b. at Melcombe Regis, Dorsetshire, England, 1675; d. at Thornhill, near Weymouth, Dorsetshire, May 13, 1734. English painter. When George I became king he appointed Thornhill court painter. He executed the decorations of part of the cupola of Saint Paul's, the ceiling and walls of the hall of Greenwich Hospital, the great hall at Blenheim Palace, parts of Hampton Court, and many chapels in Oxford. He was knighted by George I in 1715. Hogarth was his most distinguished pupil and his son-in-law.

Thornhill, Sir William. Character in Oliver Goldsmith's The Vicar of Wakefield. He assumes the name of Mr. Burchell, and is the good genius of the story.

Thornton (thörn'ton), Sir Edward. b. at London, July 13, 1817; d. there, Jan. 26, 1906. English diplomat. He was minister to Brazil (1865-67) and to the U.S. (1867-81), serving as a member of the joint high commission of 1871 to settle the U.S.-Canadian disputes over boundary and other questions. He served as ambassador to Russia (1881-84) and to Turkey (1884-87).

Thornton, Henry Worth. b. at Logansport, Ind., Nov. 6, 1871; d. at New York, March 14, 1935. Railroad executive. Employed (1894-1914) by the Pennsylvania Railroad, he served (1914-18) in the direction of British and French railroads during World War I. Manager (until 1922) of England's Great Eastern Railway, he served (1922-32) as president and chairman of the board of directors in organizing and developing Canadian National Railways.

Thornton, James. b. at Liverpool, England, 1862; d. at Astoria, N.Y., July 27, 1938. American vaudeville actor and song writer. He appeared in Oscar's New York Theatre, Willie's Victoria, Forrest Theatre, and other vaudeville houses until 1934. He composed such popular songs as When You Were Sweet Sixteen, My Sweetheart's Man in the Moon, She May Have Seen Better Days, The Streets of Cairo, and The Irish Jubilee.

Thornton, John Wingate. b. at Saco, Me., Aug. 12, 1818; d. at Scarborough, Me., June 6, 1878. American historian. He practiced law at Boston, and devoted himself to antiquarian pursuits. He helped found the New England Historic Genealogical Society (1844) and the Prince Society (1858).

Thornton, Matthew. b. in Ireland, c1714; d. at Newburyport, Mass., June 24, 1803. American physician and Revolutionary patriot, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Brought (c1718) to America, he began (c1740) the practice of medicine at Londonderry, N.H., embraced the insurgent cause in state politics, was elected (1775) president of the provincial congress, and became (1776) a member of the Continental Congress. Thornton Cleveleys (klév'lez). [Also, Thornton.] Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, situated on the Fylde coast (on the Irish Sea) between Blackpool and Fleetwood, ab. 225 mi. NW of London by rail. It is a residential district and seaside resort. 15,437 (1951).

Thornycroft (thörn'ikróft), Mary Francis. b. in England, 1814; d. Feb. 1, 1895. English sculptor.

Thornycroft, William Hamo. b. at London, March 9, 1850; d. at Oxford, England, Dec. 18, 1925. English sculptor; son of Mary Francis Thornycroft. Among his works are Artemis (1880), at Eaton Hall, the seat of the Duke of Westminster; Teucer (1881), in the South Kensington Museum; Hypatia (1884), in the Grosvenor Gallery; a statue of General Gordon (1885), in Trafalgar Square; an equestrian statue of Edward I (1885); Science (1891), a high relief; a statue of John Bright (1892), at Rochdale; The Mower, in the Liverpool Gallery; and the Cromwell statue at Westminster.

Thóróddsen (thór'ót'sen), Thórvaldur. b. on the island of Flatey, Iceland, June 6, 1855; d. at Copenhagen, Sept. 28, 1921. Icelandic geographer and geologist. An explorer of Iceland, he described it in many books, such as Landfræðisaga Islands (1892-1904), Geological Map of Iceland (1901), Iceland (1905-06), and Die Geschichte des isländischen Volkes (1925).

Thorold (thur'old). Town in SE Ontario, Canada, on the Welland Canal ab. 4 mi. SE of St. Catharines: site of large locks where the canal mounts the Niagara escarpment. There are pulp and paper, abrasive, machinery, and metalworking industries. 6,397 (1951).

Thorpe (thórp), Benjamin. b. 1782; d. at Chiswick, England, July 19, 1870. English philologist. He edited various Old English works, including Caedmon's Paraphrase (1832), Analecta Anglo-Saxonica (1834), Ancient Laws and Institutes of England (1840), gospels, homilies, Beowulf (1855), Anglo-Saxon Chronicle (1861), and Diplomatarium Anglicum Aevi Saxonici (1865).

Thorpe, Dr. Lossie's father, in William De Morgan's novel Joseph Vance (1906).

Thorpe, James. [Indian name, Bright Path.] b. near Prague, in Indian Territory (now in Oklahoma), May 28, 1888; d. at Lomita, a suburb of Los Angeles, Calif., March 28, 1953. American athlete. His father was half Indian and half Irish; his mother was three fourths Indian and one fourth French. Admitted to the Carlisle Indian School at Carlisle, Pa., in 1907, he attracted by his natural athletic aptitudes the interest of Carlisle coach Glenn L. ("Pop") Warner, who undertook to develop him as a field and track contestant and a football player. In 1908 he was a national sensation in football. He did not return to college in 1909 or 1910, but worked on farms in North Carolina and, on the side, played semiprofessional baseball. Nineteen-eleven, however, found him back at Carlisle, being trained by Warner with an eye to the 1912 Olympic Games. Meanwhile at left halfback he rolled up the points which gave Carlisle victories over Harvard and West Point. Warner pronounced him the greatest football player of all time, and Walter Camp enrolled him on the "All-America Team," as he did again in 1912, after Thorpe had displayed even greater form. During these years Thorpe also engaged in track and field contests, and in basketball, hockey, tennis, and boxing. In the 1912 Olympics at Stockholm the "greatest football player" became, in the words of King Gustav of Sweden, "the greatest athlete in the world," winning both the pentathlon (with four out of five first places) and the decathlon (with a score of 8,412 out of a possible 10,000 points), a feat never achieved by any other man before. But when, in January, 1913, it came to the notice of the Amateur Athletic Union that Thorpe had played semiprofessional baseball, he was stripped of amateur status, his records were expunged, his name was removed from the lists of Olympics winners, and he was constrained to return his trophies. His plea that he had but followed the example of other college athletes who played semiprofessional ball, but retained their amateur standing, failed to move the authorities. In the spring of 1913 Thorpe entered professional baseball as a member of the New York Giants, but it was alleged that he could not hit curved balls, and after passing to several other major and minor teams he retired from baseball in 1919, and in the following year entered professional football, starting with several teams until his final retirement in 1929. He went to Hollywood, acted occasionally in bit parts, and sold the motion-picture rights to his life story. In 1937 he returned to Oklahoma and worked for the revision of what he considered an inequitable treaty between the U.S. and remnants of the Sac and Fox. Subsequently he lectured widely on his own career and on Indian culture; during World War II he served for a time in the merchant marine. In 1950 the Associated Press asked 393 sports writers to name their choices of the greatest football player, and the greatest male athlete, of the first half of the 20th century. By wide margins, Thorpe was their choice in both categories.

Thorpe, Lossie. Heroine of William De Morgan's novel Joseph Vance (1906).

Thorpe, Rose Hartwick. b. at Mishawaka, Ind., July 18, 1850; d. at San Diego, Calif., July 19, 1939. American writer, noted for her poem Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight. Author of Fred's Dark Days (1881), The Year's Best Days (1889), novels, and of Temperance Poems (1887), Sweet Song Stories (1898), and Poetical Works of Rose Hartwick Thorpe (1912).

Thors (törs), Olafur. b. at Borgarnes, Iceland, Jan. 19, 1892—. Icelandic political leader and businessman, premier and foreign minister during World War II. A director (1913-38) of the Kveldulfur fisheries, he was elected (1926) to the Alting (parliament), became (1932) minister of justice and trade, served (1939-42) as minister of communications and trade, and became (1942) premier and minister of foreign affairs. He was a leader (1934 et seq.) of the Independence Party, and served (1950 et seq.) as minister of economic development and fisheries.

Thors, Thor. b. at Reykjavik, Iceland, Nov. 26, 1903—. Icelandic businessman and political leader, minister (1941 et seq.) to the U.S. He was managing director (1927-34) of the Kveldulfur fisheries, headed (1934-40) the Union of Icelandic Fish Producers, and served (1940-41) as consul general at New York.

Thorshavn (törs.hövn'). [Faeroese, Tórshavn.] Town on the island of Strömö, capital and chief port of the Faeroe Islands group, belonging to Denmark. It has a good harbor and fisheries, and is the seat of the Faeroese Løgting (parliament). 4,390 (1945).

Thorvald (tör'völd). Scandinavian navigator, said to have explored the coast of New England (c1003-04).

Thorvaldsen (tör'vålsen), Albert Bertel. [Also, Thorwaldsen (tör'vålsen).] b. at sea, Nov. 19, 1770 (or at Copenhagen, Nov. 15, 1770); d. at Copenhagen, March 24, 1844. Danish sculptor. He gained the first gold medal at the Academy at Copenhagen in 1793, carrying with it three years' residence abroad. He lived mostly at Rome from 1797, except from 1838 to 1841, when he was at Copenhagen. He died suddenly on a visit to his home. Among his works are the colossal Lion of Lucerne (designed by him, executed by his pupils); the bas-reliefs Triumphal Entry of Alexander into Babylon and Night and Morning (his best-known work); statues of Jason, Cammele, Venus, Psyche, the Graces, and other classical subjects; Christ and the Twelve Apostles (Copenhagen); probably his best work; and Preaching of John the Baptist (Copenhagen).

Thorvaldsen Museum. Museum at Copenhagen. Completed in 1848, it is both the mausoleum of the sculptor Albert Bertel Thorvaldsen and a repository of his works. The building, inspired by Greek and Etruscan prototypes, is a long rectangle, preceded by a vestibule, and enclosing a court in the middle of which, on an ivy-covered mound, is the tomb of Thorvaldsen.

Thospitis (thos.pi'tis). Ancient name of Van, Lake.

Thoth (thoth, töt). [Also: Tar, Tehuti, Thot.] In Egyptian mythology, originally a moon god, later the god and inventor of speech and hieroglyphics or letters, of the reckoning of time and measurements, and the god of wisdom. He was the scribe of the gods, and kept the records of the dead in a book, which he read at the time of judgment. The cynocephalous ape and the ibis were sacred to him. He is represented as a human figure, usually with the head of an ibis, and frequently with the moon disk and crescent. In Hellenistic times the Greeks identified him with their Hermes.

Thothmes (thoth'mēz, töt'mes). See Thutmose.

Thou (tö), Jacques Auguste de. [Latinized, Thouaneus.] b. at Paris, Oct. 8, 1553; d. May 7, 1617. French historian and statesman. He was educated for the church, held the offices of master of requests and of président à mortier (presiding justice), and was employed on diplomatic missions. He is credited with negotiating the religious peace and with drafting the Edict of Nantes. He is celebrated for his contemporary history Historiae sui temporis (in Latin, 1604-20). He also wrote Latin poems.

Thouars (twär). Town in W France, in the department of Deux-Sèvres, situated on a rocky plateau ab. 40 mi. NW of Poitiers. It produces textiles, heating apparatus, distillery products, and leatherware. The Church of Saint Médard dates from the 12th-16th centuries. 19,422 (1946).

Thouars, Abel Aubert Dupetit-. See Dupetit-Thouars, Abel Aubert.

Thouars, Louis Marie Aubert Dupetit-. See Dupetit-Thouars, Louis Marie Aubert.

Thoueris (thö.ü.g'ris). See Taur-urt.

Thourout (tö.rö). French name of Torhout.

Thousand and One Days. Series of Persian tales, resembling The Arabian Nights' Entertainments (A Thousand and One Nights).

Thousand and One Nights, A. See Arabian Nights' Entertainments, The.

Thousand Islands. Large group of islands in the St. Lawrence River where it leaves Lake Ontario, in the province of Ontario, Canada, and in New York. There are many summer homes and estates on the rocky, wooded islands, which number about 1,700. Six state parks have been established in the New York portion of the islands; and in Ontario the St. Lawrence Islands National Park has been set aside, including a part of the mainland and 13 islands. An international highway with several bridges, opened in 1938, crosses the St. Lawrence via Wells and Hill islands.

Thousand Islands, Lake of the. Occasional name of the expansion of the St. Lawrence River which contains the Thousand Islands.

Thousand Lakes, Lake of the. See under Saimaa.

Thouvenel (tö.v.nel). Édouard Antoine. b. at Verdun, France, Nov. 11, 1818; d. at Paris, Oct. 19, 1866. French politician and diplomat.

Thrace (thräs). [Latin, Thracia (thrä'sha).] Diocese of the later Roman prefecture of the East. It extended from the Aegean and the Propontis to the lower Danube.

Thrace. [Greek, Thrakī.] Dhiarmismon (district) of NE Greece. It includes the nomoi (departments) of Evros, Xanthé, and Rhodope. In early times it was regarded as the entire region N of Greece proper. As a Roman province it was bounded by the Haemus or Balkan Mountains (separating it from Moesia) on the N, the Euxine (Black Sea) and Bosphorus on the E, the Propontis, Hellespont, and Aegean Sea on the S, and the Nestus or Mesta (separating it from Macedonia) on the W. The principal mountain range is the Rhodope; the principal river, the Maritsa. Greek colonies were planted at Byzantium, on the Chersonesus Thracica (Gallipoli Peninsula), and at Abdera, Perinthus, and elsewhere. The climate was known for its severity, and the inhabitants for their ferocity and barbarity. The affinities of the ancient inhabitants are unknown; they may have been ancestors of the Wallachs. In the 5th century B.C. most of Thrace came under the rule of Teres, king of the Odrysae. It was successively under Macedonian, Roman, Byzantine, and Turkish rule. The wide stretch of country between the lower course of the Danube and the shores of the Aegean and the Propontis was occupied in ancient times by the tribe of the Thracians, which Herodotus regards as the greatest of all peoples next to the Indi. The scanty remains of the Thracian language are enough to establish traces of its Indo-Germic character, but not enough to define its position in the Indo-European family more closely. Certain it is, however, that from hence a large part of Asia Minor received its Indo-Germic population. In the first place, it is known that the Thracians themselves spread eastwards over the strait a considerable distance towards Asia. According to the unanimous opinion of antiquity, again, the Phrygians emigrated from Europe, and were originally connected with the Thracians. Area, ab. 3,315 sq. mi.; pop. 354,816 (1940).

Thracian Bosphorus (thră'shān bos'pō-rus). Ancient name of the Bosphorus.

Thracica (thră'si.kā), Chersonesus. Ancient name of the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Thraetaona (thrē.tā'ō.nā). In the Persian Avesta, a hero who fettered the three-headed primeval dragon or serpent, Azhi Dahaka. He divided his realm among his three sons, giving to Salm the Sairimian, to Tur the Turanian, and to Iraj the Iranian lands.

Thraki (thră'kē). Greek name of Thrace.

Thrale (thrāl), Mrs. [Name commonly used in referring to Hester Lynch Piozzi; maiden name, Salusbury.] b. at Bodville, Caernarvonshire, Wales, Jan. 16, 1741; d. at Clifton, England, May 2, 1821. English writer, a friend of Samuel Johnson. She was well educated in Latin and Greek and the modern languages. In 1763 she married Henry Thrale, a brewer of Southwark. In 1764 she met Dr. Johnson, beginning an intimacy which lasted for 20 years, Johnson living with the Thrales and traveling with them. Her husband died on April 4, 1781, and on July 25, 1784, she married Gabriel Piozzi, an Italian musician. Johnson became angry with her on hearing of the marriage and they were still estranged when he died later in the same year. Her anecdotes of and correspondence with Dr. Johnson are second in interest only to Boswell's Life.

Thrasylbulus (thras.i.bū'lus, thrā.sib'ū.lus). Killed c389 B.C. Athenian commander and statesman. He opposed the oligarchists of Samos in 411 B.C., was the leading commander at the battle of Cynossema in 411, and was banished from Athens by the Thirty Tyrants in 404. He overthrew the Thirty by seizing Phyle and the Piraeus and restored the democracy in 403. He aided Thebes against Sparta in 395, and commanded in the Aegean Sea in 393.

Thrasylus (thras.il'us). Put to death 406 B.C. Athenian commander in the Peloponnesian War. He opposed the oligarchists in 411, was one of the commanders at Cynossema in 411, and was a general at Arginusae in 406 and one of those who were executed for permitting the crews of sunken ships to drown rather than breaking off the pursuit of the enemy to rescue them.

Threadbare Gentry (thred'bār jen'trī), Sir. See under Gentry, Sir Threadbare and Lady.

Threadneedle Street (thred'nē'dl). Prominent commercial street in the City of London which leads out from the Bank of England.

Three Bears. English nursery tale written by Robert Southey (but attributed by him to his Uncle William). It was frequently retold and modified in the 19th century (sometimes with a little girl named Silverhair for heroine) but is also familiar under the title Goldilocks and the Three Bears. The story is that a little girl disobeys her mother and walks into the forest. She comes to a little house which she enters. There she sits in the three kinds of chairs (too hard, too soft, and just right), tastes the three bowls of porridge (too hot, too cold, and just right) and devours the third, tries the three beds, and falls asleep in the smallest one, which belongs to the baby bear. The three bears come home and discover all that she has done. When they find her in the little bed, she wakes up and runs home terrified. One of the features of the story is that it is read to children in three tones of voice, representing the father bear, the mother bear, and the baby bear.

Three Bishopricks. In French and German history, the three bishoprics of Metz, Toul, and Verdun. They were taken by France in 1552.

Three Black Pennys, The. Novel in three parts by Joseph Hergesheimer, published in 1917.

Three Brontës (bron'tēz), The. Biographical study by May Sinclair, published in 1912.

Three Brothers, The. Novel by Edwin Muir, published in 1931.

Three Calenders (kal'en.dērz), The. See Calenders, The Three.

Three Chapters. Edict issued by Justinian, c545 A.D., condemning the writings of Theodore of Mopsuestia, those of Theodoret in defense of Nestorius and against Cyril, and the letter of Ibas to Maris.

Three Chapters. Writings condemned by the edict of the same name issued by Justinian c545 A.D. The edict was intended to reconcile the Monophysites to the church by seeming to imply a partial disapproval of the Council of Chalcedon, which had admitted Theodoret and Ibas to communion.

Three Choirs Festival. See under Hereford, England. "Three Emperors, Battle of the." See under Austerlitz.

Three Forks. A former name of Big Stone Gap.

Three Graces, The. See Graces, The Three.

Three Horatii (hōră'shi.l), The. See Horatii, The Three.

Three Hours after Marriage. Play by Alexander Pope, John Arbuthnot, and John Gay, produced in 1717. It was Colley Cibber's ridicule of this play in his part of Bayes in The Rehearsal which was the occasion of the quarrel between him and Pope.

Three Kingdoms. Period following the dissolution of the Han dynasty when China was again divided. Wei occupied N China from Kansu in the W to Kiangsu in the E; Shu Han occupied SW China; Wu held SE China. The period lasted less than 50 years (220-265 A.D.), but was famous as the time of many of the heroes of later legends.

Three Kings of Cologne (kō.lōn'). See Cologne, Three Kings of.

Three Lives. Collection of stories by Gertrude Stein, published in 1909.

Three Lovers, The. Psychological novel by Frank Swinnerton, published in 1922.

Three Musketeers, The. See Trois Mousquetaires, Les.

Three Points, Cape. Cape in W Africa, on the S coast of the Gold Coast colony. It marks the W limit of the Bight of Benin.

Three-Power Currency Declaration. Financial agreement announced on Sept. 25, 1936, between the U.S., Great Britain, and France. It sought to alleviate the conditions caused by the drastic devaluation of the franc and the dismemberment of the so-called gold bloc. Although without any binding clauses, it pledged its signatories to try to keep their currencies in relationship by exchange funds and removal of seriously restrictive trade barriers. Belgium, the Netherlands, and Switzerland later joined in this declaration.

Three Rivers. City in SW Michigan, in St. Joseph County, on the St. Joseph River ab. 26 mi. SW of Kalamazoo. 6,785 (1950).

Three Rivers. [French, Trois Rivières.] City in Quebec, Canada, county seat of St. Maurice County, situated at the junction of the St. Maurice and St. Lawrence rivers, ab. 68 mi. SW of Quebec. It has manufactures and a large export trade in lumber. It is the site of a large paper mill and a textile mill. Pop. of city, 46,074 (1951); including suburbs, 68,306 (1951).

Three Score and Ten. Novel by Alec Waugh, published in 1929.

Three Sisters. The three Roman Fates or Parcae. The term is also applied to The Three Greek Fates or Moirae, and to The Old Norse Norns.

Three Sisters, The. Novel by May Sinclair, published in 1914.

Three Soldiers. Novel by John Dos Passos, published in 1921.

Three Wives. Novel by Beatrice Kean Seymour, published in 1927.

Throckmorton (throk.mōr'ton), Francis. b. 1554; d. on the gallows at Tyburn, London, July 10, 1584. English Roman Catholic conspirator. He knew several exiled Roman Catholics and became an agent of liaison between them, the incarcerated Mary, Queen of Scots, and Bernardino de Mendoza, the Spanish ambassador at London. His plan for a proposed invasion of England by the exiles was discovered and he was arrested, put on the rack, and, after his confession, executed.

Throckmorton or Throgmorton (throk.mōr'ton), Sir Nicholas. b. in 1515; d. 1571. English politician. He first became prominent during the reign of Edward VI and later supported Lady Jane Grey's party in the plot to seat her on the throne at Edward's death. He was forgiven for this by Mary Tudor, but at the time of Wyatt's rebellion (1534) he was implicated and tried; though acquitted he remained in prison for a time. Under Elizabeth he became a trusted ambassador and was sent several times to France, where he became a personal friend of Mary, Queen of Scots. He made an effort to prevent her marriage to Darnley, and after Darnley's death intrigued for her marriage to Thomas Howard, 4th Duke of Norfolk. This marriage being completely contrary to Elizabeth's policy, he was thereafter suspected of disloyalty; he was arrested in 1569 for his alleged participation in a Roman Catholic plot against the queen but was released. Sir Walter Raleigh married his daughter Elizabeth.

Throgs Neck (thrōgz). [Also, Throg's Neck.] Cape jutting off the coast of the borough of the Bronx, New York City, into Long Island Sound.

Thronðheim or Trondhjem (trōn'yem). Former spellings of Trondheim.

Throop (trōp). Borough in NE Pennsylvania, in Lackawanna County, ab. 3 mi. NE of Scranton. Coal mining is the principal industry. 5,861 (1950).

Throop, Enos Thompson. b. at Johnstown, N.Y., Aug. 21, 1784; d. near Auburn, N.Y., Nov. 1, 1874. American politician. He was member of Congress from New York (1815-16), was elected lieutenant governor of New York in 1828, succeeded Van Buren as governor in March, 1829, was reelected governor in 1830 and served until 1833. He was U.S. chargé d'affaires at Naples (1838-42).

Throtmannia (throt.man'i.a). See under Dortmund.

Through the Looking Glass. Novel by Charles Lutwidge Dodgson (writing under the pseudonym Lewis Carroll), published in 1872. A sequel to Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865), it continues the dream encounters of Alice. In this book she is transported into the world behind the mirror, where she meets with a set of animated chessmen, talks with Humpty Dumpty and Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee, and finds a checkerboard landscape which keeps moving, so that only by running can one stay in the same place. Dodgson's famous nonsense poem, Jabberwocky, occurs in this book. Critics have pointed out that the encounters of the story are plotted as a chess problem.

"Thrums" (thrūnz). See under Kirriemuir.

Thrym (thrīm). [Old Norse, Thrymr (thrūm'ēr).] In Old Norse mythology, the frost giant who stole Thor's hammer. He refused to return it unless he received Freya as a wife. A great battle followed in which all the giants in Thrym's hall were killed.

Thuanus (thō.ā'nus). See Thou, Jacques Auguste de.

Thuban (thō.bān'). The star α Draconis, now of the fourth magnitude only, though 300 years ago it was estimated as of the second. About 2750 B.C. it was the pole star, and at one time was within 10 minutes of the true pole itself.

Thucydides (thū.sid'i.dēz). b. probably 471 B.C.; d. c.401 B.C. Greek historian. He was a native of Athens, belonged to a family which claimed blood relationship with Miltiades and Cimon, is said to have been a pupil of Antiphon of Rhamnus and of Anaxagoras, and possessed an ample fortune, part of which was invested in gold mines in Thrace, opposite Thasos. In 424 he commanded an expedition sent to the assistance of Amphipolis against Brasidas, but failed to prevent the capture of the city, and in consequence went into exile (whether enforced or voluntary is unknown), from which he returned 20 years later, in 403. He was commonly supposed by the ancients to have died a violent death soon after, probably at Athens. He began a History of the Peloponnesian War, which he did not live to finish, the narrative ending in 411, seven years before the end of the war. The Greek text was first printed by Aldus at Venice in 1502.

Thugga (thug.gā). Ancient name of Dougga.

Thugs (thugz). [Also: Phansigars, Thags.] Religious sect long active in India, now extinct. The term Thug or Thag comes from a Sanskrit word meaning "conceal" or "deceive," and Phansigar is translated "strangler." References to the Thugs are found as early as the mid-12th century, but not until about 1830 were the facts about them generally known. This secret brotherhood, evidently at all times during several centuries numbered by the thousands, seems to present an instance of the intermingling of sincere religious belief and self-seeking opportunism. They were bound together in the name of Kali in her character as the goddess of death. In the main they must be thought of as devotees who killed their victims in a spirit of piety, as offerings to their goddess. The number of possible victims in any one locality would be limited; responsibility for local murders could not long be concealed, and they would lead to resistance and retribution; it followed naturally that sacrificial victims must be hunted abroad. Accordingly the Thugs, who were in the main farmers or merchants of good standing, and even included men of high caste, who pursued their respectable vocations throughout most of the year, every fall assembled in bands which might number anywhere from ten to 200, and took to the great highways and to the rivers, in the guise of merchants or of religious ascetics, seeking victims to immolate to their goddess. Here the intrusion of opportunism and cupidity into the realm of piety may be detected by two circumstances: first, that they murdered only travelers who could reasonably be supposed to have money about them, or were visibly possessed of articles of value; second, that a considerable minority of the Thugs were Mohammedans, who experienced a convenient conversion to the cult of Kali, obviously with an eye to the loot. The Thugs never killed women, nor men of certain of the very low castes, which leads to the speculation that the organization may have originated simply in bands of the desperately poor, who later supplied justification for their deeds by dedicating them to Kali. Having ingratiated themselves with a company of affluent travelers, a band of Thugs would watch patiently for days or even for weeks for the moment when they could suddenly turn upon their new friends and kill them to the last man, using the technique best adapted to shrouding the deed in silence, namely strangling with scarves or other cloths. The burial of the victims involved an important part of their ritual. The graves were dug with a pickax; each band possessed one of these implements, which was reputedly a tooth of Kali, a direct gift of the goddess, and which was the fetish of the group, which was solemnly worshipped at the start of each foray and after each successful assassination, and upon which all oaths were sworn, including those, accompanied by dread threats in case of violation, which were taken by all initiates into the order. At the end of an expedition, the accrued money and articles of value were divided among members of the band, after a portion had been offered to Kali at one of her temples. It seems apparent, however, that another portion of the loot in many cases found its way into more mundane hands than those of the goddess. India was for the most part divided into small principalities. A band of Thugs would generally operate beyond the borders of its members' native state, the civil and religious authorities of which would be disposed to regard them with a friendly eye if upon their return they displayed a suitable generosity. When, about 1829, the British regime in India got an inkling of the realities of thuggee, they moved promptly for its suppression, which was accomplished by 1836, after a large number of Thugs had been apprehended and about 300 of them put to death. The most active agent in this salutary business, Major-General (at that time Captain) Sir W. H. Sleeman, in his Rambles and Recollections of an Indian Official, stated that a Thug considered his victims as offerings to his goddess, and remembered them "as a priest of Jupiter remembered the oxen, and a priest of Saturn the children sacrificed upon their altars." The term "thug," incorporated into English with the meaning of a murderous or at least violent assailant, derives from the Thugs of India.

Thugut (tō'gūt), Franz de Paula. b. at Linz, Austria, March 31, 1736; d. at Vienna, May 28, 1818. Austrian diplomat and politician. He was ambassador at Constantinople (1771-76), was employed later in various diplomatic missions, and was minister of foreign affairs for nearly all of the period 1793-1800. Among the events of his ministry were the wars with France, the loss of Belgium and Lombardy, and the acquisition of western Galicia and Venice.

Thuille (tvi'l'), Ludwig. b. at Bozen, Austria (now Bolzano, Italy), Nov. 30, 1861; d. at Munich, Feb. 5, 1907. German composer and professor (1883 et seq.) at Munich. Among his works are the operas Theudandak (1897) and Lobeltanz (1898), orchestral compositions, choral pieces, and chamber music.

Thule (thū'le, tō'le). [Also, Ultima Thule.] Name given by Pytheas (of Massalia) to a region or island six days' sail N. of Britain, the position of which has been for more than 2,000 years the subject of investigation, conjecture, and controversy. Of the voyage of Pytheas, who was probably nearly contemporaneous with Alexander the Great, nothing certain is known except through the writings of Strabo, Pliny, and others. Probably he followed the E coast of Britain (of whose size he got an exaggerated idea), and found lands lying further N, perhaps Iceland or Norway, perhaps the Orkney and Shetland islands, to which he gave the general name of Thule. From what, according to tradition, he said in regard to the length of the day in Thule at the summer solstice, it is evident that (and it should be remembered that he was skilled in the astronomy of his day) he thought this land was situated on or near the Arctic Circle. The Romans frequently added to Thule the designation of Ultima (Farthest), and, from classic times to the present day, the term has been in constant use to designate some unknown, far-distant, northern, or purely mythical region. This use of Thule and Ultima Thule runs through the literature of all the languages of Europe.

Thule. Eskimo culture which covered most of the Arctic coast of Canada, including the Hudson Bay region, the northern islands, Greenland, and Labrador, c900-1800 A.D. The Thule Eskimo inhabited circular, semisubterranean houses with walls built of whale bones, stones, and turf; they lived mainly by hunting seal, walrus, and whale, and had distinctive types of harpoons used in obtaining these mammals. Their bone and ivory artifacts were characteristically engraved with such geometric motifs as lines with spurs and Y-shaped elements.

Thun (tōn). Town in C Switzerland, in the canton of Bern, situated at the exit of the Aare River from the Lake of Thun, with a view of the mountains of the Bernese Oberland; railroad junction and commercial center; manufactures of pottery and silver filigree articles. A garrison town for artillery and infantry, it has numerous barracks, an armory, munitions factory, airplane repair shops, and an iron foundry. 20,239 (1941).

Thun, Lake of. [German, Thunersee.] Lake in the canton of Bern, Switzerland, SE of Bern and W of the Lake of Brienz. It is traversed by the Aare. Elevation, ab. 1,830 ft.; length, ab. 11 mi.; area, ab. 18.5 sq. mi.; greatest known depth ab. 712 ft.

Thunberg (tōn'berv'). Karl Peter. b. at Jönköping, Sweden, Nov. 11, 1743; d. near Uppsala, Sweden, Aug. 8, 1828. Swedish botanist and traveler, a pupil of Linnaeus. He wrote an account of his travels (1788), and published also Flora Japonica, Flora Capensis, and Icones plantarum Japonicarum.

Thunder Bay (thun'dér). Bay of Lake Huron, indenting the E coast of NE Lower Michigan. Length, ab. 10 mi.

Thunderer, The. Novel by Lily Adams Beck under the pseudonym E. Barrington, published in 1927. Set in France and Italy during the years 1795-1811, the story centers around the love of Napoleon and Josephine Beauharnais.

Thunderer, the. Name given to the London Times.

Thundering Legion. In Christian legend, a legion of Christians (the 12th Roman legion) in the army of Marcus Aurelius. While in battle with the Quadi in 174, their prayers for rain are said to have been answered by a thunderstorm which refreshed the thirsty Romans while it destroyed numbers of the enemy by lightning.

Thunersee (tō'nér.zä). German name of Thun, Lake of.

Thur (tör). River in the cantons of St. Gallen, Thurgau, and Zurich, Switzerland, which joins the Rhine ab. 7 mi. SW of Schaffhausen. Length, ab. 80 mi.

Thurber (thér'ber). Charles. b. at East Brookfield, Mass., Jan. 2, 1803; d. at Nashua, N.H., Nov. 7, 1886. American inventor and manufacturer. In 1839 he joined with his brother-in-law, Ethan Allen, in the manufacture of firearms at Worcester, Mass., retiring in 1856. He patented (1843) a hand printing machine which may be considered the forerunner of the modern typewriter by virtue of its letter-spacing feature based on a platen moving horizontally. He also patented (1845) the "Mechanical Chirographer," a writing machine for the blind.

Thurber, George. b. at Providence, R.I., Sept. 2, 1821; d. at Passaic, N.J., April 2, 1890. American botanist, editor, and author. He became (1850) a botanist and quartermaster with the expedition for the survey of the U.S.-Mexico boundary. Subsequently he became an expert in agricultural botany, lectured (1856-61, 1865-66) on botany and materia medica at the College of Pharmacy at New York, and became (1863) editor of the American Agriculturist, holding that post until 1885.

Thurber, James. [Full name, James Grover Thurber.] b. at Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 8, 1894—. American artist and humorist. He was a code clerk (1918-20) in the U.S. State Department, and engaged in journalism at Columbus and elsewhere. He has been a contributor (1926 et seq.) of numerous sketches and cartoons to The New Yorker. His writings include The Owl in the Attic (1931), The Seal in the Bedroom (1932), My Life and Hard Times (1934), The Middle-aged Man on the Flying Trapeze (1935), Let Your Mind Alone (1937), The Last Flower (1939), The Thurber Carnival (1945), The White Deer (1945), The Beast in Me and Other Animals (1948), The Thirteen Clocks (1950), and Thurber Country (1953); co-author with E. B. White of Is Sex Necessary? (1929); collaborated with Elliott Nugent on the play The Male Animal (1940).

Thureau-Dangin (tū.rō.dān.zhān), François. b. at Paris, Jan. 3, 1872; d. 1944. French Assyriologist; son of Paul Thureau-Dangin. He served as a curator at the Louvre.

Thureau-Dangin, Paul. b. at Paris, Dec. 14, 1837; d. at Cannes, France, Feb. 24, 1913. French journalist and historian, secretary (1908 et seq.) to the French Academy.

Thurgau (tör'gau). [French, Thurgovie (tūr.gov'é).] Canton of Switzerland, bounded by Schaffhausen, Württemberg-Baden (from which it is separated by the Rhine River and the Untersee), the Lake of Constance, St. Gallen, and Zurich. It sends six representatives to the Swiss national council. The prevailing language is German. In the early Middle Ages Thurgau included all of what is now NE Switzerland. It fell to the Hapsburgs in the 13th century, was conquered by the Swiss Confederation in 1460 and ruled by them as a subject district until 1798, and became an independent canton in 1803. The present constitution was adopted in 1869. Capital, Frauenfeld; area, 388 sq. mi.; pop. 149,738 (1950).

Thuria (tū.rē.ä). See Pourri, Mont.

Thurii (thū'ri.i). [Also, Thurium (thū'ri.um).] In ancient geography, a city in Magna Graecia, Italy, situated near the ancient Sybaris and near what is now Terranova di Sibari. It was founded (452 B.C.) by fugitives from Sybaris who were soon expelled by Crotona, and was refounded (c443) by colonists from Athens and other cities. It was defeated (390 A.C.) by the Lucanians, called Rome to its aid against Tarentum in 282, and later was subject to Rome. It was plundered (204 B.C.) by Hannibal, and was later the site of a Roman colony.

Thüringer Saale (tū'ring-ér.zä'le). See Saale.

Thuringia (thū.rin'jā). [German, Thüringen (tū'ring-en).] Land (state) of Germany, Russian Zone, bounded by Saxony-Anhalt, Saxony, Bavaria, Hessen, and Lower Saxony. It now consists of the former free state of Thuringia and the former Prussian governmental district of Erfurt. The area is largely mountainous and densely forested, but there are also fertile soils and market-gardening and horticultural districts. The majority of the population is engaged in manufacturing and commercial pursuits; there are numerous specialized industries. The population, predominantly Protestant, increased by 20.4 percent in the period 1939-46. Thuringia was composed of a number of independent principalities until 1918. Capital, Weimar; area, 6,022 sq. mi.; pop. 2,927,497 (1946).

Thuringian Forest (thū.rin'jān). [German, Thüringer Wald, Thüringerwald (tū'ring-ér.vālt').] Wooded mountain range in C Germany, connected by the Frankenstein and the Fichtelgebirge on the SE, and with the Rhöngebirge on the SW. It is famed for its scenery and for the legends connected with it. Length, ab. 80 mi.; highest point, Grosser Beerberg (ab. 3,222 ft.).

Thuringian Saale (zä'le). See Saale.

Thurkell (thér'kel). [Also: Thurcyltel, Thurkill.] fl. in the first part of the 11th century. Danish freebooter, allied with Sweyn and afterward with Æthelred. He was earl of East Anglia under Canute.

Thurles (thérzl). Urban district and market town, in the Irish Republic, in Munster province and County Tipperary (North Riding), situated on the river Suir ab. 34 mi. E of Limerick. It is the seat of the Roman Catholic archbishopric of Cashel, and was the scene of a battle between the Danes and the Irish in the 10th century. 6,275 (1951).

Thurles, Viscount. See Ormonde, 9th Earl of.

Thurloe (thér'ló), John. b. 1616; d. 1668. English politician, secretary of state (1633-60). His State Papers were edited by Birch in 1742.

Thurlow (thér'ló), Edward. [Title, 1st Baron Thurlow.] b. at Bracon-Ash, Norfolk, Eng. Dec. 9, 1731; d. at Brighton, England, Sept. 12, 1806. English jurist and statesman. He was educated at Cambridge (Caius College), became king's counsel in 1761, entered Parliament in 1765, was made solicitor general in 1770 and attorney general in 1774, and was lord chancellor (1778-83 and 1783-92). He was a Tory leader in the House of Lords, and a bitter opponent of the American colonists.

Thurman (thér'man), Allen Cranberry. b. at Lynehburg, Va., Nov. 13, 1813; d. Dec. 12, 1895. American politician and jurist. He was admitted to the bar in 1835, was a member of Congress from Ohio (1845-47), became a justice of the Ohio supreme court in 1851 (and was chief justice in the period 1851-56), was the (unsuccessful) Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio (1867), and was a U.S. senator (1869-81). He served as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, promoted the passage of the "Thurman Act" compelling the Pacific railroads to fulfil their obligations to the government, was U.S. commissioner at the international monetary conference at Paris in 1881, was a prominent candidate for the Democratic nomination for president in 1876, 1880, and 1884, and was the (unsuccessful) Democratic candidate for vice-president in 1888.

Thurmayer (tór'mir), Johannes. See Aventinus.

Thurmond (thér'mónd), James Strom. b. at Edgefield, S.C., Dec. 5, 1902-. American politician. After graduating from college he was a high-school teacher for some years, but meanwhile took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar in 1930. Entering politics, he became city attorney of Edgefield and county attorney of Edgefield County before being elected a state senator in 1933. In 1935 he was appointed a judge of the circuit court, and in 1941 he enlisted in the U.S. army; he served in the European and Pacific theaters of war, was the recipient of several medals and decorations (French and Belgian as well as American), and held the rank of lieutenant colonel at his discharge in 1946. At that time he returned to the bench, but in the same year resigned and was nominated and elected to the governorship of South Carolina. Disclaiming the slogan of "white supremacy," he nevertheless favored barring Negroes from the Democratic Party primary elections, and denounced as socialist President Truman's proposal of laws compelling equality of employment opportunities for Negroes. On this and other issues involved in the Truman civil rights program, a large faction of Southern Democrats, popularly known as "Dixiecrats," bolted their traditional party in 1948, formed the States' Rights Democratic Party, and nominated Governor Thurmond as their candidate for president. He carried the states of Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and South Carolina, receiving in the electoral college a total of 39 votes, including one from Tennessee. He was defeated (1950) in an attempt to win the state Democratic senatorial primary and was succeeded as governor by James F. Byrnes.

Thurn (türn), Count Heinrich Matthias von. b. 1580; d. Jan. 28, 1640. Leader of the Bohemian Protestant insurrection at the commencement of the Thirty Years' War (1618). He invaded (1619) Austria, served in the Swedish army, and surrendered (1633) to Wallenstein.

Thurnwald (türn'vált), Richard C. b. 1869-. German ethno-sociologist. His painstaking ethnological research into primitive cultures and economies mark a distinct departure from the 19th-century evolutionary school of ethnological research, and has been of great value in providing comparative materials for contemporary sociologists. His important works are Die Gestaltung der Wirtschaftsentwicklung aus ihren Anfängen heraus (1923) and Die menschliche Gesellschaft in ihren ethno-soziologischen Grundlagen (4 vols., 1931-35).

Thurrock (thur'ók). Urban district, seaport, and market town in SE England, in Essex, situated on the river Thames ab. 23 mi. E of Fenchurch Street Station, London. The Tilbury Docks of the port of London are within the district. 81,634 (1951).

Thursby (thérz'bi), Emma. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Feb. 21, 1857; d. 1931. American soprano singer. She toured (1875 et seq.) the U.S. and Canada, made her debut in England in 1878, and subsequently toured the Continent and the Far East. She later became a teacher at New York; among her pupils was Geraldine Farrar.

Thursday (thérz'dä). Fifth day of the week. It is named for Thor (Thor's day).

Thurso (thér'sú). Police burgh and seaport in N Scotland, in Caithness-shire, ab. 19 mi. NW of Wick. It is the most northerly town on the Scottish mainland, though there are several hamlets north of it. Thurso exports flagstones for paving. It was an ancient Norse stronghold, 3,140 (est. 1948).

Thurso's Landing (thér'sózl). Narrative in free verse by Robinson Jeffers, the title piece of a volume published in 1932.

Thurstan (thér'stan). d. 1140. English archbishop of York, one of the leaders in the Battle of the Standard.

Thurston (thér'ston). E. Temple. [Full name, Ernest Charles Temple Thurston.] b. Sept. 23, 1879; d. March 19, 1933. English novelist, dramatist, and poet; husband of Katherine Cecil Thurston. Author of The Apple of Eden (1905), Traffic—the Story of a Faithful Woman (1906), The Evolution of Katherine (1907), Sally Bishop (1908), City of Beautiful Nonsense (1909), The Greatest Wish in the World (1910), The Garden of Resurrection—the Love Story of an Ugly Man (1911), The Open Window (1913), Richard Furlong (1913), The Antagonists (1914), Achievement (1914), The Passionate Crime (1915), The Five-Barred Gate (1916), Enchantment (1917), World of Wonderful Reality (1920), The Green Bough (1921), The Miracle (1922), May Eve (1924), and A Hank of Hair (1932), novels; The Realist (1906), Thirteen (1912), and The Rossetti (1926), collected short stories; Red and White Earth (1902), The Greatest Wish (1913), Always Tell Your Wife (1913), Driven (1914), The Cost (1914), The Wandering Jew (1920), A Roof and Four Walls (1923), Judas Iscariot (1923), The Blue Peter (1924), and Charmeuse (1930), plays; and Poems (1895), Summer 1917 (1917), and Poems 1918-1923 (1923).

Thurston, Howard. b. at Columbus, Ohio, July 20, 1869; d. April 13, 1936. American magician. He toured (1904-07) the world, and appeared (1907-08) with Harry Kellar before touring the U.S. Author of My Life of Magic (1929), as well as many pamphlets.

Thurston, Katherine Cecil. [Maiden name, Madden.] b. at Cork, Ireland; d. there, Sept. 5, 1911. British novelist; wife (married 1901) of E. Temple Thurston, from whom she was divorced in 1910. She published The Circle (1903), John Chilcote, M.P. (1904; American title, The Masquerader; dramatized 1905 by E. Temple Thurston), The Gambler (1906), The Fly on the Wheel (1908), and Max (1910).

Thurston, Lorrin Andrews. b. at Honolulu, July 31, 1858; d. May 11, 1931. Hawaiian lawyer, editor, and politician. He practiced (1878 et seq.) law in Hawaii, where he became (1887) a leader in the revolutionary movement, aiding in the drafting of the new constitution and serving (until 1890) as minister of the interior in the reform government. In 1893 he was the most prominent leader of the revolution which overthrew the regime of Queen Liliuokalani, drafting the proclamation of the provisional government. He served (1893-95) as Hawaiian envoy to the U.S., aided in framing the Hawaiian constitution of 1894, served (1897) as a member of the commission which negotiated the treaty annexing Hawaii to the U.S., and became (1898) chief editor and editorial director of the Honolulu Advertiser.

Thurston, Robert Henry. b. at Providence, R.I., Oct. 25, 1839; d. at Ithaca, N.Y., Oct. 25, 1903. American engineer. He served as a naval engineer in the Civil War, was detailed as assistant professor of natural philosophy at the Naval Academy in 1865, resigned from the navy in 1872, was professor of mechanical engineering (1871-85) at the Stevens Institute, Hoboken, and after 1885 was director of Sibley College, Cornell University. He was U.S. commissioner at the Vienna exposition in 1873, and was a member of various U.S. scientific boards. Among his works are History of the Growth of the Steam-Engine (1878), Materials of Engineering (1884-86), Materials of Construction (1885), and A Manual of Steam Boilers (1888).

Thurston, Robert Lawton. b. at Portsmouth, R.I., Dec. 13, 1800; d. Jan. 13, 1874. American builder of steam engines. With John Babcock, Jr., he established (1830) the Providence Steam Engine Company at Providence, R.I., reputed to be the first New England manufactory of its kind. In 1838 he assumed the sole ownership and management of the firm which, as Thurston, Gardner and Company, undertook (1854) manufacture of the automatic cut-off steam engine invented by Noble T. Greene.

Thury (tū.rē). César François Cassini. See Cassini de Thury, César François.

Thutmose I (thut'mōz, tūt'-). [Also: Thothmes, Thuthmosis.] fl. c1500 B.C. Egyptian king of the XVIIIth dynasty. He was a successful warrior, and conducted a campaign as far as the Euphrates. An important record of his deeds is preserved in an inscription on the rocks in the neighborhood of the third cataract of the Nile.

Thutmose II. [Also: Thothmes, Thuthmosis.] fl. c1490 B.C. Egyptian king of the XVIIIth dynasty; son of Thutmose I. He married his sister Hatshepsut, who obtained control of the government.

Thutmose III. [Also: Thothmes, Thuthmosis.] fl. c1475 B.C. Egyptian king of the XVIIIth dynasty. He reigned for 54 years, either alone, or with Thutmose II and Hatshepsut, and under him, according to Mariette, Egypt "placed her frontiers where she would," incorporating the whole of Abyssinia, the Sudan, Nubia, Egypt proper, Syria, Mesopotamia, part of Arabia, Kurdistan, and Armenia. He married his sister Hatshepsut, widow of Thutmose II. The records of his reign are extensive. He was sole occupant of the throne from 1479 to 1447 B.C.

Thwaites (thwāts), Reuben Gold. b. at Dorchester, Mass., May 15, 1853; d. at Madison, Wis., Oct. 22, 1913. American historian, secretary and superintendent of the Wisconsin Historical Society from 1886. He was the author of Down Historic Waterways (1888), The Story of Wisconsin (1890), Stories of the Badger State (1900), History of the University of Wisconsin (1900), Father Marquette (1902), A Brief History of Rocky Mountain Exploration (1904), France in America (1905), and others.

Thwing (twing), Charles Franklin. b. at New Sharon, Me., Nov. 9, 1853; d. Aug. 29, 1937. American educator, president of Adelbert College and Western Reserve University from 1890. He was graduated from Harvard in 1876 and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1879, and held pastorates at Cambridge, Mass., and Minneapolis, Minn. He was also secretary of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. Among his publications are American Colleges (1878), Within College Walls (1893), The American College in American Life (1897), College Administration (1900), A Liberal Education and a Liberal Faith (1903), History of Higher Education in America (1906), Education in the Far East (1909), and The College President (1925).

Thyatira (thi.ə.tī.rā). [Also: Euhippa, Pelopeia, Semiramis.] In ancient geography, a city in Lydia, on the site of the modern Akhisar. It was one of the seven cities of Asia Minor mentioned in the Book of Revelation.

Thyestes (thi.es'tēz). In Greek legend, son of Pelops, brother of Atreus, and father of Aegisthus by his own sister. Thyestes seduced the wife of Atreus and attempted his life. In revenge Atreus slew the sons of Thyestes and served them up to their father to eat. Aegisthus, however, survived this slaughter.

Thymbrius (thim'bri.us). In ancient geography, a small river near Ilium (Troy).

Thynne (thin), Thomas. [Titles: 3rd Viscount Weymouth, 1st Marquis of Bath.] b. Sept. 13, 1734; d. at London, Nov. 19, 1796. English politician. Having urged use of military force in the Wilkes riots if necessary, he came into great favor with George III, but his impulsive actions nearly precipitated war with France and caused difficulty in negotiations with Spain over possession of the Falkland Islands.

Thyrsis (thēr'sis). Herdsman in the Idylls of Theocritus; a shepherd in the Elegues of Vergil; in later literature, a rustic or shepherd.

Thyrus (thēr'sus). Ancient name of the Tirso.

Thyssen (tis'en), August. b. at Eschweiler, Germany, May 17, 1842; d. at Schloss Landsberg, near Kettwig, Germany, April 4, 1926. German industrialist. A gifted organizer, he developed the largest German iron-steel combine.

Thyssen, Fritz. b. at Mülheim, Germany, Nov. 9, 1873; d. at Buenos Aires, Feb. 8, 1951. German industrialist; son of August Thyssen. After extended travels in Russia, the Orient, and America, he became (1926) chairman of the Ruhr trust; he served as a Prussian state counselor and was a Nazi member of the Reichstag in 1933. Thyssen broke his party allegiance, left Germany, and wrote I Paid Hitler, which was published at New York in 1941 in a translation. Thyssen was captured by the Germans in France and placed in a concentration camp, but was liberated by American troops in 1945. A German denazification court ruled that he was a minor offender, and fined him 20 percent of his property (he claimed, however, to be penniless, and no fine was paid).

Tiahuanaco (ti.ə.wā.nā.kō). [Also: Tiahuanacu, Tiawanako.] Group of ancient ruins, possibly a religious center, in W Bolivia, ab. 72 mi. from the S end of Lake Titicaca. Only a large artificial mound showing traces of original stone facings, two courts indicated by enclosures of huge and well-cut pillars set at irregular intervals, ledges of red sandstone carved into what resemble seats or small compartments, colossal statues, and several monolithic gateways remain standing. Very large blocks cut into prisms and more or less ornamented slabs remain on the surface. There is not a single building of which the original form and purpose can be recognized. The largest human statue is 18 ft. tall. The great monolithic gateway has an opening of 7 ft., a front 13 ft. long, and is nearly 3 ft. thick. Its outer front is elaborately carved with zoomorphic and anthropomorphic figures. What remains of the stonework shows patient work, but there is a lack of symmetry. In front of the village church are two colossal squatting human figures. These and a few other statues are valuable as indicating costumes. Much obsidian is found scattered over the surface. Other artifacts hint at three distinct periods of occupation: an oldest one, about which only vague and doubtful traditions remain; a subsequent occupation by Aymará Indians; and, together with the Aymará and up to the coming of the Spaniards, the presence of the Incas. Neither the Aymará nor the Incas dwelt on the site in the 16th century; only the Indian village of Tiahuanaco was occupied by the former. It represents a culture that lasted possibly 400 years, and was pan-Peruvian in its spread.

Tiamat (tē'ə.mat). In Assyro-Babylonian mythology, the primeval dragon, personification of the great primeval sea. She was the wife of Apsu, and by him the mother of the gods. But she plotted to destroy them, so first Ea then Anu tried to destroy Tiamat but failed. Finally she was killed by Marduk, who drove the wind into her open jaws and shot her through the heart. From her body were created heaven and earth.

Tiaret (ti.ə.re). Town in Oran department, Algeria, in NW Africa, on the edge of the high plateau ab. 122 mi. SE of Mostaganem: the chief trade center for a grain and livestock producing region. It was a town of note at the time of the Arab invasion in the 7th century and was occupied by the French in 1843. Pop. 22,344 (1948).

Tiawanako (ti.ə.wā.nā.kō). See Tiahuanaco.

Tibbett (tib'et), Lawrence Mervil. b. at Bakersfield, Calif., Nov. 16, 1896—. American concert and operatic baritone. He first appeared (November, 1923) with the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, in the role of a monk in Boris Godunoff. Roles he has sung include Wolfram in Tannhäuser, Germont in La Traviata, and Mercutio in Roméo et Juliette. He has performed frequently on the radio and appeared in the films The Rogue Song, The New Moon, and The Southerner.

Tibbus (tib'üz). [Also: Tibbu, Tubus.] Tribe dwelling in Tibesti, a mountainous region in the C part of the Sahara.

Tiber (tí'bér). [Italian, Tevere; ancient names, Tiberis (tí'bér.is), Tiberinus (tí'bér.in.us), Tibris (tí'bri.s), Tybris.] Second longest river in Italy. It rises in the Apennines ab. 20 mi. NE of Arezzo, flows generally S, and empties into the Mediterranean ab. 16 mi. SW of Rome, which is on its banks. Its chief tributaries are the Chiana, Nera, and Aniene. Length, ab. 250 mi.

Tiberias (tí.bir'ías). [Arabic, Tabariya.] Town in Palestine (now in NE Israel), situated on the W shore of the Sea of Galilee, ab. 17 mi. NE of Nazareth. Founded by Herod Antipas in the first half of the 1st century A.D., it was named for the emperor Tiberius. It was long a center of Hebrew learning; it was a seat of the Sanhedrin, and the Talmud and Mishna were both brought to completion there. In the 12th century it was a bulwark of the Crusaders, taken by Saladin in 1187. Pop. ab. 8,000.

Tiberias, Battle of. Victory of Saladin over the Crusaders under Guy of Lusignan in 1187. It was followed by the capture by Saladin of Jerusalem.

Tiberias, Lake (or Sea) of. See Galilee, Sea of.

Tiberius (tí.bir'ús). [Full name, Tiberius Claudius Nero Caesar.] b. Nov. 16, 42 B.C.; d. March 16, 37 A.D. Roman emperor, infamous for his vices and cruelty; son of Claudius I and Livia Drusilla, and stepson of Augustus. He was divorced by command of Augustus from his wife Vipsania Agrippina (daughter of Agrippa), and in 11 A.D. married Julia, daughter of Augustus and widow of Agrippa. He served in Spain, in Armenia, against the Rhætiens and Vindelicians, and on the Danube; became consul in 13 B.C. and tribune in 6 B.C.; spent several years practically in exile in Rhodes; returned to Rome in 2 A.D.; was adopted by Augustus in 4 A.D.; conducted several campaigns in Germany, Pannonia, and Dalmatia; and succeeded Augustus as emperor in 14 A.D. His administration of the affairs of the empire was generally successful, but his private life, especially in his later years (which were passed in large part on the island of Capri), was marked by gross vices and cruelty toward his enemies. His chief minister was Sejanus.

Tiberius. Byzantine emperor (578-582).

Tiberius. In Roman legend, an old king of Alba. He was drowned in the Tiber River, which takes its name from him.

Tiberius Claudius Drusus Nero (kló'di.us dró'sus nér'ó). Full name of Claudius I.

Tibesti (tí.bes'tí; French, tē.bes.tē). [Also, Tu.] Highland region in the E central part of the Sahara desert, in the region inhabited by the Tibbus. It is mostly in Chad territory, French Equatorial Africa, although some of the region lies across the border in S Libya. Tibesti consists of a great rugged mountain mass of sandstone, deeply eroded by canyons, and surmounted by volcanic peaks, of which Emi Koussi (11,200 ft) is the highest. Some oases exist in the valleys, where springs emerge, supplying water. The French established a military post in Tibesti in 1914.

Tibet (tí.bet'). [Also: Pö, Sitsang, Thibet.] Country in W central Asia, bounded by the Kunlun Shan on the N (separating it from Sinkiang province, China), by Sikang province, China, on the E, by the Himalayas on the S (separating it from India, Bhutan, and Nepal), and by Kashmir on the W. The surface is an elevated tableland traversed by numerous high mountain ranges. It contains the sources of the Indus, Brahmaputra, Yangtze, and other large rivers of Asia. The N part of Tibet is extremely dry and barren; there are numerous saline lakes in the interior valleys, and only a sparse population of nomads. In the lower valleys of S Tibet agriculture is concentrated; there is considerable irrigation. The chief crops are hardy cereals (barley, oats, and wheat), and vegetables (cabbage, turnips, rhubarb, onions, beans, and peas). Barley is grown above 14,000 ft. elevation, but fruit trees are found only to about 11,000 ft. The chief minerals produced are gold, turquoise, and borax; wool, hides, and skins are also exported. Cloth, clothing, rice, tea, and some other foodstuffs are imported. The chief livestock animals raised are yaks, goats, sheep, and horses. Nomads are estimated to form about a fifth of the total population. The inhabitants are of Mongoloid race; the religion Lamaism. Supreme civil and religious authority is nominally vested in the Dalai Lama. A powerful kingdom as early as the 7th century and independent throughout the Middle Ages, Tibet became subject to China in the 17th century and remained under Manchu rule until 1912. In 1904 the British government in India sent an armed "mission" to Lhasa (the Younghusband expedition), in order to enforce certain treaty stipulations and other demands, which, after considerable fighting, accomplished its purpose, entering Lhasa and executing a convention with Tibet there (September 7). In 1910 the Dalai Lama fled to India on account of Chinese interference, but he returned to Lhasa in 1912. In 1914 Tibet was divided into Inner and Outer Tibet, Inner Tibet being divided into the provinces of Sikang and Tsinghai, which were given full status in the Chinese republic; Outer Tibet has remained independent, though in more or less close relationship with India, the United Kingdom, and China. Capital, Lhasa; area, ab. 470,000 sq. mi.; pop. estimated variously between one and three million.

Tibeto-Burman (tí.bet'ó.bér.mán). Linguistic family embracing a large number of tonal languages spoken in Assam, Burma, Tibet, N Indochina, and S China by such peoples as the Bodo, Naga, Kachin, Kuki-Chin, Burmans, Tibetans, Moso, Lolo, and Jyayung. Many authorities accept a genetic relationship between Tibeto-Burman and Chinese (or Sino-Thai), which they include in the larger Sino-Tibetan family.

Tibetot (tí.bet'ot). John. See Tiptoft, John.

Tibiscus (tí.bis'kus). Latin name of the Timis.

Tibullus (tí.bul'us), Albius. b. c54 B.C.; d. 18 B.C. Roman elegiac poet. He was patronized by Messalla, whom he accompanied in a campaign to Aquitania. He wrote the first two of the books extant under his name.

Tibur (tí'bér). Ancient name of Tivoli.

Tichborne (tích'börn, -born), Roger Charles. b. Jan. 5, 1829; d. at sea, 1854. Presumptive heir to the Tichborne estates in England. He sailed from Rio de Janeiro for New York, April 20, 1854, on the Bella, which was lost. For the famous trial for the recovery of the estates, see under Orton, Arthur.

Tichborne Claimant. See Orton, Arthur.

Ticino (tē.ché'nō). [French and German, Tessin.] Canton of Switzerland, bounded by the cantons of Valais, Uri, and Graubünden, and by Italy. The bulk of the inhabitants are Italian, ethnically and linguistically. The area was subjugated by Rome with the rest of Cisalpine Gaul, and fell under the power of the Ostrogoths (East Goths) in the 5th century, of the Longobards (Lombards) in the 6th, and of the Franks in the 8th. In the Middle Ages it was held in large part by Milan. The Leventina district was conquered by Uri in 1403, and finally in 1440; and the remainder of Ticino was taken by the confederates and the Four Forest Cantons in 1500. It was divided into the cantons of Bellinzona and Lugano in 1798, and these were consolidated as a single permanent member of the Swiss Confederation in 1803. A constitution was adopted in 1830. The canton has been disturbed by contests between the clericals and the radicals, and the intervention of federal troops was necessary in 1876 and 1890. It sends seven representatives to the National Council. Capital, Bellinzona; area, 1,086 sq. mi.; pop. 175,520 (1950).

Ticino River. [French and German, Tessin; Latin, Ticinus.] River in Switzerland and Italy, formed by the junction of two headstreams near Airole. It traverses the canton of Ticino, Lago Maggiore, and the Lombard plain, and joins the Po near Pavia. Length, ab. 160 mi.

Ticinum (tí.sí'num). Ancient name of Pavia.

Ticinus (tí.sí'us). Latin name of the Ticino River.

Ticinus, Battle of the. Victory gained near the Ticinus (modern, Ticino River) and probably near Pavia, 218 B.C., by Hannibal over the Romans under Publius Scipio; chiefly a cavalry engagement.

Tickell (tik'el). Thomas. b. at Bridekirk, Cumberland, England, 1686; d. at Bath, England, April 23, 1740.

English poet. In 1708 he graduated from Queen's College, Oxford. He was a friend of Addison, and through him in 1717 was appointed undersecretary of state. His poem on The Prospect of Peace appeared in 1713, and a poem, Kensington Gardens, in 1722. He contributed to the Spectator and Guardian, and wrote the elegy on Addison prefixed to his edition of Addison's works in 1721. He translated the first book of the Iliad, which Pope suspected was done by Addison, and wrote the ballad Colin and Lucy.

Ticket-of-Leave Man, The. Play by Tom Taylor, produced in 1863. It is from the French play Léonard, by Edouard Brissac and Eugène Nus.

Ticknor (tik'nôr, -nôr), Elisha. b. at Lebanon, Conn., March 25, 1757; d. at Hanover, N.H., June 22, 1821. American educator and financial promoter; father of George Ticknor. He was graduated (1783) from Dartmouth College, established (1785) a private school at Boston, served (1788-94) as principal of the South Writing School at Boston, and was a member (1818-21) of the Boston Primary School Committee. He helped organize (1798) the Massachusetts Mutual Fire Insurance Company and was a founder (1816) of the "Provident Institution for Savings in the Town of Boston," among the first U.S. savings banks. Author of English Exercises (1792).

Ticknor, George. b. at Boston, Aug. 1, 1791; d. there, Jan. 26, 1871. American author; son of Elisha Ticknor. He graduated from Dartmouth in 1807, was admitted to the bar in 1813, resided at Göttingen and elsewhere in Europe (1815-19), and was professor of French, Spanish, and belles-lettres at Harvard (1819-35). He spent the years 1835-38 in Europe. He was one of the founders of the Boston Public Library. His chief work is a History of Spanish Literature (1849). He also wrote various essays, and a life of Prescott (1864). His life and letters were published in 1876.

Ticknor, William Davis. b. at Lebanon, N.H., Aug. 6, 1810; d. at Philadelphia, April 10, 1864. American publisher. He became established (1832) as a publisher at Boston, and beginning in 1854 was a partner in the noted publishing firm of Ticknor and Fields, one of the leading book houses in the U.S. The firm published the Atlantic Monthly, brought out works by Holmes, Thoreau, Emerson, Whittier, Hawthorne, Longfellow, Lowell, Leigh Hunt, Browning, DeQuincy, and Tennyson, and operated "the old Corner Bookstore" at Boston, a gathering place for New England writers. He was one of the first publishers in the U.S. to make full payment for publishing the works of British authors at a time when there was no international copyright agreement binding American publishing houses.

Ticonderoga (tik'on.de.rô'ga). [Early French name, Carillon.] Village in NE New York, in Essex County, on the outlet from Lake George to Lake Champlain, ab. 88 mi. NE of Albany; tourist resort; manufactures of lead pencils and paper. It was fortified by the French in 1755, and was called at first Carillon, was the rendezvous of Montcalm's army in 1757, was unsuccessfully attacked by the British under Abercrombie, July 8, 1758; was invested and taken by the British under Amherst in 1759; was surprised and captured by the Americans under Ethan Allen, May 10, 1775; was taken by the British under Burgoyne in July, 1777; and was again taken by the British under Haldeman in 1780. Pop. 3,517 (1950).

Tidewater Virginia (tid'wô'tîr, -wôt'êr). Lowland coastal section of Virginia extending W from the Atlantic and Chesapeake Bay as far as the rivers are affected by the tides. The area is divided into three major peninsulas by the long estuaries of the Potomac, Rappahannock, York, and James rivers, and also includes the Virginia portion of the so-called Delmarva (D Delaware, Maryland, Virginia) peninsula. Tidewater Virginia was the first part of the state settled by colonists, and is rich in historical associations; it covers about one-fourth the total area of Virginia.

Tidmore (tid'môr).- Former name of Seminole, Okla.

Tieck (têk), Christian Friedrich. b. 1776; d. 1851. German sculptor; brother of Ludwig Tieck.

Tieck, Ludwig. b. at Berlin, May 31, 1773; d. there, April 28, 1853. German poet and critic. He studied at Halle, Göttingen, and Erlangen. Subsequently he lived variously at Berlin, Jena, and Dresden. In 1805 he undertook a journey to Italy, and in 1817 to England. In 1820 he was made a member of the direction of the royal theater at Dresden. In 1841 he was called to Berlin by Frederick William IV, by whom he was granted a pension. Among his many works in almost all departments of literature are particularly to be mentioned two collections of popular tales, partly from old German sources, partly original, Volksmärchen (1797) and Phantasus (1812-17), the romantic novel Franz Sternbalds Wanderungen (1798), the classical translation of Don Quixote (1799-1804), and a modern German version of Middle High German Minnelieder. He lent his name to the translation of Shakespeare begun by A. W. Schlegel and finished by Tieck's daughter, Dorothea, and by Baudissin. In 1823 and 1827, during his connection with the Dresden theater, he published a series of drama criticisms under the title of Dramaturgische Blätter. Other works are the two novels with which he began his literary career, Abdallah and William Lovell; the comedies Blaubart, Der gestiefelte Kater, and Prinz Zerbino; and the dramas Leben und Tod der heiligen Genoveva, Kaiser Oktavianus, and Fortunat. Among his many shorter stories, written between 1821 and 1840, are especially to be named Das Dichterleben, which describes the youth of Shakespeare, and Der Tod des Dichters, whose motif is the death of the poet Camões. He wrote many lyrics. He was the most prolific of the poets of the romantic school in Germany. A collection of his writings, made by himself, was published at Berlin (1828-46) in 20 volumes; his critical writings, in the same way, appeared at Berlin (1852-54); and his short stories (Gesammelte Novellen) were published at Berlin (1852-53) in 12 volumes. His Nachgelassene Schriften appeared posthumously at Leipzig (1855) in two volumes.

Tiedemann (tê'de.mân), Dietrich. b. at Bremervörde, near Bremen, Germany, April 3, 1748; d. at Marburg, Germany, Sept. 24, 1803. German philosopher, professor of philosophy at Marburg (1776 et seq.). His chief work is Geist der spekulativen Philosophie (1791-96).

Tiedemann (tê'd'mân), Mount. See under Coast Mountains.

Tiedge (tê'ge), Christoph August. b. at Gardelegen, Germany, Dec. 14, 1752; d. at Dresden, Germany, March 8, 1841. German poet. His chief work is the poem Urania (1800).

Tiefand (tê'flânt). Opera by Eugène d'Albert, with a libretto by Lothar adapted from Guimera, first produced at Prague in 1903.

Tiefo (tye'fô). See Kyefo.

Tiehing (tye'ling'). [Also, Tie-ling.] City in NE China, in the province of Liaosi, Manchuria, situated on the railroad ab. 40 mi. NE of Mukden. After the defeat of the Russians in the battle of Mukden it was captured by the Japanese, March 16, 1905. It was returned to the Chinese in 1945. Pop. ab. 50,000.

Tiel (têl). Town in E Netherlands, in the province of Gelderland, on the Waal River ab. 20 mi. SE of Utrecht; agricultural markets; jam and fruit canneries; *Klomp*en (wooden shoes) and tobacco manufactures. The Church of Saint Martin dates from the 15th century, the town hall from the 18th century. 12,705 (1939).

Tie-ling (tye'ling'). See Tiehing.

Tielt (têlt). [Also, Thielt.] Town in NW Belgium, in the province of West Flanders, ab. 15 mi. SE of Bruges; linen, cotton, woolen, hemp, and jute manufactures; agricultural markets. The house of the weavers' guild, with belfry, dates from the 13th century. In World War I, the town served as headquarters for the German armies in Flanders. 12,954 (1947).

Tien Chao (tyen' chôu'). Chinese name of the Chinese Empire.

Tienen (tê'nên). Flemish name of Tirlemont.

Tienlung Shan (tyen'lung' shân). Mountain in Shansi province, China, ab. 25 mi. SW of Taiyuan (Yang-chü); is the site of a series of 21 cave temples which contained important Buddhist sculptures dating from the Northern Chi, Sui, and Tang periods.

Tien Shan (tyen' shân'). [Russian, Tyan Shan.] Mountain system of C Asia, in the U.S.S.R. and China, traversing the Kirghiz Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R. and Sinkiang province, China. The higher peaks are snow-covered and numerous glaciers occur; the intermediate slopes are in mountain pasture or woodland in many areas, though in the E they are dry and barren. The highest peaks are on the U.S.S.R.-China border: Pobedy Peak (ab. 24,406 ft.) and Khan-Tengri (ab. 22,950 ft.). In Sinking there are many oases at the foot of the Tien Shan, and the lowest pass through the mountain system traverses them, between Urunchi and the Turfan depression, at an elevation of ab. 3,000 ft. Length (E-W), ab. 1,500 mi.

Tientsin (tin'tsin'; Chinese, t'yen'jin'). City in E China, an independent municipality surrounded by the province of Hope, situated on the Hai Ho, ab. 30 mi. upstream from the Po Hai. It is an important center of transit trade, and the terminus of the Grand Canal and of a railroad opened in 1888. It is the third largest port in China, and has numerous light industries and formerly had large exports of raw cotton and cotton cloth. A treaty was concluded here in 1858 between China on one side and Great Britain, the U.S., France, and Russia on the other. Tientsin was occupied by the English and French in 1860, and was made an open port. Area of municipality, 21 sq. mi.; pop. 1,795,292 (1950).

Tiepolo (tye'pōlō), Giovanni Battista. b. at Venice, March 5, 1693; d. at Madrid, March 25, c1769. Venetian painter, generally considered the last great decorative painter of the Venetian school. He was influenced by Giovanni Battista Piazzetta, and still more by the works of Paolo Veronese. After painting frescoes at Milan and other Italian cities, he decorated the episcopal palace at Würzburg, Bavaria, in 1750, and on his return to Venice in 1753 he was appointed first director of the Academy of Painting. In 1761 he was called to Spain by Charles III, and executed frescoes in the royal palace, with the assistance of his son. There are many of his easel pictures in the galleries of Europe.

Tier (tīr), Jack. See Jack Tier.

Tierney (tīr'nī), George. b. at Gibraltar, March 29, 1761; d. at London, Jan. 25, 1830. English politician. He was educated at Saint Peter's College (Petershouse), Cambridge, and was called to the bar, but devoted himself to politics. He entered Parliament in 1788, and sat in the House of Commons for different constituencies from 1796 to his death. He was a prominent opponent of the younger William Pitt. In 1798 Pitt accused him of want of patriotism, and fought a bloodless duel with him (May 27). In 1803 he joined the Addington ministry as treasurer of the navy, and in 1806 the Grenville ministry as president of the Board of Control. From 1817 he was the leader of the opposition in the House of Commons. He was master of the mint in Canning's ministry (1827), and also, with a seat in the cabinet, in Goderich's ministry (1827-28).

Tierra de Canelo (tyer'rā dā kā.nā'lō). See Cinnamon Land.

Tierra del Fuego (tyer'rā del fwā'gō). [Also, Terra del Fuego.] Archipelago S of the S end of South America, from which it is separated by the Strait of Magellan. It comprises the large island of Tierra del Fuego proper, or Fuegia, and the smaller Desolation Island, Clarence Island, Dawson Island, Navarino, Hoste, Horn, Wollast, Stewart, Londonderry, and others; these are separated from each other by narrow and tortuous channels, and the islands themselves are cut by deep fjords. The C and W parts of Tierra del Fuego, and most of the smaller islands, are mountainous; trees grow in the sheltered valleys. The climate is raw, cold, and windy, with much snow in winter; summers are cool and damp. There are several large glaciers, and the snowline lies at an elevation of only ab. 2,000 ft.; the highest peaks reach over 7,000 ft. Politically the territory is divided between Argentina (territory of Tierra del Fuego) and Chile (province of Magallanes). It was discovered by Magellan in 1520. Length of group, ab. 400 mi.; area, ab. 27,500 sq. mi.

Tierra del Fuego. [Also, Terra del Fuego.] Southernmost territory of Argentina, comprising Staten Island and the E half of the main island in the Tierra del Fuego archipelago at the tip of South America in the Atlantic. Sheep raising is the principal occupation. Capital, Ushuaia; area, 7,996 sq. mi.; pop. 5,045 (1947).

Tiers État (tyer zā'tā). French form of Third Estate.

Tietê (tye.tā'). River in SE Brazil, in the state of São Paulo, a tributary of the Paran. Length, ab. 697 mi.

Tietjens (tē'jens), Eunice (Strong). [Maiden name, Hammond.] b. at Chicago, July 29, 1884; d. 1944. American novelist and poet. She was a member (1913 et seq.) of the staff of Poetry; a Magazine of Verse, was a war correspondent (1918) in France for the Chicago Daily News, and was a lecturer in Oriental poetry at the University of Miami from 1933 to 1935. Among her works are Profiles from China (1917), Body and Raiment (1919), Jake (1921), Profiles from Home (1925), Arabesque (written with Cloyd Head; 1925), Boy of the D-serf (1928), Leaves in Windy Weather (1929), and an autobiography, The World at My Shoulder (1938).

Tietjens or Titiens (tēt'yens), Therese Cathline Johanna. b. at Hamburg, Germany, July 17, 1831; d. at London, Oct. 3, 1877. Soprano singer, of Hungarian descent; settled (1858) in England. She was noted in opera and oratorio.

Tifata (tē.fā'tā). Ancient name of Maddaloni, Monte di.

Tifernum Tiberinum (tī.fēr'num tīb.e.rī'num). In ancient geography, a city in Italy, on or near the site of the modern Città di Castello, ab. 20 mi. from Arezzo.

Tiffany (tī'fānī), Charles Lewis. b. at Killingly, Conn., Feb. 15, 1812; d. at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., Feb. 18, 1902. American merchant. In 1837 he went to New York and, with John B. Young, established a stationery and fancy-goods business. The firm became Tiffany and Company in 1851, established a branch at Paris, and began the manufacture of sterling silver. In succeeding years it developed an extensive business in gold and silver work, and precious stones.

Tiffany, Louis Comfort. b. at New York, Feb. 18, 1843; d. Jan. 17, 1933. American painter and decorator; son of Charles Lewis Tiffany. He painted in both oil and water color, making a specialty of Oriental scenes. Among his principal canvases are Dock Scene (1869), Street Scene in Tangiers (1876), Study of Quimper, Brilliant (1877), Duane Street, New York (1878), The Cobblers at Boujarick (1888), Feeding the Flamingoes (1888), and Market Day at Nuremberg (1892). His other important art works include the Tiffany Chapel, exhibited at the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893, which is now in the crypt of the New York Cathedral of Saint John the Divine; and the electric fountain in the Grand Court of the Manufactures and Fine Arts Building at the Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N.Y., 1901. He discovered the formula for making the decorative glass which is known as Tiffany favrile glass. He established (1918) a foundation for art students.

Tiffin (tī'fīn). City in N Ohio, county seat of Seneca County, on the Sandusky River ab. 43 mi. SE of Toledo; manufactures of glassware, ceramic ware, conveyors, transmission machinery, abrasives, and nut and bolt machines. 18,952 (1950).

Tiflis (tī'fīs; Russian, tēf.lyēs'). Former guberniya (government) in Transcaucasia, Russia. It is now a part of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R.

Tiflis. [Georgian, Tbilisi.] City in SW U.S.S.R., capital of the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated on the Kura River. A major transport center, it has food-processing, shoe, silk-textile, woolen-textile, and machinery industries. It is the chief commercial city in Caucasia, and is on the main route between Russia and Persia. Tiflis is the cultural center of Georgia; it has a university with over 5,000 students, a museum, theater, and other cultural institutions. It is an ancient city, the capital of Georgia since c500, and has often been captured and plundered (last by the Persians in 1795). 519,175 (1939).

Tifton (tī'fīn). City in S Georgia, county seat of Tift County; marketing center for tobacco, cotton, and tomatoes. 6,831 (1950).

"Tiger, the." Epithet in English of Clemenceau, Georges (Eugène Benjamin).

"Tiger Earl." Epithet of Lindsay, Alexander (d. 1454).

Tiger Lily. Indian princess who protects Peter and his young friends, in Sir James M. Barrie's play Peter Pan (1904).

"Tiger of Central America." Epithet of Guardiola, Santos.

Tigert (ti'pért), John James. b. at Louisville, Ky., Nov. 25, 1856; d. at Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 21, 1906. American Methodist Episcopal clergyman and editor. He served (1884-90) as professor of philosophy at Vanderbilt University, and was book editor (1894-1906) of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was elected (1906) a bishop.

Tighina (tē.gē'nā). Rumanian name of Bendery.

Tiglath-pileser I (tig'lath.pi.lē'sēr, -pi-). Assyrian king (c1120-1100 B.C.). He was one of the most warlike and energetic of Assyrian rulers. According to inscriptions on prisms found in the ruins of Kileh Sherghat or Shargat (on the site of the ancient city of Assur), he undertook campaigns against 42 countries and their kings, among them the Moschi, Kummuch (Commagene), Hittites, the "Aramean river-land," and Babylonia itself, carrying his conquests to the shores of the Mediterranean. He also enjoyed big-game hunting, and relates that he killed with his own hand ten elephants and 920 lions.

Tiglath-pileser II. Assyrian king (c930-930 B.C.).

Tiglath-pileser III. [Original Babylonian name, Pulu; name in the Old Testament, Phul.] Assyrian king (c745-727 B.C.). He was a usurper who adopted the name of the earlier conqueror. In 741 he conquered, after a three years' siege, the city of Arpad. In 738 he brought in districts of Hama (Hamath) under Assyrian supremacy. In the same year he received tribute from Damascus, Israel (2 Kings, xv. 19), Tyre, and many other kingdoms. Several years later Damascus and Israel entered into a coalition against Assyria, and waged war against Ahaz of Judah because he would not join this alliance (Isa. vii). At the behest of Ahaz, Tiglath-pileser again marched against the west (734-732). The kingdom of Damascus was destroyed, and many cities were taken from Israel (2 Kings, xv. 29); Pekah, king of Israel, being left as a vassal. While in Damascus the Assyrian king received tribute from Ahaz of Judah, and the kings of Moab, Ashkelon, Edom, Gaza, and elsewhere. For a third time Tiglath-pileser took a hand in the policy of Israel when Pekah was assassinated by Hosea. The Assyrian king, according to his account, placed Hosea on the throne and received ten talents of gold and 1,000 talents of silver as tribute. He also made several expeditions to Babylonia, against Urartu (743, 735), and into Elam and Media (744, 737).

Tigranes (ti.grā'nēz). d. after 56 B.C. King of Armenia; son-in-law of Mithridates the Great. He conquered Syria and part of Asia Minor, but was defeated by Lucullus in 69 B.C., surrendered to Pompey, and was deprived of his conquest.

Tigre (tē'grā). City in Argentina, in Buenos Aires province, ab. 17 mi. NW of downtown Buenos Aires, situated on an arm of the Paraná River just above its mouth in the Río de la Plata. It is a recreational suburb of the metropolis. The adjacent gardens of the Paraná delta produce vegetables and fruits for the Buenos Aires metropolitan area. 24,809 (1947).

Tigré (ti.grā', tig'rā). Province of Ethiopia, bordering on Eritrea. It was once an independent kingdom.

Tigre River (tē'grā). River in NE Peru which flows SE to join the Amazon ab. 40 mi. W of the mouth of the Ucayali. Length, ab. 350 mi.

Tigris (ti'grīs). [Biblical name, Hiddekel.] River in Asiatic Turkey and Iraq which is formed by headstreams that rise in the mountains of Armenia and Kurdistan and flows S and SE, joining the Euphrates ab. 40 mi. NW of Basra, Iraq, to form the Shatt-al-Arab, a long estuary which flows into the Persian Gulf. The chief tributaries of the Tigris are the Great Zab in Turkey and the Little Zab and Diyala in Iraq. The principal places on its banks are Diyarbakir, Mosul, and Baghdad. The ancient cities of Nineveh, Calah, and Ctesiphon, among others, were on it. Length, ab. 1,150 mi.

Tigua (tē'gwā). See Tiwa.

Tigurini (tig.ū.rī'nī). One of the branches of the ancient Helvetii. They took an active part in the defeat of the Romans in 107 B.C., but were overwhelmingly defeated by Caesar in 58 B.C. Their capital may have been on the site of modern Zurich.

Tigurium (ti.gū'ri.um). Medieval Latin name of Zurich, city.

Tihama (ti.hā'ma). [Also, Tehama.] Desert region in Hejaz and Yemen, Arabia, consisting of a long, narrow strip of plain along the coast of the Red Sea. Its climate is hot and humid, though there is almost no rain; its scattered oases, using water flowing down from the mountains, raise small crops of fruits, barley, and oats.

Tihany (tē'hōny'). Village in W Hungary, situated on a peninsula on Lake Balaton, S of Veszprém. It has a Benedictine abbey which was founded in 1055 and is considered the oldest church in Hungary. The present church building is in part from the 11th, in part from the 16th century.

Tihua or Tihwa (tē'hwā'). Former name of Urumchi.

Ti'i (tē'ē). See Tiki.

Tijuana (tē.hwā'nā). City in NW Mexico, in Baja California, on the U.S. border; resort; race track. 16,486 (1940).

Tikal (tē.kāl'). Largest and perhaps oldest of the Maya cities, located in N central Petén, Guatemala. It was abandoned before the Spanish conquest, after having been occupied from at least the early 4th to the late 9th century. Its central cluster of pyramids, temples, and plazas covers a square mile, and lesser groupings extend in all directions for another two or three miles. In addition to having been evidently an important religious and artistic center in early Maya history, Tikal is also notable for including the five highest structures built by the Maya. Its tallest pyramid-temple rises 229 ft. from base to top.

Tikhonov (tyē'hō.nōf), Nikolay Semyonovich. b. at St. Petersburg, Dec. 3, 1896-. Russian author. He has to his credit a number of stories couched in an unconventional style, several books of lyrics, ballads, and verse translations, chiefly from the Georgian. In his youth he held that literature should be politically neutral, but eventually he took the opposite stand, in conformity with Soviet policy. For several years prior to the 1946 purge he held the post of chairman of the board of the Union of Soviet Writers.

Tiki (tē'kē). [Also: Ki'i, Ti'i.] First man in the mythology of C and E Polynesia. There is the usual local variation in detail; for example, in Tahiti alone, Tiki was molded of earth by the god Ta'aroa, or the god molded a woman and by her begot Tiki; other versions have Tiki himself molding the first woman. Where Tiki molds the earth-formed maid, they typically have a daughter, with whom Tiki commits incest. In some localities, Tiki personifies the procreative powers of the god Tane or takes on a specific phallic significance. As a common noun the word tiki or its counterpart is used in some Polynesian dialects to mean "image" or "statue." Myths about Tiki are not found in W Polynesia.

Tikopia (ti.kō'pī.a). Small island of raised coral formation, lying E of the Solomons, and inhabited by people of Polynesian stock. It is known especially because the research done there by the anthropologist Raymond Firth, and recorded in his We, the Tikopia, has provided the best account by a trained eyewitness of a little-changed Polynesian culture.

Tilak (tē'lāk), Bal Gangadhar. b. at Ratnagiri, Bombay, India, 1856; d. 1920. Indian nationalist leader, Sanskrit scholar, and author. The principal extremist figure in the nationalist struggle, he shaped Hindu nationalist ideology and launched the early campaign of Swaraj (self-rule) and Swadeshi (native industry) in 1905. Founder and editor of the Hindu nationalist journals, the Mahratta and the Kesari, he advocated political revolution but held conservative views on social and economic issues. He abjured government service and organized (1882) the Poona English School, and devoted himself to the cause of low-cost popular education. He founded the Deccan Education Society, of which the present Fergusson College was an offshoot (1885).

Tilburg (til'bērg; Dutch, til'be'ēh). City in S Netherlands, in the province of North Brabant, ab. 36 mi. SE of Rotterdam. Important chiefly as the center of the Dutch woolen and flannel industry, it also has linen, furniture, tobacco, metal, and electrical industries, and tanneries, dairies, and breweries. It is connected by waterways with the Maas and Rhine rivers. Its numerous Roman Catholic churches, convents, and educational facilities make it one of the focal points of Catholic cultural life in the Netherlands. 122,551 (est. 1951).

Tilburina (til.bŭ.rī'nā). Daughter of the governor of Tilbury Fort, a character in the tragedy rehearsed in Richard Brinsley Sheridan's The Critic; a type in which the sorrows of the tragedy heroine are burlesqued.

Tilbury (til'ber'ī, -bērī), Gervase (or Gervaise) of. See Gervase or Gervaise of Tilbury.

Tilden (til'den), Samuel Jones, b. at New Lebanon, N.Y., Feb. 9, 1814; d. at Greystone (now part of Yonkers), N.Y., Aug. 4, 1886. American statesman and lawyer. He was educated at Yale and at the University of New York, was admitted to the bar in 1841, was elected as a Democrat to the New York assembly in 1845, and was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1843. He became a Free-Soiler in 1848, was the Democratic candidate (unsuccessful) for attorney general of New York in 1855, and became chairman of the Democratic state committee in 1866. He was prominent in the successful contest against the "Tweed Ring," and was elected governor of New York in 1874, and served 1875-76. He promoted reform in the management of the state's canals and other commercial waterways. In 1876 he was Democratic candidate for president, and received about 250,000 more votes than Hayes, the Republican candidate, but only 184 uncontested electoral votes. The decision of contest was in favor of Hayes. Tilden declined to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for president in 1880 and 1884. He established a trust fund which still yields income in support of the New York Public Library. His works were edited by John Bigelow (1885).

Tilden, William Tatem, Jr. b. at Germantown, Pa., Feb. 10, 1893; d. at Hollywood, Calif., June 4, 1953. American tennis player. In 1918 he was a winner in the national men's doubles, and in 1920 he came to the top rank in American tennis by capturing the national singles championship from William M. Johnson. In the same year he was the most brilliant performer on the American team that won the Davis Cup from Australia, and also took the British singles title. In all, he wore the American singles crown eight years (1920-26, and 1929) and held the British singles title three times (1920, 1921, 1930). Moreover, he was the mainstay of the successful American defense of the Davis Cup through 1926. He was clay court singles champion from 1922 through 1927, shared the national men's doubles titles in 1923 and 1927, and in the course of his amateur career held various other honors, including the championships of Switzerland and of the Netherlands. Turning professional in 1930, Tilden led the professional singles field in 1931 and 1935; and in 1945, when he was 52 years of age, he and Vincent Richards won the professional men's doubles championship. Tilden acted on the professional stage and in motion pictures, and published several books, including The Art of Lawn Tennis (1921), Mixed Doubles (1923), The Pinch Quilter (1924), The Phantom Drive (1924), Acces, Places, and Faults (1938), and My Story (1948).

Tilea (tē.lā'ā), Viorel Virgil, b. at Hermannstadt, Hunagary (now Sibiu, Rumania), 1896— Rumanian diplomat and political leader; member (1929-33) of the Rumanian delegation to the League of Nations. He was minister at London (1939-40).

Tilghman (til'man), Matthew, b. in Queen Anne County, Md., Feb. 17, 1718; d. in Talbot County, Md., May 4, 1790. American Revolutionary patriot. A leader of the Revolutionary movement in Maryland, he headed (1774-76) the Maryland conventions, was chairman of the committee of correspondence for Talbot County, and was head (1774-76) of the Maryland delegations to the Continental Congress. He was president of the Maryland convention (1776) which drew up the first constitution of that state, and served (1776-83) in the Maryland senate.

Tilghman, Tench, b. in Talbot County, Md., Dec. 25, 1744; d. April 18, 1786. American Revolutionary soldier. Graduated (1761) from the College, Academy, and Charitable School of Philadelphia (now included in the University of Pennsylvania), he served (1775) as secretary and treasurer to the Continental Congress commissioners to the Six Nations, and became (1776) aide-de-camp to General Washington, serving in that capacity until the end of the Revolutionary War. He carried to the Continental Congress the report of Cornwallis's surrender (1781).

Tilghman, William Matthew. [Called "Bill"] Tilghman, b. at Fort Dodge, Iowa, July 4, 1854; d. at Cromwell, Okla., Nov. 1, 1924. American frontier peace officer. He was successively a buffalo hunter, scout, and cattleman in the Kansas country, also serving (1877) as deputy sheriff under William Barclay ("Bat") Masterson and as marshal of Dodge City, Kan. He took part in the Oklahoma "land rush" (1889), served as a deputy U.S. marshal (1891-1910) and as chief of police of Oklahoma City (1911-13), and in August, 1924, became marshal of Cromwell, where he was assassinated.

Tiliaventus (til'ī'a.ven'tus). Latin name of the Tagliamento.

Tillamook (til'a.mōk). Tribe of North American Indians formerly dwelling on an arm of the Pacific in NW Oregon. Their language, Tillamook, belonged to the coastal group of the Salishan family of North American Indian languages.

Tillamook. City in NW Oregon, county seat of Tillamook County, on a bay of the Pacific; processing center for butter, cheese, and other dairy products; sawmills; fisheries. 3,685 (1955).

Tillemont (tē.ye.mōn), Sébastien le Nain de, b. at Paris, Nov. 30, 1637; d. Jan. 10, 1698. French historian. He was educated among the Jansenists at Port-Royal, resided for many years at Beauvais, returned to Paris in 1670, and in 1679 retired to Tillemont, near Montreuil. He wrote Mémoires pour servir à l'histoire ecclésiastique des six premiers siècles (1693-1712) and Histoire des empereurs et des autres princes qui ont régné pendant les six premiers siècles de l'église (1690-1738), and collaborated in the writings of the Port-Royalists.

Tillet (til'et), Benjamin, b. at Bristol, England, 1860; d. at London, Jan. 27, 1943. English labor leader. He organized the General Federation of Trades Unions, National Transport Workers Federation, National Federation of General Workers, and International Transport Workers Federation. A member (1917-24, 1929-31) of Parliament, he supported the railroad strike of 1919 and led the dock strike of 1924.

Till Eulenspiegel (til o'f'en.shp'ē.gel). [Full title, Till Eulenspiegel's lustige Streiche, nach alter Schelmeweise—in Rondoform für grosses Orchester gesetzt; Eng. trans., "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks, in the Old Manner of Ragues—Composed in Rondo Form for Full Orchestra."] Orchestral poem (Opus 28) by Richard Strauss, first performed at Cologne on Nov. 5, 1895. The work follows the medieval story of the prankster's adventures and concludes with his hanging. (See also Eulenspiegel, Till or Tyl.)

Tilley (til'ī), Sir Samuel Leonard, b. at Gagetown, New Brunswick, Canada, May 8, 1818; d. at St. John, New Brunswick, June 24, 1896. Canadian statesman. He is remembered for his active part in the Quebec Conference (1864), and in the Westminster Conference (1867), where the British North America Bill was worked out. After the formation of the federal government of Canada, he served as minister of public works (1873) and as minister of finance (1878).

Tillich (til'ī'h), Paul, b. at Starzeddel, near Frankfurt on the Oder, Germany, Aug. 26, 1886—. German Protestant theologian and philosopher. He was graduated (Ph.D., 1911) from the University of Halle and served as a German army chaplain during World War I. He was one of the founders (1919) of the group of religious socialists at Berlin, taught (1919-24) at the University of Berlin, from 1924 to 1929 held the chair of theology at the universities of Marburg, Dresden, and Leipzig, and was professor of philosophy (1929-33) at the University of Frankfurt on the Main. He left Germany in 1933 and became (1934) professor of philosophical theology at the Union Theological Seminary, New York. Author of Mass and Geist (1922), Das System der Wissenschaften (1923), Kirche und Kultur (1924), Das Dämonische (1926), and The Interpretation of History (1936).

Tillman (til'man), Benjamin Ryan, b. in Edgefield County, S.C., Aug. 11, 1847; d. July 3, 1918. American politician. In 1890 and again in 1892 he was elected governor of South Carolina, and he was a U.S. senator (1895 et seq.) from that state.

Tillotson (til'ot.sən), John. b. at Sowerby, Yorkshire, England, in October, 1630; d. Nov. 22, 1691. Anglican prelate and theological writer. He was dean of Canterbury and of Saint Paul's, and became archbishop of Canterbury in 1691.

Tillsonburg (til'son.tərg). Town in S Ontario, Canada, ab. 35 mi. SE of London: marketing center of a rich tobacco-growing area. 5,330 (1951).

Tilly (til'i), Johann Tserclaes, Count of. b. at the castle of Tilly, near Gembloux, Belgium, in February, 1559; d. at Ingolstadt, Bavaria, Germany, April 30, 1632. General in the Spanish, Bavarian, and Imperial service. He served in the Netherlands, and in Hungary against the Turks (1600-02), became field marshal and commander of the Bavarian army in 1610, was commander of the forces of the Catholic League at the beginning of the Thirty Years' War, and won the victory of the White Mountain near Prague, on Nov. 8, 1620. He subdued Bohemia in 1621, conquered the Palatinate in 1622 and defeated Christian IV of Denmark at Lutter am Barenberge (Aug. 27, 1626), became imperial generalissimo in 1630, stormed Magdeburg (May 20, 1631), was defeated by Gustavus Adolphus at Breitenfeld, near Leipzig (Sept. 17, 1631), and was mortally wounded in a contest with Gustavus Adolphus near the Lech River, April 15, 1632. He was victorious in 36 battles.

Tilly Slowboy (slō'boy). See Slowboy, Tilly.

Tilney (til'ni), Frederick. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., June 4, 1875; d. on Center Island, N.Y., Aug. 7, 1938. American neurologist, notable for his research in connection with the criminally insane. He practiced (1905 et seq.) at New York, reorganized the neurological department of the Vanderbilt Clinic, and was a professor (1914-38) at Columbia. He pioneered in the use of narcosis for treatment of drug addiction, and investigated infantile paralysis, epilepsy, and sleeping sickness. Author of The Brain from Ape to Man (2 vols., 1928) and others.

Tilsit (til'sit). [Russian, Sovetsk.] City in the U.S.S.R., formerly in East Prussia, situated on the Memel River ab. 60 mi. NE of Kaliningrad (Königsberg). It has varied industries, including a large paper mill, and trade in lumber, fish, grain, hemp, flax, and others. It is famous for the peace between France on one side and Russia and Prussia on the other, agreed upon there in July, 1807 (the actual meeting between Napoleon and Czar Alexander took place on a raft in the river, on June 25, 1807). Pop. ab. 60,000.

Tilton (til'ton), 1st Baron of. See Keynes, John Maynard.

Tilton, James. b. in Kent County, Del., June 1, 1745; d. May 14, 1822. American military surgeon. He was graduated (M.D., 1771) from the medical department of the College of Philadelphia, practiced medicine at Dover, Del., was named (1776) regimental surgeon of Delaware troops, serving in the actions at Long Island, White Plains, Trenton, and Princeton, and headed (1777-80) hospitals in New Jersey and Maryland. Promoted (1780) to senior hospital physician and surgeon, he resumed his practice at Dover after the close of the war, was a member (1783-85) of the Continental Congress, and was surgeon general of the U.S. Army (1813-15). He was the author of Economical Observations on Military Hospitals: and the Prevention and Cure of Diseases Incident to an Army (1813), and responsible for the issuance of The Regulations for the Medical Department (1814), which was the first to define the responsibilities of medical personnel.

Tilton, Theodore. b. at New York, Oct. 2, 1835; d. at Paris, May 25, 1907. American editor, remembered for his role in the scandal involving his wife and Henry Ward Beecher, concerning which full charges were made public in 1872. In 1874 he made a formal charge of adultery against Beecher and brought a suit (1875) charging Beecher with criminal conversation with Mrs. Tilton and demanding 100,000 dollars in damages. The jury was divided, although Mrs. Tilton admitted (1878) that her husband's accusations were true. He lived (1883 et seq.) in England, Germany, and France. Author of The King's Ring (1867), The Sexton's Tale, and Other Poems (1867), Tempest Tossed (1874), Swabian Stories (1882), Heart's Ease (1894), and Sonnets to the Memory of Frederick Douglass (1895).

Tim (tim), Tiny. See Cratchit, Tim.

Timaeus (tim'ē.us). fl. c400 B.C. Greek Pythagorean philosopher of Locri in Italy. He was long reputed to be the author of a philosophical work entitled On the Soul of the World, but scholars now generally agree in assigning the work to a later period. He appears in Plato's dialogue named for him.

Timaeus, fl. c352-256 B.C. Greek historian of Tauro-menium in Sicily. He lived in exile at Athens. He wrote a history of Italy and Sicily from the earliest times to 264 B.C., fragments of which have been preserved.

Timan (tē.mān'). Group of hills in the U.S.S.R., in the Komi Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic and the Arkhangelsk oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. They extend NW from the Ural Mountains to the Arctic Ocean. Length, ab. 500 mi.; peak elevation, ab. 1,545 ft.

Timannee (tim'a.nē). See Temne.

Timanthes (tim'an.thēz). b. in the island of Kythnos, in the Cyclades, fl. c400 B.C. Greek painter of Sicyon. He is known mainly as the painter of one of the great pictures of antiquity, the Sacrifice of Iphigenia, in which Agamemnon conceals his uncontrollable grief by covering his head with his mantle. This picture was a favorite of Cicero. Pliny's remark that there is "always something more implied than expressed in his work" is suggestive of bold and generalized execution.

Timaru (tim'a.rō). Seaport in New Zealand, situated on the E coast of South Island ab. midway of the coast of the Canterbury Bight, ab. 90 mi. SW of Christchurch. 22,851 (1951).

Timber. See under Discoveries Made Upon Men and Matters.

Timbira (tim.bē'ra). Collective term for several Indian tribes of NE Brazil, once numerous but now greatly reduced in numbers, inhabiting the area in the vicinity of latitude 5° S. and longitudes 44°-48° W. Their languages are of the Ge stock.

Timbuktu (tim.buk.tō', tim.buk'tō). [Also: Timbuctoo; French, Tomboutou.] Historic city in Feha West Africa, situated near the S border of the Sahara and ab. 10 mi. N of the Niger River in the territory of French Sudan. It has considerable trade in gold, gum, salt, and ivory, being a center of various caravan routes from Morocco, the Guinea coast, and elsewhere. It was occupied by the Tuaregs in the 11th century, and later by Arabs and various other peoples. It was captured by Joffre in 1894. 6,891 (1946).

Timby (tim'bi), Theodore Ruggles. b. in Dutchess County, N.Y., April 5, 1822; d. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Nov. 9, 1909. American inventor, who developed the revolving turret as early as 1843, the principle of his invention being used (1861-62) by John Ericsson, who incorporated it as an essential part of the ironclad Monitor. He took out (1862) patents on a revolving battery tower and a revolving tower with electrically powered guns. He also patented a barometer (1857, 1862) and a gun carriage (1871).

Tim Cratchit (tim krach'it). See Cratchit, Tim.

Time. Weekly news magazine. The publication was founded by Briton Hadden and Henry Robinson Luce in 1923. In 1938 the magazine absorbed The Literary Digest.

Time Importuned. Volume of poetry by Sylvia Townsend Warner, published in 1928.

Time of Your Life, The. Play (1939) by William Saroyan.

Times, The. See also New York Times.

Times, The. A leading British newspaper, published in London, founded in 1785 under the title The London Daily Universal Register. The present name was adopted in 1788.

Times-Mirror Co. v. California, 314 U.S. 252 (1941). U.S. Supreme Court decision reversing a California state court's pronouncement of contempt for the publication of opinion concerning a case still in process of adjudication. The majority opinion delivered by Justice Hugo Black was notable for its application of the "clear and present danger" doctrine formulated by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in Schenck v. United States (1919). The First Amendment, said Justice Black, "does not speak equivocally. It prohibits any law 'abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press.' It must be taken as a command of the broadest scope that explicit language, read in the context of a liberty-loving society, will allow." The dissenting opinion by Justice Felix Frankfurter maintained that the majority decision had impaired judicial independence. The case was decided together with Bridges v. California (1941).

Timiş (tē'mēsh). [Serbo-Croatian, Tamiš; Hungarian, Temes; Latin, Thibiscus.] River in W Rumania and NE Yugoslavia which joins the Danube ab. 8 mi. E of Belgrade. Length, ab. 275 mi.

Timiskaming Lake (tīm'ēshwā'kīng). Lake in SW Quebec and E Ontario, Canada. Its outlet is the Ottawa River. Length, ab. 60 mi.; elevation, 584 ft.; area, 110 sq. mi.

Timişoara (tē'mēshwā'rā). [Hungarian, Temesvár.] City in NW Rumania, the capital of the province of Banat, situated on the Timiş River ab. 30 mi. S of Arad. It is an agricultural trading center, with flour mills, a weaving industry, and manufactures of metal goods, textiles, leather, tobacco, furniture, and chemicals. It was destroyed by the Mongols in 1242, and taken by the Turks in 1552. It was captured by Prince Eugene of Savoy in 1716 and reunited with Hungary. In 1781 it was made a Hungarian free city. In 1920 the city passed to Rumania. In World War II, after the break between Rumania and the Axis, it was temporarily occupied by Hungarian troops in the fall of 1944. 111,987 (1948).

Timken (tīm'ken), Henry. b. near Bremen, Germany, Aug. 16, 1831; d. March 16, 1909. American inventor and manufacturer. He was brought (1838) to the U.S., founded (1855) his own carriage plant at St. Louis (which he conducted intermittently until his retirement in 1897), and patented the "Timken Spring" (1877) for carriages, and a tapered roller bearing. He organized and became president of the Timken Roller Bearing Axle Company.

Tim Linkinwater (tīm līng'kīn.wō'tēr, -wōt.ēr). See Linkinwater, Tim.

Timmendorfer Strand (tīm'ēn.dōr.fēr shtrānt). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in Oldenburg, situated on the Lübeck Bucht, a bay of the Baltic Sea, ab. 13 mi. N of Lübeck: one of the most popular seaside resorts on the Baltic Sea. 10,572 (1946).

Timmermans (tīm'ēr.māns), Felix. b. at Lierre, Belgium, 1886; d. 1947. Belgian novelist. Interested in folklore and the archaic, he wrote in Flemish and designed and illustrated his own work. His writings were translated into German and widely read in Germany.

Timmins (tīm'inz). Mining town in N Ontario, Canada, ab. 476 mi. NE of Toronto. It is in the heart of a rich gold-mining area and is ab. 4 mi. from the three chief mines of the region. 27,743 (1951).

Timne (tīm'nē). See Temne.

Timocrate (tē.mō.krāt). Tragedy by Thomas Corneille, produced in 1656.

Timoleon (tīmō'lē.on, tī-). b. at Corinth; d. 337 or 336 B.C. Greek general and statesman. He was sent from Corinth to aid Syracuse against Dionysius the Younger and Hicetas in 344, delivered Syracuse from Dionysius the Younger in 343, reorganized the city and the Greek power in Sicily, and defeated the Carthaginians at the Crimisus River.

Timomachus (tīmōm'ā.kus). fl. in the 1st century B.C. Byzantine painter. According to Pliny, Julius Caesar paid a large sum for two of his pictures, an Ajax and a Medea. The Medea of Timomachus was not less praised in song and epigram than the Aphrodite of Apelles (an echo of the original may perhaps be seen in some of the Pompeian wall paintings). An Iphigenia in Tauris and a Gorgon were also celebrated.

Timon (tīm'on). fl. in the last part of the 5th century B.C. Athenian misanthrope. He is the subject of the tragedy Timon of Athens by Shakespeare.

Timone (tē.mō'nā). Comedy by Matteo Mario Boiardo, produced before 1494. It was the first original Italian comedy.

Timon of Athens (tīm'on; ath'ēnz). Tragedy by Shakespeare, which unquestionably contains much by another hand. It was produced c1608, was printed in the folio of 1623, and was adapted by Shadwell.

Timon of Philius (fī'ūs). [Called the "Sillographer."] fl. c280 B.C. Greek skeptical philosopher. He wrote satiric poems called Siloi (hence he was called the "Sillographer"), in hexameter verse, ridiculing all the dogmatic schools of philosophy. Fragments of them survive.

Timor (tē.mōr', tē'mōr'). Island in the SE part of the Malay Archipelago, in the Lesser Sunda group, the SW part in Indonesia and the NE part a possession of Portugal; a small exclave on the N shore and several small offshore islands also are Portuguese. The surface is largely mountainous, of volcanic origin (highest point, ab. 9,700 ft.). Chief products are coffee, sandalwood, copra, and wax. The island was settled by the Portuguese in the 16th century and the W part taken by the Dutch in the 17th century; it was divided between the two countries by an agreement drawn up in 1860. The capital of Portuguese Timor is Dili; area, ab. 7,330 sq. mi.; pop. 442,378 (1950). Chief town of Indonesian Timor (formerly Netherlands Timor) is Kupang; area, ab. 5,500 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 350,000.

Timoshenko (tē.mō.sheng'kō), Semyon Konstantinovich. b. at Furmanska, in Bessarabia, 1895—. Russian army officer. Of peasant stock, he entered the Russian army in 1915, during World War I. He joined the revolutionary forces in 1917, rapidly advanced to general rank, and participated with Stalin and Voroshilov in the defense of Tsaritsyn (now Stalingrad). After the defeat of the counterrevolutionaries and interventionist forces, he studied military science in the U.S.S.R. and abroad. In 1939 he directed the Russian occupation of the Byelorussian and Ukrainian portions of Poland, and had a part in the war with Finland (1939–40). Created a marshal and appointed commissar of defense in 1940, after the German attack on the U.S.S.R. in June, 1941, he was commander in the central sector of the front until November of that year, when he took over command of the Russian forces around Rostov and the Sea of Azov, and staged the first brief Soviet counteroffensive, which balked the Nazi thrust toward Caucasus and its oil fields. Thereafter Timoshenko all but disappeared from the news until 1944, when armies under his direction drove the Nazis and Rumanians from his native Bessarabia.

Timoshenko, Stephen. b. at Shpotovka, Kiev, Russia, Dec. 23, 1878—. Russian scientist and teacher, noted for his studies in mechanics; professor of theoretical and applied mechanics at Stanford University.

Timote (tē.mō'tā). [Also, Muku.] Group of South American Indian tribes of the highlands of Venezuela. Early explorers described them as peaceable agriculturists who practiced few arts. Their language, Timote, is now classified as an independent family. The Timote family embraces two large groups of languages, of which one, the Timote proper, embraces five subgroups and 99 dialects.

Timotheus (tīmō'thé.ūs -mōth'ē.ūs; tī-). d. c354 B.C. Athenian naval commander; son of Conon. He conquered Corfu in 375 B.C., and took Samos from the Persians in 365.

Timothy (tīm'ō.thī). [Also, Timotheus.] Christian missionary, a disciple and companion of the apostle Paul, who addressed two epistles to him.

Timothy Crabshaw (krab'shō). See Crabshaw, Timothy.

Timothy Sharp (shārp). See Sharp, Timothy.

Timour (tīm'ōr). See Tamerlane.

Timpanogos (tīm.pā.nō'gos), Mount. See under Wasatch Range.

Timrod (tīm'rōd), Henry. [Called the "Laureate of the Confederacy."] b. at Charleston, S.C., Dec. 8, 1828; d. at Columbia, S.C., Oct. 6, 1867. American poet, author of Confederate war lyrics. His Poems, with a memoir by Paul Hamilton Hayne, were edited in 1873. His other works include Katie (1884) and Complete Poems (1899). Among his best-known individual poems are The Cotton Boll, Ode Sung at the Occasion of Decorating the Graves of the Confederate Dead, and Ethnogenesis.

Timsah (tīm.sā'), Lake. [Also, Lake Timsa.] Small lake in NE Egypt, on the shores of which Ismailia is located. It is traversed by the Suez Canal.

Timucua (tē.mō'kwā). [Also, Timuqua.] North American Indian tribe, now extinct, that inhabited C Florida. The language formed an independent linguistic family.

Timur (tīm'ōr) or Timur Bey (bā') or Timur-Leng (-leng'). See Tamerlane.

Tina (tē'nā), Monte. See under Cordillera Central, in Hispaniola.

Tinaga (tē.nā.gā'). See under Calagua Islands.

Tinayre (tin.a.ve'l'). See Tinnevelly.

Tinayre (tē'ner), Marcelle. [Maiden name, Chasteau.] b. at Tulle, France, 1872—, French novelist. Author of Avant l'amour (1897), La Rebelle (1915), Madeleine au miroir (1913), Les Lampes voilées (1921), Figures dans la nuit (1926), and others.

Tinbergen (tin'ber.chen), Jan. b. at The Hague, Netherlands, April 12, 1903—, Dutch economist. He was graduated (Ph.D., 1929) from the University of Leiden, became (1929) a statistician with the Central Statistical Bureau, where he was named (1938) chief of the division on business-cycle research, and organized and became head of the Central Planning Bureau of the Netherlands government. He was appointed (1933) professor at the Netherlands School of Economics. He is the author of Business Cycles in the United States, 1919-32 (1939), Economische Bewegingsleer (1942), and International Economic Cooperation (1946).

Tinchebray (tānsh.brā). Town in NW France, in the department of Orne, ab. 44 mi. NW of Alençon. It produces hardware. The church of Saint-Rémy dates from the 12th-13th centuries. Here on Sept. 28, 1106, Henry I of England defeated and captured his brother Robert, Duke of Normandy, 2,984 (1946).

Tinctoris (tingk.tō'ris), Joannes. b. at Poperinghe, Belgium, c1446; d. at Nivelles, Belgium, before Oct. 12, 1511. Flemish musicologist and composer. Author of the first printed musical dictionary, Terminorum musice diffinitorium (c1474).

Tindal (tin'dal), Matthew. b. at Beer-Ferrers, Devonshire, England, c1656; d. at Oxford, England, Aug. 16, 1733. English deist. He studied at Lincoln College, Oxford. In 1685 he joined the Roman Catholic Church, but returned in 1688 to the Church of England. He published An Essay of Obedience to the Supreme Powers (1694), and The Rights of the Christian Church asserted against the Romish and all other priests who claim an independent power over it (1706-09). His defense of the theory of state control of the church led to the proscription of the work, Dec. 12, 1707. He continued to defend his deistic position, and in 1730 published Christianity as Old as the Creation, or the Gospel a Republication of the Religion of Nature, a work recognized as the "Bible" of deism. The work was translated into German by J. Lorenz Schmidt in 1741, and had great influence on German theology. Tindal called himself a "Christian deist."

Tindal or Tindale (tin'dal), William. See Tyndale, William.

Tindaro (tēn'dā.rō), Marchese del. Title of Rampolla, Mariano.

Tineh (ti.nā'). See Athabaskan.

Tinel (tē.nel), Edgar. b. at Sinay, Belgium, March 27, 1854; d. Oct. 28, 1912. Belgian composer and pianist. His most important work is the oratorio Franciscus (1888).

Tineo (tē.nā'ō). Commune, consisting of many small parishes, in NW Spain, in the province of Oviedo, ab. 32 mi. W of Oviedo: agricultural and livestock trade; dairies; coal and iron mines. 21,338 (1940).

Tinggian or Tinguian (ting.gē.ān'). [Also, Itneg.] Malayo-Polynesian-speaking, partly Christianized tribe in the mountains of NW Luzon (chiefly Abra province), Philippines. 29,920 (1939).

Tinghai (ding'hī'). Capital of the Chushan Archipelago, China, in the East China Sea, off the coast of Chekiang province. Pop. ab. 15,000.

Tingis (tin'jis). Latin name of Tangier.

Tingitana (tin.jit.tā.na). Ancient Roman province, included in the N part of what is now Morocco.

Tingley (ting'li), Katherine Augusta Westcott. b. at Newburyport, Mass., July 6, 1847; d. in Sweden, July 11, 1929. American theosophist, head of the theosophical movement throughout the world from 1896, a successor to H. P. Blavatsky and William Q. Judge. She was the editor of The Theosophical Path.

Tinia (tin'ia). Chief god of the ancient Etruscan pantheon. He is equated with the Greek Zeus in that he was both supreme deity and thunder god. His attribute was the triple thunderbolt, and any spot struck by him became sacred.

Tinian (tē.nē.ān, tin.iān'). Island of the Marianas, ab. 3 mi. SW of Saipan and ab. 120 mi. NE of Guam. During the period of Japanese mandate (1919-44) extensive plantations of sugar cane were developed, and numerous Japanese colonists and Korean and Okinawan laborers immigrated. The island was occupied by U.S. forces in July, 1944, and became one of the major U.S. air bases in the Far East during the latter part of World War II; it was from Tinian that the atomic bombs were flown to Japan. Area, 39 sq. mi.

Tinirau (tē.nē'rou). Hero of a favorite W Polynesian myth, in which he wins the beautiful goddess Hina. In one version, kind treatment of her pet hen gains him her favor. In others she rides across the sea to him on the back of a turtle.

"Tin Islands." See under Cassiterides.

Tinker (ting'ker), Chauncey Brewster. b. at Auburn, Me., Oct. 22, 1876—, American professor of English and authority on Samuel Johnson and his age in English literature. He was an instructor (1903 et seq.) and professor (1913-45) at Yale. His works include Dr. Johnson and Fanny Burney (1911), The Salon and English Letters (1915), and Poet and Painter (1938).

Tinker, Clarence Leonard. b. in what is now the state of Oklahoma (near the Kansas border), Nov. 21, 1887; killed in action June 7, 1942. American air-force officer in World War II, a member of the Osage Nation. A graduate (1918) of Wentworth Military Academy at Lexington, Mo., he served in the Philippine constabulary, transferred (1912) to the U.S. army as a second lieutenant, and entered (1920) the air service. He was appointed (1941) head of the 3rd Interceptor Command at Drew Field, Fla., and commanded (December, 1941, et seq.) Army Air Force units in Hawaii.

Tinker Bell (bel). Character in Sir James M. Barrie's play Peter Pan (1904). Peter's loyal friend, she risks her own life in order to save his from the cruel Captain Hook. She is not seen or heard on the stage, except as a faint light and a tinkling sound.

"Tin King." See Patiño, Simón Ituri.

Tinné (tin'é), Alexandrine (or Alexine). b. at The Hague, Netherlands, Oct. 17, 1839; murdered in the vicinity of Murzuk, Fezzan, Libya, Aug. 11, 1869. Dutch traveler, of English descent. She traveled extensively in Europe and the East, and started for the interior of Africa in 1869, but was murdered by her escort.

Tinnevelly (tin.gē.ve'l'). [Also, Tinavelly.] District in Madras state, Union of India, ab. 50 mi. N of Cape Comorin; cotton, rubber, and nuts. Area, 4,342 sq. mi.; pop. 2,244,533 (1941).

Tinnevelly. [Also, Tinavelly.] City in the district of Tinnevelly, Madras, India, ab. 50 mi. N of Cape Comorin; trading center. 60,676 (1941).

Tino (tē'nō) or Tinos (tē'nōs). See Tenos.

Tinseau (tān.sō), Léon de. b. at Autun, France, 1844; d. at Paris, 1921. French writer. Author of Robert d'Éprieux (1882), Ma Cousine Pot-au-Feu (1888), Le Secret de Lady Marie (1918), and other novels and travel books.

Tintagel (tin.taj'el). [Also, Trevena.] Civil parish and seaside resort in SW England, in Cornwall, situated on the Atlantic coast ab. 5 mi. NW of Camelford. It has no direct rail connections, being reached by rail to Camelford, ab. 241 mi. SW of London. 1,231 (1931).

Tintagel Head. Promontory in SW England, in Cornwall, ab. 5 mi. NW of Camelford. The ruins of the famous castle which is one of the legendary birthplaces of King Arthur may still be seen here. Elevation, ab. 300 ft.

Tintern Abbey (tin'tern). Ruined medieval abbey in Monmouthshire, England, situated on the river Wye ab. 17 mi. NW of Bristol. The ivy-clad church, dating from the middle of the 13th century, is one of the most picturesque of English ruins, and was celebrated in verse by William Wordsworth. The vaulting is gone, but otherwise it is well preserved. It retains most of its window tracery, and has a fine west portal of two cusped arches, and a single very large window, a typical English feature, in each of the main and transept façades. The monastic buildings survive in part.

Tinto (tin'tō). Mountain in S Scotland, in Lanarkshire, ab. 7 mi. SE of Lanark. Elevation, 2,335 ft.

Tinto, Dick. Light-hearted artist who is supposed to relate Scott's tale The Bride of Lammermoor to Peter Mattieson.

Tintoretto (tin.tō.ret'tō; Italian, tén.tō.rà.t'tō). [Also: Tintoret (tin.tō.ret); original name, Jacopo Robusti, called Tintoretto from the trade of his father, a dyer.] b. at Venice, Sept. 16, 1518; d. there, May 31, 1594. Venetian painter. He entered the atelier of Titian, with whom it does not appear that he stayed very long. From Titian he went to Andrea Schiavone. In 1546 he received his first important order, for the decoration of the choir of Santa Maria dell'Orto. The compositions were over 50 ft. high. They brought him a considerable reputation and a commission to paint the Miracle of Saint Mark, now in the Accademia delle Arti at Venice. In 1560 Tintoretto began decorations for the Scuola di San Rocco and the doge's palace. The famous Crucifixion of the Scuola di San Rocco dates from this time. In 1576 he painted the ceiling of the great hall. In 1560 also he seems to have taken the place of Titian as court painter at Venice. The great conflagrations of 1574 and 1577 threw much of the work of restoration into the hands of Tintoretto. The work accomplished by him on these commissions includes the great Paradise (1589-90).

Tinurtium (tī.nēr'shum). Latin name of Tournus.

Tiny Tim (tim). See Cratchit, Tim.

Tioga (tī.ō'gā). See under Athens, Pa.

Tioga River. Small river in N Pennsylvania and S New York, which unites near Corning with the Cohocton to form the Chemung. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Tionontati (tē'ōn.on.tā'tē). See Tobacco Nation.

Tiphсах (tīf'sā). See Thapsacus.

Tipitaka (tī.pī.tā'kā). Pali name of Tripitaka.

Tipitapa (tē.pā.tā'pā). River in SW Nicaragua, flowing from Lake Managua to Lake Nicaragua. Length, ab. 20 mi.

Tipkin (tīp'kin), Biddy. Romantic character in Richard Steele's The Tender Husband.

Tippecanoe (tīp'pē.kā.nō). [Former name, Tippecanoe City.] Village in W Ohio, in Miami County. 3,304 (1950).

Tippecanoe (tīp'pē.kā.nō). River in N Indiana which joins the Wabash ab. 10 mi. NE of Lafayette. Length, ab. 185 mi.

Tippecanoe, Battle of the. Victory gained in Tippecanoe County, Ind., near the Tippecanoe River, Nov. 7, 1811, by a U.S. force under General William Henry Harrison over the Indians under Tenskwatawa, the "Prophet," brother of Tecumseh. It was this victory which provided Harrison's presidential campaign slogan of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too."

Tippera (tīp'ē.rā). District in the Chittagong division, East Bengal, Pakistan, on the E shore of the Bay of Bengal; tea plantations. Capital, Comilla; area, 2,531 sq. mi.; pop. 3,860,139 (1941).

Tipperary (tīp'ē.rār'ī). [Irish, Thiobraid Arann.] Inland county of the Irish Republic in Munster province. It is bounded on the N by County Offaly, on the E by Counties Laoighis and Kilkenny, on the S by County Waterford, on the SW by County Cork, on the W by Counties Limerick and Clare, and on the NW by County Galway. The geographical county is divided into a North Riding and a South Riding, administrative counties. The surface of much of the county is level, but several small ranges of mountains lie either wholly or partly within the county, chief among which are the Silvermine Mountains in the NW and the Galty Mountains and Knockmealdown Mountains in the SW. The lowlands are generally very fertile; especially so is the Golden Vale of Limerick and Tipperary, a lowland, mostly in pasture, extending W from Cashel, in County Tipperary, to Limerick and the river Shannon, in County Limerick. This is said to be the most fertile part of Ireland. The S part of Tipperary was formerly known as Ormonde. Clonmel is the county seat; area, ab. 1,643 sq. mi.; pop. of North Riding, 57,004 (1951); of South Riding, 76,343 (1951); total, 133,347 (1951).

Tipperary. [Irish, Thiobraid Arann.] Urban district and market town in the Irish Republic, in Munster province and County Tipperary, situated on the river Arra ab. 24 mi. SE of Limerick. It has a trade in agricultural products, 5,149 (1951).

Tippermuir (tīp'ēr.mūr). Place near Perth, Scotland, where the Royalists under James Graham, 1st Marquis of Montrose, defeated (Sept. 1, 1644) the Covenanters.

Tipposahib (tīp'pō.sā'hīb). [Also, Tipu Saib.] b. 1749; killed at the storming of Seringapatam, May 4, 1799. Sultan of Mysore (1782-99). He was distinguished in the Mahadatta war (1775-79), and defeated Braithwaite on the Coleroon in 1782. After he succeeded his father in 1782, he gained several successes in the war with the British, and concluded peace in 1784. He attacked Travancore (1789-90), and provoked the second Mysore war, was defeated by Charles Cornwallis at Arikera in 1791, and concluded peace and ceded about half of his dominions to the British in 1792. He intrigued against the British who renewed the war in 1799. He was killed defending his capital.

Tipptoo Tib (tīp'pō tib). [Also, Tipptoo Tib (tip); original name, Hamidi bin Muhammad.] b. c1837; d. at Zanzibar, June 14, 1905. Trader and slaver in equatorial Africa, of Arabian and African descent, influential in the Upper Congo region. He aided Verney Cameron in 1874 and H. M. Stanley in 1876, and the Emin relief expedition in 1887. Appointed governor of the Stanley Falls district for the Congo State, he had to leave when his presence was resented by the Belgians.

Tipptoft (tīp'toft) or Tibetot (tib'tot), John. [Title, Earl of Worcester; called the "Butcher of England."] b. at Everton, Bedfordshire, England, c1427; executed at London, May 18, 1470. English politician and scholar, noted for his many executions as lord constable under Edward IV. Always a Yorkist, Tipptoft was treasurer of the exchequer (1452), and ambassador (1459) to the council of Mantua, where he apparently studied the methods of the Italian princes. A favorite of Edward IV, he was appointed (1462) lord constable of England, a post he held until 1467 and again in 1470. In a manner resembling the high-handed procedure of Italian Renaissance rulers, he summarily executed John de Vere, 12th Earl of Oxford, and other Lancastrians. Later, under what was angrily termed "Paduan law," he tried and had hanged, drawn, and quartered several of the king's enemies. Upon Henry VI's regaining the throne, he fled, was hiding among herdsmen, and was tried and beheaded.

Tipton (tīp'ton). Municipal borough and manufacturing town in C England, in Staffordshire, ab. 8 mi. NW of Birmingham, ab. 121 mi. NW of London by rail; manufactures include stoves, boilers, and other metal products. 39,352 (1951).

Tipton. City in C Indiana, county seat of Tipton County. 5,633 (1950).

Tipton. City in E Iowa, county seat of Cedar County. 2,633 (1950).

Tipuani (tē.pwā'nē). River in E Bolivia, near La Paz. The gravels of the river at one time contained a considerable amount of gold. Length, ab. 40 mi.

Tipu Saib (tē'pō.sā'b). See Tipptoo Sahib.

Tirabeque (tē.rā.bē'kā). A pseudonym of Lafuente or La Fuente, Modesto.

Tiraboschi (tē.rā.bōs'kē), Girolamo. b. at Bergamo, Italy, Dec. 28, 1731; d. near Modena, Italy, June 3, 1794. Italian historian of literature. He was a professor (1755-70) at Milan, and later librarian to the Duke of Modena. His chief work is Storia della letteratura italiana (13 vols., 1771-82).

Tirana (tē.rā'nā). [Also, Tiranē (tē.rā'ne).] Capital of Albania, in the C part, ab. 20 mi. E of the Adriatic Sea. It is the seat of a university. There are several manufacturing plants, textiles being one of the chief products. A hydroelectric power plant was constructed nearby in 1947. The city was occupied during most of World War II by Italy. Pop. ab. 60,000.

Tirard (tē.rār), Paul. b. at Croissy, Seine-et-Oise, France, June 2, 1879; d. Dec. 24, 1945. French government official, head of the Allied occupation in the German Rhineland from 1919 to 1930. He was named (1912) a civilian aide to Marsal Louis Lyauté in Morocco.

Tirard, Pierre Emmanuel. b. at Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 27, 1827; d. at Paris, Nov. 4, 1893. French politician. He was minister of trade and agriculture (1879-82).

minister of finance (1882-85), premier (December, 1887-March, 1888; February, 1889-March, 1890), and minister of finance (1892-93). His premierships were held in times of severe crisis, the first arising from the fall of President Jules Grévy over the scandal involving his son-in-law Daniel Wilson, the second from the increased efforts of Georges Boulanger to take over the French government.

Tiraspol (tî.râs'pôl). Fortified town in the U.S.S.R., in the Moldavian Soviet Socialist Republic, situated on the Dniester River ab. 59 mi. NW of Odessa; food-processing industries. 43,700 (est. 1940).

Tir Eoghain (tir 'ô'in). Irish name of Tyrone.

Tiresias (tî.rê'si.as). In Greek legend, a blind Theban seer. He was said to have been blinded by Athena, whom he saw bathing. The goddess relented, but was unable to restore his sight, and so gave him instead the vision of the seer and understanding of bird and animal languages. Another legend states that he was blinded for revealing the secrets of the gods. At the suggestion of Circe, Odysseus descended into Hades to ask him how to return to Ithaca.

Tirhakah (tîr'hak.a, tîr.hă'ka). [Also: Tahark, Taharka, Tarakos, Tarkos.] In the Bible, king (688-663 B.C.) of Egypt (XXVth dynasty) and Ethiopia who encountered Sennacherib while he was on his expedition against Judah (Isa. xxxvii, 9; 2 Kings, xix, 9). As Shabaka's general, he was defeated by Sennacherib in the battle of Eltekeh (701 B.C.), and by his son and successor Esarhaddon (680-668 B.C.); the entire country was conquered by the Assyrian king, the names of the cities changed, and over the 20 principalities into which the country was divided were placed vassals loyal to Assyria. This took place after 673 B.C. Tirhakah soon put to flight the Assyrian vassals, and got possession of Memphis. Assurbanipal (668-626), in whose annals he is first mentioned by name (as Tarku), defeated him in the battle of Karbanit (c668). The 20 kings were restored, and Necho was put at their head. Soon afterward these 20 vassals entered into a plot with Tirhakah against Assyria, but the plot was discovered by the Assyrian garrison of Egypt and frustrated. Tirhakah fled, and died in the place of his refuge. According to Manetho, Tirhakah (Tarkos, Tarakos) was the last of the Ethiopian kings in Egypt. The Egyptian monuments call this third and last king of the XXVth "Ethiopian" dynasty Tahark or Taharka.

Tirich Mir (tî.rî'ch mîr). See under Hindu Kush.

Tiriki (tî.rê'kî). Small Bantu subgroup of the Kavirondo peoples of Kenya, in E Africa.

Tirlemont (tîr.lê.môh). [Flemish, Tienen, Thienen.] Town in C Belgium, in the province of Brabant, ab. 26 mi. E of Brussels: metal industries; hosiery manufactures; agricultural trade. The town was taken by John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, in 1705; near it the French under C. F. Dumouriez defeated the Austrians in 1793. In World War I the Germans defeated the Belgians here on Aug. 18-19, 1914. Pop. 22,383 (1947).

Tirnovo (tîr.nô.vô). See Trnovo.

Tirnstein (tîrn'shtîn). See Dürnstein.

Tiro (tî.rô), Marcus Tullius. fl. in the 1st century B.C. Roman freedman and amanuensis of Cicero, supposed to have greatly developed, or to have invented, stenography.

Tirocinium (tî.rô.sî'nî.um). Poem (1785) by William Cowper, attacking the public schools (which were, and are, in England the great private schools, most notably Eton, Harrow, Rugby, and Winchester).

Tirol (tî.rôl, -ôl, tî.rô'l, tî.rô'l). [Also, Tyrol.] Province of Austria, bounded by Vorarlberg, Bavaria, Salzburg, Carinthia, Italy, and Switzerland, and including East Tyrol (Ost-Tirol); part of the Tyrol region (formerly all Austrian, now divided between Austria and Italy). The surface is mountainous, comprising the upper valleys of the Isch, Adige, and Drava rivers and the middle valley of the Inn. The population is concentrated in the Inn valley. It was important as a mining country in the Middle Ages and still has salt, zinc, and lead deposits. The main sources of income are dairy farming, lumbering, and the tourist trade. There are rich sources of water power. Capital, Innsbruck; area, 4,884 sq. mi.; pop. 426,499 (1951). (For history, see Tyrol.)

Tirol (tî.rô'lô). Italian name of the Tyrol.

Tirpitz (tîr'pîts), Alfred von. b. at Küstrin, Germany, March 19, 1849; d. at Ebenhausen, Germany, March 6, 1930. German admiral. He became secretary of the imperial navy office (1897) and a Prussian minister of state (1898); in the latter capacity he organized the modern German navy. In World War I he opposed what he considered to be the too cautious policies of Chancellor Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, and advocated a naval battle with the British which would match major elements of both fleets, and thus make possible a clear-cut decision. There can be no question that it was this in mind that the bulk of the German fleet was committed to action in the Battle of Jutland (May 31, June 1, 1916), with results which were, in the long run, certainly decisive (the Germans sank a slightly larger amount of British tonnage than they lost themselves, but their losses were nevertheless so great as to persuade them to break off battle; the German fleet never again risked a decisive encounter with any major Allied elements in World War I). Tirpitz was also responsible in large part for Germany's policy of unrestricted submarine warfare that later brought the U.S. into the war. He resigned (1916) to become, with Wolfgang Kapp, a founder of the Fatherland Party in 1917. From 1924 to 1928 he was a member of the Reichstag (German National People's Party); he had a leading part in bringing about Hindenburg's decision to run for the presidency in 1925.

Tirso (tîr'sô). ' [Ancient name, Thyrus.] Principal river of the island of Sardinia. It flows into the Mediterranean Sea near Oristano. Length, ab. 95 mi.

Tirso de Molina (tîr'sô dâ mô.lê'nâ). [Pseudonym of Gabriel Téllez.] b. at Madrid, 1571; d. in the monastery of Soria, Spain, 1648. Spanish dramatist. He entered the church before 1613, and became (1645) the head of the monastery of Soria of the Order of Mercy. Five volumes of his plays were published under his pseudonym between 1616 and 1636; among these the best known outside of Spain is El Burlador de Sevilla (The Seville Deceiver), said to be the earliest distinct portrayal of that Don Juan later seen on every stage in Europe. In Spain Don Gil de las Calzas Verdes (Don Gil in the Green Pantaloon) is the favorite. Among his other plays may be mentioned Vergonzoso en Palacio (A Bashful Man at Court), La Lealtad contra la Envidia, Por el Solano y el Torno, and Escarmientos para Cuernos. He published in 1624 Los Cigarrales de Toledo, an account of entertainments given by a wedding party at a cigarral or small country house resorted to for recreation in summer. These were stories told, plays acted, and poetry recited, a theatrical framework being used to connect the separate parts instead of the narrative adopted by Boccaccio in the Decameron, from which the idea was taken. This style was soon imitated by other authors. Tirso published another of a graver tone, Pleasure and Profit, in 1635, and wrote a history (1639) of his order.

Tiruchirapalli (tîr.iu.chîr.a.pul'î). Official name of Trichinopoly.

Tiruvalluvar (tî.rô.vu'li.u'var). fl. sometime between 800 and 1000 A.D. Name given to the greatest of Tamil poets, the author of the Kural. All that seems certain about the details of his life is that he lived at São Thomé (now a suburb of Madras), was a weaver and a Pariah, and had an intimate friend, probably a patron, called Elalacinkan, "Lion of the Suri," who was the captain of a small vessel. Kural, the name of his work, means "anything short" (which is to say, the couplet, and thence this collection of couplets). It is divided into three books, treating of Virtue, Wealth, and Pleasure, and consists of 133 chapters, each containing ten couplets, and so numbers 2,660 lines. The Vempya meter, in which it is composed, is unique. Every Hindu sect claims the poet, and interprets his verses so as to favor its own dogmas, the Jains especially. He was influenced by Shankara's reforms, the later developments of Jainism, and the Bhagavad-Gita, his philosophy seeming to be of the eclectic school represented by the last.

Tiryns (tî.rînz). In ancient geography, a city in Argolis, Greece, situated near the coast SE of Argos and ab. 3 mi. N of Nauplia. It was built on a rock, and is celebrated for its antiquities, including the Cyclopean walls, gates, and a palace (excavated by Heinrich Schliemann and Wilhelm Dörpfeld, 1884-85) of the 10th or 11th century B.C. The citadel is a famous memorial of early Greek civilization. The massive walls, built of great blocks with the interstices filled with small stones, surround the summit of an oblong hill. At one end are the well-known galleries of arcades resembling pointed arches; these were magazines for munitions and supplies. Within the walls there is an extensive prehistoric palace, with outer and inner courts, men's apartments, bathroom, and secluded women's quarters, the whole corresponding with the spirit of the Homeric picture. Wall paintings and other details of high interest were found by Schliemann. According to legend, Hercules lived for many years at Tiryns. The city was destroyed by Argos c468 B.C.

Tisa (tē'sā). Serbo-Croatian name of the Tisza.

Tischendorf (tish'en.dōrf), Lobegott Friedrich Konstantin von. b. at Lengenfeld, Saxony, Germany, Jan. 18, 1815; d. at Leipzig, Germany, Dec. 7, 1874. German Protestant Biblical critic, professor at Leipzig from 1845. He did research at Paris, in the Netherlands, England, and Italy, and in Egypt, Sinai, Palestine, and other parts of the East, and brought many manuscripts from the East, including the famous Codex Sinaiticus of the New Testament. He published a critical edition of the New Testament (1872), various codices of the Old Testament and New Testament, Ancedota sacra et profana, Wann wurden unsere Evangelien verfasst? (1865), and others.

Tiselius (tē.sā'lē.ūs), Arne Wilhelm Kaurin. b. at Stockholm, 1902—. Swedish analytical chemist. He developed quantitative electrophoresis, a valuable technique for analyzing protein mixtures. He also evolved an improved chromatographic method with a device for continuous observation of the eluate from the adsorption column. He served as professor at Uppsala (1938 et seq.), and as head of the biochemical institute there (1948 et seq.). He was awarded the 1948 Nobel prize in chemistry.

Tishri (tish'ri). Seventh month of the Hebrew ecclesiastical year, and first month of the Hebrew civil year, corresponding to September-October. New Year's Day (Rosh Hashonah), the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), and the Feast of the Tabernacles (Sukkoth) fall in Tishri.

Tisi (tē'zē) or Tisio (tē'zyō), Benvenuto. Original name of Garofalo, Il.

Tisia (tizh'īā). A Latin name of the Tisza.

Tisima (tē.sē.mā). Japanese name of the Kurile Islands.

Tisiphone (ti.sif'ō.nē). In Greek mythology, one of the Erinyes.

Tisquantum (tis.kwān'tum). See Squanto.

Tissa (tyē'sā). Russian name of the Tisza.

Tissaphernes (tē.sā.fēr'nēs). Executed c395 B.C. Persian satrap. He became satrap in Asia Minor (414 B.C.), and carried on war against the Athenians. He was hostile to Cyrus the Younger, and discovered and disclosed the latter's plans to Artaxerxes II, took part in the battle of Cunaxa (401 B.C.), and pursued the Greek Ten Thousand on part of their return journey. He was appointed chief ruler in W Asia by Artaxerxes, was defeated by Agesilaus of Sparta in 395, and was put to death through the influence of Parysatis, who blamed Tissaphernes for the death of her son Cyrus.

Tis Sixty Years Since. See Waverley.

Tissot (tē.sō), James Joseph Jacques. b. at Nantes, France, Oct. 15, 1836; d. at the Abbey of Buillon, Doubs, France, Aug. 9, 1902. French genre painter. He painted (1893-96) a series of water colors illustrating the life of Christ.

Tissot, Simon (or Samuel) Auguste André David. b. at Grancy, Vaud, Switzerland, March 20, 1728; d. at Lausanne, Switzerland, June 15, 1797. Swiss physician.

Tissus (tis'us). A Latin name of the Tisza.

Tisted (tē'sterii). [Also, Thisted.] Amt (county) of Denmark, in N Jutland, bounded by the Skagerrak, North Sea, Lim Fjord, and the amt of Hjørring. Capital, Tisted; area, 686 sq. mi.; pop. 88,541 (1945).

Tisza (tē'ssā). [German, Thaissa; Serbo-Croatian, Tisa; Russian, Тисса; Latin, Tisia, Tissus.] Largest tributary of the Danube. It is formed by the union of two headstreams in the Carpathians, in the W part of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R.; flows W, SW, and S through Hungary, into Yugoslavia, and empties into the Danube ab. 26 mi. NW of Belgrade. Its principal tributaries are the Hornád on the right, and the Szamos, Körös, and Mureş (Maros) on the left. The chief towns on its banks are Sighet, Tokaj, Szolnok, Csóngrad, and Szeged. Length, ab. 850 mi.

Tisza, Kálmán. b. at Geszt, Hungary, Dec. 16, 1830; d. at Budapest, March 23, 1902. Hungarian statesman. He entered the diet in 1861, and was one of the founders in 1875 of the liberal party. He was premier of Hungary (1875-90), in which office he was able to make Hungary a strong partner in the Dual Monarchy.

Tiszaföldvár (tē'sō.fōld'vár). Town in C Hungary, situated near the Tisza River, S of Szolnok. 14,293 (1948).

Tiszafüred (tē'sō.fü'rad). Town in NE Hungary, situated near the Tisza River, W of Debrecen; basket and brush factories. 10,651 (1948).

Tiszapolgár (tē'sō.pōlg'gár). See Polgár.

Titan (ti'tān). In classical literature, the sun personified. The name Titan was often substituted by the Latin poets for Helios as god of the sun.

Titan. Sixth in order of the nine (or ten) satellites of the planet Saturn, and the largest, appearing as an object of the ninth magnitude; discovered by Christian Huygens, March 25, 1655.

Titan. One of the principal novels of Jean Paul Richter, published in 1803.

Titan, The. Novel by Theodore Dreiser, published in 1914 as a sequel to The Financier (1912).

Titanica (ti.tā'nīā). Fairy queen in Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream. Shakespeare is said to have been the first to give this name to the queen of the fairies, although Ovid used it as an epithet of Diana.

Titanica. Third satellite of Uranus, discovered by William Lassell in 1847.

Titanic (ti.tā'nīk). Transatlantic steamship of the White Star Line, which, on her maiden voyage, collided with an iceberg S of Newfoundland at 11:40 P.M. on April 14, 1912, and sank about 2:20 the next morning. The ship was the largest built up to that time, and had been considered almost unsinkable. According to the official English report, issued after investigation of the disaster, she had on board 2,224 persons, of whom 711 were rescued from lifeboats (20 in number, of which three were lost) and rafts by the Cunard line steamship Carpathia in answer to a radio call.

Titans (ti'tānz). In Greek mythology, the old pre-Olympic gods; children of Uranus and Gaia (heaven and earth). There were six male Titans (Oceanus, Coeus, Cruius, Hyperion, Japetus, and Cronus), and six female (Theia, Rhea, Themis, Mnemosyne, Phoebe, and Tetys). They were imprisoned by their father Uranus from their birth, but, after mutilating and detroning him, were delivered by Cronus, Zeus, son of Cronus, compelled him to disgorge his elder brothers and sisters, whom he had swallowed at their birth. A terrible war between the Titans and the Olympian gods then ensued; and the Titans (except Oceanus) were thrust into Tartarus, under guard of the hundred-armed giants.

Titchener (tie'h'ē.nēr), Edward Bradford. b. at Chichester, England, Jan. 11, 1867; d. Aug. 3, 1927. Anglo-American psychologist, assistant professor (1892-95) and professor (1895 et seq.) of psychology at Cornell University, and appointed (1917) to the Harvard faculty. He was educated at Oxford and Leipzig, and was extension lecturer in biology at Oxford in 1892. Among his works are An Outline of Psychology (1896), A Primer of Psychology (1898), Experimental Psychology (2 vols., 1901-05), Lectures on the Elementary Psychology of Feeling and Attention (1908), Lectures on the Experimental Psychology of the Thought Processes (1909), and Text-book of Psychology (2 vols., 1909-10). He was editor of The American Journal of Psychology, and the American editor of Mind.

Titcomb (ti't'kōm), Timothy. See Holland, Josiah Gilbert.

Tite et Bérénice (tēt ā bā.rā.nēs). Heroic comedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1670 one week after Jean Baptiste Racine's Bérénice.

Tithonus (ti.thō'nūs). In Greek mythology, a prince of Troy; son of Laomedon and brother of Priam. He was beloved by Eos, who besought the gods to give him immortality. This they did, but Eos had forgotten to include eternal youth in the request, and in his extreme old age Tithonus withered away and was finally metamorphosed into a grasshopper.

Titian (tish'an). [Italian name, Tiziano Vecelli or Vecellio; surname Da Cadore and Il Divino (meaning "The Divine").] b. at Pieve di Cadore, Friuli, Italy, c1477; d. at Venice, Aug. 27, 1576. Venetian painter. He first studied painting at his native place, and at nine or ten years of age went to Venice and was put to study with Giovanni Bellini. He does not seem to have been influenced by any of the foreign schools. In the period 1507-08 he worked as collaborator with Giorgione in the decoration of the exterior of the Fondaco de' Tedeschi at Venice; these frescoes have been destroyed. In 1511 Titian was at work at the school of Padua with Campagnola, who was his assistant. He returned to Venice in 1512, and in 1513 sought to obtain an order for a battlement for the council hall, and applied for the first vacancy as broker at the Fondaco, a privilege already accorded to Bellini and Carpaccio. About this time he declined an invitation to work at Rome for the Pope. On the death of Bellini he became his successor as broker at the Fondaco and as portrait painter to the dogs. In 1516 he went to Ferrara at the invitation of Alphonso d'Este, and painted several pictures, some of which are now in various public and private collections. From this time he was occupied with commissions from various royal and private clients until 1523, when he returned to Venice to paint the portrait of the new doge, Andrea Gritti, and the fresco over the landing of the doge's palace, Saint Christopher Carrying the Christ Child, which still remains. About his time he married, and in 1530 was left a widower with three children. In 1532 Titian was called to Bologna by Charles V, who had come to meet the Pope. He became painter to the emperor, and enjoyed his friendship. This relation led him in 1546 to Rome, where he met Michelangelo and became acquainted with the works of Raphael and the Greeks. He was at this time 69 years old. In 1547 he was summoned to Augsburg by the emperor, and there he painted many portraits. His court life was brilliant and profitable. In 1549 he was again at Venice, and in 1550 returned to Augsburg. His life from this time forward is a succession of honors and triumphs. He succeeded to the favor of Philip on the death of Charles V. He died of the plague at the age of 99. Among his chief paintings, besides many representations of the Magdalen, Venus, Danaë, the Madonna, and the Holy Family, are Sacred and Profane Love (Rome), Bacchus and Ariadne (London), Ecce Homo (Vienna), Enlèvement de Christ (Louvre), Tribute Money (Dresden); Martyrdom of Saint Lawrence, Saint Peter Martyr, Last Supper, Christ Crowned with Thorns (Louvre); Bella di Tiziano (Titian's Mistress; Palazzo Pitti, Florence), Venus of the Tribune (Uffizi, Florence), L'Homme au Gant (Louvre), Knight of Malta (Madrid), and Titian and his Mistress (Louvre).

Titicaca (tē.tē.kā'kā), Lake. Largest and most important inland lake of South America, situated in a high basin between two ranges of the Andes, on the confines of SE Peru and E Bolivia. It is irregular in form, and almost cut in two by the peninsula of Copacabana. Near the E side it attains a depth of over 700 ft., but along the W and S sides there are extensive shallows and marshes. The outlet is the Desaguadero, at the S end. There are many small islands; some of these, as well as the peninsula of Copacabana and many parts of the shore, have interesting ruins of the Inca and pre-Inca periods; the most celebrated of the latter are at Tiahuanaco, on the S shore. The lake is connected with many legends of the Incas. An island in the lake is the mythical birthplace of the first Inca. The Indians still navigate Titicaca on rafts made of rushes; latterly small steamers have been placed on it. Ice sometimes forms along the shore. Extreme length, ab. 138 mi.; average width, ab. 37 mi.; area, ab. 3,200 sq. mi.; elevation, ab. 12,500 ft.

Titicaca Basin. [Also, Desaguadero Basin.] Elevated enclosed plateau of the Andes of Bolivia, extending into Peru and including Lake Titicaca. Part of the surface is too hilly for agriculture, but there has been extensive terracing. The climate, though cold, is modified by the lake; corn and wheat grow at elevations nearly to 13,000 ft. Lake Titicaca, near the N end, discharges through the deep and rapid Desaguadero River, ab. 190 mi. long, into Lake Poopó. Beyond that the water is lost in sands and marshes. The N part of the basin, and sometimes the whole of it, is called the Collao. The Titicaca Basin is one of the most densely populated highland agricultural communities in the world. Length, ab. 200 mi. from NW to SE; greatest width, ab. 80 mi.; average elevation, 12,500 to 13,000 ft.

Titiens (tē'tyēns), Therese Cathline Johanna. See Tietjens, Therese Cathline Johanna.

Titisee (tē'tē.zā). Village in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, situated in the Black Forest ab. 18 mi. SW of Freiburg im Breisgau: summer and winter resort at the foot of the Feldberg, the highest elevation in the Black Forest, 1,503 (1946).

Titl (tē'tl), Anton Emil. b. in Moravia, Oct. 5, 1809; d. at Vienna, Jan. 21, 1882. Austrian conductor and composer. He wrote the operas Die Burgfrau and Das Wolkenkind, as well as incidental music for stage works, an orchestral serenade, and a mass.

Titlis (tē'tis). Mountain on the borders of Unterwalden, Bern, and Uri, Switzerland, ab. 20 mi. SE of Lucerne. Elevation, ab. 10,627 ft.

Titmarsh (tē'tmārs), Michael Angelo. Name under which William Makepeace Thackeray wrote, in Fraser's Magazine, his Paris Sketch Book and others.

Titmouse (tē'tmōus), Tittlebat. One of the principal characters in Samuel Warren's novel Ten Thousand a Year: a vulgar shopman in Oxford Street, London.

Tito (tē'tō), Marshal. [Original name, Josip Broz.] b. in Croatia, Austria-Hungary (in territory now part of Yugoslavia), May 25, 1892—?. Yugoslav statesman and Communist leader, prime minister from 1945 to 1953, when he was elected president of Yugoslavia. He was a private in the Austro-Hungarian army during World War I, but after 1915 was a prisoner of war in Russia. In the Russian civil war he was a volunteer in the Red Army until 1921, when he returned to Yugoslavia and became identified as a labor leader. In 1928 he was arrested as a Communist agent and sentenced to five years in prison. After his release in 1934 he is said to have become an organizer and leader of the International Brigade in the Spanish Civil War; he may at this time (or after the outbreak of World War II) have adopted his pseudonym, a nom de guerre or a Communist party name. In 1941, after the fall of Yugoslavia to Germany and Italy, Tito organized a guerrilla force to fight the invaders; the rival irregulars, led by Draža Mihailovich, though supported by the Yugoslav government-in-exile, were not as successful. Tito's successes in the face of Axis military strength were almost miraculous. As the territory he controlled and the numbers following him grew, he began to become an almost legendary hero. With the collapse of the Axis in Yugoslavia in 1944, he arranged a merger of his Council of National Liberation with the royalist government-in-exile, and after the election of 1945, in which his party won an overwhelming victory, he obtained the abdication of Peter II and the establishment of the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia. Tito, as head of the government, minister of national defense, and secretary general of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia, became his country's dictator. Industry was nationalized; the pan-Slavic movement was encouraged and anti-American measures were undertaken. Opposition was eliminated; Mihailovich was tried and executed. Typical of this period of harmony with the U.S.S.R. was the building, by youths recruited from several nations, of a railroad as part of the industrialization of the country. However, Tito refused to be ruled by Cominform decisions, believing that his government stood on a firmer popular basis than those of the other "puppet" governments of eastern Europe within the Communist sphere, and in 1948, after being accused of deviation from Marxist doctrine, of nationalism, and of collaboration with the West, Yugoslavia was ejected from the Cominform. Defiant, Tito, without surrendering his intention to maintain the principles of Communism within Yugoslavia, turned for aid to the West, and, though Tito's dictatorship was recognized as an oppressive one, he was granted financial and military aid as a potential ally and as the symbol of a Communism not dominated by the U.S.S.R. Yugoslavia, the second most powerful Communist nation of Europe, remained a threat to Russian domination of Communism and one of the explosive points of the Continent. With Yugoslavia's defection, Albania alone remained a Cominform country on the Mediterranean.

Tito, Ettore. b. at Castellammare di Stabia, Italy, Dec. 17, 1859—. Italian painter and illustrator. He studied at the Venice Academy, and later taught there. Aside from easel paintings, he is known for murals (for the ceiling of the Venetian Pavilion of the International Exposition at Rome, 1911, and others), and illustrations for periodicals, including The Graphic (London) and Scribner's Magazine. Some of his better-known works are A Windy Day in Venice, The Dunes, Self-Portrait, Bacchanal, Marietta, Old Fish Market in Venice, and San Marco.

Titograd (tē'tō.grā). [Former name, Podgorica.] City in SW Yugoslavia, the designated future capital of the federative republic of Montenegro, situated ab. 12 mi. N of Lake Scutari. The town was devastated during World War II and is being rebuilt and enlarged. Present plans call for a population of 50,000. Pop. 12,206 (1948).

Titoism (tē'tō.iz.em). Term applied to the action taken (1948) by Premier Tito of Yugoslavia, when he declared Yugoslavia's independence from either Russian or Western domination. Expressing the belief that "true communism" dictated subservience to neither one side nor the other, Tito's action came to signify the latent possibilities of separatist attempts among Russian satellite states.

Tito Melema (tē'tō mā.lā'mā). See Melema, Tito.

Titov Veles (tē'tōv vē'les). See Veles.

Tittlebat Titmouse (tit'l.bat tit'mous). See Titmouse, Tittlebat.

Tittoni (tē'tō.nē), Tommaso. b. at Rome, Nov. 16, 1855; d. there, Feb. 7, 1931. Italian diplomat and statesman. He was elected deputy (1886) and senator (1902), served as minister of foreign affairs (1903-05, 1906-09, June-November, 1919), and was temporary head (March, 1905) of the government. He also was ambassador to London (1906) and Paris (1910-16), and presided (1919-28) in the Senate.

Titulescu (tē'tō.les'kō), Nicolae. b. at Craiova, Rumania, 1883; d. at Cannes, France, March 17, 1911. Rumanian statesman, minister of foreign affairs (1927-28, 1932-36). He served also as minister of finance (1917, 1920-22), and as minister at London (1922-27, 1928-32). He was Rumania's delegate to the League of Nations, where he was noted as an orator before the Assembly. He was one of the organizers (1920) of the Little Entente with Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia. One of the opponents of the fascist Iron Guard, he resigned (1936) when their growing power made his position untenable.

Titulrel (tit'ū.rel). A hero of the legend of the Holy Grail in Wagner's opera Parzival. He was the great-grandfather of Parzival. It is also the title of an unfinished poem by Wolfram von Eschenbach, of which the 6,000-verse continuation by the poet Albrecht (c1270) is known as Der jüngere Titurel.

Titus (tī'tus). In the Bible, a convert and companion of the apostle Paul.

Titus. [Full name, Titus Flavius Sabinus Vespasianus.] b. 40 or 41 A.D.; d. September, 81. Roman emperor; son of Vespasian. He was called "the delight of mankind" because of his free distribution of gifts to his people. He was educated with Britannicus, served in the army, conducted the Jewish war after the departure of his father, and captured Jerusalem in 70, for which he was given a triumph at Rome and in honor of which his brother Domitian erected the Arch of Titus in 81. He was associated with Vespasian in the government, and succeeded to the throne June, 79. Though dissipated in his habits before he became emperor, he devoted himself thereafter to bettering the lot of the Romans. He finished the Colosseum, and built the Baths of Titus. The eruption of Vesuvius that buried Pompeii and a fire at Rome occurred in his reign.

Titus. See also under Good Thief.

Titus, Arch of. See Arch of Titus.

Titus, Baths of. See Baths of Titus.

Titus Andronicus (an.drōn'ī.kus, an.drō.nī'kus). Tragedy, produced probably in 1592 or earlier, variously attributed to Christopher Marlowe, Thomas Kyd, and William Shakespeare. It was published with Shakespeare's plays in the first folio (1623) and on that ground is generally accepted as one of Shakespeare's plays, though Edward Ravenscroft, who published a revision in 1687, reported that he had heard that Shakespeare merely touched up the play "by a private Author."

Titus Flavius Clemens (flāv'ius klem'ens). Full Latin name of Clement of Alexandria.

Titus Livius (liv'ius). Latin name of Livy.

Titus Lucretius Carus (lō.krē'shus kār'us). Full name of Lucretius.

Titus Quintius (or Quinctius) Flamininus (kwīn'shus, kwīng'shus, flām'īn'ius). See Flamininus.

Titus Quintius (or Quinctius). See Flamininus.

Titus Tatius (tē'shus). See Tatius, Titus.

Titusville (tī'tus.vil). City in E Florida, on the Indian River, county seat of Brevard County; processing, packing, and shipping of oranges and grapefruit, 2,604 (1950).

Titusville. City in NW Pennsylvania, in Crawford County, ab. 81 mi. NE of Pittsburgh; important for the production and refining of oil. It was the site of "Drake's Folly," the first mechanically drilled oil well in the U.S. Begun in April, 1859, it yielded oil the following August and started an oil boom which ushered in the U.S. petroleum industry, 8,923 (1950).

Titusville. A former name of Kent, Wash.

Tityus (tī'tius). In Greek mythology, the giant son of Zeus or of Gaea, and father of Europa. He assaulted Leto at the instigation of Hera and was killed by Apollo, her son. In Hades his punishment was to be extended on the ground (the story is that he covered nine acres) while vultures gnawed his liver.

Tiu (tē'ō). See Tyr.

Tiumen (tyō'men'). See Tyumen.

Tiv (tēv). [Also: Mitshi, Munshi.] Semi-Bantu Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting a region in C Nigeria. Their population has been estimated at ab. 575,000 (The Nigeria Handbook, 1936). They had no chief until the establishment of British administration, but were divided into numerous small settlements ruled by councils of elders. They practice agriculture with wooden digging sticks and hoes, and their principal crop is the yam.

Tiverton (tiv'ēr.ton). Municipal borough and market town in SW England, in Devonshire, situated at the confluence of the rivers Loman and Exe, ab. 12 mi. N of Exeter, ab. 164 mi. SW of London by rail. It has a lace industry, a silk industry, and was formerly noted for its woolen-serve manufactures. It was taken (1645) by Fairfax during the English Civil War, 10,869 (1951).

Tiverton. [Former name, Pocasset.] Town in SE Rhode Island, in Newport County; manufactures of textiles; tourist resort, 5,659 (1950).

Tivoli (tiv'ō.li; Italian, tē'vō.lē). [Ancient name, Tibur.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Roma, situated on a height above the falls of the Aniene River, ab. 15 mi. E of Rome; tourist center and health resort (sulfurous thermal springs, known to the Romans as Aquae Albulae, are nearby). There is a cathedral of the 17th century, with a bell tower of the 12th century. There are remains of Roman temples and villas, the most famous being the large ruins of a villa of the emperor Hadrian. However, the most celebrated of the attractions of Tivoli is the Villa d'Este, erected for Cardinal Ippolito d'Este in the middle of the 16th century, rising in the midst of large gardens, adorned with statues and artificial cascades. Considerable damage was sustained in World War II by buildings of interest to tourists, among them the Chiesa del Gesù and the churches of Sant' Andrea, San Biagio, San Giovanni Evangelista, and Santa Maria Maggiore. The Church of San Filippo was destroyed. One wing of the Villa d'Este was badly hit but has been repaired. The cathedral was unharmed except for broken windows. Pop. of commune, 19,820 (1936); of town, 16,889 (1936).

Tivoli, Rosa di. See Roos, Philipp Peter.

"Tivoli of Provence" (pro.viūs'). See Barjols.

Tivy (tī'vi). See Teifi.

Tiw (tē'ō). See Tyr.

Tiwa (tē'wā). [Also, Tigua.] North American Indian language spoken at four Pueblo villages in N central New Mexico. It is a member of the Tanoan language family.

Tizard (tiz'ard). Sir Henry Thomas. b. at Gillingham, Kent, England, Aug. 23, 1885—d. English scientist and aeronautical engineer. He was rector (1929-42) of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, and president (1942-46) of Magdalen College, Oxford. He served as head (1933-43) of the Aeronautical Research Committee, member of the council of Aircraft Production and an additional member (1911-43) of the Air Council, and chairman of the Advisory Council on Scientific Policy.

Tizi-Ouzou (tē.zē.ō.zō). Town in Algiers department, Algeria, NW Africa, ab. 65 mi. E of Algiers and 65 mi. W of Bougie. It is an administrative center for one of the most densely populated parts of the country. The town, which was built originally under the Turks, has an export trade in oil, olives, and dried figs, 4,700 (1948).

Tizona (tē.thō'nā). In Spanish legend, the sword of the Cid.

Tizzana (tēt.tsā'nā). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Pistoia, ab. 7 mi. SE of Pistoia; agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 13,330 (1936); of town, 1,211 (1936).

Tjandi (chān'dē). See Chandi.

Tjarda van Starckenborgh Stachouwer (chār'dā vān stār'ken.bōrēh stāch'ou.wēr), Alidius Walmondus Lambertus. b. at Groningen, Netherlands, March 7, 1888—d. Dutch diplomat. He was royal commissioner (1925-33) in the province of Groningen, envoy at Brussels (1933-36), governor general (1936-45) of the Netherlands East Indies, and ambassador at Paris (1946-48).

Tjimba (chēm'bā). [Also, Ovatjimba.] Subgroup of the Herero, a Bantu-speaking people of South-West Africa. Their population has been estimated at ab. 5,000 (by H. Vedder in 1928).

Tlaloc (tlā'lōk). Important rain god in Aztec and Toltec Indian mythology and religion, also a vegetation god. He presided over the third epoch in the mythological history of the world, and had as a companion Chalchihuitlicue, who was a lake and river goddess. Tlaloc was assisted in his rain-giving role by a legion of minor rain gods, or tlaloques, who were believed to attend to the rain needs of individual farmers.

Tlalpán (tlāl.pān'). [Also, Tlalpam.] City in S Mexico, in the Distrito Federal, ab. 10 mi. S of downtown Mexico City. 10,436 (1940).

Tlapi (tlā'pē). See Thalping.

Tlaquepaque (tlā.kā.pā'kā). City in W Mexico, in Jalisco state. 11,486 (1940).

Tlaxcala (tlās.kā'lā). [Also, Tlaxcaltec (-kāl'tek).] Nahuatl-speaking Indian tribe or city-state that once occupied what is now the state of Tlaxcala, E of the central plateau of Mexico. After defeat by Cortés in 1519, they allied with the Spaniards against the Aztec. The Indian population of the state Tlaxcala is mainly descended from members of this tribe.

Tlaxcala. State in S central Mexico, surrounded by the states of Hidalgo, Puebla, and México. Capital, Tlaxcala; area, 1,555 sq. mi.; pop. 282,495 (1950).

Tlaxcala. [Full name, Tlaxcala de Xicoténcatl (dā nē.kō.teng'kāt.l).] Town in S central Mexico, capital of Tlaxcala state, on the Atocay River, ab. 64 mi. E of Mexico City. Tlaxcala contains the Church of San Francisco, founded in 1521, the first church established on the mainland of the Americas. 3,261 (1940).

Tlemcen (tlem.sen'). [Also: Tlemsen; Latin, Pomaria.] City in Oran department, Algeria, in NW Africa, ab. 68 mi. SW of Oran and ab. 34 mi. E of the Moroccan border. It is famous in Berber and Arab history as a center of culture and civilization. It is widely known for its numerous fine examples of Moorish art, many of which date from the end of the 13th century. The city was throughout the Middle Ages the most important in that section of N Africa. It was occupied by the French in 1842. Today it has a modest trade in olive oil, wool, figs, and grain. 50,272 (1948).

Thiaping (tlā'ping). See Thalping.

Thiharo (tlā'rō). See Thlaro.

Tlingit (tlīng'git). [Also: Tlinget, Tlinket, Tlinkit.] Group of North American Indian tribes, comprising 14 divisions, formerly inhabiting the coast and off-shore islands of Alaska between lats. 56° and 60° N. Their culture was the typical NW Pacific culture. Today ab. 1,000 survive on reservations in Alaska and British Columbia. The language forms an independent family, formerly called Koluschan.

Tlokwa (tōk'kwā). [Also, Batlokwa.] Several separate Bantu-speaking Sotho groups of S. Africa. Some are southern Sotho, formerly a part of the Suto kingdom; some are eastern Sotho, inhabiting N Transvaal; and finally a small group of ab. 1,500 (as estimated by I. Schapera, A Handbook of Tswana Law and Custom, 1938) constitute a subgroup of the Tswana, or western Sotho.

Tmu (tmō). See Atm.

TNEC. See Temporary National Economic Committee.

Toala (tō.ā'lā). [Also: Lamontjong, Toalian Culture.] Culture of prehistoric cave-dwellers first discovered in the Lamontjong caves in SW Celebes. Among its elements are late Paleolithic flaked stone implements, bone whistles, shell scrapers, and amulets of human bone. Neolithic influences are particularly evident in barbed arrowheads and potters.

To a Waterfowl. Lyric poem by William Cullen Bryant, written in 1815 and published in 1818.

Toba (tō'bā). Tribe of South American Indians of the Chaco, known as especially hostile to the whites up to the middle of the 19th century. Their language, Toba, gives its name to a group of 11 languages and dialects belonging to the middle division of the Guaicuru family of languages.

Tobacco Nation. [Also, Tionontati.] Tribe of North American Indians of Iroquoian linguistic stock, formerly living in Ontario. They were so named by the French in 1616 for their extensive cultivation of tobacco. They were attacked by the Iroquois in 1649 for harboring refugee Huron Indians and, together with the Hurons, migrated to the region around the SW end of Lake Superior. The two tribes thus amalgamated later became known as the Wyandot.

Tobacco Road. Novel (1932) by Erskine Caldwell which was dramatized (1933) by Jack Kirkland, remained on the stage for 3,182 performances, and was later scenarized. The story depicts the impoverished life of a degenerate, but not yet thoroughly degraded, poor-white family, the Lesters. Jeeter Lester, the father, loves the land, but the land, like the Lesters, is worn out, and incapable of producing more than the barest livelihood. The tragedy of the story, which is certainly obscured by the sensationalism of the sexual vagaries of the family, is that search by any of the Lesters for something vital is doomed in the end only to deepen the shadow of waste and destruction.

Tobago (tō.bā'gō). Island of the British West Indies, NE of Trinidad; part of the colony of Trinidad and Tobago. The surface is mostly mountainous. The island was seen by Columbus in 1498 and was settled by the Dutch in 1654, but passed into the hands of the French and eventually (1763) of the English. In 1889 it was annexed to the colony of Trinidad. Chief town, Scarborough; length, ab. 26 mi.; area, 116 sq. mi.; pop. 27,161 (1946).

Tobarra (tō.bār'rā). Town in E Spain, in the province of Albacete, ab. 30 mi. S of Albacete; resort. 13,110 (1940).

Tobata (tō.bā.tā). Industrial city in N Kyushu, Japan, in Fukuoka ken (prefecture) adjacent to Yawata. It is a coal-shipping port, and has steel mills, and machinery, glass, oil-refining, sugar-refining, cement, and chemical industries. 87,885 (1950).

To-Bedawie (tō'bed'ā.wi). See Beja, peoples of NE Africa.

Tobias (tō.bī'ās). In the Old Testament, the son of Tobit, and a character in the Book of Tobit.

Tobikhar (tō.bik'hār'). [Also, Mission Indians.] Group of North American Indian tribes of S California, who fell under the influence of the Spanish missions and were hence generically referred to as the Mission Indians. Their language belongs to the Shoshonean group of the Uto-Aztecan family of languages.

Tobin (tō'bīn), Maurice Joseph. b. at Boston, May 22, 1901; d. at Seitate, Mass., July 19, 1953. American politician, secretary of labor (1948-53) under Truman. He was elected to the Massachusetts legislature, where he served one term (1927-28), and to the Boston School Committee, on which he served for six years (1931-34, 1935-36). In 1937, elements within the Democratic Party in Boston, wishing to prevent the return of James Michael Curley to the mayoralty, nominated Tobin, who, on a platform calling for reform and economy, won out over Curley and other candidates. He was reelected in 1942, and held office until the end of 1944, in the fall of which year he was elected governor of Massachusetts.

Tobit (tō'bit), Book of. One of the apocryphal books of the Old Testament, so called from the name of one of its leading characters. The original text of the story was in Hebrew, but the extant Hebrew text is taken from a Chaldean text preserved in the Bodleian Library. It is believed to have been written no earlier than the time of Hadrian (76-138 A.D.). The story is that Tobit was a pious Jew in captivity at Nineveh, who took it upon himself to bury the Hebrew dead at night in defiance of civil bans. In time he became blind, miserable, and impoverished, and sent his son Tobias to a distant city to collect a loan. Tobias set out on the journey with his little dog and in company with a young man whom he hired as guide. This, unbeknownst to Tobias, was the archangel Raphael, who because of the piety of Tobit had come to help them. After several adventures, they arrived at the city and went to the house of the brother of Tobit, Tobias's uncle. Here Tobias fell in love with his cousin Sara and prepared to marry her. Sara, however, had attracted the demon Asmodeus, and Asmodeus had killed all her seven previous bridegrooms on their wedding night. Nevertheless, with the help of his traveling companion, Tobias became the lucky eighth, the demon was exorcised, and the marriage was consummated, after which Asmodeus was powerless against them. They collected the loan for his father, and the four (Tobias, Sara, the fellow traveler, and the little dog) returned to Nineveh, and magically restored sight to Tobit. Tobit and Tobias then offered the helpful companion half of the money collected, whereupon Raphael revealed himself, praised Tobit for his piety in burying the dead, and vanished.

Tobitschau (tō'bē.chou). German name of Tovačov.

Tobler (tō'bler), Adolf. b. at Hirzel, Switzerland, May 23, 1835; d. March 18, 1910. Swiss philologist. In 1867 he was appointed professor extraordinary, and in 1870 professor, of Romance philology at the University of Berlin, a post which he held until his death. His most important work, a dictionary of Old French, upon which he was engaged for many years, was unpublished at the time of his death.

Tobol (tō.bol'). River in the U.S.S.R., in W Siberia. It rises on the S slopes of the Ural Mountains and flows NE and N to join the Irtysh near Tobolsk. Length, ab. 1,043 mi.; navigable to Kurgan.

Tobolsk (tō.bolsk'). Former guberniya (government) of Russia, in Siberia. It was bounded by the Arctic Ocean on the N, the districts of Yeniseisk and Tomsk on the E, Semipalatinsk and Akmolinsk on the S, and European Russia on the W. It is now partly incorporated in the Omsk oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, U.S.S.R.

Tobolsk. City in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, in W Siberia, situated on the Irtysh River opposite its junction with the Tobol. It has boatbuilding and woodworking industries, and a considerable fur trade, and contains a picturesque krenel (fortress). The town does not have its former importance, since the Trans-Siberian Railroad passed to the S of it, and it depends upon river or road transport, as it is situated ab. 100 air-line miles from the nearest railroad. Founded in 1587, it was formerly the capital of Western Siberia, and was long an administrative center for exiles. Pop. ab. 32,000 (1939).

Tobruk (tō.bruk', tō'bruk). [Also: Tobruch; ancient name, Antipyrgos.] Seaport in NE Libya, N Africa, in Cyrenaica. It is situated on the coast highway, ab. 80 mi. W of the Egyptian frontier, and is connected by highway with Bengasi and Tripoli to the W and with various points in Egypt to the E. During World War II it was, at various times, a supply base for both sides. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Tobruk, Siege of. Siege (1941-42) in World War II by the Germans of an Allied force at Tobruk. In Allied hands, this Libyan coastal town threatened and seriously weakened the African offensive of General Rommel in 1941. With a garrison largely comprised of Australian troops, it withstood Stuka attacks and artillery blasts so as to force the German supply lines to make almost a 50-mile detour. It was only in the third African offensive of the Axis in June, 1942, that the city finally fell. It was recaptured late in the year in the British offensive that finally reached into Tunisia.

Toby (tō'bi). Punch's dog, in the English Punch and Judy puppet shows. He wears bells to frighten off Satan.

Toby, Uncle. [Also called Captain Shandy.] Uncle of Tristram Shandy, in Laurence Sterne's novel of that name; one of his chief characters.

Toby Belch (belch), Sir. See Belch, Sir Toby.

Toby Tallyho (tal.i.hō'), Sir. See Tallyho, Sir Toby.

Toby Veck (vek). See Veck, Toby.

Tocantins (tō.kan.tēns'). Important river of C and N Brazil. It rises in the state of Goiás, flows N, and reaches the Atlantic through the Pará River. The latter may be regarded as its estuary, though it also receives a large amount of water from the Amazon. The most important affluent of the Tocantins is the Araguaya. Navigation is interrupted by a series of rapids beginning ab. 200 mi. above Belém; beyond these both the Tocantins and the Araguaya are navigable for many hundred miles. Length (from Belém), ab. 1,700 mi.; with the Araguaya, nearly 1,900 mi.

Toccoa (tō.kō'a). City in N Georgia, county seat of Stephens County: manufactures of textiles and furniture. 6,781 (1950).

Toce Falls (tō'chā). [Also, Tosa Falls.] Falls in the Alps of N Italy. Height, ab. 470 ft.

Tocopilla (tō.kō.pē.yā). Seaport in Antofagasta province, in N Chile: minerals, 15,516 (1949).

Tocora (tō.kō.rā). See Tocorpuri.

Tocornal (tō.kōr.nāl'), Miguel Cruchaga. See Cru-chaga Tocornal, Miguel.

Tocorpuri (tō.kōr.pō'rē). [Also: Tocora, Cerros de Tocorpuri.] Mountain in the Andes of NW Chile, near the border of Bolivia. Elevation, ab. 22,162 ft.

Tocqueville (tok'vil; French, tok.vēl), Alexis Charles Henri Clérel de. b. at Paris, July 29, 1805; d. at Cannes, France, April 16, 1859. French statesman and writer. His studies, begun at Metz, were completed by a course in law at Paris. He took his final degree in 1826, and then spent a year or more traveling in Italy and Sicily. On his return to France he occupied a post in the law court at Versailles. But jurisprudence was not altogether suited to his tastes, and on April 2, 1831, he left France for the U.S., whither he was sent by his government for the purpose of studying the penitentiary system. He did not limit himself, however, to this special field, but extended his observations also to the social and political institutions and customs of the new country. The following year he published in France, together with his friend and traveling companion, Gustave de Beaumont, the result of their official investigations, under the title Du système pénitentiaire aux États-Unis et de son application en France. This important work attracted much attention, and was crowned by the French Academy. From the notes that he had taken in a private capacity while on his visit to the U.S., he wrote his masterpiece, De la démocratie en Amérique (2 vols., 1835-40), which remains today a classic interpretation by a foreign observer of the American republican system and a democratic society. Its success secured his admission to the French Academy (Dec. 23, 1841). After several years of public life (1839-51), he retired in order to devote his entire time to travel and writing. Besides the works already mentioned, he wrote a number of pamphlets on various subjects, also Histoire philosophique du règne de Louis XV (1843), and the first volume of the work left unfinished at his death, L'Ancien régime et la révolution (1856). A paper entitled Etat social et politique de la France was translated into English by John Stuart Mill and published in the April, 1834, number of the Westminster Review. De Tocqueville's complete works were edited (1860-65) by his friend de Beaumont.

Tocuyo (tō.kō'yō'). River in NW Venezuela, N of Trujillo, flowing NE to the Caribbean Sea. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Toda (tō'da). Indigenous people of the Nilgiri Hills in S India, whose language is of the Dravidian stock. Although very small in numbers (less than 700) they have become well known, partly because of their unique culture, which is concentrated on the care and the cult of their herds of buffalo.

Todd (tōd), David. b. at Lake Ridge, N.Y., March 19, 1855; d. at Madison Heights, Va., June 1, 1939. American astronomer, professor of astronomy at Amherst College and director of the observatory from 1881. He was chief assistant in the Nautical Almanac office (1878-81), was in charge of the transit of Venus observations at Lick Observatory in 1882, and conducted eclipse expeditions to Texas (1878), Japan (1887, 1896), West Africa (1889-90), Tripoli (1900, 1905), and the Dutch East Indies (1901). He was the leader of the Lowell expedition to the Andes in 1907. On later expeditions, he went to Russia (1914, Florida (1918), and South America (1919). He invented an automatic photographing device to record eclipses and was the first to photograph (1925) the solar corona from an airplane.

Todd, Henry Alfred. b. at Woodstock, Ill., March 13, 1854; d. at New York, Jan. 3, 1925. American philologist and editor. He served (1883-91) as instructor in Romance languages at the Johns Hopkins University, and was professor of Romance philology (1893-1925) at Columbia University. He was a founder and editor of the Columbia University Studies in Romance Philology and Literature and of the Romantic Review. His publications include editions of Old French manuscripts.

Todd, Mary. Maiden name of Lincoln, Mary.

Todd, Thomas. b. near Dunkirk, Va., Jan. 23, 1765; d. Feb. 7, 1826. American jurist. He served (1807-26) as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Todd, Thomas Wingate. b. at Sheffield, England, Jan. 15, 1855; d. at Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 28, 1938. American anatomist. A demonstrator (1907-08) at Manchester University, he came to America to become (1912) professor of anatomy at Western Reserve University. He investigated problems in human growth and development.

Todd's Tavern (tōdz tav'ern). Place in Virginia, ab. 11 mi. SW of Fredericksburg. Here, May 7 and 8, 1864, the Union cavalry under A. T. A. Torbert and David McMurtree Gregg defeated the Confederate cavalry under Wade Hampton and Fitzhugh Lee.

Todhunter (tōd'hun.tēr), Isaac. b. at Rye, England, 1820; d. there, March 1, 1884. English mathematician, author of an extensive series of mathematical textbooks. He also wrote History of the Progress of the Calculus of Variations during the 19th Century (1861), History of the Mathematical Theories of Attraction and the Figure of the Earth (1873), A History of the Theory of Elasticity and the Strength of Materials (1886), and others.

Todi (tō'dē). [Ancient name, Tuder.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria, in the province of Perugia, situated near the Tiber River, ab. 23 mi. S of Perugia. It has Etruscan and Roman antiquities, including walls, a temple, and a theater. Some of the objects found here are in the museum at Florence and in the Vatican at Rome. The Romanesque cathedral dates from the 11th-13th centuries; other churches include San Fortunato and San Prassete, of the 14th century; the Church of Santa Maria della Consolazione is a noted Renaissance building (1508-24). Except for broken windows in Santa Maria della Consolazione, no damage was sustained in World War II by buildings of tourist interest. Pop. of commune, 20,459 (1936); of town, 3,820 (1936).

Todi (tō'dē). [Also, Piz Rusein.] Highest summit of the Glarner Alps, on the borders of the cantons of Glarus, Graubünden, and Uri, Switzerland, ab. 31 mi. SE of Lucerne. Elevation, ab. 11,887 ft.

Todleben (tōt'lā.ben), Count Franz Eduard Ivanovich. See Totleben, Count Franz Eduard Ivanovich.

Todmorden (tōd'mōr'den). Municipal borough, market town, and manufacturing center in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Calder and on the Rochdale Canal, ab. 17 mi. NE of Manchester, ab. 203 mi. N of London by rail. It has cotton manufactures, which, however, have declined in recent years. 19,072 (1951).

Todos os Santos (tō'dōs ōs san.tōs), Baía de. Portuguese name of All Saints Bay.

Todt (tōt), Fritz. b. at Pforzheim, Germany, Sept. 4, 1891; d. Feb. 8, 1942. German military engineer. He joined the Nazis in 1923. Under the Hitler regime he constructed the system of autobahnen (superhighways) throughout Germany which later facilitated Hitler's war moves, and as German minister of armaments and munitions (1940 et seq.) he was responsible for the functioning of the nation's industrial machine in World War II, until his death in an airplane crash. He also headed the Organization Todt (OT), which employed slave labor for the construction of the Westwall (Siegfried Line), airfields, rocket-bomb sites, and submarine bases.

Tod und Verklärung (tōt ūnt fēr.klā'rung). [English title, Death and Transfiguration.] Orchestral tone poem (Opus 24) by Richard Strauss, composed in 1888-89, and first performed in 1890.

Toemapel-Singhasari (tō.mā'pel sēng.hā.sā'rē). See Singhasari.

Toggenburg (tōg'en.bürk). Region in the canton of St. Gallen, Switzerland, traversed by the Thur River. It was a medieval countship. The most notable of the so-called Toggenburg wars was that of 1712, caused by the oppressive action of the abbot of St. Gallen; Bern and Zurich supported Toggenburg successfully against the Roman Catholic forces of Lucerne, the Four Forest Cantons, and others.

Togliatti (tō.livāt'tē), Palmiro. b. at Genoa, Italy, March 26, 1893—. Italian politician, leader of the Italian Communist Party. Editor in chief (1919 et seq.) of the periodical L'Ordine nuovo, he was a founder (1921) of the Italian Communist Party. He left Italy during the Fascist regime and lived for a time abroad, spending a number of years in Russia. He returned (1944) to Italy, where he served as minister without portfolio in the cabinets of Badoglio and Bonomi, secretary of justice in the cabinets of Parri and De Gasperi, and as a deputy (1948 et seq.).

Togo (tō'gō), British. See Togoland, British trust territory.

Togo, French. [Also, Togo.] French trust territory in W Africa, the E and larger portion of the former German colony of Togoland, on the Guinea Coast. It was given to France in 1920 as a mandate under the League of Nations, and is now a trust territory under the United Nations. It is administered as an autonomous territory within the French West Africa federation, and for local governmental purposes is divided into six administrative districts. It is represented in the French National Assembly by one deputy, in the Council of the Republic by two councilors, and in the Assembly of the French Union by one delegate. It has ab. 2,500 mi. of good roads and 266 mi. of railroads. The chief exports are palm products, cocoa, rubber, copra, and cotton. Capital and chief port, Lomé; area, ab. 20,500 sq. mi.; pop. 998,660 (1950).

Togo, Count Heihachiro. b. at Kagoshima, Japan, Dec. 22, 1847; d. at Tokyo, May 30, 1934. Japanese admiral, commander of the Japanese fleet in the Russo-Japanese War (1904-05). He entered the navy in 1868, studied naval affairs at Greenwich, England (1871-78), and served in the Chinese War as commander of the Naniwa, sinking the Chinese transport Kow Shing before the actual rupture of relations with China. He attacked Port Arthur on the night of Feb. 8, 1904, in this and subsequent attacks inflicting great damage on the Russian fleet. He scattered the Russian Port Arthur squadron in a sea battle on Aug. 10, 1904, and annihilated the Russian Baltic fleet under Z. P. Rozhdestvenski at Tsushima (May 27-28, 1905). He later served on the supreme war council.

Togo, Shigenori. b. at Kagoshima, Japan, in December, 1882; d. while a prisoner at Tokyo, Japan, July 23, 1950. Japanese diplomat. He served as ambassador to Germany (1937) and to the U.S.S.R. (1938-40). He was foreign minister at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack (1941) and held the post until the Japanese surrender (1945). He claimed to have been a strong advocate of surrender in August, 1945. Indicted as a war criminal after World War II, he was tried and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment.

Togoland (tô'gô.lând). Former German protectorate on the Slave Coast of W. Africa, E. of the Gold Coast. The protectorate was proclaimed in 1884. In 1920 the area was divided between Great Britain and France as mandated areas; they are now United Nations trust territories. Area, ab. 33,700 sq. mi.

Togoland. [Also, British Togo.] British trust territory in W. Africa, the W. portion of the former German colony of Togoland, on the Guinea Coast. It was given to the British in 1920 as a mandate under the League of Nations, and is now a trust territory of the United Nations. It is administered as part of the Gold Coast by the governor of that area. Its principal export products are cocoa, raw cotton, and raw coffee. Area, 13,041 sq. mi.; pop. 404,000 (est. 1951).

Togril Beg (tô.gröl' beg). [Also, Togril Beg (tô.gril').] d. c1063. Founder of the first dynasty of the Seljuk Turks. He made many conquests, conquering Baghdad (1055) and becoming master of the caliphs.

To Have and Have Not. Novel by Ernest Hemingway, published in 1937.

To Have and To Hold. Novel by Mary Johnston, published in 1900.

To Helen (hel'en). Title given to two lyric poems by Edgar Allan Poe, included in Poems by Edgar A. Poe (1831).

Toinette (twâ.net). Capable but exasperating servant of Argan in Molière's Le Malade imaginaire.

Toison d'Or (twâ.zôn dôr). La. [Eng. trans., "The Fleece of Gold."] Tragedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1660.

Toit (toit'), Jacob D. du. See Totius.

Toiyabe Range (toi.yâ'bê). Range of mountains in C. Nevada. Peak elevation, 11,775 ft.

Tojo (tô'jô), Eiki (or, from 1941, Hideki). b. at Tokyo, Dec. 30, 1884; executed there, Dec. 23, 1948. Japanese army officer. He was minister of war (1940), after serving as chief of staff of the Kwantung army (1937). He was premier at the time of the Pearl Harbor attack (1941), holding that position until 1944. Indicted (1945) after World War II as a war criminal, he unsuccessfully attempted suicide; he was later tried by the International Military Tribunal of the Far East, and sentenced to death by hanging.

To Kai (tô.ki). Japanese name of the East China Sea.

Tokaidô (tô.ki.dô). Historic main road in S. Honshu, Japan, extending from Kyoto to Tokyo.

Tokaj (tô'koi). [Also, Tokay.] Town in NE Hungary, on the Tisza River, ab. 42 mi. NW of Debrecen. It has large wine cellars, and stone quarries. The celebrated Tokay wines are produced in the vicinity. Pop. ab. 5,000.

Tokar (tô.kâr'). Town in Kassala province, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa, near the coast of the Red Sea, ab. 40 mi. S of Suakin. Near it a battle (called also the battle of Trinkat) was fought on Feb. 4, 1884, when the Mahdists under Osman Digna defeated the Egyptian forces under Baker Pasha. It is connected by road with Port Sudan, Kassala, and Asmara, in Eritrea.

Tokay (tô.kâ', tō.kâ'). See Tokaj.

Tokio (tô.ki.ô). See Tokyo.

Toklas (tok'las), Autobiography of Alice B. See Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas.

Toklor (tô.kô.rôr'). See Tukulor.

Tokugawa (tô.kô.gâ.wâ), Iyessato. b. at Tokyo, July 11, 1863; d. June 4, 1940. Japanese prince; son of the 15th and last shogun. He was chief Japanese delegate to the Washington Conference (1921-22), and was also active in promoting cultural relations between Japan and other nations. He served as a representative to the International Red Cross Conference (1930), as president of the International Olympic Committee, and in other similar posts.

Tokushima (tô.kô.shê.mâ). City in NE Shikoku, Japan, situated near the E coast, ab. 68 mi. SW of Osaka. It is a commercial city, with trade in rice, tobacco, and fish; there are numerous cotton mills. The city is served by the nearby port of Komatsushima, ab. 4 mi. S. Tokushima was an important feudal city, and had a daimyo castle, which was destroyed during civil war in 1868. Pop. 121,416 (1950).

Tokutomi (tô.kô.tô.mê), Ichiro. b. in Kaimamoto prefecture, Japan, Jan. 25, 1863—. Japanese journalist and historian, publisher of a monthly magazine, The Friend of the Nation (1887), a daily paper, The Kokumin Shimbun (Nation) (1896), and a monthly in English, The Far East (1890).

Tokyo (tô'ki.ô; Japanese, tō.kyō). To (prefecture) in SE Honshu, Japan, including the city of Tokyo, an area to the W, and the Izu-shichito archipelago. Capital, Tokyo; area, 784 sq. mi.; pop. 6,277,500 (1950).

Tokyo. [Also: Tokio; former name, Edo, also spelled Yeddo, Yedo.] Capital of Japan, situated on the NW shore of the Bay of Tokyo, in SE Honshu, the main island of Japan. In 1940 it was the third largest city of the world, with almost seven million people, but U.S. bombing raids in 1945 drove almost four million people out of the city. Tokyo is the principal commercial, industrial, and cultural center of Japan. The industries of the city before World War II were, in order of importance: machinery, metalworking, chemicals, textiles, foodstuffs, printing, woodworking, and ceramics. In addition, there were (and are) many smaller industries. The city is situated on low and flat ground, traversed by several streams. In the C part of the city, surrounded by a moat, are the imperial palace and its grounds, the residence of the emperor and his household. Tokyo is the seat of several universities. It is linked by electric railroad with Yokohama, its seaport. Because of the destruction of many old buildings by the earthquake of 1923 and by bombs during World War II, the central portions of Tokyo are modern in aspect, with wide avenues, and modern concrete buildings. Tokyo was the seat of the shogunate until its abolition in 1868, and succeeded Kyoto as the capital in 1869, when the name was changed to Tokyo (Eastern Capital). On Sept. 1, 1923, Tokyo, with neighboring areas, was devastated by one of the most severe earthquakes of record; the loss of life exceeded 150,000, though the exact number was never ascertained. 5,385,071 (1950).

Tokyo Bay. [Also: Tokio Bay; Japanese, Tokyo Wan.] Arm of the Pacific Ocean in SE Honshu, Japan, on which Tokyo and Yokohama are situated. The surrender of Japan to the United Nations was signed here (Sept. 2, 1945) aboard the U.S. battleship Missouri, at the end of World War II. Length, ab. 35 mi.; width, ab. 8 mi., at its narrowest part.

Tokyo Raid. Air attack made in World War II by 16 B-25 U.S. bombers launched from the aircraft carrier Hornet on April 18, 1942. Flying from a point 850 mi. E of Tokyo, the planes (under the command of James F. Doolittle) set fires in Tokyo and its navy yards. Due to lack of gas, the planes had to crash-land in China (one landed in Siberia), but over three quarters of the 80 aviators were saved by the Chinese. Compared to the raids later carried out by heavy bombers from various island bases in the Pacific, this raid was minor indeed; however, it took place at a time when any blow against the chief city of Japan was certain to have a useful morale effect in the U.S. and, conversely, to remind the Japanese of possible heavier blows to come).

Tol'able David (tol'a.bl dâ'vid). Story by Joseph Hergesheimer, published in the collection The Happy End (1919).

Toland (tô'land), Hugh Huger. b. April 16, 1806; d. Feb. 27, 1880. American surgeon. He practiced at Pageville and then at Columbia, S.C., where he became a leading surgeon, attaining prominence for his operations on strabismus and clubfoot, and for his utilization of the lithotomy forceps. Settling (1853) at San Francisco, he was named chief surgeon of the Marine Hospital, and soon became one of the leading surgeons of the Pacific Coast region. He served (1864-80) as president and professor of surgery at the Toland Medical College, which he founded and endowed, and in 1873 placed the institution in the hands of the University of California, with which it was merged.

Toland, John. [Baptized Junius Janus Toland.] b. near Londonderry, Ireland, Nov. 30, 1670; d. at Putney, England, March 11, 1722. English deist. He was brought up a Roman Catholic, but at 15 became a Protestant, and was educated at Glasgow and Edinburgh, graduating from the latter in 1690. He then studied at Leiden, and in 1694 began to reside at Oxford. In 1696 he published Christianity not Mysterious. The work aroused considerable controversy, which was increased by its similarity to The Reasonableness of Christianity by John Locke. In 1698 he published the Life of Milton, in 1704 the Letters to Serena (Sophia Charlotte, Queen of Prussia), followed in 1705 by his Account of Prussia and Hanover. He visited Europe several times, and published Nazarenus in 1718, and Tetradymus and Pantheisticon in 1720. In his last years his life was that of an adventurer.

Tolbiacum (tol.bī'a.kum). Ancient name of Zülpih.

Tolbukhin (töl.bō'chin). [Former name, Dobrich; Rumanian, Bazarǵic.] Town in NE Bulgaria, in the department of Varna, ab. 27 mi. N of Varna; agricultural trade center. It was captured by the Russians in 1774 and 1810. Between World Wars I and II it belonged to Rumania. 31,049 (1946).

Toldt (tolt), Carl. b. at Bruneck, Tirol, Austria, May 3, 1840; d. at Vienna, Nov. 13, 1920. Austrian anatomist. He introduced into dissection rooms a special type of electric lighting. Author of the world-renowned Anatomischer Atlas für Studierende und Ärzte (1896-1900; Eng. trans., Atlas of Human Anatomy for Students and Physicians, 1903-04) and others.

Toledo (tō.lē'dō). City in NW Ohio, county seat of Lucas County, on the Maumee River near Lake Erie; transshipping point for coal and iron ore and third largest railroad center in the U.S. Among its manufactures are glass, refined petroleum, scales, automobiles, and automotive parts. It is the seat of the University of Toledo. It was formed by the union of Port Lawrence and Vistula, and incorporated as Toledo in 1837. Pop. of city, 252,349 (1940), 303,616 (1950); of urbanized area, 364,344 (1950).

Toledo (tō.lē'dō; Spanish, tō.lā'rhō). Province in C Spain, bounded by Ávila and Madrid on the N, Cuenca on the E, Ciudad Real on the S, and Cáceres on the W; part of New Castile. The surface, comprising the upper Tagus (Tajo) valley, is elevated and mountainous. Agriculture and livestock raising are the chief occupations. Capital, Toledo; area, 5,925 sq. mi.; pop. 532,278 (1950).

Toledo. [Ancient name, Toletum.] City in C Spain, the capital of the province of Toledo, situated on the Tagus (Tajo) River, ab. 40 mi. S of Madrid. The city, rising on three sides steeply above the valley, has an arms factory and has been famous for centuries for its swords. It is the seat of the cardinal archbishop and primate of Spain, and contains monuments of both the Moorish and Christian periods of Spanish history. 34,592 (1940).

Chief Buildings. From the city's highest point rises the Alcázar, on the site of a Roman citadel, reconstructed in the 16th century and housing a military academy. The cathedral, one of the principal Gothic buildings of Spain, is erected on the site of an ancient Christian church and of a former mosque. The archiepiscopal palace and the town hall date from the 17th century. The Church of Santo Tomé, reconstructed in the 14th century, was originally a mosque; the Church of Santa Maria La Blanca was erected in the 12th-13th centuries as the chief synagogue of Toledo; the so-called Sinagoga del Tránsito was also formerly a Jewish house of worship; the Ermita Santo Cristo de la Luz was a mosque. Two bridges of Roman origin led across the gorges of the Tajo River. The medieval walls are preserved.

History. Toledo, an Iberian, then a Roman city in ancient times, was the capital of Visigothic Spain (534-712). The city flourished under the Moors, particularly after it had become the seat of an independent Moorish kingdom in 1036. It contained a large Jewish colony and was a center of Hebrew as well as Arabic culture in Spain. Reconquered by Alfonso VI of Castile, with the aid of the Cid, in 1087, it became the capital of Castile, and was the center of the revolt of the Comuneros against Emperor Charles V in 1520-21; finally, Philip II transferred the royal residence to Madrid in 1559. In one of the most famous sieges of the Spanish Civil War, the Alcázar held out for 70 days against the loyalists and was relieved on Sept. 27, 1936.

Toledo (tō.lā'dō). Main street of Naples, Italy, called officially the Via di Roma.

Toledo (tō.lā'rhō), Alonso Henriquez de Armendariz de. See Armendariz de Toledo, Alonso Henriquez de.

Toledo, Francisco de. b. c.1513; d. at Seville, Spain, in September, 1554. Spanish colonial administrator. From Nov. 26, 1569, to Sept. 23, 1581, he was viceroy of Peru. During this period the young Inca Tupac Amaru was seized and executed (1571), the Inquisition was introduced (1569), and the code of laws called Libro de Tasas was promulgated. On his return to Spain, Toledo was imprisoned for malversation of public funds and was severely rebuked by the king for having caused the death of the Inca.

Toledo la Nueva (lā nwā'bā). Colonial name of Cumaná. Toledo Molina y Salazar (mō.lē'nā ē sālā.thār'), Antonio Sebastian de. [Title, Marquis of Mancera.] b. c.1620; d. after 1675. Spanish viceroy of Mexico (1664-73).

Toledo War (tō.lē'dō). Bloodless boundary dispute (1833-36) between Ohio and Michigan, relating to the city of Toledo (now in Ohio, but then claimed by both). The compromise arranged by the U.S. Congress resulted in staidness and additional territory for Michigan.

Tolentino (tō.lēn.tē'nō). [Ancient name, Toletinum (tō.lēn.tī'nūm).] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Marche, in the province of Macerata, ab. 30 mi. SW of Ancona: small ceramics, textile, and metal industries. The cathedral dates from the 9th century (with later modifications), and the Church of San Nicola da Tolentino from the 14th century. The town is surrounded by medieval walls. France and Pope Pius VI concluded a peace here on Feb. 19, 1797; the victory of the Austrians on May 2 and 3, 1815, over the Neapolitans led to Marshal Murat's loss of the throne of Naples. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 14,356 (1936); of town, 5,710 (1936).

Tolentino, Peace of. Treaty concluded at Tolentino, Italy, Feb. 19, 1797, between Pope Pius VI and Napoleon I. The Pope ceded Avignon, the Comtat-Venaissin, Bologna, Ferrara, the Romagna, and Ancona to the French.

Tolentino de Almeida (tō.lān.tē'nō dē ālmā'dā), Nicolau. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, c.1740; d. there, 1811. Portuguese poet, whose satires are among the best in the language. The most complete edition of his works, Obras completas, was edited by José de Torres and published in 1861.

Toleration, Act of. In English law, the name given to the statute 1 Will. and Mary, cap. 18 (1689). By this the Protestant dissenters from the Church of England, except such as denied the Trinity, were relieved from restrictions with regard to the exercise of religious worship according to their own forms, on condition of their taking the oaths of supremacy and allegiance, and repudiating the doctrine of transubstantiation, and, in the case of dissenting ministers, subscribing also to the Thirty-nine Articles with certain exceptions relating to ceremonies, ordination, infant baptism, and similar matters.

To Let. Novel by John Galsworthy, published in 1921. It was later included in The Forsyte Saga (1922).

Toletum (tō.lē'tūm). Ancient name of Toledo, Spain.

Tolima (tō.lē'mā). Department in W Colombia, at the headwaters of the Magdalena River, between the Cordillera Central and the Cordillera Oriental. Capital, Ibagué; area, 8,876 sq. mi.; pop. 747,100 (est. 1950).

Tolima. Volcanic peak in W central Colombia, in the Cordillera Central of the Andes, N of the town of Ibagué, Tolima. Elevation, ab. 18,438 ft.

Toll (tōl), Count Karl Friedrich. b. April 19, 1777; d. at St. Petersburg, May 5, 1842. Russian general. He was distinguished in Switzerland and Italy, and in the Turkish and Napoleonic wars, was chief of staff in the Turkish War in 1829, and in the Polish revolution in 1831, and succeeded Hans von Diebitsch as Russian commander in Poland in 1831.

Tollan (tōl'lan). See Tula.

Tollendal (tō.lān.dāl), Baron de. Additional title of Lally, Thomas Arthur, Comte de.

Tollendal, Trophime Gérard Lally-. See Lally-Tollendal, Trophime Gérard, Marquis de.

Tollens (tōl'ens), Hendrik. b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, Sept. 24, 1780; d. at Rijswijk, Netherlands, Oct. 21, 1856. Dutch poet. His father was a merchant at Rotterdam, and his early education was in the direction of a mercantile career, which he followed until 1846, when he retired to private life. His earliest works were the comedies De Brulocht (The Wedding, 1799) and Gierigheid en Baatzucht (Avarice and Covetousness, 1801). From 1801 to 1805 appeared the poems Idyllen en Minnezangen (Idylls and Love Songs), Gedichten (Poems, 1808-15), Taferel van de Overwinning der Nederlanders op Nova Zembla (A Picture of the Wintering of the Netherlands on Nova Zembla, 1816), Romansen, balladen en legenden (Romances, Ballads, and Legends, 1818-19), Nieuwe gedichten (New Poems, 1821, 1829), and, finally, in 1848 and 1853, Laatste gedichten (Last Poems).

Toller (tol'ér), Ernst. b. at Samotschin, Germany (now Szamocin, Poland), Dec. 1, 1893; hanged himself at New York, May 22, 1939. German dramatist and poet. After fighting in World War I he was involved in the communist upheaval (1919) in Bavaria and received as a result five years' imprisonment. In prison he wrote his lyrical Gedichte der Gefangenen (1921) and Das Scheidenbuch (1923). Die Wandlung (1919), growing out of his war experiences, strives to show the hollowness of military honor, and Mass Mensch (1920) deals with the mistreatment of the proletariat. Der deutsche Hinkemann (1923) presents a picture of the maimed soldier back home. Die Maschinenstürmer (1922) is based on the uprising of the Nottingham weavers in 1811. Feuer aus den Kesseln (1930) presents the revolt of the German navy in 1918. Toller went to Spain after Hitler came to power, and finally settled in the U.S. Pastor Hall (1939), written in English, dramatizes Martin Niemöller's struggle. Eine Jugend in Deutschland (1933; Eng. trans., I Was a German, 1934) is his autobiography.

Tolleson (tol'e.son). Town in SW Arizona, in Maricopa County, W of Phoenix, 3,042 (1950).

Tolly (tô'lyi), Prince Mikhail Andreas Barclay de. See Barclay de Tolly, Prince Mikhail Andreas.

Tolman (tol'man), Richard Chace. b. at West Newton, Mass., March 4, 1881—. American physicist. He served as professor (1922 et seq.) and dean of the graduate school (1935 et seq.) at the California Institute of Technology, and was appointed (1946) science adviser to the U.S. representative to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. He is known for his investigations in theories of colloids, relativity, and similitude, and in statistical mechanics, thermodynamics, quantum theory, electrical discharge in gases, mass of the electron, partition of energy, and other fields.

Tolman, William Howe. b. at Pawtucket, R.I., June 2, 1861—. American sociologist. He was general agent (1894-98) of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, joint organizer, with Josiah Strong, of the American Institute of Social Service, and its director (1898-08), and the first director (1908-16) of the American Museum of Safety. Author of Municipal Reform Movements in the United States (1894), The Better New York (1906), Social Engineering (1909), and others.

Tolosa (tô.lô'sî). Town in N Spain, in the province of Guipúzcoa, situated at the junction of the Arages and Oria rivers, ab. 11 mi. SW of San Sebastián: iron and copper foundries; manufactures of caps (berets) and paper. The town was formerly the capital of the province; it was occupied (1808-13) by the French during the Peninsular War. 13,583 (1940).

Tolosa (tô.lô'sa). Latin name of Toulouse.

Tolowa (tô.lô'wa). North American Indian tribe, formerly inhabiting the N coast of California. The language was of the Athabaskan family.

Tolstoy (tol.stoi'), Count Aleksey Konstantinovich. [Also, Tolstoi.] b. at St. Petersburg, Sept. 5, 1818; d. near Pochoep, Oct. 10, 1875. Russian poet, novelist, and dramatist. He served in the Crimean war. His chief works are Prince Sergeyany (1861: a historical romance) and the dramatic trilogy Death of Ivan the Terrible (1867), Czar Feodor (1868), and Czar Boris (1870).

Tolstoy, Aleksey Nikolayevich, Count. [Also, Tolstoi.] b. at Nikolayevsk, Samara, Russia, Dec. 29, 1882; d. at Moscow, Feb. 23, 1945. Russian author. He gained a considerable reputation with his realistic stories and novels under the old regime. In 1918 he expatriated himself, but five years later returned to Russia and eventually achieved high prominence, succeeding Maxim Gorky as the dean of Soviet letters and recipient of many official honors, including membership on the Supreme Council of the U.S.S.R. His major works are The Journey of Torments (1921-41), a novel of the civil war and the reconstruction period, published in English as The Road to Calvary (1946), and Peter I, a historical novel, which has remained unfinished. His other novels include The Death Box (1937), Bread (1938), and Nikita's Childhood (1922; Eng. trans., 1945).

Tolstoy, Count Dmitry. b. 1823; d. at St. Petersburg, May 7, 1889. Russian politician. He was minister of public instruction (1866-80) and minister of the interior (1883-89).

Tolstoy, Count Lev (or Leo) Nikolayevich. [Also, Tolstoi.] b. in the government of Tula, Russia, Aug. 28, 1828; d. at Astapova, Nov. 20, 1910. Russian novelist, social reformer, and religious mystic. He was educated at the University of Kazan, and served in the army in the Caucasus and in the Crimean war, being appointed commander of a battery in 1855. He took part in the battle of the Chernaya, defended against the storming of Sevastopol, and after the battle was sent as a special courier to St. Petersburg. He retired at the end of the campaign. After the liberation of the serfs he lived on his estates, working with and relieving the peasants, and also devoting himself to study. After 1876 he experienced a religious transformation, rejecting Orthodox doctrine for that of Christian love, which involved the principle of not resisting evil but of taking it in and transforming it. Many converts were attracted to the new sect by Tolstoy's own writings on his conversion and experiences. The stories regarding his life have almost assumed the proportions of myth. His chief novels are War and Peace (1865-68: a picture of Russian society 1805-15) and Anna Karenina (1875-78). Among his other works are Serastopol (1853-55), The Cossacks (composed while in the army, published 1863), Ivan Ilyich (1886), Two Pilgrims, Childhood (1852), Boyhood (1854), and Youth (1856), My Religion (1885), My Confession (1884), A Commentary on the Gospel (1881), Life, The Kreutzer Sonata (1890), War (1922), What Is Art? (1897-98), Resurrection (1900), and The End of the Age (1906).

Toltec (tô'lek). One of a number of Nahua Indian tribes which were politically dominant in Mexico prior to the rise of the Aztec. Formerly the Toltec were regarded as purely mythological people, but an abundance of archaeological evidence and the correlation of it with the Annals of Cuauhtlan now make clear that they were a real people who, moreover, were also important in the cultural history of Mexico and probably also had an influence on the currents of Maya history. Traditionally the Toltec and the archaeological site Teotihuacán have been linked; however, this is only one of several Toltec sites, and was probably no more important than Tula and Cholula. They were advanced metallurgists and builders, and devised a complex calendar. Their religion was primarily solar; they knew and worshiped Quetzalcóatl as god and culture hero, and practiced human sacrifice. Their history as an organized and influential political unit is believed to extend from the early 6th century to the close of the 10th century, after which they were gradually replaced by other Nahua groups and ultimately by the Aztec.

Toluca (tô.lô'ka). [Full name, Toluca de Lerdo (dä ler'thô.l).] City in S Mexico, capital of México state, ab. 32 mi. SW of Mexico City: important commercial center, situated in a broad valley basin at an elevation of ab. 8,660 ft. It has textile, flour-milling, woodworking, food, and handicraft industries; museum. It is one of the places said to have been settled by the Toltecs, and was an important Aztec center at the time of the Spanish conquest. 115,422 (1950).

Toluca, Nevado de. [Indian name, Zinantécatl.] Volcanic peak in S central Mexico, SW of Toluca. It was first ascended by Humboldt in 1803. Elevation, ab. 15,016 ft.

Tolun (dô'lün). [Also: Dolon, Dolon Nor, Dolunoor, Lama-miao, Tolunnoer (dô'lün.nô.ér').] City in N China, in Inner Mongolia, ab. 170 mi. N of Peiping: renowned for its copper, iron, and bronze statues, bronze bells, and other works of art. Pop. ab. 30,000.

Tölz (tölts). [Also, Bad Tölz.] Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on the Isar River at the foot of the Bavarian Alps, ab. 26 mi. S of Munich; lumber trade; tourist center and health resort. Many of the houses have painted façades in the baroque style depicting Biblical and secular scenes. 12,786 (1950).

Tom (tóm). River in the U.S.S.R., traversing the Kemerovo oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, in W Siberia. It flows NW to join the Ob near Tomsk. Length, ab. 570 mi.; navigable to Stalinik.

Tom (tom), Mount. Mountain in W Massachusetts, in Hampshire County, on the Connecticut River opposite Mount Holyoke, near Northampton. Elevation, ab. 1,202 ft.

Toma (tô'mä). See Loma.

Tomacelli (tô.mä.chel'lē), Pietro. Original name of Pope Boniface IX.

Tomah (tô'mä). City in SW Wisconsin, in Monroe County, 4,760 (1950).

Tomahawk (tom'ä.hök). City in N Wisconsin, in Lincoln County, on the Wisconsin River; summer resort; manufactures of pulp and paper. 3,534 (1950).

Tomasles Bay (tô.mä'les). Inlet of the Pacific, in the coast of California, ab. 35 mi. NW of San Francisco.

Tom Allworth (tom ôl'werth). See Allworth, Tom.

Tom and Jerry, or Life in London (jer'; lun'don). Novel by Pierce Egan, published serially in 1821-22, which contains the adventures of Jerry Hawthorn, Corinthian Tom, and Bob Logic. It was illustrated by George Cruikshank, and was very popular.

Tomaro (tô.mä'rô). [Also, Thomar.] Town and concelho (commune) in C Portugal, in the province of Ribatejo and district of Santarém, ab. 30 mi. NE of Santarém; cotton textile and paper mills; agricultural trade. It has the ruins of an old battlemented castle of the order of the Templars. The ruins of the Roman town of Nabantia are in the vicinity. Pop. of concelho, 42,814 (1940); of town, 9,730 (1940).

Tomaschek (tô'mä.shék), Johann Wenzel. [Also, Jan Václav Tomášek.] b. at Skuč, in Bohemia, April 17, 1774; d. at Prague, April 3, 1850. Bohemian composer and music teacher. His compositions include an opera, church music, cantatas, songs, a symphony, a quartet, a piano concerto, and many other pieces for the piano.

Tomashevsky (to.mä.shëf'ski), Boris Viktorovich. b. at St. Petersburg, Nov. 29, 1890—. Russian author of studies in the history and theory of literature.

Tomaszów Mazowiecki (tô.mä.shôf mä.zô.vyets'kë). [Also, Tomaszów.] Town in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Łódź, situated on the Pilica River, ab. 30 mi. SE of Łódź; woolen, rayon, machine industries. A concentration camp for women was established here by the Germans during World War II. 30,255 (1946).

Tombaugh (tom'bô), Clyde William. b. at Streator, Ill., Feb. 4, 1906—. American astronomer who discovered (January, 1930) the trans-Neptunian planet Pluto while an assistant (1929-38) at Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz. A graduate of the University of Kansas, he was assistant astronomer (1938 et seq.) at Lowell Observatory.

Tombigbee or Tombigby (tom.big'bi). River in E Mississippi and W Alabama, which unites with the Alabama to form the Mobile. Length, 409 mi.

Tombo (tôm'bô). See Dogon.

Tomb of Burns (bérnz), The. Poem by Sir William Watson, published in 1903.

Tombouctou (tôn.bök.tô). French form of Timbuktu.

Tom Bowling (tom bö'ling). See Bowling, Lieutenant Tom, and Bowling, Tom.

Tom Brown at Oxford (tom broun; oks'ford). Story by Thomas Hughes, published in 1861. It is a continuation of Tom Brown's School Days.

Tom Brown's School Days. Story by Thomas Hughes, published in 1856. It describes life at Rugby School under the headmastership of Thomas Arnold (father of Matthew Arnold).

Tombs (tômz), the. Prison in New York City, built in 1838, partly rebuilt in the years 1887-99, and finally dismantled some 40 years later (although the name is still applied to the new prison building in downtown

New York). It fronted on Centre Street, on the block bounded by Leonard, Lafayette, and Franklin streets. It was in the Egyptian style of architecture (whence the name). The criminal law courts, on the opposite side of Franklin Street, were connected with the Tombs by a bridge from the second story, known as the "Bridge of Sighs."

Tombstone (tôm'stôn). Town in SE Arizona, in Cochise County, notable during the last two decades of the 19th century for its production of silver, lead, and gold. It now derives its chief income from tourists. 910 (1950).

Tom Burke of Ours (tom bërku; ourz). Story by Charles James Lever, published in 1844.

Tom Codlin (kod'lin). See Codlin, Tom.

Tomé (tô.mä). City on the W coast of Chile, in Concepción province. 10,722 (1940).

Tomelloso (tô.mä.lyô'sô). Town in C Spain, in the province of Ciudad Real, situated in the Mancha district, ab. 50 mi. NE of Ciudad Real. The town has trades in wine and agricultural products, and has distilleries, and manufactures of leather and cloth. 28,982 (1940).

Tom Fashion (tom fash'on). See Fashion, Tom.

Tom Folio (fôli.ô). See Folio, Tom.

Tom Gate. Gate of Christ Church College, Oxford, England, begun under Thomas Wolsey (whence the name), and completed by Christopher Wren in 1682.

Tom Hickathrift (hik'ä.thrift). See Hickathrift, Tom.

Tomi (tô'mi). [Also, Tomis (tô'mis).] In ancient geography, a town on the coast of the Black Sea, near what is now Constanta, Rumania. It was the place to which Ovid was banished.

Tomioño (tô.më'nyô). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Pontevedra, ab. 30 mi. S of Pontevedra. 10,281 (1940).

Tom Jones (tom jônz). Novel by Henry Fielding, published in 1749, and named after its hero. He is represented as a foundling who is brought up by Thomas Allworthy (Squire Allworthy); in the end he is discovered to be the squire's illegitimate nephew, and is made his heir. Jones is a young man of a naturally attractive and generous character, who has his share of human weaknesses. The book is generally considered one of the masterpieces of English fiction.

Tomkis or Tomkys (tom'kis), Thomas. fl. 1604-15. Scholar of Trinity College, author of the play Albumazar, and, according to F. J. Furnival and F. G. Fleay, of Lingua, or the Combat of the Tongue and the Five Senses for Superiority. The latter has also been attributed to Antony Brewer. (He is always spoken of as Tomkis, though his father's name was Tomkins.)

Tomlinson (tom'lin.son), H. M. [Full name, Henry Major Tomlinson.] b. at London, 1873—. English novelist and journalist, known for his sea stories. He was a war correspondent (1914-17) in Belgium and France, and literary editor (1917-23) of the Nation and the Athenaeum. Author of The Sea and the Jungle (1912), Old Junk (1918), London River (1921), Waiting for Daylight (1922), Tidemarks (1924), Under the Red Ensign (1926), Gallions Reach (1927), Between the Lines (1928), All Our Yesterdays (1930), The Snows of Helicon (1933), Mars His Idiot (1935), All Hands (1937), The Day Before (1940), The Wind Is Rising (1941), The Turn of the Tide (1945), and Morning Light (1946).

Tomlishorn (tom'lish.hörn). See under Pilatus.

Tommaseo (tôm.mä.zä'ô), Niccolò. [Original surname, Tomašić.] b. at Sebenik, in Dalmatia, 1802; d. at Florence, Italy, May 1, 1874. Italian author. He was a member of the revolutionary government of Venice in 1848, and was exiled from Venice in 1849. His works include Dizionario dei sinonimi della lingua italiana (1832), a commentary on Dante (1837), Lettere di Pasquale de' Paoli (1846), and Canti popolari. He was collaborator with B. Bellini on an Italian dictionary.

Tommasini (tôm.mä.zë'në), Vicenzo. b. at Rome, Sept. 17, 1880; d. there, Dec. 24, 1950. Italian composer. Among his compositions are the operas Medea (1906) and Uguale Fortuna (1913), the ballet Le Donne di Buon Umore (1917), the symphonic poems Poema Erotico (1909) and Il Beato Regno (1921), the orchestral works La Vita è un Sogno (1901) and Preludio, Fanfara e Fuga (1927), and chamber music, songs, and piano pieces.

Tommaso Parentucelli (tòm.mà.z'ò pä.ren.tò.chel'le). Original name of Pope Nicholas V.

"Tom Moore of the Confederacy" (tom mör, mör). See Ryan, Abram Joseph.

Tommy Mirabel (mir'a.bel). See Mirabel, Tommy.

Tom Pinch (tom pinch). See Pinch, Tom.

Tompson (tomp'pion). Thomas. [Called the "Father of English Watchmaking."]-b. at Northhill, Bedfordshire, England, c1639; d. Nov. 20, 1713. English clockmaker. He became clockmaker for the Royal Observatory when it was established (1676). Under the direction of Robert Hooke, he made (1675) one of the first English watches with a balance spring, which was presented to Charles II. He also made barometers and sundials, and was the first to practice the theories of watchmaking worked out by Hooke and Edward Barlow.

Tom Piper (tom pi'për). See Piper, Tom.

Tom Pipes (pi'ps). See Pipes, Tom.

Tompkins (tomp'kinz, tom'-). Daniel Augustus. b. in Edgefield County, S.C., Oct. 12, 1832; d. Oct. 18, 1914. American industrialist and engineer. While resident (1882 et seq.) at Charlotte, N.C., as a contracting engineer, he aided in the industrial development of the South by his construction of cotton-seed-oil mills and refineries. Author of Cotton Mill Processes and Calculations (1899) and Cotton and Cotton Oil (1901).

Tompkins, Daniel D. b. at what is now Scarsdale, Westchester County, N.Y., June 21, 1774; d. on Staten Island, N.Y., June 11, 1825. American statesman, Vice-President of the United States (1817-25) under James Monroe. He was educated at Columbia College, and was admitted to the bar in 1797. He was associate justice of the New York supreme court (1804-07), and governor of New York (1807-17). In 1812 he prorogued the legislature for ten months to prevent the establishment of the Bank of North America in New York City. He was elected vice-president in 1816 and was reelected in 1820. He recommended, in 1817, the abolition of slavery in New York.

Tompkins, Sally Louisa. b. in Mathews County, Va., Nov. 9, 1833; d. July 25, 1916. American administrator of a Confederate hospital in the Civil War, noted as the only woman commissioned in the Confederate forces. After the first Battle of Bull Run (July, 1861), she founded and operated a hospital for which she supplied the fund and equipment, maintaining it until June 13, 1865. Known as the Robertson Hospital, it achieved an exemplary record of caring for the wounded. She was commissioned (Sept. 9, 1861) a captain in the Confederate army.

Tom Quad (tom kwod). Great quadrangle of Christ Church College, Oxford, England.

Tom River (tòm). See Tom.

Tom's (tomz). Famous coffee house, named from its proprietor, Thomas West; formerly situated on Russell Street, London, and removed in 1865. In 1764 a club of nearly 700 members was formed here, consisting of the most noted men of the age.

Tom Sawyer (tom sô'yër). The Adventures of. Novel by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain, published in 1876. Tom Sawyer, with his irrepressible companion, the social outcast Huck Finn, is a chronic truant from school. The scoldings which the two pranksters earn by their flouting of social convention (as embodied by Tom's Aunt Polly) are followed by a turn of fortune when Tom helps convict the criminal Injun Joe. Tom is acclaimed as a hero while Huck enters polite society by way of adoption by the Widow Douglas. Among the familiar scenes in the book are the discovery of Tom and Huck in attendance at their own "funeral," the whitewashing of the fence by Tom, the hide-out episode with Joe Harper on Jackson's Island, and Tom's getting lost in the cave with Becky Thatcher. St. Petersburg, the town in which the story is laid, is in reality Hannibal, and the author described himself as a boy in Tom Sawyer. All the other characters are based upon real people Clemens knew during his boyhood in Hannibal. The book has been translated into many foreign languages, including Hindustani and Arabic.

Toms (tomsk; Russian, tòmsk). Former guberniya (government) of Western Siberia, bounded by Tobolsk, Yeniseisk, the Chinese Empire, and Semipalatinsk. It is now incorporated in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, in the U.S.S.R.

Tomsk. City in the U.S.S.R., on a branch railroad line N of the Trans-Siberian Railway, Siberia, situated on the Tom River ab. 40 mi. above its confluence with the Ob. During World War II many airplane engines were made here; there are also machinery industries serving the Kuznetsk Basin, and leather, flour-milling, and chemical industries. It is one of the leading cultural centers of Siberia, and has the oldest university in Siberia, established in 1888. Pop. 141,215 (1939).

Toms River (tomz). Unincorporated community in S New Jersey, county seat of Ocean County, ab. 34 mi. SE of Trenton. It was burned by the British during the Revolutionary War. 2,517 (1950).

Tom Swift (tom swift). Hero of a series of books for boys. The character was created by Edward Stratemeyer.

Tom Thumb (thum). See Stratton, Charles Sherwood.

Tom Thumb the Great. Burlesque by Henry Fielding, produced in 1730. Henry Carey's Chrononhotonthologos was imitated from it in part.

Tom Tiddler's Ground (tid'lerz). Novel by Edward Shanks, published in 1934.

Tonalamati (tò'nälä.mät'l). Aztec sacred calendar comprised of a permutation of 13 numbers and 20 day-names in which the cycle of combinations is completed every 260 days. It was called the book of fate, and the priest consulted it to divine the future of newborn infants.

Tonale Pass (tò.nälä'). Alpine pass in N Italy, ab. 30 mi. NW of Trent, which connects two valleys of the Italian Tyrol. Formerly on the Austrian border, it was the scene of various contests in the Napoleonic wars and in the Austrian wars of 1848 and 1866. Elevation, ab. 6,170 ft.

Tonantzin (tò.nän'tsën). See Cihuacoatl.

Tonatiuh (tò.nä.të'ö). See also Alvarado, Pedro de.

Tonatiuh. In Aztec Indian mythology, the sun god and chief deity. His face is depicted in the center of the great Aztec calendar stone; and here human victims dressed in his likeness were sacrificed to him. Four priests tore out the heart of the living sacrifice as offering to Tonatiuh. It was an honorable and holy death (the victim was allowed to resist and, although armed only with a wooden club against knives, occasionally won his release).

Tonawanda (ton.a.won'dä). City in W New York, in Erie County, at the confluence of Tonawanda Creek with the Niagara River; twin city of North Tonawanda; transportation center. It has manufactures of shingles, office furniture, paper, beaverboard, and motorboats. 14,617 (1953).

Tonawanda Creek. River in W New York which joins the Niagara ab. 10 mi. N of Buffalo. Length, ab. 75 mi.

Tonbridge (tun'brij). [Also, Tonbridge.] Urban district and market town in SE England, in Kent, situated on the river Medway ab. 30 mi. SE of London by rail. It is one of the chief centers of the hops industry, and is one of the most important railway junctions in Kent. Its industries include printing works, sawmills, chemical manufactures, phonograph manufactures, rat distilleries, brickyards, and the manufacture of cricket balls. It has the ruins of Tonbridge Castle, dating back to Norman times. 19,239 (1951).

Tønder (tën'dër). Amt (county) of Denmark, in S Jutland, bounded by the North Sea, Germany, and the amt (counties) of Aabenraa-Sønderborg, Haderslev, and Ribe. The island of Rømø is included in this county. Capital, Tønder; area, 503 sq. mi.; pop. 41,717 (1945).

Tondiman (ton'di.man). See Pudukkottai.

Tondorf (ton'dörf). Francis Anthony. b. at Boston, July 17, 1870; d. Nov. 29, 1929. American Roman Catholic clergyman, teacher, and seismologist. He was professor of physics (1904-15) and professor of biology (1912-29) at Georgetown University where he founded the Georgetown seismological laboratory (opened 1911), of which he served as director until the time of his death. He brought out The Registration of Earthquakes and Press Dispatches on Earthquakes (1916-29), and was the author of A Vindication of Viscoelasticity (1920; supplement, 1922).

Tone (tò.nä). [Japanese, Tonegawa (tò.nä.gä.wä).] Longest river in Japan, on the island of Honshu, flowing into the Pacific E of Tokyo. Length, ab. 235 mi.

Tone (tōn), Wolfe. [Full name, Theobald Wolfe Tone.] b. at Dublin, June 20, 1763; committed suicide in prison at Dublin, Nov. 19, 1798. Irish revolutionist, one of the chief founders of the United Irishmen. He founded the society (with Napper Tandy and Thomas Russell) in 1791 as a rallying point for Roman Catholics against their English Protestant "oppressors." In 1795 he was detected in treasonable correspondence with the French, but the government permitted him to go to America. From there he went to France. He promoted and served in the French expedition under Lazare Hoche to Ireland in 1796, but it could not land. He was captured on a French squadron on its way to Ireland in 1798, and sentenced to death as a traitor rather than as a captured French officer. His autobiography was edited by his son in 1826.

Toner (tō'nér), Joseph Meredith. b. at Pittsburgh, Pa., April 30, 1825; d. at Cresson, Pa., July 30, 1896. American physician and writer. He settled (1855) at Washington, D.C., and after attaining a leading position in his profession, devoted himself to writing and collecting. His collection of more than 27,000 volumes pertaining to American medical development was presented (1882) to the Library of Congress. A specialist in the study of George Washington's life, he edited some of Washington's writings, including Washington's Rules of Civility and Decent Behavior (1888) and Journal of Colonel George Washington . . . in 1754 (1893).

Tonga or Thonga (tong'ga). [Also: Amatonga, Batonga, Botonga, Shangana-Tonga, Tonga-Shangana, Vatonga.] Bantu-speaking people of SE Africa, inhabiting S Mozambique, N Transvaal, and E Southern Rhodesia. Their population has been estimated at a million (by H. P. Junod, "The VaThonga (The Thonga-Shangana People)," in The Bantu Tribes of South Africa, edited by A. M. Duggan-Cronin, 1935). The Tonga were formed into a kingdom by Shoshangane, a Zulu chief, and his followers, this kingdom falling before the Portuguese in 1895. They are now divided into independent groups, including the Ronga, Djonga, Hlavi, Hlanganu, Khosa, Nkuna, Nwalungu, Nwanati, Hlengwe, and Tswa. Nguni elements in Tonga language and culture are still readily recognizable. They have exogamous patrilineal clans. They practice hoe agriculture and cattle herding, with the cattle complex, and their principal food is maize.

Tonga. [Also: Batonga, Vatonga.] Three Bantu-speaking peoples of SE Africa, each of which is distinct from the Tonga, or Thonga, of S Mozambique. The largest group, known also as Rhodesian Tonga, inhabits SE Northern Rhodesia; the second, also known as Nyasaland Tonga, occupies a portion of the W shore of Lake Nyasa in Nyasaland; the third constitutes a subgroup of the Shona, inhabiting C Mozambique S of the Zambezi River.

Tonga Islands. [Also, Friendly Islands.] Group of islands in the S Pacific Ocean, S of Samoa and W of Fiji. They comprise the kingdom of Tonga, a constitutional monarchy, over which Great Britain established a protectorate in 1900. The present ruler is Charlotte (or Salote), of the Tubou family, whose principal adviser is a British agent; there is a legislative assembly of 22 members. The kingdom is made up of three main groups of islands, Tongatabu, Hapai, and Vavau, together with many smaller outlying islands (ab. 150 in all). They are mostly low coral formations; some have volcanic peaks, one of which erupted in 1946. Chief exports are copra and bananas. The Tongans probably came originally from Samoa. The islands were discovered (1616) by the Dutch navigator Willem Cornelis Schouten, and were later visited by Tasman (1643), Wallis (1767), and Cook (1773, 1777). English missionaries arrived at the end of the 18th century. The islands were united under one king, a Christian, in 1845 and became a constitutional monarchy in 1862. Capital, Nukualofa; land area, ab. 269 sq. mi.; pop. 45,558 (est. 1948).

Tongaland (tong'ga.land). See Amatongaland.

Tongerlen (tong'e.rən). Flemish name of Tongres.

Tongking (tong'king'). See Tonkin.

Tongres (tongr). [Flemish, Tongerlen; ancient name, Aduatuka.] Town in NE Belgium, in the province of Limburg, ab. 12 mi. NW of Liège: cattle, horse, and hog markets; organ factory. The Church of Our Lady, in the Gothic style, contains a number of art treasures. 13,538 (1947).

Tongue (tung). River in N Wyoming and SE Montana which unites with the Yellowstone River near Miles City. Length, 246 mi.

Tongue of Arabat (ä.rä.bät'). See Arabat, Tongue of.

Toni (tō'ni). See Eton.

Tonika (ton'ik.ka). See Tunica.

Tönisson (tō'nis.sön), Jaän. b. near Viljandi, Estonia, 1868; believed to have died in a Russian forced labor camp, c1945. Estonian statesman. As editor (1896-1935) of the leading Estonian daily, Postimees, and founder and leader of the Estonian Progressive Party, he powerfully influenced the movement for national independence in Estonia, successfully counteracting both Russification by the czarist regime and Germanization by the influential Baltic nobility. He strongly stimulated Estonian cultural, social, and economic activities, laying the foundation for a Scandinavian-type cooperative movement. A member of the Russian Duma (1906), of the Estonian diet (1917), of the Estonian constituent assembly (1919), and of all parliaments of independent Estonia, he was head of the state (1927-28, 1933), and professor of cooperative economy at the University of Tartu (1935-38). He was deported by the Russian occupation authorities in 1941.

Tonkawa (tong'ka.wa). Group of North American Indian tribes, now extinct, formerly inhabiting an area near the coast of Texas. The language formed an independent family.

Tonkawa (tong'ka.wö). City in N Oklahoma, in Kay County, in a petroleum producing area. 3,643 (1950).

Tonke (tong'kä). See Cubango.

Tonkin (ton'kin, tong'-). [Also: Tongking, Tonking, Tonquin, Tungking; official name, North Viet-Nam.] Territory in SE Asia, formerly a French colony, since 1946 part of the provisional republic of Viet-Nam, in the federation of French Indochina. It is bounded by China, the Gulf of Tonkin, Annam, and Laos. The surface is generally low, and largely in rice fields; the bordering area is hilly or mountainous. It is traversed by the river Song-koi or Coi (Red River), 500 mi. long, which flows into the Gulf of Tonkin by a wide delta near Hanoi. The chief exports are iron, coal, castor and lac oils, tea, rice, silk, silk goods, and tin. It was long a kingdom, nominally tributary to China, and until 1897 under Annamese suzerainty. In 1873 an unsuccessful French expedition under Garnier was sent against Tonkin, and a treaty between France and Annam was ratified in 1874. The contest for Tonkin was renewed in 1882, and campaigns were undertaken (1883-85) by the French under Rivière, Négrier, Brière de l'Isle, and others against the Black Flags and the Chinese. Tonkin was ceded to France by treaty with China in 1885. In 1945 it was declared a part of Viet-Nam, which was recognized by France as a provisional republic in 1946 under a French commissioner. Capital, Hanoi; area, ab. 44,650 sq. mi.; pop. 9,851,000 (1943).

Tonkin, Gulf of. [Also, Gulf of Tongking.] Arm of the South China Sea, partly enclosed by China, Tonkin, and the island of Hainan. Length, ab. 300 mi.

Tonkinese (tong.kin.éz', -és'). [Also, Tongkinese.] Branch of the Vietnamese (Annamese) people living in Tonkin, N Indochina. They differ slightly in customs, dress, and dialect from the other Vietnamese.

Tonks (tongks), Henry. b. at Solihull, England, 1862; d. at London, Aug. 8, 1937. English painter, Slade professor of fine art at the University of London from 1917 to 1930. His work was purchased by museums at Paris and throughout the British Empire. Among his principal paintings are The Picnic (oil), Garden Scene (pastel), and Arras (oil).

Tonkunst (tön'künst), Denkmäler Deutscher. See Denkmäler Deutscher Tonkunst.

Tonna (ton'a), Charlotte Elizabeth. [Pseudonym: Charlotte Elizabeth; maiden name, Browne.] b. at Norwich, England, Oct. 1, 1790; d. at Ramsgate, England, July 12, 1846. English literary writer.

Tonnante (tō.nānt). First ironclad, one of five "floating batteries" built by Napoleon III during the Crimean War. It was launched at Brest in March, 1855.

Tonnay-Maritime (to.nă.mă.rē.tēm). Town in SW France, in the department of Charente-Maritime, on the Charente River ab. 4 mi. E of Rochefort. It is a small port. 4,830 (1946).

Tonneins (to.nāns). Town in SW France, in the department of Lot-et-Garonne, on the Garonne River ab. 20 mi. NE of Agen. It has tobacco manufactures. The town was destroyed (1622) by Louis XIII. 6,913 (1946).

Tonnelat (to.nç.lā), Ernest. b. 1877—. French Germanic scholar. His published studies include Les Frères Grimm, leur œuvre de jeunesse (1912), Les Contes des frères Grimm, étude sur la composition et le style des Kinder- und Hausmärchen (1912), Histoire de la littérature allemande des origines au 17^e siècle (1923), La Chanson des Nibelungen (1925), and Histoire de la langue allemande (1927).

Tonnerre (to.ner). Town in C France, in the department of Yonne, on the Armançon River E of Auxerre, in a wine-producing region. The town, including the Church of Notre Dame, suffered damage in World War II. 4,237 (1946).

Tönnies (tē'nēs), Ferdinand. b. 1855; d. 1939. German sociologist. Concerned with the transition from rural to urban modes of life, he formulated two basic orientational sociological concepts: gemeinschaft (community) and gesellschaft (society). He is considered responsible for the psychological foundations of modern German sociology. His important works were Gemeinschaft und Gesellschaft (1887; Eng. trans., Fundamental Concepts in Sociology, 1940), Die Stille (1902), Kritik der Öffentlichen Meinung (1922), and Einführung in die Soziologie (1931).

Tønning (tē'nŋ). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, situated at the mouth of the Eider River, ab. 30 mi. SW of Schleswig; fisheries and fish-canning; textile industries; cement works; livestock markets. It is a seaside resort. The Church of Saint Lawrence dates from the 12th century. Tønning received town privileges in 1590. In the Great Northern War the Swedish general M. G. Stenbock was here forced to surrender (1713) to the Russians and Danes. 6,018 (1946).

Tono-Bungay (tō'nō.bung'gā). Novel by H. G. Wells, published in 1908.

Tonquin (tong'kin'). See Tonkin.

Tønsberg (tēns'ber). [Also, Tunsberg.] Town in SE Norway, capital of the fylke (county) of Vestfold, situated on the Tønsberg Fjord, an arm of Oslo Fjord, SW of Oslo. It is a seaport, the center of the Norwegian whaling industry, and has shipyards, rope, machinery, and other industries. It is the oldest town in Norway, dating from 871. Pop. 11,883 (1946); with suburbs, 22,982 (1946).

Tonson (ton'son), Jacob. b. c.1656; d. 1736. English bookseller. He published some of Thomas Otway's and Nahum Tate's plays, was John Dryden's publisher in 1679 and later, issuing the noted Miscellany (1684-1708), and published Nicholas Rowe's edition of Shakespeare in 1709. He purchased and published Milton's Paradise Lost, was founder and secretary (c.1700 et seq.) of the Kit-Cat Club, and managed a bookshop in the Strand where the Spectator was planned by Joseph Addison and Richard Steele.

Tonstall (tu(n)st'āl), Cuthbert. See Tunstall, Cuthbert.

Tonsus (ton'sus). A Latin name of the Tundzha.

Tonti (tōn'tē), Lorenzo. fl. c.1650. Italian banker; father of Henry de Tonty. He was the inventor of the tontine system of life insurance, whereby a group of persons purchase a life annuity, the benefits to each individual surviving increasing as members of the group die, until the survivor or small group of survivors gain the benefit. The method was used on several occasions by the French government to raise money.

Tonty (ton'tī, tōn'tē), Henry de. [Original name, Tonti.] b. c.1650; d. near Mobile, 1704. Italian explorer in the Mississippi valley; son of Lorenzo Tonti. In 1678 he joined La Salle, in his expedition to North America. He supervised the building of the Griffon on the Niagara River and in 1679-80 helped build Fort Crevecoeur; he was left in command of the fort when La Salle returned to Lake Ontario and in the fall of 1680 was forced to abandon it in the face of hostile Iroquois Indians. He traveled back to Green Bay through the woods in a journey marked by hardship. In 1681 he returned to Illinois with La Salle and in 1682 accompanied him to the mouth of the Mississippi in the voyage that established France's claim to the whole valley. Until 1700 he remained in Illinois, attracting settlers to the area, trading, and opening the country as part of the French empire in America. He then went south to Louisiana where he joined the colonists under d'Iberville. Tonty's influence over the Indians, which was great, was due in part to his iron hand, a substitute for one lost when he was a member of the French army; it brought him a reputation as the possessor of powerful magic.

Tony Beaver (tō'nī bē'vēr). American folk hero of the West Virginia lumberjacks, comparable to Paul Bunyan.

Tony Lumpkin (lump'kin). See Lumpkin, Tony.

Tony Pastor (pas'tor). See Pastor, Antonio.

Tonzus (ton'zus). A Latin name of the Tundzha.

Tooele (tō'il'e). City in N Utah, county seat of Tooele County; important as a smelting center. It was settled in 1849. Pop. 7,269 (1950).

Tooke (tūk), Horne. [Full name: John Horne Tooke; original name, John Horne.] b. at Westminster, London, June 25, 1736; d. at Wimbledon, England, March 18, 1812. English politician and philologist. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge, and was vicar at New Brentford until 1773. He began (c.1765) his political career as a Liberal, engaged in controversies with John Wilkes (whom he originally supported) and Junius, and was the chief founder of the "Society for Supporting the Bill of Rights" in 1769. He opposed the American war, and was imprisoned for libel (1767-68) for attempting to raise money for the relatives of the Americans "murdered at Lexington and Concord." He assumed the name of Tooke in 1782, adopting the surname of a friend and benefactor. In 1794 he was tried for high treason as a suspected sympathizer with the French revolutionaries and acquitted. He was a member of Parliament (1801-02), but was excluded later as a clergyman, a bill specially being passed to bar him. His chief work is the philological treatise Epea Pteroenta, or The Diversions of Purley (2 parts, 1786, 1805). He also wrote various political pamphlets, including Petition of an Englishman (1765), Two Pair of Portraits (1788), and others.

Tooke, Thomas. b. at Kronstadt, Russia, Feb. 29, 1774; d. at London, Feb. 26, 1858. English economist, one of the first to dissociate the fluctuation of prices from the quantity of money in circulation, and author of the celebrated History of Prices and of the State of the Circulation during the Years 1793-1856 (6 vols., 1838-57). He was also one of the initiators of the free trade movement, having drawn up the famous petition of the merchants of the City of London to the House of Commons (1820), and was a founder (1821) of the Political Economy Club with David Ricardo, Thomas Malthus, James Mill, and others. In the year after his death, the Tooke professorship of economic science and statistics was founded at King's College, London, in his memory.

Tooker (tūk'ēr), Lewis Frank. b. at Port Jefferson, N.Y., Dec. 18, 1855; d. Sept. 17, 1925. American short-story writer, editor, and poet. Author of The Call of the Sea (1902), Under Rocking Skies (1905), Life of Paul Jones (1915), and The Middle Passage (1920).

Toole (tōl), John Lawrence. b. at London, March 12, 1832; d. at Brighton, England, July 30, 1906. English comedian. His first public appearance was at the Haymarket Theatre, London, in 1852, and he appeared at the St. James Theatre in 1854. In 1858 he became leading comedian at the Adelphi, and after five years engagements followed at the Queen's Theatre, the Gaiety, and other principal theaters. He made a tour of America in 1874 and of the Australian colonies in 1890. In 1879 he became manager of the Folly Theatre, later (1882) renamed Toole's Theatre, and managed it until his retirement in 1895. Among the best known of his roles are Paul Pry, Caleb Plummer in The Cricket on the Hearth, the Artful Dodger, and Uncle Dick in Uncle Dick's Darling.

Toombs (tōmz), Robert. b. in Wilkes County, Ga., July 2, 1810; d. at Washington, Ga., Dec. 15, 1884. American politician. He was Whig member of Congress from Georgia (1845-53), and U.S. senator from Georgia (1853-61). A leading member of the Southern group, he was not an outright secessionist until after Lincoln's election, but soon resigned and became a member of the Confederate Congress (1861) and, briefly, Confederate secretary of state (1861). He served as a brigadier general at the second Battle of Bull Run and at Antietam in 1862, and as a volunteer aide on the staff of General Gustavus W. Smith, who commanded the Georgia militia in 1864. He lived abroad (1865-67); when he returned to Georgia, he refused to take the oath of allegiance to the U.S. government.

Toomer (tō'mēr), Jean. b. at Washington, D.C., 1894—. American writer and lecturer on psychology and literature. His books include Cane (1923), Essentials (1931), and Portage Portul (1932).

Toos (tōs). See Tuz.

Toowoomba (tō.wōm'ba). City in E Australia, in SE Queensland, ab. 70 mi. W of Brisbane. It is the marketing center of an agricultural region and the headquarters of the state wheat board, set up in 1920. Pop. 33,326 (1947), 37,500 (est. 1950).

Tuparca (tō.pär'kä). Spanish name of Tupac.

Topaze (tō.päz). Satirical comedy (1928; Eng. trans., 1930) by Marcel Pagnol. The hero, after losing his teaching post for practicing the honesty he teaches to his class in ethics, makes a fortune as a crooked and adroit politician.

Topeka (tō.pē'ka). City in E Kansas, capital of Kansas and county seat of Shawnee County, on the Kansas River; railway shops and general offices of the Santa Fe Railway; center for insurance and printing companies. It was settled in 1854 and was incorporated in 1857. Pop. of city, 78,791 (1950); of urbanized area, 89,104 (1950).

Topeka Constitution. Constitution for the projected state of Kansas, adopted in convention at Topeka in 1855. It prohibited slavery.

Topelius (tū.pā'le:is), Zachris. b. at Nykarleby (now Uusikaarlepyy), Finland, Jan. 14, 1818; d. at Helsingfors (now Helsinki), Finland, March 12, 1898. Finnish poet and novelist writing in Swedish: He was editor (1842-61) of the Helsingfors Tidningar, in which his earliest poems and stories originally appeared. Afterward he was made professor extraordinary of the history of Finland and the North at the University of Helsingfors, and in 1863 professor ordinary. In 1876 he became professor of universal history. From 1875 to 1878 he was the rector of the university. In the latter year he finally withdrew from his academic labors. His first collection of lyrics appeared in 1845 with the title Ljunghblommor (Heath Blossoms). Three other collections were published in 1850, 1854, and 1860 respectively, and still another, Nya blad (New Leaves), in 1870. Among his dramatic works are particularly to be mentioned Titians första kärlek (Titian's First Love), Efter 50 år (After 50 Years), and Prinsessan af Cypern (The Princess of Cyprus, with which the Helsingfors theater was opened in 1860). His most celebrated work is a series of novels in six volumes, depicting life in Sweden and Finland in the 17th and 18th centuries, with the title Fälskärns berättelser (The Surgeon's Stories, 1872-74). His Läsning för Barn (Reading for Children) has been translated into English and German. He was the author, besides, of several historical and descriptive works on Finland.

Tophet (tō'fēt). [Also, Topheth (tō'fēth).] In Biblical geography, a place at the SE extremity of Gehenna or the Valley of Hinnom, S of Jerusalem. It is said that here those Jews who practiced idolatry sacrificed their children to Moloch, and that for this reason the whole valley became the place where the city's rubbish was burned, and a symbol and a name for the place of torment in a future life.

Topinard (tō.pē'när), Paul. b. at L'Isle-Adam, France, Nov. 4, 1830; d. in January, 1912. French anthropologist, professor (1876 et seq.) in the School of Anthropology at Paris. Among his works are L'Anthropologie (1879), Éléments d'anthropologie générale (1885), L'Homme dans la nature (1891), and Science et foi (1900).

Toplady (tōp'lā.di), Augustus Montague. b. at Farnham, Surrey, England, Nov. 4, 1740; d. at London, Aug. 14, 1778. English clergyman, controversialist, and sacred poet. He was an earnest Calvinist and an opponent of John Wesley and Methodism. He published The Doctrine of Absolute Predestination Stated and Asserted (1769), The Church of England Vindicated from the Charge of Arminianism (1769), Historic Proof of the Doctrinal Calvinism of the Church of England (1774), Poems on Sacred Subjects (1775), and Psalms and Hymns (1776). He wrote several other volumes of hymns and sacred poems. He is best known as the author of the hymn Rock of Ages.

Topolski (tō.pōl'ski), Feliks. b. in Czechoslovakia, Aug. 14, 1907—. Polish-English painter and draftsman, noted for his illustrations for various books and magazines. His work is found in museums at London, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Nottingham, Toronto, and Brooklyn; it has been reproduced in The News Chronicle, Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, Studio, The Illustrated London News, Picture Post, and Fortune, among others; he illustrated A Dictionary and Anthology of Drinking (1934), Geneva (1939), and Pugmation (1940). His own publications include The London Spectacle (1935), Britain in Peace and War (1941), and Portrait of G.B.S. (1946).

Topotha (tō.pō'thā). [Also, Toposa (tō.pō'sā).] Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of NE Africa, occupying an area in SE Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Their population is estimated at ab. 30,000 (by M. A. Bryan, Distribution of the Nilotic and Nilo-Hamitic Languages of Africa, 1948). They are divided into numerous local subgroups ruled by councils of elders. They have exogamous patrilineal clans and age grades. They practice herding, with the cattle complex, and hoe agriculture, and their principal crop is sorghum.

Toppenish (tōp'ē'nish). City in S Washington, in Yakima County, in a truck-gardening area; headquarters of the Yakima Indian Agency. 5,265 (1950).

Topper (tōp'ēr). Novel by Thorne Smith, published in 1926.

Topsham (tōp'sham). Civil parish and seaport in SW England, in Devonshire, situated at the head of the estuary of the river Exe, ab. 4 mi. SE of Exeter, ab. 177 mi. SW of London by rail. It has some coastal shipping, 3,437 (1931).

Topsy (tōp'si). Negro girl in Uncle Tom's Cabin (1852) by Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Topsy, M.P. Novel by A. P. Herbert, published in 1929. It is the sequel to The Trials of Topsy (1928).

Toquima Range (tō.kē'mā). [Also, Toquema Range.] Range of mountains in C Nevada, in Nye County. Peak elevation, 11,807 ft.

Toradja (tō.rā'jā). [Also, Toraja.] Malayo-Polynesian-speaking, head-hunting people of C Celebes, in Indonesia; they numbered 557,590 in 1930. They cultivate rice and maize, hunt with blowpipes, and wear garments of tapak-bark cloth.

Torah (tō'ra). Name given to the first five books of the Old Testament, or Pentateuch, by the Jews. It is considered by them the most important part of the Bible, as the five books of Moses given to him by God and containing the religious laws. Weekly lessons are read from it in the synagogue, and manuscript copies, in rolled scrolls, are used for this purpose.

Toranko (tō.rāng'kō). See Kuranko.

Tor Bay (tōr). Small bay in SW England, in Devonshire. It is an inlet of the English Channel, ab. 4 mi. wide. Torquay is situated on its shores. William of Orange (William III of England) landed there in 1688. It provides a haven for ships bound to or from the west in rough weather, and has important fisheries.

Torbert (tōr'bērt), Alfred Thomas Archimedes. b. at Georgetown, Del., July 1, 1833; d. at sea, Aug. 29, 1880. American general with the Union army in the Civil War. He served in the infantry in the Army of the Potomac, was distinguished in 1864 as a cavalry commander under Philip H. Sheridan, and commanded the Army of the Shenandoah in 1865. Later he was in the diplomatic and consular service.

Torcello (tōr.chel'lō). Small island ab. 6 mi. NE of Venice, Italy, of importance in the 10th and 11th centuries. It contains an ancient Byzantine cathedral of Santa Maria, and a church of Santa Fosca. The former was rebuilt in the 11th century, but preserves the early basilican plan. The Church of Santa Fosca is probably of the 12th century. Buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II.

Torch-Bearers, The. Comedy by George Kelly, produced in 1922 and revised in 1938.

Torch Lake (tôr'ch). Lake chiefly in Antrim County, Michigan; summer resort. Length, ab. 14 mi.

Torda (tôr'dô). Hungarian name of Turda.

Tordesillas (tôr.ră.să'lyas) or Tordesilhas (tôr.dê.să'lyash), Convention of. Treaty between Spain and Portugal, signed at Tordesillas, near Valladolid, Spain, June 7, 1494, regulating their rights of discovery and conquest. The Pope, by his celebrated bull of May 3, 1493, had drawn a meridian "100 leagues west of the Azores and Cape Verde Islands," giving to Spain the right of conquest to the west of it, and to Portugal the same right on the east. The Convention of Tordesillas removed this line to a meridian 370 leagues west of the Cape Verde Islands. At that time the continental character of America was unknown, and the powers supposed that they were dividing "the Indies," or Asia; but apparently it never occurred to them that, in pushing their conquests, they would eventually meet on the same meridian, but on the opposite side of the world. Unfortunately the meridian was not definitely fixed: first, because it was reckoned from an archipelago, and not from one island or point; and second, because the term "league" admitted of several different meanings. The Brazilian coast, discovered soon after, was clearly to the east of the Tordesillas line, and it was accordingly settled by the Portuguese; but the line passed near the mouths of the two great rivers Plata and Amazon, and in the uncertainty as to its position disputes arose in those regions. Eventually, and partly because of the uncertainty, the Portuguese pushed their conquests far westward. In the course of time the two powers met in the East Indies, and here the field of dispute was broader, owing to the defective methods of determining longitude which were then in vogue. The Philippine Islands, discovered by Ferdinand Magellan, were claimed and held by Spain as lying within her hemisphere (although, in fact, they were in the hemisphere which had been assigned to Portugal).

Torell (tô.rêl'), Otto Martin. b. at Varberg, Sweden June 5, 1828; d. at Stockholm-Charlottenlund, Sweden Sept. 11, 1900. Swedish geologist, outstanding as an arctic scholar and expert in diluvial geology. He served, (1870-97) as director of the Swedish State Geological Institute.

Torelli (tô.rêl'le), Giuseppe. b. at Verona, Italy, c1650; d. c1708. Italian composer, noted especially for his concert grossi (published 1709), the first works of this type to be printed.

Toreno (tô.ră'nô), Count of. [Title of José María Queypo de Llano y Ruiz de Sarabia.] b. at Oviedo, Spain, 1786; d. at Paris, Sept. 16, 1843. Spanish historian and politician, prime minister (1834) in the regency of Maria Christina. He wrote Historia del levantamiento, guerra y revolución de España (History of the Rising, War, and Revolution of Spain, 1835-38), a standard history of the Peninsular War.

Torfæus (tôr.fê'us), Thormodr. [Also, Torfason (tôr.fă.sôn).] b. in Iceland, 1639; d. 1719. Icelandic antiquary. His chief work is History of Norway (1711). He also wrote works on Greenland, Vinland, and places in the vicinity, and translated Icelandic works into Danish.

Torgau (tôr'gou). Town in C Germany, in the Land (state) of Saxony-Anhalt, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Saxony, Prussia, situated on the Elbe River ab. 30 mi. NE of Leipzig. It has glass, ceramics, paper, and machine factories. The Gothic Church of Mary dates from 1479-1516; the Renaissance Rathaus (town hall) from 1563-65; the Schloss (castle) Hartenfels, one of the largest Renaissance castles in Germany, contains a collection of Saxon antiquities, and the Schloss church, consecrated by Martin Luther in 1541 (it constitutes the first church building in Germany built for and by Protestants). Torgau, originally a Slavic settlement, was from 1456 a residence of the prince-electors of Saxony. The Alliance of Torgau (Torgauer Bund) for the protection of Protestant interests was concluded here in 1526. The town suffered in the Thirty Years' War. On Nov. 3, 1760, Frederick the Great of Prussia here defeated the Austrians under Daun. Torgau was fortified by Napoleon in 1810, was besieged by the Allies in 1813, and surrendered on Jan. 14, 1814. In World War II, elements of the U.S. First Army and the Russian army met here on April 27, 1945. Pop. 18,455 (1916).

Torgau, Alliance of. [German, Torgauer Bund (tôr'gou.ér.bunt).] League formed at Torgau, 1526, by Saxony and Hesse and other Protestant states against the Roman Catholic states.

Torgau Articles. Document drawn up (1530) at Torgau, which formed the basis of the Augsburg Confession.

Torgelow (tôr'gê.lô). Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Mecklenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Pomerania, Prussia, ab. 24 mi. NW of Stettin. It has agricultural trade, iron foundries, and lumber mills. 10,066 (1946).

Torghud (tôr'gôd). See Dragut.

Torgler (tôr'gêr), Ernst. b. at Berlin, April 25, 1893—. German politician. He became active (1907) in the Socialist Youth movement, joined the newly founded Communist Party in 1920, and was a member (1924 et seq.) of the Reichstag. Arrested after the burning of the Reichstag in 1933, he was acquitted by the highest German court, but was confined to a concentration camp. In 1945 he resumed activity in West German politics.

Torhout (tôr'hout). [Also: Thorhout; French, Thour-out.] Town in NW Belgium, in the province of West Flanders, ab. 11 mi. SW of Bruges; agricultural trade; lace and leather manufactures. 12,223 (1947).

Tories (tô'riz). See also Loyalists.

Tories. In English history, one of the two great political parties which arose at the end of the 17th century. It may be regarded as a successor of the Cavaliers. It favored conservative principles in church and state. One wing after the revolution of 1688 became known as Jacobites; it was the peace party in the reign of Queen Anne; and from the Hanoverian succession (1714) it was in opposition for about half a century because of its identification with the Jacobite cause. It took stronger ground than the Whig Party against the American colonies and against the French Revolution. Among its leaders were William Pitt, George Canning, and the Duke of Wellington. From about the time of the Reform Bill (1832), which the Tories opposed, the name began to be replaced by Conservative. The word Tories, however, is still in fairly common (if technically incorrect) use for the Conservatives.

Torino (tô.rê'nô). [English, French, and German, Turin.] Province in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont. Capital, Turin; area, 2,116 sq. mi. (1936); pop. 1,168,384 (1936).

Torino. Italian name of Turin, city.

Tormay (tôr'mê.ê), Cecil. b. 1876; d. 1937. Hungarian novelist, author of Régi ház (The Old House, 1914) and others.

Tormentine (tôr'mên.tin), Cape. Headland at the E extremity of New Brunswick, Canada, projecting into Northumberland Strait.

Tormentoso (tôr.mên.tô'sô), Cabo. See under Good Hope, Cape of.

Tormes (tôr'mâs). [Latin, Termes; Medieval Latin, Turmus.] Left-hand tributary of the Douro River, which it joins ab. 46 mi. NW of Salamanca, Spain. Length, ab. 150 mi.

Tornacum (tôr.nă'kum). Latin name of Tournai.

Torneå (tôr'ne.ä). Swedish name of Tornio.

Torne Lake (tôr'ne). [Swedish, Torneträsk (tôr'ne-trêsk).] Lake in N Sweden. Length, ab. 35 mi.; area, ab. 124 sq. mi.

Tornio (tôr'niô). [Swedish, Torneå.] Town in W Finland, in the lään (department) of Oulu, on the Swedish border. The Swedish and Finnish railroad systems are linked here. It is a tourist resort, with leather manufactures and salmon fisheries. 3,492 (1951).

Toro (tô'rô), David. b. at Sucre, Bolivia, June 24, 1898—. Bolivian army officer and politician, president (1936-37) of Bolivia. Chief of staff during the Chaco War (1932-35), he became president after a bloodless revolution (May 17, 1936) backed by the army and several socialist parties. He expropriated (without compensation) foreign oil concessions, creating a government petroleum monopoly, and was deposed (July 14, 1937) by army officers led by Germán Busch.

Törökzentmiklós (tő'rék.sént.mē'klōsh). Town in E central Hungary, S of the Tisza River and E of the city of Szolnok. It has flour mills. 25,000 (1948).

Toronale Gulf (tōr.ō.nā'ik). See Kassandra, Gulf of.
Toronaicus (tōr.ō.nā'ikus). Sinus. Latin name of Kassandra, Gulf of.

Toronto (tōr.on'tō). [Former names: Newburg, Sloan's Station.] City in E. Ohio, in Jefferson County; manufactures of clay products. It was laid out in 1818 and renamed in 1881. Pop. 7,253 (1950).

Toronto. [Early name, York.] Capital of the province of Ontario, Canada, situated on Lake Ontario, ab. 40 mi. NE of Hamilton. It is the second largest city in Canada. It is the seat of the University of Toronto and of numerous other educational institutions. Toronto was settled (as York) and made the capital of Upper Canada in 1794, was taken and burned by the Americans in 1813, and was incorporated as a city and had its name changed to Toronto in 1834. It was at one time, alternately with Quebec, the seat of government of Canada. It has been the capital of Ontario since 1867, and serves as the commercial, industrial, and financial center for the adjacent region. It is the second most important industrial city in Canada and a vital railway and communications center. An extensive area of urban development has grown up about Toronto and there are numerous adjoining towns, with important industries, which are economically part of the metropolitan area. The Canadian National Exhibition, the largest annual fair in the world, is held at Toronto. It is also an important lake port with excellent facilities for shipping. 875,754 (1951); with suburbs, 1,117,470 (1951).

Tororo (tōr.rō'rō). Town in E Africa, in Eastern Province, Uganda; the first stop in Uganda on the Mombasa-Kampala railway. A branch line runs N from the town to Soroti and the cotton-growing region. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Toros Dağları (tōr.ōs dāğ.lā'ri). Turkish name of the Taurus Mountains.

Torp (tōrp). Oscar F. b. at Skjeberg, Østfold, Norway, June 8, 1893—. Norwegian statesman. An electrician, he became an officer of his union and a member of the executive of the Norwegian Labor Party. After the party left the Third International (Comintern) in 1923, he became its chairman, serving until 1940. He was head of the Oslo city council (1934) and mayor of Oslo (1935). He was a member of the Norwegian legislature, serving as acting minister of defense (1935-36) and minister of social welfare (1936 et seq.). He was minister of finance (1939-42) and of defense (1942-45) in the Norwegian government-in-exile, and after World War II served in the important post of minister of supply and reconstruction (1945-47). He became premier in November, 1951, when Einar Gerhardsen resigned.

Torquato Tasso (tōr.kwā'tō tās'sō). Drama in verse by Goethe, printed in 1790.

Torquatus (tōr.kwā'tus). Titus Manlius. See Manlius Torquatus, Titus.

Torquay (tōr.kē'). Municipal borough, seaport, and seaside resort in SW England, in Devonshire, situated on Tor Bay ab. 19 mi. S of Exeter, ab. 200 mi. SW of London by rail. It is known for its mild climate, and is a favorite resort. One of its landmarks is the "Spanish Barn," where 400 prisoners from the Spanish Armada were imprisoned in 1588. Pop. 53,216 (1951).

Torquemada (tōr.kwē.mā'dā; Spanish, tōr.kā.mā'fñā), Juan de. b. at Valladolid, Spain, c1545; d. in Mexico, after 1617. Spanish historian. He went to Mexico in his youth, joined the Franciscan order there, and was a professor at the College of Tlatelolco, and provincial of the order (1614-17). His principal work is the Monarquía indiana (3 vols., folio, 1615; 2nd ed., 1723). It is the most voluminous and one of the best of the early histories of Mexico.

Torquemada, Tomás de. b. c1420; d. 1498. Dominican prior, made by Ferdinand and Isabella first inquisitor general for Castile in 1483. He organized the Inquisition in Spain, and became infamous for the severity with which he administered his office. The number of his victims who suffered death is sometimes placed at nearly 9,000, but is probably nearer 2,000. He forwarded the plan for the expulsion of the Jews from Spain in 1492.

Torquet (tōr.kē'). André. See Nau, John Antoine.

Torrance (tōr'ans). City in California, in Los Angeles County, S of Los Angeles; manufactures of machines, tools, and steel; petroleum refining. 22,241 (1950).

Torre (tōr'ra). Duque de la. Title of Serrano y Domínguez, Francisco.

Torre, Miguel de La. See La Torre, Miguel de.

Torre Annunziata (tōr'ā.ā.nōn.tsyā'tā). [Also, Torre dell'Annunziata.] City and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Bay of Naples ab. 12 mi. SE of Naples, at the base of Mount Vesuvius; tourist center; seaside resort. There is trade in grain and fruit, and silkworm raising and macaroni manufactures. An armament factory was founded here by the king of Naples in 1758. Pop. of commune, 72,935 (1936); of city, 41,127 (1936).

Torre del Campo (del kām'pō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, immediately W of Jaén. 11,252 (1940).

Torre del Greco (del grē'kō). City and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Bay of Naples ab. 7 mi. SE of Naples, at the base of Mount Vesuvius; agricultural commune and seaside resort, with coral fisheries. The city has several times been destroyed or damaged by volcanic eruptions, the latest of them in 1906. Pop. of commune, 51,401 (1936); of city, 37,052 (1936).

Torredonjimeno (tōr'ra.thōng.hē.mā'nō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, ab. 12 mi. W of Jaén; marketing center for a stock-raising and grain and oil producing district. It also has soap manufactures and distilleries. 16,069 (1940).

Torregiano (tōr.rā.jā'nō). b. 1472; d. 1522. Florentine sculptor, perhaps best known as the sculptor who broke Michelangelo's nose in a quarrel (c1491). For many years he served in the papal army under Cesare Borgia. About 1503 he went to England, where he won great reputation and made the tomb of Henry VII in Westminster Abbey which Francis Bacon called "one of the stateliest and daintiest monuments in Europe." He afterward wandered to Spain, and is said to have died of starvation in a prison at Seville.

Torrelavega (tōr'ra.lā.nā'gā). Town in N Spain, in the province of Santander, ab. 14 mi. SW of Santander; tin mines; metal and leather industries; flour mills; sugar refineries. 19,315 (1940).

Torremaggiore (tōr'ra.mā.djō'rā). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Foggia, between Foggia and Pescara; agricultural commune; medieval castle. Pop. of commune, 15,198 (1936); of town, 15,100 (1936).

Torrence (tōr'ens), (Frederic) Ridgely. b. at Xenia, Ohio, Nov. 27, 1875; d. at New York, Dec. 25, 1950. American poet and playwright. He served as a librarian (1897-1903) on the staff of the New York Public Library, as an associate editor (1903) of The Critic, as an editor of The Cosmopolitan (1905-07) and The New Republic (1920-34), as a professor of English (1920-21) at Miami University, and as poet-in-residence (1938 et seq.) at Antioch College. His collections of verse include The House of a Hundred Lights (1900), Hesperides (1925), and Poems (1941). He is author of the poetic drama Abelard and Heloise (1907) and such plays as El Dorado (1903) and Common Sense (1938). He wrote plays for the Negro theater (1917), including Granny Maumee, The Rider of Dreams, and Simon the Cyrenian.

Torrens (tōr'enz), William Torrens McCullagh. b. near Dublin, Oct. 13, 1813; d. of injuries received when struck by a hansom cab at London, April 26, 1894. English politician, author, and reformer. Appointed (1835) assistant commissioner of poor relief in Ireland, he founded (1842) with Sir Robert John Kane the Mechanics Institute of Dublin. He later joined the Anti-Corn-Law League, and, as a member of Parliament (1847), aided in improving the condition of workmen's homes, and introduced (1868) the Artisan's Dwellings Bill for slum clearance. His amendment (1870) of the Education Act established the school board for London.

Torrente (tôr.ren'tà). Town in E Spain, in the province of Valencia, ab. 8 mi. SW of Valencia; agricultural trade. 13,586 (1943).

Torrente, Mariano. b. at Barbastro, in Aragón, Spain, 1792; d. probably in Cuba, after 1853. Spanish author. His most important work is Historia de la revolución Hispano-Americana (3 vols., Madrid, 1829).

Torreón (tôr.rá.ón). City in N Mexico, in Coahuila state; commercial center for the Laguna district. 132,101 (1950).

Torre Pellice (tôr'râ pel.lé.châ). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the comptinenti (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Torino, situated in the Alps SW of Turin. It has been for centuries a center of the Waldensian sect. The Waldensian Church escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 4,912 (1936); of town, 3,216 (1936).

Torreperogil (tôr'râ.pâ.rô.nél'). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, on the Guadalquivir River, NE of Jaén; marketing center of a wine, oil, and grain producing district. 10,119 (1941).

Torres (tôr.rêsh), Joaquín José Rodríguez. See Rodríguez Torres, Joaquín José.

Torres Bodet (tôr'râs.bô.det'), Jaime. b. April 17, 1902—, Mexican poet and statesman. A diplomat in Spain, the Netherlands, France, Belgium, and Argentina, he became (December, 1946) Mexican minister of foreign affairs. He was chosen (Nov. 26, 1948) to be for six years director general of the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), but submitted his resignation (charging that he was being asked to accept an inadequate budget) in November, 1952. His verse (to a large extent lyric, and influenced by the French) and novels fill more than 17 volumes. Author of Fervor (1918), Poemas (1924), Biombo (1925), Destierro (1930), and others.

Torres Novas (tôr'rêzh nô.vash). Town and concelho (commune) in C Portugal, in the province of Ribatejo and district of Santarém, NE of Santarém: linen manufactures; churches of the 15th–17th centuries; ruined castle of the 14th century. Pop. of concelho, 36,875 (1940); of town, 10,331 (1940).

Torres Strait (tor's). Sea passage of the S Pacific which separates Australia on the S from New Guinea on the N and connects the Coral Sea with Arafura Sea. It was discovered in 1606. Width, ab. 90 mi.

Torres Vedras (tôr'rêzh vâ.drash). Town and concelho (commune) in W Portugal, in the province of Estremadura, situated on the Zizandro River ab. 26 mi. NW of Lisbon: marketing center of a wine-growing region. It contains a number of churches and convents of the 15th–17th centuries. Pop. of concelho, 51,844 (1940); of town, 11,945 (1940).

Torres Vedras, Lines of. Lines of fortifications in Portugal extending from near Torres Vedras to the Tagus River. They were defended by the Anglo-Portuguese forces under Wellington against the French under Masséna, October, 1810–March, 1811, in the Peninsular War. Length of longest line, 29 mi.

Torre-Tagle (tôr.râ.tâ.glâ), Marquis of. Title of Tagle y Portocarrero, José Bernardo.

Torrey (tôr'i), Bradford. b. at Weymouth, Mass., Oct. 9, 1843; d. at Santa Barbara, Calif., Oct. 7, 1912. American author, editor, and ornithologist. Among his works are Birds in the Bush (1885), A Florida Sketchbook (1894), Spring Notes from Tennessee (1895), A World of Green Hills (1898), Every-day Birds (1901), Footing It in Franciscia (1901), The Clerk of the Woods (1903), and Nature's Invitation (1904).

Torrey, Charles Cutler. b. at East Hardwick, Vt., Dec. 20, 1863—, American scholar. He served as professor of Semitic languages (1900–32) at Yale, and was chairman (1906–18) of the managing commission of the American School of Archaeology at Jerusalem. Author of Commercial-Theological Terms in the Koran (1892), A Brief Introduction to the Apocryphal Literature (1945), The Lives of the Prophets (1946), and other works.

Torrey, Charles Turner. b. at Scituate, Mass., Nov. 21, 1813; d. in Maryland, May 9, 1846. American abolitionist. He turned to the abolitionist cause while attending (1834 et seq.) the Andover Theological Seminary. Licensed (1836) as a preacher, he abandoned (1839) the pulpit to devote himself to the antislavery movement. He settled (c1842) at Baltimore, where he helped fugitive slaves, for which he was arrested, tried, and sentenced (1844) to a six-year term at hard labor. He died in the Maryland state penitentiary.

Torrey, John. b. at New York, Aug. 15, 1796; d. there, March 10, 1873. American botanist and chemist. He was professor of chemistry and natural history (1830–54) at Princeton and of chemistry (1827–55) at the College of Physicians and Surgeons (New York City). He served also as state geologist of New York, U.S. assayer, and botanical editor of the reports of various exploring expeditions. He began, with his pupil, Asa Gray, Flora of North America (1838–43).

Torrey, Reuben Archer. b. at Hoboken, N.J., Jan. 28, 1856; d. Oct. 26, 1928. American evangelist. Ordained (1878) to the Congregational ministry, he became associated with Dwight L. Moody and superintended (1889–1908) the Moody Bible Institute. He went on a preaching tour (1902–05) in Europe and England. He served as dean (1912–24) of the Bible Institute and pastor (1915–24) of the Church of the Open Door at Los Angeles.

Torreys Peak (tor'iz). Mountain in the Rocky Mountains, in Colorado, ab. 48 mi. SW of Denver. Elevation, ab. 14,264 ft.

Torricelli (tôr.ré.chél'lé), Evangelista. b. at Piancaldo, Italy, Oct. 15, 1608; d. at Florence, Italy, Oct. 25, 1647. Italian physicist and mathematician. He was the friend and amanuensis of Galileo, who had become blind, and his successor as professor at Florence. He discovered the principle of the barometer in 1643, made other mathematical and physical discoveries, and improved the microscope. His barometer, still known as the Torricellian tube, consisted of a column of liquid in a tube open at one end; the open end was placed in a container of the same liquid and the atmospheric pressure supported the column in the tube; variations in pressure resulted in the falling or rising of the column. His Opera geometrica were first published in 1644, and appeared in a three-volume modern edition in 1919.

Torridon (tor'ri.don), Loch. Inlet of the Minch, in N Scotland, in the county of Ross and Cromarty, ab. 39 mi. W of Beaulieu. It consists of Loch Torridon proper, Loch Shieldaig, and Upper Loch Torridon. Total length, ab. 13 mi.; width at entrance, ab. 4 mi.

Törring (tör'ing), Count Joseph August von. b. at Munich, Germany, Dec. 1, 1753; d. there April 9, 1826. Bavarian public official, author of the drama Agnes Bernauerin (1780), which is in the long line of knights' dramas set off by Goethe's Götz von Berlichingen (1773).

Torrington (tor'ing.ton). City in NW Connecticut, in Litchfield County, on the Naugatuck River. Its chief manufactures are woolen goods, hardware, articles of brass and plated ware, needles, tools, and electrical goods 27,820 (1950).

Torrington. Rural district and town in SW England, in Devonshire, ab. 5 mi. SE of Bideford, ab. 203 mi. SW of London by rail. 7,387 (1951).

Torrington. Town in SE Wyoming, county seat of Goshen County. 3,247 (1950).

Torrington, Earl of. A title of Monck or Monk, George.

Torrington, Viscount. Title of Byng, George.

Törshavn (tôr.shoun'). See Thorshavn.

Torso Belvedere (bel've.dir'). Ancient figure of Hercules, signed by the Athenian sculptor Apollonius, now in the Vatican. Rome. It is ascribed to the middle of the 1st century B.C. and is remarkable for the anatomical knowledge evidenced by the sitting position of the figure.

Torstenson (tôr'sten.són), Lennart. [Also: Torstenson; title, Count of Ortaia.] b. at Torstena, Västergötland, Sweden, Aug. 17, 1603; d. at Stockholm, April 7, 1651. Swedish general in the Thirty Years' War. He served in Germany after 1630 under Gustavus Adolphus, and later under Johan Banér. On the latter's death, he became (1641) commander in chief. He gained (1642) the victory of Schweidnitz (Świdnica), overran Silesia, won (Nov. 2, 1642) the victory of Breitenfeld, overran (1643–44) Schleswig, Holstein, and Jutland, defeated (1644) the Imperialists under Matthias Gallas at Jüterbog, and achieved (March 6, 1645) the victory of Jankov. Having joined forces with George Rákóczy, he conquered Moravia and invaded Austria in 1645. He resigned his command in 1646, disabled by gout.

Tortilla Flat (tór.té'ya). Novel by John Steinbeck, published in 1935.

Tortoiseshell Cat, The. Novel by Naomi Royde-Smith, published in 1925.

Tortona (tór.tó'ná). [Latin, Dertona.] Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Alessandria, ab. 12 mi. E of Alessandria; metal and textile industries; construction works. The Church of Santa Maria Canale is in the Romanesque style. Other churches, among them the cathedral, are of later periods (16th century; baroque style). A Roman town in ancient times, Tortona was destroyed by Frederick I (Frederick Barbarossa) in 1155 and again in 1162. Later under the rule of Milan, it came to Piedmont in 1735. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 20,361 (1936); of town, 13,250 (1936).

Tortorici (tór.tó.ré'ché). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, situated in a mountainous region W of Messina; agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 11,398 (1936); of town, 2,680 (1936).

Tortosa (tór.tó'sí). [Latin, Dertosa; later, Colonia Julia Augusta Dertosa.] City in NE Spain, in the province of Tarragona, situated in a fertile plain on the Ebro River, ab. 40 mi. SW of Tarragona; river fisheries; marble and alabaster quarries; paper, leather, hat, pottery, glass, and soap manufactures; agricultural trade. The cathedral, occupying the site of a mosque of the 10th century, dates from the 14th century, but has a façade of the 18th century. There are old town walls, palaces of the 15th and 16th centuries, a library, and a museum. A Roman town in ancient times, it was much contested between Moslems and Christians in the early Middle Ages; it became a haunt of Moorish pirates, was made the object of a crusade proclaimed by Pope Eugenius III, and was captured by Templars, Pisans, and Genoese under the leadership of Count Ramón Berenguer IV of Barcelona in 1148. Tortosa fell to the Duke of Orléans in 1708, and in the Peninsular War was occupied (1811-14) by the French. 38,269 (1940).

Toruń (tó'rón'y). [German, Thorn.] City in N Poland, in the województwo (province) of Bydgoszcz, situated on the Vistula River ab. 110 mi. NW of Warsaw; metal, machinery, furniture, food (especially gingerbread), electrical appliances, and linen industries; agricultural trade. The Nicolaus Copernicus University opened after World War II. Toruń is an old city with remains of a 14th-century castle and fortifications. There is a Gothic town hall of 1393; the parish church of Saint John, started in 1250, contains valuable medieval sculptures. The astronomer Nicolaus Copernicus was born here. The city was founded in 1231 by the Teutonic Order, and was a member of the Hanseatic League. It broke away from the Teutonic Order in 1454, and attachment to Poland was confirmed in 1466. The city passed to Prussia in 1793, to the grand duchy of Warsaw in 1807, to Prussia in 1815, and to the republic of Poland in 1919. Toruń was heavily fortified during the 19th and 20th centuries; it was occupied by the Germans in September, 1939, and by the Russians in January, 1945. Pop. 68,085 (1946).

Tory Island. Small island in the Irish Republic, in Ulster province and County Donegal. It lies ab. 7 mi. offshore from the nearest point on the Irish mainland, in the Atlantic Ocean. Length, ab. 3 mi.; width, ab. 1 mi.

Törzburg Pass (tért'sbürk). [Also, Bran Pass.] Pass in the Transylvanian Alps, ab. 20 mi. SW of Braşov, Rumania. Elevation, ab. 4,075 ft.

Tosa Falls (tó'zá). See Toce Falls.

Tosca (tos'ká; Italian, tós'ká). Opera in three acts by Giacomo Puccini, with a libretto by Illica and Giacosa adapted from Victorien Sardou's La Tosca, and first produced at Rome in 1900.

Toscana (tós.ká'ná). Italian name of Tuscany.

Toscanelli (tós.ká.nel'lé), Paolo dal Pozzo. b. at Florence, Italy, 1397; d. there, May 15, 1482. Italian astronomer. He is said to have been the author of the map used by Columbus on the voyage which resulted in the discovery of America.

Toscanini (tós.ká.né'ní; Italian, tós.ká.né'né), Arturo. b. at Parma, March 25, 1867—. Italian music conductor, considered by some to be the greatest of all time. A violinist (graduate of the Parma Conservatory in 1885), he was playing with an orchestra at Rio de Janeiro in 1886 when he was unexpectedly called upon to conduct in Aida. His success was followed by engagements at Turin (1887) and La Scala, at Milan (1888). He became (1898) musical director at La Scala, serving there until 1907. From 1908 to 1915 he was conductor for the Metropolitan Opera at New York. After World War I, he toured with the La Scala orchestra; from 1921 to 1931 he was the regular conductor at La Scala, also serving as guest conductor (1926-28), regular conductor (1928-33), and musical director (1933-36) of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra. He was guest conductor during this period at Philadelphia, Bayreuth (1930-31), Salzburg (1934-36), and elsewhere. In 1937 he became regular conductor of the National Broadcasting Company Symphony, an orchestra specially organized and recruited for him. Probably the most famous of all conductors, Toscanini is noted for his fiery temperament and his mild disposition, his thorough knowledge of the scores he conducts, a knowledge so deep that he is able to conduct much of the repertoire without reference to the score, and his firm anti-Fascism, the latter causing him to give up the conducting at the Bayreuth festival, which was followed by the public expression of his scorn for Mussolini and Franco.

Toschi di Fagnano (tós'ké'dé fá.nyá'nó), Giulio Carlo de'. See Fagnano, Giulio Carlo di Toschi di.

Toselli (tó.zel'lé), Enrico. b. at Florence, Italy, March 15, 1883; d. there, Jan. 15, 1926. Italian pianist and composer. Among his compositions are the symphonic poem Fire and the operetta La Principessa Bizarra; he is best known, however, for his Serenade.

Tosti (tós'té), St. Francesco Paolo. b. at Ortona, Italy, April 9, 1846; d. at Rome, Dec. 2, 1916. Italian composer. In 1880 he became teacher of singing to the royal family of England; he was knighted in 1908. He was noted for his songs, especially Goodbye, Matinata, and Serenata.

Tostig (tós'tig). [Also: Tosti (tós'ti), Tostinus (tós.tí'nus); title, Earl of Northumbria.] Killed at the battle of Stamford Bridge, Sept. 25, 1066. English earl; son of Earl Godwin. He was banished with his father in 1051, but became earl of Northumbria in 1055. He assisted his brother Harold in the Welsh campaign in 1063, was deposed by the Northumbrians in 1065, and went to Flanders. He ravaged the southern coast of England, and joined with Harold III (Harold Haardrade) in the invasion of England in 1066. After initial success they were met by Harold of England at Stamford Bridge and the invasion was defeated, but the campaign diverted Harold from the south and permitted William the Conqueror to land from Normandy.

Totana (tó.tá'ná). Town in E Spain, in the province of Murcia, situated ab. 25 mi. SW of Murcia; canneries; pottery manufactures; trade in citrus fruits, olives, almonds, and wine; iron ore and zinc mines are in the vicinity. 15,264 (1940).

Tóth (tót), Árpád. b. at Arad, Hungary, April 14, 1886; d. at Budapest, Nov. 7, 1928. Hungarian poet and translator. He belonged to the modernistic Nyugat (West) movement in Hungarian literature and represented the "art for art's sake" school in verse. His translations are of importance. Author of Lélektől lélekig (From Soul to Soul, 1928) and Hajnali szerenád (Dawn Serenade, 1913).

Totila (tó'tí.lá) or Totilas (tó'tí.las). [Also Baduila.] d. 552 A.D. East Gothic (Ostrogothic) king (541-552) in Italy. He overran the peninsula, recapturing all but a few places from the Byzantine forces, and was opposed by Belisarius, who left Italy (c.548). He took Rome (546 and 549), and Sicily, Corsica, and Sardinia. He then advanced on Greece, but the Emperor Justinian sent Narses against him and he was defeated and mortally wounded at the battle of Taginae in July, 552.

Totis (tó'tis). See Tata, Hungary.

Totius (tó'tí.us). [Pseudonym of Jacob D. du Toit.] b. 1877—. South African poet. In Rachel (1913) he draws a parallel between the suffering of that Biblical personage and the Boer people. Trekterswee (Treklers' Grief, 1915) describes the clash between the old Boers and the gold diggers at Johannesburg. He also wrote Passieblommen (Passion Flowers, 1934) and Uit donker Afrika (From Dark Africa, 1936).

Totleben (tót.lä.ben), Count Franz Eduard Ivanovich. [Also, Totleben.] b. at Mitau, in Courland (now Jelgava, Latvia), May 20, 1818; d. at Soden, near Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, July 1, 1884. Russian military engineer and general. He became famous as the chief engineer in the defense of Sevastopol (1854-55), was made a major general in 1855, and was wounded in June, 1855. After being employed in fortifying Kronstadt, he became assistant to the inspector general of engineers, and in 1869 general of engineers. He took charge of the siege of Plevna in the war against the Turks (September-December, 1877), was employed in the reduction of the Bulgarian fortresses in 1878, became commander of the Russian army in Turkey in 1878, and later served as governor of Odessa and in other stations. He wrote Défense de Sevastopol (1864-72) and others.

Totnes or Totness (tót.nes). Municipal borough and market town in SW England, in Devonshire, situated on the river Dart ab. 22 mi. SW of Exeter, ab. 203 mi. SW of London by rail. Totnes has a steeplechase course, unusual in that the riders must gallop through the river Dart, 5,534 (1951).

Totnes, Earl of. Title of Carew, George.

Totonicapán (tót.tó'pē.kā.pān'). [Also, Totonicapam.] Department in SW Guatemala: smallest and most densely populated department of the republic. Capital, Totonicapán; area, 410 sq. mi.; pop. 96,641 (1950).

Totonicapán. [Also, Totonicapam.] Town in W Guatemala, capital of Totonicapán department, ab. 60 mi. NW of Guatemala City: textiles and pottery. It was an ancient Indian stronghold and village. 9,492 (1950).

Totowa (tót.tō.wā). Borough in N New Jersey, in Passaic County: residential suburb of Paterson. 6,045 (1950).

Tottel's Miscellany (tót.tl). Title usually given to the first regular Elizabethan collection of English miscellaneous verse. It was issued in June, 1557, by Richard Tottel, with the title Songes and Sonettes, and was probably edited by Nicholas Grimald. It contained the songs and sonnets of Sir Thomas Wyatt and Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, Grimald, and others. A second edition, omitting Grimald, appeared in the same year, and eight editions had been issued by 1587.

Totten (tót'en), Joseph Gilbert. b. at New Haven, Conn., Aug. 23, 1788; d. at Washington, D.C., April 22, 1864. American military engineer, general, and scientist. He was graduated from West Point in 1805, was chief engineer under Stephen Van Rensselaer, Henry Dearborn, and Alexander Macomb in the War of 1812, and was engaged in developing the coast defenses of the U.S. He became chief engineer of the army in 1838, directed the siege of Veracruz in 1847, and later was inspector at the U.S. Military Academy.

Tottenham (tót'en.am). Municipal borough in SE England, in Middlesex, situated in the N suburbs of London, ab. 6 mi. N of Liverpool Street Station. Parts of the town are now extremely congested, and extensive rehousing and redevelopment schemes are under way. According to the Greater London Plan of 1944, the density of population is ultimately to be reduced by rehousing in the so-called "New Towns" to be built. 126,921 (1951).

Tottenville (tót'en.vil). [Former names: Arensville, Bentley Dock, Mount Hermon, The Neck, Totten's Landing, Unionville.] Former village in SE New York, on Staten Island; since 1898 a part of New York City in the borough of Richmond. Now a residential community, it was once a fishing village.

Tottington (tót'ing.ton). Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 3 mi. NW of Bury, ab. 199 mi. NW of London by rail. 5,824 (1951).

Tottori (tót.tō.rē). City in W Honshu, Japan, on the Sea of Japan, ab. 140 mi. by rail NW of Kyoto. It has manufactures of lacquerware, textiles, and paper, and trade in rice, fish, fruits, and vegetables. 61,721 (1950).

Touareg (twā'reg). See Tuareg.

Toucey (tō'u'si), Isaac. b. at Newtown, Conn., Nov. 15, 1792; d. at Hartford, Conn., July 30, 1869. American politician. U.S. attorney general (1845-49) under Polk, and U.S. secretary of the navy (1857-61) under Buchanan. He was a member of Congress from Connecticut (1835-39), governor of Connecticut (1846-47), and a senator (1852-57).

Touchstone (tuch'ston). "Allowed fool" in Shakespeare's As You Like It. He is wise and factitious, a fool by profession, not an unconscious clown.

Touchstone. Shrewd, honest goldsmith in Eastward Hol by Ben Jonson, George Chapman, and John Marston.

Touchstone, The. Novlette by Edith Wharton, published in 1900.

Touchwood (tuch'wüd), Lady. Brilliant and shameless woman in William Congreve's The Double Dealer, in love with her husband's nephew Mellefont.

Touchwood, Lady. Simple countrywoman, in Hannah Cowley's The Belle's Stratagem, whose husband tries to keep her away from the world.

Toucouleur (tō.kō.lér). See Tukulor.

Tougourt (tū.gürt'). [Also: Tuggurt; official name, Territoire de Tougourt.] One of the Territoires du Sud of Algeria, in NW Africa. It is bounded on the N by Constantine department, on the E by Tunisia and Libya, on the S and SW by Oasis Sahariennes, and on the W by Ghardaia territory. Chief town and administrative center, Tougourt; area, 44,375 sq. mi.; pop. 284,940 (1948).

Tougourt. [Also, Tuggurt.] Chief town of Tougourt territory, Algeria, in NW Africa, situated in an oasis ab. 260 mi. S of Constantine and ab. 150 mi. E of Ghardaia. It has several small suburbs. The chief product of the oasis is dates. 14,704 (1948).

Toukhachevsky (tō.hā.chef'skī), Mikhail Nikolaevich. [Also, Tukhachevsky.] b. in the government of Smolensk, Russia, 1893; executed June 12, 1937. Russian marshal. Educated to a military career in the corps of cadets and at the Aleksandrovsky School, he served in the Russian army from the beginning of World War I (during which he was for a time a prisoner of the Germans) and in 1917 sided with the revolutionists and joined the Communist Party. In chief command of the Red forces first on the Caucasian and later on the Western Front, he achieved brilliant successes. After the defeat of the counterrevolutionary forces, he became chief of the Frunze Military Academy, assistant chief of staff, and, in 1936 (during which year he was one of the Russian representatives at the funeral of George V of England) a marshal and head of the Red Army. Meanwhile in 1935 the Soviet regime dominated by Joseph Stalin began its series of purges, directed first against high civil functionaries and Communist leaders accused of Trotskyism and other deviations. These continued in 1936 and 1937, and early in the latter year an investigation of the army high command was set afoot. On June 12, 1937, following a secret military trial on charges of conspiracy and treason, Toukhachevsky and seven other high-ranking general officers were executed.

Toul (töl). [Ancient name, Tullum.] Town in E France, in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, situated on the Moselle River and the Rhine-Marne Canal, ab. 14 mi. W of Nancy. For many years a major French fortress city (the fortifications, now dismantled, were built from plans by Vauban), the town is still confined to its 17th-century enclosure. The Cathedral of Saint Etienne is a beautiful building, partly in the Gothic, partly in the Renaissance style. The town, an imperial city in the Middle Ages, was annexed to France in 1648. The cathedral, and many other buildings, were seriously damaged in World War II. 9,359 (1946).

Toulet (tō.lé), Jean. [Pseudonym, Perricas.] b. at Pau, in the Pyrenees, France, June 5, 1867; d. at Guéthary, France, Sept. 6, 1920. French poet, critic, novelist, and essayist. Author of Monsieur de Paup, homme public (1898), Mon Amie Nane (1905), Comme une fantaisie (1918), La Jeune Fille verte (1920), Les Contrerimes (1921), and others. A gentleman farmer from Béarn province, he went to Paris (1898), joined the Montmartre bohemians, and became a local legend. He wrote about the night life he enjoyed and is credited with introducing, as a type, into modern French literature the figure of the chic, but essentially very shallow, Parisian prostitute. His health broke in 1912 and he retired to the Basque country, where he spent his last years revising and polishing his work.

Toulon (tò.lon'; French, tò.lón). [Latin, Telo Martius.] City in SE France, in the department of Var, situated on a bay of the Mediterranean Sea, E of Marseilles. A mountain, crowned with fortifications, is in the background. It is the second largest naval station of France and the chief station of the French Mediterranean fleet. It has blast furnaces and a marine arsenal, and manufactures of shoes, leather, clothing, machinery, and iron products. The yards of La Seyne build battleships and commercial vessels. The city, French since 1481, owes its maritime development to Colbert and Vauban. The English occupied it for a short while in 1793. In 1942, when the Germans appeared before the city, a large part of the French fleet was scuttled in the harbor. In 1944 the German encampment was taken by the French invasion forces. The port and the city were seriously damaged by air bombardments. 125,742 (1946).

Toulon, Siege of. In French history: 1. Unsuccessful siege by the allied army and navy (Piedmontese, British, Dutch, and others), in 1707, under Prince Eugene of Savoy. 2. Siege in 1793; the city, which had received an Anglo-Spanish fleet, was besieged by the French republicans, and was taken in December, largely through the skill of Napoleon I, who first became prominent here.

Toulouse (tò.lòz). [Latin, Tolosa.] City in SW France, the capital of the department of Haute-Garonne, situated on the Garonne River at the junction of the Canal du Midi and the Canal Latéral in the middle of the shallow depression which separates the Massif Central from the Pyrenees. It is the fourth largest city in France, the seat of an archbishop, a university and other educational institutions, and of numerous commercial and industrial establishments. Toulouse has considerable metal industries, and is one of the principal seats of the French aeronautical industry. It is an important center of the leather and hide trade and of leather-goods manufacture. The chemical industry is represented by a number of enterprises. There is production also of hosiery, lingerie, liqueurs and brandies, confitures, and biscuits. The former Benedictine abbey church of Saint Sernin is one of the most notable Romanesque churches in France. The Church of the Jacobins, begun c1230, is in the Gothic style; the Cathedral of Saint Etienne is in the late Gothic ("flamboyant") style. The Saint Raymond Museum is devoted to the city's archaeology and history, and the Augustine Museum is one of France's richest provincial art museums. There was settlement made by the Romans on the site of the modern city, and it was the capital of the Visigothic kingdom from 419 to 506 (and, after the victory of King Clovis over the Visigoths at nearby Vouillé, the capital of the Frankish duchy of Aquitaine). King Philip II (Philip Augustus) occupied the region and the city during the Albigensian Crusade and it has definitely belonged to France since 1271. The university dates from 1229. The city was predominantly Roman Catholic in its sympathies during the religious wars and Jacobin during the French Revolution. Wellington's forces succeeded in capturing the city in 1814. It suffered only minor damage during World War II. 264,411 (1946).

Toulouse, Count of. Title of Jourdain, Alfonse.

Toulouse, County of. Medieval county in S France, whose center was the city of Toulouse. It was established in 778, and its counts acquired various other possessions. Its fiefs (Narbonne, Béziers, and others) were annexed to the French crown c1229. It was united to France in 1271, and formed part of Languedoc.

Toulouse, Comte de. [Title of Louis^{xv} Alexandre de Bourbon.] b. June 6, 1678; d. at Rambouillet, France, Dec. 1, 1737. French naval commander; son of Louis XIV and Madame de Montespan. He fought a bloody but indecisive battle near Málaga (Aug. 24, 1704) with the English under Admiral George Rokee.

Toulouse, War of. War in 1159, caused by the claim of Henry II of England to the countship of Toulouse through his marriage to Eleanor of Aquitaine. He reduced a large part of the territory. Eventually Count Raymond V paid homage to him as overlord.

Toulouse-Lautrec (tò.lòz.lò.trek), Henri Raymond de. b. Albi, France, Nov. 24, 1864; d. at Châteaufort, Malromé, France, Sept. 9, 1901. French postimpressionist painter, pastel artist, and lithographer, noted for his brilliant, satiric sketches and studies of Parisian night life in the 1880's and 1890's. He studied under L. Bonnat (1883) and Cormon (1884), and was strongly influenced by Degas and Japanese prints. Of an aristocratic family (and thus able to have access even to the highest levels of Parisian society), he soon came to prefer to paint people of the circus, theater, and night clubs. His work has been exhibited throughout Europe and the U.S., as well as Canada, Mexico, and South America, and examples of it are owned by most of the important galleries in the world. He was killed in a riding accident. The bitterness and unhappiness in his life (and probably also the riotous debauchery still associated with his name), which is betrayed in his work, was caused largely by physical deformity (he broke both legs as a child and was forced to walk on what was left of his upper legs after an operation). A list of his more important works includes May Millon, Jane Avril, May Belfort, Aristide Bruant, The Promenade, At the Circus, At the Moulin Rouge, In Bed, Woman with Boa, Women in Café, The Clownesse, La Goulue, Jockey, Yvette Guilberte, Paul Leclerc, and many posters and lithographs.

Toumey (tò'mi), James William. b. at Lawrence, Mich., April 17, 1865; d. May 6, 1932. American forester and teacher. He taught (1891-98) botany at the University of Arizona and was also a member of the staff of the Arizona State Agricultural Experiment Station. Named (1900) to the staff of the Yale School of Forestry, he served (1910-22) as its dean.

Touna (tò'ná). See Tegesye.

Touraine (tò.rân; French, tò.ren). Region and former government of France. The chief city was Tours. It was bounded by Anjou, Maine, Orléanais, Berry, and Poitou. It was called "the garden of France" on account of its fertility. It corresponded nearly to what is now the department of Indre-et-Loire. Touraine was ruled in early times by counts, was united with Anjou in 1044, and with it formed part of the Plantagenet possessions. It was conquered by Philip II (Philip Augustus) of France c1204, was made a duchy in 1356, and continued an appanage of the king's son until its incorporation with France in 1564.

Touraine, Duke of. Title held by various members of the Douglas family.

Tourane (tò.rân). Town in Indochina, in SE Asia, a seaport in E central Annam (Central Viet-Nam), ab. 50 mi. SE of Huế. It exports tea, tobacco, rubber, silk, rice, and fish. Pop. ab. 25,000.

Tourcoing (tòr.kwan). City in N France, in the department of Nord, situated on the Canal de Roubaix adjacent to the city of Roubaix and near the Belgian border, ab. 8 mi. NE of Lille. It is an important industrial center, particularly in the field of cotton and woolen textiles, and hosiery. There are also leather and soap manufactures, flour mills, and sugar refineries. The city sustained serious damage in World War I. 76,080 (1946).

Tour d'Auvergne (tòr dô.verny'), Henri de La. See Turenne, Vicomte de.

Tour du Pin (tòr dù.pân), Patrice de La. See La Tour du Pin, Patrice de.

Tourette (tò.ret), Georges Gilles de la. See Gilles de la Tourette, Georges.

Tourgée (tòr.zhá'), Albion Winegar. b. at Williamsfield, Ohio, May 2, 1838; d. at Bordeaux, France, May 21, 1905. American lawyer and novelist. He served in the Union army in the Civil War, settled at Greensboro, N.C., served (1868-74) as judge of the superior court, and later (1897-1903) was U.S. consul at Bordeaux. Author of works concerning political affairs in the South during Reconstruction, including Figs and Thistles (1879), A Fool's Errand (1879), Bricks without Straw (1880), Hot Plowshares (1883), and An Appeal to Caesar (1884), all novels; he also wrote A Digest of Cited Cases in the North Carolina Reports (1879).

Tourguenieff (tòr.gá'nyif), Ivan Sergeyevich. See Turgenev, Ivan Sergeyevich.

Tourjée (tòr.zhá'), Eben. b. at Warwick, R.I., June 1, 1834; d. at Boston, April 12, 1891. American musician, a founder (1867) of the New England Conservatory of Music at Boston. He established the class system of teaching music and practiced this method at the East Greenwich Musical Institute (1859) and the Providence

Conservatory (both of which he organized), and served as first dean of the music college at Boston University.

Tourlaville (tôr.la.vêl). Town in NW France, in the département of Manche, ab. 2 mi. E of Cherbourg. It is a suburb of Cherbourg, 8,395 (1946).

Tournachon (tôr.nâ.shôn), Félix. See Nadar.

Tournai (tôr.nâ). [Also: Tournay; Flemish, Doornik; Latin, Tornacum, Turnacum, Turris Nerviorum.] City in S Belgium, in the province of Hainaut, situated on the Schelde River ab. 45 mi. SW of Brussels: manufactures of hosiery, carpets, lace, embroidery; cement works; brewery; trade center of a horticultural and market-gardening district. 32,221 (1947).

Art and Architecture. The Flemish painter Roger van der Weiden lived here. It was, and in part still is, rich in treasures of medieval architecture as well as in monuments of succeeding centuries, due largely to the building activity which took place under French rule in the 17th century. However, whole sections of the old town were destroyed in World War II, among them the Church of Saint Brice, a very ancient building, rebuilt in the 12th century and restored later, where the Merovingian treasure of Childeric I was discovered in 1653; the so-called Maisons Romanes, of the 12th century; the guild house of the weavers, in Renaissance style; the Century House (17th century); and many others. The cathedral, one of the most notable ecclesiastical edifices of Belgium, was spared; it has Romanesque towers, a Gothic choir, and contains paintings by Massys, Jordaens, and others.

History. A Celtic and a Roman settlement in ancient times, it became a residence of the Merovingian kings in the 5th century, was afterward much contested between the counts of Flanders and the kings of France, came to Spain through the Peace of Cambrai (1529), was conquered by the French under Louis XIV in 1667 but returned to the rule of the Hapsburgs in the Peace of Utrecht (1713), and was reoccupied by the French (1745-48). The fortifications, designed by Vauban, were razed in 1814. The Germans held the city throughout World War I, and considerable damage was inflicted. The damage done to irreplaceable art treasures in World War II was of catastrophic dimensions (three quarters of all buildings were seriously damaged or destroyed).

Tournefort (tôr.ne.fôr), Joseph Pitton de. b. at Aix, France, June 5, 1656; d. 1708. French botanist. He was appointed professor of botany at the royal garden of plants at Paris in 1683. He was an originator of the botanical system which laid the foundations for the work of Linnaeus. He traveled extensively in Europe and the East. His chief work is Institutiones rei herbariae (3 vols., 1700).

Tournelle (tôr.nel), Marquise de la. See Châteauroux, Duchesse de.

Tournemire (tôr.ne.mêr), Charles Arnould. b. at Bordeaux, France, Jan. 22, 1870; d. at Arcachon, France, Nov. 3, 1939. French organist and composer. Among his compositions are the opera Les Dieux Sont Morts, the choral work Le Sang de la Sirène, eight symphonies, organ works, sacred music, and piano pieces.

Tourneur (tôr.nêr), Cyril. [Also: Turner or Turnour.] b. c.1554; d. in Ireland, Feb. 28, 1626. English tragic poet. He was a member of Edward Cecil's expedition to Cadiz in 1625 and was one of the sick put ashore at Kinsale on the return of the expedition; he died soon afterward. He published in 1600 an obscure allegorical poem, and in 1613 an elegy on the death of Prince Henry, son of James I. His chief fame rests on two tragedies: The Revenger's Tragedy (1607) and The Atheist's Tragedy, or The Honest Man's Revenge (1611).

Tournon (tôr.nôn). [Also, Tournon-sur-Rhône (-sûr.rôn).] Town in SE France, in the département of Ardèche, on the Rhône River N of Valence. It is the marketing center of a winemaking region and has silk manufactures. The lycée, founded in 1536, was reconstructed in the 18th century. 5,798 (1946).

Tournus (tôr.nû). [Latin, Tinurtium.] Town in E France, in the département of Saône-et-Loire, on the Saône River ab. 56 mi. N of Lyons. It is a river port and a commercial center, and has aluminum works. The Church of Saint Philibert (10th and 12th centuries) is one of the most interesting Romanesque buildings in France.

There is a Burgundian museum. The town suffered damage in World War II. 5,395 (1946).

Touro (tô.rô), Judah. b. at Newport, R.I., June 16, 1775; d. at New Orleans, La., in January, 1854. American philanthropist. He served as a private in the War of 1812. With Amos Lawrence he supplied the funds for the completion of Bunker Hill Monument, and he also greatly improved his native city, Newport, where a street and a park are named after him. He bequeathed considerable sums of money to a large number of Jewish charitable and educational institutions in all parts of the U.S., and also provided for almshouses at Jerusalem.

Tours (tôr). [Latin names, Caesardunum, Turoni, Urbs Turorum.] City in W France, the capital of the département of Indre-et-Loire, situated between the Loire and Cher rivers, near their junction. It is a center of the Touraine vine trade, has metalworking and printing establishments, and specializes in artistic manufactures, such as imitations of fine furniture, faience earthenware and pottery, glass, and paperware. The old part of the city has preserved its medieval character and is visited by tourists interested in art. The cathedral shows the evolution of the Gothic style through the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries; the Church of Saint Fulien is also in the Gothic style. The old palace of the archbishop dates back to the 11th and 12th centuries, but in its present form is mainly a work of the 18th century. The city has an art museum and many Gothic and Renaissance houses. Tours was founded by the Romans. Near here Charles Martel defeated the Saracens in 732. Christianity was preached here early by Saint Martin. After the ascent (1154) to the English throne of Henry II (Henry Plantagenet, Count of Anjou and Touraine), Tours was fought for by the kings of England and France until it definitely fell to France in 1242. It was the residence of Louis IX. Honoré de Balzac was a native of Tours. The government delegation for national defense was established here in 1870. In 1941, the French government withdrew to Tours and, in the fighting of June 18-20, the business center of the city was destroyed. The city also suffered from later bombardments. 80,044 (1946).

Tours, Battle of. [Also, Battle of Poitiers.] One of the "decisive battles of the world," fought between Poitiers and Tours, France, in 732, in which Charles Martel defeated the Saracen invaders under Abd-er-Rahman. By it, France and northern Europe were saved from Moslem conquest.

Tours, Saint Gregory of. See Saint Gregory of Tours.

Tours, Hildebert of. See Hildebert of Tours.

Tours American War Memorial. American war memorial erected at Tours, France, in commemoration of the operations of the Services of Supply of the American Expeditionary Forces during World War I. Tours was the site of the headquarters of the Services of Supply. The memorial is in the form of a sculptured fountain.

Tourte (tôr.t), François. b. at Paris, 1747; d. there, in April, 1835. French violin-bow manufacturer. The improvements he introduced in the bow, such as changing the curvature and the method of fastening the hairs, led to standardization of the modern bow now commonly known as the "tourte bow."

Tourville (tôr.vêl), Comte de. [Title of Anne Hilarion de Contentin.] b. at Tourville, in Normandy, France, Nov. 24, 1642; d. at Paris, May 28, 1701. French admiral. He defeated (1677) the Anglo-Dutch fleet off Palermo, and served in the wars against the Barbary pirates. He defeated the Anglo-Dutch fleet near the Isle of Wight on July 10, 1690, was defeated at La Hogue (May 29, 1692) by an Anglo-Dutch fleet under Edward Russell, and defeated an Anglo-Dutch fleet off Cape St. Vincent (May 26-27, 1693).

Tousard (tô.zâr), Anne Louis de. b. at Paris, March 12, 1749; d. there, May 8, 1817. French soldier and engineer who fought in the American Revolution and contributed to the establishment of the military academy at West Point. An officer (1769 et seq.) in the French army, he arrived (1777) in America with the Du Coudray expedition, became Lafayette's aide, and took part in the Canadian expedition and at Brandywine and Germantown. Wounded (1778) during the fighting in Rhode Island, he lost his right arm. He became (1778) a brevet lieutenant colonel in the Continental forces, rejoined (1795) the U.S. army as a major, and was commissioned (1800) a colonel. He designed and was in charge of the construction of fortifications at West Point, N.Y., Fort Mifflin, Pa., and Newport, R.I. He became (1800) inspector of artillery and revamped (1801-02) the West Point garrison, converting it into a military school. After serving (1802) in Hispaniola under the French general C. V. E. Leclerc, he returned to France and retired on a pension granted by Napoleon. In 1805 he returned to America as a member of the French consular service, holding posts at New Orleans, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. He returned to France in 1816.

Tousche (tôsh), Daniel de la. See La Ravardière, Daniel de la Tousche, Sieur de.
Toussaint (tô.sân), Anna Louisa Geertruida. See Bosboom-Toussaint.

Toussaint, René Jules Jean. Original name of Maizeyroy, René, Baron.

Toussaint Louverture or L'Ouverture (ô.ver.tür), Dominique François. b. near Cap-Haïtien, Haiti, 1743; d. at the castle of Joux, near Pontarlier, France, April 27, 1803. Haitian revolutionist, president (1801-02) of Haiti. He was a Negro slave, but received a rudimentary education. In 1791, after protecting the flight of his master, he joined the slave revolt with Jean François, with whom he subsequently fought for the royalist faction, at that time united with the Spanish Dominicans. In 1794, with a large force, he deserted to the French republicans, thus turning the scale in their favor and acquiring great influence for himself. He was made deputy governor and commander in chief; and eventually the French commissioners, who were supposed to rule the island of Hispaniola, were left with only nominal power. When the British under General Thomas Maitland evacuated the island in 1798, they refused to treat with Commissioner Hédoüville, but surrendered the posts which they had held to Toussaint as the real ruler. Shortly thereafter an insurrection, incited by Toussaint, drove Hédoüville from the island; he delegated his powers to the mulatto general Rigaud, but in 1799 Rigaud was defeated by Toussaint, who thus became undisputed master of the western part of the island. He issued a general amnesty, protected the whites, and put the blacks at work on their old plantations under a compulsory system which, however, secured them a part of the profits. In 1801 he occupied the eastern part of the island, which had been ceded to France by Spain. Finally he threw off all semblance of subjection to France, promulgating (July, 1801) a constitution which made him president for life, with power of nominating his successor. Napoleon thereupon sent General Leclerc with a formidable force to subdue the island and reestablish slavery. After a series of bloody conflicts Toussaint capitulated, and was pardoned (May 1, 1802). The next month he was arrested on a charge of conspiracy and sent to France, where he remained a prisoner until his death.

Tousseul (tô.sêl), Jean. [Pseudonym of Olivier Degée.] b. at Landenne-sur-Meuse, Belgium, 1890; d. 1945. Belgian novelist. His books draw much from the life of the village peasant. His best-known work is Jean Clarambaux (5 vols., 1927-36).

Tout (tout), Thomas Frederick. b. at Norwood, London, Sept. 28, 1855; d. at London, Oct. 23, 1929. English historian and teacher. He served as professor of history at Manchester University (1890-1925). Author of Chapters in the Administrative History of Medieval England, History of England for Schools (1898), The Place of the Reign of Edward II in English History (1914), and France and England, Their Relations in the Middle Ages and Now (1922).

Tovačov (tô.vă.chôf). [German, Tobitschau.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Olomouc, in C Moravia, situated on the Morava River ab. 12 mi. S of Olomouc. It was the scene of a battle between Prussians and Austrians in 1866 during the Austro-Prussian War. 2,525 (1947).

Tovey (tô.vi), Sir Donald Francis. b. at Eton, July 17, 1875; d. at Edinburgh, July 10, 1940. English composer and musicologist. He was graduated (1898) with classical honors from Balliol College, Oxford, and after a series of recitals and concerts was appointed (1914) Reid professor of music at Edinburgh University. He is the author of Essays in Musical Analysis (6 vols., 1935-39), a series of program notes on classical and modern compositions, and A Companion to Beethoven's Piano-forte Sonatas (1931); he contributed the articles on music to the 11th edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica. Included among his compositions are the opera The Bride of Dionysus (1929) with the text supplied by R. C. Trevelyan, a concerto for cello and orchestra (1933, written especially for Pablo Casals), a symphony in D (1913), chamber music, and songs.

Tovey, Sir John Cronyn. [Title, 1st Baron Tovey of Langton Matravers.] b. 1885—. British naval officer, commander in chief (1940-43) of the British home fleet. He headed (1938-40) the destroyer flotillas in the Mediterranean fleet.

Tovote (tô.vô'te), Heinz. b. at Hanover, Germany, April 12, 1864—. German writer. His works include Im Liebesrausch (1890), Fallstolt (1891), Lockvögelchen (1910), and a translation (1894) of Guy de Maupassant's Yvette.

Towanda (tô.wôn'da). [Former name, Meansville.] Borough in NE Pennsylvania, county seat of Bradford County, on the Susquehanna River ab. 50 mi. NW of Scranton; manufactures of textiles. It was laid out in 1812. Pop. 4,069 (1950).

Tower (tou'ér), Charlemagne. b. at Philadelphia, April 17, 1848; d. there, Feb. 24, 1923. American businessman and diplomat. He was U.S. minister to Austria-Hungary (1897-99), ambassador to Russia (1899-1902), and ambassador to Germany (1902-08). He published The Marquis de La Fayette in the American Revolution (1895) and others.

Tower beyond Tragedy, The. Drama in free verse on the Electra theme by Robinson Jeffers, published in Tamar and Other Poems (1924). It is considered one of the most successful attempts in English at the mood of a classical Greek tragedy (utilizing the Electra theme).

Tower Hamlets. Former parliamentary borough in E London, in the County of London, N of the Thames.

Tower Hill Hill in London, near the Tower of London, formerly the scene of execution of political offenders.

Tower of London (hun'don). Ancient palace-citadel of London. It is situated on the Thames at the SE angle of the old walled City of London. The Roman wall ran through the site. It consists of a large and irregular agglomeration of buildings of different periods, enclosed within battlemented and moated walls. While a stronghold of some kind existed earlier on the site, the recorded history of the Tower begins with William the Conqueror, and the chief buildings are the work of the Norman kings and Henry III. No important additions were made after Edward I. When it ceased to be a royal residence it became famous as a state prison, and is now nominally a national arsenal. The royal mint was located there in the Middle Ages. The Tower has four gates, the Iron, Water, and Traitors' gates on the side toward the Thames, and the Lions' Gate at the SW angle. In the middle of the enclosure rises the square and lofty White Tower, the keep of the medieval fortress. It is characterized by its four tall angle-turrets with modern crowning. In the White Tower is the venerable Chapel of Saint John, with heavy cylindrical pillars, round arches, and rude capitals; it is unsurpassed as an example of the earliest type of Norman architecture. In the halls above is shown an admirable collection of medieval arms and armor. The buildings of the inner enclosure include 12 towers, with many of which are associated memories of historic captives, executions, and crimes. In the Record of Wakefield Tower are kept the crown jewels of England. In the Chapel of Saint Peter ad Vincula, in the NW angle, and the little cemetery adjoining, are buried most of the noted persons who suffered death within the Tower precincts or on Tower Hill. The buildings are for the most part severely plain, in rough masonry of small stones, their great interest lying almost wholly in their many associations. The Tower Wardens (or Yeomen Warders) wear a costume very similar to that of the Yeomen of the Guard, called Beefeaters, but are in fact a distinct (and very much older) corps, whose members leave the Tower only on state occasions of the utmost solemnity (for example, to escort the crown to Westminster at a coronation).

Tower of the Winds. Horologium or water clock erected by the Syrian Andronicus Cyrrhestes at Athens in the 1st century B.C. It is octagonal in plan, 26 ft. in diameter, and 42 ft. high. Toward the top of each face is sculptured a figure representing one of the winds, with appropriate attributes. The structure was surmounted by a bronze Triton which served as a weathervane.

Towers (tou'érz), John Henry. b. at Rome, Ga., Jan. 30, 1885—v. American naval officer and pioneer naval aviator. He joined (1911) the naval aviation service, and was assistant director of naval aviation in World War I. He was assistant chief (1929-31) and chief (1939-42) of the navy Bureau of Aeronautics, vice-admiral in command (October, 1942-44) of the naval air force of the Pacific fleet, deputy commander in chief (February, 1944-November, 1945) of Pacific areas, and commander (November, 1945-December, 1947) of the U.S. 5th fleet.

Towle (tōl), George Makepeace. b. at Washington, D.C., Aug. 27, 1841; d. at Brookline, Mass., Aug. 9, 1893. American journalist, politician, and historical writer. He was U.S. consul at Nantes (1866-68) and at Bradford, England (1868-70), and was managing editor of the Boston Commercial Bulletin and foreign editor of the Boston Post. His works include American Society, The Eastern Question, Principals of the Danube, Beaconsfield, Heroes of History, Modern France, Certain Men of Mark, Young People's History of England, The Literature of the English Language, and others.

Towne (toun), Charles Hanson. b. at Louisville, Ky., Feb. 2, 1877; d. at New York, Feb. 28, 1949. American poet and editor. He was managing editor (1915-20) of McClure's Magazine, edited (1926-31) Harper's Bazar, and wrote (1931-37) a column of opinion and reminiscence for the New York American. His books of verse include An April Song (1937). He wrote English lyrics for Jacques Offenbach's opera La Belle Hélène, collaborated with Deems Taylor in writing The City of Joy, and was co-author with Amy Woodforde-Finden of four song cycles, including Five Little Japanese Songs and The Magic Case-moment. He wrote a volume of reminiscences, This New York of Mine (1931), and the autobiographical So Far So Good (1945).

Towneley Plays (toun'li). See Wakefield Plays.

Townley (toun'li), Lord. The "provoked husband" in Sir John Vanbrugh and Colley Cibber's play of that name.

Townsend (toun'zend), Charles Haskins. b. at Parnassus, Pa., Sept. 29, 1859; d. 1944. American naturalist, director (1902-37) of the New York Aquarium. He was chief of the division of fisheries of the U.S. Fish Commission (1897-1902), an expert on fishery in the Russian-American arbitration at The Hague in 1902, and became acting director of the American Museum of Natural History in 1910.

Townsend, Edward Davis. b. at Boston, Aug. 22, 1817; d. at Washington, D.C., May 10, 1893. American soldier. He was named (1861) adjutant general to Winfield Scott, and in 1862 became adjutant general of the U.S. army, holding this post until 1880. Under his orders the collection of papers later published as The War of the Rebellion: Official Records was inaugurated.

Townsend, Francis Everett. b. at Fairbury, Ill., Jan. 13, 1867—. American physician who originated and headed the Townsend Plan (officially Old-Age Revolving Pensions, Inc.). He was a practicing physician in South Dakota, Wyoming, and Montana (1903-19), and at Long Beach, Calif. (1919-31). In 1934, during the economic depression, he proposed a pension system of monthly payments to U.S. citizens over 60 provided by a two (later three) percent business transaction tax. Despite the criticism of economists who pointed out the obvious shortcomings of the idea, the Townsend Plan obtained many backers and became a strong political force. It was to some extent responsible for the passage (1935) of the Social Security Act. The growth of this federal plan, and the adherence of the Townsends to the Coughlin and Long factions in 1936, led to its gradual lessening of force. Townsend was the author of an autobiography, New Horizons, and of many pamphlets and articles on his pension plan.

Townsend, George Alfred. [Pseudonym, Gath.] b. at Georgetown, Del., Jan. 30, 1841; d. at New York, April 15, 1914. American journalist and author, noted as a war correspondent and lecturer. During the Civil War he served as a correspondent for the New York Herald and World, and he contributed to some 100 newspapers (including the Cincinnati Daily Enquirer and Chicago Tribune) during the next four decades. Author of Campaigns of a Non-Combatant (1866), Lost Abroad (1870), Poems (1870), Washington, Inside and Outside (1873), Tales of the Chesapeake (1880), The Entailed Hat (1884), and Poems of Men and Events (1899).

Townsend, John Kirk. b. at Philadelphia, Aug. 10, 1809; d. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 6, 1851. American ornithologist. He became (1834) a member of the Oregon expedition led by Nathaniel J. Wyeth, starting out from Independence, Mo., and later journeyed to points in the Pacific; he brought together a notable collection of birds and mammals, of which the birds were used for the pictures in the final volume (1844) of John James Audubon's Birds of America, and the mammals sketched and described by Audubon and John Bachman in their Viviparous Quadrupeds of North America (3 vols., 1845-49). Author of Narrative of a Journey across the Rocky Mountains to the Columbia River (1839) and Ornithology of the United States of North America (1840).

Townsend, John Sealy Edward. b. at Galway, Ireland, June 7, 1868—. Irish physicist, notable for his studies in ionization. He was Wykeham professor (1901-41) of physics at Oxford.

Townsend, Virginia Frances. b. at New Haven, Conn., 1836; d. at Arlington, Mass., Aug. 11, 1920. American novelist and biographical writer. She was associate editor (1856-72) of the Lady's Home Magazine and became (1865) instructor in rhetoric at the Family School for Young Ladies at Lexington, Mass. Author of books for girls including those which appeared in the Breakwater Series and the Maidenhood Series. She also wrote The Battlefields of Our Fathers (1864), Life of Washington (1887), and Our Presidents (1889).

Townsend Plan. [Also, the Old-Age Revolving Pension.] Proposal for granting government old-age pensions to nonemployed U.S. citizens 60 years of age and over, who would be obligated to spend their monthly payments of 200 dollars in the U.S. within a little more than a month after receiving them. Launched by Francis Everett Townsend on Jan. 1, 1934, the plan purported to be a mechanism for stabilizing American prosperity. Under the plan, funds for pension payments were to be drawn from a 2 percent (later, 3 percent) tax upon all business transactions. The Townsend Plan, one of many "share-the-wealth" movements which arose during the New Deal era, attracted a following which was claimed to number millions of people during the 1930's.

Townshend (toun'zend), Charles. [Title, 2nd Viscount Townshend.] b. 1674; d. at Raynham, June 21, 1738. English statesman, originally a Tory and later a Whig. He was plenipotentiary with the Duke of Marlborough in the negotiations with the Netherlands (1709), and ambassador at The Hague (1709-11), but fell into disgrace as a result of his part in the making of the Barrier treaty. With the accession of George I, he became secretary of state (1714-16) in the north, and out down (1715) the Jacobite rebellion. He was dismissed through the intrigues of James Stanhope, but when Stanhope fell from grace with the bursting of the South Sea Bubble he and his brother-in-law Robert Walpole came back into power. He became president of the council in 1720, and secretary of state in 1721. He quarreled with Walpole, whose ability was too great for Townshend to cope with, and resigned in 1730. Townshend's last years were spent in agricultural experiments, his introduction of turnips into wide cultivation and his expounding of crop rotation being landmarks in English farming history.

Townshend, Charles. [Called "the Weathercock."] b. Aug. 29, 1725; d. Sept. 4, 1767. English politician. He entered the House of Commons in 1747, became noted as an orator, was secretary of war (1761-62), became later president of the board of trade and paymaster general, and became chancellor of the exchequer in 1766. When William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, was unable to maintain the ministry, Townshend took his place and, since Parliament had just cut the land tax, he championed resolutions for taxing various articles imported into the American colonies (1767): this group of "Townshend Acts" had much to do with the increase in unrest in the colonies. The tax on tea, especially, became a considerable bone of contention. From his political instability he was called "the Weathercock."

Townshend, George. [Titles, 4th Viscount and 1st Marquis Townshend.] b. Feb. 28, 1724; d. Sept. 14, 1807. English soldier and politician; brother of Charles Townshend (1725-67). He succeeded James Wolfe as commander in Canada, and received the surrender of Quebec; later he was lord lieutenant (1767-72) of Ireland, where his efforts to bring about an English majority in the Irish Parliament aroused much resentment.

Townshend, Sir Horatio. [Title, 1st Viscount Townshend.] b. c. 1630; d. December, 1687. English politician; father of Charles, 2nd Viscount Townshend. An ardent Royalist, he was one of the deputation which invited Charles II to return.

Townshend, Thomas. [Title, 1st Viscount Sydney.] b. Feb. 24, 1733; d. at Chislehurst, England, June 13, 1800. English politician; grandson of Charles, 2nd Viscount Townshend. He was a member of Parliament (1754-83), lord of the treasury (1765), and joint paymaster of the forces (1767). He resigned in anger when Augustus Fitzroy, 3rd Duke of Grafton, attempted to remove him from his new office, and remained in opposition as an outspoken critic of current policies through Lord North's administration, especially on the conduct of the war in America. His reward came in his appointment (1782) to the post of secretary of war. He was home secretary (1782-83). Sydney, Australia, was named (1788) after him.

"Townshend Acts." Legislation (1767) in the British Parliament for taxation of the colonies in America, which caused resentment, resistance, and the growth of revolutionary sentiments. Charles Townshend became chancellor of the exchequer in the administration of the elder William Pitt, and, following the latter's incapacitation, the real head of the government. The opposition party in Parliament having reduced the land tax, Townshend proposed to compensate for this in part by levying duties on imports into the colonies. These import taxes applied to glass, lead, painters' colors, paper, and tea. The revenues so secured, above expenses of collecting them, were to be applied to the support of civil government and the administration of justice in the colonies (i.e., to the payment of fixed salaries to British colonial officials) and any residue was to accrue to the British exchequer, "to be from time to time disposed of by parliament towards defraying the necessary expenses of defending, protecting, and securing the British colonies and plantations in America." A further provision reasserted the right of His Majesty's customs officers to require writs of assistance from local magistrates to enter, break into, and search premises suspected of containing goods on which duties had not been paid. Resentment was instant and passionate throughout the colonies, and in 1770 the Townshend duties were lifted, excepting that on tea, which was continued as a symbol of the British Parliament's asserted right of taxation. But taking their cue from a Boston town meeting in 1767, the colonial patriots everywhere entered into nonimportation agreements, doing without tea or getting along with what could be run in by smugglers supplied by the Dutch East India Company. In 1773 large shipments of tea were sent to various American ports in the hope of tempting the colonists, but the result was the Boston Tea Party and other acts of resistance.

Townsville (tounz'vil). Seaport in E Australia, in Queensland, on the Pacific coast ab. 750 mi. NW of Brisbane. It was established in 1868 as a result of the discovery of gold in its hinterland. Today it is at the head of a long inland railway and a shipping port for the sugar cane and other agricultural products of N Queensland. 34,233 (1947), 35,880 (est. 1950).

Towson (tou'son). Unincorporated community in N Maryland, county seat of Baltimore County. It is the seat of Maryland State Teachers College. 10,606 (1940).

Towton (tou'ton). Civil parish and village in C England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, ab. 12 mi. NE of Leeds. Here on March 29, 1461, the Yorkists under Edward IV totally defeated the Lancastrians under Henry VI and Margaret. The Lancastrian loss may have been as many as 28,000 killed. The victory secured the throne to Edward IV. 86 (1931).

Towy (tou'f). River in S Wales, in Cardiganshire and Carmarthenshire. It rises in Cardiganshire and flows generally S and SW, forming ab. 7 mi. of the Brecknockshire-Cardiganshire boundary before entering Carmarthenshire, where it reaches the head of Carmarthen Bay ab. 8 mi. S of Carmarthen. Length, ab. 65 mi.

Toxophilus: The Schools and Partitions of Shooting (tok.sof'i.lus). Treatise (1545) relating to archery, written by Roger Ascham.

Toxteth Park (toks'teth). Southeastern suburb of Liverpool, England.

Toy (toi), Crawford Howell. b. at Norfolk, Va., March 23, 1836; d. May 12, 1919. American Orientalist. He served in the Confederate forces during the Civil War, was professor of Old Testament interpretation (1869-79) at the Southern Baptist Seminary, professor of Hebrew and other Oriental languages (1880-1909) at Harvard, and thereafter was professor emeritus. He was an editor of the Jewish Encyclopedia. Author of Quotations in the New Testament (1884), Judaism and Christianity (1890), A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Book of Proverbs (1899), and Introduction to the History of Religions (1913).

Toyama (tō.yā.mā). City in NW Honshu, Japan, near the S shore of Toyama Bay. It is a minor port, and has manufactures of patent medicines, cotton and silk textiles, aluminum and metal products, and wood products. 154,484 (1950).

Toyama Bay. [Japanese, Toyama Wan.] Indentation of the Sea of Japan in W Honshu, Japan. Length, ab. 50 mi.; width, ab. 35 mi.

Toynbee (toin'be), Arnold. b. at London, Aug. 23, 1852; d. at Wimbledon, Surrey, England, March 9, 1883. English sociologist and political economist; brother of Paget Toynbee. He was a tutor and later bursar of Balliol College, Oxford. His lectures on economics were collected and published after his death under the title The Industrial Revolution (1884). Toynbee Hall, London, was established in his memory.

Toynbee, Arnold Joseph. b. at London, April 14, 1889—. English historian; nephew of Arnold Toynbee and Paget Toynbee. He served (1915-19) in the political intelligence and other departments of the Foreign Office during World War I, was a member (1946) of the British delegation to the peace conference at Paris, and was director (1943-46) of the research department at the Foreign Office. He was professor of Byzantine and modern Greek language, literature, and history (1919-24) and of international history (1925 et seq.) at the University of London. Author of Nationality and the War (1915), Greek Historical Thought (1924), and A Study of History (1934-39) in six volumes but incomplete, the first five of which were abridged (1946) by D. C. Somervell.

Toynbee, Paget. b. at Wimbledon, Surrey, England, Jan. 20, 1855; d. May 13, 1932. English philologist, author, and critic; brother of Arnold Toynbee. He was best known as a Dante scholar. Among his publications are Specimens of Old French, with Notes and Glossary (1892), Dictionary of Proper Names and Notable Matters in the Works of Dante (1898), Dante Alighieri (1900), Dante Studies and Researches (1902), and Dante in English Literature from Chaucer to Cary (1909).

Toynbee Hall. Institution in Whitechapel, London, founded in 1885 as the outcome of plans set on foot by the members of Oxford and Cambridge universities "to provide education and the means of recreation and enjoyment for the people of the poor districts of London." Some of the members reside at the hall, which is something between a college and a club. It was organized and named in memory of Arnold Toynbee, a graduate of Oxford, who devoted himself to work among the poor in Whitechapel and died at the age of 31 of overstrain, and from whose example sprang the idea of such a residence house.

Toyohashi (tō.yō.hā.shē). City in S Honshu, Japan, ab. 50 mi. SE of Nagoya. It has a fair harbor and much coastal trade. It is famous as one of the old centers of the silk industry of Japan; it also has several cotton mills, and other industries. 145,855 (1950).

Traber (trä'ber). See Hödel, Emil Heinrich Max.

Trabzon (träb.zôn'). [Also: Trebizond; ancient name, Trapezus.] Seaport in N Turkey, on the Black Sea. It is picturesquely situated on a tableland between two deep ravines, and is defended by a citadel and forts. Next to Smyrna (now Izmir) it was long the chief commercial city in Asia Minor, and a center of transit trade between Europe and Armenia, Persia, and C Asia. It was a dependency of the Greek colony of Sinope, a resting place on the retreat of the Ten Thousand, and an important city about the time of Hadrian, and became the capital of the empire of Trebizond. It was captured by the Turkish sultan Mohammed II in 1461. Pop. ab. 35,000.

Trachiniae (trak'in.iæ). Play by Sophocles, based on the legend of the death of Hercules at Trachis.

Trachis (trä'kis). In ancient geography, a city of Greece, situated at the foot of Mount Oeta near Thermopylae. It was an important strategic point, and the legendary scene of the death of Hercules. The Spartan colony of Heraclea was established there in 426 B.C.

Trachonitis (trak.õn'itis). In ancient geography, a region in Syria, E or NE of the Sea of Galilee.

Tractarians (trak.tä'ri.anz). See Oxford School.

Tracts for the Times. Series of 90 pamphlets, published at Oxford from 1833 to 1841, the doctrines of which formed the basis of the Oxford School (whence developed the Oxford Movement). The tracts consisted of extracts from the High-Church divines of the 17th century and the church fathers, with contributions by J. H. Newman, R. H. Froude, E. B. Pusey, John Keble, and Isaac Williams. In the last of the series, Tract No. 90, Dr. (afterward Cardinal) Newman took the ground that the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England are in large part susceptible of an interpretation not inconsistent with the doctrines of the Council of Trent. This tract was condemned by a number of bishops and heads of colleges, and a part of the Tractarians (among them Newman in 1845) entered the Roman Catholic Church, others remaining with Pusey and Keble in the Church of England, and maintaining the principles of sacramental efficacy and apostolic authority within that communion.

Tracy (trä'si). City in California, in San Joaquin County, E of San Francisco, 8,410 (1950).

Tracy. City in SW Minnesota, in Lyon County, 3,020 (1950).

Tracy, Benjamin Franklin. b. at Owego, N.Y., April 26, 1830; d. at New York, Aug. 6, 1915. American lawyer and politician. He served with the Union forces in the Civil War, was U.S. district attorney in New York (1866-68), and was U.S. secretary of the navy (1889-93) under Benjamin Harrison. In addition to his services in building the navy's efficiency, he had a distinguished legal career, marked by such events as his defense of Henry Ward Beecher against the charge of adultery brought by Theodore Tilton (1875), his defense of Venezuela in the boundary arbitration (1899), and his chairmanship of the committee that drafted the charter for Greater New York (1896).

Tracy (trä'se), Destutt de. See Destutt de Tracy.

Tracy Tupman (trä'si tup'man). See Tupman, Tracy.

Trade and Plantations, Board of. See Board of Trade and Plantations.

Trade Union Educational League. [Called the TUEL.] Left-wing U.S. labor organization established by William Z. Foster in 1921 as part of the Communist labor movement affiliated with the Comintern (Third International). Its success in efforts to gain control of American labor unions was limited largely to the locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union (ILGWU) at New York. The TUEL's power was broken by the New York garment strike of 1926 and the counter efforts of David Dubinsky, later head of the ILGWU. It later emerged as the Trade Union Unity League, organized in 1928, and was dissolved in 1934.

Trafalgar (träfal'gar), Battle of. Greatest British naval victory in the Napoleonic wars, gained off Cape Trafalgar, Spain, Oct. 21, 1805. The British fleet numbered 27 ships of the line and four frigates under Horatio Nelson (Cuthbert Collingwood second in command); the French-Spanish fleet numbered 33 ships of the line and five frigates under Pierre de Villeneuve. The latter lost 20 ships; Nelson and the Spanish admiral Federico de Gravina were killed and Villeneuve was taken prisoner. Trafalgar, Cape. [Spanish, Cabo Trafalgar (träfal'gar).] Promontory on the S coast of Spain, projecting into the Atlantic between Cádiz and the Strait of Gibraltar. The Battle of Trafalgar (1805) occurred off the cape. Trafalgar Square. One of the principal squares in London, ab. 1½ mi. SW of Saint Paul's. It contains the Nelson monument and the site of Charing Cross; the National Gallery faces on it.

Trafford (trä'ford). Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties: suburb of Pittsburgh, 3,965 (1950).

Trafford, F. G. Pseudonym of Riddell, Charlotte Eliza Lawson.

Tragedy of Dido, Queen of Carthage (di'dõ: kä'r'thõj), The. See Dido, Queen of Carthage, The Tragedy of.

Tragedy of Mr. Arden of Feversham (är'den: fë'ver'sham). See under Arden of Feversham.

Tragedy of Nan (nan), The. See Nan, The Tragedy of.

Tragic Comedians, The. Novel by George Meredith, published in 1880. It is based on the tragic love affair of the German socialist Ferdinand Lasalle, who appears in the novel as Sigismund Alvan, and Helene von Dönniges, who figures as Clotilde von Rüdiger.

Tragic Muse, The. Novel by Henry James, published in 1890.

Tragicomedy of Calisto and Meliboea (kä.lis'tõ: meli-bë'a), The. Full name of Celestina.

Tragurium (trägü'ri.um). Latin name of Trogir.

Traherne (trä'hern'), Thomas. b. at Hereford, England, c1637; d. at Teddington, England, in September, 1674. English clergyman, writer, and metaphysical poet. He studied at Oxford in 1656 and became a rector of Credwell, in Herefordshire, in 1657. His poems were discovered in manuscript in a bookstall in 1896 and A. B. Grosart meant to include them in an edition of Henry Vaughan's work, but died before he could complete the work. Bertram Dobell showed that they were the work of Traherne and not of Vaughan. His Poetical Works were edited by Dobell in 1906, his Centuries of Meditation in 1908, and his Poems of Felicity, edited by H. I. Bell, were published in 1910.

Trahisson des clerics (trä.ë.zõ dö kler), La. Philosophical and critical essay (1927; Eng. trans., The Great Betrayal, and also The Treason of the Intellectuals, both 1928), by Julien Benda.

Traighli (trä'le'). Irish name of Tralea.

Trail (träil). Industrial city in British Columbia, Canada, close to the Canadian-U.S. border, on the Columbia River: site of the largest nonferrous metal plant in the world. Here are smelted the lead, copper, silver, and zinc ores mined at Kimberley, ab. 80 mi. to the E. 11,430 (1951).

Traill (träil), Peter. Pseudonym of Morton, Guy Mainwaring.

Trail of the Lonesome Pine, The. Novel by John Fox, published in 1908 and dramatized by Eugene Walter in 1912.

Traiskirchen (tris'kir'chen). Town in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, situated E of Baden, between Vienna and Wiener Neustadt. It is a railroad junction, and has rubber and chemical factories. 5,498 (1946).

Traitors' Gate. Southward end of London Bridge, where after 1577 the heads of persons executed for treason were exhibited.

Trajan (trä'jan). [Full Latin name, Marcus Ulpius Trajanus; surname Dacicus and Parthicus.] b. in Italica, Spain, c53 A.D.; d. at Selinus, Cilicia, July or August, 117. Roman emperor (98-117). He entered the army at an early age, served as military tribune in various provinces, marched from Spain to Germany (c89), was made consul (91) and by Nerva consular legate in Germany, and was adopted by Nerva, and succeeded him in January, 98. He developed the defenses of the empire on the northeastern frontier, built many roads and other improvements, founded the institution of alimenta (for rearing poor children in Italy); and encouraged various reforms. He conducted (c101-106) a successful war against the Dacians under Decebalus, and annexed Dacia to the empire; the Column of Trajan at Rome commemorates this conquest. He incorporated (114) Damascus, and part of Arabia, into the empire, and carried on an unsuccessful war with the Parthians (114-116). There were revolts in the eastern part of the empire and among the Jews in the last part of his reign, but he died before he could organize a campaign to put down the rebels.

Trajanopolis (traj.a.nə'pŏ.lis). In ancient geography, a city in Thrace.

Trajan's Wall. Name given to: 1. Remnants of a Roman fortification in Bessarabia, in the U.S.S.R., between the Prut River and the Black Sea. 2. Remnants of a Roman fortification in Dobruja, Rumania, between the Danube and the Black Sea.

Trajectum ad Mosam (tra.jek'tum ad mŏ'zam). Medieval Latin name of Maastricht.

Trajectum ad Rhenum (ad rĕ'num). Latin name of Utrecht.

Trajectum Superius (sŏ.pir'ŭ.s). Latin name of Maastricht.

Trakl (trāk'l), Georg. b. at Salzburg, Austria, Feb. 3, 1887; d. in a military hospital at Kraków, Poland, Nov. 4, 1914. Austrian lyric poet. His work is characterized by an elegiac, somber mood. Among his books are Gedichte (Poems, 1913) and Der Herbst des Einsamen (The Autumn of a Lonely One, 1920).

Tralee (tra.lē'). [Irish, Traighli.] Urban district, market town, and seaport in the Irish Republic, in Munster province, county seat of County Kerry, situated at the head of Tralee Bay, at the mouth of the river Lee, ab. 54 mi. SW of Limerick. Vessels of 300 tons can reach the town by means of a ship canal ab. 8 mi. long. Tralee Castle is in the vicinity of the town. 11,047 (1951).

Tralee Bay. Inlet of the Atlantic Ocean in the Irish Republic, in Munster province and County Kerry. The town of Tralee is at its head. Length, ab. 12 mi.; width at entrance, ab. 6 mi.

Trälleborg (trē'lə.bŏr'y). See Trelleborg.

Tralles (tral'ēz). Ancient name of Aydin, town.

Tramore Bay (trā'mŏr). Inlet of St. George's Channel in the Irish Republic, in Munster province and County Waterford. Length, ab. 3 mi.; width at entrance, ab. 3 mi.

Tramp Abroad, A. Travel narrative (1880) by Samuel Langhorne Clemens under the pseudonym Mark Twain, a humorous account of the author's tour of Europe made in 1878. His descriptions of European scenery are set off by farcical companion passages relating to U.S. natural life. It was the second of the author's major travel books, being preceded by Innocents Abroad (1869) and succeeded by Following the Equator (1897).

Tranent (tra.nent'). Police burgh in S Scotland, in East Lothian, ab. 11 mi. E of Edinburgh. 5,507 (est. 1948).

Trani (trā'nē). [Ancient name, Turentum.] Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, situated on the Adriatic Sea ab. 27 mi. NW of Bari; marketing center of a rich agricultural district. It has exports of wine, almonds, and olive oil, and has stone quarries and construction industries. There are fisheries of some importance. It has a medieval castle and a cathedral (1150-1250) in Romanesque style, with fine metalwork, crypt, and columns. In the early Middle Ages the town was several times sacked by the Saracens, but became in the period of the Normans and the Hohenstaufen dynasty a flourishing commercial city, a meeting place of merchants from Amalfi, Pisa, Genoa, and later Venice, containing a considerable Jewish settlement and maintaining trade connections with the countries of the Near East. It entered into an agreement with Charles VIII, king of Naples and Sicily, in 1495, maintaining its privileges. Buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 31,175 (1936); of town, 29,962 (1936).

Tranio (trā'ni.ŏ). Servant of Lucentio, a character in Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew.

Tranquilli (trān.kē'lē), Secondo. See Silone, Ignazio.

Tranquillus (trān.kwil'us, trāng-), Gaius Suetonius. See Suetonius.

Trans Alai Range (trans ā.lā'). [Russian, Zaalaiki Khrebt.] Mountain range along the border between the Kirghiz and Tadzhik Soviet Socialist Republics of the U.S.S.R. in C Asia; the most active earthquake area in the U.S.S.R. Highest point, Lenin Peak (ab. 23,405 ft.).

Transalpine Gaul (trans.al'pin, -pin, gŏl). See Gaul, Transalpine.

Transandine Tunnel (trans.an'din, -din). Railroad tunnel in the Andes Mountains, connecting Chile and Argentina. It is more than 2 mi. long and over 10,000 ft. above sea level, and affords direct communication between Valparaíso and Buenos Aires. It was opened for travel April 5, 1910.

Transbaikalia (trans.bī.kā'li.ā). Former oblast (region) of E Siberia, bounded by Irkutsk, Yakutsk, the Amur Province, Manchuria, Mongolia, and Lake Baikal. Capital, Chita. It is now partly incorporated in the Buryat-Mongol Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, U.S.S.R.

Transcaspiian Region or Province (trans.kas'pi.ān). Former oblast (region) of the U.S.S.R., under the administration of the district of Turkistan, situated E of the Caspian Sea, N of Iran and Afghanistan, and W of Khiva and Bukhara; now included in the Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic.

Transcaucasia (trans.kŏ.kā'zha). Southern division of the former general district of the Caucasus, Russia. It comprised the districts of Baku, Black Sea, Elizavetpol, Erivan, Kutais, and Tiflis, the provinces of Batum and Daghestan, and the districts of Sukhum and Zakataly. The area now includes the Azerbaijan, Georgian, and Armenian Soviet Socialist Republics and part of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic.

Transcona (trans.kŏ'na). Town in S Manitoba, Canada, ab. 10 mi. E of Winnipeg, with which it is connected by rail and road; local trading center. 6,752 (1951).

Trans-Ili Ala-tau (trans.ē'lē ā.lā.tou'). Mountain system in the U.S.S.R., on the border between the Kazakh and Kirghiz Soviet Socialist Republics, Asiatic Russia, S of Alma-Ata. It is a part of the great Tien Shan system. Peak elevation, ab. 16,791 ft.

Trans-Iranian Railway (trans.i.rā'ni.ān). See under Bandar Shah.

Transit Conference, Barcelona. See Barcelona Transit Conference.

Transition. Studies in contemporary literature by Edwin Muir, published in 1926.

Transition. Monthly "little magazine" founded at Paris, where it was published from 1927 to 1938, except for the period 1930-32. It became a quarterly in 1928, and was revived in 1940 and published in the U.S. It was an organ for new and experimental forms of writing. Eugene Jolas and Elliot Paul served as editors. Among the contributors were James Joyce, Gertrude Stein, Hart Crane, and Ernest Hemingway.

Transjordan (trans.jŏr'dan). See Jordan.

Trans-Juba (trans.jŏ'ba). See Jubaland.

Trans-Burgundy (trans.jŏ'rān bĕr'gun.di). See under Burgundy, 4.

Transkei (trans.kā'). Territory in S Africa, a portion of the Transkeian Territories of Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa, situated between the Great Kei River and the border of Natal. Area, ab. 2,504 sq. mi.

Transkeian Territories (trans.kā'ān). Territories in S Africa, in the E part of the province of Cape of Good Hope, Union of South Africa, lying between the Great Kei River and Natal province. They were annexed to the old Cape Colony between 1879 and 1894. They include the Transkei, Tembuland, Griqualand East, and Pondoland. Although there are some Europeans in the area, most of the territory comprises a native reserve in which the activities of all but the natives are strictly limited. Government is in the hands of a chief magistrate who is responsible to the British minister for native affairs. A degree of self-government has been given to the area in the form of the Union Transkeian Territories General Council. Area, 16,352 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 1,265,000, including ab. 17,000 Europeans.

Transpadane Gaul (trans'pā.dān, trans.pā'dān). See Gaul, Transpadane.

Transpadane Republic. Republic established by Napoleon in 1796, corresponding generally to Lombardy; ended in 1797 with the Cispadane Republic to form the Cisalpine Republic.

Transportation Act. In U.S. history: 1. Act of Congress, also called the Esch-Cummings Act, passed on Feb. 28, 1920, which was aimed at placing railroads on a basis of profitable operation following the return of the lines to private hands after government operation during fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nŏr; up, lĭte, pŭll; ʔn, then; ġ, d or ġ; s, s or sh; t or ch;

World War I. It created a nine-man Railroad Labor Board with national powers, authorized an increase in railroad rates to insure a reasonable return on investment, sanctioned the consolidation of railroads into several major systems, and provided for loans to railroads. 2. Acts of the U.S. Congress passed on Sept. 18, 1940, which broadened the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) over rail and motor transportation and extended its jurisdiction to carriers operating on intercoastal and inland waterways with the object of developing an integrated national transportation system.

Trans-Siberian Railway (trans.sī.bī'ri.ən). Rail transportation system constructed, in large part, by the Russian government between 1891 and 1905. Beginning at Chelyabinsk, it was routed through Omsk and Irkutsk to Vladivostok on the Pacific Ocean, a distance of more than 4,000 miles. Following Russian assistance to China during that country's war with Japan in 1895, a Russian-Chinese treaty was concluded in 1896, among its terms being permission for Russia to lay the rails of the Trans-Siberian through Manchuria for a distance of 1,470 miles, thus avoiding the necessity of a longer detour around the northern Manchurian border. This section is known as the Chinese Eastern Railway, and during the periods when it has been managed by joint Russian-Chinese boards. But the Trans-Siberian system as a whole, and especially the Chinese Eastern section, which included a branch line from Changchun to Port Arthur, and which permitted Russian economic penetration of Manchuria, was viewed with some fear by Japan, and this was among the causes of the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-05. One of the results of that war was that Russia had to cede the Changchun-Port Arthur branch to Japan, and it became the nucleus of the Japanese-owned South Manchurian Railway. Following the Russian Revolution, the ownership and direction of the Trans-Siberian passed to the new regime, but when in 1932 Manchuria became the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo, the Russians, finding the situation strategically uncomfortable, sold the Chinese Eastern to Manchukuo, and built a new line above the Manchukuo-Siberia border, entirely within the territory of the U.S.S.R. When World War II came to an end with the surrender of Japan in August, 1945, the Eastern Red Army was in possession of Manchuria (Manchukuo), and at that time the Russian government and the Kuomintang government of China entered into the China-Changchun Railway Agreement, by which the Chinese Eastern and the South Manchuria Railways were combined under the name of the Chinese Changchun Railway, to be jointly owned and jointly operated by the Chinese and Russian governments for 30 years, after which it would become an exclusively Chinese property, without compensation to the U.S.S.R. Before long the U.S.S.R. charged that the Chinese were sabotaging the agreement for joint operation; Russian personnel was therefore withdrawn, and the Russians discontinued using the line, reverting to the longer route above the border. The Chinese Communists having in September, 1949, proclaimed the People's Republic of China, and the Russian government having recognized it, a treaty of friendship, alliance, and mutual aid was concluded between the two regimes in February, 1950, which included a provision for resumption of joint Russian-Chinese operation of the Chinese Changchun Railway, Russian rights, however, to be vacated upon the conclusion of a peace treaty with Japan, or in any case not later than 1952. However, in the summer of 1952 the Chinese government asked the Soviet government to postpone its withdrawal from coadministration of the railroad.

Transvaal (trans.vāl'). [Official name, Province of the Transvaal; former name, South African Republic.] Province of the Union of South Africa, a former British colony and a former independent republic. It is bounded by Southern Rhodesia on the N, Mozambique on the E, Natal and the Orange Free State on the S, and Bechuanaland and Cape of Good Hope province on the W. The surface is a plateau with the high E margin forming the Drakensberg mountains. The chief river systems are those of the Vaal and the Limpopo. The chief export product of the Transvaal is gold; other exports include wool, minerals, hides, and ostrich feathers. Diamonds, iron, chrome, and other minerals are produced. The inhabitants are Boers, English, and natives. The prevailing religion is the Dutch Reformed. The Transvaal has grown rapidly with the development of the gold fields of the Witwatersrand and today has the largest population of the four provinces and the largest city (Johannesburg) in the Union. The province is mainly agricultural outside of the mining region of the Rand, as the Witwatersrand is termed colloquially. Excellent transportation is provided by the railways connecting the province with ports of the Union of South Africa and with Northern and Southern Rhodesia and Mozambique. Capital, Pretoria; area, 110,450 sq. mi.; pop. 4,283,038, including 1,063,121 Europeans, 37,753 Asiatics, 59,986 colored, and 3,122,173 natives (1946).

History and Government. Immigration by Boers from Cape Colony commenced c1836. The state was recognized as independent in 1852, and was annexed by Great Britain in 1877. A successful revolt of the Boers (1880-81) gained them self-government under British suzerainty. The government was a republic under a nominal British suzerainty, administered by a president (assisted by a council) and two Volkraaden of 27 members each. British control was restricted in 1884. In 1890 small portions of Swaziland and Amatongaland were ceded to the republic, and in 1895 a protectorate over Swaziland was established. In 1900-01 it was conquered and annexed by Great Britain. After its annexation to the British Empire its name was changed from South African Republic (adopted in 1884) to Transvaal Colony. This name was changed to Province of the Transvaal when it became a province of the Union of South Africa in 1910. It sends eight senators and 64 representatives to the Union Parliament. Its internal affairs are conducted by an administrator (appointed by the governor general for five years) and a provincial council of 64 members elected for three years. Members of the provincial council are elected on the same system as members of Parliament, but the parliamentary restriction as to European descent does not apply. The first parliamentary and provincial elections for the Transvaal were held (under the South Africa Act of 1909) on Sept. 15, 1910.

Transvaal War. War between the South African Republic (now Transvaal) and Great Britain in 1880-81. The most notable event was the Boer victory at Majuba Hill, Feb. 27, 1881. The battle was soon followed by peace, granting the Boers internal self-government.

Transylvania (trans.sil.vān'yā). [Also: Transilvania; Hungarian, Erdély; German, Siebenbürgen.] Region in NW and C Rumania, bounded by Banat on the W, Oltenia and Murtienia on the S, and Crisana and Maramures and South Bucovina on the N. Chief city, Cluj; area, 24,020 sq. mi.; pop. 3,420,859 (1948).

Transylvanian Alps (trans.sil.vān'yān alps). Range of the Carpathian Mountains between S Transylvania and N Walachia in Rumania. Peak elevation, Negoi (8,346 ft.).

Trans-Zambezia Railway (trans.zam.hē'zha). Railway in SE Africa, in Mozambique, connecting Dondo, on the Beira Railway, with Murraça, on the S shore of the Zambezi River. In 1935 the Lower Zambezi Bridge was completed, and the Central Africa Railway, which connected Nyasaland and the N bank of the river, was joined with the Trans-Zambezia Railway to provide a through route from Nyasaland to Beira. The bridge was a great engineering feat and is one of the longest in the world (12,064 ft. for the single span). Distance from Beira to Murraça, 175 mi.

Trap, The. Novel by Dorothy M. Richardson, published in 1925. It is the eighth section of Pilgrimage (1938), a novel sequence in 12 parts employing the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Trapani (trā'pa.nē). Province in SW Italy, in the compartimento (region) and island of Sicily. Capital, Trapani; area, ab. 968 sq. mi.; pop. 375,169 (1936).

Trapani. [Ancient name, Drepanum.] City and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, the capital of the province of Trapani, situated on the W coast of the island, SW of Palermo; port and tuna fisheries; extraction of salt from the sea. There are exports of wines of the Marsala type, and also of a great variety of macaroni products. The Santuario dell'Annunziata, a place of pilgrimage, dates from the 14th century. In ancient times, in the first Punic War, the city was one of the strongholds of the Carthaginians, was fortified by Hamilcar Barca, and was close to the scene of the great Carthaginian naval victory (249 B.C.) by Adherbal over the Roman fleet under Publius Claudius. It fell to the Romans only after a protracted siege in 241 B.C. In the Middle Ages it was sacked by the Vandals (440 A.D.), occupied by the Saracens (831), and by the Normans (1077). Charles V used it as a base for his expedition to Tunis. Considerable damage was suffered in World War II by buildings of tourist interest, including the cathedral, but on most of them repairs are completed or under way. The churches of Santa Maria della Luce and San Michele and the Palazzo Staiti were destroyed. Pop. of commune, 72,846 (1936); of city, 52,661 (1936).

Trapassi (trā.pās'sē). Pietro Antonio Domenico Bonaventura. Original name of Metastasio.

Trapezus (trap'ē.zus). Ancient name of Trabzon.

Trappers' Trail. See Cherokee Trail.

Trappists (trap'ists). Monastic body, a branch of the Cistercian order. It is named for the village of Soligny-la-Trappe, in the department of Orne, France, where the Abbey of La Trappe was founded in 1140 by Rotrou, Count of Perche. The abbey soon fell into decay, and was governed for many years by titular or commendatory abbots. Armand Le Bouthillier de Rancé, who had been commendatory abbot of La Trappe from his boyhood, became its actual abbot in 1664, and thoroughly reformed and reorganized the order. The rules of the order are noted for their extreme austerity, and require extended fasts, severe manual labor, almost perpetual silence, abstinence from meat and fish, and rigorous asceticism in general. The order was repressed in France during the Revolutionary and Napoleonic periods. There are branch monasteries in France, Belgium, Great Britain, Italy, and elsewhere in Europe, and in the U.S., as well as in Canada.

Trarieux (trā.ryē), (Jacques) Ludovic. b. at Aubeterre, Charente, France, Nov. 30, 1840; d. at Paris, March 13, 1904. French political leader and lawyer, a founder of the Ligue des Droits de l'Homme. He was a deputy (1879-81), senator (1888 et seq.), and minister of Justice (1895). He was one of the senators charged with the prosecution of General Georges Boulanger, and was a defender of the innocence of Captain Alfred Dreyfus.

Trasimeno (trā.zē.me'nō), Lake. [Also: Lake Perugia; Italian, Lago Trasimeno, Lago di Perugia; Latin, Trasimenus Lacus.] Lake in the province of Perugia, Italy, ab. 10 mi. W of Perugia. It has no natural outlet. Elevation, ab. 850 ft.; length, ab. 10 mi.; depth, ab. 25 ft.; area, ab. 50 sq. mi.

Trasimenus (tras.i.me'nus), Battle of Lake. Victory gained by Hannibal over the Romans under the consul Flaminius, on the N shore of Lake Trasimeno (modern Trasimeno), in the summer of 217 B.C. The Roman army was nearly annihilated, and the consul was slain.

Trask (trask), Kate Nichols. [Known as Katrina Trask.] b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., May 30, 1853; d. Jan. 8, 1922. American author and poet; wife (married 1874) of Spencer Trask. Her works include Under King Constantine (1893), Sonnets and Lyrics (1895), John Leighton, Jr. (1898), Lessons in Love (1900), Free, not Bound (1903), Christalyn (1903), In My Lady's Garden (1907), King Alfred's Jewel (1909), In the Vanguard (1913; play), The Mighty and the Lowly (1915), and Without the Walls (1919).

Trask, Spencer. b. at New York, Sept. 18, 1844; d. 1909. American financier. He held various executive positions in the Edison electric enterprises and was a director of several railroads. He had much to do with the development of the Saratoga Spa in New York; his estate there was willed to the Yaddo Corporation, which operates an artists' colony.

Trás-os-Montes e Alto Douro (trā.zōzh.mōn'tēsh ē āl'tō dō'rō). [Former name, Tráz-os-Montes.] Province in NE Portugal, bounded on the N, NE, and E by Spain, on the S by Beira Alta, and on the W by Douro Litoral and Minho. It comprises the districts of Vila Real and Bragança. Largely mountainous, with high plains and deep valleys, it produces port wine, olives, and almonds; there is livestock raising in the higher parts, and some mining activity. Capital, Vila Real; area, ab. 4,570 sq. mi.; pop. 592,079 (1940).

Trasparga (trās.pār'gā). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Lugo, ab. 16 mi. NW of Lugo, 11,909 (1940).

Trastámara (trās.tā.mā'rā), Count of. Title of Henry II (of Castile).

Trastevere (trās.tā.vā.rā). Workingmen's quarter of Rome, situated on the right bank of the Tiber.

Trau (trou). German name of Trogir.

Tradi (trā.dī). Italian name of Trogir.

Traub (troup), Gottfried. b. at Kiellingshausen, Germany, Nov. 1, 1869—. German theologian and politician. He was a member (1913-18) of the Prussian diet, chairman of the ultranationalistic Vaterlandspartei in 1918, and a member of the Weimar constitutional assembly (1919-20). In 1920 he took part in the Kapp Putsch, fled from Germany, but later returned to become a journalist at Munich, where he edited Eiserne Blätter.

Traube (trou'be), Isidor. b. at Hildesheim, Germany, 1860—. German chemist. He established (1891) experimentally a valuable rule, which states that successively higher members of homologous series of organic compounds must be present in one third of the concentration of a previous member to produce an equivalent drop in aqueous surface tension.

Traubel (trou'bel), Helen. b. at St. Louis, Mo., —. American concert and operatic soprano, notable for her interpretation of Wagner. She made her debut (1925) as a soloist with the St. Louis Symphony, and created (1937) the soprano role in The Man without a Country at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. She has also sung in concert and on the radio and in television.

Traubel, Horace Logo. b. at Camden, N.J., Dec. 19, 1858; d. at Bon Echo, Ontario, Canada, Sept. 8, 1919. American author, a friend and literary executor of Walt Whitman. He was founder and editor (1890-1919) of the Conservator, a monthly magazine published at Philadelphia, and a free-lance journalist (1902 et seq.). Turning to socialism, he became a supporter of Eugene V. Debs. Author of Chants Communal (1904), With Walt Whitman in Camden (3 vols., 1906-14), Optimos (1910), and Collects (1915). He was an editor of The Complete Writings of Walt Whitman (10 vols., 1902).

Trauerwalzer (trou'ér.väl.tser). [French title, Le Désir.] Work (opus 9, No. 2) by Franz Schubert, composed in 1816.

Traun (troun). Town in N central Austria, in the province of Upper Austria, situated on the Traun River SE of Linz; textile, paper, and lumber factories, 7,646 (1946).

Traun River. River in Austria which rises in Styria, traverses the Lake of Hallstätter (Hallstättersee) and the Traunsee in Upper Austria, and joins the Danube near Linz. It forms a noted waterfall near the village of Roitham. Length, ab. 110 mi.

Traunsee or Traun See (troun'zā). [Also: Gmunden-ersee, Gmündener See; English, Lake Traun.] Picturesque lake in Upper Austria, in the Salzkammergut, near Gmunden, traversed by the Traun River. Length, ab. 8 mi.

Traunstein (troun'shtin). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Upper Bavaria, situated on the Traun River and in the foothills of the Alps, ab. 55 mi. SE of Munich; health resort; sawmills, lumber, knitwear, lingerie, and metal manufactures; brewery, 14,611 (1950).

Trautenuau (trou'tē.nou). German name of Trutnov.

Trauttmansdorff (trout'māns.dorf), Count Maximilian von. b. May 23, 1854; d. June 8, 1860. Austrian diplomat and politician. He negotiated the alliance between the emperor Ferdinand II and the elector of Bavaria in 1619, was one of the group who turned the emperor against Wallenstein, negotiated the peace of Prague in 1635, and was the chief negotiator of the peace of Westphalia in 1648.

Trautwine (trout'win), John Cresson. b. at Philadelphia, March 30, 1810; d. there, Sept. 14, 1883. American railroad and canal engineer. A railroad engineer engaged (1831-43) on the construction of various U.S. roads, he was active (1843-48) in building a canal in New Granada (Colombia), and served (1849-51) on a railroad survey on the Isthmus of Panama, returning (1851) there for a survey of an interoceanic canal. He made (1857) a survey for an interoceanic railway in Honduras, designed (1858) a dock system at Montreal, and planned (1864) a harbor for Glace Bay, Nova Scotia. Author of the Engineers' Pocket Book (1871).

Travancore-Cochin (trav'an.kôr.kô'ch'in). State in S Union of India, at the S extremity of the peninsula and along the W coast. It is traversed by the Western Ghats; products include coconuts, areca nuts, pepper, and coffee. Capital, Trivandrum; area, 9,155 sq. mi.; pop. 9,265,157 (1951).

Trave (trā'v'e). River in N Germany which flows into the Baltic Sea at Travemünde below Lübeck. Length, ab. 70 mi.; navigable for large vessels to Lübeck.

Trave and Elbe Canal (el'be). See Elbe and Trave Canal.

Traveller, The. Poem by Oliver Goldsmith, published in 1765.

Travelling Bachelor, The. Work by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1828.

Travendal (trā'ven.däl). [Also, Traventhal (trā'ven.täl).] Village in Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, on the Trave River ab. 15 mi. W of Lübeck. Here, in 1700, Charles XII of Sweden extorted a treaty from Denmark by threatening otherwise to march on Copenhagen.

Travers (trav'ërz), Morris William. b. at London, Jan. 24, 1872—English chemist, codiscoverer (1898) with Sir William Ramsay of the elements neon, krypton, and xenon. He served as professor (1904-37) of chemistry at University College, Bristol, as a director (1906-14) of the Indian Institute of Science, and as a technical consultant (1940-45) to the Ministry of Supply. Author of The Discovery of the Rare Gases (1928).

Travers, Pamela L. b. in Queensland, Australia, 1904—British actress and writer (especially of books for young people). She began her literary career by contributing verse to the Irish Statesman, and lived in the U.S., Australia, Ireland, Russia, and England, where she played many Shakespearian roles. Author of such works as Mary Poppins (1934; translated into Swedish, Italian, German, and Czech), Mary Poppins Comes Back (1935), Happy Ever After (1940), Aunt Soss (1941); and also of Moscow Excursion (1935) and I Go by Sea, I Go by Land (1941), travel books.

Traversari (trā.ver.sā'rē), Ambrose. Original name of St. Ambrose of Camaldoli.

Traverse (trav'ërs), Lake. Lake on the boundary between Minnesota and South Dakota. Its outlet is by the Bois des Sioux River to the Red River. Length, ab. 25 mi.

Traverse City. City in N Lower Michigan, county seat of Grand Traverse County, on Grand Traverse Bay; marketing center of a cherry-growing area; processing of cherries, potatoes, and cider; manufactures of furniture. 16,974 (1950).

Traviata (trā.vyā'tā), La. [Eng. trans., "The Wandering One" or "The Lost One."] Opera in three acts by Giuseppe Verdi, first produced at Venice on March 6, 1853. The libretto by Piave is based on the younger Alexandre Dumas's La Dame aux Camélias.

Travis (trav'is), Walter John. b. at Maldon, Victoria, Australia, Jan. 10, 1862; d. at Denver, Colo., Jan. 31, 1927. American golfer. He won (1900, 1901, 1903) the American amateur golf championship, and became (1904) British champion amateur golfer. He wrote Practical Golf (1901) and The Art of Putting (1904; with J. White), and edited (1908 et seq.) The American Golfer.

Travis, William Barret. b. near Red Banks, S.C., Aug. 9, 1809; d. at the Alamo, San Antonio, Tex., March 6, 1836. American soldier, commander of the Texas forces during the famous siege of the Alamo. He was admitted (1829) to the bar in Alabama, settled (1831) in Texas, where he became a leader of the war faction of settlers opposed to the Mexicans, and was named (1835) a major of artillery after the outbreak of the Texas revolution. He shared with James Bowie the command of the forces at the Alamo, taking sole command on Feb. 24, 1836, the day after Bowie became a victim of typhoid-pneumonia, and led the garrison until the massacre (March 6, 1836) at the hands of the Mexicans under Santa Anna.

Traylor (trā'lor), Melvin Alvah. b. at Breeding, Ky., Oct. 21, 1878; d. at Chicago, Feb. 14, 1934. American banker. Vice-president and director (1919 et seq.) and president (1925-34) of the First National Bank of Chicago, he was a representative, with Jackson Reynolds, of the U.S. in organizing (1929) the Bank for International Settlements at Basel, Switzerland.

Traz (tráz), Robert de. b. at Paris, 1884—Swiss novelist and critic writing in French. He was for a number of years editor of the Revue de Genève. His critical study, Pierre Loti (1948), is considered the best book on this French author.

Tráz-os-Montes (trā.zôzh.môn'têsh). See Trás-os-Montes e Alto Douro.

Trbovlje (tr'bov.lye). Town in N Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Slovenia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dravska, between Ljubljana and Celje. 13,743 (1948).

Treasure Island. Novel by Robert Louis Stevenson, published in 1883.

"Treasure State." Nickname of Montana.

Treasury, U.S. Department of the. Executive department of the national government, established by act of the U.S. Congress, Sept. 2, 1789. It is headed by a secretary of the treasury, who enjoys cabinet status. Among the functions of the department are the supervision and administration of the national finances, the collection of customs duties and of taxes levied by Congress, the coining and printing of money and revenue stamps, the supervision of national banks, the study of methods for supporting the public credit, the maintenance of records on government receipts and expenditures, the negotiation of contracts for government supplies, the enforcement of federal narcotics laws, and the administration of the U.S. Coast Guard (in peacetime) and the U.S. Secret Service. The units under the authority of the department include the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Bureau of Customs, the Bureau of the Mint, the Division of Monetary Research, and the Architect of Federal Buildings.

Treaty Elm. Tree, formerly standing near Philadelphia, beneath which William Penn negotiated agreements with the Indians in 1683.

Trebbia (treb'byā). [Ancient name, Trebia.] River in N Italy which joins the Po near Piacenza. Length, ab. 60 mi.

Trebbia, Battle of the. [Sometimes called the Battle of Parma.] Victory gained near the Trebbia, June 17-19, 1799, by the allied Russian-Austrian army under Suvorov over the French under Jacques Macdonald.

Trebelli (trā.bél'le), Zelia. [Original name, Zelia Gilbert.] b. at Paris, 1835; d. at Étretat, France, Aug. 18, 1892. French operatic mezzo-soprano.

Trebia (trē'bī.a). Ancient name of the Trebbia.

Trebia, Battle of the. Victory gained by Hannibal over the Romans under Sempronius Longus and Publius Cornelius Scipio, near the Trebia (modern Trebbia) in Decen ber, 218 B.C.

Třebíč (tēr.she'bēch). [German, Trebitsch.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Jihlava, in SW Moravia, situated on the Jihlava River between Jihlava and Brno. It is a picturesque old town, with the Romanesque 13th-century Basilica of Saint Prokop and a Benedictine abbey. There are various industries. 17,447 (1947).

Trebinje (trē'bē.nye). Town in W Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Herzegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Zetska, E of Dubrovnik. It is a station on the local railroad line from Nikšić to Dubrovnik. There are old Turkish walls, fortifications, and mosques. 6,241 (1948).

Trebitsch (trē'bī'ch). German name of Třebíč.

Trebizond (trē'bī.zond), Empire of. Byzantine realm on the S coast of the Black Sea, whose capital was Trebizond (now Trabzon). It was founded by Alexius I, a member of the family of Comnenus, after the establishment of the Latin empire of Constantinople in 1204, and maintained its independence against the Seljuks, Constantinople, Nicaea, and others, until its overthrow by the Ottoman Turks in 1461.

Treblinka (trē.blēng'kă). Commune in C Poland, in the województwo (province) of Warszawa, situated on the Bug River ab. 50 mi. NE of Warsaw. During World War II it contained one of the most notorious of the German concentration camps, used particularly for the murder of several hundred thousand Jews transported here from the Warsaw ghetto; a revolt attempted by the inmates was suppressed Aug. 2, 1943. There were few survivors.

Tredegar (trĕ.dĕ'gar). Urban district, market town, and mining center in W England, in Monmouthshire, situated on the river Sirhowy ab. 2 mi. W of Ebbw Vale, ab. 156 mi. W of London by rail. It has iron manufactures. 20,375 (1951).

Tredegar Iron Works. Rolling mill and ordnance factory at Richmond, Va., founded in 1836 and designated as the Tredegar Iron Company in 1838. During the Civil War it was the chief source of ordnance and munitions for the Confederate forces. It was later reorganized as the Tredegar Company and is still in existence.

Tredgold (trĕd'gôld), Thomas. b. at Brandon, near Durham, England, Aug. 22, 1788; d. at London, Jan. 28, 1829. English engineer.

Tredici Comuni (tră'dĕ.chĕ kô'm.mô'nĕ). [Eng. trans., "Thirteen Communes."] Locality in the province of Verona, compartimento (region) of Veneto, NE Italy. It has long been noted for the preservation of a Germanic dialect (Cimbri), now almost entirely supplanted by Italian speech.

Tree (trĕ), Ellen. Maiden name of Kean, Ellen.

Tree, Sir Herbert Beerbohm. [Known as Sir Herbert Tree.] b. at London, Dec. 17, 1853; d. there July 2, 1917. English actor and theatrical manager; half-brother of Max Beerbohm. He first appeared on the stage in 1878, adapted the surname Tree (a translation of the "bolun" in his name), managed the Haymarket Theatre, London (1887-96), and was subsequently manager of His Majesty's Theatre, London. His productions, especially of poetic drama, were considered the leading theatrical events of their day and Tree was acclaimed as the leader of the English theatre.

Treece (trĕs), Henry. b. 1912—. British poet. He served as a pilot in the Royal Air Force during World War II. Author of Thirty-Eight Poems (1940), Towards a Personal Armageddon (1941), and Invitation and Warning (1942).

Tree of Heaven, The. Novel by May Sinclair, published in 1917.

Tree of the Universe. See Yggdrasil.
"Tree Planters' State." Occasional nickname of Nebraska.

Tregelles (trĕ.gel'ĕs), Samuel Prideaux. b. near Falmouth, England, Jan. 30, 1813; d. there, April 24, 1875. English New Testament scholar, noted for his critical edition of the New Testament (1857-72). He translated Gesenius's Hebrew grammar, and wrote various critical works.

Tréguier (trĕ.gyă). Town in NW France, in the department of Côtes-du-Nord, ab. 29 mi. NW of St.-Brieuc. It is a small port. The cathedral is a building in the "flamboyant" Gothic style of the 14th and 15th centuries. 2,992 (1946).

Treia (trĕ'yă). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Marches, in the province of Macerata, situated above the Potenza River, W of Macerata: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 11,035 (1936); of town, 1,765 (1936).

Treinta y Tres (trăn'tă ĕ trăs). Department in E Uruguay. Capital, Treinta y Tres; area, 3,683 sq. mi.; pop. 70,343 (est. 1947).

Treinta y Tres. City in E Uruguay, capital of Treinta y Tres department: livestock and rice. Pop. ab. 18,500.

Treitschke (trĕch'kĕ), Heinrich Gotthard von. b. at Dresden, Germany, Sept. 15, 1834; d. April 28, 1896. German historian and publicist. He taught at Freiburg (1863 et seq.), Kiel, and Heidelberg, and was a professor at Berlin from 1874; he was a National Liberal member of the Reichstag (1871-84). From 1886 until his death he was Prussian state historiographer. Among his works are Zehn Jahre deutscher Kämpfe (2nd ed., 1879), Historische und politische Aufsätze (essays on recent history, 5th ed., 1886), Der Sozialismus und seine Götter (1875), and Deutsche Geschichte im 19. Jahrhundert (1879-89).

Trelawney (trĕ.lă'nĕy), Edward John. b. at London, Nov. 13, 1792; d. near Worthing, England, Aug. 13, 1881. English adventurer, a friend of Byron and Shelley. He helped recover the bodies of Shelley and his companion, Edward Williams, after they drowned; he arranged for Shelley's cremation and it was he who took Shelley's heart from the pyre. He accompanied Byron to Greece and served in the war of independence. He later became a social lion at London. He wrote Recollections of the Last Days of Shelley and Byron (1858), rewritten as Records of Shelley, Byron, and the Author (1878).

Trélazé (tră.lă.ză). Town in W France, in the department of Maine-et-Loire, situated near the Loire River, ab. 4 mi. SE of Angers. It has slate mines. 6,122 (1943).

Trelew (tră.lĕ). Town in S central Argentina, in Chubut territory, ab. 12 mi. inland from Rawson and ab. 44 mi. by rail SW of Puerto Madryn. It is a rail junction and one of the chief commercial towns in Patagonia. 5,880 (1947).

Trelleborg (trĕl'ĕ.bôry). [Also, Trälleborg.] Town in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Malmöhus, situated on the Baltic Sea SE of Malmö. It is a seaport, with railroad ferries connecting Sweden and Sassnitz, in N Germany. It also has machine, chemical, rubber industries, and a sugar refinery. 16,763 (1947).

Trelo Vouni (trĕ.lô vô'nĕ). See Hymettus.

Tremain (trĕ.măn), Henry Edwin. b. at New York, Nov. 14, 1840; d. Dec. 9, 1910. American soldier, lawyer, and author. He served in the Union forces during the Civil War, being awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor and emerging as a brigadier general. He began (1868) the practice of law at New York, where he was first assistant U.S. attorney (1873-77) and helped found (1872) the New York Law Journal. Author of Last Hours of Sheridan's Cavalry (1904), Two Days of War (1905), and Sectionalism Unmasked (1907).

Tremblay (trăn.blă), François Leclerc du. See Joseph, Father.

Tremonia (trĕ.mô'nĭ.a). See under Dortmund.

Trench (trĕnch), Richard Chenevix. b. at Dublin, Sept. 9, 1807; d. at London, March 28, 1886. British prelate, philologist, and poet. He was graduated from Cambridge (Trinity College), became dean of Westminster in 1856, and was archbishop of Dublin (1864-84). Among his works are The Story of Justin Martyr (1835), Sabbaton (1838), Poems from Eastern Sources (1842), Study of Words (1851), English Past and Present (1855), Select Glossary of English Words (1859), and Lectures on Medieval Church History (1878).

Trenchard (trĕn'chărd), Asa. Title role of Tom Taylor's Our American Cousin. Though intended for the principal part, it was soon overshadowed by that of Lord Dundreary.

Trenčín (trĕn'chĕn). [German, Trentschin.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Bratislava, in W Slovakia, situated on the Váh River near the White Carpathian (Bílé Karpaty) Mountains, NE of Bratislava. It has a castle. 12,380 (1947).

Trenck (trĕngk), Baron Franz von der. b. at Reggio, Calabria, Italy, Jan. 1, 1711; d. at Brünn, Moravia, Oct. 4, 1749. Austrian officer and adventurer, later in the Russian service. He raised a corps of Croat irregulars for Maria Theresa in 1740, and became notorious for his cruelty in the war in Bavaria and elsewhere. Accused of exceeding even the loose regulations governing the commanders of irregular troops and also of peculation, he was sentenced to death, but because he was so disliked that a fair trial had manifestly been impossible he was finally imprisoned by the Austrian government. His autobiography, Merkwürdiges Leben und Taten des Freiherrn Franz von der Trenck, was published in 1770.

Trenck, Baron Friedrich von der. b. at Königsberg, Prussia, Feb. 16, 1726; guillotined at Paris, July 25, 1794. German adventurer; cousin of Franz von der Trenck. He entered the Prussian service in 1742, was imprisoned by Frederick II of Prussia (Frederick the Great) at Glatz on account of intrigues, escaped in 1747, and entered the Austrian service in 1749. He was captured and again imprisoned (1753-63) by Frederick at Magdeburg. He went to Paris during the French Revolution and was arrested by Robespierre and put to death as a secret agent of Austria. He published an autobiography in 1786.

Trendelenburg (trĕn'dĕ.lĕn.bûrk), Friedrich. b. at Berlin, May 24, 1844; d. at Nikolassee, near Berlin, Dec. 15, 1924. German surgeon. He introduced a tampon canula, named after him, for the trachea (1861), and described a position (the Trendelenburg position, 1890) calling for elevated legs and pelvis during and after pelvic operation, an operation for varicose veins (1890), and an operation for the removal of pulmonary embolism (1908). He also described (1895) a symptom of congenital dislo-fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mĕ, hĕr; pin, pĭne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; cation of the hip and constructed an operating table (1890).

Trendelenburg, Friedrich Adolf. b. at Eutin, Germany, Nov. 30, 1802; d. at Berlin, Jan. 24, 1872. German philosopher, professor of philosophy at Berlin (1833 et seq.). He was especially noted for his researches on Plato and Aristotle, and as an opponent of Hegelianism. He wrote Elementa logicae Aristotelicae (1837), Logische Untersuchungen (1840), Erläuterungen zu den Elementen der Aristotelischen Logik (1842), Historische Beiträge zur Philosophie (1846-67), Naturrecht (1860), and others.

Tre-Newydd (tre.nə'wɪð). Welsh name of Newtown, Wales.

Trenque Lauquen (trāŋ'kə lou'ken). Town in W Buenos Aires province, Argentina, ab. 200 mi. SW of Buenos Aires: trade center; food-processing industries. 10,887 (1947).

Trent (trɛnt). [Italian, Trento; German, Trient; Latin, Tridentum.] City and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Trentino-Alto Adige, the capital of the province of Trento, formerly in the Austrian Tyrol, situated on the Adige River between Bolzano and Verona: agricultural trade; small textile and other industries. The Castello di Buon Consiglio is a large castle of the 13th century; the town hall and the Palazzo Tabarelli date from the 16th century. The cathedral, a Romanesque basilica with Gothic interior, dates from 1145, but was rebuilt in the 13th and 15th centuries; the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore dates from the 17th century. A Celtic colony, it was fortified by the Roman emperor Augustus, served as a base for the campaign of Drusus (15 B.C.) which incorporated the Alpine countries into the Roman domain. After the downfall of the Roman Empire, the city fell to the Ostrogoths, the Normans, and the Franks. In the 11th century it became the seat of an independent bishopric (episcopal principality) under the overlordship of the German emperor. The great church Council of Trent was in session here during the period 1545-63. The bishopric was secularized in 1803 and united with Tirol province, Austria; the city was a chief seat of Italian Irredentism until it was finally united with Italy in 1919. In World War II the city, which is located on the railroad to the Brenner Pass, was heavily damaged. Worst hit among buildings of tourist interest were the Chiesa dell'Annunziata, the churches of San Lorenzo and Santa Maria Maggiore, and the Municipio Vecchio; the Church of San Martino was destroyed. Damage to the cathedral was minor. Pop. of commune, 56,012 (1936); of city, 34,627 (1936).

Trent. British steamer on which were seized, in the Bahama Channel, Nov. 8, 1861, the Confederate commissioners to Europe, James Mason and John Slidell, by the American captain Charles Wilkes.

Trent, Council of. Council (usually reckoned as the 18th ecumenical council) held (with several prorogations and suspensions) at Trent, in the Tyrol, Dec. 13, 1545, to Dec. 4, 1563. It condemned the leading doctrines of the Reformation concerning the Bible, original sin, and justification. Its decrees were confirmed by Pope Pius IV, Jan. 26, 1564. He also published in that year the Tridentine Profession of Faith.

Trent and Mersey Canal (mɛr'zi). See Grand Trunk Canal.

Trentham (trɛn'tham), Viscount. A title of Leveson-Gower, John.

Trentino-Alto Adige (trɛn.tɛ'no.äl'to ä'dɛ.jä). [Former name, Venezia Tridentina.] Compartimento (region) in NE Italy, containing the provinces of Bolzano and Trento, formerly the Austrian South Tyrol. It is bounded by Austria on the N and E, and by Lombardy and Veneto on the W, S, and SE, and reaches from the Brenner Pass and the C Alpine range down to the S foothills of the Alps. The region is mountainous, with livestock (particularly cattle) raising far exceeding agriculture in importance, although some wine and fruits are produced in the Adige valley. The scenery attracts numerous tourists. The population is predominantly Italian-speaking in the S, German-speaking in the N valleys. Area, 5,252 sq. mi.; pop. 728,217 (1951).

Trento (trɛn'to). Province in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Trentino-Alto Adige. Capital, Trent; area, 2,516 sq. mi. (1936); pop. 391,309 (1936).

Trenton (trɛn'ton). Village in SE Michigan, in Wayne County: trading center for farm products. 6,222 (1950).

Trenton. City in NW Missouri, county seat of Grundy County, ab. 69 mi. NE of St. Joseph: marketing and rail-shipping center for an agricultural area. 6,157 (1950).

Trenton. City in C New Jersey, capital of New Jersey and county seat of Mercer County, on the Delaware River: large manufactures of pottery, steel cables, and steam turbines. It was named Trenton in 1720, and was made a city in 1792. It was the scene of a decisive Revolutionary War battle between troops under General Washington and the Hessians on Dec. 26, 1776. Pop. of city, 124,697 (1940), 128,009 (1950); of urbanized area, 189,321 (1950).

Trenton. Town in N Nova Scotia, Canada, a few miles inland from Pictou harbor, in a coal-mining region: steel rolling mills and railway workshops. 3,089 (1951).

Trenton. Town in Ontario, Canada, situated a few miles N of the N shore of Lake Ontario, on the main highway from Toronto to Montreal, ab. 62 mi. W of Kingston. Its chief importance now lies in the location of a large Royal Canadian Air Force Base just outside the town. 10,085 (1951).

Trenton. City in W Tennessee, county seat of Gibson County. 3,868 (1950).

Trenton, Battle of. Victory gained by the Americans under Washington over the Hessian troops supporting the British, Dec. 26, 1776. Washington crossed the Delaware with 2,400 men on the night of December 25 and attacked the Hessian mercenaries (ab. 1,500). The Hessians were defeated and ab. 1,000 were captured.

Trenton Falls. Series of picturesque cascades in West Canada Creek, in N central New York, in Oneida County, ab. 13 mi. NE of Utica. Total descent, 312 ft.

Trent River (trɛnt). River in C England. It rises in the N part of Staffordshire, flows through that county, Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, and Lincolnshire, and unites with the river Ouse to form the river Humber. It is the third longest river in England. Length, ab. 170 mi.; navigable for barges to Burton-on-Trent; for larger vessels to Gainsborough.

Trent River. River in Ontario, Canada, which flows into Lake Ontario. Length, ab. 150 mi.

Trentschin (trɛn'tchin). German name of Trenčín.

Trenyov (tri.nyóv'), Konstantin Andreyevich. [Also, Trenev (tri.nyóv').] b. in Kharkov, Russia, 1878—, Russian author. Under the old regime he published short stories; after the revolution he wrote chiefly for the stage. His most popular play is Lyubov Yarovaya, the action of which is laid against the background of the Russian civil war.

Tréport (trā.pór). Le. See Le Tréport.

Trepov (trɛ'pof), Dmitry Fyodorovich. b. 1855; d. Sept. 15, 1906. Russian general, chief of the imperial police, commandant of the palace, and assistant minister of the interior.

Treptow an der Rega (trɛp'tō än dər rā'gä). German name of Trzebiatów.

Tres Arroyos (trās ärr'ó'yos). City in E Argentina, in Buenos Aires province, ab. 275 mi. SW of the city of Buenos Aires: shipping point for livestock; food-processing industries. 29,996 (1947).

Tresca (trɛs'ka), Carlo. b. in Italy, c1877; d. at New York, 1943. Italian-American syndicalist and anti-fascist writer and editor. He came of a wealthy family, but turned to socialism at an early age, published a radical paper, and became secretary of the Italian Railroad Workers Union. The authorities eventually moved against him on a charge of libel, and he went into exile. Coming to the U.S. in 1904, he became active in the socialist movement, seeking especially to promote revolutionary radical sentiments among immigrants from Italy. He took part in organizing and leading a number of strikes, and tried to spread syndicalism among the eastern coal miners. Unable to accept in toto the program of any socialist group in the U.S., and indisposed to submit to party discipline, after the first decade of the century he played a lone role, especially through his paper Il Martello (The Hammer). From the first he opposed fascism, and it is said that several attempts were made by Mussolini's agents to assassinate him. He was also a severe critic of the Communist regime in the U.S.S.R. In 1943 he was murdered by gunfire on a New York street. Responsibility for the crime has never been established, although it was generally supposed to have been the deed of Italian reactionaries.

Tres Castillos (trās kās.tē'lyōs), Los. See Castillos, Los Tres.

Trescot (tres'kot), William Henry. b. at Charleston, S.C., Nov. 10, 1822; d. at Pendleton, S.C., May 4, 1898. American diplomat. He was assistant U.S. secretary of state (1860) and for a time acting secretary of state, but resigned to serve the Confederacy. After the Civil War, he was several times useful to the U.S. in international negotiations, as when he was sent as special envoy to Chile, Peru, and Bolivia in 1881. He wrote Diplomatic History of the Administrations of Washington and Adams (1857) and other works of diplomacy.

Tres Cruces (trās krō'sās), Nevados. [Also, Cerro Tres Cruces.] Volcanic mountain with three peaks, in the Andes of NE Chile. The SE peak lies on the Argentine border. Peak elevations, NW to SE, ab. 19,785 ft.; 21,720 ft.; 20,853 ft.

Tresham (tres'hām), Francis. b. c.1567; d. Dec. 22, 1605. English conspirator, noted for his betrayal of the Gunpowder Plot to Lord Montague. A dissolute youth, Tresham was involved in the Earl of Essex's rebellion and was friendly with Robert Catesby and Thomas and Robert Winter, all of whom were his cousins, who planned suggesting to the king of Spain that he invade England. When Catesby later revealed the plot to blow up Parliament, Tresham was at first receptive to the idea, but his ardor cooled upon receipt of a large legacy. He betrayed the plot, but then repented his action and exonerated Father Henry Garnett in a confession. He died of illness before he could be tried, but his complicity in the plot was so apparent that his corpse was treated as if he had been a traitor, and decapitated; his head was impaled on the gate at Northampton, and his estates attained.

Tres Marias (trās mā'rē'ās). [Also: Las Tres Marias; Eng. trans., "The Three Marys."] Group of three small islands in the Pacific Ocean, W of Mexico, ab. lat. 21°30' N, long. 106°30' W.

Tresor des Pianistes (trā.zōr dā pyā'nēst), Le. Compilation of piano music edited by Jeanne Louise Farrere and published (1861-72) at Paris.

Tresor Musical (trā.zōr mū.zē'kāl). Series of annual volumes (1865-93) edited by Robert van Maldeghem, containing music collected in libraries and monasteries all over the Continent.

Tressel (tres'el). Character in Shakespeare's Richard III.

Tres Tabernae (trēs tā.bēr'nē). Title of Saverne.

Treu (troi), Georg. b. at St. Petersburg, March 29, 1843; d. at Dresden, Germany, Oct. 5, 1921. German archaeologist. He served as professor (1882) at Dresden and as director of the Albertinum, a sculpture museum there, and participated in the excavations at Olympia.

Treub (trēp), Melchior. b. at Voorschoten, near Leiden, Netherlands, Dec. 26, 1851; d. at St.-Raphaël, on the Riviera, France, Oct. 3, 1910. Dutch botanist. He was director (1880-1909) of the botanical garden at Buitenzorg, Java, and published numerous works on the anatomy and embryology of plant life in the East Indies.

Traubund (trōi'bunt). In German history: 1. Reactionary political union in Prussia (1848-49). 2. Reactionary political union in Hesse-Cassel (1850-53).

Trevelyan (trē.vel'yan), Sir Charles Edward. b. April 2, 1807; d. June 19, 1886. English official in India; brother-in-law of Thomas Babington Macaulay. He was governor of Madras (1859-60) and Indian financial minister (1862-68).

Trevelyan, Sir Charles Philips. b. at London, Oct. 28, 1870—English politician; eldest son of Sir George Otto Trevelyan. A Liberal member (1899-1918, 1922-31) of Parliament, he served (1908-14) as parliamentary secretary of the board of education, resigning after protesting against the government's war policy. He was minister of education (1924, 1929-31) in the cabinets headed by Ramsay MacDonald, and served as lord lieutenant for Northumberland (1930-49).

Trevelyan, George Macaulay. b. Feb. 16, 1876—English historian and biographer; third son of Sir George Otto Trevelyan. He served as regius professor of modern history (1927-40) at Cambridge, and as master (1940-51) of Trinity College, Cambridge. Among his works are Garibaldi's Defense of the Roman Republic (1907), Garibaldi and the Thousand (1909), Garibaldi and the Making of Italy (1911), British History in the Nineteenth Century, 1782-1901 (1922), History of England (1926), England under Queen Anne (3 vols., 1930, 1932, 1934), The English Revolution, 1688 (1938), English Social History (1942), and the biographies The Life of John Bright (1913), Grey of Fallodon (1937), and Sir George Otto Trevelyan: A Memoir (1932).

Trevelyan, Sir George Otto. b. at Rothley Temple, Leicestershire, England, July 20, 1838; d. at Wallington, Northumberland, England, Aug. 17, 1928. English historian and statesman; nephew of Thomas Babington Macaulay. He served as a Liberal member of Parliament (1865-86), civil lord of admiralty (1868-70), parliamentary secretary to the admiralty (1881), chief secretary for Ireland (1882-84), and secretary for Scotland (1886, 1892-95). Author of two satires, Horace at the University of Athens (1861) and The Ladies in Parliament (1867). His major work is the Life and Letters of Lord Macaulay (1876). He also wrote Cavnpore (1865), The Early History of Charles James Fox (1880), and The American Revolution (6 vols., 1899-1914).

Trevena (trē.ven'a). See Tintagel.

Trevéri (trēv'eri) or Treviri (-i-ri). Ancient Celtic people in E Gaul, who dwelt W of the Rhine in what is now SE Belgium, Luxembourg, and W Germany. Their chief town was Trier, which was named (Latin, Augusta Treverorum) after them.

Trevès (trév). French name of Trier.

Trevés (trévz). English name of Trier.

Treves, Sir Frederick. b. at Dorchester, England, Feb. 15, 1853; d. at Lausanne, Switzerland, Dec. 7, 1923. English physician, sergeant surgeon to the king from 1902. He was professor of anatomy and pathology in the Royal College of Surgeons (1881-86), examiner in surgery at the University of Cambridge (1891-96), and consulting surgeon to the forces in South Africa in 1900.

Trevet (trēv'et), Nicholas. See Trivet, Nicholas.

Trevett v. Weeden (trēv'et; wē'den). Decision (1786) of the Rhode Island supreme court invalidating a state law requiring the acceptance of paper money issued by the Rhode Island government. Judge Howell declared the law unconstitutional and void on the ground that it violated the property guarantees of the charter which was then serving as the state constitution. The case is influential as a precedent in which the principle of judicial review was announced or asserted.

Trevi (trā'vē), Fountain of. Fountain at Rome, situated E of and near the Corso.

Treviglio (trā.vē'lyō). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Bergamo, ab. 20 mi. NE of Milan; silk and woolen textile industries, dyeworks, chemical and metal manufactures; agricultural trade. The Church of San Martino (11th century) contains paintings of the 15th century. Pop. of commune, 19,164 (1936); of town, 13,818 (1936).

Treviranus (trā.vē.rā'nūs), Gottfried Reinhold. b. at Bremen, Germany, Feb. 4, 1776; d. there, Feb. 16, 1837. German naturalist; brother of Ludolf Christian Treviranus. His chief work is Biologie, oder Philosophie der lebenden Natur (1802-22).

Treviranus, Gottfried Reinhold. b. at Schieder, Germany, March 20, 1891—German politician. He founded the People's Conservative Party. He became (1924) a member of the Reichstag, served as minister without portfolio (1930-32) in Brüning's cabinet, and emigrated to Canada when Hitler came to power.

Treviranus, Ludolph Christian. b. at Bremen, Germany, Sept. 10, 1779; d. at Bonn, Germany, May 6, 1864. German botanist, brother of Gottfried Reinhold Treviranus (1776-1837).

Trévisa (trē.vē'sa), John de. b. in Cornwall, England, c.1326; d. c.1412. English translator, vicar of Berkeley. He completed in 1387 the translation of Ranulph Higden's Polychronicon into English, and in 1598 the De Proprietatibus Rerum of Bartholomew Anglicus, as well as other Latin works, and possibly the Bible.

Trévisé (trā.véz), Duc de. Title of Mortier, Édouard Adolphe Casimir Joseph.

Trevise (tră.vě'zō). Province in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto. Capital, Treviso; area, ab. 956 sq. mi.; pop. 570,580 (1936).

Treviso. [Ancient name, Tarvisium.] City and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, the capital of the province of Treviso, ab. 18 mi. NW of Venice; railroad junction and agricultural trade center (particularly important for grain and cattle trade); flour and rice mills; ceramics, paper, and cement industries. The Cathedral of San Pietro, of the 11th century, rebuilt in the 15th and 16th centuries, contains murals by Pordenone, and paintings by Titian, Bordone, and others; the Church of San Nicolò has murals of the 13th-14th centuries. Treviso, once the seat of a Lombard duchy, was taken by Charlemagne in 776, and was established as an independent margravate (March of Treviso); it supported the Lombard League against the emperor Frederick I (Frederick Barbarossa) in the 12th century. It passed to Venice in 1387, and to Austria in 1797, remaining under Austrian rule, with a short interruption during the Napoleonic era, until 1866. Considerable damage was suffered in World War II by buildings of tourist interest. Extensive repairs have been made or are under way. Pop. of commune, 53,886 (1936); of city, 35,226 (1936).

Trevise, Count of the March of. Assumed title of Bernard of Treviso.

Trevithick (trév'ith'ik), Richard. b. at Illogan, Cornwall, England, April 13, 1771; d. at Dartford, Kent, England, April 22, 1833. English engineer and inventor, a pioneer in the use of steam power for locomotion. His father was a coal mine manager, and Richard Trevithick's first important invention, in 1797, was an improved pump for use in mining operations. The following year he devised a water-pressure engine, and in 1800 he built and demonstrated a high-pressure steam engine, which was competitive with James Watt's low-pressure engine. In 1801 a locomotive of his design, operating on the road without rails, drew a car with passengers; in 1803 another of his locomotives was demonstrated in the streets of London, and in 1804 he brought the locomotive and the tramway together, hauling a load of 20 tons weight over rails. In 1808 he operated a circular steam railway at London. Meanwhile his high-pressure engine was applied successfully to mining and dredging operations and to threshing. In 1816 he went to Peru, where he built machines for mining operations.

Trevor (trě'vor), Sir John. b. 1635; d. May 20, 1717. English politician. Speaker of the House of Commons, he was expelled (1695) for receiving a bribe.

Trevorton (trév'or'ton). Unincorporated community in E Pennsylvania, in Northumberland County. 2,545 (1950).

Trévoux (tră.vō). Town in the department of Ain, France, on the Saône River ab. 13 mi. N of Lyons. Pop. ab. 3,000.

Trgoviste (tér.gō.vish'te). See Türgovishte.

Trial by Jury. Operetta in one act by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan, first performed at the London Royalty Theatre on March 25, 1875. It was the second of their collaborations and their first big success.

Trial of a Judge. Poetic drama (1938) by Stephen Spender.

Trials of Topsy (top'si), The. Novel by A. P. Herbert, published in 1928. Its sequel is Topsy, M. P. (1929).

Triangle Fire. Disaster which occurred (March 25, 1911) at the Triangle Shirt Waist Company at New York, on the East Side, costing the lives of 147 women employees who died by burning, by being trampled to death, or by jumping from the top floors of a ten-story loft building in which the company was housed. Subsequent investigation revealed that the lack of adequate safety measures had been in large part responsible for the deaths; the cause of the fire itself, however, was never ascertained. Public indignation resulted in important reforms in the factory and building laws, particularly with respect to safety regulations.

Triangulum (trī.ang'gū.lum). Ancient northern constellation, in the form of the letter delta (Δ). It has one star of the third magnitude.

Triangulum Australe (ōs.trā'lē). Southern constellation, added by Petrus Theodori in the 15th century. S of Ara. It contains one star of the second and two of the third magnitude.

Triangulum Minus (mī'nus). Constellation introduced by Hevelius in 1690, immediately S of Triangulum.

Tranon (tră.nōn; French, trā.nōn), Decree of the. Edict issued by Napoleon I at the Grand Tranon, 1810, placing an import duty of 50 percent on colonial products.

Tranon, Grand. Palace at Versailles, France, of only one story but considerable length, built by Louis XIV for Madame de Maintenon, and used by later French sovereigns as a private residence.

Tranon, Petit. Neoclassical villa in the park at Versailles, France, built by Louis XV, and closely associated with the memory of Marie Antoinette, whose favorite abode it was. It has two stories over a basement, and tetrastyle Corinthian porticos.

Tranon, Treaty of. Peace treaty after World War I between the Allied powers and Hungary which was signed in the Grand Tranon at Versailles on June 4, 1920. Under the terms of this treaty Rumania received Transylvania and the major part of the Banat of Temesvár, while Yugoslavia got the rest of the Banat and all of Croatia and Slavonia. Hungary ceded to Austria the Burgenland, and to Czechoslovakia Slovakia and some territory along the Carpathian Mountains populated by Ruthenians, and at that time called Carpatho-Russia. Hungary was made liable for reparations and her army was reduced to 35,000 men.

Triassic Period (trī.ās'ik). Geologic age in the first half of the Mesozoic Era. See table at end of Volume III.

Triballi (trib'al'i). Ancient Thracian people who lived between the Haemus and the Danube (today western Bulgaria). They were subdued by Philip II of Macedonia in 339 B.C., and again in 335 B.C. by Alexander the Great. They are last mentioned in historical records during the reign of Diocletian.

Triberg (trī.bērk). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated in the Black Forest, ab. 22 mi. NE of Freiburg im Breisgau: health resort and winter sports center; watchmaking, woodware, and metal manufactures. 4,350 (1947).

Triboci (trī.bō'si). Ancient Germanic tribe, first mentioned by Caesar as in the army of Ariovistus. The Triboci were situated on the middle Rhine, E of the Vosges Mountains, in the region SW of what is now Strasbourg, where they still remained after the defeat of Ariovistus (58 B.C.). They were probably merged ultimately in the Alamanni.

Tribonian (trī.bō'ni.an). [Latin, Tribonianus (trī.bō.ni.ā'nus).] b. in Pamphylia, Asia Minor, about the end of the 5th century A.D.; d. c. 545. Byzantine jurist and official, head of the commission for the codification of the laws under the direction of Justinian. The Code, the Pandects (or Digest), and the Institutes, the great monuments of Roman law, were all prepared by commissions on which he served or which he headed. He was quaestor for many years and as such was one of the objects of the mob's wrath during the Nike riots of 532.

Tricase (trē.kā'zā). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Lecce, near Cape Santa Maria di Leuca, SE of Lecce: agricultural commune; woollen manufactures. Pop. of commune, 10,700 (1936); of town, 6,124 (1936).

Tricca (trik'ā). Ancient name of Trikkala, town.

Trichinopoly (trich.i.nop'ō.li). [Official name, Trichirappalli.] District in Madras state, Union of India, ab. 185 mi. SW of Madras city. The Cauvery River crosses it from W to E. Products include groundnuts, millet, tobacco, and cotton. Capital Trichinopoly; area, 4,329 sq. mi. (1941); pop. 2,194,091 (1941).

Trichinopoly. [Official name, Trichirappalli.] Capital of the district of Trichinopoly, Madras, Union of India, on the Cauvery River, ab. 200 mi. NE of Cape Comorin: major trading center. The city is noted for its picturesque fortress atop a large rock hill. It has manufactures of cigars and textiles. 159,566 (1941).

Trick to Catch the Old One, A. Comedy by Thomas Middleton, printed in 1608.

Tricoups (trē.kō'pēs). See Trikoups.

Tritidentum (trī.den'tum). Latin name of Trent, Italy.

Triennial Act. In English history, an act of Parliament, passed in 1694, which limited the duration of Parliaments to three years, and forbade a period of three years to pass without the summoning of a Parliament. It was superseded by the Septennial Act of 1716.

Trient (tri.ənt'). German name of Trent, Italy.

Trient (trē.ān). Gorges du. Deep gorge in Valais, Switzerland, formed by a stream which unites with the Rhone NW of Martigny. Length, 7½ mi.

Trier (trir; German, trēr). [French, Trèves; English, Treves; Latin, Augusta Treverorum.] City in W. Germany, in the Land (state) of Rhineland-Palatinate, French Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the Moselle River ab. 55 mi. SW of Koblenz, near the borders of Luxembourg, France (Lorraine), and the Saar; marketing center of a wine-producing region, with an important wine trade and wine auctions. It also has a rolling mill, and machine, leather-goods, chemical, furniture, and tobacco manufactures. Trier contains more Roman antiquities than any other city in N Europe. It contains the Porta Nigra, a fortified gate of the 3rd century A.D.; a well-preserved Roman amphitheater of the 2nd century; extensive Roman baths, of the 3rd and 4th centuries (started under Diocletian, completed under Constantine); a Roman basilica, also completed under Constantine. Outstanding among medieval buildings is the Dom (cathedral); it stands on the site of a 4th-century basilica built by Valentinian I, some portions of which are incorporated into the existing 11th-century Romanesque structure; the vaulting dates from the 13th century; interior decorations are in the baroque style of the 18th century. Other notable structures are the Church of Our Lady, of the 13th century, a fine example of the early Gothic style, but largely ruined in World War II; the 12th-century Benedictine Abbey of Saint Matthew, also severely damaged; the Holy Cross Chapel of the 11th century; the Trinity Church of the 12th-13th centuries; the Church of Saint Paul, erected (1740-45) according to designs by Balthasar Neumann. The electoral castle is a Renaissance structure of the 17th century, with baroque additions of the 18th century. Trier was in ancient times a sacred place of the tribe of the Treveri. It was a residence of the Roman emperors in the 3rd and 4th centuries, and fell into the hands of the Franks in the 5th century. The archbishopric, based on a bishopric of an older date, was renewed by Charlemagne; the archbishops, as territorial sovereigns, were among the top-ranking prince-electors of medieval Germany. This sovereignty was overthrown by the French revolution; city and territory belonged to France (1799-1814), and afterward to Prussia. A bishopric was reestablished in 1821. The exhibit of the "Holy Coat" (a relic, said to have been worn by Jesus, kept in the cathedral) in 1844 drew more than one million pilgrims to Trier; the latest exhibit, drawing about two million pilgrims, took place in 1933. After World War I, the city was occupied (1918-30) by American and French troops; in World War II, American troops entered on March 1-2, 1945. Karl Marx was born here. The population decreased 28.1 percent in the period 1939-46. Pop. 63,420 (1946), 75,526 (1950).

Triermain (trir.mān). The Bridal of. See Bridal of Triermain, The.

Trieste (tri.ēst'; Italian, trē.es'tā). [German, Triest; Serbo-Croatian, Trst; ancient names, Artemidorus, Tergeste.] Principal city of the Free Territory of Trieste, situated near the head of the Adriatic Sea, on the Gulf of Trieste, E of Venice: seaport, with docks and shipyards; blast furnaces, oil mills, soap factories, jute manufactures, and distilleries; construction industries (however, wholesale and transit trade are more important than industry). 275,158 (1948).

Commerce. Until 1918 the chief seaport for the countries of the Hapsburg empire, it retained a somewhat diminished importance between the two world wars. It remained, however, the seat of numerous banking institutions and of shipping lines (Lloyd Triestino, Cosulich, Navigazione Libera Triestina).

Chief Buildings. Trieste has a university, and many other cultural institutions. There are Roman architectural remains (theater, aqueduct); Cathedral of San Giusto (14th century); Church of Santa Maria Maggiore (1627-82); Church of Sant' Antonio da Padova (1827-47), in Greek style. These and other buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II.

History. Trieste became a Roman colony under Augustus, was a free city in the 13th and 14th centuries, and was under Hapsburg rule from 1382 to 1918, with a brief interruption during French occupation (1809-14). It was ceded to Italy by the treaty of St.-Germain in 1919, and was the capital (1919-45) of the province of Trieste, in the region of Venezia Giulia. The population of the city is predominantly Slavic (although that of the territory as a whole is ab. 2½ Italian).

Trieste, Free Territory of. Free territory in S Europe, bounded on the N by Italy, on the E and S by Yugoslavia, and on the W by the Gulf of Trieste and the Gulf of Panzano, parts of the Adriatic Sea. The northern zone of occupation, including the city of Trieste, is garrisoned by British and American troops; the southern zone is occupied by Yugoslav troops. The territory was set up by the Big Four foreign ministers' council under the terms of the peace treaty with Italy of Feb. 10, 1947. The statute provides that the territory shall be demilitarized and neutral. A free port was established. In 1948 the U.S., Great Britain, and France sought the approval of the U.S.S.R. for the territory's return to Italy; no agreement was reached. Area, 287 sq. mi.; pop. of British-American Zone, 300,000 (est. 1949); of Yugoslav Zone, 75,000 (est. 1949). (For economic and historical information, see the entry on the city of Trieste.)

Trieste, Gulf of. [Italian, Golfo di Trieste.] Arm of the Adriatic Sea, on which Trieste is situated, N of Istria.

Trifanum (tri.fā'nūm). Battle of. Decisive victory in the Latin War, gained by the Romans at Trifanum (between Minturnae and Suessa Aurunca, in Italy), over the Latins and Campanians, c338 B.C.

Trifels (tri.fēls). Ruined imperial fortress near Annweiler, in the Rhineland-Palatinate, Germany. It was a resort of the medieval emperors. Richard I of England (Richard the Lion-Hearted) was imprisoned there in 1193.

"Trifolium" (tri.fō'li.ūm). See MacCarthy, Denis Florence.

Triggiano (tréd.jā'nō). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Bari, ab. 5 mi. SE of Bari; trade in almonds, figs, and olive oil. Pop. of commune, 13,143 (1936); of town, 13,074 (1936).

Triglav (tré.gláv). [German, Terglavi.] Highest summit of the Julian Alps, in NW Yugoslavia, ab. 28 mi. SW of Klagenfurt, Austria. Elevation, ab. 9,594 ft.

Trigo (tré.gō). Felipe. b. in Spain, 1805; d. 1915. Spanish novelist, one of the chief exponents of the erotic novel. Trikkala (tri.kā.lā). [Also, Trikala.] Nomos (department) in NE Greece, in Thessaly. Capital, Trikkala; area, ab. 2,265 sq. mi.; pop. 127,900 (1951).

Trikkala. [Also: Trikala; ancient name, Tricca.] Town in NE Greece, capital of the nomos (department) of Trikkala, situated N of the Salambria (Peneus) River, ab. 33 mi. W of Larissa. 27,890 (1951).

Trikoupis or Tricoupis (tri.kō'pēs), Charilaos. b. at Nauplia, Greece, 1832; d. at Cannes, France, April 11, 1896. Greek statesman; son of Spyridon Trikoupis. He became minister of foreign affairs in 1866, and was premier (1878-79, 1882-85, 1886-90, 1892-93, and 1893-95).

Trikoupis or Tricoupis, Spyridon. b. April 20, 1788; d. 1873. Greek politician, diplomat, historian, and poet. He wrote (1853-57) a history of the Greek War of Independence.

Trilby (tri.lbi'). Novel by George Du Maurier, published in 1894. It deals with artists' life in the Latin Quarter of Paris. It was dramatized (1895) by Paul Potter. Trilby O'Ferrall, the heroine, is by occupation a laundress and also a model in the artists' quarter. She is gay, generous, and friendly, and is famous for the possession of the most beautiful foot in Paris. Her comradeship with the three artists, Taffy, the Laird (a Scotchman), and Little Billee, who all love her more or less, forms the theme of the story. Svengali, a musical genius, gains control of her hypnotically, and by means of this power develops her voice and transforms her into a celebrated prima donna.

Trillo del diavolo (trél'lo del dyá'vó.lō). [Eng. trans., "The Devil's Trill."] Solo violin sonata in G minor by Giuseppe Tartini.

Trim (trím). Pseudonym of Ratisbonne, Louis Fortuné Gustave.

Trim (trím). Corporal. Military servant of Uncle Toby in Laurence Sterne's Tristram Shandy.

Trimachio (tri.má'ki.ō). In the Satiricon of Petronius Arbiter, a rich and ignorant parvenu who gives a feast. An account of this feast forms one of the largest of the fragments of which the work now consists.

Trimberg (trím'berk), Hugo von. See Hugo von Trimberg.

Trimble (trím'bl), Isaac Ridgeway. b. in Culpeper County, Va., May 15, 1802; d. at Baltimore, Jan. 2, 1888. American officer with the Confederate army in the Civil War. Graduated (1822) from West Point, he resigned (1832) from the army, served (1832-61) as a railroad engineer and superintendent, and in 1861 became a brigadier general of Confederate troops. He became (1862) commander of a brigade in the Army of Northern Virginia, took part (1862) in T. J. ("Stonewall") Jackson's Shenandoah Valley campaign, and was promoted (1862) to major general. At Gettysburg he took command of a division on the second day of the battle (July 2, 1863) and on the following day was wounded, losing a leg, and was taken prisoner, not being exchanged until February, 1865.

Trimble, Robert. b. in Augusta County, Va., 1777; d. Aug. 25, 1828. American jurist, associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1826-28).

Trimmed Lamp, The. Collection of stories by William Sydney Porter under the pseudonym O. Henry, published in 1907.

Trimmers (trím'érz). In English politics, a party (c1680-90) which followed Sir George Savile, Marquis of Halifax, in "trimming" (that is to say, adjusting their course) between the Whigs and the Tories.

Trimountain (trí'moun'tān). Original name of Boston, Mass.

Trimurti (trí.mŏr'tē). Hindu triad, consisting of Brahma as the creator, Vishnu as the preserver, and Shiva as the destroyer. This is regarded as a threefold manifestation of the one supreme spirit.

Trinacria (tri.nā'kri.ā). Old name of Sicily, referring to the three promontories Pachynus, Pelorus, and Lilybaeum.

Trincalo (trín'ká.lō) or Trinculo (trín'kū.lō). Farmer, the principal character in Thomas Tomkiss's Albionus.

Trincomalee (trín'kō.mā.lē). [Also, Trincomallé.] Seaport in Ceylon, on the NE coast ab. 145 mi. NE of Colombo. It was taken by the British from the Dutch in 1795. Pop. 10,160 (1931).

Trinculo (trín'kū.lō). Jester, a character in The Tempest by Shakespeare.

Trinec (tér.shē'nets). [Polish, Trzynieć.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Ostrava, in E Moravia, situated on the Olša River near the Polish border, S of Český Těšín and SE of Ostrava: iron foundry and blast furnaces. 14,716 (1947).

Tring (trín). Urban district and market town in SE England, in Hertfordshire, situated on the Grand Union Canal ab. 5 mi. NW of Berkhamsted, ab. 34 mi. NW of London by rail. Tring is on the route through which Watling Street, an old Roman road, crossed the Chiltern Hills. 5,018 (1951).

Trinidad (trín'í.dad; Spanish, trē.nē.ɾi'ɲán). Capital of Beni department, in N Bolivia, once the most celebrated Jesuit mission town of the Madeira valley. The region produces bananas, cacao, cattle, cotton, and sugar. 10,759 (1950).

Trinidad (trín'í.dad). City in S Colorado, capital of Las Animas County: shipping point for coal; manufactures of brick, tile, and sheet metal. 12,204 (1950).

Trinidad (trín'í.dad; Spanish, trē.nē.ɾi'ɲán). City on the S coast of Cuba, in Las Villas province: agricultural center. Founded in 1514, it is the site of Cortés's home. 15,453 (1943).

Trinidad. City in SW Uruguay, capital of Flores department: agricultural produce. Pop. ab. 15,700.

Trinidad Mountains. [Spanish, Sierra de Trinidad.] Mountain range in C Cuba, bordering the Caribbean Sea. It attains an elevation of ab. 3,300 ft.

Trinitapoli (trē.nē.tā'pō.lē). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Foggia, situated S of the Gulf of Manfredonia, ab. 30 mi. E of Foggia: agricultural trade center; sea salt, olive oil, grain, and wine are exported. Pop. of commune, 12,424 (1936); of town, 11,805 (1936).

Trinity (trín'iti). Small seaport on the E coast of Newfoundland, Canada, on the W side of Trinity Bay, ab. 57 mi. NW of St. John's, with which it is connected by rail and road.

Trinity, the. [Also, the Holy Trinity.] In the doctrine of many Christians, God considered as three persons, namely the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit (or Holy Ghost). Most Christians are trinitarians; a minority who reject this doctrine are known as unitarians. The formulation in the Athanasian Creed, accepted by all Christian trinitarians, is precise: "The Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Spirit is God, and yet there are not three Gods but one God." All Christian trinitarians further believe that the Son is begotten of the Father, and that the Holy Spirit, or Holy Ghost, proceeds from the Father, or from the Father and from the Son; yet the three Persons are coeternal and in all the attributes of deity equal, alike uncreated and alike omnipotent. The Father is thought of especially as the Creator, the Son as the Redeemer, and the Holy Ghost as the Enlightener and Sanctifier, yet each is to the full all of these. This, theologians say, is the central doctrine of Christianity, and to reveal it to man was the chief purpose for which God the Son took human form and abode for a time on earth. The idea of a divine incarnation is also widespread in many religions, but only the Christian creed, in this respect common to Roman Catholics, Orthodox Catholics of the several Eastern Churches, and the majority of Protestants, inseparably fuses the trinitarian concept and the belief in a divine incarnation; this is the necessary foundation of faith in the divinity of Jesus Christ. The difficulties, to the human mind, of the doctrine of the Trinity are such that theologians pronounce it a mystery, not to be understood by human intelligence, but to be accepted by faith. For some centuries of the Christian era these difficulties were the occasion of numerous schisms, occasioning controversies which sometimes passed from words to violence. There were those who taught that the three divine persons were merely three aspects of God, and those who held that Jesus only took on the appearance of incarnation, without participating in human nature; other heresies approached tritheism, that is to say the idea of three equal but distinct Gods. The early ecumenical councils steadily reinforced the trinitarian concept and the doctrine of the divinity of Jesus, but the question whether the Holy Ghost proceeds from God the Father alone, or from the Father and from the Son, remained bitterly controversial, and led to the great schism between the Eastern Churches, holding the former view, and the Western, committed to the latter. Thus the problems involved in the concept of the unity of the three divine persons is the chief cause of disunity in Christendom. The doctrine of the Trinity did not begin to take explicit form until late in the 2nd century; Theophilus first used the Greek term Triad to express it, about the year 180; and Tertullian at nearly the same time used the Latin term Trinitas for the same purpose. The doctrine is nowhere expressly laid down in the New Testament, but it is implied very strongly indeed in the reported last words of Jesus before the Ascension (Matt. xxviii. 19), "Going therefore, teach ye all nations; baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The use here of the singular, "name," rather than the plural, "names," has an obvious significance. All of the passages in the Gospels, moreover, in which Jesus is understood to assert or strongly to imply his divinity, and those in which he promises that the Holy Ghost will come to the apostles after his departure and will sustain the Church, are also considered to support this doctrine.

Trinity Bay. Large bay on the E side of Newfoundland, deeply indenting the coast and nearly cutting off the Avalon Peninsula. It is separated from Placentia Bay on the S coast by a narrow isthmus.

Trinity Church. Church (Episcopalian) at Boston, designed by Henry Hobson Richardson, founded in 1873 and consecrated in 1877. The building is cruciform, 160 by 120 ft., in the Romanesque style of Auvergne, the masonry exhibiting inlaid patterns in stone of different colors. The transepts have triple windows, and the front, with an arched loggia, is flanked by towers. The chief feature of the church is the imposing central tower, which has square openings below and arcades above, with cylindrical turrets at the angles and a pyramidal tiled roof 211 ft. high, broken by picturesque dormers. The interior is ornamented with mural paintings by John La Farge and other artists.

Trinity Church. One of the oldest religious foundations (Episcopalian) in New York City, though the present building dates only from 1846. Designed by Richard Upjohn, it is an example in brown stone of the English Perpendicular style, with square chevet, without transepts, and with an effective tower and spire, 284 ft. high, at the east end, which is the front. The richly sculptured reredos and the bronze doors are artistically notable.

Trinity College. See also Dublin, University of.

Trinity College. Largest college of Cambridge University, England, founded by Henry VIII in 1546 by the union of several older foundations. The beautiful gateway on the street is mainly of the time of Henry VIII. The great court, 340 by 280 ft., is bounded on the north by the chapel and on the west by the hall. The chapel is of the Tudor period, with fine woodcarving and portrait sculptures. The cloister court is arched on three sides and on the fourth is bounded by the handsome classical library built by Christopher Wren. There are several other comparatively modern courts.

Trinity College. College of Oxford University, England, founded by Sir Thomas Pope in 1554 upon the site of an old college of the priors of Durham which had been founded in 1286. The Renaissance chapel, built in 1694, has a plain exterior with large round-arched windows, and possesses a fine altarpiece and a beautiful carved screen.

Trinity Hall. College of Cambridge University, England, founded in 1350, originally occupied chiefly by students of law.

Trinity House, Corporation of. English corporation, first chartered in 1514, charged with various naval matters, especially with erecting lighthouses and similar aids to navigation.

Trinity River. Tributary of the Klamath River in NW California. Length, ab. 130 mi.

Trinity River. River in Texas, flowing into Galveston Bay. Length, ab. 360 mi.

Trinity Sunday. Roman Catholic holy day falling on the first Sunday after Pentecost and honoring the Trinity.

Trinkitat (trɪŋ.kɪ.tāt). Small port on the Red Sea, in Kassala province, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, ab. 38 mi. NE of Tokar and S of Port Sudan; an important strategic point in the Sudanese campaign of 1884.

Trino (trē'nō). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Vercelli, between Milan and Turin; produces rice, corn, hemp, and cattle; has cement works. Pop. of commune, 10,702 (1936); of town, 8,638 (1936).

Trinovant (trɪn'v.ənt). See under Troyonvont.

Trinovantes (trɪ.nō.van'tez). [Also, Trinobantes (-ban't-).] Ancient non-Belgic people of SE Britain, formerly living in what is now Essex. They sided with Julius Caesar against the Belgic settlers already in Britain, but later Caesar resumed his attacks against them, and they were finally annexed by Caesar's son c10 A.D. Their chief town was on the site of modern Colchester.

Trinummus (trɪ.num'us). Comedy by Plautus.

Trion (trɪ'ɒn). Town in NW Georgia, in Chattooga County; manufactures of textiles and gloves. 3,028 (1950).

Trionfo di Dori (trē.ɒn'fō dē dō'rē). II. Collection of madrigals, published (1592) at Venice. The book contains 29 pieces, each by a different Italian composer.

Trisoon (trɪ.ə.zōn), Anne Louis Girodet-. See Girodet-Trisoon, Anne Louis.

Tripartite Chronicle. Historical poem by John Gower.

Tripartite Pact. Agreement signed by Germany, Italy, and Japan on Sept. 27, 1940, at Berlin. Recognizing Japan's plans for a "Greater East Asia" and the supremacy of Germany and Italy in the "new order of Europe," the powers promised assistance to each other in case of attack by any power not then at war. Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Slovakia, and Croatia later acceded to this agreement, to which in January, 1943, was added an agreement on economic cooperation.

Triphylia (trɪ.fɪl'i.ə). See under ancient Elis.

Triptaka (tri.pit'a.kə). [Pali, Tipitaka; Eng. trans., "Three Baskets."] Collection of sacred writings of the southern or Mahayana Buddhists, divided into three divisions or "baskets" expounding the canon. The word piṭaka was applied to these divisions because the palm leaves on which they were written were kept in baskets. The first is the Vinaya-piṭaka or Rules of Discipline for Buddhist monks and nuns; the second is the Sutta-piṭaka or Basket of Sermons, full of aphorisms and parables to reach the lay mind; the third is the Abhidhamma-piṭaka or Basket of Metaphysics, which is concerned with the analytic study of consciousness. A list in detail of the several treatises included in each of these divisions may be found in Rhys Davids's Buddhism (1886) and in Christian Humphreys's Buddhism (1951).

Triple Alliance. In European history: 1. League between England, Sweden, and the Netherlands, formed in 1668 and designed to check French aggressions under Louis XIV. 2. League between France, Great Britain, and the Netherlands, formed in 1717 and directed chiefly against Spain. After it was joined by Austria in 1718, it was known as the Quadruple Alliance. 3. Alliance between Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy, formed in 1883 and designed to check Russia and also France. It was chiefly the creation of Bismarck. By its provisions the three powers were bound to support one another in certain contingencies. Its influence succeeded to that of the League of the Three Emperors (the German, Austrian, and Russian), which was also largely the creation of Bismarck. It was renewed in June, 1902, and in December, 1912.

Triple Alliance, War of the. [Also called the Paraguayan War.] War waged (1865-70) between Paraguay on one side and Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay on the other. In 1864-65 Brazil had a short war with Uruguay which ended in the downfall of the government of the latter country, Venancio Flores assuming the presidency. Francisco Solano López, president of Paraguay, protested against the interference of Brazil in the affairs of Uruguay, and commenced the war by seizing a Brazilian passenger steamer at Asunción (November, 1864) and invading Mato Grosso (December-January, 1864-65). Early in 1865 he sent a force across Argentine territory against the Brazilian province of Rio Grande do Sul; subsequently he seized Argentine merchantmen, and on April 14, 1865, occupied Corrientes, taking two Argentine war vessels. On June 11 the Paraguayan flotilla was nearly annihilated in a combat with the Brazilian squadron at Riachuelo, below Corrientes. Argentina declared war on Paraguay on April 6; and on May 1 the triple offensive and defensive alliance between Brazil, the Argentine, and Uruguay was signed at Buenos Aires. The emperor of Brazil and presidents Bartolomé Mitre and Flores took personal part in the campaign in Rio Grande do Sul; the Paraguayans who had invaded that province were besieged at Uruguai, and surrendered (6,000 men) Sept. 18, 1865. On Oct. 25 Corrientes was occupied by the Allies, who, after some fighting, crossed the Paraná River into Paraguay, in April, 1866. The most important of the subsequent operations were near the Paraguay River, and especially at Humaitá and Curupaity, where López had strong fortifications. The Paraguayans were defeated at Estero Bellaco (May 2, 1866) and Tuyutí (May 24), and the war subsequently became one of devastation of Paraguay by the Allies. López was forced into the N part of Paraguay, and was defeated and killed at the Aquidaban River. A small Brazilian army had operated in Mato Grosso, but its movements, from a military point of view, were unimportant. The Allies were commanded successively by Mitre, Francisco de Lima e Silva, and the Count d'Eu (Prince Louis Philippe d'Orléans).

Triple Entente. Unwritten accord between France, Russia, and Great Britain, formed at the beginning of the 20th century and designed to offset the power of the Triple Alliance (Germany, Austria, Italy).

Tripoli (trip'ô.li). Former vilayet of the Turkish Empire, situated along the coast of N Africa, bounded by Tunisia on the NW and by the desert on the W and S; roughly equivalent to the ancient colony of Tripolis; later Tripolitania. The capital was Tripoli. Conquered by the Turks in the middle of the 16th century, it became a seat of Barbary pirates, secured its independence in 1714, was reconquered by Turkey in 1835, later included Cyrenaica and Fezzan also (i.e., most of Libya), and was annexed by Italy in 1912.

Tripoli. [Arabic, Tarabulus al Gharb; ancient name, Oea.] Seaport in N Africa, a capital (with Bengasi) of Libya. It is the starting point of three short railways, one running to the E, one to the W, and one to the S; it is also the terminus of several roads fanning out to various parts of the area, and is on the road paralleling the Mediterranean Sea for the entire length of the country. In World War II it was occupied by the Germans and captured by the British Eighth Army. It has some foreign trade, and is the starting point of caravans for the interior. It was formerly a pirate stronghold. 108,240 (1938).

Tripolis (trip'ô.lis). [Also: Tripolitis, Tripolitza (trê-pô.l'et'sâ).] Town in S Greece, capital of the nomos (department) of Arcadia, situated on the Peloponnesus, ab. 24 mi. NE of Nauplia; manufactures of leather articles and tapestries. 17,675 (1951).

Tripolitania (trip'ô.li.tân'ya, -tân'ni.a). [Ancient names: Tripolis, Regio Syrtica, Tripolitana (-tân'ni.a).] Territory of Libya, in N Africa, one of the three United Nations trust territories formed (1949) out of the former Italian colony of Libya, which since 1951 has been an independent monarchy. It is bounded on the W by Tunisia, on the N by the Mediterranean Sea, on the E by Cyrenaica (former British trust territory), and on the S by Fezzan (formerly under French administration). The coastal region, anciently (as Tripolis) a possession of Carthage, came under Roman rule, first as the Regio Syrtica, later as Tripolitana. Conquered by the Arabs in the 7th century and by the Turks in the middle of the 16th century, it became a seat of Barbary pirates and (as Tripoli) virtually an independent state in 1714. After the Turkish reconquest in 1835, Cyrenaica and Fezzan also came under control of the vilayet of Tripoli before their cession (1912) to Italy as part of the colony of Libya. Tripolitania came under British administration in 1942 and under the kingdom of Libya in 1951. The area exports agricultural products such as olives, dates, wine, and citrus fruits. Three short railway lines radiate from Tripoli, and good roads connect this city with other points in the territory. Capital, Tripoli; area, ab. 105,000 sq. mi.; pop. 796,900 (est. 1950).

Tripolitan War (tri-pol'i.tân). War (1801-05) between the U.S. and Tripoli; the first phase of the hostilities against the Barbary pirates. War was declared by Tripoli June 10, 1801, because the U.S. refused to increase its payment for immunity from the depredations of the Tripolitan corsairs. In anticipation of this event, however, the U.S. had already sent a squadron to the Mediterranean. In October, 1803, the frigate Philadelphia, while chasing a corsair into the harbor of Tripoli, struck a sunken rock and was captured by the Tripolitans; she was burned by Stephen Decatur on Feb. 16, 1804. In July, 1804, Commodore Edward Preble began a series of only partly successful attacks on the harbor fortifications, the fifth and last of which was made in the following September. A land expedition under William Eaton finally induced Tripoli to conclude peace on June 4, 1805.

Tripolitan War. Conflict (1911-12) between Italy and Turkey, begun during the Agadir crisis, with tacit support of Italy by the European powers. It was an Italian effort to gain Tripoli, Rhodes, and the Dodecanese Islands. Italy was successful in this, particularly after the Serbs, Bulgars, and Montenegrins made war on Turkey also. In S Tripoli the Turks held out against the Italians. The peace treaty provided for Italian evacuation of Rhodes and the Dodecanese after pacification of Tripoli.

Tripolye (trê-pô.lye). Archaeological site near Kiev, in the Ukraine. Here were found evidences of late Stone Age culture, with some copper and some painted pottery. It dates from c2400 to 1600 B.C.

Trippenmekker (trip'en.mä.kër), Heinrich. Original name of Heinrich Aldegrever.

Trip to Calais (ka.lä', kal'ä, kal'is). A. Play by Samuel Foote, in which he undertook to ridicule (as the character Lady Kitty Crocodile) the notorious Duchess of Kingston (Elizabeth Chudleigh Pierrepont). She secured the prohibition of the play, and he altered it and produced it as The Capuchin; but his health broke down under an indictment for criminal assault, procured by an agent of the duchess, and he died not long after.

Triptolemus (trip.tol'ê.mus). In Greek mythology, a favorite of Demeter. He was considered to be the inventor of the plow and a patron of agriculture. He was honored in the Eleusinian mysteries as an agricultural figure. His symbol was an ear of wheat.

Trip to Scarborough (skär'bur'ô, -bër'ô). A. Alteration by Richard Brinsley Sheridan of Sir John Vanbrugh's The Relapse (1696), produced in 1777.

Tripura (trê.pô'ra). [Former name, Hill Tippera.] State in E Union of India, formerly part of Bengal, since 1949 centrally administered. It borders on East Pakistan on the S, N, and W, and on Assam on the E. Capital, Agartala; area, 4,049 sq. mi.; pop. 649,930 (1951).

Triratna (trê.rut'na). In Buddhism, literally, "the three jewels." The Triratna is the Buddhist triad consisting of the Buddha, his gospel (dharma), and his disciples (sangha), i.e., organized religious communities. In Mahayana Buddhism, this trinity is sometimes metaphysically regarded as the absolute, the relative, and the balance between the two.

Trissino (trê.sê'nô), Giovanni Giorgio. b. at Vicenza, Italy, July 8, 1478; d. in December, 1550. Italian lyric, epic, and dramatic poet and scholar. He was sent as ambassador to Emperor Maximilian I by Pope Leo X, and acted as nuncio to Charles V and the republic of Venice for Pope Clement VII. His Sofonisba is regarded as the first neoclassical tragedy of modern literature.

Trissotin (trê.sô.tân). Pedant in Molière's Les Femmes savantes, intended to ridicule the Abbé Cotin.

Trist (trist), Nicholas Philip. b. at Charlottesville, Va., June 2, 1800; d. at Alexandria, Va., Feb. 11, 1874. American lawyer and diplomat. He served (1833-41) as U.S. consul at Havana. In 1847 he was dispatched to Mexico as a special agent to negotiate a peace treaty, and although he was officially recalled (November, 1847), he remained at his post and signed (Feb. 2, 1848) the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, ultimately accepted by the U.S. and Mexican governments, which brought the Mexican War to a close. He was named (1870) U.S. postmaster at Alexandria, Va.

Tristan (tris'tân, -tân). [Also: Tristans (-tâns, -tanz), Tristant (-tânt, -tant), Tristanz (-tânz, -tanz), Tristran (-trâm), Tristran (-tran), Tristrant (-trant), Tristranz (-tranz), Tristrem (-trem), Tritan, Tritans, Tritanz, Trustran, Trystan, Trystan, Trystrem, Trystren.] Hero of a body of medieval legend and romance of whom the original was Drust, son of an 8th-century king of the Picts. His native land was Looisio (later Lothian, in Scotland) which Malory corrupted into Lyonesse. His story passed from Scotland into Wales, where Drust became Drydan or Trystan, the lover of Eyllt, the wife of King Mar. Fragments of this old Welsh version survive in a 16th-century text, Ystoria Tristan. From Wales to Cornwall was a not illogical step, and Cornish conteurs localized the legend around the castle of Tintagel. From Cornwall the legend passed into Brittany and was known there as early as 1000 A.D. Breton conteurs greatly influenced the material, and it became the popular property of French troubadours. The second Isolt, whom Tristan married in Brittany, is taken from a famous Arabic romance popular in Europe in the Middle Ages (which conteur first added this material is unknown). The amalgamation of ancient Celtic legend and Arabic romance plus the coloring of the French cult of courtly love gave the world one of its immortal and best-known love stories. The countless oral versions of the tale recited by Welsh, Norman, Breton, and German conteurs cannot be estimated. The earliest extant version is the Anglo-Norman Roman de Tristan par Thomas written in the late 12th century for Eleanor, wife of Henry II. A Norse monk translated this text in 1226 for the king of Norway. A condensed and inferior English version, Sir Tristram, was made c1300. The Tristan und Isolde of Gottfried von Strassburg was based on the Anglo-Norman narrative. Eventually the Tristan legend became attached to the Arthurian cycle and the story can be found in full in Malory's Morte d'Arthur. It is best known to modern readers through Swinburne's Tristan of Lyonesse, Tennyson's The Last Tournament, Matthew Arnold's Tristan and Iselt, Wagner's opera Tristan und Isolde, Maurice Hewlett's Forest Lovers (based on Malory), and E. A. Robinson's Tristan.

"Tristan." See Teitgen, Pierre Henri.

Tristan da Cunha (tris'tan dā kōn'ya). Small group of islands in the South Atlantic Ocean, midway between the Cape of Good Hope and South America. It is a British possession, administered as a dependency of St. Helena, and including Tristan, Gough, Inaccessible, and Nightingale islands. The chief island of the group consists of an extinct volcano rising to a height of ab. 7,640 ft. with a circumference of 21 mi. The original inhabitants were mainly shipwrecked sailors. In 1942 Tristan was commissioned as H.M.S. Atlantic Isle and is now an important radio and weather station. 230 (1945).

Tristan l'Ermite (trēs'tān ler.mēt). Louis, b. in Flanders early in the 15th century; d. c1477. French officer, provost of Louis XI of France. As agent for the king in punishing those who opposed the royal power, he became infamous for his cruelty.

Tristan und Isolde (tris'tān ūnt ē-zōl'dē). Metrical romance by Gottfried von Strassburg, written c1210, and based on the Anglo-Norman Roman de Tristan par Thomas. Gottfried von Strassburg's poem is regarded by many scholars as the finest narrative romance of the Middle Ages. Richard Wagner's opera followed Gottfried's version.

Tristan und Isolde. Opera in three acts by Richard Wagner, first produced at Munich on June 10, 1865. The work contains the well-known love duet and the final Liebestod.

Tristram of Lyonesse (tris'tram; li'ones'), Sir. One of the most celebrated knights of the Round Table in Malory's Morte d'Arthur. His love for Isolde, the wife of King Mark of Cornwall, forms the main theme of the story. He was born in the open country, where his mother, who died shortly after, was in great sorrow; hence she gave him the name Tristram, analogous with triste, meaning "sorrowful."

Tristram Shandy (shan'di). Novel (9 vols., 1760-67) by Laurence Sterne. It is named after its hero. The first volume introduces Walter Shandy and his brother the Captain (Uncle Toby), Slop, and Yorick. Corporal Trim is prominent in the second volume; the third and fourth contain a good deal on the subject of noses and Slawkenbergius; the sixth contains the episode of Le Fèvre; and the Widow Wadman is introduced in the eighth.

Tristram (tris'tram). Romantic poem by Eilhard von Oeverge, written in the last half of the 12th century.

Trita (trē'ta). Vedic wind god appearing in connection with the Maruts and Vayu, and sometimes identified with Indra. Combats with demons and the dragon are ascribed to him.

Tritan (trē'tan) or Tritans (trē'tāns) or Tritanz (trē'tānz). See Tristan.

Triton (trī'ton). In Greek mythology, a gigantic son of Poseidon and Amphitrite who dwelt at the bottom of the sea. In the later mythology Tritons appear as a class of minor sea deities, figuring with Nereids in the train of the greater sea gods. They were conceived as having human figures from the waist up combined with those of fish from the waist down. A common attribute of the Tritons is a shell-trumpet, which they blow to raise or calm storms.

Triumph, Arch of. See Arc de Triomphe.

Triumpho (trī.ōm'fō), Baron of. Title of Andrade Neves, José Joaquim de.

Triumph of Caesar (sē'zar), The. Series of nine paintings in tempera, each nine feet square, by Mantegna, in Hampton Court Palace, England. Caesar advances in a chariot, attended by a train of soldiers, captives, and trophies.

Triumph of Christianity, The. See Artilla, or The Triumph of Christianity.

Triumph of Death, The. Fresco in the Campo Santo, Pisa, formerly ascribed to Andrea Orcagna, but now usually to Francesco Traini, of whom little is known. It is an allegory contrasting worldly pomp and delight with their annihilation in death and with the outcome in a future existence. The painting was damaged by fire during World War II.

Triumph of Galatea (gal.ə.tē'a). Fresco by Raphael (1514), in the Villa Farnesina, Rome. Galatea, lightly draped, is drawn over the tranquil sea by dolphins, attended by nymphs and sea gods. Cupids in the air above are piercing with their arrows members of her train.

Triumph of the Egg, The. Collection (1921) of stories (subtitled A Book of Impressions from American Life in Tales and Poems) by Sherwood Anderson.

Triumph of Venice (ven'is). Fresco painting by Paolo Veronese, in the middle of the ceiling of the Sala del Maggior Consiglio of the ducal palace at Venice.

Triumphs of Oriana (ōri.an'a), The. See Oriana, The Triumphs of.

Triumvirate, First. In Roman history, an agreement or alliance formed in 60 B.C. between Julius Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus, for the purpose of dividing the power among them. Caesar obtained the consulship for the next year (59) and a command in Cisalpine Gaul (extended to Transalpine Gaul) and Illyricum for five years (extended for five years more). Pompey received for his veterans assignments of lands, and for himself later the commission-ship of corn supplies. By a renewal of the league at Luca in 55, Pompey received the consulship and command in Spain, and Crassus the consulship and command in the East (where he was killed in 53). The union between Caesar and Pompey was formally broken by the civil war in 49 B.C.

Triumvirate, Second. In Roman history, an alliance formed in 43 B.C. between Augustus, Mark Antony, and Lepidus, on an island in the Reno River, near Bologna. The triumvirs were to have consular powers for three years; they appointed magistrates, and their decrees were valid as laws. Augustus received Africa and the islands; Mark Antony, Gaul; Lepidus, Spain and Narbonensis. The alliance was followed by a wholesale proscription, and by the overthrow of the republicans under Brutus and Cassius in 42. Lepidus was soon reduced to a minor position, and eventually banished. By a treaty at Brundisium, Augustus received the West and Mark Antony the East. The union was broken in 31, and Mark Antony was overthrown in the battle of Actium.

Trivet (trī'vet), Nicholas. [Also, Trevet.] b. c1258; d. c1328. English chronicler, author of Annales sex Regum Angliae qui a Comitibus Andegavensibus originem traierunt, a history covering the years 1136-1307. A Dominican friar, he was the writer also of many theological and philosophical works.

Trivia, or the Art of Walking the Streets of London (triv'i.ə; lun'don). Burlesque poem by John Gay, published in 1716.

Trivulzio (trī.vōl'tsvō), Cristina di. See Belgioioso, Principessa di.

Trnava (tēr'nā.vā). [German, Tyrnau; Hungarian, Nagyszombat.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Bratislava, in W Slovakia, situated in a fertile plain E of the Carpathian Mountains, NW of Bratislava. It is an important railroad junction and a commercial center. 24,226 (1947).

Trnovo (tēr'nō.vō). [Also: Tarnovo, Tirnov, Tŭrnovo.] Town in NW Bulgaria, in the department of Pleven, situated on the N slope of the Balkan Mountains, ab. 35 mi. SE of Pleven; railroad station; weaving mills; tanneries; silkworm culture. It was a Roman fortress, the capital of Bulgaria (1186-1193), and held by the Turks (1394-1877). Here in 1879 met the assembly which formed a new constitution and chose Alexander of Battenberg as ruler of Bulgaria. On Oct. 5, 1908, the independent kingdom of Bulgaria was proclaimed here. 16,182 (1946).

Troas (trō'as). See Alexandria Troas.

Trobrland (trō'bri.land; French, trobr.ēr.ān), Philippe Regis de. b. at Tours, France, June 4, 1816; d. at Bayport, Long Island, N.Y., July 15, 1897. French-American officer, journalist, and author. He emigrated to the U.S. in 1841, was editor and proprietor (1849-50) of the Revue du Nouveau Monde at New York, and was joint editor (1854-61) of the Courrier des Etats-Unis. He commanded a brigade of the Union 2nd army corps in the engagements at Deep Bottom, Petersburg, Hatcher's Run, and Five Forks, and was at the head of a division in the final operations against Richmond. Author of Quatre ans de compagnons à l'Armée du Potomac (1867).

Trobrid Islands. Group of small, low islands off the E tip of New Guinea. They are inhabited by Melanesians whose culture suggests Polynesian influence. The islands have become widely known through the writings of Bronislaw Malinowski, whose field work there developed his "functional" point of view, a view which has greatly influenced cultural anthropology.

Trocadero (trō.kā.dā.rō). Square in Paris, on the right bank of the Seine, opposite the Champ-de-Mars.

Trocadero (trō.kā.dā.rō). Fort near Cádiz, Spain, taken by the French on Aug. 31, 1823.

Trocadero, El. See under Puerto Real, Spain.

Trochu (trō.shū), Louis Jules. b. at Palais, Morbihan, France, May 12, 1815; d. at Tours, France, Oct. 7, 1896. French general. He served in Algeria, in the Crimean War, and in the Italian war of 1859. He was appointed governor of Paris in August, 1870, became a member of the government of national defense, and was charged with the defense of Paris in September, 1870. He resigned in January, 1871, rather than surrender the city, was a deputy (1871-72), and resigned from the army in 1873. He wrote L'Armée française en 1867 and several works in defense of his policies.

Troels-Lund (trōls'lun'). Troels Frederik. [Also, Troels Frederik Lund.] b. at Copenhagen, Sept. 5, 1840; d. there, Feb. 12, 1921. Danish historian, whose 14-volume Dagligt Liv i Norden i det 16. Aarhundrede (Daily Life in Scandinavia in the 16th Century) was an epoch-making study of social and cultural conditions during the Renaissance.

Troeltsch (trēlch), Ernst. b. at Augsburg, Germany, Feb. 17, 1865; d. at Berlin, Feb. 1, 1923. German historian, professor of theology and philosophy, and sociologist. Inspired by Max Weber's studies in the sociology of religion, he made a significant empirical investigation into the social origins of the Christian church. This work culminated in his masterpiece The Social Teaching of the Christian Churches (translated 1931 from Vol. I of Gesammelte Schriften, 1912).

Troezen (trō'zen). In ancient geography, a city in the Peloponnesus, Greece, situated near the coast, ab. 39 mi. SW of Athens. It was originally an Ionian settlement, but later became Doric. It took an active part in the Persian Wars, and sided later with Sparta.

Trogir (trō'gir). [German, Trau; Italian, Traù; Latin, Tragurium.] Town and township in W Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Croatia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Primorska, situated on an island adjacent to the Dalmatian coast, W of Split. A bridge connects the old portion of the town with the new part. Architecturally, the old town is one of the most beautiful and interesting in Dalmatia. It contains many churches, bell towers, fortifications, and other monuments of Venetian origin. The Cathedral of San Lorenzo, dating mainly from the 13th century, is considered an outstanding example of Romanesque art, while the bell tower is in the Renaissance style. Founded by the Greeks, the town later came under the successive rule of the Romans, the Goths, and the Byzantines; subsequently it was invaded by Avars and Slavs. It accepted Venetian sovereignty around the year 1000 but later changed hands between the Hungarians and the Venetians. From 1409 to 1797 it was uninterruptedly in Venetian hands. Later it became Austrian and shared the fate of all Dalmatia during the 19th and 20th centuries. 23,525 (1931).

Trogus (trō'gus), Gnaeus (or Cneius) Pompeius. fl. c10 A.D. Roman historian, author of a general history, Historiae Philippicae, partly preserved in an epitome by Justin. Written in an elaborate narrative style, the work may have been based on Timagenes.

Troia (trō'ya). A Latin name of ancient Troy.

Troil (troil), Magnus. Udalor or magnate of Zetland in Sir Walter Scott's novel The Pirate. His daughters Minna and Brenda are the principal female characters.

Troilus (trō'lus, trō'ylus). In Greek legend, a son of Priam who was killed by Achilles. His tragic love for Cressida (or Criseyde or Criseida) has been a favorite subject of romances even to the present day.

Troilus and Cressida (kres'sī.dā). Play by Thomas Dekker and Henry Chettle, acted in 1599.

Troilus and Cressida. Tragedy by Shakespeare, thought to be altered from an older one. It was probably played at the Globe c1600, licensed to be printed in 1603 and 1609, printed in undoubtedly unauthorized quarto in the latter year, and printed in the folio edition of 1623.

Troilus and Cressida, or Truth Found too Late. Play by John Dryden, printed in 1678, in which he undertook to "correct" what he "opined was in all probability" one of "Shakespeare's first Endeavours on the Stage."

Troilus and Criseyde (kri.sā.dē). Long romance in rime royal by Geoffrey Chaucer, written c1385 and based on the plot of Giovanni Boccaccio's Il Filostrato. There are additions which show his reading of Boccaccio's Il Filocolo, Benoit de Sainte Maure's Roman de Troie, Guido delle Colonne's Historia Troiana (a Latin prose paraphrase of Benoit), Joseph of Exeter's Frigitur Daretis Ilias, Boethius's De Consolatione Philosophiae, and other writings. Benoit and Guido had told of Briseida's faithlessness to Troilus. Boccaccio invented Troilo's falling in love with Criseida (as the names are spelled in Italian), and his wooing and winning of her with the aid of Pandaro. In Troilus and Criseyde Chaucer reveals his power especially in the atmosphere, the poetry, and the subtle characterization. The Lollus to whom, for his artistic purposes, he credits the story, probably originated in a scribal mistake in the first line of Horace's Epistola (I, ii). Robert K. Root's critical edition of The Book of Troilus and Criseyde is based on a careful study of the 16 surviving manuscripts.

Troina (trō'nā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Enna, ab. 24 mi. NW of Catania; agricultural commune on the W slope of Mount Etna. It was one of the first Moslem strongholds to be taken by the Normans (1063); its Church of the Virgin (Matrice Santa Maria), of Norman origin, later remodeled, contains valuable paintings. As a result of severe fighting (July-August, 1943) in World War II, this church sustained considerable damage. Pop. of commune, 12,024 (1936); of town, 11,943 (1936).

Trois Couleurs (trwā kō.lēr), Les. Popular French political song, written after 1830 by Adolphe Vogel, celebrating the fall of the white flag (of the Bourbons) and the return of the tricolor.

Troisdorf (trōis'dōrf). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 30 mi. SW of Cologne; ironworks, machine, metal, and plastics industries. 13,229 (1950).

Trois Echelles (trwā zā.shel). Executioner in the service of Louis XI of France. Sir Walter Scott introduces him in Quentin Durward.

Trois Mousquetaires (trwā mōs.kē.tēr), Les. [English title, The Three Musketeers.] Novel by Alexandre Dumas père, published in 1844. The scene is laid in France in the time of Richelieu. The three musketeers are Athos, Porthos, and Aramis, but D'Artagnan, an adventurous young Gascon, is the principal character. The four appear also in the sequels L'ingl ans après and Le Vicomte de Bragelonne.

Trois Rivières (trwā rē.vyēr). French name of Three Rivers, Quebec.

Troja (trō'ja). A Latin name of ancient Troy.

Trojan Cycle (trō'jan). Group of medieval legends and romances relating to the Trojan War of Greek legend.

Trojan War. In Greek legend, a war waged for ten years by the confederated Greeks under the lead of Agamemnon, king of Mycenae and Argolis, against the Trojans and their allies, for the recovery of Helen, wife of Menelaus (king of Sparta or Lacedaemon), who had been carried off by Paris, son of the Trojan king Priam. The Trojan War is celebrated in the Iliad and its end is the point of departure for the Odyssey. The Trojan War of history probably took place c1200 B.C.

Troland (trō'land), Leonard Thompson. b. at Norwich, Conn., April 26, 1889; d. at Mount Wilson, Calif., May 27, 1932. American psychologist, physicist, and inventor. After graduating (B.S., 1912) from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he secured his M.A. (1914) and Ph.D. (1915) from Harvard University, where he was subsequently an instructor (1916-22) and assistant professor (1922-29) of psychology. He made notable experiments in the field of vision, and was chief engineer (1918-25) and director of research (1925-32) of the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation of California, inventing and perfecting the process and devices for multicolor motion pictures. Author of The Nature of Matter and Electricity, an Outline of Modern Views (with D. F. Comstock, 1917), The Present Status of Visual Science (1922), The Mystery of Mind (1926), The Fundamentals of Human Motivation (1928), and The Principles of Psychophysiology (2 vols., 1929-30).

Trollhättan (tról'hét'an). Town in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Älvsborg, on the Göta River near Lake Vänern, NE of Göteborg. It is the seat of chemical and metal industries, rolling mills, cellulose factories, and of the largest hydroelectric plant of S Sweden. 24,264 (1950).

Trollope (tról'op), Anthony. b. at London, April 24, 1815; d. at Harting, Sussex, England, Dec. 6, 1882. English novelist; son of Thomas Anthony Trollope and Frances Trollope (1780-1863), and brother of Thomas Adolphus Trollope. The family fortunes being impaired, he was raised in a kind of shabby gentility, and in 1834 he became a postal clerk, and continued to serve the British post office until 1867, being during most of those years a roving inspector in Ireland and England, also on occasion traveling abroad in an official capacity, all of which widened his opportunities for observation of life and people, and contributed finally to his literary achievement. His early novels laid in Irish scenes, The Mademoisels of Ballycloran (1847) and The Kellys and the O'Kellys (1848), won scant attention, and an attempt at historical fiction, La Vendée (1850), was a dismal failure. He attained his first great success when he wrote The Warden (1855). This was the first of the famous Barsetshire series, Barsetshire being a fictitious county, and Barset an imagined cathedral city (very possibly modeled on Winchester) in the south of England. In the books of this series, Barsetshire Towers (1857), Doctor Thorne (1858), Framley Parsonage (1861), The Small House at Allington (1864), and The Last Chronicle of Barset (1867), in addition to The Warden, many of the same characters reappear, the most famous being Mrs. Proudie, Lady Glencora, Mr. Slope, and Dr. Stanhope. In another series of his books, Con You Forgive Her? (1864), Phineas Finn: the Irish Member (1869), The Eustace Diamonds (1873), Phineas Redux (1874), The Prime Minister (1876), and The Duke's Children (1880), the connecting thread is the British Parliament. Other Trollope novels are The Three Clerks (1857), The Bertrams (1859), Castle Richmond (1860), Orley Farm (1861-62), The Struggles of Brown, Jones, and Robinson (1862), Rachel Ray (1863), The Belton Estate (1865), Miss Mackenzie (1865), The Clovers (1867), Nina Balatka (1867), Linda Tressell (1868), He Knew He Was Right (1869), The Vicar of Bulckampton (1870), Sir Harry Hotspur of Humblethwaite (1871), Lady Anna (1874), Harry Heathcote (1874), The American Senator (1877), Is He Popenjoy? (1878), John Caldigate (1879), An Eye for an Eye (1879), Cousin Henry (1879), Ayala's Angel (1881), Dr. Wortle's School (1881), The Fixed Period (1882), Kept in the Dark (1882), Marion Fay (1882), and (posthumously published) An Old Man's Love (1884). In addition Trollope published a satirical work, The Way We Live Now (1875), lives of Cicero and of Thackeray, and accounts of his travels in the West Indies, North America, South Africa, and Australia. In 1865 Trollope assisted in founding the Fortnightly Review; after his retirement from the postal service in 1867 he edited St. Paul's Magazine, which lasted little more than three years; and he contributed to Blackwood's, the Cornhill Magazine, and other periodicals. He visited the U.S. in 1868, partly in the interest of plans for international copyright. In that same year he tried, unsuccessfully, for a seat in Parliament. His autobiography, posthumously published in 1883, reveals some of the secrets of his voluminous literary output: he rose early every morning, and wrote approximately 250 words every quarter hour for two and a half hours. A keen observer, with an eye especially for human foibles, Trollope recorded the comedy of the English middle class in the mid-Victorian era.

Trollope, Frances. [Maiden name, Milton.] b. at St. pleton, near Bristol, England, March 10, 1780; d. at Florence, Italy, Oct. 6, 1863. English novelist and writer of travel works; wife of Thomas Anthony Trollope, and mother of Anthony Trollope and Thomas Adolphus Trollope. In the fall of 1827 she sailed for New Orleans; she spent 25 eventful months in frontier Cincinnati, creating sensational tableaux for a museum and rearing a fantastic building, the "Bazaar," and 16 months of extreme poverty in the eastern U.S. In March, 1832, seven months after her return to England, she published Domestic Monners of the Americans, widely read in England and in the U.S., where the book was fiercely attacked. It remains, however, a classic of American travel. Its success launched her at 52 upon a prolific career as a writer of novels and travel books. Notable among her 34 novels are Jonathon Jefferson Whitlaw, The Vicar of Wrexhill, The Widow Barnaby, and Petticoat Government, which last foreshadows her son Anthony's famous novels of English cathedral-town life.

Trollope, Frances Eleanor. [Maiden name, Ternan.] English novelist; second wife of Thomas Adolphus Trollope. She wrote a number of novels, among them Aunt Margaret's Trouble, The Sacriston's Household, and That Unfortunate Marriage. With her husband she wrote Homes and Haunts of the Italian Poets (1881).

Trollope, Sir Henry. b. at Bucklebury, England, April 20, 1756; d. at Bath, England, Nov. 2, 1839. English naval officer; cousin of Thomas Anthony Trollope. He commanded the naval forces which covered the retreat (1775) of British troops from Lexington and Bunker Hill. Subsequently (1790), as commander of the Glanton, he defeated seven French vessels off Hellevuetsluis, Netherlands, and contributed information which led to the British victory (1797) at Camperdown. His suicide is alleged to have been brought about by the agony of gout.

Trollope, Thomas Adolphus. b. April 29, 1810; d. at Clifton, England, Nov. 11, 1892. English writer; brother of Anthony Trollope. He went to Italy in 1843, and resided in Florence till 1873, when he went to Rome. About 1890 he returned to England. He wrote A Summer in Brittany (1840), A Summer in Western France (1841), Impressions of a Wanderer (1850), The Girlhood of Catherine de' Medici (1856), A Decade of Italian Women (1859); Vittorio Colonna was included in this), Tuscony in 1849 and in 1859 (1859), Filippo Strozzi (1860), Paul V the Pope and Paul the Friar (1860), A Lenten Journey in Umbria (1862), A History of the Commonwealth of Florence (1865), The Papal Conclaves as They Were and as They Are (1876), Life of Pope Pius the Ninth (1877), A Peep Behind the Scenes at Rome (1877), Sketches from French History (1878), and What I Remember (1887). He wrote also a number of novels, among them La Beata, Lindisfarf Chase, Diamond Cut Diamond, and The Garstangs of Garstong Grange.

Trollope, Thomas Anthony. b. 1774; d. at Château d'Honte, near Bruges, Belgium, Oct. 23, 1835. English lawyer; husband of Frances Trollope and father of Anthony Trollope and Thomas Adolphus Trollope. Admitted (1804) to the bar, he gave up law for farming, and later attempted, with his wife, to run a fancy bazaar at Cincinnati, Ohio, but failed miserably. One quarto volume of his Complete History of the Church appeared in 1843.

Tromp (trôm'p), Cornelis (or Cornelius). b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, Sept. 9, 1629; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, May 29, 1691. Dutch admiral; son of Martin Harpertzoon Tromp. He obtained a command against the pirates of Algiers at the age of 19, and was promoted (c1653) to rear admiral. He was defeated by the English at Southwold Bay in 1665, served under M. A. de Ruyter in 1666, and gained several victories over the Allies in 1673. He afterward assisted the Danes against the Swedes, and became lieutenant-admiral-general of the United Provinces on the death of de Ruyter in 1676.

Tromp, Martin Harpertzoon. b. at Briel, Netherlands, 1597; killed July 31, 1653. Dutch admiral. He entered the navy in 1624, was made lieutenant-admiral in 1637, and gained two decisive victories over the Spaniards in 1639. He was worsted by Robert Blake in the Downs (May 19, 1652), defeated Blake off Dungeness (Nov. 29, 1652), fought a drawn battle with Blake, George Monck, and Richard Deane in the Channel (Feb. 18-20, 1653), fought an indecisive engagement with Deane and Monck in the Channel in June, and was defeated by Monck off Texel, and killed.

Trompeter von Säckingen (trom.pä'tér fɔn zek'ing.en). Der. Popular German epic poem (1853) by Joseph Victor von Scheffel. It has been translated into English under the title The Trumpeter: a Romance of the Rhine, and is the subject of several operas, one by Victor Nessler being produced in 1884.

Troms (tróms, túms). Fylke (county) in N Norway, bordering on the Norwegian Sea in the NW and on Sweden and Finland in the SE. Capital, Tromsø; area, 10,071 sq. mi.; pop. 113,722 (1946).

Tromsø (trom'zø; Norwegian, tróms'é', trúms'é'). [Also, Tromsøy.] Town in N Norway, capital of the fylke (county) of Troms, situated on a small island in the Norwegian Sea, N of Narvik. The chief commercial town in N Norway, it has a harbor, shipyards, and herring fisheries, and exports of fish and fish products, hides, and furs. The town was founded in 1794. Pop. 10,990 (1946).

Trondheim (trón'häm). [Former spellings: Trondhjem, Trondhjem, Dronheim; medieval name, Nidaros.] City in W Norway, capital of the fylke (county) of Sør-Trøndelag, situated on the S side of Trondheim Fjord, N of Oslo. It is the third largest city in Norway, with a fine harbor, considerable shipping activities, shipyards, fish canneries, leather, chocolate, metal, and lumber manufactures. It is also an agricultural trading center, and has exports of fish and fish products, pulp, paper, and copper ore (from nearby Røros). The Domkirken (cathedral), one of the finest medieval buildings in Scandinavia, chiefly in the Gothic-Norman style, dates from the 11th century; it was restored in the period 1869-1930 as a national enterprise (some restoration work is still under way). The cathedral is dedicated to Saint Olaf. The former archiepiscopal palace is now an armory. The medieval settlement on the site of Trondheim was founded by Olaf I (Olaf Trygvesson), the first Christian king of Norway, in 996, and Norwegian kings were long buried here. Trondheim became the place of coronation of the kings of Norway after 1914. It was occupied by the Germans in 1940. Pop. 57,128 (1946).

Trondheim Fjord. Fjord indenting the W coast of Norway, extending inland ab. 80 mi.

Trondheim Landing. Military operation in World War II by which the Norwegian port of Trondheim, protected by a long, sheltered fjord, became the focus of the plan for Allied resistance to the German invasion of Norway. A twin-pronged landing at points north and south of the city was made on April 14, 1940, from barges, but with inadequate air support. The northern parties landing at Namsos suffered heavy casualties from German aircraft and were seriously hampered by their own lack of heavy equipment and of adequate training. The forces which comprised the two prongs of the operation were unable to make contact, and on May 1 those troops who had survived were evacuated.

Tronege (trón'ge), Hagen von. See Hagen von Tronege.

Troodos (tró'ó.rhós), Mount. See under Cyprus.

Troon (trón). Police burgh, seaport, and holiday resort in S Scotland, in Ayrshire, situated on the Firth of Clyde ab. 6 mi. N of Ayr, ab. 399 mi. N of London by rail; exports of coal, 9,995 (est. 1948).

Trophonius (tró.fó'ni.us). Legendary Greek architect, reputed to have been the son of Eriginius, king of Orchomenus, or of Apollo. He is said to have built, with his brother Agamenes, the temple of Apollo at Delphi. He was celebrated as a hero after his death, and had an oracle in a cave near Lebadea in Boeotia.

Trophonius. In Greek mythology, an ancient earth god.

Troppau (tróp'ou). German name of Opava.

Troppau, Congress of. Congress of the monarchs of Russia, Austria, and Prussia, held (October-December, 1820) at Troppau (now Opava, Czechoslovakia) for the purpose of deliberating on measures to be taken against the Neapolitan revolution and other popular movements.

Tropsch (trósh), Hans. b. at Plan (now Planá), in Bohemia, 1889; d. 1935. German coal and petroleum chemist. With F. Fiesel he devised (1923) an important process for converting coal into "oil" (via water gas). He served as director of the Coal Research Institute, Prague (1928 et seq.), and as professor at the Armour Institute of Technology and University of Chicago (1931 et seq.).

Trossachs or Trosachs (trós'aks). Valley in the Highlands of W Perthshire, Scotland, between Lochs Katrine and Achray, celebrated by Sir Walter Scott in The Lady of the Lake.

Tröst (trést), Sven. Pseudonym of Snoilsky, Count Carl Johan Gustav.

Trostan (trós'tán). See under County Antrim.

Tröstensamkeit (trést'ín.zám.kit). See under Zeitung für Einsiedler.

Trotha (tró'thá), Adolf von. b. at Koblenz, Germany, March 1, 1868; d. at Berlin, Oct. 11, 1940. German admiral. He was chief of staff of the high seas fleet from 1916 to 1918, and took a prominent part in the Battle of Jutland (1916). In 1919 he began building a new German navy. He founded the Pan-German Youth League and similar nationalistic organizations.

Trotha, Thilo von. b. at Wilhelmshaven, Germany, 1909; d. 1938. German playwright, novelist, and lyric poet. A collaborator with Alfred Rosenberg on various undertakings, he held influential positions in the Nazi Party organization. In his poems and plays he favored historical and mythological subjects. Engelbrecht (1937) is a drama of Sweden's emancipation from Denmark. Prinzessin Plumpudding (1938) is a comedy concerned with Henry VIII and Ann of Cleves. He was killed in an automobile accident after the premiere of his drama Gudrun (1938).

Trotsky (trót'ski), Leon. [Original name, Lev Davidovich Bronstein.] b. at Yanovka, in the government of Kherson, Ukraine, Russia, Oct. 26, 1879; assassinated at Mexico City, Aug. 20, 1940. Russian revolutionist. Of middle-class parentage, he was educated at the University of Odessa, but began to participate in revolutionary activities at an early age, and was first arrested in 1898. Exiled to Siberia, he escaped on papers forged in the name of Leon Trotsky, by which name he was thereafter known. Making his way to London, he consorted with other Russian revolutionaries in exile there, and collaborated with Lenin and Plekhanov in publishing Iskra (The Spark). Returning to Russia in 1905, he took a leading part in the revolutionary attempt of that year, was again apprehended and sent to Siberia, promptly escaped, and during the next few years lived in several European countries, writing for radical papers, plotting, and elaborating a theory that the inevitable bourgeois revolution in Russia must evolve into a socialist revolution there, and that this must be the starting point of a world-wide proletarian revolution. Throughout these years he maintained a middle position between the Bolsheviks and the Mensheviks, the factions into which the Russian Social-Democratic Party had split in 1903. From the beginning of World War I he urged the workers to refuse to fight for their several bourgeois and imperialist governments. More than once arrested, he was expelled from Spain in 1916 and came to the U.S., where he edited a radical paper, New Mir (New World), until the news was flashed of the abdication of the czar and the beginning of the first stage of the revolution he had long awaited. The world at large first heard of Leon Trotsky in November of that year (October by the Russian calendar) as the collaborator of Vladimir Ilyich Lenin in the seizure of power, and as the commissar for foreign affairs in the subsequent government. Trotsky, as chief representative of the new regime in negotiations with the Germans at Brest-Litovsk, against Lenin's advice rejected the stiff terms offered, believing that the German troops would refuse to march against the Russian workers; when his optimism proved mistaken, he had to accept terms considerably worse. Replaced at the foreign office, he became commissar of war, achieved a remarkable rehabilitation of the Russian army, had a large part in defeating the counterrevolution, probably saved the country's railways from complete collapse by using soldiers to repair and rebuild them, but shared in the debacle of the attack upon Poland. From 1919, ideological differences between Trotsky on the one hand, and Lenin backed by Joseph Stalin and others on the other hand, grew more and more acute, and following Lenin's death in 1924 Stalin and his associates definitely got the upper hand. Trotsky was deposed from the commissariat of war and put in charge of development of electrical resources, but in 1925 he resigned that post; in 1927 he was exiled to Turkistan; and in 1929 he was banished from the U.S.S.R. After living for some years at Constantinople and in Norway, he was in 1937 permitted to settle at Mexico City. There on Aug. 20, 1940, he was killed with an axe by one Jacques van den Dreschd, a Belgian who had been one of his intimates. The considerable body of Trotskyites throughout the world charged that he had been assassinated on orders from Stalin. On the ideological plane, the divergence between Trotsky and Stalin arose mainly from the former's denial that a social-revolution could be carried through to communism in one country, Trotsky insisting that the cause could triumph only when world-wide revolution could be brought about. In the field of policy, the chief issue was the timing of the socialization of agriculture. When Trotsky wished to proceed with it, Stalin pronounced it premature; when Stalin proceeded with it, Trotsky denounced it. It is widely believed that, intertwined with these differences of ideology and policy, the most potent cause of the struggle was the clash of ambitions between two determined men.

Trotter (trɒt'ər), Catherine. Maiden name of Cockburn, Catherine.

"Trotty" (trɒt'i). See Veck, Toby.

Trotwood (trɒt'wɒd), Betsey. Eccentric but kind-hearted great-aunt of David Copperfield, in Charles Dickens's novel David Copperfield.

Troubetzkoy (trɒ.bɪts.kɔj'), Princess. See Rives, Amélie.

Troubetzkoy, Prince Paul. b. at Intra, Italy, Feb. 16, 1866; d. at Suna, Italy, Feb. 12, 1938. Russian sculptor. He was an extreme realist in theory and practice. On his appointment to a professorship in the School of Sculpture at Moscow, his first act was to remove all models and casts of ancient sculpture.

Troubles, Council of. See Council of Blood.

Troublesome Reign of King John (jon). See King John, Troublesome Reign of.

Trouée de Belfort (trɒ.ə də bɛl.fɔr). See Belfort, Trouée de.

Trouillon (trɒ.yɔn), Louis. See Lacombe, Louis Trouillon.

Trouin (trɒ.ən), René Duguay-. See Duguay-Trouin, René.

Troup (trɒp), George McIntosh. b. at McIntosh Bluff, Ga. (now in Alabama), Sept. 8, 1780; d. in Laurens County, Ga., May 3, 1856. American politician. He was member of Congress from Georgia (1807-15). U.S. senator (1816-18, 1829-33), and governor of Georgia (1823-27). He was a prominent advocate of states' rights.

Trousseau (trɒ.sɔ), Armand. b. at Tours, France, 1801; d. at Paris, June 27, 1867. French physician. He wrote Traité de thérapeutique et de matière médicale (1836-39) and other works.

Trouville-sur-Mer (trɒ.vɛl.sɜr.mɛr). [Also, Trouville.] Town in NW France, in the department of Calvados, situated on the English Channel, ab. 9 mi. S of Le Havre. It is a seaside resort with a good beach, and a fishing port. The town suffered damage in World War II, 6,182 (1946).

Trovatore (trɒ.və.tɔ'ɾə), IL. [Eng. trans., "The Troubadour."] Opera in four acts by Giuseppe Verdi, with a libretto by Cammarano adapted from a drama by Antonio Gutiérrez, produced at Rome in 1853.

Trowbridge (trɒ'briː), Augustus. b. at New York, Jan. 2, 1870; d. at Taormina, Italy, March 14, 1934. American physicist. He was assistant professor (1900-03) and professor (1900-06) of physics at the University of Wisconsin, and professor of physics (1906-33) and dean of the graduate school (1928-32) at Princeton University. A lieutenant colonel in World War I, he was an intelligence officer on the staff of General J. I. Pershing, and devised automatic equipment by which the flash or report of enemy guns could be utilized to determine their position.

Trowbridge, Edmund. b. at Cambridge, Mass., 1709; d. there, April 2, 1793. American jurist. He became a lawyer, served (1749-67) as attorney general of Massachusetts, and was a judge (1767 et seq.) of the superior court. A moderate conservative in colonial politics, he displayed his fairness in the "Boston Massacre" trial. During the Revolutionary War he adhered to a position of strict neutrality.

Trowbridge, John. b. at Boston, Aug. 5, 1843; d. at Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 18, 1923. American physicist, Rumford professor of applied science at Harvard (1888-1910), and director of the Jefferson physical laboratory at Harvard from 1884.

Trowbridge, John Townsend. b. in Ogden Township, N.Y., Sept. 18, 1827; d. at Arlington, Mass., Feb. 12, 1916. American novelist, poet, and editor of Our Young Folks, a magazine afterward consolidated with St. Nicholas. Among his works are the novels Father Brighthopes (1853), Neighbor Jackwood (1856); revised ed., 1895; dramatized, 1857), and Coupon Bonds (1871); books for the young, including Cudjo's Cave (1864), His Own Master (1877), The Tinkham Brothers' Tide-Mill (1884), and the Jack Hazard stories; and several books of poems, notably The Vagabonds, and Other Poems (1869), The Book of Gold (1877), and The Lost Earl (1888).

Trowbridge, William Petit. b. in Oakland County, Mich., May 25, 1828; d. at New Haven, Conn., Aug. 12, 1892. American engineer.

Troy (troi). City in SE Alabama, county seat of Pike County, ab. 43 mi. SE of Montgomery: cottonseed-oil mills and fertilizer factories, 8,555 (1950).

Troy. [Also: Ilium; Latin, Troia, Troja.] Ancient city in Asia Minor, famous in Greek legend as the capital of Priam and the object of the siege by the allied Greeks under Agamemnon. The site of this Homeric city was generally believed in antiquity to be identical with that of the Greek Ilium (the modern Hissarlik); and this view has been supported in later times most notably by Heinrich Schliemann, whose explorations (1871 et seq.) at Hissarlik laid bare remains of a series (nine) of ancient towns, one above the other, at least one of which is universally admitted to be prehistoric. The third and later the second from the bottom he identified with the Homeric town, those levels showing the effects of a conflagration and massive ruins. On the other hand, some scholars regarded the situation of Ilium as irreconcilable with Homer's description of Troy, and preferred a site in the neighborhood of the later Bunárbashi, holding Schliemann's results to be inconclusive. More recent investigations indicate, however, that Schliemann was correct about the site, but that the sixth or, more probably, the seventh level was ancient Ilium.

Troy. City in E New York, county seat of Rensselaer County, on the E bank of the Hudson River, ab. 6 mi. N of Albany: the E terminus of the Erie Canal; manufactures of collars, cuffs, shirts, handkerchiefs, women's garments, valves, and fire hydrants. Troy was settled by the Dutch in the latter part of the 18th century, and was incorporated in 1816. The present name was adopted in 1789. It is the seat of Russell Sage College, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Saint Joseph's Seminary, and the Emma Willard School, 72,331 (1950).

Troy. City in W Ohio, county seat of Miami County, on the Great Miami River, ab. 65 mi. W of Columbus, in an agricultural region: manufactures of airplanes, grinders, slicers, dishwashers, paper, furniture, prefabricated houses, air compressors, and tobacco products, 10,661 (1950).

Troya (trɒ'yá), Carlo. b. at Naples, Italy, June 7, 1784; d. there, July 27, 1858. Italian historian.

Troyat (trɒ'yá), Henri. [Original name, Lev Tarasov.] b. in Russia, 1911-. French novelist and biographer. Author of Fauz jour (1935), Grandeur nature (1936), L'Araigne (1938), Dostoïevski (1940; Eng. trans., Firebrand, 1946), Pouchkine (1946), and others.

Troyes (trɒ.wá). [Latin, Augustobona, Augustobona Tricassium.] City in E France, capital of the department of Aube, situated on several arms of the Seine River; SE of Paris. It is an important industrial center, with hosiery, textile, glove, soap, and paper manufactures, and flour mills, and has some trade. It contains a number of Gothic churches and medieval houses. The Cathedral of Saint Pierre, built between the 13th and 16th centuries, has celebrated stained-glass windows. The Church of Saint Jean dates from the 14th, the Church of Saint Nicholas from the 16th century; the oldest church is that of Saint Martin, begun in 1262. In the Middle Ages, Troyes was the seat of the counts of Champagne, who established here a trade fair of international importance. In the 15th and 16th centuries, the city was the center of an original school of art. The city suffered damage in World War II, 58,805 (1946).

Troyes, Chrétien (or Chrestien) de. See Chrétien (or Chrestien) de Troyes.

Troyes, Treaty of. Treaty between England and France, 1420, by which Henry V of England was to marry Catherine of Valois, daughter of Charles VI, to become regent of France, and to succeed to the throne on the death of Charles. Henry and Catherine were married, but the resistance of the Dauphin (Charles VII) aided by Joan of Arc prevented Henry from realization of his claim to the French throne.

Troynovant (trō'no.vant). Name given to London in the early chronicles, as the city of the Trinovantes. In Yamamon's Brut it is given as Trinovant.

Troyon (trwā'yōn), Constant. b. at Sèvres, France, Aug. 25, 1810; d. at Paris, Feb. 21, 1865. French landscape and animal painter. Among his numerous works are Valley of La Touque, Oxen Going to Work, and Return to the Farm.

Troyville (trōy'vil). Large temple mound site in Catahoula Parish, La.; type site for the Troyville culture, which succeeded Marksville in that area in the period c1100-1300 A.D. The Troyville culture seems to be transitional between the Burial and Temple Mound periods, containing some of the elements of both.

Trst (térst). Serbo-Croatian name of Trieste.

Truax v. Corrigan, 257 U.S. 312 (1921) (trō'aks; kor'-i-gan). U.S. Supreme Court decision which invalidated an interpretation of an Arizona law denying an injunction against striking employees. Chief Justice William H. Taft, who delivered the majority opinion, declared that the exercise of state power violated the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and impaired the constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws. The case is notable for the dissenting opinion of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, who said: "There is nothing that I more deprecate than the use of the Fourteenth Amendment beyond the absolute compulsion of its words to prevent the making of social experiments that an important part of the community desires, in the insulated chambers afforded by the several states, even though the experiments may seem futile or even noxious to me and to those whose judgment I most respect."

Trübner (trüb'ner), Karl. b. at Heidelberg, Germany, July 6, 1846; d. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, June 2, 1907. German bookseller and publisher at Stuttgart; nephew of Nikolaus Trübner.

Trübner (trüb'ner, trōb'-), Nikolaus. b. at Heidelberg, Germany, June 12, 1817; d. at London, March 30, 1884. German-English publisher and bookseller at London. He made specialties of American and Oriental studies, and was publisher for several learned societies.

Truce of God. Suspension of private feuds which was observed, chiefly in the 11th and 12th centuries, in France, Italy, England, and elsewhere. The terms of such a truce usually provided that such feuds should cease on all the more important church festivals and fasts, or from Thursday evening to Monday morning, or during the period of Lent, or the like. This practice, introduced by the church during the Middle Ages to mitigate the evils of private war, fell gradually into disuse as the rulers of the various countries became more powerful.

Truce of Ulm (ūlm). See Ulm, Truce of.

Truckee (truk'ē). Unincorporated community in NE California, in Nevada County, on the Truckee River ab. 91 mi. NE of Sacramento; skiing center, 1,025 (1950).

Truckee River. River in E California and W Nevada which flows from Lake Tahoe into Pyramid Lake. Length, ab. 125 mi.

Truculentus (truk.ūlen'tus). Comedy by Plautus.

Trudeau (trō'dō), Edward Livingston. b. at New York, Oct. 5, 1848; d. at Saranac Lake, N.Y., Nov. 15, 1915. American physician, noted for his investigations and treatment of tuberculosis. He practiced medicine on Long Island and at New York, became ill (1873) with pulmonary tuberculosis, and settled in the Adirondacks, where he resumed (1880) the practice of medicine. He devoted himself to determining methods for the diagnosis and cure of pulmonary tuberculosis; in 1884 he founded what is now called the Trudeau Sanatorium, the first institution of its kind in the U.S. The Saranac Laboratory, established (1894) largely through his efforts, was the site of the first immunity experiments in tuberculosis in the U.S.

True (trō), Alfred Charles. b. at Middletown, Conn., June 5, 1853; d. April 23, 1929. American educator; brother of Frederick William True. He served (1889-1929) on the staff of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. A leader in the field of agricultural education, he was active in the body later known as the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities, of which he was president (1913), and was at various times between 1902 and 1916 dean of the seven graduate schools of agriculture sponsored by this association.

True, Frederick William. b. at Middletown, Conn., July 8, 1858; d. June 25, 1914. American zoologist; brother of Alfred Charles True. He was connected (1881-1914) with the Smithsonian Institution in various capacities, including that of curator (1883-1909) of the division of mammals and of assistant secretary (1911-14) in charge of the library and of the international exchange service. He was one of the U.S. leading experts on the Cetacea and made special studies of fossil cetaceans.

Trueba (trō.ā'nā), Andrés Martínez. See Martínez Trueba, Andrés.

True Heart, The. Novel by Sylvia Townsend Warner, published in 1929.

True Relation of Such Occurrences and Accidents of Noate as Hath Happened in Virginia since the First Planting of That Collony. A. Account of Virginia exploration and the Jamestown settlement by Captain John Smith (1580-1631), published in 1608.

"True Thomas" (tom'as). See Thomas the Rhymer.

True Whig Party. Liberian political party in power since 1878.

Truewit (trō'wit). Scholar and gentleman, the expositor of the other characters in Ben Jonson's Epicœne.

Truinet (trū.ē.ne), Charles Louis Étienne. See Nuitter.

Trujillo (trō.hē'yō). See also Ciudad Trujillo.

Trujillo. Province in S Dominican Republic. Capital, San Cristóbal; area, 1,491 sq. mi.; pop. 160,345 (1950).

Trujillo. [Also, Truxillo.] Town in Honduras, capital of Colón department, on the N coast. It was founded in 1525. Pop. 13,125 (1950).

Trujillo. [Also, Truxillo.] Town in W Peru, capital of La Libertad department, ab. 3 mi. from the Pacific coast, ab. 300 mi. NW of Lima. It is an important sugar-exporting port, and has rice-milling, brewing, tanning, and textile industries. It was founded by Francisco Pizarro in 1535. Pop. 38,961 (1940).

Trujillo (trō.hē'yō). [Ancient name, Turgalium.] Town in W Spain, in the province of Cáceres, ab. 25 mi. NE of Cáceres; manufactures of chocolates, chinaware, and pottery; stock raising, particularly for the bull ring. Francisco Pizarro, the conqueror of Peru, was born here in 1471. Pop. 13,753 (1943).

Trujillo (trō.hē'yō). State in NW Venezuela. Capital, Trujillo; area, 2,857 sq. mi.; pop. 284,583 (1950).

Trujillo. City in NW Venezuela, capital of Trujillo state; agricultural products. Pop., with suburbs, 11,794 (1950).

Trujillo, Julián. b. 1829; d. 1884. President (1878-80) of Colombia.

Trujillo Molina (mō.lē'nā), Héctor Bienvenido. b. at San Cristóbal, Dominican Republic, April 6, 1908—. President of the Dominican Republic (1952 et seq.); brother and successor of Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina. An army officer in a government controlled absolutely by his brother, he served (1936 et seq.) as chief of staff of the Dominican army and was supervisor of the national police (1938-43). He became (1942) commander of the army and secretary of war and marine. In 1952 when his brother decided to retire from his official position, Héctor Trujillo was named president.

Trujillo Molina, Rafael Leonidas. b. at San Cristóbal, Dominican Republic, 1891—. Dominican army officer and politician, president (1930-38, 1942-52) of the Dominican Republic. He entered (1918) the army as a cadet, was trained by U.S. marines during the occupation (1916-24), became a general (1927), and was elected president (1930). In spite of his brief period out of office, he had complete control of the republic. He signed the Trujillo-Hull pact (ratified by the U.S., 1941) eliminating import and export taxes, and signed a treaty (1935) delimiting the Haitian frontier.

Truk Islands (truk, trök, truk). [Also, Hogoleu.] Group in the Caroline Islands, S Pacific, comprising some 70 islands surrounded by a coral reef. They were discovered (1825) by Louis Isidor Duperrey. They became a German possession in 1899, a Japanese mandate under the League of Nations following World War I, a major Japanese naval base before World War II, and a U.S. trusteeship under the United Nations in 1947. Chief town, Truk; area, ab. 40 sq. mi.; pop, ab. 17,000.

Trullan Council (trul'an). Sixth ecumenical council, held in the imperial palace at Constantinople, Nov. 7, 680–Sept. 16, 681; so named from the domed hall (trullus) in which it was held. It deposed Macarius, patriarch of Alexandria, as a Monothelite, and condemned Pope Honorius I for holding similar views.

Trullan Council. [Called the Second Trullan Council (or Synod).] Name of the Quinisext Council, held (692) at Constantinople, considered as ecumenical in the Eastern Church, but not so acknowledged in the Western. It allowed the continuance in marriage of the priests, and passed a number of canons inconsistent with Roman authority and usages.

Trulliber (trul'i.bër), Parson. In Henry Fielding's novel Joseph Andrews, a coarse and brutal curate represented as lacking all the virtues that Parson Adams possessed.

Truman (tró'man), Harry S. b. at Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884.—American politician, thirty-third President of the United States. He was brought up near Independence, Mo., on the family farm and in town, where he attended school. After holding several positions at Kansas City, Mo., he managed (1906–17) the family farm. In World War I, he was mobilized as a member of the National Guard, served as a captain of artillery with the 35th division in France, and was discharged (1919) as a major. For a short time he owned a haberdashery store at Kansas City, but he lost his business in the depression of 1921. He studied law (1923–25) at the Kansas City School of Law while holding an elective position as county judge at Kansas City, a post he gained with the aid of the Kansas City Democratic political machine. He was presiding judge (1926–34) of the Jackson County Court, and in 1934 ran successfully for a seat in the U.S. Senate, to which he was reelected in 1940. During World War II he became prominent as chairman of a special committee to investigate the national defense program; the work of the committee in exposing several inconsistencies in defense contracting and its criticisms of proposed programs saved great sums of money for the government. Late in 1944, when it became apparent that the leaders of the political machines in the big cities did not want Henry A. Wallace renominated as the Democratic candidate for the vice-presidency, Robert E. Hannegan, St. Louis politician, suggested Truman as the running-mate for Franklin D. Roosevelt; he was accepted by the National Convention and was elected with Roosevelt in November. When Roosevelt died suddenly on April 12, 1945, Truman succeeded to the presidency. One of his first acts was to continue the preparations for the United Nations organization meeting, begun later in April at San Francisco. Truman, generally a firm advocate of Roosevelt's policies, nevertheless gradually eliminated the Roosevelt cabinet members and chose his own group of department advisers; by the end of 1945 only three of Roosevelt's cabinet were left; in 1946 both Henry Wallace and Harold Ickes resigned (acrimoniously in both cases) and James Forrestal, the last of the Roosevelt appointees, became in 1947 the first secretary of the new National Defense Establishment (later reconstituted as the Department of Defense). Truman's appointments were later to cause him and the administration much trouble, notably his selection of a personal staff, whose major qualifications seemed to many to be that they were friends of the President. In July, 1945, he went to Berlin for the Potsdam Conference with Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill (who was succeeded by Clement Attlee during the conference); the continuance of the war against Japan and the handling of a number of postwar problems were discussed. It was while he was returning from Potsdam that Truman announced the successful use of the first atomic bomb against Japan. Truman's outspoken manner, and his refusal to compromise on what he considered essential points of his program, soon brought about a lessening of friendly feeling between himself and the legislative colleagues he had so recently left. Widespread criticism, later changed to grudging praise for his foresight, attended his presence on the platform at Fulton, Mo., in 1946, when Winston Churchill attacked Russian aims, but in general Truman attempted at first to maintain cooperation between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. He sent Harry Hopkins, Roosevelt's adviser, to Moscow, and he backed the efforts of Secretary of State James Byrnes to reach some common ground with Russia. When it became apparent that the cold war was intensifying, Truman turned to a policy of containment of Russia. George C. Marshall succeeded (1947) Byrnes, and Truman, following the course of aid and rehabilitation of the war-torn European countries enunciated in the Truman Doctrine, supported the Marshall Plan for European recovery. Aid was given to Greece, then in the throes of a postwar civil conflict, to suppress Communist forces, and to Turkey, as a defense against Russian advances in the Middle East. Under Dean Acheson, who became Secretary of State in 1949, this program was intensified; the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was established (1949) and overtures were made even to Communist Yugoslavia in an attempt to form a coalition to prevent the spread of Communism to new territories. A climax in the undeclared war with Russia was reached in 1950 when American troops, with the sanction of the United Nations, were thrown into Korea to halt the invasion of the Republic of Korea (South Korea) by Russian-trained North Koreans, later reinforced by troops of the Chinese People's Republic. But relations with Congress had deteriorated to such an extent that even this generally approved policy was criticized. Truman, in 1948, after an election campaign in which he traveled throughout the country pillorying the 80th Congress (Republican-dominated as a result of the 1946 elections) for its policies, had been elected president in what was probably the most unexpected victory in American political history. Almost every political expert and the great majority of public-opinion polls indicated that he would be badly defeated by his Republican opponent, Thomas E. Dewey. But Truman obtained a popular plurality of more than two million votes and gained 303 electoral votes to Dewey's 189 despite the defection from regular Democratic ranks of a number of Southern states. Despite this victory, Congressional opposition did not cease; the nominal control of Congress by the Democrats was hindered by a voting coalition of Southern Democrats and Republicans to balk Truman's attempts to have passed such aspects of his "Fair Deal" program as repeal or modification of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act (which Truman nevertheless several times invoked) and passage of a civil rights bill. Congress instead turned its principal energies to investigating, in its various committees, administration aides and policies; scandals involving gifts to government employees (mink coats, home freezers, and the like) were uncovered; the conviction for perjury of Alger Hiss, an administrative aide accused of Communist affiliation, was widely used as an indication of corruption within the administration. Early in 1951, after a sharp clash of views, Truman recalled Douglas MacArthur, U.S. and United Nations commander in Korea and the Far East. The ensuing controversy was more and more directed at the foreign policy of the government under Secretary Acheson. In 1952 Truman refused renomination for the presidency, but he campaigned vigorously for Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic nominee. The victory of Dwight Eisenhower by some seven million votes was widely interpreted as a verdict of popular non-confidence in an administration weakened by too many years in office.

Truman Doctrine. Program of international assistance enunciated by President Harry S. Truman in a speech before the U.S. Congress on March 12, 1947. Truman proposed that the U.S. should give assistance to "free peoples resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or outside pressures." The immediate occasion of the message was President Truman's request for 400 million dollars for military and economic assistance to Greece and Turkey, but in its broader implications the speech set a U.S. global policy for containing and opposing Communism. It is commonly regarded as marking a turning point in post-World War II relations between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R.

Trumann (trō'man). City in NE Arkansas, in Poinsett County; formerly a lumber center, now site of a wood-working industry. 3,744 (1950).

Trumbić (trōm'bich), Ante. b. in Dalmatia, May 17, 1864; d. at Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Nov. 18, 1938. Yugoslav statesman, active in the South Slav nationalist movement before World War I and in the formation (1918-19) of the new Yugoslav state. He served as foreign minister (1918-20), and as representative at the Paris peace conference (1919).

Trumbull (trūm'būl). Town in SW Connecticut, in Fairfield County. 8,641 (1950).

Trumbull, Benjamin. b. at Hebron, Conn., Dec. 19, 1735; d. at North Haven, Conn., Feb. 2, 1820. American clergyman and historian. His chief works are Complete History of Connecticut from 1630 till 1713 (1797) and General History of the United States of America (1765, 1810).

Trumbull, Henry Clay. b. at Stonington, Conn., June 8, 1830; d. at Philadelphia, Dec. 8, 1903. American Congregational clergyman and religious writer; brother of James Hammond Trumbull.

Trumbull, James Hammond. b. at Stonington, Conn., Dec. 20, 1821; d. at Hartford, Conn., Aug. 5, 1897. American philologist and historical writer, an authority on the languages of the North American Indians; brother of Henry Clay Trumbull. His works include Defense of Stonington (1864), Composition of Indian Geographical Names (1870), Best Method of Studying the Indian Languages (1871), several works on Algonquian, The True Blue Laves of Connecticut and New Haven (1877), Indian Names of Places in . . . Connecticut (1881), and others.

Trumbull, John. b. at Westbury, Conn., April 24, 1750; d. at Detroit, Mich., May 11, 1831. American lawyer and poet, a prominent member of the Connecticut Wits. He wrote the satirical The Progress of Dumbness (1772-73), criticizing educational methods, and the burlesque epic McFingal (1775-76; complete work published in 1782) in imitation of Hudibras; he collaborated with Joel Barlow and others on the Anarchiad. He also wrote An Elegy on the Times (1774). The Poetical Works of John Trumbull (2 vols.) appeared in 1820.

Trumbull, John. b. at Lebanon, Conn., June 6, 1756; d. at New York, Nov. 10, 1843. American painter; son of Jonathan Trumbull (1710-85). He served in the Revolutionary War, attaining the rank of colonel and deputy adjutant general, studied at London under Benjamin West, and on the Continent, and settled as a portrait painter at New York in 1804. He gave a large collection of his paintings to Yale. Among his works are portraits of Washington, Adams, Jefferson, and others, Battle of Bunker Hill, Death of Montgomery, and four pictures in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington (The Declaration of Independence, The Surrender of Burgoyne, The Surrender of Cornwallis, and The Resignation of Washington).

Trumbull, Jonathan. b. at Lebanon, Conn., Oct. 12, 1710; d. there, Aug. 17, 1785. American magistrate and patriot. He was a businessman and later a Whig leader in New England during the Revolutionary period, and was governor of Connecticut (1769-83). He was a friend and adviser of Washington, and is said to have been the original "Brother Jonathan," that being Washington's familiar name for him.

Trumbull, Jonathan. b. at Lebanon, Conn., March 26, 1740; d. there, Aug. 7, 1809. American statesman; son of Jonathan Trumbull (1710-85). He served on Washington's staff in the Revolutionary War, and was Federalist member of Congress from Connecticut (1789-95), speaker of the House (1791-93), U.S. senator (1795-96), and governor of Connecticut (1798-1809).

Trumbull, Joseph. b. at Lebanon, Conn., March 11, 1737; d. July 23, 1778. American merchant and soldier; son of Jonathan Trumbull (1710-85). He joined (1756) in his father's mercantile business, served (1767 et seq.) in the Connecticut general assembly, was a member (1774) of the Continental Congress, and in 1775 was named commissary general of the Continental Army. He held this post until 1777, and served (1777-78) on the board of war.

Trumbull, Lyman. b. at Colchester, Conn., Oct. 12, 1813; d. June 25, 1896. American jurist and legislator. He settled (1837) in Illinois, where he practiced law and served (1848-54) as justice of the state supreme court. As a senator from Illinois (1855-73), he served as chairman of the judiciary committee, and in this capacity introduced (1864) the resolution which became the 13th Amendment to the Federal Constitution. He was one of the few Republicans who supported President Johnson in his impeachment trial. After leaving the Senate, he resumed the practice of law at Chicago, but remained active in national politics.

Trümmelsbach (trūm'el.bäch). Cascade in the Bernese Oberland, Switzerland, near Lauterbrunnen. Height, ab. 950 ft.

Trumper (trūm'pēr), Victor Thomas. b. at Sydney, Australia, Nov. 2, 1877; d. there, June 28, 1915. Australian cricketer, considered by some the greatest batsman of his generation. He played 402 innings in first-class matches for 17,150 runs at an average of just over 45. He reached his peak with the Australian team in England (1902).

Truncheon (trūn'yon), Commodore Hawser. Kind-hearted uncle of Peregrine Pickle, in Tobias Smollett's novel of that name.

Truro (trō'rō). City, municipal borough, market town, and seaport in SW England, in Cornwall, ab. 9 mi. N of Falmouth, ab. 279 mi. SW of London by rail. It carries on tin smelting, now mostly with imported ores. It was an important lead-producing area in Roman times. 12,851 (1951).

Truro. Town in Nova Scotia, Canada, in Colchester County, situated on an arm of Minas Basin, Bay of Fundy, ab. 54 mi. NE of Halifax, with which it is connected by road and rail. 10,756 (1951).

Truro, Baron. Title of Wilde, Thomas.

Trusteeship Council, United Nations. See United Nations Trusteeship Council.

Trustees of Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheaton 518 (1819) (dārt'muth; wūd'ward). See Dartmouth College Case.

Trustram (trus'tram). See Tristan.

Truth. Poem by Geoffrey Chaucer, usually known as Flee from the Press ("Flee from the Press").

Truth (trōth), Sojourner. b. in Ulster County, N.Y., in the latter part of the 18th century; d. at Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 26, 1883. American Negro lecturer and reformer, originally a slave. She probably obtained her freedom in 1817, when New York liberated all its slaves who were over 40 years of age.

Truth or Consequences. [Former name, Hot Springs.] Town in SW New Mexico, county seat of Sierra County, on the Rio Grande; health resort. Its name was officially changed (to match that of a radio show very popular at the time) during the decade 1940-50. Pop. 4,563 (1950).

Trutnov (trōt'nōf). [German, Trautenauf.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Hradec Králové, in NW Bohemia, ab. 72 mi. NE of Prague and S of the Riesengebirge. It is the center of the linen-weaving industry in E Bohemia. Here on June 27, 1866, the Austrians defeated the Prussians; on the following day the Prussians defeated the Austrians, thereby opening the mountain passes for the advancing Prussian armies. 18,320 (1947).

Truxillo (trō-nē'yō). See Trujillo.

Truxton (truks'tun), Thomas. [Also, Truxton.] b. at what is now Jamaica, in Queens, N.Y., Feb. 17, 1755; d. at Philadelphia, May 5, 1822. American naval officer, a commander of privateers in the Revolutionary War. In the French naval war he commanded the Constellation and defeated the frigate L'Insurgente on Feb. 9, 1799, and La Vengeance in January, 1800, but the latter escaped owing to a storm.

Truxton, William Talbot. b. at Philadelphia, March 11, 1824; d. Feb. 25, 1887. American naval officer; grandson of Thomas Truxton. Entering the U.S. navy as a midshipman (1841), he became (1861) executive officer of the Dale, a vessel of the North Atlantic blockading squadron of the Union navy, became (1862) a lieutenant commander, and commanded (1863-65) the gunboat Tacony, which was attached to Admiral David Dixon Porter's squadron during the two attacks (December, 1864, and January, 1865) on Fort Fisher, N.C.

Trygger (trüg'ër). Ernest. b. at Stockholm, Oct. 27, 1857; d. there, Sept. 23, 1943. Swedish political leader and educator, who as premier (1923-24) and foreign minister (1928-30) favored a policy of Scandinavian cooperation. He was elected (1897) to the first chamber of the Riksdag (parliament), soon becoming a leader of the Conservative deputies, and was opposed to dissolution of the union with Norway. He served (1920-22, 1929) as a delegate to the League of Nations, and held (1926 et seq.) the post of chancellor of the national university system.

Tryggve Gran (trüg'vë grän). Mount. See Gran, Mount.

Trygvasson (trüg'vä.són) or Trygvesson (trüg'vë.són), Olaf. See Olaf (of Norway).

Tryon (trí'on). Dwight William. b. at Hartford, Conn., 1849; d. July 1, 1925. American landscape painter.

Tryon, William. b. in Ireland, 1729; d. at London, Jan. 27, 1788. British colonial governor in America. As governor of North Carolina (1763-71) he suppressed the revolt of the "Regulators." He was governor of New York (1771-78), being forced to govern for almost a year (1775-76) from a ship in the harbor until the British retook the city, and conducted various expeditions against Connecticut in the Revolutionary War, burning Danbury and Norwalk.

Trystan (tris'tän) or Trystrem (tris'trem) or Trystren (tris'tren). See Tristan.

Try the Sky. Novel by Francis Stuart, published in 1933.

Trzebiatów (tshe.byá'tóf). [German, Treptow an der Rega.] Town in NW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Szczecin, formerly in Pomerania, Germany, situated on the Rega River near the Baltic Sea, SW of Kolobrzeg (Kolberg); lumber industry; agricultural trade. The town came to Poland in 1945. Pop. 10,883 (1939), 5,995 (1946).

Trzyniec (tshi'nyets). Polish name of Trinec.

Tsaidam (tsi'dám). Basin in W China, in the province of Tsinghai. It is enclosed by the Altyn Tagh on the N, the Nan Shan on the E, and the Kunlun Shan on the S. The area is rocky and in many places covered with sand. There are numerous swamps and salt lakes, fed by mountain rivers, that have no outlet. Length, ab. 350 mi.; width, ab. 150 mi.; elevation, ab. 9,000 ft.

Tsai T'ien (tsi tyen'). See Kwang-hü.

Ts'ai T'ing-k'ai (tsi' ting'k'i'). b. at Lotien, Kwangtung, China, 1890—. Chinese soldier, hero of the 1932 defense of Shanghai against the Japanese. Of a poor peasant family, he joined the army at 16 as a common soldier and rose to command (1932) the 19th Route Army at Shanghai. Opposing Chiang Kai-shek's policy toward Japan, he led (1932) independent resistance at Shanghai and played a leading part (1933-34) in the Fukien rebellion. After a period of retirement he helped Li Chi-shen establish (1948) the Revolutionary Committee of the Kuomintang.

Ts'ai Yüan-p'ei (tsi' yüán'p'ä'). b. at Shaohsing, Chekiang, China, 1867; d. at Hong Kong, March 5, 1940. Chinese scholar, revolutionary leader, and government official. He received the highest academic degrees under the empire, but worked with Sun Yat-sen for a Chinese republic. As minister of education (1911-13, 1927), chancellor of Peking University (1917-23), and president (1928-40) of the Academia Sinica he won a reputation for both scholarship and liberalism.

Tsaldaris (tsäl.tsal'ris). Constantine. b. at Alexandria, Egypt, 1884—. Greek political leader. He served as governor of Patras and Corfu (1916-17), minister to Crete (1920-22), and a deputy from Corinth. He took part in the counterrevolution of 1926, for which he was imprisoned in the same year. Deputy from Athens (1932 et seq.), he was undersecretary of communications (1933-35) and of state (1936-40). Active in the resistance during Axis occupation (1941-44), he was arrested by the Italians, but escaped to Egypt in 1944. He headed the royalist Populist Party (1946 et seq.). He was prime minister and minister of foreign affairs (1946-47), and deputy prime minister and minister of foreign affairs (1947-50). He was instrumental in winning the plebiscite for the return of George II (1943).

Tsaldaris, Panayoti. b. 1868; d. 1936. Greek political leader; cousin of Constantine Tsaldaris. When, under the leadership of Eleutherios Venizelos, Greece became a republic in 1924, a strong royalist faction continued active in politics, organized as the Populist Party. Panayoti Tsaldaris, a leader of this party, became premier in October, 1932, when Venizelos resigned after his followers failed to secure a majority of seats in a parliamentary election. The Tsaldaris government fell, on an issue of financial policy, in January, 1933, and Venizelos resumed the premiership, only to suffer electoral defeat again in March of that year. Tsaldaris again became head of the government. In September a Greco-Turkish nonaggression treaty was signed, and in 1934 Turkey, Yugoslavia, and Rumania joined with Greece in a Balkan alliance. Meanwhile the Populist regime, though pledged to loyalty to the republic, seemed to be moving toward restoration of the monarchy; so at least it appeared to the Venizelists, who in March, 1935, attempted an armed insurrection, which was suppressed by General George Kondylis. Elections were held in June of that year, but were boycotted by the republicans, with the result that the royalists captured almost all the parliamentary seats. Tsaldaris continued to head the cabinet, but his leniency toward the defeated party led to his ouster in a coup d'état, in October, 1935, led by General Kondylis.

Tsana (tsá'ná). Lake. See Tana, Lake.

Ts'ang Chieh (tsäng' jyá'). Legendary inventor of Chinese written characters.

Tsangpo (tsäng'pó). A name of the Brahmaputra in Tibet.

Tsangwu (tsäng'wó'). See Wuchow.

Tsankov (tsän'küf). Aleksandr. b. at Orekhovo, Bulgaria, 1879—. Bulgarian nationalist leader. As prime minister (1923-26) he conducted a purge of his political opponents, notably the Communists. He organized (1934) the rightist National and Social Movement, and went into exile (1944) upon realization of the approaching defeat of Germany.

Ts'ao K'un (tsou' kún'). b. at Tientsin, China, 1862; d. 1938. Chinese warlord, originally a protégé of Yüan Shih-k'ai. In the civil war following Yüan's death (1916) he aligned himself with the Chihli clique, and served (1923-24) as president of the republic. Ousted (1924) by Chang Tso-lin and Feng Yü-hsiang, he retired to Dairen, in Manchuria.

Tsarevokokshayak (tsä'ri.vó kók'shisk). A former name of Ioshkar-Ola.

Tsaritsyn (tsä.ré'tsin). Former name of Stalingrad, city.

Tsarskoe Selo (tsär.skó.ye sló'). [Official name (since 1937), Pushkin.] Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 15 mi. S of Leningrad. It contains a famous imperial palace, formerly a favorite summer residence of the court. The Old Palace, begun in 1744, is 780 ft. long. The interior is richly decorated: the walls of one room are encrusted with amber, those of another with lapis lazuli. The magnificent marble gallery, 270 ft. long, connects the palace with a detached building. The park is full of curiosities, such as a Chinese tower and village, an Egyptian pyramid, a Turkish kiosk, and the so-called doll-houses of the princesses. During World War II the town was occupied by the Germans during the siege of Leningrad, and suffered extensive damage. 24,530 (1926).

Tsaukwe (tsou'kwä'). Central Bushman group of S Africa, inhabiting NW Bechuanaland.

Tschad (chät). German name of Chad, Lake.

Tschaikovsky (chikófski), Peter Ilich. See Tchайковский, Peter Ilich.

Tschakste (chák'ste). See Čakste, Jānis.

Tschaslau (chás'lou). A German name of Čáslav.

Tscheliads (chä'lyäts). German name of Czeladz.

Tschenstochow (chin.stó.hó'). See Częstochowa.

Tscherinoff (che.ré'nof). Marie. See Zandt, Marie Van.

Tschermak-Seysenegg (cher'mäk.zí'ze.nek), Erich von. b. at Vienna, Nov. 15, 1871—. Austrian botanist; son of Gustav von Tschermak-Seysenegg. He served as professor (1909 et seq.) at the college of agriculture at Vienna. Simultaneously with Hugo de Vries and Karl Erich Correns he rediscovered (1900) the Mendelian laws of heredity, confirming their validity. Author of Versuche über Pflanzenhybriden von Gregor Mendel (1901).

Tschermak-Seysenegg, Gustav von. b. at Littau (now Litovel) in Moravia, April 19, 1836; d. at Vienna, May 4, 1927. Austrian mineralogist. He was a specialist in petrography, crystallography, and the study of meteorites, and published Lehrbuch der Mineralogie (2nd ed., 1885), and numerous scientific papers.

Tschigorin (chē.gō'rin), Mikhail I. See Chigorin, Mikhail I.

Tschingelberg Landslip (ching'el.berk). See under Elm, Switzerland.

Tschirky (chir'ki), Oscar. [Called "Oscar of the Waldorff."] b. at Loche, Neuchâtel, Switzerland, Sept. 28, 1866; d. at New Paltz, N.Y., Nov. 6, 1950. American maître d'hôtel, internationally famous as host (1893 et seq.) at the Waldorff-Astoria Hotel at New York. He began his career at the Hoffman House and later was engaged at Delmonico's.

Tschirnhausen (chirn'hau.zen), Count Ehrenfried Walther von. [Also, Tschirnhaus (chirn'hous).] b. at Kiesslingswalde, near Görlitz, Germany, April 10, 1651; d. at Dresden, Germany, Oct. 11, 1708. German mathematician. He served for a time with the Dutch army and wrote articles, published in the Acta eruditiorum, on the theory of equations and the applications of the calculus to the theory of curves. He is best known for the "Tschirnhausen transformations" of algebra.

Tschirpan (chir.pän'). See Chirpan.

Tschudi (chō'dē), Aegidius. [Also, Gilg Tschudi.] b. at Glarus, Switzerland, 1505; d. Feb. 28, 1572. Swiss historian and Roman Catholic theologian, considered "the father of Swiss history." He was chief magistrate (1558 et seq.) of the canton of Glarus. His most noted work is his Chronicon Helveticum, a Swiss history of the period 1000-1470, published (1734-36) after his death, and marred, unfortunately, by a number of inaccuracies and even forgeries.

Tschudi, Burkhard. Original name of Shudi, Burkart. Tschudi, Johann Jakob von. b. at Glarus, Switzerland, July 25, 1818; d. Oct. 8, 1889. Swiss naturalist, philologist, and diplomat. He traveled (1838-43) in Peru, and later again in South America, and was ambassador to Brazil (1860) and to Austria (1866-68). He wrote Fauna Peruana (1844-47), Peruanische Reise-skizzen (1846), Die Kechua-Sprache (1853), Reisen durch Südamerika (1866-68), Organismus der Kechua-Sprache (1884), and similar works, and was one of the authors of Antigüedades Peruanas (1851).

Tse Hsi (tsu' shē'). See Tzu Hsi.

Tseng or Tsung (tsung', dzung'), Marquis. [Full name, Tseng Chi-tse.] b. 1839; d. April 12, 1890. Chinese diplomat, ambassador at Paris, London, and St. Petersburg.

Tserclaes (tsēr.klās'), Johann. See Tilly, Johann Tserclaes, Count of.

Tserkov (tsēr'kof). See Belaya Tserkov.

Tshaka (chā'kā). See Shaka.

Tshiquite (chē.kē'tā). See under Pecos, N.M.

Tshopi (chō'pē). See Chopi.

Tsing (gyang'), T. F. [Original name, Chiang T'ing-fu.] b. at Paoching, Hunan, China, 1895-. Chinese public official, long a member of the Kuomintang. He taught (1923-35) at Nankai and Tsinghua universities, directed (1935-36) the political affairs department of the Executive Yuan, and served as ambassador to the U.S.S.R. (1936-38). He succeeded (November, 1947) Quo Tai-chi as chief Chinese delegate to the United Nations.

Tsimlyanskaya Dam (tsim.lyän'ska.ya). Large hydroelectric power and irrigation dam in the U.S.S.R., in the Don River ab. 110 mi. E of Rostov-on-Don. It was dedicated on Sept. 20, 1951, when the first water flowed through the sluices. The dam forms a reservoir ab. 125 mi. in length, with a maximum width of ab. 19 mi. The water level of the Don is raised by ab. 85 ft. Total length of dam, ab. 8.4 mi.; height of central portion, ab. 130 ft.

Tsimshian (tsim'shian). [Also: Chimmesyan, Chimsian.] Group of North American Indian tribes, inhabiting the W coast of British Columbia and the inland areas on both sides of the Skeena River. Their culture is a typical north Pacific coast fishing, sealing, and hunting culture. The language forms an independent family, but a Penutian relationship has been suggested.

Tsinan (tsi.nän'), Chinese, jē'nän'. [Also: Chinan, Licheng.] City in E China, capital of the province of Shantung, situated near the Hwang Ho, ab. 240 mi. S of Peiping; important road and rail junction, and trading center. There are silk-textile, cotton-textile, flour-milling, vegetable-oil, and other industries. The city is the center of an area of great historical and archaeological importance. Area of municipality, ab. 69 sq. mi.; pop. 591,490 (1946).

Tsing (sing'). [Properly Ta Tsing.] Name of the Manchu dynasty of China (1644-1912).

Tsinghai (ching'hī'). [Also: Chinghai, Koko Nor.] Province in W central China, bordered by Kansu on the E and N, Sinkiang on the NW, Tibet on the SW, Sikang on the S, and Szechwan on the SE. The area is largely a high, arid tableland, traversed by numerous mountain ranges of the NE portion of the Tibetan Plateau, and the Nan Shan. Much of the area is above 10,000 ft. in elevation, and the lower basins and valleys are dry, with numerous salt lakes. Here are found the headwaters of the Yangtze River and the Tsing Hai (or Koko Nor) salt lake. Most of the population lives in the deep valleys, where the lower elevation provides meager agricultural and grazing possibilities. The chief food is parched barley (tsamba) and a tea made from sour milk and brick tea. Capital, Sining; area, ab. 320,000 sq. mi.; pop. 1,317,364 (1950).

Tsing Hai (ching' hī'). [Also: Ching Hai, Koko Nor, Kuku Nor.] Large salt lake in N central China, in the province of Tsinghai. Length, ab. 66 mi.; elevation, ab. 10,662 ft.

Tsingkiang (tsing'kyang'; Chinese, jing'jyang'). See Tsinkiang.

Tsingling Shan (ching'ling' shān'). See Tsinling Shan. Tsingtao (ching'dōu'). [Also, Chingtao.] Seaport in E China, in the province of Shantung, on the S coast of the peninsula. It was a German treaty port from 1898 and was developed into a modern naval base with several dry docks; the German lease was ended after World War I. Tsingtao is the third ranking port of N China (after Tientsin and Dairen) and has cotton-textile, silk, food-processing, match, leather, machinery, and cigarette industries, and shipyards. Area of municipality, 285 sq. mi.; pop. 759,057 (1946).

Tsingyuan (ching'yüän'). See Paoting.

Tsinkiang (tsing'kyang'; Chinese, jing'jyang'). [Also: Chinchinag, Tsingkiang; former name, Chuanchow or Chuanchowfu, also spelled Chinchew, Chinchew, Chinchu.] City in SE China, in Fukien province, ab. 50 mi. NE of Amoy; formerly an important port, and, probably identical with the medieval Zaitun or Zayton, visited by Marco Polo. 50,311 (1944).

Tsinling Shan (ching'ling' shān'). [Also: Chin Ling Shan, Tsinling Shan.] Range of mountains in C China, in the provinces of Kansu, Shensi, and Honan. One of the most important ranges in China, it divides the humid S from the drier N. It is a major barrier to the moist air flowing into C China from the Pacific Ocean. Rice is the important crop on the S side, while wheat is raised on the N. Continuations of this range extend almost to the coast. Elevation, up to 13,668 ft.

Tsitsihar (tsē.tē.hār'). [Also, Lungkiang.] City in NE China, capital of the province of Heilungkiang, Manchuria, on the Nonni River, a tributary of the Sungari. The city was developed by the Russians when the Chinese Eastern Railroad was built. Lumber milling, soybean pressing, and flour milling are the chief industries. It is a trading center and rail junction. Area of municipality, ab. 26 sq. mi.; pop. 174,675 (1946).

Tskhinvali (tsin'vā.li). Former name of Stalinir.

Tskwe (tsō'kwā). See Chokwe.

Tsomé (tsō'mō). See Sumé.

Tsonekan (tsō'ne.kān). See Tehuelche.

Tsong-ka-pa or Tsong-kha-pa (tsōng'kā'pā). b. 1358; d. 1419. Tibetan Buddhist reformer, founder of the 13th sect of Buddhism to which the Dalai Lama belongs. He was a native of north China, and founded a monastery near Lhasa, Tibet, that is today a shrine to those who look upon him as a second Buddha. He made attempts during his lifetime to eliminate the tantrism in Tibetan Buddhism.

Tsopi (tsō'pē). See Chopi.

Tsotso (tsō'tsō). [Also, Butsotso.] Small Bantu subgroup of the Kavirondo peoples of Kenya, in E Africa.

Tsu (tsō). City in S Honshu, Japan, capital of Mie prefecture, ab. 40 mi. SW of Nagoya. It is a seaport, and has important cotton-textile industries. 76,077 (1950).

Tsugaru Strait (tsō.gā.rō). [Also: Sangar Strait; Japanese, Tsugara Kaikyo (tsō.gā.rā kīkyō).] Sea passage which separates the island of Honshu, Japan, from the island of Hokkaido, and connects the Sea of Japan with the Pacific. Length, ab. 100 mi.

Tsu Hsi (tsu' shē). See Tzu Hsi.

Tsumeb (tsō'meb). Small town in the NE part of South-West Africa, connected by rail with Grootfontein and the narrow-gauge line from Usakos: the chief copper-mining center in the territory. Vanadium, lead, and silver are also found. European pop. 580 (1946).

Tsung (tsung', dzung'), Marquis. See Tseng, Marquis.

Tsuruga (tsō.rō.gā). City in NW Honshu, Japan, ab. 60 mi. NW of Nagoya: an important transit port on the Sea of Japan, with steamship services to Vladivostok and Korean ports. Pop. ab. 30,000.

Tsushima (tsō.shē.mā). Island in the N Pacific, belonging to Japan, in Korea Strait S of Korea and NW of Kyushu. Area, 271 sq. mi.; pop. 60,376 (1950).

Tsushima, Battle of. [Also, Battle of the Sea of Japan.] Naval battle fought by the Japanese fleet under Admiral Heihachiro Togo and the Russian squadron under Admiral Zinovi Rozhdestvenski in the eastern channel of Korea Strait, off the island of Tsushima, May 27-28, 1905. Of the 38 vessels of the Russian fleet, 22 were sunk and six captured.

Tswa (tswā). [Also: Abutua, Batswa, Vatswa.] Northern subgroup of the Tonga, a Bantu-speaking people of S Mozambique, in SE Africa. This subgroup includes the Vilankulu, Mukhambi, Hlabangwana, Masinge, Yingwana, and Makwakwa.

Tswana (tswā'nā). [Also: Bechuana, Chuana, Chwana.] Bantu-speaking people of the western Sotho group in S Africa, inhabiting Bechuanaland protectorate and N Union of South Africa. According to tradition they were formerly all ruled by a king, but they are now divided into the following independent subgroups: the Hurutse, Kalahari, Kgatla, Kwena, Maletse, Ngwaketse, Ngwato, Rolong, Tawana, Thlaping, Thlaro, and Tlokwa. Their population in Bechuanaland, including subjects from other tribes, has been estimated at 260,000 (by I. Schapera, A Handbook of Tswana Law and Custom, 1938). Descent is patrilineal. They practice hoe agriculture and cattle herding, with the cattle complex. Their principal foods are maize ("mealies") and sorghum ("Kafir corn").

Tu (tō). See also Tibesti.

Tu. One of the major gods of C and E Polynesia. Tu figures most widely as god of war, but in some islands has other roles, and in some is not known at all. The richest local mythologies make Tu one of the sons of Atea and Papa, or their counterparts. There is reason to believe that Tu and other major gods may represent the deification of some leader of early voyagers.

Tuam (tū'am). Market town in the Irish Republic, in Connacht province and County Galway, situated on the river Clare ab. 19 mi. NE of Galway city, 4,020 (1951).

Tuan Chi-jui (dwān' chē'rā'). b. at Hoi, Anhwei, China, 1865; d. 1936. Chinese warlord who rose to power with Yuan Shih-k'ai. He served intermittently as premier (1916-18), became founder and leader (1918) of the pro-Japanese Anfu clique, and shared control (1924-26) of Peiping (Peking) with other warlords, subsequently retiring to become a devotee of Buddhism.

Tuan Yang (dwān' yāng'). (Called the Dragon Boat Festival.) Festival observed, especially in C and S China, on the 5th of the 5th moon. Races in boats with dragon-headed prows or decorated like a dragon are conducted to propitiate water deities dating from the 3rd or 4th century A.C. The dragon king who controls rain is especially propitiated, formerly with cakes thrown into the rivers. The races end in feasts.

Tuapse (tō.äp'sē). City in SW U.S.S.R., in Krasnodar Territory of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Black Sea between Sochi and Novorossiisk: an important oil-shipping port, linked by pipe line and railroad with the oil fields of N Caucasus. It has petroleum-refining, machinery, and food industries. Pop. ab. 30,000 (1939).

Tuareg (twā'reg). [Also: Touareg, Twareg.] Berber-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting a large area in the W Sahara. Their population has been estimated at 300,000 (by Y. Urvoy, Petit Atlas ethnographique du Soudan, 1942). They call themselves Kel Taghlmus ("people of the veil"), referring to the narrow strips of cloth worn by Tuareg men over the lower part of the face. Tuareg women are unveiled, although all Tuareg profess Mohammedanism. Their society is divided into pastoral nobles, agricultural serfs, and slaves not permitted to wear veils. Their language, which is known as Tamashag (or Temajeh or Tamahag or Tamasheg), is written in an alphabetic script known as Tifinagh. The Tuareg are grouped into four geographical subdivisions, centered at Ahaggar, Azjer, Air, and the Niger valley. They are a mixture of Caucasoid and Negroid.

Tuatha De Danann (tō.ä'hā dā.nā'n). In Old Irish mythology, literally, "the people of the goddess Dana (or Danu)". They were the tall, beautiful, immortal, divine race of Ireland. Dagda, the god, was their king. In the mythological chronicles, especially in the Book of Invasions, they were descendants of the Nemedians (legendary people from Scythia, the third people to invade Ireland) of whom surviving remnants fled to Greece after their defeat, there became so learned and skilled in magic and druidism as to be called the Tuatha De Danann, and returned to Ireland, the fourth invading people. They descended on Ireland from the sea out of a great mist and conquered the Fomorians, according to the Book of Invasions, in the 15th century B.C. They in turn were defeated by the Milesians, and disappeared into the hills and mounds of Ireland, gradually became referred to as aes side, "the people of the mounds," and eventually came to be regarded as the fairies of modern Irish folklore.

Tubal (tū'bal). In the Bible, one of the sons of Japheth. According to the account in Gen. x. 2, he was renowned as an archer.

Tubal. Jewish friend of Shylock, in Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice.

Tubal-Cain (tū'bal-kā'n'). In the Bible, the third son of Lamech, the Cainite. He was the first smith, a worker in brass and iron, according to Gen. iv. 22.

Tubantes (tū.ban'tēz). Ancient Germanic tribe located on the right bank of the Rhine in territory afterward occupied by the Usipites (Ptolemy, however, places the tribe further to the south, near the Chatti).

Tubbergen (tub'ér.chen). Commune and town in E Netherlands, in the province of Overijssel, near the German border: dairies and agricultural trade. 10,997 (1939).

Tubières (tū.byer). Anne Claude Philippe de. See Caylus, Anne Claude Philippe de Tubières, Comte de.

Tübingen (tū'bing.en). City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Hohenzollern, French Zone, formerly in the Black Forest Kreis (district) of the state of Württemberg, situated at the junction of the Ammer and Neckar rivers, ab. 18 mi. SW of Stuttgart: manufactures of metal articles, precision instruments, shoes, chemicals, paper goods, and knitwear; agricultural trade. The university, founded in 1477, contains a large library, and considerable archaeological collections. The seminary was the leading proponent of the liberal interpretation of Protestantism in the 19th century, particularly under the influence of F. C. Baur, the founder of the so-called Tübingen School of philosophy. Tübingen has churches of the 15th and 16th centuries, a Rathaus (town hall) of 1435-46, and other monuments of the 15th to 18th centuries. It was conquered by the French marshal Turenne in 1647, and the fortifications were razed by the French in 1688. The population increased in the period 1939-46 by 20.6 percent. 34,345 (1946), 37,506 (1950).

Tübingen School. Name given to the school of modern rationalistic philosophy which took its rise (1825-60) at the University of Tübingen, in Germany, under Ferdinand Christian Baur. The fundamental principle of this school is that the books of the New Testament were written for the purpose of establishing certain opinions and parties in the early church; that many of them were written later than the dates usually assigned to them; and that they are valuable rather as indications of the spirit of the early church than as authoritative revelations or even as authentic records. The name is also sometimes, though more rarely, given to an earlier group in the same university which taught almost exactly the reverse, namely, the credibility, integrity, and authority of the New Testament.

Tubman (tub'man), William V. S. b. at Harper, Liberia, Nov. 29, 1895-. Liberian statesman, president of Liberia (1943 et seq.). He was collector of internal revenue (1919-22) and sat in the Liberian senate (1923-31, 1934-37). In 1937 he was appointed an associate justice of the supreme court, resigning in 1943 to run for the presidency of the country. A member of the True Whig Party, he was elected to an eight-year term (1943) and reelected in 1951.

Tubus (tô'bôz). See Tibbus.

Tucca (tuk'a), Captain. Bragging bully in Ben Jonson's Poetaster. Thomas Dekker introduces him in his Satiromastix, but without the success which attended Jonson's character.

Tucci (tuk'si). Former name of Martos, Spain.

Tuck (tuk), Amos. b. at Parsonfield, Me., Aug. 2, 1810; d. Dec. 11, 1879. American lawyer and legislator. He was a member (1847-53) of Congress, where he was active as an antislavery man. A trustee (1853-79) of Phillips Exeter Academy, he was also a trustee (1857-66) of Dartmouth College, where the Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance was founded (1900) by his son, Edward Tuck.

Tuck, Edward. b. at Exeter, N.H., Aug. 24, 1842; d. at Monte Carlo, April 30, 1938. American banker and philanthropist; son of Amos Tuck. Founder (1900) of the Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance, which was named in honor of his father, at Dartmouth College, he also donated (1930) the Petit Palais collection of art to the city of Paris.

Tuck, Friar. Vagabond monk in the English Robin Hood cycle of ballads and a character in the morris dances and May Day plays. Sir Walter Scott introduces him in Ivanhoe as the "holy clerk of Copmanhurst."

Tuckahoe (tuk'a.hô). Village in SE. New York, in Westchester County; a northern suburb of New York, 5,991 (1950).

Tucker (tuk'ér), Abraham. [Pseudonym, Edward Search.] b. at London, Sept. 2, 1705; d. Nov. 20, 1774. English metaphysician and moralist. He wrote under his pseudonym The Light of Nature Pursued (4 vols., 1768, and 3 vols. edited after his death; edited again by H. P. Milmay, 1805).

Tucker, Benjamin Ricketson. b. near New Bedford, Mass., April 17, 1854; d. in Monaco, June 22, 1939. American anarchist, known as a "philosophical anarchist" because of his opposition to violence. He founded (1877) and edited The Radical Review, and founded (1881) and edited (1881-1908) Liberty, which printed the works of George Bernard Shaw. He translated (1888) Leo Tolstoy's Kreutzer Sonata.

Tucker, Charlotte Maria. [Pseudonym, A.L.O.E.] b. in Middlesex, England, May 8, 1821; d. at Amritsar, India, Dec. 2, 1893. English writer of religious works and books for young people. Her pseudonym consists of the initials of the phrase "A Lady of England." When she was 54 years old she went as a missionary to India, and worked there for 18 years. She wrote more than 50 volumes.

Tucker, Frederick St. George de Latour. Original name of Booth-Tucker, Frederick St. George de Latour.

Tucker, George. b. in Bermuda, Aug. 20, 1775; d. in Albemarle County, Va., April 10, 1861. American legislator, political economist, and writer. He began the practice of law at Richmond, Va., served (1819-25) in Congress, and was professor of moral philosophy (1825-45) at the University of Virginia, where he was the first chairman of the faculty. Author of numerous works, including The Life of Thomas Jefferson (2 vols., 1837), The Laws of Wages, Profits, and Rent Investigated (1837), The Theory of Money and Banks Investigated (1839), The History of the United States (4 vols., 1856-57), Political Economy for the People (1859), and Essays, Moral and Metaphysical (1860).

Tucker, Gilbert Milligan. b. at Albany, N.Y., Aug. 26, 1847; d. there, Jan. 13, 1932. American editor and author; son of Luther Tucker. He joined his father in publishing the Cultivator and Country Gentleman. He became (1897) editor in chief of the Country Gentleman, holding that post until the Curtis Publishing Company acquired the publication in 1911. Author of Our Common Speech (1895), American English (1921), and A Layman's Apology (1931).

Tucker, Henry St. George. b. in Chesterfield County, Va., Dec. 29, 1780; d. at Winchester, Va., Aug. 28, 1848. American legislator and jurist; son of St. George Tucker. He served in the War of 1812, and was a member (1815-19) of Congress, a member (1819-23) of the Virginia senate, and judge (1831-41) of the supreme court of appeals of Virginia. He was professor of law (1841-45) at the University of Virginia. Author of Commentaries on the Laws of Virginia (2 vols., 1836-37) and others.

Tucker, Henry St. George. b. at Winchester, Va., April 5, 1853; d. at Lexington, Va., July 23, 1932. American lawyer and legislator; son of John Randolph Tucker. He served (1889-97) in Congress, was a member (1897-1902) of the staff of Washington and Lee University, and was again (1922-32) a member of Congress. Author of Limitations on the Treaty-Making Power under the Constitution of the United States (1915) and Woman's Suffrage by Constitutional Amendment (1916).

Tucker, John Randolph. b. at Winchester, Va., Dec. 24, 1823; d. Feb. 13, 1897. American lawyer, legislator, and teacher; son of Henry St. George Tucker (1780-1848). He practiced (1845-57) law at Winchester, was attorney general (1857-65) of Virginia, was a member (1875-87) of Congress, and served as professor of constitutional and international law (1870-74, 1889-97) and dean of the law school (1893-97) at Washington and Lee University. Author of The Constitution of the United States (2 vols., 1899).

Tucker, Josiah. b. at Laugharne, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 1712; d. Nov. 4, 1799. Welsh economist, remembered for his sympathy toward the cause of American independence. He was domestic chaplain to Bishop Joseph Butler, to whom Tucker made the often-quoted remark about the possibility of nations going mad, like men. He was requested (1755) to draw up Elements of Commerce for the instruction of the future king (George III) by Thomas Hayter, bishop of Norwich. He published (1763) a tract against war for the sake of trade, which was translated into French by Turgot. His most popular tract during the American controversy was Cui Bono?, arguing that war with the American colonists was a mistake for all concerned. His writings on this subject were highly praised by many laissez-faire economists. Many of the important writings of Tucker, some of which are said to have influenced Adam Smith, are edited with an introduction by R. L. Schuyler in Josiah Tucker, a Selection from His Economic and Political Writings (1931).

Tucker, Luther. b. at Brandon, Vt., May 7, 1802; d. at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 26, 1873. American journalist and editor. He took part in founding (1826) the Rochester Daily Advertiser, becoming its sole proprietor in 1828, and in 1831 established the Genesee Farmer, which he merged (1839) with the Albany Cultivator. Settling (1840) at Albany, N.Y., he founded (1846) the Horticulturalist, selling it in 1852, and in 1853 began publication of the Country Gentleman (consolidated in 1866 as Cultivator and Country Gentleman), of which he was editor until the time of his death.

Tucker, Nathaniel Beverley. b. at "Matoax," Chesterfield County, Va., Sept. 6, 1784; d. at Winchester, Va., Aug. 26, 1851. American jurist, novelist, and political writer. His best-known work is the novel The Partisan Leader: a Tale of the Future (2 vols., 1836), a defense of slavery, issued under the pseudonym Edward W. Sidney, and suppressed on first publication but reissued in 1861. Also author of George Balcombe (1836), A Discourse on the Importance of the Study of Political Science as a Branch of Academic Education in the United States (1840), and The Principles of Pleading (1846).

Tucker, Nathaniel Beverley. b. at Winchester, Va., June 8, 1820; d. July 4, 1890. American Confederate agent; son of Henry St. George Tucker (1780-1848). After a career as a planter and businessman, he was editor (1853-56) of the Washington Sentinel, became (1847) U.S. consul at Liverpool, succeeding Nathaniel Hawthorne in that post, joined the Confederate forces at the outbreak of the Civil War, and after 1862 was a Confederate agent in France and Canada. He was accused of having taken part in the plot to assassinate Lincoln, and until November, 1865, there was a reward of 25,000 dollars offered for him, although evidence of his complicity was entirely lacking. He resided (1872-90) at Washington, D.C., and Berkeley Springs, W.Va.

Tucker, Stephen Davis. b. at Bloomfield, N.J., Jan. 28, 1818; d. at London, Oct. 9, 1902. American inventor and manufacturer of printing machinery. He became (1834) an apprentice in the printing-press manufacturing firm of R. Hoe and Company at New York, of which he later became (1860) a partner, retiring (1893) as a senior partner. He took out some 100 patents, some of which were granted to both him and Richard M. Hoe, including those on the continuous web for newspaper printing and the folder for newspaper presses.

Tucker, St. George. b. at Port Royal, Bermuda, June 29, 1752; d. Nov. 10, 1827. American jurist. He began his law practice at Williamsburg, Va., and served in the Virginia militia during the Revolutionary War, being wounded at the siege of Yorktown. A commissioner at the Annapolis convention (1786), he was named (1788) a judge of the general court of Virginia, was a judge (1803-11) of the Virginia supreme court of appeals, and served (1813-27) as a judge of the U.S. district court for the district of Virginia. He was named (1800) professor of law in the College of William and Mary. He brought out an annotated edition of Blackstone's Commentaries (5 vols., 1803).

Tucker, William Jewett. b. at Griswold, Conn., July 13, 1839; d. Sept. 23, 1926. American educator and Congregational clergyman, president of Dartmouth College (1893-1909).

Tuckerman (tuk'ér.man), Bayard. b. at New York, July 2, 1855; d. Oct. 20, 1923. American author; grandson of Joseph Tuckerman. He lectured (1898-1907) on English literature at Princeton University, and was the author of A History of English Prose Fiction from Sir Thomas Malory to George Eliot (1882), Life of General Lafayette (2 vols., 1889), Peter Stuyvesant (1893), William Jay and the Constitutional Movement for the Abolition of Slavery (1894), and Life of General Philip Schuyler, 1733-1804 (1903).

Tuckerman, Edward. b. at Boston, Dec. 7, 1817; d. at Amherst, Mass., March 15, 1886. American botanist, noted as a lichenologist. He served as professor at Amherst College from 1858.

Tuckerman, Frederick Goddard. b. at Boston, Feb. 4, 1821; d. at Greenfield, Mass., May 9, 1873. American poet. He was admitted (1844) to the bar, but turned from the practice of law to devote himself to literature and scientific pursuits. The first collection of his poetry appeared as Poems (1860); The Sonnets of Frederick Goddard Tuckerman (1931) were edited by Witter Bynner.

Tuckerman, Henry Theodore. b. at Boston, April 20, 1813; d. at New York, Dec. 17, 1871. American critic, essayist, and poet. His works include Italian Sketch-Book (1835), Isabel, or Sicily (1839), Rambles and Reveries (1841), Thoughts on the Poets (1846), Artist Life (1847), Characteristics of Literature (2 series, 1849, 1851), Essays Biographical and Critical (1857), America and Her Commentators: with a Critical Sketch of Travel in the United States (1864), and Book of the Artists (1867).

Tuckerman, Joseph. b. at Boston, Jan. 18, 1778; d. at Havana, Cuba, April 20, 1840. American Unitarian clergyman. He founded (1812) the Boston Society for the Religious and Moral Improvement of Seamen, reputed to be the first of its kind in the U.S., and settled (1826) at Boston, where he established a ministry-at-large and devoted himself to missionary activities on behalf of the poor. He later established similar missions at London and Liverpool.

Tuckerman Ravine. Deep ravine on the side of Mount Washington, in New Hampshire: ski slopes.

Tucson (tó'son). City in S Arizona, county seat of Pima County, on the Santa Cruz River; trade center and a noted health resort. An Indian village, of unknown age, existed on the site of the present city, which was (1775) a Spanish garrison, and was later capital (1867-77) of the Arizona territory. It is the seat of the University of Arizona. 45,454 (1950).

Tucumán (tó.kó.mán). Colonial division or territory (gobernación) of Spanish South America. It corresponded nearly to the modern Argentine provinces of Córdoba, Rioja, Catamarca, Santiago del Estero, Tucumán, Salta, and Jujuy. The capital was Tucumán. It was a part of the viceroyalty of Peru, subordinate to Charcas, until 1773, when it was attached to the viceroyalty of La Plata.

Tucumán. Province in N Argentina, lying S of Salta and between Catamarca and Santiago del Estero. It produces most of Argentina's sugar, and a considerable quantity of alcohol. Capital, Tucumán; area, 10,425 sq. mi.; pop. 593,371 (1947).

Tucumán. [Also, San Miguel de Tucumán.] City in N Argentina, capital of Tucumán province, ab. 715 mi. by rail NW of Buenos Aires: scene of the signing of Argentina's declaration of independence from Spain. It has sugar-refining, alcohol, food-processing, textile, and other industries. 194,166 (1947).

Tucumcari (tò'kum.kär.i). City in E New Mexico, county seat of Quay County, in a wheat and sorghum dry-farming area: shipping center for cattle; tourist, resort. 8,419 (1950).

Tucupita (tó.kò.pé.tä). City in NE Venezuela, capital of Delta Amacuro territory. 8,546 (1950).

Tudeh Party (tò.de'). Iranian political party, the Masses Party, following a leftist program.

Tudela (tó.tná'lä). [Ancient name, Tutela.] Town in N Spain, in the province of Navarra, situated on the Ebro River ab. 50 mi. S of Pamplona, in a stock-raising district. It has sawmills and a timber trade. The Collegiate Church of Santa Maria, in Romanesque style, was founded in 1135, consecrated in 1188. There is an ancient 19-arch bridge across the Ebro River. The town was reconquered from the Moors by Alfonso I of Aragon in 1114. Pop. 13,134 (1940).

Tuder (tü'dér). Ancient name of Todi, Italy.

Tudor (tü'dor). English dynasty, descended on the male side from Owen Tudor, who married Henry V's widow, Catherine of Valois, and on the female side from John of Gaunt, son of Edward III, through the Beauforts. It comprised the sovereigns Henry VII, Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth.

Tudor, Jasper. [Called Jasper of Hatfield; titles, Earl of Pembroke, Duke of Bedford.] d. in December, 1495. English soldier; son of Owen Tudor and Catherine of Valois, and uncle of Henry VII. A Lancastrian partisan, he fought in many battles of the Wars of the Roses, and after the victory of the Yorkists at Tewkesbury (1470) fled to France with his nephew. After Henry VII gained the throne, he was earl marshal (1492).

Tudor, Margaret. See Margaret Tudor.

Tudor, Mary. See Mary I or Mary Tudor (of England); see also Mary of France.

Tudor, Owen. Executed 1461. Welsh knight who married (though no record exists of the marriage) Catherine of Valois, widow of Henry V, and was grandfather of Henry VII. He joined the Lancastrians, was captured by the Yorkists after the battle of Mortimer's Cross, and beheaded.

Tudor, William. b. at Boston, Jan. 28, 1779; d. at Rio de Janeiro, March 9, 1830. American author. He was an original member (1805) of the Anthology Society at Boston, and was the founder and first editor (1815-17) of the North American Review. He helped establish the Boston Athenaeum and was a member (1823 et seq.) of the U.S. diplomatic service in Peru and Brazil.

Tuesday (tüz/dz). Third day of the week. The name comes from the Teutonic war god Tiu (Norse, Tyr).

fat, fäte, fär, ask, färe; net, më, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lüte, püll; ʒ, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Tuffier (tū.fyā), Marin Théodore. b. at Bellême, Orne, France, March 26, 1857; d. at Paris, Oct. 27, 1929. French surgeon. He acquired an international reputation for his pioneer work on experimental surgery, renal surgery (1889), the operative treatment of fractures, modern thoracic surgery (1897-1909), surgery of the stomach (1907), reconstructive surgery of bones and joints (cranioplasty, rachygnathosis, nearthrosis), radiology of the ureter after the passage of a middle catheter, the use of spinal anesthesia, and the operation for chronic valvular heart disease.

Tuñán (tū.fān), Armand. See Rouarie or Rouërie, Marquis de la.

Tufts (tufts), Charles. b. at Somerville, Mass., July 17, 1781; d. Dec. 24, 1876. American farmer and brick-maker. An owner of large farm properties, he donated (1856, 1864) land for the site of Tufts College at Medford, Mass., of which he was a trustee (1856-76).

Tufts, Cotton. b. at Medford, Mass., May 30, 1732; d. Dec. 8, 1815. American physician; nephew of John Tufts. He was the leading organizer (1781) of the Massachusetts Medical Society, of which he was elected (1787) president, and became (1780) one of the charter members of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Tufts, John. b. at Medford, Mass., May 5, 1689; d. at Amesbury, Mass., Aug. 17, 1752. American Congregational clergyman. He was ordained (1714) minister of the Second Church of Christ at West Newbury, and published (in 1714 or 1715) A Very Plain and Easy Introduction to the Art of Singing Psalm Tunes: with the Cantus or Trebles of Twenty-eight Psalm Tunes, Contrived in Such a Manner, as That the Learner May Attain the Skill of Singing Them, with the Greatest Ease and Speed Imaginable. This publication, which went through 11 or more editions, had a great influence upon American church music.

Tu Fu (tō' fō'). b. c714; d. 770 A.D. Chinese poet of the period of the T'ang dynasty. His lyrics are rich in vivid imagery. His work, critical of official corruption or descriptive of nature or events, is among the best-known of Chinese poetry.

Tugela (tō.gā'la). River in S Africa, in Natal province. Union of South Africa, rising in the Drakensberg and flowing SE into the Indian Ocean. Near Ladysmith, it was the scene of severe fighting in the Boer War (December, 1899-February, 1900). Length, ab. 300 mi.

Tugendbunt (tō'gēnt.bunt). German association formed (1808) at Königsberg, with the acknowledged purpose of cultivating patriotism, reorganizing the army, and encouraging education, and with the secret aim of aiding in throwing off the French yoke. King Frederick William III of Prussia was forced to dissolve it in 1809, but it continued in secret for several years, and exerted a very considerable influence, especially in 1812.

Tuggurt (tō.gūrt'). See Touggourt.

Tuglas (tū.gläs), Friedebert. b. at Ahja, Estonia, 1886—. Estonian novelist, critic, and scholar. His anti-zealot activities compelled him to spend most of his youth in exile. Author of symbolist stories, such as Saatuse (Fate, 1917) and Raskuse raim (The Spirit of Gloom, 1918); novels in a highly wrought impressionistic manner, such as Felix Ormusson (1915), or nostalgically elaborating his childhood memories, as in Väike Illimar (Little Illimar, 1936-37), and of critical monographs and essays.

Tuguegarao (tō'gā.gā.rā'ō). Town in N Philippines, capital of Cagayan province, in NE Luzon. It is situated near the Rio Grande de Cagayan, ab. 50 mi. from its mouth, 12,378 (1948).

Tugwell (tug'wel), Rexford Guy. b. at Sinclairville, N.Y., July 10, 1891—. American economist and government official. Instructor (1920 et seq.) and professor (1931-37) of economics at Columbia, he was a member of the "Brain Trust," the advisory group consulted (1933 et seq.) by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. He served (1934-37) as U.S. undersecretary of agriculture, and was appointed (1941) governor of Puerto Rico. He served as professor of political science and director of the Institute of Planning at the University of Chicago (1946 et seq.). Author of The Economic Basis of Public Interest (1922), Industry's Coming of Age (1927), The Industrial Discipline (1933), Battle for Democracy (1935), Changing the Colonial Climate (1942), The Stricken Land (1946), and other books.

Tuileries (twē'l.g.riz; French, twē'l.rē), Palace of the. Royal residence formerly existing at Paris, connected with the Louvre by wings. In 1518 Francis I bought a house here for his sister Margaret of Navarre. It was demolished in 1564 by Catherine de Médicis, who began the erection of the Tuileries, which was enlarged by Henry IV and Louis XIV. The palace, the scene of many of the most memorable events attending the overthrow of the ancient French monarchy, was invaded by the mob June 20, and stormed by the mob Aug. 10, 1792, and was the seat of the Convention. It was taken by the people July 29, 1830, and Feb. 24, 1848, and was burned by the Commune in 1871, the ruins not being removed till 1883. Nothing remains except the pavilions at the two extremities, which have been restored and now form a rich architectural termination to the two extended arms of the Louvre. Its history as a royal residence came to an end with the battle of Sedan (1870) and the departure of the empress Eugénie. The Jardin des Tuileries, a popular promenade, was enlarged in 1889, and now covers the site of the palace. The Quai des Tuileries existed at a very early period as the road to St.-Cloud. The wall of Charles V terminated at the Tour du Bois, between the Louvre and the Tuileries. Outside of this wall were the tile yards or tuileries, mentioned as early as 1274.

Tuismum (tū.ish'ūm). Medieval name of Deutz.

Tuke (tūk), Henry Scott. b. at York, England, June 12, 1855; d. 1929. English oil and water-color painter, noted for his genre scenes and his marines. He began to exhibit at the Royal Academy in 1879 and in 1914 became a member.

Tuke, Samuel. b. at York, England, July 31, 1784; d. there, Oct. 14, 1857. English philanthropist; grandson of William Tuke. He wrote an account (1813) of the York "Retreat," an institution founded (1792) by his grandfather, and published works on the construction of hospitals for the insane.

Tuke, William. b. at York, England, March 24, 1732; d. 1822. English philanthropist; grandfather of Samuel Tuke. He was especially devoted to the amelioration of the condition of the insane. In 1792 he projected the "Retreat" at York under the management of the Society of Friends, in which it was attempted to manage the insane without the excessive restraint then common. His improvements led to important legislation on the treatment of the insane.

Tukhachevsky (tō.hā.chēf'ski), Mikhail Nikolayevich. See Toukhachevsky, Mikhail Nikolayevich.

Tukulor (tō'kū.lōr). [Also: Foutanke, Tekarir, Tekrur, Tokoror, Toucouleur.] Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, whose language is a dialect of Fulani, and who inhabit the valley of the upper Senegal River in NE Senegal, W French Sudan, and S Mauritania. Their population has been estimated at ab. 220,000 (by Y. Urvoy, Petit atlas ethno-géographique du Soudan, 1942). They are fanatic Mohammedans, having adopted Mohammedanism in the 11th century from the Almoravides.

Tula (tō'la). [Also, Tollan.] Legendary capital of the Toltec Indians on the W side of Lake Texcoco, in the central plateau of Mexico. A correlation of archaeological data and native chronicles from before the Spanish conquest suggests to some that the capital was actually located on the site of the present-day Tula, and to others that it was at Azcapotzalco, a site where many Toltec remains have been found.

Tula. Full name, Tula de Allende (dō ā.yēn'dā'). Town in C Mexico, in Hidalgo state, ab. 50 mi. N. of Mexico City. It is a very ancient place, and is supposed by some to be the same as Tula (or Tollan), the Toltec capital. Pop. under 5,000 (1940).

Tula (tō'la). Oblast (region) in C U.S.S.R., in Europe, in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 100 mi. S of the city of Moscow. The land is mostly hilly. The chief occupation of the people is farming, though there is considerable mining of lignite and of second-grade iron ore in the area. The largest crops are oats, barley, wheat, potatoes, flax, and corn. In the days of the Russian Empire Tula was a guberniya (government) of Russia which occupied approximately the same area. Capital, Tula; area, 12,660 sq. mi. (1939), 9,300 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 2,049,950 (1939).

Tula. City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Tula oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated ab. 110 mi. S of Moscow. It is one of the chief manufacturing centers of C European Russia, long noted for the manufacture of small arms. Iron ore is found nearby and is used in iron and steel plants in the city; there are also manufactures of agricultural machinery, sewing machines, tools, clothing, leather, and foodstuffs. Tula was founded in the 16th century; the first gun factory in Russia was established here in 1595. In World War II the Germans approached to the outskirts of the city and nearly encircled it (October–December, 1941), but it resisted strongly and was successfully held by the Russians, 272,403 (1939).

Tulach Mór (tù.làch mòr). Irish name of Tullamore.

Tulagi (tù.là'gi). Main port of entry and administrative center for the British protectorate in the Solomon Islands. It is situated on the small island of Tulagi, N of Guadalcanal. The resident commissioner at Tulagi is subject to the British high commissioner for the western Pacific at Suva, Fiji. Tulagi was captured (August, 1942) by U.S. marines from the Japanese; the excellent harbor facilities were useful in the subsequent Solomon Islands fighting.

Tulancingo (tù.làn.seng'gō). City in C Mexico, in Hidalgo state, 12,552 (1940).

Tulane (tù.làn'). Paul. b. near Princeton, N.J., May 10, 1801; d. there, March 27, 1887. American merchant and benefactor. He founded (1822) the retail and wholesale dry-goods and clothing house of Paul Tulane and Company at New Orleans, La., and later added to his fortune through ventures in real estate. He settled (1873) at Princeton, N.J., and donated (1882) all of his New Orleans real-estate holdings to the university which in 1814 became Tulane University at New Orleans. Additional gifts to the institution brought his benefactions to a total of more than one million dollars.

Tulare (tù.lār', -lār'ē). City in C California, in Tulare County, SW of San Francisco: shipping center for fruit, 12,445 (1950).

Tulare Lake. Former lake in California, in Kings County. It received the Kern River and other tributaries (now largely diverted for irrigation), but had no outlet. It is now usually dry.

Tulcán (tù.lkàn'). City in N Ecuador, capital of Cacha province, near the Colombian border: cattle and wool, 12,828 (est. 1944).

Tulcea (tùl'chā). [Also: Tuldja (tùl'jā), Tultcha.] Town in S Rumania, in Dobruja, situated on an arm of the Danube River, ab. 45 mi. SE of Galați: trade center, especially in cereals, fish, and wine, 21,642 (1948).

Tule (tù.lā). See Cuna.

Tuléar (tù.lā.ār). Port in Madagascar, off SE Africa, situated on the W coast near the S end of the island. It is connected by road with Tananarive and other towns of C and E Madagascar, 15,654 (1948).

Tulia (tù.li.ā, tōl'ya). City in NW Texas, in the Panhandle, county seat of Swisher County, 3,222 (1950).

Tulkinghorn (tùl'king.hörn). Mr. Attorney in Charles Dickens's Bleak House.

Tull (tul), Jethro. b. at Basildon, Berkshire, England, 1674; d. Feb. 21, 1741. English farmer and writer on agriculture. He developed (c1701) a machine that sowed seed in drills or rows to replace the broadcast sowing then in common use and permitting cultivation, as by horse-drawn hoe, between the rows of growing plants. He traveled in France and Italy to observe the use of cultivation with manure and pulverized soil. Author of Horsehoeing Husbandry (1831) and others, especially pamphlets defending his theories.

Tullahoma (tul.ā.hō'mā). Town in C Tennessee, in Coffee County: manufactures of gloves, sporting goods, clothing, shoes, cheese, and condensed milk, 7,562 (1950).

Tullamore (tul.ā.mōr'). [Irish, Tulach Mór.] Market town in the Irish Republic, in Leinster province and County Offaly, situated on the Grand Canal, ab. 53 mi. W of Dublin. The town has a distillery industry, and is the county seat of County Offaly, 6,164 (1951).

Tulle (töl; French, tül). [Latin, Tutela.] City in W France, capital of the department of Corrèze, situated at the junction of the Solane and Corrèze rivers, SE of Limoges. An industrial city, Tulle is known for the manufacture of metal products and textiles; the thin material known as tulle is named for the town. It is the seat of the Manufacture Nationale d'Armes, 18,202 (1946).

Tullia (tul'ia). b. c79 B.C.; d. at Tusculum, in February, 45 B.C. Daughter of Cicero and Terentia, and wife of Calpurnius Piso and later of Publius Cornelius Dolabella.

Tullia. In Roman legend, one of two daughters of the same name of Servius Tullius. She was the wife of Aruns, brother of Tarquin (Lucius Tarquinius). She murdered her husband, and Tarquin, having killed his wife, married her, slew Servius Tullius, and proclaimed himself king. Tullia rode to the senate house to greet her husband as king, and on her return drove over the dead body of her father, which lay in the way. The street through which she passed thereafter bore the name Vicus Sceleratus ("Abominable Street").

Tullius Aufidius (tul'ius ò.fid'ius). See Aufidius, Tullius.

Tulliver (tul'iv.ər), Maggie. Principal character in George Eliot's The Mill on the Floss.

Tulln (tùln). [Also: Tulin; Latin, Comagenā; called in the Nibelungenlied Tulne.] Town in E Austria, the province of Lower Austria, situated on the Danube River ab. 18 mi. NW of Vienna: manufactures of agricultural machinery, 5,252 (1946).

Tulloch (tul'òch, -òk), John. b. in Perthshire, Scotland, 1823; d. at Torquay, England, Feb. 13, 1886. Scottish Presbyterian theologian, educator, and author. He became principal of Saint Mary's College, St. Andrews, in 1854, and served as one of Queen Victoria's chaplains. His works include Theism (1855), Leaders of the Reformation (1859), English Puritanism and Its Leaders (1861), Beginning Life (1862), The Christ of the Gospels and the Christ of Modern Criticism (1864), Rational Theology and Christian Philosophy (1872), The Christian Doctrine of Sin (1876), Modern Theories in Philosophy and Religion (1884), Movements of Religious Thought in the 19th Century (1885), and others.

Tullochgorum (tul'òch.gò'rum). Called by Burns "the best Scotch song Scotland ever saw." See under Skinner, John.

Tullum (tul'um). Ancient name of Toul.

Tullus Hostilius (tul'us hos.til'ius). According to tradition, the third king of Rome. He was said to have reigned from 672 to 641 B.C., and to have carried on many wars, especially with Alba.

Tully (tul'i). Anglicized form of Tullius, formerly generally used as the name of Cicero, Marcus Tullius.

Tully, Jim. b. near St. Marys, Ohio, June 3, 1891; d. 1947. American novelist. He was educated (1895–1900) at the St. Joseph Orphan Asylum, Cincinnati, Ohio, held a variety of jobs, including those of farm laborer, circus roustabout, chainmaker, professional boxer, reporter, and tree surgeon, and at intervals lived as a hobo. He was first brought to prominence as a writer in Sma-t Set when it was being edited by H. L. Mencken. Among his works are Emmet Lawler (1922), Beggars of Life (1924), Jarneyan (1925), Shanty Irish (1928), Close Ups (1930), Laughter in Hell (1932), Men in the Rough (1933), The Bruiser (1936), A Hollywood Decameron (1937), and Biddy Brogan's Boy (1942).

Tully, Richard Walton. b. at Nevada City, Calif., 1877; d. at New York, Jan. 31, 1945. American playwright and producer. He lost (1928) the famous plagiarism suit (1912–28) against him for the play The Bird of Paradise (produced in 1912), but the decision was later (1930) reversed. Author of My Cinderella Girl, The Rose of the Rancho, Omear the Tentmaker, The Flame, and other plays.

Tully, William. b. at Saybrook Point, Conn., Nov. 18, 1785; d. at Springfield, Mass., Feb. 28, 1859. American physician. He was president (1824–30) and professor (1824–38) at the Vermont Academy of Medicine (Castleton) and served (1829–42) as professor of materia medica and therapeutics at Yale. He prepared Materia Medica, or, Pharmacology and Therapeutics (2 vols., 1837–58), which contains his modification of the formula for Dover's powder (subsequently known as Tully's powder).

Tulin (tùln). See Tulln.

Tulne (tul'ne). Name of Tulln in the Nibelungenlied.

Tulsa (tul'sā). [Former name, Tulsey Town (tul'si).] City in NE Oklahoma, county seat of Tulsa County, on the Arkansas River, in a petroleum-producing area:

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʒh, then; ɔ, d o r j; s, s o r sh; t, t o r ch; leading oil-refining center. It is a trading center for corn and oats, and a manufacturing center for airplanes, glass, chemicals, steel, furniture, automobile bodies, bricks, tiles, and cotton textiles. It is the seat of the University of Tulsa. Pop. of city, 142,157 (1941), 182,749 (1950); of urbanized area, 206,311 (1950).

Tulsi Das (tul'si dās). b. c1532; d. at Benares, 1623. Hindu poet. He became a religious reformer after the death of his only son and traveled throughout India preaching Rama's worship. His principal work is the Ram-charit-manas, a Hindi paraphrase of the Sanskrit Ramayan; it is said to be so well known as to be called the "Bible of Northern India," many of its verses being quoted as proverbial expressions. His other work consists of religious writings, especially on Rama (and Krishna), and including hymns, songs, and devotional poems.

Tultcha (tōl'chā). See Tulcea.

Tuluá (tō.lwá'). City in W Colombia, in Valle del Cauca department, 12,017 (1938).

Tulufan (tō'lō'fān'). See Turfan.

Tumatanguis (tō.mā.tāng'gēs). See under Jolo island.

Tumba (tum'ba). Lake. [French, Lac Tumba.] Large lake in W central Africa, in the SW corner of Equator province, Belgian Congo. It is N of Lake Léopold II and is connected with the Congo River by a short river draining from the W side of the lake. Area, ab. 140 sq. mi.

Tumbes (tōm'bās) or Túmbes (tōm'bās). Department in NW Peru, bordering on Ecuador and the Pacific Ocean, N of Piura: oil, agricultural products, and minerals. It dates from the times of the Incas, and was the site of the first Spanish settlement in Peru; it was separated (1901) as a littoral province from Piura department and achieved department status in 1942. Capital, Tumbes; area, 1,591 sq. mi.; pop. 31,201 (est. 1950).

Tumbes or Túmbes. City in NW Peru, capital of Tumbes department: the northernmost seaport in Peru; charcoal and tobacco. It was the site of the landing by Francisco Pizarro which initiated his conquest of the country. 6,355 (1940).

Tummel (tum'el). River and loch in C Scotland, in Perthshire. The river drains E from Loch Rannoch through Lochgarry Reservoir and Loch Tummel to the vicinity of Pitlochry, whence it flows SE to a confluence with the river Tay, ab. 4 mi. SE of Pitlochry. Length, ab. 29 mi.

Tumuc-Humac Mountains (tō.mōk'ō.māk'). [Portuguese, Serra de Tumucumaque (tō.mō.kō.mā'kē).] Mountain range in NE Brazil, on the borders of French Guiana and Surinam (Dutch Guiana). Peak elevation, ab. 3,000 ft.

Tumulty (tum'ul.ti). Joseph Patrick. b. at Jersey City, N.J., May 5, 1879—n. American lawyer who was private secretary to Woodrow Wilson during the latter's service as governor of New Jersey (1911–13) and U.S. president (1913–21). Author of Woodrow Wilson as I Know Him (1921).

Tumwater (tum'wō'tēr, -wot'ēr). Town in W Washington, in Thurston County, 2,725 (1950).

Tumbelly Clumsky (tum'bel'ē klum'zi). Sir. See Clumsky, Sir Tunbilly.

Tunbridge (tun'brij). See Tonbridge.

Tunbridge Wells. [Full name, Royal Tunbridge Wells.] Municipal borough, market town, and inland spa in SE England, in Kent, ab. 4 mi. S of Tonbridge, ab. 34 mi. SE of London by rail. It has long been celebrated as a fashionable resort, and is now a summer holiday resort for Londoners. The town is located in a district of heath and woodland. It has a chalybeate spring (discovered c1606) and a trade in "Tunbridge ware" (woodenware). 38,397 (1951).

Tundzha (tūn'jā). [Also: Tundia, Tunja; Latin, Tonusus, Tonzus.] River in Bulgaria and in European Turkey which joins the Maritsa near Edirne. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Tunes (tū'nēz). Latin name of Tunis.

Tung-chau (tūng'chōu). See Tungshien.

Tungchow (tūng'chō). Former name of Nantung; see also Tungshien.

Tung Hai (tūng'hi'). Chinese name of the East China Sea.

Tungshien (tūng'shien'). [Also: Tung-chau, Tungchow.] City in E China, in the province of Hopeh, situated on the Pei Ho, at the head of navigation, ab. 12 mi. E of Peiping. Long the chief river port for Peiping, it still transships some goods to Tientsin, but it has now been largely supplanted by the railroad. Pop. ab. 50,000.

Tung-hwa (tūng'hwā'). [Also, Tung-hua.] City in NE China, in the province of Liaotung, ab. 115 mi. E of Mukden, near the border of Korea: coal, iron, gold, and lead mines; lumbering is important in the area. 81,993 (1946).

Tungking (tūng'king'). See Tonkin.

Tung-pei (tūng'pā'). Chinese name of Manchuria.

Tung Pi-wu (tūng'pē'wō'). b. in Hupeh, China, c1883—n. Chinese Communist political leader, a close collaborator of Sun Yat-sen in the Kuomintang. He was appointed (1945) an official representative at the San Francisco Conference which established the United Nations, and became (1949) one of four vice-premiers of the state administrative council in the Peiping government.

Tungshan (tūng'shān'). [Also, Suchow.] City in E China, in the province of Shantung, on one of the former courses of the Hwang Ho (Yellow River): a rail junction and trading center where wheat and corn are milled. 160,013 (1935).

Tungting Lake (dūng'ting'). [Chinese, Tungting Hu (hō').] Large lake in C China, in Hunan province, connected with the Yangtze River. It acts as an overflow reservoir, receiving flood waters of the river in spring and early summer. Area, 1,450 sq. mi.

Tungurahua (tūng.gō.rā'wā'). [Also, Tunguragua.] Active volcano in C Ecuador, S of Cotopaxi. Elevation, ab. 16,512 ft.

Tungurahua. [Also, Tunguragua.] Province in C Ecuador. Capital, Ambato; area, 1,237 sq. mi.; pop. 209,872 (est. 1944).

Tungus (tūng.gōz'). Hunting, fishing, and reindeer-herding peoples of E Siberia, related in language to the Mongols and Manchu, numbering ab. 40,000 in 1926, and inhabiting an enormous area from the Yenisei River to the Pacific Ocean. Major subdivisions of the Tungus include the Evenki, reindeer-mounted hunters residing between the Yenisei, the Lena, and Lake Baikal; the Orochen, between Lake Baikal and the Lena River; the Lamut, reindeer herdsman living on the Sea of Okhotsk, in the Kolyma River region and in N Kamchatka; and the Gold and Orochi, fishermen living on the lower Amur River and Sakhalin island.

Tunguska (tūng.gōs'ka). Lower. [Also: Nizhni; Russian, Nizhnaya Tunguska.] River in the U.S.S.R., in N central Siberia. It rises N of Lake Baikal and flows N and NW to the Yenisei. Length, ab. 1,720 mi.

Tunguska, Stony. [Also: Middle Tunguska, Podkamena; Russian, Podkamennaya Tunguska.] River in the U.S.S.R., in C Siberia. It rises NW of Lake Baikal and flows NW to the Yenisei, which it joins ab. 250 mi. N of Yeniseisk. Length, ab. 1,028 mi.

Tunguska, Upper. See Angara.

Tunhwang (tūn'hwāng'). [Also, Tun-huang.] Village in W Kansu, China, ab. 1,150 mi. due W of Peiping. In Han times the Tunhwang oasis was the westernmost important Chinese station on the old trade route to Central Asia, India, and the West. With the coming of Buddhism it became a religious center; and the name now generally refers to the complex of cave temples carved in a sandstone cliff ab. 10 mi. SE of the village and called the Caves of the Thousand Buddhas (Chien-fō-tung). There are ab. 400 caves, many of them decorated with wall paintings and images, the most important of which date from the period of the Northern Dynasties, the Sui, and the Tang. In 1907 Sir Aurel Stein discovered the famous "hidden library," a cave full of rolls of paintings and texts which had been sealed up sometime before 1034 A.D. and had remained undisturbed for almost nine centuries. In 1908 the remainder of the hoard was examined more critically by Paul Pelliot; and between them the two men transported most of the important material to the museums and libraries of London and Paris. In addition to Chinese, the manuscripts are in Tibetan, Brahmi, Cursive Gupta, and such rare languages as Khotanese, Kuchean, and Sogdian; the paintings in their variety of styles reflect the mixture of peoples in the Tunhwang populace. The arid desert atmosphere preserved in almost new condition much of the paper and silk, as well as the ink and colors of this most important body of documents ever to come to light for the study of medieval China and her relations with the West.

Tunica (tū'ni.kə). [Also, Tonika.] Group of North American Indian tribes, now nearly extinct, which formerly inhabited NE Louisiana and W central Mississippi. The language formed an independent family.

Tunis (tū'nis). [Latin, Tunes.] Seaport in N Africa, capital of the protectorate of Tunisia, situated on a lagoon connected with the Gulf of Tunis, in the NE corner of the country. The port La Goulette, at the entrance to the lagoon, is linked with the city by rail. In 1893 a channel 6 mi. long was cut and deepened in order to permit ships to reach Tunis itself. Tunis is a center of caravan trade; it is connected by steamship lines with France and Italy, and by a railroad with Constantine, Oran, and Algiers. It has textile and other manufactures. The seat of government is at the neighboring castle of Bardo. The chief objects of interest are the bazaars, the Mosque of the Olive Tree, the town palace of the bey, and the Moslem college and other institutions. The ruins of Carthage are situated to the NE. The city was founded in Carthaginian times. It was conquered by the emperor Charles V in 1535. Tunis was occupied by German and Italian troops early in World War II and was later the scene of considerable fighting between Allied forces and those of the Axis powers. It is one of the few cities in N Africa in which Europeans comprise the majority of the population. 364,592 (1946).

Tunis, Gulf of. Inlet of the Mediterranean Sea, in N Africa, on the N coast of Tunisia, NE of the city of Tunis.

Tunisia (tū.nish'ə, -nē'zha). [Also: Tunis; French, Tunisie (tū.nē.zē).] French protectorate in N Africa. It is bounded by the Mediterranean Sea on the N and E, the Sahara desert and Libya on the S, and Algeria on the W. Government is administered nominally by a native bey, actually by France through a French minister resident and 11 ministers (five French, six Tunisian). The prevailing religion is Mohammedanism. Capital, Tunis; area, 48,300 sq. mi.; pop. 3,230,952, including 239,549 Europeans (1946).

Physical and Economic Geography. The N, E, and C parts are occupied by comparatively low mountains, with a few plains, and there are many brackish lakes in the S. The principal river is the Medjerda. The island of Djerba and the Kerkennah group belong to Tunisia. The protectorate produces grain and fruits (particularly dates and olives), and has important fisheries. Considerable quantities of phosphate ore are mined in the S part. The French have developed an extensive railway network in the protectorate, connecting most of the ports with the city of Tunis and the latter with Algiers and the other large centers of French North Africa by a trunk line extending from Casablanca on the Atlantic coast to Tunis.

History. The region in ancient times formed part of the domains of Carthage and, later, of Rome. It was conquered by the Vandals in the 5th century, and by the Arabs in the 7th. Reduced to a Turkish province in the latter part of the 16th century, it paid, for the most part, only nominal heed to the Porte. It was particularly noted during the 18th and early 19th centuries as a pirate state. Occupied by a French army in 1881, it became a French protectorate. The protectorate was occupied by German and Italian troops during World War II and was the scene of bitter fighting between Allied and Axis forces.

Tunisia, Battle of. Name applied to a series of military operations in World War II which drove the Germans from Africa. The campaign began with the Allied invasion of Africa on Nov. 8, 1942, and ended with the surrender or evacuation of the last enemy troops from Tunisia by May 13, 1943. The battle for Tunisia may be divided into four main phases: (1) Allied landings and advance of the British from El Alamein across Libya and Tripolitania, (2) jockeying for vantage points prior to the spring offensive, (3) German raid on the Americans in Tebessa and the British outflanking of the German line, and (4) the subsequent gradual bottling of the Germans into the Tunisian peninsula. The combined U.S.-British operation was united on Feb. 4, 1943, under the field command of General Sir Harold Alexander.

Tunja (tūn'já). See also Tundzha.

Tunja (tūn'já). City in C Colombia, capital of Boyacá department, ab. 75 mi. NE of Bogotá, 16,597 (1938).

Tunkers (tūng'kérz). See Dunkards.

Tunnel, The. Novel by Dorothy M. Richardson, published in 1919. It is the fourth section of Pilgrimage (1938), a novel sequence in 12 parts employing the stream-of-consciousness technique.

Tunnel über der Spree (tūn'ēl' ūb'ēr dēr shprā'). [English trans., "Tunnel over the Spree (River)."] German literary group at Berlin. In the 1840's and 1850's its membership included Moritz von Strachwitz, Emanuel Geibel, Theodor Storm, Paul Heyse, Felix Dahn, and Theodor Fontane. Its name was at that time the only vestige of the influence of its founder, Moritz Saphir, who had started it as a journalists' club in 1827. It did not survive the 1860's.

Tunney (tūn'y), James Joseph. [Called Gene Tunney.] b. at New York, May 25, 1897—. American pugilist, heavyweight champion (1926-28) of the world. While a member of the U.S. Marine Corps in World War I, he became (1919) light-heavyweight champion of the American armed forces. Returning to the U.S., he began his professional career in that same year, and in 1922, after defeating Battling Levinsky and Georges Carpentier, was acknowledged light-heavyweight champion of the world. Before the year was out, in his only defeat in the professional ring, he lost that title to Harry Greb, but he regained it the following year. Subsequently he passed into the heavyweight division. Tunney had won 44 professional fights, 30 of them by knockouts, and lost only the one to Greb, when in September, 1926, he encountered the then heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey, and won the decision, and the title, in a ten-round bout. A year later almost to the day, he again won a decision over Dempsey. This latter decision is still the subject of lively controversy: Dempsey floored Tunney in the seventh round, but failed to retire at once to a neutral corner of the ring, and the count did not begin until he had done so. It was thought by many that only this famous "long count" enabled Tunney to recover from the effects of the blow that had floored him, to get to his feet and continue the contest. In 1928, an undefeated champion, Tunney retired from boxing, relinquishing his title. Subsequently he had a successful career in business, took part in civic affairs, and during World War II, with the rank of lieutenant commander and later of commander in the U.S. Naval Reserve, served as director of athletics and physical fitness of navy personnel. He is the author of A Man Must Fight (1932) and Arms for Living (1941).

Tunsberg (tūns'ber). See Tønsberg.

Tunstall (tūn'stāl). Former parish in C England, in Staffordshire, ab. 29 mi. S of Manchester. It was amalgamated (1910) in Stoke-on-Trent county borough. It has manufactures of pottery and ironware.

Tunstall or Tonstall (tūn'stāl), Cuthbert. b. at Hatchford, Yorkshire, England, in 1474; d. at Lambeth Palace, 1559. English prelate. A brilliant student at Oxford, Cambridge, and Padua, he was a friend of Erasmus and Thomas More. After taking orders, he was advanced rapidly in the church and acted several times as ambassador for Henry VIII. In 1522 he was appointed bishop of London and in 1530 succeeded Thomas Wolsey as bishop of Durham. When Henry VIII broke with the Roman Catholic Church, Tunstall adopted a passive role, not approving or supporting the reforms, but obeying the law once it was in force. He became (1537) president of the council of the north, and under Edward VI remained a reluctant participant in the Reformation in England. In 1550 he was implicated in the events leading to the fall of the Protector, Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, and was accused (1551) of treason. Though the charge was dropped, he was deprived (1552) of his offices and kept in custody. With the accession of the Roman Catholic Mary Tudor, he again assumed the bishopric of Durham, but took no part in the persecution of the Protestants. He refused (1559) to take the oath of supremacy of Elizabeth or to assist at the consecration of Matthew Parker as archbishop of Canterbury and was once more deprived of his offices and placed in custody.

Tunuyán (tū.nō.yán'). River in W Argentina, in the province of Mendoza, flowing SE to the Desaguadero River. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Tuolumne (tū'ol'um.nē). River in California which joins the San Joaquin River ab. 25 mi. S of Stockton. Length, ab. 150 mi.

Tupac (tū'pāk). [Called Toparca by Spanish historians.] b. c1514; d. at Jaúja, Peru, in October, 1533. Younger brother of the Inca Atahualpa of Peru. After the execution of Atahualpa (August, 1533), he was made nominal ruler of Peru by Francisco Pizarro, and forced to swear allegiance to the Spanish monarchs. He died during the march to Cusco.

Tupac Amaru (ā.mā'rō). [Eng. trans. "Bright or Shining Snake."] Executed at Cusco, Peru, c1571. He is said to have been the youngest son of Manco, the last Inca war chief, who resided at Cusco when that place was already a Spanish city. Together with his elder brother, Sayri Tupac, he retired to the mountainous districts of Vilcabamba and maintained there a sort of independence until 1571. The viceroys Francisco de Toledo sent to him special envoys to put an end to the depredations which the Indians were committing under the leadership of Tupac Amaru. These envoys, who came under a flag of truce, Tupac Amaru had killed. Thereupon an armed force was sent against him, and after a short resistance he was captured, brought to Cusco, and there executed for having caused the death of peace-bearing messengers. His case has been grossly misrepresented and exaggerated by subsequent writers, and the title attributed to him, "last of the Incas," is wholly imaginary.

Tupac Amaru. [Original name, José Gabriel Condorcanqui.] b. at Tungasaca, in the department of Cusco, Peru, c1743; executed at Cusco, May 18, 1781. Peruvian revolutionist. When the Spaniards began to organize Peru they gave titles of nobility, franchises, and privileges to Indian chiefs, with hereditary rights. The office of cacique was made hereditary in many special cases. Hereditary succession being thus introduced, it was inevitable that contentions and lawsuits under Spanish laws should arise. It was one of these lawsuits that brought Condorcanqui to a certain limited prominence in the middle of the 18th century. He claimed the office of cacique of Tungasaca by birthright under Spanish colonial laws, but his claim was for some time disputed. The documents in the case are the only ones which contain any reliable information concerning the youth and position of Tupac Amaru, his certificate of baptism and correlated papers having (so he asserted) been destroyed, together with the curacy of Tungasaca, by fire. The assertion that the Spanish officials had destroyed all evidence of his origin and descent is false. Tupac Amaru did not profess any grievances himself, but secretly aspired to the post of corregidor, which was always held by a Spaniard. In the early part of 1780 a tumult broke out at Arequipa among the Creoles and Mestizos, caused by an increase in duties. The disturbance was soon quelled, but six months after a more dangerous revolt broke out in western Bolivia among the Aymaras, under Tomás Catari. Tupac Amaru revolted in November, 1780, and forced the corregidor of Tinta, and hanged him publicly. Then the insurrection broke out around Cusco, though independently of what was going on in Bolivia. Tupac Amaru threatened Cusco, but was defeated. He fled, and was captured with his family by Indians at Longui, brought to Cusco, tried, and cruelly executed, together with most of his near relatives. His death had no influence on the uprising in Bolivia, which continued with unabated fury until the close of 1781, when the siege of La Paz was raised. The Indians gradually submitted in the course of the year 1782. Subsequent endeavors to rise, under various leaders, were easily quelled. The importance of José Gabriel Tupac Amaru has been greatly exaggerated, and the events of his career have been misrepresented. A few months previous to his death he had assumed the title of king of Peru, but to his title the Indians paid hardly any attention. Nor did the various leaders of the partial insurrections throughout Bolivia acknowledge any allegiance or obedience to Tupac Amaru.

Tupac Catari (kā.tā'rē). [Spanish name, Julian Apaza.] b. near Ayo Ayo, in what is now Bolivia; executed in November, 1781. Peruvian revolutionist. He was the son of a sacristan of the church of Sicasica, near La Paz, Bolivia, and in the unrest that continued among the Aymaras after the suppression of the rising led by Tomás Catari he became conspicuous, early in 1781, as a leader of the Indians in revolting cruelties. By his influence as medicine man, and by the aid of a mestizo named Oblitas, he secured the leadership of unorganized hordes that were threatening La Paz. He assumed the title of viceroys, obtained artillery, and with about 15,000 Indians attacked La Paz (which was saved only by the ability and courage of the Spanish commander, Don Sebastián de Seguros) during two sieges extending over seven months and marked by severe suffering and many bloody engagements. Tupac Catari then took to flight, but was captured, condemned to death, and executed by quartering. There was no connection between him and Tupac Amaru and other Aymara chiefs, who refused to recognize his claims to authority; but the outbreak headed by him was the most dangerous of the several Indian uprisings during the years 1780-82, and would, if successful, have cut off the viceroyalty of Peru from that of Buenos Aires.

Tupelo (tū'pē.lō). City in NE Mississippi, county seat of Lee County, near the Tombigbee River: manufactures of clothing, cotton textiles, and cottonseed oil. The last major Civil War battle in Mississippi (July 14, 1864) took place near by. 11,527 (1950).

Tupí (tū'pē'). Collective name for a number of South American Indian tribes, speaking languages of the Tupi-Guarani stock, and inhabiting a large section of Brazil S of the Amazon and portions of the E Brazilian highlands and the N and E coasts. These coastal Tupí are often called Tupinamba. The Tupí tribes were all settled agriculturists living in large villages or towns composed of several houses. Most of them were noted for their warlike behavior, both among themselves and toward neighboring tribes, such as the Ge, and the early Portuguese settlers. The Tupí of the Brazilian coast are extinct, but remnant groups and tribes of the Amazonian Tupí still survive.

Tupí-Guaraní (tū'pē.gwā.rā.nē'). One of the major families of Indian languages in South America, distributed widely in Brazil S of the Amazon, along the N and E coast, and in scattered areas of the interior E highlands (where it is interspersed among the languages of the Ge family), in several parts of the Chaco region and E Paraguay, and on the islands of the Plata estuary. Though all the Tupí-Guaraní languages show close similarities, the convention has arisen of referring to those in Paraguay, Uruguay, and the Chaco as Guaraní, and the remainder as Tupí. It was from a Tupí-Guaraní base that the Lingua Geral of Brazil developed. It is also noteworthy that Guaraní is the only American Indian language ever to be designated as an official language of a nation (Paraguay). A considerable literature in written Guaraní has grown up over the years, including newspapers, books, poetry, and songs, as well as various religious and government documents.

Tupikov (tū'pē.kōf), Pavel Georgievich. See Nizovoy, Pavel.

Tupinamba (tū.pā.nām'bā). Collective name for a number of South American Indian tribes, now nearly all extinct, which inhabited the coastal area of Brazil from the mouth of the Amazon River to the state of São Paulo. All of them shared many details of culture, among which were distinctive patterns of warfare in which the principal aim was the capture of enemy males who were later ritually eaten at the termination of an elaborate series of ceremonies. The wide dispersion of the Tupinamba was achieved late in the period before the European conquest of South America, and in some instances continued well into the 16th century. In most places it was effected and maintained after defeating and displacing various Ge-speaking tribes. In some cases the movements of the Tupinamba were motivated by a messianic quest for a land of immortality, the most spectacular of such migrations being one from the coast of Brazil to Chachapoyas, in N and C Peru, between 1540 and 1549. The dialects of the Tupinamba tribes were of the Tupí-Guaraní stock.

Tupman (tup'man), Tracy. In Charles Dickens's Pickwick Papers, a member of the famous Pickwick Club. He is notable for his too susceptible disposition.

Tupper (tup'pē), Benjamin. b. at Stoughton, Mass., March 11, 1738; d. June 7, 1792. American pioneer and Revolutionary soldier. Joining (1774) the patriot cause, he served as a lieutenant colonel and then colonel in the Revolutionary forces, taking part in the engagements on Long Island and at Monmouth, and in the Saratoga campaign. He helped defend (1786) Springfield, Mass., against Shay's Rebellion, played an active role in the formation of the Ohio Company for the settlement of the Northwest Territory, and was an original settler (1788) of Marietta.

Tupper, Sir Charles. b. at Amherst, Nova Scotia, July 2, 1821; d. Oct. 30, 1915. Canadian Conservative statesman. He studied medicine at Edinburgh, settled as a physician in his native town of Amherst, Nova Scotia, and was president of the Canadian Medical Association (1857-70). He entered the provincial legislature in 1855, and was prime minister of Nova Scotia (1864-67). He advocated the formation of the Dominion of Canada, which took place in 1867, and in 1870 entered Macdonald's cabinet, going out of office with his chief in 1873. He took office as minister of public works on Macdonald's return to power in 1878, and from 1879 to 1884 was minister of railways and canals, in which capacity he promoted the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. In 1884 he was appointed high commissioner for Canada at London, and he was prime minister of Canada in 1896. He was leader of the opposition in the House of Commons (1896-1900). He was one of the negotiators (1887-88) of the fisheries treaty with the U.S.

Tupper, Martin Farquhar. b. at London, July 17, 1810; d. in Surrey, England, Nov. 29, 1889. English poet. He was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1835, but soon abandoned law in order to devote himself to literature. His chief work is Proverbial Philosophy (four series, 1839-76), a once very popular collection of moral statements in blank verse. His Whig ballads and poems also enjoyed a considerable popularity.

Tupper Lake. Village in N New York, in Franklin County; resort center in the Adirondacks; manufactures of woodenware. 5,441 (1950).

Tuptee (tup'tē). See Tapti.

Tupungato (tō.pōng.gā'tō). [Also, Cerro Tupungato.] Mountain in C Chile, E of Santiago, on the Argentina-Chile border. It is an inactive volcano. Elevation, ab. 21,490 ft.

Tuque (tūk), La. See La Tuque.

Tur (tör). In the Persian epic, the Shahnamah, the second of the three sons (Salm, Tur, and Iraj) of Faridun.

Tura (tō.rā'). River in the U.S.S.R., in E European Russia and W Siberia. It flows SE from the Ural Mountains and joins the Tobol below Tyumen. Length, ab. 450 mi.

Turandot (tō.rān.dōt'). Opera in three acts by Giacomo Puccini, with a libretto by Giuseppe Adami and Renato Simoni, first performed at La Scala, Milan, on April 25, 1926. The work, which was completed by Franco Alfano, is taken from a play by Count Carlo Gozzi.

Turati (tō.rā'tē), Augusto. b. Aug. 25, 1888—. Italian journalist and Fascist leader. He edited (until 1922) the periodical Provincia di Brescia, organized the Fascist group of Brescia, and participated (October, 1922) in the "March on Rome." After serving (1925) as vice-secretary of the Fascist Party he became (1926) general secretary but resigned (1932) from all his activities.

Turati, Filippo. b. at Canzo, Italy, Nov. 27, 1857; d. at Paris, March 29, 1932. Italian journalist and Socialist. He founded (1898) the review La Lotta di Classe. It was through him that Benito Mussolini (then a Socialist) received (1912) appointment as editor of the Avanti. A founder (1892) of the Italian Socialist Party, he was elected (1896) to the chamber of deputies; imprisoned (1898-99) for revolutionary activities, he gained great prominence in his party at the congress (1902) at Imola, where he spoke against revolutionary methods. The triumph of Fascism in Italy caused him to flee (1926) to Paris.

Turbat (tūr'bat). Village in W Pakistan, on the Dasht River ab. 250 mi. W of Karachi; capital of Makran; small oasis trading center.

Turberville or Turberville (tēr'bér.vil), George. b. in Dorsetshire, England, c1540; d. c1610. English poet, translator, and writer on hunting. Among his works are Epitaphs, Epigrams, Songs and Sonets (1567) and The Booke of Faulconrie (1575). He is of some importance for his early use (1567) of blank verse in translating Ovid.

Turbia (tōr'bi.a). [French, La Turbie.] Small place near Monaco. It contains a Roman tower dating from the time of Augustus.

Turbott Wolfe (tēr'bōt wūlf). Novel by William Plomer, published in 1926.

Turcaret (tür.kā.re). Comedy by Adrien René le Sage, produced in 1709.

Turčiansky Svätý Martin (tör'chān.skē sva'tē mār'tin). Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Žilina, in NW Slovakia, situated in the Carpathian Mountains SE of Žilina. Here, in 1861, at a Slovak rally, the creation of a special Slovak territory was demanded; in 1863 a society for the publication of literature in the Slovak language was founded; in 1869 a Slovak Women's Association was initiated; in 1893 the foundations were laid for the creation of a Slovak national museum; and in 1918 the union of the Slovak and Czech nations was announced here. The town was completely modernized after 1918. Among the new buildings are the Slovak National Museum and the National Hospital. 10,637 (1947).

Turck (törk), Fenton Benedict. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 25, 1857; d. Nov. 16, 1932. American surgeon. His original researches were on gastritis, peptic ulcer, and traumatic shock; he investigated possible immunity to shock, and invented (1893) the gyrome for investigating the alimentary tract.

Türkheim (tür.kem). [German, Türkheim.] Town in NE France, in Alsace-Lorraine, ab. 40 mi. SW of Strasbourg. There on Jan. 5, 1675, the French under Turenne defeated the Imperialists. Pop. ab. 2,500.

Turcomans (tēr'kō.manz). See Turkmen.

Turda (tör'dä). [German, Thorenburg; Hungarian, Torda.] Town in NW Rumania, in Transylvania, situated on the Aranyos River ab. 16 mi. SE of Cluj; industrial and trade center, especially in wood, cement, ceramics, wire, chemicals, and metals. 25,905 (1948).

Turenne (tür.en). Place in the department of Corrèze, France, ab. 18 mi. SW of Tulle. It has a ruined chateau.

Turenne (tür.en; Anglicized, tür'en'), Vicomte de. [Title of Henri de La Tour d'Auvergne.] b. at Sedan, France, Sept. 11, 1611; killed at Sasbach, near Offenbach, Baden, Germany, July 27, 1675. French marshal, one of the greatest military geniuses produced by France; grandson of William the Silent, Prince of Orange. He was brought up in the Dutch Reformed Church, learned the art of war under his uncle, Maurice of Nassau, and was given a regiment in the French army by Richelieu in 1630. He served with distinction under Jacques Nompar de Caumont, Duc de la Force, Cardinal La Valette, Bernhard of Saxe-Weimar, and Henri de Lorraine, Comte d'Harcourt, and in 1639 was appointed to a command in Italy. He was in 1643 transferred to Germany by Mazarin, by whom he was created a marshal of France in 1644. His four brilliant campaigns in Germany (1644-47) prepared the way materially for the Peace of Westphalia (1648) that ended the Thirty Years' War. During the disturbances of the Fronde (1648-53) he at first supported the parliament, but afterward sided with the court, and in 1652 decisively defeated Condé. After the return of peace at home, he took command against the Spaniards under Condé (who had in the meantime fled from France and accepted the post of general in chief of the Spanish armies). His victory in 1658 decided the war, and was followed by the peace of the Pyrenees in 1659. He was created marshal general of the armies of France in 1660, conquered French Flanders in 1667, abjured Protestantism and joined the Roman Catholic Church in 1668, commanded in the Netherlands in 1672, and devastated the Palatinate in 1674. He was opposed during the next campaign by the Imperial general Raimund Montecucoli, and was killed by a cannonball while reconnoitering at Sasbach.

Turentum (tür'en'tum). Ancient name of Trani, Italy.

Turfat (tūr'fat). [Also, Lukchun, Lukshun, Tulu-fan.] Region in NW China, in the province of Sinkiang, in the Tarim Basin; the lowest spot in China, reaching a depth of ab. 930 ft. below sea level. There are several oases.

Turgai (tör.gī'). [Also, Turgansk.] Former oblast (region) in the Kirghiz Steppe, Russian Central Asia, fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nôte, nôve, nôr; up, lûte, pull; th, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; situated E of Uralsk and N of the Aral Sea and Syr-Darya. It is now a part of the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic in the U.S.S.R.

Turgaliūm (tēr.gā'li.ūm). Ancient name of Trujillo, Spain.

Turgansk (tōr.gānsk'). See Turgai.

Turgenev (tōr.gē'nyif), Aleksandr Ivanovich. [Also: Tourguenief, Turgeneff, Turgeniev.] b. 1784; d. at Moscow, Dec. 17, 1845. Russian historian, author of Historia Russiae monumenta (1841-42) and others; brother of Nikolai Ivanovich Turgenev.

Turgenev, Ivan Sergeyevich. [Also: Tourguenief, Turgeneff, Turgeniev.] b. at Orel, Russia, Nov. 9, 1818; d. at Bougival, near Paris, Sept. 3, 1883. Russian novelist. Born of a landowning family in Orel province, he was educated at Moscow and St. Petersburg, and in 1838 went to Berlin to study philosophy and the classics. About 1840 he received an appointment in the Russian ministry of the interior. He began to publish poems in 1841, and his first story, Andrei Kolosov, appeared in 1844. He contributed to the cause of the emancipation of the serfs through his A Sportsman's Sketches (or Annals of a Sportsman) which appeared in the years following 1847.

The first of these appeared in English in 1847 in the Contemporary Review; they were also published in French and German, and appeared in book form in 1852. In 1852 some remarks on Russian officialdom made in an obituary letter on Gogol led to his being deprived of his official position, imprisoned, and afterward banished to his estate in Orel, in the interior of Russia. In 1854 he was allowed to return, and in later life lived at Baden-Baden and Paris, with short visits to Russia and elsewhere. He never married, but his love for the singer Pauline Viardot-Garcia led him to live near her and to follow her on her tours. He created much personal antagonism by his analysis of political parties, and was misunderstood by those he was most in sympathy with; the epithet "Nihilist," which he applied to narrowly revolutionary tendencies, was applied to all socialistic and democratic tendencies by the Russian government. In later years, however, this misunderstanding disappeared and popular opinion was in his favor. His novels, forming together a sort of social history of Russia from the 1830's to the 1870's, are Rudin (1855), A Nest of Gentlefolk (1858), On the Eve (1860), Fathers and Sons (1862; in this, generally considered his finest novel, the epithet Nihilist is introduced and defined), Snake (1867), and Virgin Soil (1876). Among his short stories, some of them classed with the best ever written for their atmosphere and characterization, are Punin and Baburin, First Love, Asya, A Lear of the Steppe, and Clara Milich. He also wrote Senilia (1883: a collection of philosophic pieces), an essay on Don Quixote and Hamlet, plays (including A Month in the Country, 1850, and A Provincial Lady, 1851), and others.

Turgenev; Nikolai Ivanovich. [Also: Tourguenief, Turgeneff, Turgeniev.] b. 1790; d. at Paris, in November, 1871. Russian historian; brother of Aleksandr Ivanovich Turgenev. He wrote La Russie et les Russes (1847) and others.

Turgot (tūr.gō), Anne Robert Jacques. [Title, Baron de L'Aulne.] b. at Paris, May 10, 1727; d. there, March 20, 1781. French statesman, political economist, and financier. He at first studied theology and then law, and became master of "requêtes" in 1753. He was intendant of Limoges (1761-74), and was appointed minister of marine in 1774, and immediately afterward controller general of finance. In this office he planned, as a follower of the physiocrats, many reforms, including the abolition of the corvée (or compulsory feudal service) and of various other feudal privileges, the securing of liberty of trade, and the establishment of a comprehensive system of public instruction, which outlived many of the results afterward attained by the Revolution. He was bitterly opposed, because of his policy of "No bankruptcy, no increase in taxes, no borrowing," by the queen's party, because of his regulation of speculation by the merchants, because of his religious toleration by the clergy, and because of a crop failure by the masses, he was dismissed by the king in May, 1776. His complete works were edited by Pierre Samuel du Pont de Nemours (1808-11).

Türgovishte (tūr.gō.vish'te). [Also: Targovishte, Trgoviste.] Town in NE Bulgaria, in the department of Shumen, ab. 17 mi. W of Shumen: trade center. 10,505 (1949).

Türheim (tūr'hīm), Ulrich von. See Ulrich von Türheim.

Turicum (tūr'ri.kum). Latin name of Zurich.

Turin (tūr'in, tōr'in'). [Italian, Torino; ancient names, Taurasia, Augusta Taurinorum.] City in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, the capital of the province of Torino, situated on the Po River near its junction with the Dora Riparia River, in a plain between the Alps and the hill country of Monferrato. It is one of the foremost industrial centers of Italy and a major railroad junction. Outstanding among the industries is the Fabrics Italiana Automobili Torino (Fiat), founded in 1901, and producing motor vehicles. There are also manufactures of electrical equipment, railroad cars, machines, tools, and scientific instruments. The second largest industry is the cotton textile industry. There are chemical, rubber, leather, ceramics, and paper manufactures and printing establishments; the food industries produce chocolate, candies, and liquors (especially sweet vermouth). Turin has five railroad stations and two airports. It has a university, founded in 1404, with schools of engineering, architecture, and veterinary medicine. 720,032 (1951).

Architecture. Turin has some Roman architectural remains (Porta Palatina), and one palace of the 13th century, but other public buildings are of later periods: palazzo di città (town hall) of the 17th and 18th centuries; the royal castle, the Castello del Valentino, the Palace of the Academy of Sciences, are all of the 17th century. The Cathedral of San Giovanni Battista dates from the years 1491-98; other churches, such as San Domenico, San Carlo, San Lorenzo, and Santa Cristina, from the 17th and 18th centuries. The general character of the city is derived from the 18th and 19th centuries. The baroque Church of La Superga, containing a burial chapel with the tombs of many members of the house of Savoy, and the Castle of Stupinigi, both of the 18th century, are in the vicinity. Many buildings of tourist interest were damaged in World War II, and extensive repairs are under way or have been completed. Among those that escaped damage are the cathedral, San Carlo, Santa Cristina, and the nearby La Superga; the Roman antiquities were also undamaged. Considerable injury was done to the churches of San Domenico and San Lorenzo, among others, and to the Palace of the Academy of Sciences.

History. In very early times the capital of the Celtic tribe of the Taurini, Turin became a Roman colony under Augustus. After the downfall of the Roman Empire it was the seat of a Lombard duchy (590-636). From the middle of the 10th century it was the seat of a margrave, the territory of which came to the house of Savoy by marriage in 1045; it became the residence of the dukes of Savoy in 1482. In the War of the Spanish Succession the city was besieged by the French army but delivered after the victory of the imperial army under Prince Eugene of Savoy in 1706; it was the capital of the French department of the Po (1800-14); from 1814 to 1865 it was the capital of the kingdom of Sardinia, and was in the same period the seat of the national liberation movement of the Risorgimento and the refuge of Italian patriots fighting for the unity of Italy.

Turin, Treaty of. In European history: 1. Peace between France and Savoy in 1696. 2. Armistice negotiated by Napoleon I with Sardinia in 1796. 3. Treaty between France and Piedmont in 1860, France obtaining Savoy and Nice.

Turina (tōr.rē'nā), Joaquín. b. at Seville, Spain, Dec. 9, 1882; d. at Madrid, Jan. 14, 1949. Spanish pianist and composer. He was notable as an exponent of nationalism in music. Among his compositions are the stage works Margot and La Adultera Penitente; La Procecion del Rocio and Danzas Fantásticas for orchestra; and songs, chamber music, and numerous piano selections.

Turkestan (tūr'ke.stan', -stān'). See Turkistan.

Türkeve (tōr'ke.ve). Town in E Hungary, E of the city of Törökcsent 161/2, 13,299 (1948).

Turkey (tér'ki). [Turkish, Türkiye (tür'ki-ye).] Republic in W Asia, consisting of a roughly rectangular peninsula (the westernmost point of that continent, often called Asia Minor), and including also a somewhat smaller area E of the peninsula in Asia, and the SE tip of the Balkan Peninsula in Europe. It is bounded on the N by Bulgaria, the Black Sea, and the U.S.S.R. (Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic), on the E by the U.S.S.R. (Armenian Soviet Socialist Republic) and Iran, on the S by Iraq, Syria, and the Mediterranean Sea, and on the W by the Aegean Sea, Greece, and Bulgaria. A natural land bridge between the two great continents, it lies across the narrow Bosphorus, the Sea of Marmara, and the Dardanelles, which connect the Black and Mediterranean seas by way of the Aegean, and thus commands the only outlet to the sea for all the shipping on the Danube and through the Black Sea ports of the E Balkan States and the U.S.S.R. (the latter's only other seaports being in the far N and E and on the landlocked Caspian Sea). Much of Turkey's history has been influenced by the interest of the great powers in this sea access to E Europe and the land approaches to the Middle East.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Turkey is divided for administrative purposes into 63 il's (provinces or vilayets), each under a governor appointed by the central government, most of which are named for their chief cities. Its European section, called Eastern Thrace (Turkish, Thrakya), contains Istanbul (formerly Constantinople) and Edirne (Adrianople), both former capitals of the Turkish Empire. Asia Minor or Anatolia (Turkish, Anadolu), Turkish Armenia, and Kurdistan (which also extends into Iran and Iraq) comprise Turkey in Asia, whose principal cities are Ankara (Angora), Adana, Bursa, Eskişehir, Gaziantep, Konya (Iconium); the seaports of Trabzon (Trebizond), Giresun, Samsun, and Ereğli, on the Black Sea; Izmir (Smyrna), on the Aegean; and Antalya, Mersin, and Iskenderun, on the Mediterranean. Government is by a national assembly elected in proportion to population for four years, which chooses a president from its membership, also for four years. The president names a council of ministers. The assembly has the final authority; it had 487 members in the 1950 elections. Capital, Ankara; area, 296,185 sq. mi. (ab. 9,070 in Europe, ab. 287,115 in Asia); pop. of Turkey in Europe, 1,626,299 (1950); of Turkey in Asia, 19,308,441 (1950); total, 20,934,740 (1950).

Terrain and Climate. Most of Turkey is high, with narrow coastal plains along the Black Sea and Mediterranean and a somewhat wider lowland on the Aegean side; Turkey in Europe is comparatively low, rolling country. An almost continuous mountain rim divides these low regions from the interior, the great Anatolian Plateau, which consists of high steppe-like land (elevations to ab. 6,000 ft.) cut by many watercourses and rising E to a rugged series of mountain chains that culminate in Mount Ararat (ab. 16,950 ft.) near the borders of Iran and the U.S.S.R. The main ranges are the Pontus Mountains (over 10,000 ft.), near the Black Sea, and the Taurus Mountains (to 12,250 ft.), near the Mediterranean. Though the country has numerous rivers and lakes, many of those in the interior dry up in summer, much rainfall being cut off from the plateau by the mountains surrounding it. Largest river within Turkey is the Kizil İrmak, which flows in a wide arc through C Anatolia and into the Black Sea W of Samsun; the Sakarya takes a winding course from W Anatolia to the Black Sea between Ereğli and the Bosphorus; the Gediz (ancient Hermus) and Menderes (ancient Maeander) flow into the Aegean and the Seyhan into the Mediterranean. In the E mountains rise the Tigris and Euphrates, which flow SE and S into Iraq and Syria respectively. Lakes Tuz (in the W central part) and Van (in the E) are Turkey's largest lakes. Turkey in Europe has a mild and pleasant climate, subject to storms and fogs near the coasts; the Aegean coast and most of the Black Sea shore of Asiatic Turkey are also mild regions, with plentiful rain; toward the E end of the Black Sea moisture and temperature conditions approach the tropical. Inland much of the country has long, hot, dry summers and fairly cold winters, while in the E mountains summers are short and winters long and very cold.

Earthquakes are quite frequent; in 1939 one did heavy damage in the vicinity of Samsun and Trabzon.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Primarily a pastoral and agricultural country, known in the past for the manufacture only of carpets, silks, and the like, Turkey is now emphasizing the development of industrial and mining enterprises, many under national ownership or control. Near the coasts are raised figs and raisins (chiefly around Izmir), tobacco (Samsun), hazel nuts (near Giresun) and other kinds of nuts, cotton (around Adana), and silk (Bursa); other products include opium (centered at Konya), and also sugar beets, olives, yalonia, and rice. Anatolia produces chiefly wheat and other cereals, corn, and animal products such as mohair and angora wool. An extensive program of reforestation, conservation, and irrigation is aimed at revitalizing much farm and grazing land that has been badly eroded and neglected. This includes reservoirs to save moisture of winter snow, notably one near Ankara, and government ownership or control of virtually all forests. Chromite, soft coal, copper, emery, and iron are mined, and oil fields near the border of Iraq are worked. The government has developed iron and steel mills (at Karabük), fruit and vegetable packing plants, sugar refineries, paper mills, and other industries, and is sponsoring the greater development of Turkey's traditional manufactures such as rugs and silk and cotton textiles. Istanbul is the chief commercial center. Exports include figs, raisins, nuts, opium, olive oil, wheat, tobacco, yalonia, hides and wool, chromite, emery, meerschaum, coal, carpets, and textiles. There are ab. 4,750 mi. of railroads (including the Berlin to Baghdad line) and ab. 7,900 mi. of all-weather highways in Turkey; coastal shipping is important, and the country has well-developed internal and international air service.

History. The earliest inhabitants of Asia Minor are believed to have been the Hittites. Greek colonization began early, and such colonies as Pamphilia, Lycia, and Cilicia lined its coasts. The Roman and afterward the Byzantine empire held the region until the 7th century A.D. The Turks are believed to have come from C Asia. The Seljuk Turks, who controlled Mesopotamia and Syria as well as Asia Minor by the end of the 11th century, were followed in the 13th by the descendants of Osman or Othman, called the Ottoman or Osmanli Turks, which dynasty ruled for six centuries, extended the Turkish Empire over a great region of SE Europe and N Africa and S to the coasts of Arabia, lost it little by little, and finally was driven out after World War I in a bloodless revolution. The nucleus of the Ottoman Empire was formed in Asia Minor in the 13th century. Under Osman I (1288-1326), who is regarded as the founder of the empire, and his son Orkhan (1326-59) a powerful realm was reared on the ruins of the Seljukian and Byzantine power in Asia Minor. Murad I took Adrianople (1361), which he made the capital, and broke the power of Serbia in 1389. The Turkish power was extended under Bajazet I, who subjugated Bulgaria and made Walachia tributary, and under Murad II, who conquered the Peloponnesus. Mohammed II took Constantinople and overthrew the Byzantine Empire in 1453, and conquered Trebizond and most of the Balkan States. The empire reached its height in the 16th century under Suleiman through the conquest of Syria, Egypt, Rhodes, a great part of Hungary, and the extension of suzerainty over N Africa to Algeria. The Turks were repulsed at Vienna after a great victory (1526) at Mohács, their fleet destroyed at Lepanto (1571), and were again defeated before Vienna (1683); suffered great losses at the hands of Austria in the end of the 17th century and the beginning of the 18th, and at the hands of Russia in the last part of the 18th century (Treaty of Kuchuk Kainarji, 1774) and the beginning of the 19th; lost Greece (1821-29) and Algeria (1830); had an unsuccessful war with Russia (1828-29); and took part in the Crimean War (1853-56), in which France and Great Britain sided with Turkey to stop the growing power of Russia. Egypt meanwhile had become practically independent. Insurrections in Crete, Bosnia, and Hercegovina, and wars with Serbia and Montenegro were followed by the unsuccessful war with Russia of 1877-78; fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; nôt, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ın, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

the independence of Rumania, Serbia, and Montenegro was recognized in the Treaty of Berlin (1878); and Bulgaria, Bosnia, Hercegovina, and Cyprus were practically lost. Turkey was compelled to make a large concession to Greece in 1881, but was victorious in a war with that country in 1897. It suffered further losses in the Balkan War of 1912-13, its European boundary after the Treaty of London being approximately what it is now. Italy had taken Tripoli in 1911. The last remnants of the empire were lost in World War I, in which Turkey had sided with the Central Powers. Constantinople and the region around Smyrna were occupied, the latter by the Greeks, and the next few years saw the coming to a head of nearly 15 years (1908 et seq.) of protest against an increasingly corrupt and mismanaged government, which had been led by the Young Turks. In 1919 Mustafa Kemal (later Kemal Atatürk), who had been a leader of the Young Turks, organized a nationalist party at Erzurum, and the next year, in protest against the signing of the Treaty of Sévres by the sultan, it convened an assembly at Angora (later renamed Ankara). This assembly formed a provisional government, in 1921 announced a constitution placing the sovereign authority in the Turkish people, and in 1922, under Kemal's leadership, drove out the Greek occupation army, took possession of Istanbul, and abolished the office of sultan. In 1923 it signed the Treaty of Lausanne, which abrogated that of Sévres and gave Turkey better terms, and in the same year elected Kemal the first president of the republic. The country that had sunk from a powerful empire almost to a pawn of the great powers maneuvering for the East now sought to establish itself on something like equal footing with the countries of the Western world. All traces of the unenlightened rule of the sultans, religious as well as political, were removed as rapidly as possible, to the extent of forbidding the wearing of fezzes and veils, prohibition of polygamy, and even barring ecclesiastical dress outside the churches except for one representative of each denomination. Members of the house of Osman were banished (1924) from the country. Kemal, more dictator than president, held office until his death and carried out reforms with dramatic rapidity. In 1924, although Mohammedanism was declared the state religion, religious courts, which had been the basis of Turkish justice, were abolished, and by 1926 a new code of laws, based chiefly on the Swiss civil code, had been prepared. Religious schools and orders were also banned; in 1925 separation of church and state was completed when it was announced there would be no state religion (though Mohammedanism continues to be practiced by most Turks) and religious education in the schools was prohibited (this became optional in 1948). In 1927 a national bank was established, and in the next years westernization was continued with the official adoption of the Latin instead of the Arabic script (1928), of the metric system of weights and measures (1934), and of a law (1934) making family names in the western style compulsory and abolishing all titles. The Gregorian Calendar had been officially adopted in 1926. Women not only were released from the harem and from wearing the veil but were given the right to participate and to run for office in municipal elections (1930) and later the vote in national elections (1934). The year 1934 also saw the inauguration of a five-year plan for industrial development, followed in 1936 by another for mining and electric power. In 1937 the government announced its policy of controlling industry, mines, forests, communications, and public utilities. In the field of international relations, Kemal Atatürk had accomplished parts of cooperation with the U.S.S.R. (1925) and with Iran, Iraq, and Afghanistan (1937) and the signing of the Montreux Convention (1936), permitting Turkey to fortify the Straits (Dardanelles and Bosphorus), which had been demilitarized by the Treaty of Lausanne. On his death in 1938 Kemal was succeeded by İsmet İnönü as president. The latter's administration achieved an agreement (June, 1939) with France giving Turkey the territory of Hatay (formerly Alexandretta and part of Syria), a pact of alliance (October, 1939) with France and Great Britain, a land reform bill (1945) redistributing large land holdings, the establishment (1945) of a labor ministry and child labor laws, the enactment (1946) of Turkey's first social security legislation, and sufficient unity to permit officially the existence of an opposition party, which became active in 1945. In 1945 also Turkey, though it had until then remained neutral in World War II, opened the Straits for Lend-Lease shipments to the U.S.S.R. and later declared war on the Axis. Turkey signed a treaty (1947) by which it would receive financial aid from the U.S. and a trade agreement (1949) with West Germany. İnönü was succeeded in 1950 by Celal Bayar, the candidate of the opposition (Democratic) party.

Culture. Besides Turks, the population includes Kurds, Arabs, and Circassians, all of whom are Mohammedans (chiefly Sunni), and also some Armenians and Greeks. Mohammedanism is still by far the predominant religion, though the religious leaders, formerly influential in civil affairs also, have since the establishment of the republic been deprived of all civil authority. There are several sects of the Eastern Church and also Roman Catholics, Jews, and Protestants. Religious education in the schools, formerly prohibited, was made optional in 1948. The schools are all controlled by the central government; children must attend between the ages of seven and 16. There are adult education courses and special institutes for rural students. The national university has branches at Istanbul and Ankara. Robert College at Istanbul is an American institution.

Turkey in the Straw. American banjo and fiddle tune, used chiefly for square dances.

Turkey Ridge. A former name of Cleveland Heights.

Turkey River. River in NE Iowa. Length, ab. 135 mi.

Türkheim (türk'him). See Turkheim.

Turkic (tér'kik). Language group of the Altaic family, distributed today from the Balkans and Turkey to the Lena valley of NE Siberia, to W China.

Turkistan (tér'kīstān', -stān'). [Also, Turkestan.] Region with indefinite limits in C Asia, E of the Caspian Sea, S of Siberia, and N of Iran (Persia), Afghanistan, and Tibet; sometimes part of Afghanistan (Afghan Turkistan) is included. The part W of the Tien Shan and Pamir mountain systems is generally known as Russian or Western Turkistan. In the Middle Ages occupied by separate khanates, this region was conquered by Russia in the mid-19th century and made a general government district of the Russian Empire called Turkistan and comprising the regions of Samarkand, Syr-Darya, Fergana, and others. This was divided soon after the establishment of the U.S.S.R. into the Kazakh, Kirgiz, Tadzhik, Turkmen, and Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republics. East Turkistan was approximately equal to what is now the province of Sinkiang, China, comprising chiefly the Tarim Basin (called Kashgaria or Chinese Turkistan; sometimes also High Tartary or Little Bukhara) and Dzungaria.

Turkistan, Afghan. See Afghan Turkistan.

Turkistan, Chinese. See Kashgaria.

Turkistan, East. See under Turkistan; see also Sinkiang.

Turkistan, Russian (or West). See under Turkistan.

Turkmanchah (türk.mān.chī'). Place in Iran, ab. 70 mi. SE of Tabriz. Here, in 1828, a peace was concluded between Russia and Persia by which Russia acquired Persian Armenia, and great influence over Persia.

Turkmen (tér'kēn, -mēn). [Also: Turcomans, Turkomans.] Turkic people of Soviet C Asia, closely related to the Azerbaijani of Transcaucasia and the Osmani Turks of Turkey. In 1946 they numbered ab. 864,000. The Mary (Merv) sultanate (1088-1157) was the period of their political and cultural flowering. More recently, Mongol, Uzbek (Khivan), and Russian rule has been maintained. Herding and cotton growing are their principal occupations.

Turkmen Canal. [Russian, Glavny Turkumenski Kanai.] Irrigation and hydroelectric-power canal in the U.S.S.R., in the Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic, extending from the Amu Darya through the Uzboid depression to the Caspian Sea. It is planned to greatly increase cotton production in the new irrigated area. The Turkmen Canal project was begun in 1950, with completion scheduled for 1957. Length, 683 mi.

Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic. Republic of the U.S.S.R., in C Asia, situated E of the S part of the Caspian Sea. It is bordered on the S by Iran and Afghanistan. Most of the republic is a low-lying subtropical desert region; roughly four fifths of the area is covered by the Kara Kum desert. The population is concentrated in the oases at the foot of the mountain ranges along the S border, and in the large oases of Mary (Merv) and Tejend. The chief crops are cotton, fruits, and grains; silk and caracul wool are also produced. Petroleum is produced in the W, near the Caspian Sea, and chemicals are extracted from the Gulf of Kara-Bogaz-Gol. In the C part, sulfur is produced in the desert. The republic is traversed by the main railroad line of C Asia (the Trans-Caspian) from Krasnovodsk to the Amu Darya, and by the Turkmen Canal, under construction in 1952. Capital, Ashkhabad; area, 187,200 sq. mi., pop. 1,253,985 (1939).

Turkomania (tér.kō.mā.nī.a). Country of the Turkmen, in C Asia, N of Iran and Afghanistan; conquered and annexed by Russia in 1881. Its area is now included in the Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R.

Turkomsans (tér.kō.mānz). See Turkmen.

Turks (térks). Those people who speak Turkic languages: a linguistic rather than a racial term. They may be divided into two primary groups: the western or Osmanli Turks of the old Ottoman Empire, and the eastern Turks, who include many of the peoples of Turkistan and C Asia to the Lena River. No one mode of life can be associated with the Turks as a whole, for adaptations to environment have produced cultural variations. Most of the western Turks are sedentary agriculturalists, while those of the east, living under steppe conditions, have adopted horse and reindeer breeding. The western Turks are Moslem while the eastern, though influenced by other religions, still retain to a great extent their animistic religions. Among the eastern and northern tribes shamanism is a most important feature. In contemporary political parlance the term "Turk" refers to a citizen of the modern state of Turkey.

Turks and Caicos Islands (kā'kōs). Group of islands in the Atlantic Ocean, N of Haiti: British possessions, governed as a dependency of Jamaica. The chief industry is the production of salt by the evaporation of sea water. Area, ab. 202 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 6,000.

Turku (túr.kō). [Swedish, Åbo.] City in SW Finland, capital of the lääni (department) of Turku-Pori, situated on the Gulf of Bothnia, W of Helsinki. The second largest city of Finland, it was capital of the country until 1812. It is a seaport and a manufacturing center, with shipyards, engineering works, machine shops, textile, tobacco, and furniture factories, and sugar refineries. The cathedral, the oldest church building in Finland (and dedicated to Finland's patron saint), is in the Gothic style. 103,899 (1951).

Turku-Pori (túr.kō.pó'ri). [Swedish, Åbo-Björneborg.] Lääni (department) in S Finland, bordering on the Gulf of Bothnia on the W, and bounded by Vaasa, Häme, and Uusimaa. Capital, Turku; land area, 8,500 sq. mi.; pop. 636,373 (1951).

Turla (túr.lá'). Turkish name of the Dniester.

Türlin (túr'lin), Ulrich von dem. See Ulrich von dem Türlin.

Turlock (tér'lok). City in C California, in Stanislaus County, near San Francisco: marketing center for watermelons, alfalfa, sweet potatoes, peaches, apricots, grapes, grain, and dairy products. 6,235 (1950).

Turmair (tór'mir), Johannes. See Aventinus.

Türmer (túr'mér), Der. German illustrated monthly founded (1898) at Berlin by Baron Jeannot von Grotthuss. It advocated a sound advance in art and literature, always with a spirit of respect for inherited values. Its name was taken from Goethe's Faust, Part II, where a warder of the tower (in German, Türmer) appears under the name of the sharp-sighted Argonaut Lynceus.

Turmus (tér'mus). Medieval Latin name of the Tormes.

Turnacum (tér.nák'um). A Latin name of Tournai.

Turnbull (térn'búl), Agnes Sligh. b. at New Alexandria, Pa., Oct. 14, 1888—. American novelist. Her works include The Rolling Years (1936), Remember the End (1938), The Day Must Dawn (1942), The Bishop's Mantle (1947), and The Gown of Glory (1952).

Turnbull, Robert James. [Pseudonym, "Brutus."] b. at New Smyrna, Fla., in January, 1775; d. June 15, 1833. American lawyer and publicist. Admitted (1794) to the bar, he practiced law at Charleston, S.C., until 1810, and subsequently became active as a political publicist. An ardent supporter of nullification, he wrote the widely influential The Crisis: or, Essays on the Usurpations of the Federal Government (1827), most of which had already appeared over the pseudonym "Brutus" in the Charleston Mercury. He took a prominent part in the South Carolina nullification convention (1832), writing the Address to the people of the state.

Turner (tér'nér), Charles Tennyson. b. at Sowerby, Yorkshire, England, July 4, 1808; d. April 25, 1879. English poet; brother of Alfred Tennyson. He collaborated with Alfred in Poems by Two Brothers (1827) and published several volumes of sonnets. In 1830 he adopted the name Turner by the terms of a will of his great-uncle.

Turner, Charles Y. b. at Baltimore, Nov. 25, 1850; d. Dec. 31, 1918. American figure painter.

Turner (tór'ner), Clorinda Matto de. See Matto de Turner, Clorinda.

Turner (tér'nér), Cyril. See Tourneur, Cyril.

Turner, Edward Raymond. b. at Baltimore, May 28, 1881; d. Dec. 31, 1929. American historian. He was professor of European history (1911-24) at the University of Michigan, and beginning in 1925 held a similar position at the Johns Hopkins University. A specialist in the field of English constitutional history, he was the author of Ireland and England (1919), Europe since 1870 (1921), The Privy Council of England in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries (2 vols., 1927-28), and The Cabinet Council of England in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries (2 vols., 1930-32).

Turner, Frederick Jackson. b. at Portage, Wis., Nov. 14, 1861; d. March 14, 1932. American historian and teacher. He served as assistant professor (1889-91) and professor (1891-1910) of history at the University of Wisconsin, and was professor of history (1910-24) at Harvard, subsequently serving as a research associate at the Huntington Library. He is noted for his formulation of the hypothesis of the expanding frontier, which ushered in a distinctive period of historical interpretation by its emphasis upon the role of the frontier in shaping American democratic institutions. His works include Rise of the New West (1906), The Frontier in American History (1920), The Significance of Sections in American History (1932), and The United States, 1830-1850 (1935). He was awarded (1933) the Pulitzer prize in history.

Turner, Mrs. G.D. See Wilson, Margaret.

Turner, Mrs. Henry Ernest. See Robertson, E. Arnot.

Turner, John Hastings. b. at London, Dec. 16, 1892—. English dramatist and novelist. His plays include Account Rendered (1913), Iris Intervenes (1915), A Breath of Fresh Air (1917), Back Again (1919), The Sea Urchin (1925), The Spot on the Sun (1927), and For the Defence (1935). He also wrote the novels The Affairs of Men (1932) and Bar, Mouse and Waterbettle (1938).

Turner, John Roscoe. b. at Matville, W.Va., Feb. 13, 1882—. American economist and educator. Professor (1918-28), head of the economics department (1920-23), and dean of Washington Square College (1917-28) at New York University, he was president (1928-35) of West Virginia University, dean of men (1935-42) and professor (1942-44) at the College of the City of New York, and an economics expert (1944 et seq.) for the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Author of Ricardian Rent Theory in Early American Economics (1921), Economics—The Science of Business (1941), and other books.

Turner, Joseph Mallord William. b. at London, April 23, 1775; d. there, Dec. 19, 1851. English landscape painter. The son of a barber at London, his education was meager, but he devoted himself to drawing at a very early age. In 1789 he entered the school of the Royal Academy, and for a short time worked with Sir Joshua Reynolds. In 1790 he exhibited a View of the Archbishop's Palace, Lambeth, at the Royal Academy. He was made associate of the Royal Academy in 1799, and royal academicien in 1802. Before the latter date he was more noted for his water-color painting. Between 1795 and 1799 he sent 39 works to the academy exhibitions. In 1808 he was professor of perspective at the academy. He visited Scotland in 1800, and the Continent c1802 and in 1804. In 1803 he exhibited six foreign subjects, among them the famous Calais Pier. From 1807 to 1819 he produced his Liber Studiorum. In 1818 he went to Scotland to make the illustrations for Scott's Provincial Antiquities. In 1819 he visited Italy for the first time. The visit was followed by increased brilliancy of color, as in The Golden Bough and The Fighting Téméraire. In 1816 he illustrated Whitaker's History of Richmondshire (pub. 1823), in 1824 The Rivers of England, in 1830 Rogers's Italy, and in 1833–35 The Rivers of France. In 1828 he again visited Italy. His first Venetian picture appeared at the academy in 1833. In 1839 he exhibited The Fighting Téméraire, in 1840 The Slave Ship, and in 1842 The Burial of Wilkie at Sea. He continued to exhibit till 1850.

Turner, Josiah. b. at Hillsboro, N.C., Dec. 27, 1821; d. near there, Oct. 26, 1901. American politician and editor. Admitted (c1845) to the bar, he was elected (1852, 1853, 1860) to the North Carolina legislature, and, though he opposed secession, joined (1861) the state troops as a captain of cavalry and was wounded (1862) fighting against Union forces. He served as a member (1863–65) of the Confederate Congress, where he was an exponent of a peace policy. As proprietor and editor (1868–76) of the Raleigh Sentinel, he opposed congressional reconstruction and played an important role in defeating the "carpetbag" regime in his state.

Turner, Nat. b. in Southampton County, Va., Oct. 2, 1800; d. at Jerusalem, Va., Nov. 11, 1831. American slave leader, of an insurrection associated with his name. Attaining a position of religious leadership over his fellow slaves, he invoked divine inspiration for the appointed task of freeing them from slavery and laid the plans for a revolt. Together with about 70 other slaves, he murdered upwards of 50 whites, including his master and the latter's family, after beginning the revolt on Aug. 13, 1831. Captured after six weeks in hiding, he was tried, convicted, and hanged.

Turner, Samuel Hulbeart. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 23, 1790; d. at New York, Dec. 21, 1861. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman, teacher, and Biblical scholar. He was ordained a priest in 1814, served (1818–61) as professor at the General Theological Seminary (New York), and was professor of Hebrew language and literature (1830 et seq.) at Columbia.

Turner, Sharon. b. at London, Sept. 24, 1768; d. there, Feb. 13, 1847. English historian. His chief works are History of England from the Earliest Period to the Norman Conquest (4 vols., 1799–1805), and History of England from the Norman Conquest to 1509 (1814–29).

Turner, W. J. [Full name, Walter James Redfern Turner.] b. at Melbourne, Australia, Oct. 13, 1889—. British poet, critic, and novelist. He was music critic (1916 et seq.) of the New Statesman and Nation, drama critic (1919–23) of the London Mercury, literary editor (1920–23) of the London Daily Herald, and music critic (1923 et seq.) of the London Daily Express. Author of the volumes of poetry The Hunter and Other Poems (1916), The Dark Fire (1918), The Dark Wind (1920), Paris and Helen (1921), In Time Like Glass (1921), Landscape of Cythera (1923), Pursuit of Psyche (1931), Songs and Incantations (1936), and Selected Poems (1939). His novels include The Aesthetes (1927) and The Duchess of Popocatepetl (1939). Among his critical and biographical works are Music and Life (1921), Orpheus (1926), Beethoven (1927), Wagner (1933), Berlioz (1934), and Mozart (1938).

Turner, Walter Victor. b. in Essex, England, April 3, 1866; d. at Wilkingsburg, Pa., Jan. 9, 1919. American engineer and inventor. He patented several air-brake devices, and became (1903) a mechanical expert with the Westinghouse Air Brake Company (Wilmerding, Pa.), becoming (1910) its chief engineer, and serving (1916–19) as its manager of engineering. One of the leading pneumatic engineers of his time, he took out more than 41 patents, including one for the "K" triple valve. Author of Development in Air Brakes for Railroads (1939).

Turner, Sir William. b. at Lancaster, England, 1832; d. Feb. 15, 1910. English anatomist, principal of the University of Edinburgh from 1913. He was demonstrator of anatomy at Edinburgh (1854–67) and professor of anatomy (1867–1913).

Turners Falls (tér'nérz). Unincorporated community in N Massachusetts, in Franklin County, in Montague town, on the Connecticut River, ab. 35 mi. N of Springfield, 5,179 (1950).

Turner's Gap. Pass in the South Mountain in Maryland: the scene of part of the battle of South Mountain, Sept. 14, 1862.

Turnhout (tér'hou't). Town in N Belgium, in the province of Antwerp, situated near the Dutch border, ab. 25 mi. NE of Antwerp, with which it is connected by canal: linen, cotton, and paper manufactures; agricultural trade. The Dutch under Maurice of Nassau defeated the Spaniards here in 1597. Pop. 32,135 (1947).

Türnich (tür'ních). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 16 mi. SW of Cologne: distillery; agricultural trade. There is an 18th-century castle in the rococo style, which was slightly damaged in World War II, 11,459 (1950).

Turn of the Screw, The. Story of supernaturalism by Henry James, published in 1898 in his volume The Two Magics. The tale was dramatized as The Innocents (1950).

Turnour (tér'nér), Cyril. See Tourneur, Cyril.

Turnovo (tér'nó.vó). See Trnovo.

Turnu-Măgurele (tór'nó.mu.gó.rá'la). Town in S Rumania, in Muntenia, situated near the Danube River, ab. 77 mi. SW of Bucharest, opposite Nikolop, Bulgaria: agricultural markets; cigar factories, 11,493 (1948).

Turnu Roșu (tór'nó.ró.shó). [German, Roterturm, also spelled Rotherthurm; Eng. trans., "Red Tower".] Pass in Rumania, in the Transylvanian Alps, on the borders of Transylvania and Walachia, situated in the valley of the Olt River S of Sibiu (Hermannstadt). It was the scene of defeats of the Turks by the Hungarians in 1442 and 1493, and the Russians passed through it in 1849. A railway and a highway traverse the pass.

Turnus (tér'nús). In Roman legend, the king of the Rutulians, in Italy, at the period of the arrival of the Trojans under Aeneas.

Turnu-Severin (tór'nó.se.ver'én). Town in S Rumania, in Oltenia, situated on the Danube River at the exit of the Iron Gate, ab. 22 mi. SE of Orșova: railroad station and river port; important center of trade with Yugoslavia. Below the town are ruins of a Roman settlement and a bridge, built by the emperor Trajan. The town suffered very serious damage in World War II, 31,296 (1948).

Turoni (túr'ró.ni). See Tours.

"Turpentine State." Occasional nickname of North Carolina.

Turpin (tér'pin; French, tür.pan). d. c794. Archbishop of Reims, long supposed to be the author of a history of Charlemagne (which is now known actually to have been composed in the 11th or 12th century).

Turpin (tér'pin), Richard. [Called Dick Turpin.] b. 1706; executed 1739. English highwayman. The popular account of his famous ride to York on his mare "Black Bess" is not mentioned in the Newgate Calendar.

Turquino (tór.ké'nó). Pico. See under Sierra Maestra.

Turrialba (tór.rí'al'bá). Volcanic peak in C Costa Rica, NE of San José. Elevation, ab. 11,220 ft.

Turris Libisonis (tur'is lib.i.só'nis). Ancient name of Porto Torres.

Turris Nerviorum (nér.vi.ó'rum). A Latin name of Tournai.

Tur-Sinai (túr'sé'ní). See Sinai.

Turtkul (túr'kol'). [Former name, Petro-Alexandrovsk.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic, C Asia, situated on the Amu Darya: cotton-processing center; former military station, 11,000 (est. 1933).

Turtle Creek. A former name of Beloit, Wis.

Turtle Creek. Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, in a coal-mining area: residential community. Pop. 12,363 (1950).

Turton (tér'ton). Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 4 mi. N of Bolton, ab. 198 mi. NW of London by rail, 10,951 (1951).

Turveydrop (tér'vi.drap). Mr. Fatuous character, a "model of deportment," in Charles Dickens's Bleak House.

Tus (tós). See Tuz.

Tusayan (tós'an). See Hopi Indians.

Tuscaloosa (tus.kə.lō'sə). City in W Alabama, capital of Tuscaloosa County, on the Black Warrior River ab. 89 mi. NW of Montgomery; coal and iron. It is the seat of the University of Alabama, and was formerly (1826-46) the capital of Alabama. 46,396 (1950).

Tuscan Archipelago (tus'kan). Group of islands W of Tuscany, including Elba and some smaller islands.

Tuscan Sea. Name sometimes given to the part of the Mediterranean W of Tuscany, Italy.

Tuscany (tus'ka.ni). [Italian, Toscana.] Compartimento (region) in C Italy, containing the provinces of Massa (formerly Apuania), Arezzo, Firenze, Grosseto, Livorno, Lucca, Pisa, Pistoia, and Siena. It is bounded on the N and E by the main range of the Apennines, on the W by the Ligurian and Tyrrhenian seas, and on the S by the compartimenti (regions) of Umbria and Latium. The valleys produce grain, wine, olives, fruits, vegetables, and tobacco. Iron, copper, marble, mercury, and lignite are mined; there is a great variety of industries and handicrafts some of which, like ceramics, glass, and woolen manufactures, go back to the Middle Ages. The towns of Tuscany have long been famous for their paintings, sculptures, and architecture, and the dialect of the region has become the literary language of Italy. Tuscany was the home of the ancient Etruscans and one of the earliest objects of Roman expansion. After the downfall of the Roman Empire, it was overrun by Goths, Lombards, Byzantines, and Franks, and finally, as a margravate, contested between the Pope and the German emperor. Sovereignty later passed to the house of Lorraine and subsequently to Sardinia and the Kingdom of Italy. The region witnessed severe fighting during the latter part of World War II, particularly in July-September, 1944. Area, 8,880 sq. mi.; pop. 3,146,710 (1951).

Tuscany, Grand Duke of. Title of Medici, Cosimo I de'.

Tuscarawas (tus.kə.rō'wəs). River in NE Ohio which unites with the Walhonding River at Coshocton to form the Muskingum. Length, ab. 125 mi.

Tuscarora (tus.kə.rō'ra). North American Indian tribe, formerly inhabiting a portion of NW North Carolina, which in the early 18th century joined the League of the Iroquois in New York. The language was of the Iroquoian family.

Tuscola (tus.kō'la). City in E Illinois, county seat of Douglas County; woodworking industries. 2,960 (1950).

Tusculum (tus'kū.lum). In ancient geography, a city in Latium, Italy, situated in the Alban Hills ab. 13 mi. SE of Rome, near the modern Frascati. According to tradition its chief, Mamilius, joined Tarquinius Superbus against the Romans. Later it was allied with Rome. Under the republic and empire it contained villas of many Romans (Lucullus, Pompey, Brutus, and Cicero). It was destroyed near the end of the 12th century. Its ruins contain a Roman amphitheater and a theater.

Tuscumbia (tus.kum'bi.a). City in NW Alabama, county seat of Colbert County, near the Tennessee River, ab. 5 mi. S of Florence. 6,734 (1950).

Tushrattu (tōsh.rāt'tō). See Dushrattu.

Tusi (tō'sē). See Hima.

Tusi, Mohammed ibn-Mohammed ibn al-Hasan Nasir ed-din al-. See Nasir ed-din al-Tusi, Mohammed ibn-Mohammed ibn al-Hasan.

Tusitala (tō.sē.tā'la). Samoan name of Stevenson, Robert Louis.

Tuskegee (tus.kē'gē). City in E Alabama, county seat of Macon County; seat of the Tuskegee Institute. 6,712 (1950).

Tussaud's Waxworks (tu.sōz'), Madame. Collection of waxworks representing notable persons and various curiosities, on the Marylebone Road, London, near Baker Street Station. It was established (1802) by a Swiss woman who had learned to model at Paris, and after an imprisonment during the French Revolution brought her collection to London (a few of the figures still on exhibition are said to have been modeled by her).

Tusser (tus'er), Thomas. b. at Rivenhall, Essex, England, c1524; d. at London, about April, 1580. English poet. He was a chorister of Saint Paul's, studied at Eton and at King's College, Cambridge, spent ten years at court, and then settled on a farm in Suffolk. He wrote A Hundred Good Points of Good Husbandry (1557) and Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry United to as Many of Good Wife (1573).

Tussi (tō'sē). See Hima.

Tut-ankh-amen (tōt.āng.kh'ā'men). [Also: Tutenkhamon; original name, Tut-ankh-Aton (-ā'ton).] fl. c1355 B.C. Pharaoh of Egypt, of the XVIIIth dynasty. In childhood he was married to a daughter of Ikhnaton (or Akhenaton). He is thought to have been at his accession about 12 years of age, and to have ruled, nominally, for about six years. He is now among the best-known of all pharaohs only for the reason that his tomb, discovered in 1922 by Howard Carter, turned out to be the most instructive Egyptian find as yet made. All other known interments of Egyptian kings and queens of early times, whether in pyramids or in rock tombs in the Valley of the Kings, had been plundered. It is known that a like attempt was made on the tomb of Tut-ankh-amen, but was interrupted when the robbers had made off with only a few gold vessels. Carter uncovered the steps leading to his tomb, which, for all that it was certainly inferior to others, yielded a wealth of artistic treasure that dazzled the world of that day. Excavation of the tomb was completed in 1926. Most of the treasure was removed to the national museum at Cairo.

Tutela (tū.tē'la). Ancient name of Tudela, Spain; also of Tulle, France.

Tutenkhamon (tōt.ēng.kh'ā'mon). See Tut-ankh-amen.

Tuthmosis (tuth.mō'sis). See Thutmose.

Tutivillus (tū.ti.vil'us). In medieval demonology, a demon who was said to collect all the fragments of words which the priests had skipped over or mutilated in the performance of the service, and to carry them to hell. He figures in various English mystery plays.

Tuttlingen (tut'ling.en). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Hohenzollern, French Zone, formerly in the Black Forest Kreis (district) of the state of Württemberg, situated on the Danube River ab. 30 mi. NW of Konstanz; manufactures of shoes, knitwear, knives, surgical and precision instruments; wine and lumber trade. The Imperialists and Bavarians defeated the French here in 1643. Pop. 21,271 (1950).

Tutwiler (tut'wi'ler), Henry. b. at Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 16, 1807; d. at Greene Springs, Ala., Sept. 22, 1884. American educator. Graduated (1829) from the University of Virginia, he served (1831-37) as professor of ancient languages at the University of Alabama and founded (1847) the Greene Springs School for Boys, of which he was head until the time of his death.

Tutwiler, Julia Strudwick. b. at Greene Springs, Ala., Aug. 15, 1841; d. at Birmingham, Ala., March 24, 1916. American educator; daughter of Henry Tutwiler. After her return (1876) from study in Germany, she introduced the kindergarten system into Alabama; in 1882 she was influential in securing a state appropriation for what became (1883) the Alabama Normal College, of which she was named coprincipal and became (1888) the sole head, becoming its president emeritus in 1910. A pioneer in the field of vocational training for women in Alabama, she also played a leading role in securing a legislative appropriation for the Alabama Girls Industrial School (opened 1896) and was responsible for introducing the principle of coeducation at the University of Alabama when she won approval (1896) for admission of students from the Alabama Normal College. One of her poems, Alabama, became the state song.

Tuva Autonomous Oblast (tō'va; ōb'lāst). [Former names: Tannu Tuva, Tuva (or Tuvinian) People's Republic, Uryankhai.] Autonomous oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, U.S.S.R., situated in S Siberia, in the upper valley of the Yenisei River, bordering on the Mongolian People's Republic. The C part of the oblast is occupied by valleys and basins, bordered on all sides by high mountains. There is some irrigation farming in the valleys, and considerable lumbering and stock raising; the inhabitants are a Mongol people. The chief link with the outside world is a highway from the capital to Abakan, the rail terminus, ab. 250 mi. distant. The region was incorporated into the U.S.S.R. in 1944. Capital, Kyzyl; area, 66,150 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 100,000 (1945).

Tuvian People's Republic (tō.vin'ān). See Tuva Autonomous Oblast.

Tuwim (tō'vēm), Julian. b. at Łódź, Poland, 1894—. Polish poet and translator. During World War II he was in the U.S., returning thereafter to Poland.

Tuxedo (tuk.sē'dō). Town in SE New York, in Orange County, ab. 35 mi. NW of New York City; includes Tuxedo Park, fashionable residential community. 2,281 (1950).

Tuxpan (tōs'pān). City in W Mexico, in Nayarit state. 10,315 (1940).

Tuxpan. City in E Mexico, in Veracruz state, near the Gulf of Mexico; oil, forest products, and hides. 13,381 (1940).

Tuxtla (tōs'tlā). [Full name, Tuxtla Gutiérrez (gō'tyer'es).] City in SE Mexico, capital of Chiapas state; shipping and trade center for agricultural produce. 15,883 (1940).

Túy (tōi). Commune in NW Spain, in the province of Pontevedra, situated near the Portuguese border, ab. 30 mi. S of Pontevedra. 13,500 (1940).

Tuz (tōz). [Also: Toos, Tus.] Medieval capital of Khurasan, Persia, near Meshed. It was the birthplace of Khrdausi.

Tuzla (tōz'lā). Town in C Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Herzegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Drinska, N of Sarajevo and SE of Brod. It has a hydroelectric power plant, and chemical industries. 28,916 (1948).

TVA. See Tennessee Valley Authority.

Tvardovsky (tvār.dōf'ski), Aleksandr Trifonovich. b. 1910—. Russian poet. His two narrative poems in praise of rural collectivization, published in the 1930's, established his reputation in Russia. During World War II he won immense popularity with a tale in verse the hero of which, Vasily Tyorkin, is the Russian equivalent of the American "G.I. Joe."

Tvashtri (tvāsh'trē). [Also, Tvashtar (-tār).] In later Hindu mythology, one of the Adityas, but in the ancient Vedic mythology the divine builder and artisan of the Hindu pantheon. He forged the thunderbolts of Indra and fashioned the drinking cup of the gods. He bestowed offspring and formed husband and wife for each other, even from the womb.

Tver (tvr). Former guberniya (government) of Russia, surrounded by the governments of Novgorod, Yaroslavl, Vladimir, Moscow, Smolensk, and Pskov. It is now partly incorporated in the Kalinin oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic in the U.S.S.R.

Tver. Former name of Kalinin.

Tver, Principality of. Medieval principality in N central Russia in the 13th-15th centuries. It was annexed by Ivan III of Moscow in 1482.

Twachtman (twākt'man), John Henry. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 4, 1853; d. at Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 8, 1902. American painter.

Twain (twān), Mark. A pseudonym originally used by Sellers, Isaiah.

Twain, Mark. Pseudonym of Clemens, Samuel Langhorne.

Twareg (twā'reg). See Tuareg.

'Twas the Night Before Christmas. See Visit from Saint Nicholas, A.

Tweed (twēd). River in S Scotland and NE England. It rises near the Dumfriesshire-Peeblesshire boundary, ab. 6 mi. N of Moffat, and flows generally NE to Peebles, whence it flows E through Peeblesshire and across the N parts of Selkirkshire and Roxburghshire, past Galashiels, Melrose, and Kelso. It forms ab. 7 mi. of the Berwickshire-Roxburghshire boundary, and ab. 5 mi. NE of Kelso flows NE for ab. 15 mi. along the border between England and Scotland (Berwickshire and Northumberland). The river enters England ab. 4 mi. W of Berwick-upon-Tweed, flowing E to the North Sea. Among its tributaries are the Ettrick, Teviot, Till, Gala, Leader, Eden, Leet, and Whiteadder. Its salmon fisheries are of considerable importance. Length, ab. 97 mi.

Tweed, William Marcy. b. at New York, April 3, 1823; d. there, April 12, 1878. American political boss. He was the son of a chair-maker, and learned his father's trade. In 1852 he became an alderman of New York City, served in Congress (1853-55), was chairman of the board of supervisors of New York City (1856) and school commissioner (1856-57). Subsequently a state senator, he was appointed commissioner of public works for the city of New York in 1870. He became chairman of the general committee of Tammany Hall (and its grand sachem) in 1863. As head of a group of politicians known as the "Tweed Ring," he succeeded in getting control of the financial affairs of the city, and in robbing it of many millions of dollars. He was arrested in a civil suit Oct. 28, 1871, and in a criminal action in December; he was tried in January, 1873, and the jury disagreeing, was again tried in November and sentenced to 12 years' imprisonment. Released on legal technicalities in 1875, he was committed to Ludlow Street Jail in default of bail in civil suits, but escaped and fled to Spain. He was arrested by the Spanish authorities and returned to the U.S., and was recommitted to Ludlow Street Jail, where he died.

Tweeddale (twēd'dāl). See Peeblesshire.

Tweedledum and Tweedledee (twēd.dūm; twēd.dē'). Phrase in a satirical squib by Byrom (1692-1763) alluding to the differences between the adherents of Handel and of Buononcini.

Tweedledum and Tweedledee. Twin brothers of identical appearance in Through the Looking-Glass by Lewis Carroll (C. L. Dodgson). They recite The Walrus and the Carpenter to Alice, and fight a duel, armed with pots and pans, which is interrupted by a huge bird.

Tweedmouth (twēd'muth, -mouth), 2nd Baron. Title of Marjoribanks, Edward.

"Tweed Ring" (twēd). See under Tweed, William Marcy.

Tweedsmuir (twēdz'mūr), 1st Baron. Title of Buchan, Sir John.

Twelfth Day. See Epiphany.

Twelfth Night. English secular celebration on January 5, the eve of Epiphany; not widely observed today. The festivities traditionally included the presentation of plays and it is from this custom that Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, written for such an occasion, takes its title.

Twelfth Night, or What You Will. Comedy by Shakespeare, first acted c1602 and printed in 1623. The story may have been drawn from the Italian of Bandoello or the French of Belleforest.

Twelve Sonnets. Poems by Siegfried Sassoon, published in 1911.

Twelve Stories and a Dream. Collection of short stories by H. G. Wells, published in 1903.

Twelve Tables. Tables on which were engraved and promulgated at Rome (451 and 450 B.C.) short statements of those rules of Roman law which were most important in the affairs of daily life. They were drawn up in large part, it seems, from the existing law, and in part as new legislation, by the decemvirs, and hence were at first called "the laws of the decemvirs." Ten were first promulgated, and two were soon added. They formed thereafter the principal basis of Roman jurisprudence.

Twenhofel (twen.hō'fel), William Henry. b. at Covington, Ky., April 16, 1875—. American geologist. He was graduated from Yale (B.A., 1908; M.A., 1910; Ph.D., 1912), was state geologist of Kansas (1915-16), and was associate professor (1916-21), professor (1921-45), and head of the department (1940-45) of geology at the University of Wisconsin.

Twentieth Amendment. See "Lame Duck" Amendment.

Twentieth Century Harlequinade. Volume of poems by Edith Sitwell, published in 1916.

Twenty-first Amendment. Amendment to the U.S. Constitution which provided for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment (which authorized national prohibition). It was given by Congress to the states in 1933, and was ratified and proclaimed in the same year.

Twenty-four Parganas (pur'gā.naz). District in West Bengal, Union of India, in the immediate vicinity of Calcutta. In this area are many of the jute mills of India. The chief crop is rice. Capital, Alipore; area, 3,696 sq. mi. (1941); pop. 3,336,356 (1941).

Twenty-Second Amendment. Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, approved by Congress March 26, 1947, and ratified Feb. 20, 1951, limiting to two full terms (and possibly a minor fraction of another) the tenure of office of a president of the U.S. The amendment, passed by the 80th Congress (Republican-controlled) is sometimes called the anti-Roosevelt amendment, since it was a direct outcome of the success of Franklin D. Roosevelt in seeking and obtaining a third and then a fourth term as president in the face of a traditional limitation to two terms.

Twenty Years After. See Vingt Ans Après.

Twice-Told Tales. Collection of stories by Nathaniel Hawthorne, published in 1837. An enlarged edition under the same title was published in 1842. Among the stories are Endicott and the Red Cross, The Minister's Black Veil, The Grey Champion, Mr. Higginbotham's Catastrophe, Lady Eleanor's Mantle, Dr. Heidegger's Experiments, and The Maypole of Merrymount.

Twickenham (twik'en'am). Municipal borough in SE England, in Middlesex, situated on the river Thames ab. 12 mi. SW of Waterloo Station, London. It has a river frontage of ab. 9 mi. on the Thames. Its manor belongs to the crown. Twickenham contains many villas, and was once the residence of Alexander Pope, 105,645 (1951).

Twiggs (twigz), David Emanuel. b. in Richmond County, Ga., 1790; d. at Atlanta, Ga., July 15, 1862. American general. He served in the War of 1812 and in the Mexican War, becoming a brigadier and division commander under Winfield Scott in 1847. As commander of the Department of Texas, he surrendered his army and stores to the Confederate general McCulloch in February, 1861. He was thereupon dismissed from the U.S. service, and was appointed a Confederate major general. He commanded for a time in Louisiana.

Twilight of the Gods. English title of Götterdämmerung.

Twillingate (twil'ing.gāt). Chief town in NE Newfoundland, Canada, situated on an island in Notre Dame Bay off the N coast of Newfoundland. Pop. of district, 3,452 (1951).

Twin Falls. City in S Idaho, county seat of Twin Falls County, on the Snake River a few miles E of Shoshone Falls. It was incorporated in 1900. Pop. 17,600 (1950).

Twining, Nathan. b. at Monroe, Wis., Oct. 11, 1897—. American air officer, nominated in May, 1953, to succeed General Hoyt S. Vandenberg as chief of staff of the U.S. Air Force. A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, Twining served during his early career as an infantry officer, but later transferred to the Army Air Corps (later to become the Army Air Force, predecessor of the present U.S. Air Force). During World War II he held various commands in the Pacific and in Italy.

Twin Rivals, The. Play by Farquhar, produced in 1702.

Twins, the. Two peaks of the Rocky Mountains, in SW Alberta, Canada, which are about the same height and in close proximity. They are situated in the S part of Jasper National Park near the border of British Columbia. Elevation, 12,085 and 11,675 ft.

Twiss (twis), Sir Travers. b. at Marylebone, London, March 19, 1809; d. at Fulham, London, Jan. 14, 1897. English jurist, who served as professor of international law (1852-55) at Kings College, London, and of civil law (1855-70) at Oxford. He helped draft the constitution of the Congo Free State.

Twist (twist), Oliver. See Oliver Twist.

Twitchee (twich'ēr), Jemmy. Treacherous highwayman in John Gay's Beggar's Opera. As a nickname the term was applied to John Montagu, 4th Earl of Sandwich, by the newspapers in the latter part of the 18th century on account of notable irregularities in his conduct.

Two Admirals, The. Novel by James Fenimore Cooper, published in 1842.

Two Brothers. See Tale of the Two Brothers.

Two Drovers, The. Tale by Sir Walter Scott, one of the Chronicles of the Canongate, published in 1827.

Two Foscaris (fos'ka.rē), The. Tragedy by Lord Byron.

Two Gentlemen of Verona (vrē'rō'na), The. Comedy (c1594) by Shakespeare, printed in 1623. Parts of the story are identical with that of the shepherdess Filisena in Montemayor's Diana, translated in manuscript by Young, and with Bantiello's Apollonius and Sylla.

Two Harbors. City in NE Minnesota, county seat of Lake County, on Lake Superior; shipping point for iron ore, 4,400 (1950).

Two Noble Kinsmen, The. Play produced in 1625 and published in 1634 as by Fletcher and Shakespeare. It is not now supposed that Shakespeare had any hand in it, but Massinger and Rowley are thought to have worked with Fletcher. The story is that of Palamon and Arcite.

Two People. Novel by A. A. Milne, published in 1931.

Two Rivers. City in E Wisconsin, in Manitowish County, at the confluence of the Mishicot and Neshoto rivers; trading center for fish; manufactures of chairs and other wood products, and aluminum goods. 10,243 (1950).

Twoort (twōrt), Frederick William. b. at Camberley, Surrey, England, Oct. 22, 1877—. English bacteriologist, first to describe (1915) bacteriophage. He was a professor (1931 et seq.) at the University of London.

Two Sicilies (sai'si'li:z), Kingdom of the. United kingdom of Sicily and S Italy (the latter being known also as the Kingdom of Naples). The kingdom comprised (besides the island of Sicily) Abruzzi e Molise, Apulia, Campania, Basilicata, and Calabria. It fell (1861) to Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia, who incorporated it into a united Italy.

Two Truths, the. See under Maat.

Two Virtues, The. Four-act comedy (1913) by Alfred Sutro.

Two Years Ago. Novel by Charles Kingsley, published in 1857.

Two Years Before the Mast. Narrative of sea adventure, by Richard Henry Dana, Jr., published in 1840.

Tyana (ti'ā.nā). In ancient geography, a city in Cappadocia, Asia Minor. Its ruins are ab. 75 mi. NW of the modern Adana. It was the birthplace of Apollonius of Tyana.

Tyananeus (ti.ā.nē'us), Apollonius. See Apollonius of Tyana.

Tyan Shan (tyān' shān'). Russian name of the Tien Shan.

Tybalt (tib'alt). Nephew of Lady Capulet in Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.

Tybris (ti'bris). An ancient name of the Tiber.

Tyburn (ti'bern). In old London, a tributary of the Thames which rose in the clay beds at the foot of Hampstead Heath. It passed through what is now Regent's Park, and thence through Green Park, Buckingham Palace gardens, and St. James's Park to the Thames. There was a place of execution on the Tyburn near what is now the Marble Arch, Hyde Park.

Tyburn Road. Former name of Oxford Street.

Tyche (ti'kē). In Greek mythology, the goddess of fortune. She was believed to assure prosperity, wealth, and good luck. She became identified with the Roman Fortuna and, like her, is depicted with the cornucopia of plenty and the wheel of fortune.

Tydeus (ti'dūs, tid'ūs). In Greek legend, one of the Seven Against Thebes. He was killed during his attack on one of the gates of Thebes. He was the father of Diomedes.

Tydings (ti'dingz), Millard Evelyn. b. at Havre de Grace, Md., April 6, 1890—. American politician. He was elected in 1926 to the U.S. Senate, where he served from 1927 to 1951. Early in the first administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Senator Tydings, though a Democrat, became known as an opponent of the "New Deal" policies. During the Truman administration, Tydings presided at hearings of a Senate subcommittee investigating allegations of Communist infiltration into the State Department.

Tydings-McDuffie Act (ti'dingz.mak.duf'i). Act of the U.S. Congress approved on March 24, 1934, which modified the earlier Hawes-Cutting Act rejected by the Philippine legislature and provided for full Philippine independence after a ten-year transitional period. It was ratified by the Philippine legislature on May 1, 1934. Complete independence was granted in 1946.

Tye (ti), Christopher. b. c1500; d. before March 15, c1573. English composer and organist, noted for The Actes of the Apostles, translated into English Metre . . . to synge and also to play upon the Lute . . . (1553). He composed much church music.

Tyldesley (tildz'li). Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 10 mi. NW of Manchester, ab. 196 mi. NW of London by rail. The town has a coal-mining industry. 18,096 (1951).

Tyler (ti'ler). City in E Texas, county seat of Smith County, ab. 115 mi. SE of Fort Worth; center for the raising and shipping of rose bushes. It was established in the 1840's and named for President John Tyler (1790-1862). Pop. 38,968 (1950).

Tyler, Bennet. b. at Middlebury, Conn., July 10, 1783; d. May 14, 1858. American theologian and educator. Graduated (1804) from Yale, he was ordained in 1808, serving in a pastorate at South Britain, Conn., until 1822, when he became president of Dartmouth College, where he remained until 1828. An orthodox Calvinist, he became the leader of the "Old School" Calvinists in the controversy (1828 et seq.) with the "New Divinity" wing, and served (1834-57) as president and professor of Christian theology at the Theological Institute of Connecticut (later the Hartford Theological Seminary), of which he was a founder.

Tyler, John. b. in York County, Va., Feb. 28, 1747; d. Jan. 6, 1813. American jurist and governor; father of President John Tyler (1790-1862). He attended the College of William and Mary, studied law privately, began his practice in Charles City County, and identified himself with the patriot cause, being named (1774) to the committee of safety of Charles City County. He became (1776) one of the first judges of the Virginia high court of admiralty, and served (1789-1808) as a judge of the general court of Virginia, being among the first to assert the power of judicial review. He was governor (1808-11) of Virginia, thereafter serving as judge of the U.S. court, district of Virginia.

Tyler, John. b. at Greenway, Charles City County, Va., March 29, 1790; d. at Richmond, Va., Jan. 18, 1862. American statesman, tenth President of the United States; son of John Tyler (1747-1813). Having read law in his father's office, he was admitted to the bar in 1809, and two years later became a member of the Virginia legislature, where he served through 1816, following which he represented his district in the House of Representatives at Washington (1817-21). He sat in the state legislature again (1823-25), during which time he was elected governor of Virginia, serving from 1825 to 1827, and thereafter he represented his state in the U.S. Senate (1827-36). Undeviating insistence on states' rights was the cardinal principle of Tyler's politics, but in the shifting tides of an era of expansion, change, and political realignments, he found it difficult at times to chart his course. A Democrat, as it might be said, by birth, he had no liking for Andrew Jackson, whose ascendancy in that party coincided with the earlier years of Tyler's rise to prominence in Virginia and in the nation, but his principles aligned him with Jackson in the fight against the Bank of the United States, as they later caused him to condemn Jackson's "Force Bill" directed against South Carolina's resistance to the tariff acts of 1828 and 1832; nevertheless, though he abhorred the tariffs, he did not approve of John C. Calhoun's policy of nullification. He deplored slavery, and expressed the hope that it would pass away, but insisted that, while it remained legal, property in slaves must have the same legal protection as property of any other kind. He opposed the Missouri Compromise on the ground that Congress lacked authority to legislate concerning slavery in the territories. Tyler supported Jackson for the presidency in 1828 and 1832 only as the lesser of possible evils. Supporting Jackson's opposition to a renewal of the Bank of the United States' charter, he voted nevertheless in the Senate for a resolution rebuking the president for removing federal funds from that depository; and when, in 1836, the Virginia legislature instructed him to support a resolution expunging that resolution of rebuke from the records, he resigned from the Senate rather than comply. As the Whig Party took form, Tyler drifted into it, accepting Whig nominations to the vice-presidency in 1836 and in 1840. In the "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" campaign of the latter year, the Whigs succeeded in electing William Henry Harrison as president and John Tyler as vice-president, and by Harrison's death soon after his inauguration in 1841 Tyler became the first President of the United States by vice-presidential succession. His troubled administration achieved some notable things: the annexation of Texas, the Webster-Ashburton Treaty fixing the boundary between the U.S. and British America in the northeast and the Great Lakes area; a treaty with China which greatly stimulated American trade with the Orient; and a reorganization of the navy. But to dominate the Whig Party was somewhat more difficult; Calhoun cooperated with the president for a while, but Henry Clay was determined that he, not Tyler, should be the dominant force in the party. Clay, Calhoun, and Webster were equally nationalists, favoring federal promotion of internal improvements, commerce, and industry, a program repugnant to Tyler's rigid states'-rights creed. When Tyler for the second time vetoed a bill to permit a national bank to open branches in the states without previous consent of those political units, all members of his cabinet excepting Secretary of State Daniel Webster resigned, in September, 1841. It was well said that he was left a president without a party. In 1844 one wing of the Democrats nominated Tyler as a presidential candidate, but he prudently withdrew from the race, and retired to private life until 1861, when he presided over a conference at Washington which sought to avert the impending Civil War. When this effort failed, he favored the secession of Virginia from the Union, accepted a seat in the provisional Confederate Congress, and in January, 1862, was elected to the "permanent" congress of the secessionist government, only to die before he could take his seat. Tyler had many attributes of true statesmanship, and although his allegiance was in some matters to concepts and causes which history has stamped as too conservative or even reactionary, it is generally conceded that he ranks high among American public men in the matter of firm adherence to honest principles sincerely held.

Tyler, John Mason. b. at Amherst, Mass., May 18, 1851; d. April 12, 1929. American biologist, professor of biology (1882-1917) at Amherst College. Author of Whence and Whither of Man (1897), Growth and Education (1907), Man in the Light of Evolution (1908), New Stone Age (1921), and Coming of Man (1923).

Tyler, Lyon Gardiner. b. in Charles City County, Va., in August, 1853; d. Feb. 12, 1935. American historian; son of President John Tyler (1790-1862). He was a teacher (1883-88) at the Richmond Mechanics Night School, which he helped organize, and president (1888-1919) of the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg, Va. Author of The Letters and Times of the Tylers (1884), Parties and Patronage in the United States (1911), Cradle of the Republic (1900), England in America (1934), and Williamsburg, the Old Colonial Capital (1907); edited Narratives of Early Virginia 1606-25 (1907), Men of Mark in Virginia (5 vols.), and the Biographical Dictionary of Virginia (5 vols., 1915).

Tyler, Moses Coit. b. at Griswold, Conn., Aug. 2, 1835; d. at Ithaca, N.Y., Dec. 28, 1900. American scholar, professor of English at the University of Michigan (1867-81), and of American history at Cornell from 1881 until his death. Among his works are A History of American Literature during the Colonial Time, 1607-1765 (2 vols., 1878), A Manual of English Literature (1879), Life of Patrick Henry (1887), and The Literary History of the American Revolution 1763-1783 (2 vols., 1897).

Tyler, Robert. b. in Charles City County, Va., Sept. 9, 1816; d. Dec. 3, 1877. American politician and editor; son of President John Tyler (1790-1862). Graduated (1835) from the College of William and Mary, he studied law privately, began his practice at Williamsburg, Va., served (1841-44) as private secretary to his father, then president, and in 1844 settled at Philadelphia, where he became (1847) solicitor to the sheriff and subsequently prothonotary to the Pennsylvania supreme court. At the outbreak of the Civil War, he was subjected to mob attack and compelled to flee to Richmond, Va., where he became register of the Confederate treasury. He served (1867 et seq.) as editor of the Montgomery (Ala.) Mail and Advertiser, taking a leading role in the overthrow of "carpetbag" rule in the state.

Tyler, Royall. b. at Boston, July 18, 1757; d. at Brattleboro, Vt., Aug. 26, 1826. American jurist and playwright. Graduated (B.A., 1776) from Yale, he served for a time in the Revolutionary War, was admitted (1780) to the bar, and in 1787, as a member of the staff under General Benjamin Lincoln, helped put down Shay's Rebellion. His play The Contrast (produced at New York, April 16, 1787; published in 1790) was the first comedy and the second professionally produced play by a native Amercan. He also wrote a novel, The Algerine Captive (1797). He served as an assistant judge (1801-07), was chief justice (1807-13) of the supreme court of Vermont, and was professor of jurisprudence (1811-14) at the University of Vermont, of which he also was a trustee (1802-13).

Tyler, Wat (or Walter). [Also: Tegheler, Helier.] Killed at Smithfield, London, June 15, 1381. Leader of a revolt of peasants in England in 1381. He is said to have killed a tax gatherer who insulted his daughter, and with Jack Straw to have led the men of Kent and Essex to London. While treating with Richard II at Smithfield, he was killed by Lord Mayor Walworth.

Tyler (tī'lor), Sir Edward Burnett. b. at Camberwell, London, Oct. 2, 1832; d. at Wellington, Somersetshire, England, Jan. 2, 1917. English anthropologist. He was educated at the Friends' School, Grove House, Tottenham, undertook with Henry Christy a scientific journey through Mexico in 1856, was appointed keeper of the Oxford University Museum in 1883, and was pr. (1883) and professor (1896) of anthropology, and was president of the Anthropological Institute (1891-92). His works include Anahuac or Mexico and the Mexicans (1861), Researches into the History of Mankind (1865), Primitive Culture (1871), and Anthropology (1881). He was knighted in 1912.

Tyndale or Tindal or Tindale (tin'dal), William. b. in Gloucestershire, England, c1484; executed at Vilvorde, near Brussels, Belgium, Oct. 6, 1536. English reformer, and translator of the Bible. He studied at Oxford and Cambridge, was ordained priest c1521, and was for a time chaplain and domestic tutor in the family of Sir John Walsh, Little Sodbury, Gloucestershire. Having exposed himself to persecution on account of his professions of sympathy with the new learning, he left England for the Continent in 1524, and after a visit to Luther at Wittenberg settled at Cologne, whence, however, he was presently expelled. He took refuge at Worms, where he published his octavo edition of the New Testament in 1525. His translation of the Pentateuch appeared at Marburg in 1530. His movements between 1526 and 1530 are uncertain; after 1530 he lived chiefly at Antwerp. He was arrested (May 24, 1535) at the insistence of Henry VIII, was imprisoned in the castle of Vilvorde, near Brussels, and after a protracted trial for heresy was strangled (Oct. 6, 1536), his body being burned at the stake. Among his other works are Parable of the Wicked Mammon (1528), Obedience of a Christian Man (1528), and Practice of Prelates (1530).

Tyndall (tin'dal), John. b. at Leighlin Bridge, Ireland, Aug. 2, 1820; d. at Haslemere, Surrey, England, Dec. 4, 1893. British physicist. Having been educated partly at home, partly at a school near his native town of Leighlin Bridge, he entered the employment of a firm of engineers in 1844. He was teacher at Queenwood College, in Hampshire (1847-48), studied at the University of Marburg (1848-50), was elected a fellow of the Royal Society in 1852, became professor of natural philosophy at the Royal Institution of London in 1853, explored with Huxley the glaciers of Switzerland in 1856 (thus beginning a study to which he afterward devoted much attention), climbed the Weisshorn in 1861, scaled the Matterhorn in 1868, visited Algeria in 1870, and lectured in the U.S. in 1872. He was especially noted for his investigations in electricity and magnetism, radiant heat, light, acoustics, and glaciers. He was a zealous advocate of the doctrine of materialism, which he upheld in an address delivered while presiding over a meeting of the British Association at Belfast in 1874. His works are Faraday as a Discoverer (1868), Researches on Diamagnetism and Magneto-Crystalline Action (1870), Notes of a Course of Nine Lectures on Light Delivered at the Royal Institution, 1869 (1870), Notes of a Course of Seven Lectures on Electrical Phenomena Delivered at the Royal Institution, 1870 (1870), Essays on the Imagination in Science (1870), Hours of Exercise in the Alps (1871), Fragments of Science for Unscientific People (1871), Contributions to Molecular Physics in the Domain of Radiant Heat: a Series of Memoirs (1872), The Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers (1872), Six Lectures on Light, Delivered in America, 1872-73 (1873), Address Delivered before the British Association Assembled at Belfast: with Additions (1874), On the Transmission of Sound by the Atmosphere (1874), Lessons in Electricity at the Royal Institution, 1875-76 (1876), Fermentation (1877), Essays on the Floating Matter of the Air in Relation to Purefaction and Infection (1881), "Free Molecules and Radiant Heat" (in Philosophical Transactions, 1882), Fragments of Science and New Fragments (1892), and others.

Tyndall, Mount. Mountain in the Sierra Nevada, California. Elevation, ab. 14,025 ft.

Tyndareus (tin'dar'ius). In Greek legend, the husband of Leda, and the father of Helen, Castor and Pollux, Clytemnestra, and others. His legend is that he was punished with light-minded, unchaste daughters because he once forgot a sacrifice to Aphrodite.

Tynm (tī'f). River in NE England. It is formed by the union of its N and S branches, ab. 1 mi. NW of Hexham, in Northumberland. The river Tyn flows E past Newcastle, forms part of the Durham-Northumberland boundary, and empties into the North Sea at Tynemouth. Length, ab. 30 mi.; navigable for large vessels to Newcastle.

"Tyneman" (tīn'man). See Douglas, Archibald.

Tynemouth (tīn'muth, tīn-). [Called North Shields.] County borough, seaport, and seaside resort in NE England, in Northumberland, situated at the mouth of the river Tyne, ab. 8 mi. NE of Newcastle, ab. 277 mi. N of London by rail. It comprises the wards of Tynemouth, North Shields (the port), and Percy. It is a watering place and seaport, and has shipbuilding, fisheries, and manufactures of ropes and sails. 66,544 (1951).

Tyner (tī'nēr), James Noble. b. at Brookville, Ind., Jan. 17, 1826; d. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 5, 1904. American politician. He was a U.S. senator from Indiana (1869-75), postmaster general (1875-77), first assistant postmaster general (1877-82), and assistant attorney general (1889-93, 1897-1903).

Tynwald (tīn'wôld). Parliament or legislature of the Isle of Man, consisting of the governor and legislative council, constituting the upper house, and the House of Keys, or lower house. It is technically independent of the British Parliament, its acts requiring only the assent of the sovereign in council.

Tynyanov (tīn'yā'nov), Yury Nikolayevich. b. at Rezhitsa, Vitebsk, Russia, Oct. 18, 1894; d. at Moscow, Dec. 20, 1943. Russian novelist, biographer, and literary scholar. His fictional life of Gribovodo, the Russian playwright, was published in English under the title Death and Diplomacy in Persia (1938).

Tyosen (chō'sen). Japanese name of Korea.

Tysee (tī'sē). Fictional narrative by Herman Melville, published in 1846.

Typhon (tī'fōn). [Also, Typhoeus (tī'fē'ūs).] In Greek mythology, as Typhoeus, the personification of violent windstorms. As Typhon, a huge monster and father of monsters (e.g., the Chimera, the Nemean lion, the Sphinx, and others). He battled with Zeus, was overcome, and was buried by Zeus under Mount Etna (or in Tartarus).

Typhon. Greek name of Set.

Tyr (tīr). [Also: Tiu, Tiw.] In Old Norse mythology, the god of war and victory; son of Odin. He is the same as the Teutonic Tiu or Tiw. He is represented with one hand, the other having been bitten off by the wolf Fenris, in whose mouth he had placed it as a pledge. Tuesday is named for him.

Tyr (tīr). A French name of Tyre.

Tyrranic Love, or the Royal Martyr. Tragedy by Dryden, produced in 1668 or 1669, printed in 1670.

Tyrrannus (tī'rā'nus), Maximus. See Maximus Tyrranus.

Tyras (tī'rās). An ancient name of the Dniester; also of Belgorod-Dnestrovski.

Tyre (tīr). [Arabic, Es Sur; French, Sour; Tyr; Latin, Tyrus; Hebrew, Zor; called "Queen of the Sea." Most important and, next to Sidon, the oldest city of Phoenicia; now a town in Lebanon. It consisted of a town on the mainland, which was the oldest part, and two rocky islands directly opposite. These islands originally contained only the temple of Melkarth and warehouses. In the 13th century a.c. they were more settled, and they were united by Hiram, the contemporary of Solomon, by an embankment. In the 11th century b.c. Tyre began, under its first king, father of Hiram, to rival its mother city Sidon, and soon supplanted it as queen of the Phoenician cities. Of its magnificence and luxury the prophet Ezekiel gives a detailed description. It established colonies in Sicily, Sardinia, Spain, Africa (Carthage), and sent out mercantile fleets as far as India and Brittany. Under Hiram Tyre reached the height of its prosperity and splendor. It then came into close friendly relations with Israel. Later, Ahab, king of Israel, married Jezebel, daughter of Ethbaal, whose great-granddaughter Elissa (Dido) is said to have founded Carthage. Tyre was often the aim of attacks by Eastern rulers. It became tributary to Assyria under Tiglath-pileser III (745-727 B.C.). Shalmaneser IV (727-722) besieged it for five years, apparently without success. Under Nebuchadnezzar it stood a siege of 13 years (585-572). Later it came under Persian supremacy. Alexander the Great reduced the city after a siege of nine months, though he did not completely destroy it. From this blow Tyre never fully recovered, but continued to have a degree of prosperity through its manufactures of metalwork, fine textiles, and purple dye. In the Roman period Tyre was still a prosperous city, and it retained some importance down to the Middle Ages. During the Crusades it often changed hands between the Christians and the Mohammedans, and was repeatedly destroyed.

Tyre and Montserrat (môn.fē.rá', mont.fē.rat'), Marquis of. See Conrad.

Tyrell (tir'el), Sir James. See Tyrrrell, Sir James.

Tyrian Cynosure (tir'ian sín.ô.shô'r). The constellation Ursa Minor, anciently called the Cynosure, which served as a guide to the Tyrians in their long voyages.

Tyrnau (tir'nou). German name of Trnava.

Tyrol (tir'ol, -ol, tir'ôl', tir'ôl'). See also Tirol.

Tyrol. [German, Tirol; Italian, Tirol.] Region in S central Europe, comprising the Austrian province of Tirol and the Italian compartimento (region) of Trentino-Alto Adige.

History. The Tyrol was part of the Roman provinces of Rhaetia and Noricum; later it belonged to the duchy of Bavaria. It passed to the Hapsburgs in 1363. It was granted by Napoleon to Bavaria in 1805. The Tyrol revolted against the French and Bavarian rule in 1809 and was returned to Austria in 1814. In 1918 South Tyrol, i.e., the region S of the main Alpine range and the Brenner Pass, was ceded to Italy and now forms the Italian compartimento (region) of Trentino-Alto Adige. Since about one half of the population in the ceded region is ethnically German, this created discontent in the area. Hitler and Mussolini attempted to solve the South Tyrol problem by way of population transfer, but large parts of the evacuated population returned to South Tyrol after the conclusion of World War II. The cession of South Tyrol had the effect of creating a territorial exclave in East Tyrol (Ost-Tirol), around Lienz, adjacent to Carinthia. It also changed the character of Tyrol province from a country lying astride the Brenner Pass to a country entirely confined to the northern slope of the main Alpine range.

Tyrene (ti.rôn'). [Irish, Tir Eoghain.] Inland county of Northern Ireland, in Ulster province. It is bounded on the N by County Londonderry, on the east by Lough Neagh, on the SE by County Armagh, on the S by County Monaghan (Irish Republic) and County Fermanagh (Northern Ireland), and on the W by County Donegal (Irish Republic). The surface consists of lowlands in the E, near Lough Neagh, and in the C part in the valley of the river Mourne. Elsewhere the surface is hilly, rising to the Sperrin Mountains along the N boundary. Coal, marble, and sandstone are worked. Manufactures consist of linens, woollens, and earthenware. Flax is widely grown. Omagh is the county seat; area, ab. 1,218 sq. mi.; pop. 120,854 (1947).

Tyrene (ti.rôn'). Borough in C Pennsylvania, in Blair County, on the Juniata River; manufactures of paper and textiles. It was settled in 1850. Pop. 8,214 (1950).

Tyrene, 2nd Earl of. A title of O'Neill, Hugh.

Tyrrrell (tir'el), George. b. at Dublin, Feb. 6, 1861; d. at Storrington, Sussex, England, July 15, 1909. Irish theologian. Influenced by the writings of Newman, he entered the Roman Catholic Church in 1879, and in 1880 joined the Society of Jesus. His modernist views, however, especially as shown in his Letter to a Professor of Anthropology (afterward republished as A Much Abused Letter), brought him into collision with the order, and led to his expulsion in 1906. A little later his criticism of the Pope's encyclical Pascendi Gregis caused him to be virtually excommunicated.

Tyrrrell or Tyrell, Sir James. Executed at Tower Hill, London, May 6, 1502. English nobleman, remembered as the confessed murderer of Edward V and his brother Richard, Duke of York.

Tyrrrell, William George. [Title, 1st Baron Tyrrrell of Avon.] b. 1886; d. at London, March 14, 1947. English diplomat, ambassador (1928-34) to France.

Tyrrhenians (tir'ē-ni.anz). Name given by the Greeks to the ancient inhabitants of Etruria.

Tyrrhenian Sea (tir'ē-ni.an). [Latin, Inferum Mare, Mare Tyrrhenum (tir'ē-nūm).] That part of the Mediterranean Sea which lies W of Italy and is partly enclosed by the islands of Corsica, Sardinia, and Sicily.

Tyrtæus (tēr.tē.us). fl. in the middle of the 7th century B.C. Greek elegiac poet of Sparta, said to have been a native of Attica. According to tradition, the Spartans who were at war with the Messenians were commanded by the oracle to take a leader from among the Athenians. The latter, not wishing to aid the Spartans, sent Tyrtæus, a lame schoolmaster of no reputation; but by his songs he so inspired his followers that they obtained the victory. Fragments of his poems are extant.

Tyrus (tir.us). Latin name of Tyre.

Tyrwhitt (tir'it), Sir Reginald Yorke. b. May 10, 1870; d. at London, May 30, 1951. British naval officer.

Tyrwhitt, Thomas. b. at London, March 29, 1730; d. there, Aug. 15, 1786. English literary critic. He studied at Oxford, and was elected a fellow of Merton in 1755, but in 1762 abandoned his academic career in order to become clerk of the House of Commons. He resigned his clerkship in 1768, and devoted himself to literature. He wrote Observations on Some Passages of Shakespeare (1766), and prepared excellent editions of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales (1775-78) and Aristotle's Poetics (1794). He is chiefly known for his work in connection with the "Rowley Poems," which he demonstrated to be a forgery by Chatterton.

Tyrwhitt-Wilson (tir'it.wil'son), Gerald Hugh. [Title, 14th Baron Berners; original name, Gerald Hugh Tyrwhitt.] b. at Arley Park, Shropshire, England, Sept. 18, 1883; d. at London, April 19, 1950. English composer and painter. Among his compositions are Three Little Funeral Marches for piano; the orchestral work Fantasia Espagnole (1919); a comic operatic version of Prosper Mérimée's Le Carrosse du Saint-Sacrement (1923); the ballets The Triumph of Neptune (1926), Luna Park (1930), and The Wedding Bouquet (1936), with words by Gertrude Stein.

Tyson (ti'son), George Emory. b. at Red Bank, N.J., Dec. 15, 1829; d. Oct. 18, 1906. American explorer. After having made several arctic voyages, as a whaler, he became assistant navigator on the Polaris, the vessel carrying the arctic expedition (1871 et seq.) led by the explorer Charles Francis Hall; after Hall's death (November, 1871) in North Greenland, he became second in command; on Oct. 15, 1872, he and 19 others were left adrift on an ice floe after accidentally breaking away from the Polaris in the darkness, and until April 20, 1873, when the sealer Tyress picked up the party off Labrador, the entire group, without loss of a single life, drifted through the rough arctic waters.

Tyson, James. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 26, 1841; d. Feb. 21, 1919. American physician. He served in the medical forces of the Union army, and beginning in 1868 held various faculty positions at the University of Pennsylvania, where he was dean (1888-92) of the medical faculty. He was a founder of the Association of American Physicians and served (1907) as its president. Author of The Cell Doctrine, Its History and Present State (1870) and The Practice of Medicine (1896).

Tyson and Bros. v. Banton, 273 U.S. 418 (1927) (ban'ton). U.S. Supreme Court decision declaring unconstitutional a New York state law which regulated resale ticket prices. Where the state statute maintained that the matter was affected with a public interest, the court held that it could not be classified as such on the basis of the decision in Wolff Packing Co. v. Court of Industrial Rela- tions (1923), and invalidated the law on the ground that it violated freedom of contract.

Tytler (tit'ler), Alexander Fraser. [Title, Lord Woodhouselee.] b. at Edinburgh, Oct. 15, 1747; d. there, Jan. 5, 1813. Scottish historical and general writer; son of William Tytler. Among his works are Elements of General History (1801; first published as Outlines 1782), Lives of Lord Kames (1807) and of Petrarch (1810), and Essay on the Principles of Translation (1791).

Tytler, Patrick Fraser. b. at Edinburgh, Aug. 30, 1791; d. at Great Malvern, England, Dec. 24, 1849. Scottish historian; son of Alexander Fraser Tytler. His chief work is a History of Scotland (9 vols., 1828-43). Among his other works are Lives of Scottish Worthies (1831-33) and Progress of Discovery on the Northern Coasts of America (1832).

Tytler, William. b. at Edinburgh, Oct. 12, 1711; d. there, Sept. 12, 1792. Scottish historical writer. His chief work is An Inquiry, Historical and Critical, into the Evidence against Mary Queen of Scots (1759).

Tyumen (tyō'men'). [Also, Tiumen.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, in W Siberia, situated on the Tura River and on the Trans-Siberian Railway, ab. 190 mi. E of Sverdlovsk: manufactures of river boats, leather, lumber, plywood, chemicals, and flour. 75,537 (1939).

Tzana (tsā'nā), Lake. See Tana, Lake.

Tzara (tsā'rā), Tristan. b. in Rumania, 1896—. Poet, essayist, and editor at Paris. Author of 25 poèmes (1925), Mouchoir de nuages (1926), De nos oiseaux (1929), L'Antilète (1933), and others. He was less influential as a poet than as promoter and organizer of the dadaist movement in Europe in the early 1920's. At the famous matinée, Jan. 23, 1920, when dadaism was revealed to the public, he enraged a well-bred audience by reading aloud from a newspaper while an electric bell kept ringing loudly enough to drown out his words.

Tzekung (du'kung'). City in S central China, in the province of Szechwan, incorporating the former cities of Tzchutung and Kungtsing; the principal center of salt production in the interior of China, with numerous processing plants. It also has woodworking and paper manufactures. Area of municipality, 47 sq. mi.; pop. 291,791 (1945).

Tzeliutsing (du'lyō'jing'). See under Tzekung.

Tzia (dzā). See Keos.

Tzinteuil (tsēn.tā'ō.tl). See Cintéotl.

Tzolkin (tsō'kin). Maya sacred calendar of 260 days, constructed in the same manner as the Aztec Tonalamatl.

Tzu Hsi (tsō'shē'). [Also: Tsu Hsi, Tse Hsi.] b. Nov. 17, 1834; d. at Peking, Nov. 15, 1908. Empress dowager of China. She was the favorite of the Emperor Hsien Feng, and the sister of the mother of Kuang Hsu, Emperor of China (1875-1908). She was regent of China during the minority of the emperor T'ung Chih, her son, from Hsien Feng's death (1861) to T'ung Chih's death in 1875, when she aided her nephew to the throne. In 1898, when he went counter to her wishes in the matter of political reforms, she forced him to quit and again became regent. She encouraged the Boxer Rebellion (1899-1900) as a means of eliminating new ideas by driving the foreigners out, but fled when the rebellion failed. She returned to Peking in 1902 but thereafter, under the guidance of more liberal advisers, permitted certain reforms. However, the Manchus retained control of the government and by the time of her death the revolution that occurred three years later was inevitable.

Tzumé (tsō'mā). See Sumé.

U

U-9. See under Aboukir.

Ualan (wā'lan'). See Kusaie.

Uasin Gishu (ō.āsēn gē'shō). [Also: Huasin Gishu, Guas Ngishu.] Former subgroup of the Masai, a Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of S Kenya and N Tanganyika, in E Africa.

Uasin Gishu Plateau. See under Eldoret.

Uaupés (wou.pās'). [Also: Uaupezi; in Colombia, Vaupés.] River of SE Colombia and NW Brazil flowing E to join the Rio Negro. It is the largest affluent of the Rio Negro. Length, ab. 700 mi.

UAW. See United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America.

Uaxactún (wā.shāk.tōn'). Maya city, abandoned before the Spanish conquest, located in N central Petén, Guatemala. It is noteworthy for having been one of the longest continuously occupied of Maya centers (from at least the early 4th to the late 9th century). It was from the study of the arrangement of pyramids, temples, and monuments here that archaeologists discovered that many Maya cities were so aligned that certain of the edifices lay respectively on a line of sight for the vernal and autumnal equinoxes and for the summer and winter solstices.

Ubá (ō.bā'). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 14,251 (1950).

Übach-Palenberg (ü'bāch.pā'ten.berk). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated near the Dutch border, ab. 18 mi. N of Aachen: machine industry; agricultural trade. 19,203 (1950).

Ubaldi (ō.bāl'dē), Baldo degli. See Baldo degli Ubaldi.

Ubaldo Allucingoli (ō.bāl'dō āllō.chēng'gō.lē). Original name of Pope Lucius III.

Ubangi (ō.bāng'gē, ū.bāng'gī). [Also: Mobangi, Oubangui; sometimes also, in its upper course, Makua.] River in C Africa, the chief right-hand tributary of the Congo River. It forms the boundary between the Belgian Congo and French Equatorial Africa, and joins the Congo a little S of the equator, near Lake Tumba. The chief headstream, sometimes considered its upper course, is the Uele. Length, ab. 1,450 mi.

Ubangi-Shari (ō.bāng'gē.shā'rē, ū.bāng'gī-). [French, Oubangui-Chari.] One of the four territories making up French Equatorial Africa. It is bounded on the N by Chad territory, on the E by the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, on the S by the Belgian Congo (from which it is separated by the Ubangi River) and the Middle Congo territory, and on the W by Cameroun. The climate is hot and dry; except in the forested regions near the river, vegetation is scanty, and little has been achieved in way of development. Capital, Bangui; area, 238,767 sq. mi.; pop. 1,062,300 (1,060,700 natives and 1,600 Europeans; 1946).

Ubangi-Shari-Chad Colony (ō.bāng'gē.shā'rē.chād', ū.bāng'gī-). [Also: Ubangi-Shari-Chad; French, Oubangui-Chari-Tchad.] Former colony of French Equatorial Africa, formed in 1910. In 1920 it was divided into the two present territories of Ubangi-Shari and Chad.

Ubara-tutu (ō.bā.rā.tō'tō). See under Otiartes.

Ube (ō.bā). City in SW Honshu, Japan, a port on the Inland Sea: coal-mining center; chemical, cotton-textile, and machinery industries. It was bombed in World War II. 128,569 (1950).

Übeda (ō.bā.thā). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, ab. 22 mi. NE of Jaén: markets for cattle, sheep, and horses; trade in olive oil. There are Moorish town walls. The town was reconquered from the Moors by Alfonso VIII of Castile in 1212. Pop. 31,093 (1940).

Uberaba (ō.be.rā'ba). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais: shipping point for cattle; meat-packing, sugar-refining, and textile industries. 43,915 (1950).

Überlândia (ō.bēr.lun'dya). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 36,467 (1950).

Überlingersee (ü'bēr.ling.ēr.zā'). See under Constance, Lake.

Uberti (ō.bēr'tē), Farinata Degli. See Farinata Degli Uberti.

Uberto Crivelli (ō.bēr'tō krē.vē'lē). Original name of Pope Urban III.

Überweg (ü'bér.vák), Friedrich. [Also, Ueberweg.] b. at Leichlingen, Germany, Jan. 22, 1826; d. at Königsberg, in East Prussia, June 9, 1871. German philosopher. His chief works are System der Logik und Geschichte der logischen Lehren (1857) and Grundriss der Geschichte der Philosophie (in many editions, the first 1863-66).

Ubico Castañeda (ó.bé'kó kás.tá.nyá'thá), Jorge. b. at Guatemala City, Guatemala, Nov. 10, 1878; d. at New Orleans, La., June 14, 1946. Guatemalan army officer and politician, president (1931-44) of Guatemala.

Ubi (ü'bí), Ancient Germanic people first mentioned by Caesar, in whose time they were situated on the E bank of the Rhine, N of the Taurus region to the Sieg River. Made tributary to the Suevi, they sought Roman aid and protection in 55 a.c. Later (38 a.c.) Agrippa brought them across the Rhine. Their principal place, named Colonia Agrippina (modern Cologne), became the chief seat of Roman power on the lower Rhine. Tacitus mentions that the Ubi later called themselves Agrippinenses. They were merged ultimately with the Franks.

Ubu Roi (ü.bü.rwá), Satiric comedy (final version, 1896) by Alfred Jarry. Originally written (1888) when the author was 15 as a lampoon of his mathematics teacher, but expanded for the stage and played by actors wearing grotesque masks and speaking in false voices, its fantastic technique, anarchistic philosophy, and obscene language caused a riot at the first performance. Ubu is a travesty of the complacent bourgeois. The play was later much admired by the surrealists.

Ucayali (ó.ká.yá'le). [Also, Ucayale (ó.ká.yá'lá).] One of the principal headstreams of the Amazon, in C Peru. It is formed by the confluence of the Apurímac and Urubamba, and flows N to join the Marañón. Length, over 1,200 mi.; navigable for 600 mi.

Uccello (ót.chel'lo), Paolo. [Original name, Paolo di Dono.] b. at Florence, Italy, c1397; d. there, 1475. Florentine painter. He came to be called Uccello because of his fondness for painting birds. Apprenticed to the sculptor Lorenzo Ghiberti (who also painted), he probably received instruction in painting from his master among others, and this association doubtless also prepared him to be especially influenced by Donatello. Uccello, who has been called a "learned workman," was not the least among those who turned the stream of Florentine art from the tradition of the followers of Giotto into a vigorous realism. He was the first painter really to master the problems of perspective, to which he gave years of study, and his influence is seen throughout the high Renaissance, especially in the works of Piero della Francesca, Signorelli, and Michelangelo. His battle scenes are at once superb in design and excitingly realistic, his most notable work in this field being the four panels of The Battle of San Romano, of which one is in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence, another in the Louvre, and a third in the National Gallery, London; the fourth remaining in private ownership. Perhaps his tour de force is the colossal equestrian portrait of Sir John Hawkwood, English captain of a band of mercenaries in Florentine service, in the cathedral of that city. Employing all his knowledge of perspective and of chiaroscuro, the artist contrived to make this appear to be a sculpture, standing out from its background. He achieved a like effect in his frescoes in the church of Santa Maria Novella at Florence, depicting The Creation of Animals, The Creation of Man, The Temptation of Eve, The Expulsion from Eden, Adam and Eve Laboring in the Sweat of Their Brow, The Sacrifice and Death of Abel, Building the Ark, Entry of the Animals, The Deluge, Noah's Sacrifice, and Noah's Inebriety.

Uccle (ükl). [Flemish, Ukkel.] Town in C Belgium, in the province of Brabant, a suburb of Brussels: cotton-textile manufactures and other industries. 56,156 (1947).

Uchard (üshár), Mario. b. at Paris, Dec. 28, 1824; d. there, Aug. 1, 1893. French dramatist. Author of the dramas La Fiammina (1857) and La Charnesse (1864), the comedies La Seconde Jeunesse (1859) and La Postérité d'un bourgeois (1864), and the romance Raymond (1861).

Uchatius (ó.chá'tsé.üs), Baron Franz von. b. at Theresienfeld, in Lower Austria, Oct. 20, 1811; committed suicide at Vienna, June 4, 1881. Austrian general, an authority on artillery tactics. He invented a steel alloyed with bronze for cannon (named from him Uchatius steel), ballistic apparatus, and other military devices.

Uchida (ó.ché.dá), Baron Yasuga. b. in Kumamoto prefecture, Japan, 1865; d. 1936. Japanese diplomat and statesman. He was appointed attaché to the Japanese legation at Washington (1887) and secretary of legation at London (1893), was secretary of legation at Peiping (1895-97), vice-minister of foreign affairs (1900), minister to China (1901-06), ambassador to Austria (1907-09), and ambassador to the U.S. (1909-11), and was appointed minister of foreign affairs in the Saionji cabinet in 1911. He served as foreign minister again (1918-23, 1932-33) and was ambassador to Russia (1914-17).

Ückermark (ük'ér.märk). See Uckermark.

Ückermünde (ük'é.r.mün'de). [Also, Uckermünde.] Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Mecklenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Pomerania, Prussia, situated near the Stettiner Haff, ab. 30 mi. NW of Stettin (Szczecin): river port; iron foundries and lumber mills. 11,177 (1946).

Udaipur (ó.dí'pór, ó'dí.pór). [Also: Mewar, Oodeypore; ancient name, Meywar.] Former native state now incorporated into Rajasthan, Union of India, ab. 125 mi. NE of Ahmedabad: cattle and sheep raising, and some farming. Area, 13,170 sq. mi.; pop. 1,926,698 (1941).

Udaipur. [Also, Oodeypore.] City in Rajasthan, Union of India, formerly capital of the state of Udaipur: trading center. It is noted for its marble palaces, situated on the shore of, and on islands in, the lake on which the city borders. 59,648 (1941).

Udall (ü'dál), John. [Also, Uvedale.] b. c1560; d. in the Marshalsea Prison, London, 1592. English non-conformist, one of the writers for the Marpelate press. He published a very able pamphlet, Diotrephes (The State of the Church of England) in 1588, the first answer to John Bridges's A Defence of the Government Established in the Church of England for Ecclesiastical Matters, and was summoned before the Court of High Commission and finally deprived of his living at Newcastle and imprisoned at Southwark. He then printed a work called A Demonstration of the Truth of that Discipline which Christ hath Prescribed. This book was declared seditious, and he was sentenced to death in February, 1591. Efforts were made by Sir Walter Raleigh and others for his release, but just when they were successful he was taken ill in prison and died. He also wrote The Key to the Holy Tongue, the first Hebrew grammar in English, printed at Leiden in 1593.

Udall, Nicholas. [Also, Uvedale.] b. in Hampshire, England, 1505; d. 1556. English dramatist and Latin scholar. He was headmaster at Eton in 1534, and of Westminster School (c1554-56). He was the author of the first extant English comedy, Ralph Roister Doister. In 1542 he published his translation of the Apophthegms of Erasmus; he also translated (1542-45) Erasmus's paraphrase on Luke.

Uday Shankar (ó'dí shán.kär'). b. at Udaipur, 1900—. Indian dancer, an exponent of the classical dance of India. He organized (1930) his own company of musicians and dancers and brought the Indian dance to the Western world in the course of several extensive European and American tours. He organized (1939) the Indian culture center at Almorá, India, and produced the dance film Kalpána (1948).

UDC. See United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Uddevalla (üd.e.vál'á). Town in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Göteborg and Bohus, ab. 45 mi. N of Göteborg. It has textile mills and match factories. 24,922 (1950).

Udet (ó'det), Ernst. b. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, April 26, 1896; d. Nov. 17, 1941. German aviator and air force officer. One of the leading aces of World War I, he is credited with the destruction of 62 Allied planes while serving with the German air force. Under the Nazi regime he became (1938) a lieutenant general in charge of the technical division of the German air force. The official account of his death stated that he died while experimenting with a new weapon; other accounts say he committed suicide.

Udi (ó'dé). Town in W Africa, in Eastern Provinces, Nigeria, just S of Enugu on the railway from Port Harcourt. Its importance is derived from its position in the center of the large coal deposits.

Udine (ó'dé.ná). [Former name, Friuli.] Province in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Friuli-Venezia-Giulia, bordering on Austria and Yugoslavia. Capital, Udine; area, ab. 2,766 sq. mi.; pop. 721,670 (1936).

Udine. [Ancient names, Vednum, Utinum.] City and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Friuli-Venezia Giulia, capital of the province of Udine, situated on two canals connected with the Tagliamento River, between Venice and Villach; cotton and silk textile industries; iron and steel works; agricultural trade; breweries. The cathedral, of the 13th century, the Oratorio della Purità, and the archiepiscopal palace contain paintings by Tiepolo (18th century); the castle, of the 16th century, overlooks the town. The German emperor Otto II donated the place where Udine now stands to the patriarch of Aquileia in 983; in 1238 it became the seat of the patriarchate. The city came to Venice in 1420. In World War I, it was the seat of the Italian general headquarters until it was occupied by German and Austrian troops Oct. 29, 1917. In World War II, some damage was sustained by buildings of interest to tourists, among them the cathedral (roof and ceiling) and the Oratorio della Purità (roof). Pop. of commune, 63,098 (1936); of city, 54,533 (1936).

Udmurt (ó'dmört, ó'danórt'). [Also, Vot'yaks.] Finnic people living largely in the Udmurt Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic N of the Kama River in E European U.S.S.R. They numbered ab. 606,000 in 1939, ab. 634,400 in 1952. First mentioned in 15th-century Russian archives as "Ari," the Udmurt have had a passive history of continued domination by Russian and Turkic peoples. Except for their language (which belongs to the Finno-Permic group of the Finno-Ugric family of languages), and certain aspects of their folklore and mythology, clothing, and architecture, the Udmurt have adopted Russian peasant culture.

Udmurt Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic. Republic in E European U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 200 mi. W of the Ural Mountains and ab. 600 mi. E of Moscow. The land is generally rolling with forests covering much of the N part. The most important item in the economy is wood—finished lumber and paper are shipped from here to other parts of the U.S.S.R. Farming is the second occupation of the people and crops of flax, oats, and barley are grown. The republic was established in December, 1934. Capital, Izhevsk; area, 14,977 sq. mi.; pop. 1,200,007 (1939).

Udo (ó'dó). See Audaeus.

Udo of Lagery (lá.zhe.ré'). Original name of Pope Urban II.

UE. See United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America.

Ueberweg (ú'bér.vák), Friedrich. See Überweg, Friedrich.

Uechtländ (ücht'lánt). [Also, Helvetian Desert.] Medieval name for a region now occupied by the cantons of Fribourg and Bern, Switzerland, between the Aare and Saane rivers. It was often devastated by war in the early Middle Ages.

Uele (we'lá). [Also, Welle.] Large river in equatorial Africa, flowing W from its source in the highlands in the NE corner of the Belgian Congo. It is the chief head-stream (sometimes considered as the upper course) of the Ubangi River, and was discovered by G. A. Schweinfurth in 1870. Its connection with the Ubangi was shown by Van Cèle. Length, ab. 700 mi.

Uelzen (ül'tsen). [Also, Ülzen.] Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the province of Hanover, Prussia, situated on the Ilmenau River ab. 20 mi. SE of Lüneburg; plastics, chemical, lumber, and cement industries; sugar refinery. The town suffered heavy damage in World War II. The population increased in the period 1939-46 by 44.6 percent. 20,614 (1946), 23,666 (1950).

Uetersen (ü'tér.zén). [Also, Ütersen.] Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Schleswig-Holstein, British Zone, formerly in the province of Schleswig-Holstein, Prussia, situated on the Pinnau River, a tributary of the Elbe River, ab. 13 mi. NW of Hamburg; river port; chemical, metal, paper, leather, textile, and foodstuff industries. 15,433 (1950).

Uexküll (üks'kü'l), Baron Jakob Johann von. b. 1864—. German biologist and psychologist. Author of Theoretical Biology (1925), Umwelt und Innenwelt der Tiere (1927), Niegschaule Welten (1936), and Der unsterbliche Geist in der Natur (1938).

Ufa (ó.fá'). Former guberniya (government) in E Russia, surrounded by the governments of Perm, Orenburg, Samara, Kazan, and Vyatka. It is now largely included in the Bashkir Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic in the U.S.S.R.

Ufa. City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Bashkir Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, on the Belaya River. An important oil-refining city (particularly known for high octane aviation gasoline), it also has manufactures of motors, wood products, cotton textiles, machinery, and foodstuffs; during World War II it was an important center of war industries. Ufa was founded by the Russians in 1574. Pop. 245,863 (1939).

Ufer (ú'fér), Walter. b. at Louisville, Ky., July 22, 1876; d. at Santa Fe, N.M., Aug. 2, 1936. American artist, known for his anecdotal paintings of New Mexico. He became a member of the National Academy in 1926. His principal works include The Solemn Pledge (Chicago), Don Pedro de Taos (Brooklyn), and His Wealth (Metropolitan Museum, New York).

Uffington (ú'fing.ton), White Horse of. See White Horse of Uffington.

Uffizi (ó'f.e'tse). One of the chief art galleries in the world, situated at Florence, Italy, near the Arno River, and connected with the galleries in the Palazzo Pitti by a covered gallery over the Ponte Vecchio. It was founded in the 15th century. The windows and roof of the Uffizi and some of its frescoes were seriously damaged in World War II, and the connecting corridor to the Pitti was partly destroyed.

Ufford (ú'fórd), Robert de. (Title, 1st Earl of Suffolk.) b. Aug. 10, 1298; d. Nov. 4, 1369. English politician and soldier, chief counselor of Edward III. He often supplied security that Edward III might borrow money, and distinguished himself at Crécy (1346) and later at Poitiers (1356).

Uganda (ú.gan'dá). British protectorate in E Africa, on the N and NW shores of Lake Victoria, bordering Tanganyika on the S, the Belgian Congo on the W, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan on the N, and Kenya on the E. The seat of government is Entebbe; the native capital and commercial center is Kampala. A railway links Kampala and Soroti with Mombasa on the Indian Ocean via Tororo and Nairobi, Kenya colony. The most important exports are cotton, coffee, sugar, tea, tin ore, hides, and tobacco. Altitude of plateau, ab. 4,000 ft.; area, 93,988 sq. mi., of which 13,680 sq. mi. are water; pop. 4,958,520 (1948), including 3,448 Europeans, 35,215 Indians and Goans, and 2,302 other non-natives.

History and Government. It was definitely placed in the British sphere of influence in 1890. In March, 1893, the British East Africa Company retired from Uganda. The following year a British protectorate was declared over most of the Buganda kingdom; the protectorate was gradually extended until it included all the area of the modern Uganda. The protectorate is divided administratively into four provinces: Eastern, Northern, Western, and Buganda. Administration is by a governor assisted by an executive council of officials, and a legislative council on which Africans, Europeans, and Asiatics are represented. Buganda is recognized as a kingdom and has a king, or kabaka, who governs through his three ministers, subject only to the advice of the British. In the other provinces administration consists of indirect rule through the chiefs and native councils.

Ugarte (ó.gar'tá), Manuel. b. at Buenos Aires, Feb. 27, 1878—. Argentine writer, notable for urging unified Latin-American opposition to the overtures of the U.S. (to which he gave the title, el coloso del norte, meaning "the colossus of the north"). Of his creative works, his fát, fäte, fär, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; nōt, mōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pull; ʔh, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; short stories are now better known than his verse, novels, travel books, or criticism. Author of Cuentos de la pampa (1903), Los Jardines tisorios, Verdinas juveniles (1907), Cuentos argentinos (1908), El Porvenir de la América latina (1911), El Destino de un continente (1923), and others.

Ugernum (ù.jér'num). A Latin name of Beaucaire.

Uggione (ù.d.jò'nà), Marco da. See Oggione or Oggione, Marco da.

Uglich (ù'glic'h). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Yaroslavl oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Volga River ab. 125 mi. N of Moscow; site of a 120,000-kilowatt hydroelectric station completed in 1941 (the large dam of which has a lock for river navigation). The city was founded in the 10th century, and has several historic buildings. Pop. over 20,000 (1946).

Ugly Duckling, The. Fairy tale by Hans Christian Andersen, based on the folk motif in which the unpromising character surpasses the promising. In Andersen's story a swan egg is hatched by a duck. The young swan seems ugly and ridiculous to the young ducks, and is taunted by all. In the end, however, he grows into the most beautiful bird on the pond.

Ugolini (ù.gò.lé'ne), Vincenzo. b. at Perugia, Italy; d. 1632. Italian composer of religious music, such as motets, psalms, and vespers.

Ugolino of Segni (ù.gò.lé'no; sà'n'yò), Count. Original name of Pope Gregory IX.

Ugrian (ù'gri.àn) or Ugro-Finnic (ù'grò.fin'ik). See under Finn-Ugrian.

UGT. [Full name, Unión General del Trabajo; Eng. trans., "General Labor Union."] Spanish labor union founded in 1888 by Francisco Mora and García Quejido at Barcelona. A union of a social-democratic type, moderate and disciplined, it lost out to anarchism in Catalonia and shifted its headquarters to Madrid. When the UGT (which was in the period after World War I the largest labor union of Spain) voted not to join the Third International, a left splinter group forsook it to establish the Spanish Communist Party, but during the regime of the republic (1931-39) these extreme leftists entered the Popular Front and infiltrated back into the UGT. During the Spanish Civil War (1936-39) leftist ranks closed against the nationalists, but socialists, UGT, anarchists, the CNT (Confederación Nacional del Trabajo), and communists fought a losing battle. After the Franco victory all labor organizations, including the UGT, were abolished. Their membership is said to preserve an underground organization.

Uhde (ù'dé), Fritz Karl Hermann von. b. in Saxony, Germany, May 22, 1848; d. Feb. 25, 1911. German painter. His subjects were chiefly religious, many being Biblical incidents to which he gave a modern setting.

Uherské Hradíště (ù'her.ske hrá'dish.tyě). [German, Ungarisch Hradisch.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Gottwaldov, in E Moravia, situated on the Moravia River between Kroměříž and Hodonín; cattle and grain trade. The capital of the Moravian empire of the early Middle Ages is supposed to have been nearby. 16,202 (1947).

Uherský Brod (ù'her.ské bròt). [German, Ungarisch Brod.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Gottwaldov, in E Moravia, ab. 45 mi. SE of Olomouc, near the Slovakian border; grain trade. 6,457 (1947).

Uhlend (ù'lánt), Ludwig. b. at Tübingen, Germany, April 26, 1787; d. there, Nov. 13, 1862. German lyric poet, considered to have been the most talented of the Swabian school. He studied jurisprudence at Tübingen, and afterward became an advocate at Stuttgart. He subsequently devoted himself to linguistic studies. In 1810 he was at Paris engaged in study, particularly of manuscripts of the Middle Ages. In 1829 he was made professor of the German language and literature at Tübingen, a post which he resigned in 1832 on the refusal of the government to grant him a leave of absence to attend the Diet of Württemberg as delegate. In 1848 and 1849 he was a member of the German National Assembly. His first poems (Gedichte) appeared in 1806; a complete collection was published in 1815. Vaterländische Gedichte, a volume of patriotic lyrics evoked by the Württemberg constitutional troubles of 1815, was published in 1816, and in an augmented edition in 1817. In 1818 appeared the first of his two dramas, the tragedy Ernst Herzog von Schwaben, which was followed in 1819 by Ludwig der Baier. His fame as a poet is based chiefly upon his songs and ballads, some of which are among the most famous in German literature. Several of his lyrics, like Ich hatt' einen Kameraden, Droben stehet die Kapelle, and Es zogen drei Burschen. Wohl über den Rhein, and the religious poem Das ist der Tag des Herrn, have become as popular as genuine folk songs. His poems and dramas were published at Stuttgart in 1876, in three volumes. His Schriften zur Geschichte der Dichtung und Sage appeared (1865-73) in eight volumes.

Uhlenbeck (ù'len.bek), George Eugene. b. at Batavia, Java, Dec. 6, 1900— Dutch physicist. He was professor of theoretical physics (1935-39) at the University of Utrecht, and was assistant professor (1928-29), associate professor (1929-35), and professor (1939 et seq.) of physics at the University of Michigan.

Uhlenhuth (ù'len.höt), Paul Theodor. b. at Hanover, Germany, Jan. 7, 1870— German bacteriologist and hygienist. He discovered (1908) Bacterium paratyphum B and was the first (1901) to use antigens in distinguishing blood of different individuals, called the precipitin (Uhlenhuth's) test. He is one of the founders of the modern arsenotherapy of syphilis.

Uhler (ù'lér), Philip Reese. b. at Baltimore, June 3, 1835; d. Oct. 21, 1913. American biologist and geologist, librarian of the Peabody Institute, Baltimore (1872-90) and its provost from 1891.

Uhrich (ù'rëk), Jean Jacques Alexis. b. at Phalsbourg (Pfalzburg), in Alsace, Feb. 15, 1802; d. at Passy, France, Oct. 9, 1886. French general. He served in Spain, Algeria, the Crimea, and Italy, and was commandant at Strassbourg at the time of its siege and capitulation in 1870.

Uhrichville (ù'rìks.vìl). City in E Ohio, in Tuscarawas County: one of the foremost centers in the U.S. for manufactures of vitrified clay goods. It was settled in 1804. Pop. 6,614 (1950).

Ui Fálghé (wí fál'è). Irish name of County Offaly.

Uigurs (wé'gür). [Also, Uighurs.] Semi-nomadic Turkic people of C Asia, who by the 8th century had conquered the Chinese in Mongolia and founded their own empire, which flourished from 745 to 856. Later they migrated westward and settled in what is now Sinkiang province, China. There they founded another empire, whose power and cultural development were not interrupted until the 13th century, when the Mongols invaded and conquered it. Descendants of the Uigurs still dwell in Sinkiang province and speak the Uigur language, which belongs to the East Turkic group of the Turkic family of languages.

Uinta Mountains (ù'in.tà). [Also, Uintah.] Range of mountains chiefly in N Utah, on the borders of Colorado and Wyoming, extending generally E and W. The highest is Kings Peak (13,498 ft.).

Uiracocha (wé.rá.kò'chá). See Viracocha.

Uitenhage (ù'ten.hàg, ò'ten.hà.èh). Town in S Africa, in Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa, situated in the extreme S part of the province, ab. 21 mi. inland from Port Elizabeth. It is a growing industrial town, with railway workshops; wool washing, textile making, and tire manufacturing are also carried on here. 26,520, including 11,090 Europeans (1946).

Ujda (ù'jda). See Oujda.

Ujfalvy (ù'fál'vè), Charles Eugène. b. at Vicenza, May 16, 1842; d. at Florence, Italy, Jan. 31, 1904. Austrian philologist, ethnologist, and traveler. He made journeys to Asia (1876-82) under French auspices.

Ujfehértó (ù'fè'här.tò). Town in NE Hungary, between Debrecen and Nyíregyháza. The chief industry is basket weaving. 14,647 (1948).

Ujiji (ù'jè'jè). Town in E Africa, in W Tanganyika, on the shore of Lake Tanganyika, ab. 4 mi. S of Kigoma. It was here that Richard Burton and J. H. Speke discovered the lake, and here H. M. Stanley found David Livingstone in 1871. Its population was at one time ab. 14,000, but diminished when the railroad bypassed it in favor of Kigoma. Ujiji is one of the largest native towns in British East Africa, and is an important center for native and Arab traders. Pop. ab. 10,000.

Ujiyamada (ù'jè.ya.mä.dä). City in S Honshu, Japan, ab. 45 mi. S of Nagoya. It was formed by the merger of the two communities of Uji and Yamada. The city is one of the great religious centers of Japan, with numerous Shinto shrines including the Ise group, which date back to the early Christian era. 69,459 (1950).

Üjpest (ö'j'pesh't'). A northern suburb of the city of Budapest, Hungary, situated on the E bank of the Danube River and on the railroad line from Budapest to Vác. It is one of the largest industrial centers in Hungary. 67,863 (1948).

Üjvidék (ö'j.vé'däk). Hungarian name of Novi Sad.

Ukamba (ö.kam'ba). Former province of the East African Protectorate, now part of Kenya colony. Its capital was Nairobi.

Ukerewe (ö.ké.ré'we). Island in the S part of Lake Victoria, E Africa: part of Tanganyika territory.

Ukermärk (ö'kér.märk). [Also, Ückermärk.] Formerly, the northernmost division of Brandenburg, Germany, surrounded by Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Pomerania, the Neumark, and the Mittelmark.

Ukermünde (ö.kér.mün'de). See Ückermünde.

Ukert (ö'kert), Friedrich August. b. at Eutin, Germany, Oct. 28, 1780; d. at Götting, Germany, May 18, 1851. German historian and geographer.

Uklah (ö.kl'a). City in N California, county seat of Mendocino County, N of San Francisco: packing and shipping center for a fruit-raising area. 6,120 (1950).

Ukkel (ö'k'el). Flemish name of Uccle.

Ukmerge (ö'k'mér.gä). [Russian, Vilkomir; Polish, Wilkomierz.] Town in Lithuania, ab. 43 mi. NW of Vilna (Vilnius): road junction. 12,292 (1939).

Ukraine (ü'krän, ü.krän', -krin'). [Russian, Ukraina (ö.krä.'äna, -krä'na), meaning "Border Land." Name applied to a region in the U.S.S.R. lying chiefly in the valley of the middle Dnieper. Formerly it was taken as being nearly the same as Little Russia, and as corresponding nearly to the former governments of Kiev, Tchernigov, Poltava, and Kharkov. This region is now included in the larger area known officially as the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R. The area has long been an object of dispute between Poland and Russia, with the Ukrainians themselves asserting (thus far in vain) that the area should be subject to neither Poland nor Russia. The part E of the Dnieper was ceded to Russia by Poland in 1667 and 1686; the part W of the Dnieper fell to Russia in 1793.

Ukraine, Prince of. Title of Mazeppa, Ivan.

Ukrainians (ü.krä'n.i.änz, -krä'). [Also, Ruthenians.] Group of eastern Slavic peoples closely related to the Russians and Byelorussians, forming the major population of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R., as well as sizeable colonies in W Siberia, the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic, and the Far East. They now number ab. 32,640,000. Although differences can be noted between the northern and southern dialects of the Eastern Slavs even in the earliest records (11th century), the development of a distinct Ukrainian language is more recent. It occurred primarily during the period of Mongol and later Polish-Lithuanian rule of the Ukraine in the 13th to 17th centuries. As in Russia, Old Church Slavonic long remained the written tongue; literary Ukrainian dates only from the 18th century.

Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic. Constituent republic of the U.S.S.R., in the SW part, ranking second in population among all of the Soviet republics. It borders on Poland and Czechoslovakia on the W, Rumania on the SW, and the Black Sea on the S. The terrain is chiefly level to gently rolling plain or low hills, rising to the Carpathian Mountains in the SW. Agriculture is highly productive in the republic, accounting for about a fifth of the wheat and three fourths of the sugar beets produced in the U.S.S.R.; other important crops include tobacco, sunflowers, maize, and barley. Livestock raising is also important; hogs are a specialty. Most of the Donets Basin lies in the Ukraine, in addition to the iron-ore mines of Krivoi Rog; the republic produces roughly half of all Russian pig iron and a third of all Russian coal. There are also oil fields in the W part, and manganese deposits at Nikopol. The large cities have extensive industrial development, with metalworking, machine-building and food-processing industries. An extensive railroad network traverses the republic, and there are four major ports: Odessa, Nikolaev, Kherson, and Zhdanov. The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic was established in 1917, and formed one of the original constituent republics of the U.S.S.R. It was enlarged in 1939 by the incorporation of parts of SE Poland, and in 1945 by the annexation of Carpathian Ruthenia or the Trans-Carpathian area, ceded by Czechoslovakia. It suffered more extensively in World War II than any other area of the U.S.S.R. and was entirely occupied by German armies in 1942; its cities and industrial installations were devastated by warfare. Reconstruction began in 1913, and was largely effected by 1951. Approximately three fourths of the population of the republic are Ukrainians. Capital, Kiev; area, 171,900 sq. mi. (1939); 222,600 sq. mi. (1951); pop. 30,960,221 (1939).

Ukualuthi (ö.kwä.lö'thë) or Ukualuze (ö.kwä.lö'zä). See Kwalthi.

Ukuambi (ö.kwäm'bë). See Kwambi.

Ulaanhüü (ö.län.hü'). [Chinese name, Yün Tse.] b. in Suiyuan, China, c1905—. Chinese leader of the Tumen Mongols and chairman of the Inner Mongolian autonomous government. Born into a Chinese-speaking Mongol agricultural family, he studied at Moscow, worked with the Chinese Communists during the war against Japan (1937-45), and became chairman of the Inner Mongolian people's autonomous government set up May 1, 1949.

Ulai (ö'li). Assyrian and Hebrew name of the Karun.

Ulatume (ö.lä.'mä). Ballad by Edgar Allan Poe, published (1847) in the American Whig Review.

Ulan Bator (ö.län.bä'tör). [Also: Ulan Bator Khoto (ö'hö'tö), Urga; Chinese, Kulun.] Capital of the Mongolian People's Republic, ab. 200 mi. S of Lake Baikal and 100 mi. S of the border of the U.S.S.R. It is the chief trading center of the country and has exports of wool, hides, and skins. It is a great center of Lamaism. Pop. ab. 100,000.

Ulan-Ude (ö.län.ö'de). [Former name, Verkhne-Udinsk.] City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Buryat-Mongol Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, in E central Siberia, on the Trans-Siberian Railway: steam locomotive and railway car building and maintenance shops; meat-packing, lumber, glass, and woolen textile industries. 129,417 (1939).

Ulasutai (ö'lä.sö'ti). Mongolian name of Dzhibkhiantu.

Ulate Blanco (ö.lä'tä bläng'kö), Otilio. b. at Alajuela, Costa Rica, Aug. 25, 1896—. Costa Rican publisher and politician, president of Costa Rica (1949 et seq.). Since 1921 he has been a director of several newspapers in Costa Rica, and he is a prominent member of the National Union Party. He was elected to the legislature in 1917, served as chargé d'affaires in Spain (1928-29), and was a member (1930-38) of the constitutional congress. He was elected to the presidency in 1948.

Ulcinj (ö'l'tsënv'). [Italian, Dulcigno; Latin, Olcinium.] Seaport in SW Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Montenegro, formerly in the banovina (province) of Zetska, situated on the Adriatic coast SE of Bar. The population is partly Serbian, partly of Albanian origin. The Venetians were defeated by the Turks here on Aug. 4, 1718. The place was stormed by the Montenegrins in 1878, and was ceded to Montenegro by Turkey in 1880. It was incorporated into Yugoslavia in 1919. Pop. ab. 5,000.

Uleåborg (ö'le.ö.böry'). Swedish name of Oulu.

Ulen Spiegel (ö'len.shp'gël), Till (or Tyll). See Eulenspiegel, Till (or Tyll).

Ufilas (ö'fil.as). [Also: Uifila (ö'fil.a), Uphilas, Wulfila.] b. c311; d. at Constantinople, c381. Bishop to the Goths and translator of the Bible. His parents were Christians of Cappadocian origin. At the Synod of Antioch (341), he was consecrated bishop of the Arian Visigoths, who lived to the north of the lower Danube. In 348, persecuted and driven out of this region by Athanasius, Ufilas and his people, with the permission of the emperor Constantius II, emigrated to Moesia, in the neighborhood of Nicopolis. From their new home they are consequently frequently called Moesogoths and their language Moesogothic. Ufilas died at Constantinople, where he had gone to defend the doctrines of Arianism. He preached in Greek, Latin, and Gothic. He translated the Bible into Gothic from a Greek original, but is said to have omitted the Books of Kings. For his translation he invented a written alphabet by supplementing the Greek alphabet in necessary instances from the Gothic runes. His translation, which from internal evidence shows the work of several hands, and was, doubtless, in part done by others under his supervision, has been preserved only in a fragmentary form: in all there are the greater part of the Gospels, a large portion of the Epistles, and scraps of the Old Testament. The principal manuscript, is the so-called Codex Argenteus of the University Library at Uppsala, Sweden, which is written in silver characters on a purple ground. Fragments of other manuscripts are preserved at Wolfenbüttel, Germany, and at Milan and Turin, Italy. The Gothic translation of the Bible is the oldest extant literary monument in the Germanic languages. It has been many times published.

Uliarus (ō'li'ā.rus). Ancient name of Oléron, Île d'.

Uliassutai (ō'li'ā.sō.ti'). Mongolian name of Dzhikhkhalantu.

Ulithi (ō'li'thē). Large atoll in the W Caroline Islands, NE of Yap. It was occupied by U.S. forces in September, 1944, and its large lagoon was an important naval base during the latter part of World War II. Land area, 1.8 sq. mi.; lagoon area, 183 sq. mi.; pop. 402 (1948).

Ulixes (ō'lik'sēs). Latin name of Odysseus.

Ullir (ūl'). [Also: Holler, Uller (ū'l'ēr), Ullr.] One of the high gods of Old Norse mythology, god of winter, and tutelary of skating, skiing, and snowshoeing. He was a very ancient god of winter, but by Eddie times his importance was secondary to Odin's. He has become the Holler of modern German folklore, the husband of Holde, who spreads snow over the farmlands to protect the sleeping crops from cold.

Ullswater (ulz'wō'tēr, -wō't'ēr). See Ullswater.

Ullmann (ūl'mān), Karl. b. at Epenbach, near Heidelberg, Germany, March 15, 1796; d. at Karlsruhe, Germany, Jan. 12, 1865. German Protestant evangelical theologian. His works include Reformatoren vor der Reformation (1841), Über die Sündlosigkeit Christi (1841), Das Wesen des Christentums (1845), and a reply to David Strauss's Life of Jesus, entitled Historisch oder mythisch? (1838).

Ulloa (ō'lyō'ā), Antonio de. b. at Seville, Spain, Jan. 12, 1716; d. near Cádiz, Spain, July 3, 1795. Spanish naval officer. In 1735 he was chosen, with Jorge Juan, another young naval officer, to accompany to Peru the French commission for the measurement of an arc of the meridian. While there they studied the natural features and political condition of the colony, and were also employed in defending it against the English under George Anson. During his return voyage (1744-45), Ulloa was captured by the English, but soon released. Charles III gave him high naval and civil offices, including the governorship of Louisiana (1766-68), but he showed little aptitude for command, and after 1780 was not in active service. He founded the observatory at Cádiz and the first Spanish metallurgical laboratory, and was prominent in other scientific enterprises. He published Relación histórica del viaje a la América meridional (with Juan, 2 vols., 1748; translated into various languages), Noticias Americanas (1772), and others. The secret report of Juan and Ulloa on the American colonies was published in English in 1746; it is important as showing the causes which led to the war for independence.

Ulloa, Francisco de. d. c.1540. Spanish captain. He was with Hernando Cortés in the conquest of Mexico, and in July, 1539, was sent by him to explore the Gulf of California. He left Acapulco with three vessels, one of which was lost in a storm; with the others he ascended to the head of the gulf, subsequently exploring the western coast of the peninsula; some authorities assert that he passed beyond the 30th northern parallel. One account says that he was lost at sea; another, that he was assassinated shortly after his return to Acapulco. Ulloa proved that Lower California is a peninsula.

Ulloa, San Juan de. See San Juan de Ulúa.

Ullr (ūl'ēr). See Ull.

Ullswater (ulz'wō'tēr, -wō't'ēr). [Also, Ullswater.] Lake in NW England, forming a portion of the Cumberland-Westmorland boundary, ab. 20 mi. S of Carlisle. It is the second in size of the lakes in the Lake District.

Its outlet is the river Eamont into the river Eden. Length, ab. 7 mi.; width, less than 1 mi.

Ulm (ūlm). City in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the Danube Kreis (district) of the state of Württemberg, situated at the junction of the Iller and Blau rivers with the Danube, ab. 45 mi. SE of Stuttgart; marketing center of a vegetable, grain, and livestock producing district. It has dairies, breweries, machine, metal, cotton and woolen textile, hat, leather-goods, and furniture industries. The cathedral, with a widely visible spire, is the second largest church and one of the foremost examples of the late Gothic style in Germany. The building was started in 1377, nearly completed in the 16th century, but finished only in the period 1844-90. The interior contains remarkable examples of Gothic art, particularly of the 15th century. Until World War II Ulm had preserved its medieval town core almost intact, but all this was devastated by air raids; only the cathedral and a very few other buildings survived. Ulm, a free imperial city from the 12th century, became a medieval commercial center of the first order, particularly in regard to the textile trade. It acquired a large surrounding territory, and was the chief community in the federation of Swabian cities. The city passed to Bavaria in 1803, and to Württemberg in 1810. Pop. 71,132 (1950).

Ulm, Capitulation of. Surrender at Ulm, Germany, of an Austrian army (ab. 25,000-30,000) under Karl Mack von Leiberich to Napoleon, Oct. 17, 1805.

Ulm, Truce of. Truce concluded in 1647 toward the end of the Thirty Years' War between the Franco-Swedish forces and the Bavarians.

Ulmānis (ōl'mā.nis), Kārlis. b. in Latvia, Sept. 4, 1877; d. July 22, 1943. Latvian statesman. As editor of the largest Latvian agricultural magazine, Lauksaimnieks, he was active in promoting cattle breeding and the dairy industry; at the same time he was engaged in furthering the independence of Latvia. After the revolution of 1905 he went (1907) to the U.S., but returned to Latvia in 1913 after being amnestied. During the revolution of 1917 the provisional Russian government appointed him vice-governor of the Latvian province of Vidzeme; at the same time he took an active part in the foundation of the Latvian Farmers' Union, whose leader he remained until its dissolution. Elected first prime minister of Latvia when its independence was proclaimed (Nov. 18, 1918), Ulmanis held this post eight times; on several occasions he was also concurrently minister of foreign affairs, agriculture, and war. When the presence of numerous (25) political parties in the parliament impeded its functions, Ulmanis as prime minister terminated (1934) the activities of parliament and all political parties and established an authoritarian regime. He served as prime minister during the remaining period of national independence, and on April 11, 1936, assumed also the duties of president of the state. After the occupation of Latvia by Russia (June, 1943), Ulmanis yielded to an ultimatum permitting the formation of a new puppet government headed by a figure chosen by the Russians. Soon thereafter he was forcibly deported to the U.S.S.R., where he is believed to have died.

Uphilas (ō'phi.las). See Uphilas.

Ulpian (ūl'pi.an). [Full Latin name, Domitius Ulpianus.] Murdered c.228 A.D. Roman jurist, of Phoenician descent. He held office from the time of Septimius Severus, was banished by Heliogabalus, and was a praetorian prefect under Alexander Severus; his reduction of the privileges of the Praetorian Guard eventually caused them to kill him. He wrote many commentaries and other legal works (Ad edictum, Ad Sabinum, and others), largely used in the Digest, forming about one half of that work.

Ulrich (ūl'rieh). b. 1487; d. 1550. Duke of Württemberg; son of Henry IV. He succeeded to the duchy in 1498, and was expelled by the Swabian League in 1519. He was restored with the aid of Philip of Hesse in 1534 and joined the Schmalkaldic League against the Emperor Charles V.

Ulrich von dem Türlin (fon dem tūr'lin). fl. c.1260. Middle High German poet who shortly after 1260 supplied an introduction of 10,000 verses to Wolfram von Eschenbach's Willehalm.

Ulrich von Lichtenstein (fon lich'ʔen.sthīn). b. c1200; d. 1276. Middle High German lyric poet. He was descended from a noble family in Styria. His principal poem is his autobiography, called Frauentienst (19,000 verses), reciting his loves and adventures from 1222 to 1255, the year it was written. His other work, Frauenbuch, from 1257, is descriptive of the morals of his time.

Ulrich von Türheim (fon tür'him). fl. latter half 13th century. Middle High German poet who wrote Der starke Rennewart, a 36,000-verse continuation of Wolfram von Eschenbach's Wilhelm. With less success he also composed a conclusion to Gottfried von Strassburg's Tristan und Isolde.

Ulrici (ulrē'tse). Hermann. b. at Pforten, Germany, March 23, 1806; d. Nov. 24, 1741. Queen of Sweden; younger sister of Charles XII. She married (1715) the hereditary prince Frederick of Hesse-Cassel, and was proclaimed queen in 1718 when her brother died. Her husband was crowned as reigning king (Frederick I) in 1720 and she abdicated.

Ulrika Eleonore (ulrē'kå e'le.5.nō're). b. at Stockholm, Jan. 23, 1688; d. Nov. 24, 1741. Queen of Sweden; younger sister of Charles XII. She married (1715) the hereditary prince Frederick of Hesse-Cassel, and was proclaimed queen in 1718 when her brother died. Her husband was crowned as reigning king (Frederick I) in 1720 and she abdicated.

Ulster (ul'stēr). [Irish, Cuigh Uladh.] Northernmost of the four great historic provincial divisions of Ireland, lying now mostly within Northern Ireland, but partly also within the Irish Republic. It is bounded on the N and W by the Atlantic Ocean, on the E by the North Channel and the Irish Sea, on the S by Leinster province, and on the SW by Connacht province. Ulster comprises nine counties, six of which are in Northern Ireland: Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, and Tyrone. The three Ulster counties in the Irish Republic are Cavan, Donegal, and Monaghan. Ulster was early colonized by Scots, was long ruled by kings, and during the struggle with the British for independence in recent times has been a Protestant and loyalist stronghold. Beginning with the 17th century, Ulster became the center of the Irish linen industry, which it has remained, but in recent years the acreage devoted to flax growing has declined. The total area of the province is ab. 8,330 sq. mi., of which ab. 5,237 sq. mi. lie in Northern Ireland, and ab. 3,093 sq. mi. lie in the Irish Republic. The total pop. of the province is ab. 1,549,000, of whom 1,279,753 live in Northern Ireland (1937), and 253,285 live in the Irish Republic (1951).

Ulster, 1st Earl of. Title of Lacy, Hugh de (d. c1242).

Ulster, 4th Earl of. A title of Mortimer, Roger (VI) de.

Ulster Canal. Canal in Ulster province, mostly in Northern Ireland, but partly in the Irish Republic (County Monaghan). It extends SW from Charlemont, in County Armagh, along the County Armagh-County Tyrone boundary, and crosses the Irish Republic-Northern Ireland border near Middletown. The canal crosses County Monaghan in a SW direction past Monaghan and reenters Northern Ireland (County Fermanagh) at the head of Upper Lough Erne, ab. 4 mi. SE of Newton-Butler. Length, ab. 48 mi.

Ulster Cycle. Cycle of Old Irish legend and romance, preserved in manuscripts dating from the 7th and 8th centuries, but depicting the Ireland and Irish heroes of the 1st century A.D. and the civilization and culture of pagan Ireland of centuries before that. It is so called because it celebrates the exploits of Ulster heroes. Cúchulain is the central figure. The Tain Bo Cuailgne is the principal text. Among many others are The Wooing of Emer (how Cúchulain won his wife), Bricriu's Feast (how Cúchulain won the champion's portion over the heroes of Ulster), The Tragic Death of Aife's Only Son (how Cúchulain unknowingly killed his own son), and the Exile of the Sons of Usnach (which tells the famous Deirdre story).

Ulster Rebellion. Outbreak of the Irish in Ulster against the English in 1641. Some 30,000 or more Protestants were massacred.

Ultima Thule (ul'ti.ma thū'le, tō'y-). See also Thule.

Ultima Thule. Novel by Henry Handel Richardson (Mrs. Henrietta Robertson), published in 1929. It is the concluding volume of the trilogy The Fortunes of Richard Mahony (1930).

Ultramontane Party (ul'tra.mon'tān). In German political history during the latter 19th century, the political group later known as the Center Party, which opposed legislation supposed to be inimical to the Church of Rome. It derived its name from its submission, after the Vatican Council (1870), to the authority of the Pope, who resided "across the mountains" in Italy.

Ulua (ō.lū'ā). [Also, Humuya.] River in NW Honduras, flowing N to the Gulf of Honduras. Length, ab. 160 mi.

Uluğ Beg (ō'lōg beg) or Uluğ Beigh (bāg). [Also, Uluğ Beg.] b. 1394; murdered, 1449. Prince of Samarkand (1447-49); grandson of Tamerlane. He was noted as an astronomer; his tables were referred to as an important authority by later astronomers.

Ulundi (ū.lun'dē). Place in Zululand, Union of South Africa, where, in 1879, the British under Frederick Augustus Thesiger, 2nd Baron Chelmsford, defeated the Zulus under Cetewayo.

Ulungu (ō.lūng'gō). See Alungu.

Ulu Tjanko (ō'lō chāng'kō). Cave in Sumatra, site of the first discovery of the prehistoric culture named from it. The culture is characterized by the predominance of obsidian as material for its flaked, finely executed tools and by a great number of microliths. Other known sites are in C and S Sumatra and W Java. Some authorities call it mesolithic of late paleolithic character; others call it neolithic.

Ulv (ul'vā). Island in the Inner Hebrides, in W Scotland, in Argyllshire, lying immediately off the W coast of the island of Mull, ab. 25 mi. W of Oban. Length, ab. 5 mi.; greatest width, ab. 3 mi.

Ulverston (ul'vēr.ston). [Called, locally, Ooston.] Urban district, seaport, and market town in NW England, in Lancashire, situated near the influx of the river Leven into Morecambe Bay, ab. 8 mi. NE of Barrow-in-Furness, ab. 255 mi. NW of London by rail. It was once the chief town in the Furness district. It has various manufactures and mines of hematite iron ore, 10,076 (1951).

Uluwar (ul'war). See Alwar, India.

Ulyanovsk (ō.lyā'nofsk). [Former name, Simbirsk.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Volga River ab. 225 mi. N of Saratov. It is an important river port and has manufactures of Diesel-powered trucks, lumber, textiles, leather goods, and foodstuffs. The city was founded by the Russians in 1648, and was renamed in honor of Nikolai Lenin (born Vladimir Ulyanov), who was born here in 1870. 102,106 (1939).

Ulysses (ū.lys'sēz). Poem by Alfred Tennyson.

Ulysses. Novel by James Joyce, published at Paris in 1922. Consisting of 18 sections based on correspondences to episodes in the Homeric myth, it presents the following counterparts among its chief characters: Leopold Bloom (Ulysses), Molly Bloom, his wife (Penelope), and Stephen Dedalus (Telemachus). The entire action takes place within the span of a single day (June 16, 1904) at Dublin. The novel, widely regarded as one of the greatest produced in the 20th century, is notable for its employment of the stream-of-consciousness technique on a massive scale. This method, in addition to other devices used by Joyce, influenced the technique of novelists including John Dos Passos, Virginia Woolf, Thomas Wolfe, and William Faulkner. Ulysses was banned from the U.S. from 1920 until 1933 on the ground of alleged obscenity; a federal court decision ended the ban after many years of litigation.

Ulysses. Latin name of Odysseus.

Ülzen (ül'tsēn). See Uelzen.

Uma (ō'mā). See Parvati.

Umakot (ō'mār.kōt). [Also: Amerkote, Amirkot.] Town in Sind, Pakistan, ab. 94 mi. E of Hyderabad; trading center on the edge of the Thar Desert. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Umatilla (ū.mā.til'ā). River in N Oregon which joins the Columbia. Length, ab. 90 mi.

Umaua (ō.mā.wā). See Omauas.

Umbagog Lake (um.bă'gog). Lake in W Maine and NE New Hampshire: one of the Rangeley Lakes. Its outlet is by the Androscoggin River. Length, 9 mi.

Umballa (um.bă'la). See Ambala.

Umbertide (ôm.ber'tē.dă). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Umbria, in the province of Perugia, situated on the Tiber River ab. 14 mi. N of Perugia: agricultural commune. In World War II considerable damage was suffered from Allied bombings, but most buildings of interest to tourists escaped with slight damage, except for Santa Maria delle Reggia, the Palazzo Comunale (roof and upper floor), and Santa Croce (but paintings by Signorelli in the last-named were not injured). Pop. of commune, 15,146 (1936); of town, 2,866 (1936).

Umberto (ôm.ber'tô). Italian form of Humbert.

Umberto I, Villa. See under Borghese, Scipione.

Umbilicanini (um.bil.i.kan'i.mi). See Palamites.

Umbria (um'bri.ă). In ancient geography, a region in Italy, E of Etruria and W of Picenum. The Umbrians took part in the second Samnite War, but were defeated (308 B.C.) by Rome. After the third Samnite War they were gradually Romanized.

Umbria (um'bri.ă). Italian, ômb'rĕ.ă). Compartimento (region) in C Italy, containing the provinces of Perugia and Terni. It occupies the hill country W of the main range of the Apennines between Tuscany and Latium. It has a well-developed and diversified agriculture, stock raising, and small industries based on hydroelectric power. In World War II, fighting took place here in June and July, 1944. Area, 3,271 sq. mi.; pop. 802,415 (1951).

Umbriel (um'bri.ă). Second satellite of Uranus, discovered by William Lassell in 1851.

Umbriel. Dusky sprite in Alexander Pope's The Rape of the Lock.

Umbro (um'bŕô). Latin name of the Ombrone.

Umbundu (ôm.bôn'dô). See Mbundu.

Umeå (ô'me.ô). Town in N Sweden, seaport, and the capital of the län (county) of Västerbotten, situated on the Gulf of Bothnia SW of Luleå; manufactures of machinery, wood pulp, and furniture. It was founded by Gustavus Adolphus in 1622, and burned by the Russians in 1720. Pop. 16,592 (1949).

Umraville (um'fra.vil). Gilbert de. [Title, Earl of Angus.] b. 1310; d. 1381. English nobleman and soldier, a follower of Edward Balliol.

Umraville, Robert de. [Title, Earl of Angus.] b. 1277. J. 1325. English soldier, a supporter of Edward II.

'im Keis or Umm Qeis (ôm kĕis'). See under Gadara.

Umpqua (ump'kwă). Tribe of North American Indians formerly living on the upper Umpqua River in SW Oregon. Today less than 100 of them survive on a reservation in Oregon. Their language, Umpqua, now extinct, belonged to the northwestern group of the Athapasean family of languages.

Umpqua River. River in W Oregon which flows into the Pacific Ocean. Length, ab. 210 mi.

Umritsir (um.rit'sĕr). See Amritsar.

Um Shomar (ûm shô'mar). Gebel. See under Sinai Peninsula.

Umtali (ûm.tă'le). Town in Southern Rhodesia, SE Africa, situated near the Mozambique border, ab. 171 mi. SE of Salisbury and ab. 374 mi. W of Beira. A trading and distributing center, it is the E entry point for the area, and a trading center for the gold fields in the vicinity. Copper, iron, lead, and silver are found nearby. Tobacco is one of the chief crops. A railway connecting Umtali with Salisbury was completed in 1899; with its completion Beira on the Indian Ocean coast became the port for most of Southern Rhodesia. Pop., with suburbs, 6,149, including 5,762 Europeans (1951).

UMW. See United Mine Workers.

Una (ô'na). "Lovely ladie," the personification of truth, in Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene. She is ultimately united to Saint George, the Red Cross Knight, who has slain the dragon in her behalf. In her wanderings she is followed by a lion who has been tamed by her gentleness and purity.

Unaka Mountains (u'na.kă). Range of mountains on the border between North Carolina and Tennessee. Peak elevation, ab. 5,258 ft.

Unalaska (u.nă.las'kă, ô.nă-). Island in the E part of the Aleutian Islands, SW of Alaska. It is high (peak elevation, ab. 6,680 ft.) and barren. In the 19th century it was a fur-sealing base, formerly belonging to Russia. The naval station of Dutch Harbor is situated on a small island off the NE coast.

Unamuno (ô.nă.mô'nô), Miguel de. b. at Bilbao, Spain, Sept. 29, 1864; d. at Salamanca, Spain, Dec. 31, 1936. Spanish philosophical writer, fighter for the moral and intellectual rebirth of Spain, champion and critic of the Spanish republic. He served (1891 et seq.) as professor of Greek and Spanish literature and language at Salamanca. Author of Vida de Don Quixote y Sancho (1905), Del sentimiento trágico de la vida (1913), Niebla (1914; a novel), Ensayos (8 vols., 1916-18), Tres novelas ejemplares (1920), and La Agonia del cristianismo (1925).

Unao (ô'no'u). See Unnao.

Unbearable Bassington (bas'ing-ton), The. Novel by "Saki" (Hector Hugh Munro), published in 1912.

Uncanny Stories. Collection of tales and short stories by Max Sinclair, published in 1923.

Uncas (ung'kas). b. c1558; d. c1683. American Indian chief. A Pequot by birth, he became a chief of the Mohegans and joined the English in the Pequot War (1637). He defeated the Narragansets under Miantonomoh in 1643. James Fenimore Cooper introduces a character named Uncas in his Last of the Mohicans.

Uncle Anyhow. Three-act comedy (1919) by Alfred Sutro.

"Uncle Arthur" (ăr'tĕr). Nickname of Henderson, Arthur.

"Uncle Esek" (ĕ'sek). See Shaw, Henry Wheeler.

Uncle Remus (ĕ'rĕmus). Narrator of the cycle of stories in Joel Chandler Harris's collection of Southern Negro folk tales. Uncle Remus is a composite of several actual persons known to Joel Chandler Harris. The Uncle Remus stories are typical African Negro animal tales in American Negro guise. Brer Rabbit figures as trickster in most of them; a number of them are etiological; and the Tar Baby tale is one of the most famous. Harris's Uncle Remus stories first appeared in the Atlanta Constitution and ran from 1876 to 1900. The first collection in book form was Uncle Remus: His Songs and Sayings (1880); next came Nights With Uncle Remus (1883). Other favorites are Uncle Remus and His Friends (1892) and Told By Uncle Remus (1905). The series continued up to 1918. An Uncle Remus Memorial has been established in Harris's old Atlanta home.

Uncle Sam (sam). Personification of the government or the people of the U.S. He began to appear in political cartoons c1850, and soon superseded Brother Jonathan as the national personification. The name is an extension of the initials U.S.

Uncle Toby (tô'bi). See Toby, Uncle.

Uncle Tom (tom). See Balderstone, Thomas.

Uncle Tom's Cabin. [Full title, Uncle Tom's Cabin, or, Life among the Lowly.] Antislavery novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe, serialized (1851-52) in the National Era (Washington, D.C.) and published in book form in 1852. The work played an important role in influencing Northern antislavery sentiment during the years before the Civil War. The background of the novel is laid chiefly in Kentucky and Louisiana, and the action is centered about the trials of Uncle Tom, a long-suffering Christian Negro slave who is mistreated and whipped to death after he falls into the hands of the brutal Simon Legree. Among the familiar characters in the book are Augustine St. Clare, his daughter Little Eva, the mulatto girl Eliza, the amusing Negro child Topsy, Miss Ophelia, and the sympathetic members of the Shelby family. It is noteworthy that Simon Legree is a Yankee and that most of the kindly characters in the novel are Southerners, for Mrs. Stowe's attack was directed against the institution of slavery rather than sectional responsibility for its ills. The work nevertheless focused popular attention as never before in the North, and abroad, on the problem of slavery, and the consequent outcry seemed to many Southerners to be directed, thoughtlessly and irresponsibly, against them, as a group and as a class; in reply to their resentment, Mrs. Stowe wrote A Key to Uncle Tom's Cabin (1853) in defense of the factual background she had employed. The novel sold more than 300,000 copies within a year after publication and was translated into Spanish, Italian, Danish, Swedish, Dutch, German, Polish, and other languages. Many dramatized versions have been presented on stages throughout the world.

Uncommercial Traveller, The. Volume of sketches by Charles Dickens, first published serially in his own magazine, All the Year Round, in 1860.

Uncompahgre (un.kom.pî.grê). Tributary of the Gunnison River, in Colorado.

Undén (ün.dän'), Östen. [Full name, Bo Östen Undén.] b. at Karlstad, Sweden, Aug. 25, 1886—. Swedish political leader and educator, known especially for his advocacy of arbitration of international disputes. He served (1924-26, 1945 et seq.) as foreign minister. He was a delegate to numerous meetings of the League of Nations from 1921 to 1939, headed (1947) the Swedish delegation to the United Nations Assembly, and was named (1930) Swedish member of the Hague Court. He was professor of civil law (1917-37) at Uppsala university, and served as its rector (1929-32) and chancellor (1937 et seq.).

Under (ün.dér), Marie. b. at Tallinn, Estonia, 1883—. Estonian poet. She dominated Estonian poetry in the 1920's and 1930's, developing into a lyricist and ballad writer of considerable force and philosophical depth. Author of Sonetid (Sonnets, 1917); the lyrical volumes Hääl varjust (A Voice from the Shadow, 1927), Kivi südamele (A Stone off the Heart, 1935), and Mureliku süga (From Sorrowful Lips, 1942); and of the volume of romantic ballads, mostly on folk themes, Onne varjatus (The Eclipse of Happiness, 1929). She has translated Shakespeare, Ibsen, Schiller, Goethe, Baudelaire, and others.

Undercliff (ün.dér.klif), the. Region in S England, in the Isle of Wight, lying along the S coast of that island, on the English Channel. It is a rocky terrace from a quarter mile to 1½ mi. wide and from 6 to 7 mi. long, due to a series of landslides.

Under Fire. See Feu, Le.

Underground Railroad. In U.S. history, a term applied to the secret operations by which slaves from the Southern states were helped to freedom in Canada. Such fugitives not infrequently appeared in the North even in the early years of the 19th century, and the numbers increased after the War of 1812, when many slaves for the first time heard of such a place as Canada; but the organized system, and the term that came to be popularly applied to it, seem to have originated about 1833. Quakers, if not the first, certainly were among the first and among the most numerous, active, ingenious, and courageous "station masters" who laid out secret routes and made their homes and barns "stations," from one to another of which individual fugitives or more often bands of escapees traveled by night, guided by whites or Negroes who knew the way. "Stations" were numerous throughout the Northern border states. The most active of all the "station masters" was the Quaker Levi Coffin. John Brown and his father naturally participated in running the Underground Railroad. The intrepid Harriet Tubman, herself an escaped slave, at the peril of her freedom guided many parties of fugitives along the route. Among the other persons who engaged in this work were Theodore Parker, William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Thomas Garrett, Samuel May, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Lucretia and James Mott, Gerrit Smith, Josiah Grinnell, and Franklin Benjamin Sanborn. The Fugitive Slave Law enacted by Congress as part of the Compromise of 1850 was intended to hamper or halt the operations of the Underground Railroad, but in fact it caused increasing numbers of Northerners to view the system with sympathy and to cooperate in its liberating work. It is impossible to make anything like an accurate estimate of the number of Negroes who successfully took the Underground Railroad from slavery to freedom, but up to the outbreak of the Civil War there may have been nearly 100,000 such "passengers." Most went (at least initially) to Canada, but some settled in the Northern states.

Undergrowth. Novel by Francis Brett Young, written in collaboration with his brother, Edward, and published in 1913.

Underhill (ün.dér.hil), Evelyn. b. in Staffordshire, England, 1874; d. at London, June 15, 1941. English novelist and poet. Author of The Grey World (1904), The Lost Word (1907), and The Column of Dust (1909), novels; Immanence (1912) and Theophanies (1916), volumes of poetry; Mysticism, a Study in the Nature and Development of Man's Spiritual Consciousness (1911), The Mystic Way, a Psychological Study in Christian Origins (1913), Practical Mysticism—A Little Book for Normal People (1914), Mysticism and War (1915), Essentials of Mysticism (1920), The Life of the Spirit and the Life of To-Day (1922), Mystics of the Church (1925), Concerning the Inner Life (1926), Man and the Supernatural (1927), The House of the Soul (1929), The Golden Sequence—A Fourfold Study of the Spiritual Life (1932), Mixed Pasture—Twelve Essays and Addresses (1933), The School of Charity, Meditations on the Christian Creed (1934), Worship (1936), The Spiritual Life—Four Broadcast Talks (1937), The Mystery of Sacrifice (1938), and Fruits of the Spirit (1942).

Under Western Eyes. Novel by Joseph Conrad, published in 1911.

Underwood (ün.dér.wüd), John Thomas. b. at London, c1857; d. at Wianno, on Cape Cod, Mass., July 2, 1937. American industrialist and typewriter manufacturer. He served as president of the Wagner Typewriting Company (incorporated March 30, 1895) and the Underwood Typewriter Manufacturing Company (incorporated June 6, 1895), merged (1903) into the Underwood Typewriter Company, which was in turn amalgamated (1927) into the Underwood, Elliot Fisher Company. He served as board chairman (1927) and as a director (1928-37) of the Underwood, Elliot Fisher Company.

Underwood, Joseph Rogers. b. in Goochland County, Va., Oct. 24, 1791; d. Aug. 23, 1876. American jurist and politician. He was associate justice (1828-35) of the Kentucky court of appeals, a member (1835-43) of Congress, and a U.S. senator (1847-53). A Union supporter during the Civil War, he was again a member (1860-63) of the Kentucky legislature, in which he had first served in 1816.

Underwood, Lucien Marcus. b. at New Woodstock, N.Y., Oct. 26, 1853; d. at Redding, Conn., Nov. 16, 1907. American botanist and teacher. He became (1886) professor of geology, zoology, and botany at Syracuse, and served (1896-1907) as professor of botany at Columbia University.

Underwood, Oscar Wilder. b. at Louisville, Ky., May 6, 1862; d. Jan. 25, 1929. American politician. He was admitted to the bar in 1884 and practiced law at Birmingham, Ala. As a member (1895-1915) of Congress he became chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in April, 1911, and in 1913 introduced the tariff bill which bears his name. He was elected (1915) to the Senate where he served until 1927. Underwood was mentioned prominently for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1912 and 1920, and in 1924 became perhaps the most famous "favorite son" of the 20th century when, throughout the long balloting of the Democratic National Convention, Alabama led the roll calls with "24 votes for Underwood." Author of Drifting Sands of Party Politics (1928).

Underwood Tariff. [Also, Underwood-Simmons Act.] Measure passed by a special session of the U.S. Congress in 1913 as part of the first Wilson administration's policy of domestic reform. In contrast to the established Republican policy of high protectionism, the Underwood Tariff, sponsored in the House by Oscar W. Underwood and in the Senate by Furnifold M. Simmons, stressed downward revision in a move to restore "effective competition" between U.S. and foreign manufacturers, and was aimed at reducing the cost of living. With an average rate of duty about 10 percent below the tariff of 1909, the Underwood Tariff extended the free list and replaced specific with ad valorem duties.

Undine (ün.dé'ne). Title and heroine of a romance by Baron de la Motte Fouqué, published in German in 1811. Undine is a water spirit who is endowed with a soul by her marriage with a mortal. When her husband fell in love with a mortal, Undine went home to the sea, but returned on his wedding night to deliver a death-bringing kiss. Paracelsus used the term "undine" generically to designate a class of water spirits who might obtain souls only by marrying mortals and bearing children.

Undset (ün'set), Sigrid. b. at Kallundborg, Denmark, May 20, 1882; d. at Lillehammer, Norway, June 10, 1949. Norwegian novelist. The daughter of a distinguished archaeologist, she was early brought into contact with the traditions of her country, which she was to embody in the world-famous novel Kristina Lavransdatter (1920-22). This trilogy of the Middle Ages in Norway is a story of sin and repentance against a rich background of human passions and fates, portrayed with a firm and detailed realism. She also wrote a number of other historical novels and novels of modern life. She was awarded the 1928 Nobel prize in literature. She spent the war years (1940-45) in the U.S., active on behalf of her country, as a voluntary refugee from occupied Norway.

Unebourg (dün.bör), Comte d'. Title of Vandamme, Dominique René.

UNESCO (ü.nes'kö). See United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization.

Unfinished Symphony. Symphony No. 8 in B minor by Franz Schubert. Begun on Oct. 30, 1822, the work was left uncompleted at the time of Schubert's death; it was first performed at Vienna in 1865. It consists of two movements, an Allegro and an Andante; a bit of a third, Scherzo, movement exists.

Ungama Bay (ung.gä.mä). See Formosa Bay.

Ungar (ung.gär), Hermann. b. at Boskowitz (now Boskoviec), in Moravia, April 20, 1893; d. at Prague, Oct. 27, 1929. Austrian writer best known for his witty comedy Die Gartenlaube (The Garden Pavilion, 1929).

Ungaria (ung.gä'ryä). Rumanian name of Hungary. Ungarisch-Altenburg (ung.gä.rish.äl'ten.bürk). A German name of Magyaróvár, now part of Mosonmagyaróvár.

Ungarisch Brod (bröt). German name of Uherský Brod.

Ungarisch Hradisch (hrä'dish). German name of Uherské Hradiště.

Ungarn (ung.gärn). German name of Hungary.

Ungava (ung.gä'vä, -gä'-). Former district of Canada, comprising the N part of the Labrador peninsula (with the exception of the area along the Atlantic seacoast). It is now part of the province of Quebec and forms the territory of Nouveau-Québec (New Quebec). Area, ab. 239,800 sq. mi.; pop. 4,470 (1951).

Ungava Bay. Arm of Hudson Strait, projecting into the N coast of the province of Quebec, Canada.

Unger (ung'ér), Franz. b. in Styria, Austria, 1809; d. at Graz, Austria, Feb. 13, 1870. Austrian botanist and paleontologist, particularly noted for his researches in the anatomy and physiology of plants and in fossil botany.

Unger, Gustav Hermann. b. at Kamenz, Saxony, Germany, Oct. 26, 1886—. German composer and musicologist. He is the author of Musiktheoretische Laienfiibel (1922). His compositions include numerous orchestral works, chamber music, and songs.

Unger, Rudolf. b. 1876—. German historian of literature. His two-volume study Hannann und die Aufklärung, Studien zur Vorgeschichte des romantischen Geistes im 18. Jahrhundert (1911) marked a new departure in German literary historiography through its successful synthesis of individual biography with the analysis of intellectual trends. Others of his studies are Herder, Novalis, Kleist, Studien über die Entwicklung des Todesproblems (1922), Literaturgeschichte als Problemgeschichte (1924), and Aufsätze zur Prinzipienlehre der Literaturgeschichte (1929).

Unggi (ung'gē'). [Japanese, Yuki.] Seaport in NE Korea. It was developed by the Japanese as a port to serve C Manchuria. It has a good harbor. Pop. ab. 20,000.

Unie van Suid-Afrika (ü.nē vān soif'ä'f'ri.kä). See Union of South Africa.

Uniformity, Act of. In English history: 1. An act of Parliament, passed in 1549, which provided for uniformity of religious service. 2. An act of Parliament passed in 1662. It obliged holders of church livings to be ordained by a bishop, to assent to the Book of Common Prayer, to renounce the Covenant, to declare the unlawfulness of bearing arms against the sovereign, and to make oath of canonical obedience. Many clergymen, the Nonconformists, resigned their benefices rather than sign. Unigenitus Dei Filius (ü.ni.jen'it.us de'i fil'i.us). [Eng. trans., "Only-begotten Son of God."] Bull promulgated (1713) by Pope Clement XI, in which the Jansenists were condemned.

Union (ün'yön). City in E Missouri, county seat of Franklin County. 2,917 (1950).

Union. City in N South Carolina, county seat of Union County, ab. 60 mi. NW of Columbia. It was settled in 1791. Pop. 9,730 (1950).

Union, Act of. In British history: 1. Statute of 1535-36, which enacted the political union of Wales to England. 2. Statute of 1706, which united the kingdoms of England and Scotland on and after May 1, 1707. 3. Statute of 1800, which united the kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland on and after Jan. 1, 1801.

Union (ö.nyön'), La. See La Union.

Union (ö.nyön'), La. See La Unión.

Union, the. See United States.

Union and Southern Rights Party. See Union Rights Party.

Union Beach. Borough in NE New Jersey, in Monmouth County. 3,636 (1950).

Union Canal. Canal in S Scotland, in Midlothian, West Lothian, and Stirlingshire. It extends W from Edinburgh across West Lothian to connect with the Forth and Clyde Canal in the vicinity of Falkirk, Stirlingshire. Length, ab. 32 mi.

Union City. City in E Indiana, in Randolph County; shipping point for produce and livestock. 3,572 (1950).

Union City. City in NE New Jersey, in Hudson County. It is chiefly a residential community, with some light industry. 55,537 (1950).

Union City. Borough in NW Pennsylvania, in Erie County, in a petroleum area; manufactures of furniture and wood products. 3,911 (1950).

Union City. Town in NW Tennessee, county seat of Obion County; local trading center. 7,665 (1950).

Unión Cívica (ö.nyön' sä'ñe.kä). Argentine political organization founded (1889) by Leandro Alem and others to oppose the corrupt administration of President Miguel Juárez Celmán. On July 26, 1890, with the support of the fleet and part of the army, the Unión Cívica began the revolt which brought (July 31, 1890) Juárez Celmán's resignation.

Unión Cívica Radical (rä.tñe.käl'). Argentine political organization founded (1891) by Leandro Alem when the already established Unión Cívica refused to oppose the presidential candidacy of Luis Sáenz Peña. The Unión Cívica Radical failed to achieve its purpose, Alem being arrested (April, 1892) and exiled a month before the election in which Sáenz Peña was victorious.

Union Colony. See under Greeley, Colo.

Union Française (ü.nyön' frä'n.séz). French name of the French Union.

Unión General del Trabajo (ö.nyön' nä.nä.räl' del trä.bä'nö). See UGT.

Union Jack. National flag of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland when used in a small form as a jack, i.e., displayed at the end of the bowsprit. The name "union jack" has come wrongly to be applied to the larger union flag itself. It is formed by the union of the cross of Saint George (red on a white field), the diagonal cross or saltire of Saint Andrew (white on a blue field), and the diagonal cross or saltire of Saint Patrick (red on a white field). The jack is not flown on shore.

Union League Club. Social and political (Republican) club, organized at New York in 1863, and incorporated in 1865. Its stated objects at the time of its organization during the Civil War were "to promote, encourage, and sustain, by all proper means, absolute and unequalled loyalty to the government of the United States; to discountenance and rebuke, by moral and social influences, all disloyalty to said government, and every attempt against the integrity of the Nation"; and also to establish a library and art gallery for the collection of literature, works of art, and military trophies relating to the war. Similar clubs were formed in other cities.

Union Magazine, The. New York monthly, published from 1847 to 1852. The magazine printed contributions by Edgar Allan Poe, including To Helen, The Bells, and The Poetic Principle. Among other contributors were William Gilmore Simms, Henry David Thoreau, and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Union Now. Organization established in 1939 which took its designation and its basic principles from a book of the same name by Clarence K. Streit. It espouses a union of democratic countries (specifically, of the U.S. and Great Britain) organized along the lines of American federalism.

Union of Burma (bér'ma). Official name of Burma.

Union of Heilbronn (hîl.bron'). See Heilbronn, Union of.

Union of India (in'di.ä). See India, Union of.

Union of Malaya (ma.lä'ä). A former name of the Federation of Malaya.

Union of South Africa (af'ri.kä). [South African Dutch, Unie van Suid-Afrika.] Legislative union, under the British crown, in the southernmost part of Africa, bounded on the W and S by the South Atlantic Ocean, on the E by the Indian Ocean and Mozambique, and on the N by Southern Rhodesia, Bechuanaland, and South-West Africa. Capitals: executive, Pretoria; legislative, Capetown; area, 472,494 sq. mi. (including Walvis Bay); pop. 11,418,349, including 2,372,690 Europeans (1946).

History and Government. The Union was established May 31, 1910, under an act of the British Parliament passed in 1909, uniting the self-governing colonies of Cape Colony, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony. In the Union these colonies became provinces, under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State provinces respectively. The executive power of the Union is exercised by a governor general appointed by the sovereign and assisted by a council chosen by himself. The legislative power is vested in a Parliament consisting of the sovereign, a senate of 40 members (of whom eight are nominated by the governor general, while 32 are elected from the several provinces) and a house of assembly of 150 members elected from the provinces. The capital and seat of government is Pretoria; the seat of the legislature is Capetown. The Union fought with the other members of the British Commonwealth and the Allies in both world wars. At the end of World War I the Union was given the former German colony of South-West Africa as a mandate under the League of Nations. She continues to administer it today as a trust territory under the United Nations, although in the intervening years she tried to have the territory incorporated as a province within the Union.

Terrain and Climate. The Union of South Africa is largely an upland country, occupying the high plateau S of the Limpopo and Orange rivers, mostly at elevations of 3,000 to 6,000 ft., reaching a peak elevation of 10,761 ft. in the Drakensberg. The coastal lowland is everywhere comparatively narrow; between the coast and the plateau are a series of mountain ridges and escarpments, separated by deep valleys. Extreme climatic variations are found in the Union: in the NW is a desert region; the SW has a Mediterranean type of climate, with winter rainfall; the C and S central plateau has a dry upland climate; to the E both elevation and rainfall increase; the E coastal lowland of Natal has a moist subtropical climate. Because of the elevation, the plateau region has a bracing climate with warm summers and mild, dry winters; frost is usual in the winter season.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Agriculture is the basic occupation of the majority of the population; the farming of the Union is about as diversified as its climate. The dry plateau areas are largely extensive range lands, used for grazing of sheep and Angora goats. In the E, more moist, plateau region the summer rainfall is sufficient for the growing of grains, maize, kaffir corn, cotton, potatoes, and beans; cattle are raised for meat and for dairying. Sugar cane and pineapples are grown in the Natal lowland, in addition to other crops. In the SW part of the Union, in the Cape of Good Hope province, vineyards and orange groves are numerous, and in addition a great variety of fruits, wheat, and tobacco are important crops. Gold is by far the most important mineral resource of the country, and the chief mining region of the Rand (Witwatersrand) in the Transvaal has accounted for roughly half of the world's gold production in recent years. Coal is mined in the Transvaal and Natal, and diamonds, copper, and numerous other minerals are produced. Railway mileage within the Union totaled 11,877 mi. in 1949, and in addition rail links extended into Mozambique, Bechuanaland (connecting with Rhodesia), and South-West Africa. There is an extensive road network. Capetown, Durban, Port Elizabeth, and East London are the principal ports. In recent years there has been considerable development of manufacturing, stimulated by a shortage of imported goods during World War II.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. [Abbreviated U.S.S.R.; often called Russia, or the Soviet Union; Russian, Союз Советских Социалистических Республик, abbreviated U.S.S.R.] Country of Eurasia, occupying the entire E part of Europe and N and W central Asia, extending from the Baltic Sea to the Pacific Ocean, and from C Asia to the Arctic Ocean. It is bordered on the W by Norway, Finland, the Baltic Sea, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Rumania; on the SW by the Black Sea and Turkey; on the S by Iran, Afghanistan, Sinkiang, the Mongolian People's Republic, Manchuria, and Korea; on the E by the Sea of Japan, Soya Strait (separating Sakhalin Island from Hokkaido, Japan), the Pacific Ocean, and Bering Strait (separating NE Siberia from Alaska); and on the N by the Arctic Ocean. Within this vast realm lies one sixth of the land area of the world (excluding Antarctica), extending across 170 degrees of longitude, or nearly halfway around the world. The S extremity of the U.S.S.R. in C Asia lies just N of 35° N. latitude, and the N extremity of the mainland, Cape Chelyuskin, reaches nearly to latitude 78° N. Though it is by far the largest country in the world, extensive portions of the U.S.S.R. are of limited productive value, because of inaccessibility or severe winter climatic conditions. Over 3,700,000 sq. mi. of Siberia is underlain by permanently frozen ground, "permafrost." Most of the major rivers of Siberia flow N to the Arctic Ocean, which is frozen most of the year and maintained open for limited navigation only for about three or four months during the summer. The chief ports are Riga and Leningrad on the Baltic Sea, Murmansk and Arkhangelsk on the NW Arctic coast, Odessa, Nikolaev, Zhdanov, Rostov, Novorossiisk, and Batumi on the Black Sea, and Vladivostok on the Pacific. A single railroad, the Trans-Siberian, crosses the entire country from W to E; though a rail net is moderately well developed in European Russia, E Siberia has only a few rail lines. The U.S.S.R. is largely a continental country, with limited access to seaports and great inland distances. Inland waterways carry a heavy traffic. In C Asia are extensive arid regions, in which agriculture is possible only in oases. The principal agricultural region of the country occupies a broad wedge extending from the Finnish border E to Lake Baikal and from the Black Sea coast, on the S, E to the same point. Within this so-called fertile triangle are concentrated most of the population, agricultural land, industrial cities, and developed resources of the U.S.S.R. To the N of it is the vast region of the northern forest, a zone of fir, spruce, and pine forests and extensive swamps, in which agriculture is less important than lumbering. To the S of the fertile triangle are the deserts and dry steppes, and various high mountain chains of C Asia. There has been a relatively rapid development of mineral resources and irrigated agriculture in this area in recent years. Among nations of the world, the U.S.S.R. ranks first in area and third in population.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. "A socialist state of workers and peasants" according to the constitution of 1936, the U.S.S.R. is organized as a federal union of 16 constituent Soviet Socialist Republics, which are in turn further subdivided into units known as krai (territory), oblast (region), natsionalnii okrug (national territory), avtonomnii oblast (autonomous region), and avtonomnii respublik (autonomous republic). Smaller units of local government are rayon (area), gorod (city), and soviet (district). Of the 16 republics, one, the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, is dominant in both area and population. The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. is the principal legislative body of the nation;

it is composed of two houses, the Soviet of the Union, and the Soviet of Nationalities. The former has one representative for each 300,000 of the population, and the latter is composed of 25 deputies from each of the 16 republics, 11 from each autonomous republic, five from each autonomous region, and one from each national area. Terms of membership in both houses are four years. The administration of the U.S.S.R. is carried on by the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R. (often referred to as the Politburo) and their subordinate committees and ministers. Since virtually all phases of political and economic life are subject to their administration, the total number of ministries is approximately 60. Each republic has a government which is similar in its structure to the national government, and other administrative areas, with a few exceptions, are also similar, though limited in their scope to the area administered. Georgi Malenkov, as the chairman of the Politburo, exercises the supreme executive authority in the U.S.S.R. for a five-year term. The economic foundation of the U.S.S.R. is a state socialist system, with public ownership of means of production, including the land, mineral and water resources, forests, factories, transportation facilities, and other enterprises. This property may exist in the form of a state-owned enterprise or as a collective or cooperative society. Private ownership is confined to personal property, and private enterprise is limited to individual or family units, in general either peasant proprietors or small handicraft shops, but these play a minor role in the national economy. The State Planning Committee is primarily responsible for the overall planning and development of the national economy. Trade is also in the hands of state organs, including foreign trade. Government in the U.S.S.R. has encompassed practically all phases of life: political, social, economic, and cultural. The Communist Party, the only legal political party in the U.S.S.R., and the ruling group, contains about seven million members. Many representatives in the Supreme Soviet are not party members; high administrative officials are, however, almost exclusively Communists. The republics have the right to conduct their own foreign affairs; the only application of this provision thus far appears in the representation of the Ukrainian and Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republics in the United Nations. The admission of all 16 republics to the United Nations as individual voting members was strongly opposed by the U.S. and the United Kingdom on the grounds that these units did not, in fact, constitute separate national entities. In the period of World War II (1939-45), the U.S.S.R. annexed a considerable territory, amounting to approximately 425,000 sq. mi. This included Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania in 1940 (not recognized by the U.S. as of 1953), E Poland in 1939 (finally demarcated in 1944), parts of Karelia and the Petsamo district from Finland in 1940 (confirmed in 1944 by armistice), Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina from Rumania in 1940, and Trans-Carpathian Ukraine from Czechoslovakia in 1945. Tannu-Tuva became the new Tuva Autonomous Oblast in 1944, and Karafuto (the S half of Sakhalin Island) and the Kurile Islands were obtained from Japan in 1945. The N half of East Prussia was acquired from Germany in 1945, and became the Kaliningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. Capital, Moscow; area, 8,175,750 sq. mi. (1939), 8,598,500 sq. mi. (1950); pop. 170,467,186 (1939), 203,000,000 (est. 1950).

Terrain and Climate. From the Baltic Sea E to the Yenisei River in W central Siberia extends a vast lowland, broken only by the Ural Mountains on the E margin of Europe. On the S this lowland extends to the Black Sea, the Caucasus Mountains, and the mountains of C Asia. It is not a uniform plain; in the NW part it is often rolling, with many lakes and marshes; in C European Russia it is either level or hilly; in W Siberia is an almost perfectly flat plain, with numerous large swamps. A series of mountain ranges borders this lowland on the S, including the Carpathians in the SW, the Caucasus Mountains between the Black and Caspian seas, and the Pamir, Tien Shan, and Altai on the S.

East of the Yenisei, the land is largely rugged, consisting of high mountain chains and hilly regions, separated by a few broad river valleys and basins. Only one major river, the Amur, reaches the Pacific; the other principal streams of this region, the Lena, Indigirka, Yana, and Kolyma, all drain N to the Arctic. The lowland region is drained by the Yenisei, Ob, and Northern Dvina, which flow to the Arctic; by the Western Dvina, which flows to the Baltic; by the Dnieper and Don, which reach the Black Sea; and by the Volga, which flows into the Caspian Sea, and the Amu Darya and Syr Darya, which flow into the Aral Sea, both inland seas. The climate of the U.S.S.R. is largely continental, with great seasonal extremes of heat and cold; over most of the country winters are long and summers comparatively short. In the W, bordering the Baltic, there is a maximum of maritime influence with mild summers and cold winters. In the Ukraine summers are hot and winters cold. In Siberia the seasonal extreme reaches a maximum: Verkhoyansk, in NE Siberia, has recorded 90° below zero and 93° above zero; here only about four months from mid-May to mid-September are above freezing, and winter is prolonged and bitterly cold. In S Siberia summers are warmer and longer than in the N, but winters are very cold, even at Vladivostok, on the Pacific coast. The Arctic coast and islands of the U.S.S.R. have no summer at all, and raw, cold winters; the sea is frozen for about eight months and strong winds blow. In the extreme S part of the U.S.S.R., sheltered behind the Caucasus and adjoining the ranges of C Asia, are the only subtropical regions of the U.S.S.R.; here the summers are long and hot, and winters mild. At Termez, a temperature of 122° F. has been recorded; this is the heat record for the U.S.S.R. Cotton, tea, oranges, dates, and grapes are grown in these subtropical regions. Most of the U.S.S.R. has a humid climate, with the exception of the desert and steppe regions of SE Europe and C Asia, which suffer from aridity. Occasionally desert conditions are extended into the Volga grain-farming regions when there is a severe drought and the dreaded hot winds blow from the SE. In the past such variations in the weather have occasioned severe famine, but under present-day mechanized agriculture, when crops fail, the personnel and machinery of collective farms in the area may be transferred to other areas to work. At the present time an extensive shelter-belt and irrigation program is under development in this critical area between the grain lands of the Ukraine and lower Volga basin and the dry steppe country.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Prior to the Russian Revolution Russia was fundamentally a peasant agricultural country. Farming practices were extremely backward, in many cases being typical of European agriculture during the Middle Ages, with monoculture, the three-field system, and a parceling of land. Most of the land was owned by the nobility and the kulaks. Industrial development was in its infancy; there were textile mills and other light industries in the central industrial region around Moscow and Ivanovo, and at St. Petersburg, and there were some metallurgical centers in the Donets Basin and the Urals. Since the Russian Revolution the industrial development of the U.S.S.R. has been subject to plan. Production goals were set in a series of Five Year Plans; factories and electric power stations, railways, machinery, roads, and new cities were built. The first Five Year Plan (1928-32) was forced to depend heavily upon imports of machinery and upon outside technical help. By the time of the fourth Five Year Plan (1946-50) the Soviet economy had reached a sufficiently industrialized level so that it undertook its own construction and expansion programs with its own personnel. During the entire period of industrial growth in the U.S.S.R. the greatest emphasis has been placed upon the development of electric power, iron and steel, machinery, and machine-tool industries, since upon these all other industries depend. Agriculture was collectivized and mechanized largely under the second Five Year Plan (1933-37) and since. Individual farms were grouped into collective farms (kolkhozes) and state farms (sovkhozes). Tractors, combines, cultivators, and other machinery were provided for farming. A further amalgamation of collective farms took place between 1950 and 1952, in which the number of units was reduced from 254,000 to 97,000. Cultivated land occupied ab. 10 percent of the total national area in 1947; of this, some 360 million acres, or 6.5 percent of the national area, was sown to crops in 1952. Wheat is the chief crop, occupying ab. 30 percent of the total crop land, followed by rye, oats, sugar beets, potatoes, and barley, in that order. In 1950 the U.S.S.R. was the world's largest producer of rye, wheat, potatoes, and beet sugar. Grazing lands (including some poor steppe) occupy 15 percent of the total area, and forests cover over 41 percent of the U.S.S.R. Lumbering is an important activity through the entire northern forest zone except the inaccessible timber areas of the north and of E Siberia. The U.S.S.R. has one of the great timber reserves of the world, and utilization is only partial at present. Industrial crops such as soybeans, cotton, and kok-sagyz (artificial rubber plant) have increased greatly in recent years. The U.S.S.R. is the richest country in the world in variety of mineral resources, with deposits of almost every known important mineral. She ranks second among countries of the world in the production of coal, gold, platinum, cement, iron, and asbestos; first in the production of manganese; third in the production of petroleum, aluminum, copper, and zinc; and fifth in the production of lead (all data for 1950). The chief concentration of mineral production lies in the Ural Mountains, the major exceptions being the coal fields (Donets Basin, Kuznetsk Basin, Karaganda, and the Moscow coal basin) and the oil fields (Baku, Grozny, Maikop, and the Ural-Emba basins). Basic production data for the U.S.S.R. are shown below:

Item	Unit	Production 1950	1955 Plan
Electric power	million kwh.	90.1	162.5
Coal	million tons (metric)	290	375
Pig iron	million tons (metric)	19.4	34.0
Steel	million tons (metric)	27.3	44.2
Petroleum	million tons (metric)	37.8	70.0
Cement	million tons (metric)	10.4	22.8
Cotton textiles	million sq. meters	3,815	6,142
Woolen textiles	million sq. meters	167	257
Shoes	million pairs	205	318
Automotive vehicles	units	405,000	485,000
Tractors	units	96,000	115,000

The manufacturing industries of the U.S.S.R. are very widely scattered in the larger and smaller cities and towns. Moscow and its immediate environs account for about one sixth of the national industrial production, and have a concentration of consumer-goods industries as well as important machine-tool and automotive industries. Leningrad ranks second. The coal-mining regions of the Donets and Kuznetsk basins have seen the development of large agglomerations of heavy industry, including iron and steel and chemical industries. During World War II there was a forced eastward migration of industry, accompanied by extensive destruction in the enemy-occupied regions in the W; since the end of the war there has been a trend toward developing new industries on a regional basis, with the chief centers of heavy industry in the E (Urals, Kuznetsk) being developed much more rapidly than the old major centers in the W (Donets Basin, Moscow-Tula region). The result has been a greater dispersion of manufacturing in the U.S.S.R. In overall production of agricultural, mineral, and industrial products, the U.S.S.R. ranks second in the world, being surpassed only by the U.S. Transport facilities in the U.S.S.R. include inland waterways (71,000 mi. in 1952) and railroads (ab. 73,000 mi. in 1950). The inland waterway system is of great importance; timber, grain, oil, salt, coal, and other minerals are carried. Approximately 46 percent of total traffic is on the Volga system, which serves the heart of European Russia. Railways carry a heavy traffic and cover European Russia with a moderately dense network; elsewhere lines are farther apart, excepting in the Urals and Kuznetsk Basin. Railway development has been particularly rapid in the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic, in the region linking Siberia and the Urals with C Asia. The entire cross-country distance, from Brest, on the Polish border, to Vladivostok, on the Pacific coast, is ab. 6,500 mi., and requires a journey of 10 days by rail. Roads and highways in the U.S.S.R. have not yet reached great importance in the overall transport picture, though there has been a steady increase in road mileage and number of trucks, buses, and automobiles. In 1952 there were ab. 175,000 mi. of improved roads in the country, most of which were gravelled. Sea transport also plays a minor role, because of the fact that seaways between the various ports of the U.S.S.R. are extremely long and circuitous, so that domestic transport needs are served only to a small degree by such routes. International trade is relatively small in volume. In terms of economic development, the U.S.S.R. is still in the stage of active industrial expansion, and the consumers still obtain a smaller share of the total industrial output than is the case in Western Europe and the U.S.

Year	Gross Industrial Output	Producer- goods Industries	Consumer- goods Industries	% of Total (Consumer)
1940	138.5	84.5	54.0	39%
1950	242.4	170.4	72.0	30%

In 1951-52 military expenditures occupied first place in the national budget.

History. To the Establishment of Kien. There are traces of human settlement in northern and southern Russia dating back to the Paleolithic Period, including a notable arctic fishing culture. In the south, on the rolling steppe, the native peoples were subjected to repeated invasions from east and west, the conquerors imposing their rule over the basic population, who continued to till the soil while the rulers changed; when the flourishing Greek world expanded into the Black Sea area in the 7th century B.C. to plant colonies along the north shore, the Scythians were in control, and these were later pushed out by the Sarmatians, beginning in the 3rd century A.C. Later still there were invasions by the European Goths (3rd century A.D.), who became established in the Crimea, the Huns from the east (4th century), the Avars (6th century), and the Khazars (7th century). The last built up a strong kingdom centered about the lower Volga River and in contact with the Byzantine Empire. The Bulgars and the Hungarians also invaded the territory in the 8th and 9th centuries. Early in the 9th century the Northmen or Vikings, who were in motion all through Europe, began to push into northern Russia on trading expeditions that carried them down the principal waterways to the Khazar kingdom and Constantinople; colonies of these warriors established themselves in posts along the trade routes and soon achieved a reputation as mercenary soldiers. The Rus or Varangians, as they were called, achieved some degree of local power and, traditionally in 862, the first dynasty of the Rus was established at Novgorod, on Lake Ilmen in the north. Rurik, the semi-legendary founder of the dynasty, remained at Novgorod, but strong ties were established with other Varangians at Kiev, further along the route to Constantinople, and Oleg, Rurik's successor, moved the center of Russian power to Kiev.

The Ascendancy of Moscow. Under Oleg (879-912), the Kievan state became important; Constantinople was raided (911) and a trade treaty advantageous to the Russians was signed with the Byzantine emperor. Igor (912-945), who succeeded Oleg, again raided Constantinople and obtained further privileges, and Igor's wife, Olga, was converted to Christianity during a visit to the metropolis; the incident is indicative of the growing strength of Kiev and of the cultural as well as economic ties it was making with the Byzantine Empire. The expansion of the Kievan protectorate over the native Slavs continued under Oleg's son Sviatoslav (964-972), who defeated the waning Khazar kingdom (965) and the Bulgars (967) to bring Russian dominance to an area extending from Novgorod to the Danube on the west and the Volga on the east. Sviatoslav moved his capital to the Danube but could not remain there for long, since an invasion from the east by the Pechenegs threatened Kiev. He defeated them (968) but later, having been driven from Bulgaria by the Byzantine emperor John I, was killed by them. His youngest son, Vladimir I, officially adopted Christianity (Eastern Orthodox rite) in 988, thus tying Kiev still further to Constantinople, since the recognized church authority was vested in the Patriarch of Constantinople. Yaroslav, who succeeded his father after a sharp struggle with his fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hér; pin, pine; not, nôte, mōve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; d, d o r j; s, s o sh; t, t o r ch; brothers, in addition to promulgating a legal code, extended Kievan suzerainty still further on east and west, made alliances through marriage of his children with several of the western states, and built Kiev into an architecturally imposing city. His reign marks the height of Kievan Russia. Following his death a complex system of inheritance of the throne was instituted, with the result that dynastic rivalry and consequent alliances and appeals to foreign powers eventually caused the fall of Kiev to pressure from the Cumans, who had invaded southern Russia from the east. During a brief period of calm Vladimir II (1113-25), Mstislav I (1125-32), and Rostislav (1159-68) brought Kiev to prosperous heights. In the meanwhile, the Cuman pressure from the south was bleeding the state's economy and large numbers of the peasantry migrated north and east, settling notably in the regions controlled by the Principality of Suzdal (Vladimir), feudal Galicia, and republican Novgorod. The duchy of Kiev fell finally to a younger branch of the dynasty ruling Suzdal (Vladimir), and after Kiev had been conquered (1169) the center of power shifted to Suzdal. No central power, however, existed any longer in Russia, and pressure from the west (Estonia was lost to Denmark in 1219) and the south, where the Cumans cut off all trade routes, continued, with the result that Russia was broken into a number of weak states. Early in the 13th century the Mongols (or Tartars), who had spread across Asia, invaded Russia and under Batu Khan swept across southern Russia (1237-40), destroying Kiev and the other principal cities. The Tartar khanate of the Golden Horde was established (1242), with its center at Sarai on the lower Volga, and from there the Tartars levied tribute on all the Russian princes, though aside from this the Russians were permitted to go their own way. At the same time that the Tartars had advanced into southern Russia, the western powers exerted pressure from the north; the military genius of Alexander Nevsky defeated the Swedes and the Teutonic Knights, but great areas were lost to the Lithuanians. During this period the only city to remain untouched was Novgorod, whose ties with the west (it was the eastern depot of the Hanseatic League) made it the commercial center of Russia. The Tartars, whose policy of non-interference was accompanied by a program of keeping the several Russian states from consolidating power, had at the beginning of the 14th century delegated the collection of tribute to one of the Russian princes, the principal ruler, the grand prince of Vladimir. However, this privilege was bought (1328) by Ivan I, ruler of Moscow, which until then had been only a minor principedom within the principality of Suzdal. By the time of his successor, Simeon I, this collaboration with the Golden Horde had brought Moscow to the principal place among Russian cities. The center of the Russian church was shifted to Moscow in 1325, thus giving Moscow a further prop to supremacy. In 1380 the Muscovite prince Dmitri openly opposed the Golden Horde and, meeting them in combat at Kulikovo on the Don, defeated them; it was not a disaster in the military sense for the Tartars, but their unchallenged supremacy was gone and Russia's principal rival was thenceforth Lithuania. The resurgence of Tartar power under the conqueror Tamerlane, which again established the Mongols and brought them far into southern Russia, resulted principally in the destruction of the Golden Horde by Tamerlane (1391); later Tartar invasions, such as the one that rolled nearly to Moscow in 1451, were only incidents in the establishing of Moscow's power. Under Ivan III (1462-1505) Novgorod was conquered, thus bringing to Moscow the great trading area eastward to the Urals that had been controlled by that city, and foreign influence (Hanseatic, Lithuanian) was driven out. Ivan further extended his realm by subduing rival states, notably the Tartars (1480), Tver (1485), and Lithuania (1503). Constantinople had fallen in 1453 to the Turks and Ivan, who married the niece of the last of the Byzantine emperors, claimed for Moscow the title of the "Third Rome," the center of Orthodox Christianity having shifted to Russia with the end of the Byzantine Empire. Other Byzantine concepts were introduced: Ivan became autocrat (Caesar, whence Czar), a court ceremonial and protocol were established, and Russian influence in the West grew greater.

Ivan the Terrible to Peter the Great. The expansion of Moscow continued under Vasily III (1553-33) and Ivan IV (1533-84). Ivan, known as Ivan the Terrible, pushed eastward to take the Volga regions of Kazan and Astrakhan from the Tartars, and in the years that followed Russian traders moved eastward past the Urals into Siberia, where the Cossacks under Yermak were acquiring a Russian empire for the czar; the Pacific was reached by 1637. Ivan was the first to adopt the title Czar (1547) when he was crowned; he also established a council of ministers and called the first national assembly (1549), principally to combat the power of the boyars or nobility. The struggle between the crown and the feudal lords was marked by the gradual worsening of the condition of the peasantry. As taxation and military demands grew stronger, more and more of the agricultural workers, in danger of losing their lands because of indebtedness, fled to the newly conquered lands to the south and east, with the result that there was a severe labor shortage in the center of Russia. To remedy this a form of serfdom was instituted to tie the worker to the land; when land was sold the worker went along with it as part of the sale; eventually this principle deteriorated and the serf became himself a chattel to be sold or traded at will. In return for the power thus granted to the landlord, the crown exacted its own increase in powers, until the czar became an absolute ruler. This revolution did not, however, occur overnight. Ivan the Terrible, forced to flee from Moscow in 1564 when the boyars revolted, did his best to crush all opposition by ruthless methods. One result of the internal weakness therefrom arising was a number of foreign wars, especially against the Swedes (1557-82) and Poles (1581-82), in which Russia lost some territory; notable also was the sack of Moscow by the Tartars in 1571. Ivan's last years were spent in an insane effort to wash out in blood the opposition of the boyars, and at his death the actual power in Russia was taken over by these nobles, notably Boris Godunov, Ivan's son-in-law. Boris was made czar in 1598, but within a few years there began the so-called Time of Troubles, when there arose several claimants to the throne, each purporting to be Dmitri, a son of Ivan the Terrible who had died in mysterious circumstances some years earlier. Rival claimants were Sigismund of Poland and his son, Sigismund invading Russia and advancing on Moscow. This brought a nationalist coalition against Sigismund and the Poles were ejected (1612). A national assembly was called (1613) and Michael Romanov, a member of a noble family related by marriage to the dynasty of Rurik, was elected czar; the Romanovs reigned until 1917. In consolidating his position, Michael was forced to grant further concessions, more firmly fixing the near-slavery of the serfs and weakening the power of the national assembly. In order to maintain peace in this difficult time, he also had to give up some territory to Sweden and Poland and to refuse to accept the practical conquest of the Crimea by the Cossacks for fear of involvement with Turkey. Under Alexis Romanov (1645-76), the power of the throne was firmly established; a new legal code was adopted and several revolts, notably the Cossack peasant revolt (1670-71) under Stenka Razin, were put down. Under Alexis and his son Theodore III the Ukraine was retaken, both Smolensk and Kiev again becoming Russian. This brought the Russian border up to the Turkish lands in southern Europe and during the reign of Theodore the first of the long series of wars against the Turks was fought. On Theodore's death (1682) his brother Ivan V and his half brother Peter I became joint rulers under the regency of Ivan's sister Sophia. In 1689 Sophia was overthrown by Peter's supporters and thenceforward he was sole ruler, taking actual control in 1694. Peter's reign, lasting until 1725, has earned for him the name "the Great," for it was during his rule that Russia became one of the great powers. During the first years of his reign Azov was taken (1696) from the Turks, thus beginning the conquest of the Crimea, and peace was established with China (1698) as the aftermath of a quarrel arising from Russian penetration of the Amur region. Peter recognized Russia's need to advance beyond the straitened economy she followed and chose as his course the opening of contact with the West through the Baltic Sea, then virtually a Swedish lake. After a journey in France, England, and the Netherlands, learning Western ways and studying shipbuilding, and making fruitless efforts to obtain allies among the Western powers for a campaign against Sweden, Peter returned home to put down a military revolt, and to end, victoriously, the war against Turkey. Allied with the Danes and Poles, who were almost immediately defeated, he engaged (1700-21) in the Great Northern War against Sweden; at first Russia met only reverses, but the temporizing of Charles XII of Sweden, who concentrated on smashing Poland, permitted Peter to recover and at Poltava (1709) Sweden was defeated. Charles fled to Turkey but, despite a Turkish victory on the Prut (1711) which forced Peter to give up Azov, the Swedish defeat was certain and in 1721, by the Treaty of Nystad, Russia gained Livonia, Estonia, Ingria, and Karelia, thus winning Peter's outlet to the Baltic. He had built (1703) the city of St. Petersburg near the Baltic and this became his capital. The consolidation of the monarchy continued under Peter and it was in this period that the council of boyars was eliminated and a bureaucracy established to conduct affairs; the patriarchy was abolished and in its place a synod ruled ecclesiastical matters; the army was reformed on a semi-conservative basis and a navy was established. The result was to "westernize" Russia to a great extent and to provide the impetus whereby Russia became during the next century the most influential European power.

From Peter to the Congress of Vienna. During the several short reigns that followed Peter's death, Russia gained control of Poland in the War of the Polish Succession (1733-35), to so great an extent that within 60 years that country had disappeared, and regained Azov from the Turks (1739). But the growing Germanization of the administration led to a revolt (1741) that placed Elizabeth, Peter the Great's youngest daughter, on the throne. Elizabeth's followers eliminated the German advisers; Sweden was defeated in a war (1741-43) that brought Finnish territory to Russia; and Russia entered the Seven Years' War (1756-63) against Frederick the Great of Prussia, with some success. But Elizabeth died in 1762, after naming her nephew Peter III as her successor, and Peter, a German petty prince and an ardent admirer of Frederick the Great, at once took Russia out of the war, though Prussia's defeat was imminent. The great dissatisfaction thus caused was not assuaged by an edict freeing the nobility from state service, and six months after he became czar Peter was deposed and killed. His wife, a German princess who had changed her name from Sophia to Catherine when she was baptized in the Orthodox faith, succeeded him as Catherine II. Catherine was one of the enlightened monarchs of the age, well-read, a student of Voltaire and the French philosophers, and under her rule Russia rose to new heights. The administration, especially after the Pugachev revolt (1773-75), was reformed; the rights of the nobility and of the towns were strengthened, as were the prerogatives of the crown; the educational system was improved; the arts and letters were fostered to the point where a considerable section of liberal opinion was in formation. Turkey was badly defeated in two wars (1768-72, 1787-92), giving Russia great new tracts of land in the south and west; Poland was divided among Prussia, Austria, and Russia in successive partitions (1772, 1793, 1795), finally disappearing as an independent entity; and the Crimea was annexed (1783). However, nothing was done about the scandalous condition of the serfs and, toward the end of her reign, when the French Revolution had caused a distinct change of heart in the erstwhile liberal monarch, Catherine turned to measures of repression of liberal opinion. Catherine's insane son Paul I made a feeble attempt at limiting the duties that might be required of the serfs, but his belief in autocracy led him to extreme repressive acts. He joined in the second coalition against France (1799-1800) and then, in disgust with the way Austria was conducting the war, withdrew; he was murdered (1801) by plotters and was succeeded by Alexander I. Alexander began his reign with strong motions toward liberal reform, suggested the possible adoption of a constitution, and limited slightly the power of their masters over the serfs, but internal reforms were forced to give way to the exigencies of a foreign policy that kept Russia at war, and by the end of his reign Alexander was a thoroughgoing reactionary. Georgia, the Caucasus region, and Daghestan were gained from Persia; Bessarabia was taken from Turkey; Finland became a Russian duchy after a war with Sweden. Alexander joined in the third coalition against France (1805-07), but after Austerlitz (1805), Eylau (1807), and Friedland (1807), Russia was glad to sign the lenient treaty of Tilsit, whereby Russia and France became allies. By 1810, however, the clash between Russian and French interests led to a break; Russian trade was injured by her adherence to the Continental System and trade was reopened with neutrals; suspicion that Napoleon was planning to reestablish Poland was confirmed by intercepted documents; Napoleon, after a show of seeking the hand of Alexander's sister, married the Austrian princess Marie Louise. In June, 1812, the war began with Napoleon's great attack; by September Moscow had fallen, but the Russians had burned the city and Napoleon was unable to establish winter quarters there, with the result that he began the long retreat that saw the wrecking of the French military power. The Russians were prominent in the Grand Alliance of 1813-15 that ended the Napoleonic threat to Europe, and at the Congress of Vienna Alexander himself led the Russian delegation and organized the Holy and Quadruple alliances. Russian influence toward the preservation of the principle of legitimacy was constant and Russian arms came into action to suppress revolts in Poland (1830-31) and Hungary (1848-49). Internal unrest plagued Russia constantly throughout the long period, culminating in the Russian Revolution of 1917.

From Nicholas I to Nicholas II. Nicholas, who succeeded Alexander in 1825, was completely the autocrat. His policy was consistently that of suppressing with vigor any attempt at liberal reform; under him was established the notorious "Third Section" or secret police, and censorship not only of publications but of the universities was instituted. A new law code was established (1832) and further limitations on landlords in regard to the serfs were attempted. These efforts, however, could not stop the continued growth of an aware public opinion, and underground socialist and peasant movements arose. Russian foreign policy, though dedicated to the principle of legitimacy, also continued its traditional expansionism; Armenia was annexed from Persia (1828) and Russian participation in the Greek revolt against Turkey (in the name of Christian orthodoxy against Mohammedanism, even though it was an attack by popular elements against a legitimate monarchy) brought another Turkish war (1828-29) that ended with Russian control of the eastern end of the Black Sea. The weakness of Turkey and the growing Russian influence over the Porte resulted in a series of crises and, despite Nicholas's attempts to secure some sort of understanding with England, in 1853 Russia found herself in the Crimean War. Nicholas died before the war ended and his son Alexander II soon negotiated a peace, even though it cost Russia control of the Danube and the cession of part of Bessarabia. Russian expansion, which had carried across the Bering Sea onto the North American continent, continued in the south of Turkistan and to the Amur River region in 1858; by 1859 the tribes of the Caucasus had been subdued, except for the Circassians, who required five more years of fighting before they gave in. A governor had been appointed for Siberia in 1847 and in the period 1864-65 the central Asian area was conquered; Vladivostok was founded in 1860. Russia withdrew from North America in 1867 when Alaska was sold to the U.S. Meanwhile, the question of serfdom had come to what appeared to be a satisfactory compromise. By an edict (March 3, 1861) the serfs were freed and land was allotted to them; the government paid for the land and was to be repaid over a number of years; the land was technically in the hands of village councils (*mir*s) which distributed and administered it. This reform of Alexander's was followed by others, establishing local fat, fäte, fär, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pull; th, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

administrative bodies (zemstvos), refashioning the judiciary, giving the towns self-government, bringing universal military service to all classes. Russia, however, after defeating Turkey in war (1877-78), met with a serious diplomatic reverse at the Congress of Berlin (1878), when the powers of Western Europe made it obvious that no further territorial gains at Turkey's expense would be permitted. The several terrorist societies which had grown up during the years of repression took this opportunity to foment the general discontent; as the result of one of their planned attacks on authority at all levels, Alexander was assassinated (1881) as he was about to put into action a plan for broadening popular government. Alexander III, who now came to the throne, reversed the liberal trend of his father and began to reassert the prerogatives of royalty and the nobility. To deflect popular discontent from the government, persecutions of minority groups were countenanced and encouraged by officials and a campaign of Russification in such areas as Poland was begun. Russian foreign policy, at first bent toward Austria and Germany (Three Emperors' League, 1881 et seq.), was turned in this period toward an alliance to contain the central powers, and in 1891 the Franco-Russian alliance, leading eventually to the Triple Entente, was instituted. This balancing of power blocs was eventually to lead to World War I. Alexander died in 1894 and was succeeded by Nicholas II, the last of the Romanov line. The influence of Count Sergey Witte on Russian development in the last decade of the 19th century was great; he fostered the industrialization of the country by government aid and the imposition of a high tariff, encouraged the opening of new mining industries and the building of railroads (the Trans-Siberian Railroad was begun in 1892 and the building of the Chinese Eastern Railway was agreed upon in 1896), put Russia on the gold standard (1897), and attempted to curtail unproductive spending. But industrialization of Russia meant the growth of an industrial working class and this in turn, composed of people living in miserable circumstances, provided a fertile field for the revolutionary ideas of the political underground. The defeat of Russia in the Russo-Japanese War, which was meant to be a means of exploiting Russian patriotism, brought on the explosive revolution of 1905; the czar was forced to grant a number of reforms, including the convocation of the first Duma (parliament). However, as soon as the crisis was past, the reaction set in and the reforms were negated. The consequent rise in agitation was met with strong repressive measures, which served only to strengthen opposition to the government and to spread revolutionary ideas still further. Agrarian reform was attempted by Stolypin (prime minister in 1906-11), but this and other reforms, and the long overdue expansion of industry, failed to keep pace with the growing unrest. Russia had concluded (1907) the series of ententes that brought her into opposition to the Triple Alliance, and with the heightening of the Balkan crises (1908-14) found herself engaged in World War I.

The Postwar Period. The Russian defeat in the war brought on the Russian Revolution (which see), and the attempts by the various anti-Bolshevik forces to overthrow the revolutionary regime. The end of hostilities (1921) found Russia stripped of Finland, the Baltic republics (Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania), Bessarabia, and parts of the new Polish republic. Moreover, the war effort and the disorders that followed on the heels of the revolution left the Russian economy in a state of collapse; industry and agriculture were stripped of both manpower and the means of production and communications and transportation were wrecked. V. I. Lenin, the leader of the Communists, faced by growing unrest even where he had drawn his strength during the civil war period, decided to retreat from the so-called war economy and in March, 1921, instituted the New Economic Policy, a plan whereby farm produce could legitimately be sold for profit and land and labor could be bought; private commercial enterprise was permitted and a monetary system was put into operation. The result was a rapid recovery from the condition of near chaos and the establishment of production at the levels obtaining before the war. Opposition to the Communist regime was widespread outside Russia, and though military intervention had failed, the nations of Europe, haunted by the vision of Communist revolution, maintained a hostile attitude toward the Bolsheviks. The Russo-German agreement at Rapallo (1922), in which the two pariahs, recently defeated Germany and anti-capitalist Russia, made common cause commercially and economically, caused criticism in the West; but in 1924 diplomatic recognition of the Bolsheviks, first extended by the MacDonald government of Great Britain, became general except for the U.S. The formation in 1922 of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics indicated the growing strength of Communist Russia and the constitution, adopted in 1924, brought with it a great degree of centralization of power; the Communist Party, working in the various constituents of the Union, welded it together in a country working as a unit. Lenin died in 1924 and, after a bitter struggle centering around continuation of the New Economic Policy and involving full play of revolutionary theories, Joseph Stalin, champion of the idea of socialism within one country, defeated Leon Trotsky, who maintained that the socialist experiment could succeed only if revolution were fostered internationally; Stalin, Trotsky being banished, eventually made his concept the official Communist policy and opponents of his plans were eliminated. The series of Five Year Plans that followed were intended to bring Russia industrially to the point where she would not depend on outside aid, especially in the matter of heavy industries. Simultaneously the collectivization of farms was speeded, voluntarily where possible, forcibly where necessary; the end results were that the majority of Russian farming was done on collective farms, the independent farmers (kulaks) were annihilated as a class, and (in part as a direct result of the collectivizing) a great famine occurred (1932-33). In the years between the two world wars Russia became somewhat less isolated; by 1934 she had become a member of the League of Nations. However, the existence of the Comintern (Third or Communist International), with its headquarters in Russia and controlling the policies of the various national communist parties, caused great distrust of Russian policy, and the international atmosphere, even if friendly on the surface, was never cordial between Russia and most other nations. The growth of Fascism and Nazism, actively anti-Communist, led to a Russian attempt to form a united front with the democracies against the rightist dictatorships, but the failure of the West to join Russia in the Spanish Civil War and the exclusion of Russia from the events leading to the Munich conference of 1938 caused Russia to seek elsewhere. Clashes with Germany and Japan (active fighting had occurred on the Siberian-Manchurian border between Russian and Japanese troops in 1938) became increasingly dangerous; however, allegedly to gain time to build a series of buffer lands, Russia signed an agreement with Germany (Aug. 23, 1939) that precipitated World War II.

World War II and Afterward. Russian victory in the war, despite her tremendous losses, was achieved by a great fighting machine aided by her wartime allies, especially the U.S., which sent much needed matériel. However, the diplomatic agreements reached at Tehran (1943), Yalta (1945), and Potsdam (1945) indicated that distrust still was a major factor in Russian foreign policy. Russian gains, while perhaps in proportion to the incalculable injuries she had received during the war, were nevertheless far greater than those accruing to her allies, and the suspicion grew that the Communist goal of world revolution, which the Stalinist policy officially rejected (the Comintern had been dissolved in 1943, but it was replaced by the Cominform after World War II), still remained the cornerstone of Russian policy. The U.S.S.R. had participated in the formation (1945) of the United Nations, but as the several international problems involving differences of opinion between Russia and other countries arose Russian reliance on her veto power in the Security Council took the place of recognition of majority rule. Attempts to reach agreement on the peace treaties with the defeated nations were blocked by lack of basic agreement; Russian intransigence was matched by rigid Western adherence to principle; and beginning with the Russian blockade of the Berlin enclave in 1948 matters rapidly approached the breaking-point. Eastern Europe, where Communist or Communist-dominated governments ruled in Poland, Czechoslovakia, eastern Germany, Hungary, Albania, Bulgaria, Rumania, and Yugoslavia (where Marshal Tito's refusal to accept Russian domination led to the only European Communist government not led by the U.S.S.R.), fell behind the "Iron Curtain" and once more, as it had ten years before, it became apparent that Russia was building a buffer zone to absorb attack or behind which to prepare an attack. The Korean War, in which the armies of China (completely conquered by Communist forces after World War II) fought the armies of the United Nations, was felt generally to have been engineered by Russia, and Russian blocking of attempts to negotiate a peace in the United Nations served to give strength to the view. The existence of the atom bomb served not only to heighten the tension but also to retard the development of severe crises involving nations with great industrialized areas. Thus, within a few years after the end of World War II, the U.S.S.R., which had emerged from the war as the most powerful nation in Europe, stood almost directly in opposition to the U.S., which had developed during the war into by far the greatest industrial nation in the world.

Population and Culture. The population of the U.S.S.R. contains both European and Asiatic elements, with the former predominating. Slavs (including Great Russians, Little Russians or Ukrainians, Byelorussians, and others) constitute approximately four fifths of the total population and occupy most of European Russia and a broad wedge of colonized territory extending across Siberia to Vladivostok, Sakhalin, and Kamchatka. The most numerous Asiatic peoples are Uzbeks, Kazakhs, and Tartars. The last group are descendants of the invasions of the Golden Horde and are found in several parts of European Russia, extending in small scattered groups from ab. 150 mi. E of Moscow, through the Tatar Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, E to the Urals, and S to the Stalingrad area. Most of C and N Siberia and the N fringe of European Russia are occupied by nomadic and seminomadic tribes of peoples related to the Lapps and the Eskimos. The Caucasus region is a medley of nationalities (over 100), of whom only the Azerbaizhani, Georgians, and Armenians number over a million each. Though ethnically very diverse, the peoples of the U.S.S.R. are unified by their common economic and political system. The great number of cultural groups in the U.S.S.R. has been so often emphasized that it must be noted that Russian is the mother tongue of more than half of the entire population. Russia has long been noted for its theater and ballet, which have persisted to the present day and are active in a great number of cities in all parts of the country. In addition, there are many other types of organizations of a cultural or politico-cultural nature, such as workers' clubs, sports clubs, and the like. The U.S.S.R. participated in the international Olympic Games held at Helsinki, Finland, in 1952. There are some 32 universities in the U.S.S.R., located in 31 cities. The universities of Moscow and Leningrad are the largest of these. The total enrollment in all institutions of higher education in 1951 was ab. 1,350,000. Trade and technical schools had an enrollment of ab. 1,380,000 students in the same year. There is universal compulsory education for the primary grades; secondary education is generally available to better students. Illiteracy has been reduced in a generation from roughly 80 percent to under 20 percent. Religion is tolerated by the government, but must be sustained by private donations and is forbidden to mix in political life. After the Russian Revolution there was a strong antireligious campaign, directed principally against the Russian Orthodox Church, which had been the established state religion of the czars. At that time many of the most magnificent churches were turned into museums. During and after World War II there appeared to be a less active persecution of religion. The Soviet Constitution states that "freedom of religious worship and freedom of antireligious propaganda is recognized for all citizens." The leader of the Russian Church is the metropolitan of Moscow, the "patriarch of all the Russias." The Jews of Russia have been an important element of the population since the Middle Ages, when they fled eastward as a result of persecution and settled in Poland, Byelorussia, the Ukraine, and the W provinces of Russia. During the German occupation a large number of Jews were exterminated by the Germans (1941-44) and the number remaining in the U.S.S.R. was estimated in 1950 to be somewhat smaller than the prewar figure, despite the extension of the W boundary of the country. In C Asia, Mohammedanism is the predominant faith. Under the Soviet regime education has been greatly increased in C Asia, and numerous old customs such as the wearing of the veil by women, have been abolished. The rapid industrialization of the U.S.S.R. has caused a great increase in the urban population; from 1926 to 1939 the urban population grew from 26,314,114 to 55,909,908, which represented a relative increase from 18 to 33 percent of the total population. Though no later data are available, the indications are that this trend has continued, and that the population of cities and towns has grown more rapidly than the total. On Jan. 1, 1947, there were 1,380 incorporated cities in the U.S.S.R. and 1,982 other urban-type places.

Union Pacific Railroad. Organization incorporated (July 1, 1832) under the U.S. government for the purpose of building a railway line from Council Bluffs, Iowa, to a meeting point with the Central Pacific (whose western terminus was at San Francisco) at the California-Nevada line, thus affording a link via the central route between the Midwest and the Far West. The road was constructed with the aid of a Congressional subsidy in public lands. The rapid construction of the Central Pacific enabled the eastward shift of the projected meeting point, and the two roads were joined (May 10, 1869) in the noted "golden spike" ceremony at Promontory, Utah. The construction company of the Union Pacific was the Crédit Mobilier, whose record of corruption and political manipulation gave rise to one of the leading political scandals of the Grant administration. After a considerable period of mismanagement, the Union Pacific was reorganized (1897 et seq.) on a sound basis by Edward H. Harriman. It has played an important role in the development of the tier of states between Nebraska and California. At the close of World War II, the Union Pacific operated 15,715 mi. of track. Its headquarters are at Omaha, Neb.

Union Party. Minor political party, now defunct, which was active in the national campaign of 1936. Its presidential candidate, William Lenke, Republican representative from North Dakota, polled over 882,000 votes. The party's support, strongest in the Midwest, was drawn from followers of various "Share-the-Wealth" movements and Father Charles E. Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice.

Union Rights Party. [Also, Union and Southern Rights Party.] Political party organized (1850) in Georgia by Whigs and Democrats who favored a militant support of Southern rights, particularly in relation to the institution of slavery and its status in the territories of the U.S. It later became known as the Constitutional Union Party and was active until 1851.

Union Springs. City in SE Alabama, county seat of Bullock County, ab. 38 mi. SE of Montgomery. 3,232 (1950).

Union Square. Public park in New York City, between Broadway, Fourth Avenue, 14th Street, and 17th Street. It has long been noted as a rallying place for radical political demonstrations, but is also important for the great women's clothing stores that front upon two of its sides.

Uniontown (ŭn'yon.toun). City in SW Pennsylvania, county seat of Fayette County, ab. 42 mi. SE of Pittsburgh: coal mining; manufactures of coke, glass, radiators, and textiles. Pop. 20,471 (1950).

Union Town. Former name of Arcata, Calif.

Uniontown. Former name of Ashland, Ohio.

Unionville (ŭn'yon.vil). A former name of Scranton, Pa.; also of Tottenville, N.Y.

Unitarianism (ŭn.it.ăr.i.ăn.iz.əm). In the broader sense, any religion based on a belief in one God; within Christendom, the concept of God as one person, in opposition to Trinitarianism, or the concept of one God in three persons. Despite the trinitarian implications of various New Testament passages, especially Matt. xxviii. 19 and 1 John, v. 7, obviously unitarian theories were widespread and persistent in early Christian times; Arianism and its several derivative or parallel doctrines were basically unitarian. But modern Unitarianism is an outgrowth of Humanism and of the Reformation. Erasmus, when he published the text of the Greek New Testament in 1516, omitted 1 John, v. 7. Servetus (1511-53) went to the stake for his arguments against the Trinity. Fourteen years earlier an old woman who persisted in believing in "one God" only was burned at Kraków, Poland. To Servetus, Christ was God; he rejected rather the concepts of the Father and the Holy Ghost. But to most Unitarians, Jesus was only the chosen prophet and spokesman of God, and the Holy Ghost was one of the divine powers or attributes. Such was the heresy abjured by an English priest in 1548, and by others in that country about that time, for which some stiffer-necked recusants accepted martyrdom. The Italian Faustus Socinus taught that Jesus, following his baptism, had been taken to heaven and there instructed by God in the doctrines which he preached on earth; and that after the Ascension, God endowed Jesus with divine authority over all creation. Socinianism, thus subtly reconciling Christ's assertions concerning his power and authority with the lack of any explicit enunciation of the Trinity in the Scriptures, was characteristic of Unitarianism in the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries. Another Italian, Giorgio Blandrata or Biandrata (c1515-88), had prudently left his native land for Calvin's Geneva, and as prudently left Geneva to become court physician to the rulers of Poland and Transylvania. At his solicitation Socinus settled at Kolozsvár (or Klausenburg, now Cluj); thither also came Francis Dávid, and between these two Transylvania became a center of Unitarianism. In 1568 a royal edict granted freedom of conscience and speech to the Four Religions, Roman Catholicism, Lutheranism, Calvinism, and the Klausenburg Confession (i.e., Unitarianism). Dávid presently rejected the Socinian tenet that divine power had been given by God to Christ; thus he projected the later form of Unitarianism. In the year 1600 a synod of subscribers to the Klausenburg Confession first used the term "Unitarian," which in 1638 was formally adopted. For nearly two centuries thereafter the Unitarians of eastern Europe endured many trials, their churches and schools being often closed or given over to Catholics or Calvinists, but in 1791 they were legally confirmed as one of the "Four Religions." A revival of Unitarianism in England in the early 17th century can be traced largely to a diffusion of the writings of Socinus in translation, and to the influence of Grotius, in whose works the Trinity and the Incarnation are ignored. In 1640 the importation of Socinian books and the teaching of Socinian doctrines were prohibited, and in 1648 Parliament made denial of the Trinity a capital crime. Nevertheless the schoolmaster John Biddle (1616-62) paid for teaching Unitarianism not with his life but by imprisonment; and after his release in 1652 formed antitrinitarian congregations, which adopted the name Unitarian. The Toleration Act of 1689 excluded Unitarians along with Roman Catholics from its benevolence, and in 1695 penalties of imprisonment and loss of civil rights were by law provided for propagators of antitrinitarian doctrines. Nevertheless Unitarianism persisted, and after the publication of Joseph Priestley's Appeal to the Serious and Candid Professor of Christianity in 1770, its adherents grew numerous enough to open a chapel at London in 1774, and in 1791 to support the Unitarian Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge and the Practise of Virtue by the Distribution of Books, which society in 1792 approached Parliament with a petition for the lifting of the ban upon its creed, finding a friend in Charles James Fox, who introduced a bill to that effect. At this time the French Revolution, Priestley's enthusiasm for it, and Edmund Burke's abhorrence of it, were in full flood, and Burke delayed the passage of the bill, denouncing Priestley and all Unitarians, in one of the bitterest speeches he ever made, as subversive enemies of religion and of the British Constitution. The following year, however, Parliament acted favorably on the proposal; in 1813 Unitarians received full civil rights; meanwhile the number of Unitarian congregations continued to grow, the British and Foreign Unitarian Association was formed in 1825, and the National Conference of Unitarians organized in 1882. During this period the closely reasoned writings of James Martineau (1805-1900) were largely influential in eliminating from Unitarian thought all remnants of belief that there was anything supernatural about Jesus. In America, the congregational form of organization of the church led to the continual increase of doctrinal latitude, and in 1785 King's Chapel at Boston became the first American Unitarian church when its congregation purged the liturgy of all mention of the Trinity. In 1796 Priestley, who had fled the wrath of Tories and mobs in England, established a Unitarian group at Philadelphia; in 1805 the Unitarian Henry Ware (1764-1845) became a professor of divinity at Harvard University; in 1819 William Ellery Channing in his ordination sermon eloquently expounded Unitarianism (with, however, miraculous elements). In this period not a few Congregationalist ministers and churches rejected Trinitarianism and accepted the designation of Unitarians given them by their opponents. The most noted and influential of American Unitarians in the 19th century were Theodore Parker and Ralph Waldo Emerson. They rejected Channing's supernaturalistic ideas, and the trend among Unitarians ran steadily their way. In 1825 the American Unitarian Association was founded to aid in the publication of Unitarian literature, in the establishment of congregations, and in the building of churches. In 1900 an International Council of Unitarians and Other Liberal Religious Thinkers and Workers was formed at Boston. On its initiative a number of international conventions were held, and it led in 1930 to the formation of the International Association for Liberal Christianity and Religious Freedom. No Unitarian creed has ever been formulated; the congregational form of organization prevails; such uniformity as there is, is a uniformity of belief without any constraint of authority. Among the Unitarian congregations a simple covenant is widely used, reading: "In the love of truth and in the spirit of Jesus, we unite for the worship of God and the service of man." In 1951 the number of Unitarians organized into congregations in the U.S. was given as 79,628.

Unitarians (ū.nĭ.tār'ianz) or Unitarists (ū'nĭ.tār.ists). Members of the former Unitary Party in Argentina.

Unitary Party. One of the two political parties early prominent in Argentina. Founded by Bernardino Rivadavia, who was elected president in 1826, and centered mainly around Buenos Aires, the Unitarists struggled constantly and sometimes violently for more than half a century with the Federalists, who opposed the Unitarist aim of a strong central government for the country.

United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America. [Called the UAW.] Industrial union which is affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations and maintains headquarters at Detroit. Headed by Walter Reuther, it has been since World War II the largest single labor union in the U.S. Membership: 1,052,000 (1944).

United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. Craft union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which maintains headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind. From 1915 to 1953 it was headed by William L. Hutcheson. Membership: 600,000 (1944).

United Daughters of the Confederacy. [Called the UDC.] Patriotic organization established (1894) as the National Daughters of the Confederacy at Nashville, Tenn., which is composed of descendants of those who aided the Confederate cause. It received its present designation in 1896.

United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America. [Called the UE.] Industrial union, formerly affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, which maintains headquarters at New York. It is headed by Albert J. Fitzgerald. Considered to be among the most left-wing of U.S. labor groups, it has affiliation with no other major union. Membership: 430,000 (1944).

United Empire Loyalists. Term used to describe those individuals in the 13 American colonies who supported the Loyalist cause during the period of the American Revolution. More specifically, it applies to those Loyalists who left the colonies and settled in what is now Canadian territory.

United Engineering Trustees, Inc. Organization founded and incorporated in 1904 for the purpose of furthering the engineering arts and sciences and maintaining a free public engineering library. Its original founder societies were the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. The American Society of Civil Engineers became a founder society in 1916. The organization's headquarters at New York maintains the Engineering Societies Library, which contains ab. 180,000 volumes.

United Ireland Party. [Also, Fine Gael.] Irish political party following a moderate nationalist program and seeking a united Ireland within the British Empire.

United Irishmen (Irishmen). Irish society formed in 1791 by Theobald Wolfe Tone, for the purpose of procuring parliamentary reform and the repeal of the penal laws. It afterward became a secret society with revolutionary aims, and was influential in causing the Irish rebellion of 1798.

United Khasi and Jaintia Hills (kā'si; jin'ti.ə). See Khasi and Jaintia Hills.

United Kingdom. [Full name, The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.] Since 1921, the official designation of the British kingdom, including England, Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland, and the neighboring smaller islands (except the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands). The government is a hereditary constitutional monarchy. A sovereign and a responsible ministry form the executive. The legislature consists of a Parliament, comprising the House of Lords (over 600 members) and the House of Commons (670 members). Capital, London; area, ab. 94,204 sq. mi.; pop. 50,210,472 (1951). (See also the articles on England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Northern Ireland, and Great Britain.)

United Mine Workers. [Called the UMW.] Industrial labor union founded at Columbus, Ohio, on Jan. 25, 1890, one of the largest and most powerful labor organizations in the U.S. Its first outstanding leader was John Mitchell, who led the coal strike of 1902. John L. Lewis was elected its president in 1920. Originally an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor (AFL), the UMW left the AFL in 1937 to become, under the leadership of Lewis, the major force behind the organization (1938) of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO). Lewis headed the CIO until his resignation in 1940, and subsequently the UMW returned (1946) to the AFL, but soon broke with it to become once again an independent union. Membership: 600,000 (1944).

United Mine Workers v. Coronado Coal Co., 259 U.S. 344 (1922) (kōr.ō.nā'dō). U.S. Supreme Court decision ruling that a labor union which stopped production was guilty of conspiracy to destroy interstate commerce. The case is notable for its establishment of the principle that labor unions, like other incorporated bodies, could be sued in federal courts.

United Nations. [Called the UN.] Name first used to describe the alliance of 26 nations fighting the Axis powers in World War II. In signing the United Nations Declaration of Jan. 1, 1942, these nations promised each other mutual support, and accepted the Atlantic Charter, announced in August, 1941, by Winston S. Churchill of Great Britain and Franklin D. Roosevelt of the U.S. During the Moscow Conference of the American, Russian, and British foreign ministers in October, 1943, an understanding was reached between the U.S., Britain, the U.S.S.R., and China on the establishment of a permanent security organization. At Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C., delegates of the four powers worked out (Aug. 21-Oct. 7, 1944) the basic blueprint of such an organization. The Yalta Conference, agreeing on the voting rights of the big powers, opened the way for a general conference of 50 nations, large and small, at war with Germany and Italy, to discuss and perfect the draft charter. This conference opened at San Francisco, Calif., on April 25, 1945, and came to its close on June 26, with the signing of the United Nations Charter and the Statute of the International Court of Justice. The purposes of the United Nations as thus constituted are the maintenance of peace and security and the achievement of friendly cooperation among nations for the solution of political as well as economic, social, cultural, and humanitarian ends. The principal organs of the United Nations are the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, the International Court of Justice, and the Secretariat. The organization's permanent headquarters after 1951 was in the United Nations building at New York.

United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. Commission established on Jan. 24, 1946, by the General Assembly of the United Nations to study and make recommendations on all phases of the development and control of atomic energy. The commission includes representatives of all the powers on the Security Council, and also of Canada. It is intended to find methods of control and inspection, and to provide media for the exchange of scientific information which may be used for peaceful purposes. It is empowered in addition to discuss weapons of mass destruction other than those dependent upon atomic energy. Its work from the outset was frustrated by an inability to bridge the gap between U.S. and U.S.S.R. control proposals.

United Nations Commission for Indonesia (in.dō.nē'zha). Committee of good offices which was authorized by the United Nations Security Council to seek a settlement of the conflict between Indonesian and Netherlands armed forces which had, despite earlier intervention by the United Nations, reached a dangerous point in the summer of 1947. The committee consisted of representatives from two states nominated by the interested parties, and from a third state selected by the two thus nominated: the Netherlands government chose Belgium, Indonesia chose Australia, and the U.S. was selected by a joint Belgian-Australian decision. The conciliatory efforts of this committee aided substantially in bringing a settlement which led in late 1949 to the independence of Indonesia.

United Nations Commission on Human Rights. Commission of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, concerned with the promotion of human liberties and values as guaranteed in the United Nations Charter and in the International Bill of Rights. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt the commission spent its earliest years largely in drafting a human rights charter for submission to the General Assembly.

United Nations Commission on Korea (kō.rē.ə). Commission of seven representatives of the United Nations which was established by the General Assembly on Dec. 12, 1948, after that body's declaration that a lawful government had been established in South Korea. Designed as a kind of committee of good offices, its chief purpose was to assist Korea in developing methods of representative government, sound economic policies, and to observe and verify the withdrawal of occupying forces, on behalf of the United Nations. The Commission reported in 1949 that it had been unable to make observations in North Korea; it was continued for another year with specific instructions from the Assembly to watch for the possibility of a civil war breaking out. After the Korean War began in June, 1950, the Commission was discontinued and a commission on Korean unification and rehabilitation took its place.

United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs. Chief advisory body of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations on matters of drug control. The 15-member group has since 1946 worked on narcotics conventions and carried forward the responsibilities primarily resting with the Advisory Committee on Traffic in Opium and other Dangerous Drugs of the League of Nations.

United Nations Commission on Pakistan and India (pak'i.stan; in'di.ə). Commission of five members established by the United Nations Security Council in April, 1948. It was charged with the task of finding a basis for settlement of the dispute between the Union of India and Pakistan over the state of Kashmir. It was given powers of investigation and asked to mediate the dispute, which remains unresolved.

United Nations Commission on the Status of Women. Commission established by the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations in 1946 to prepare recommendations and reports to the Council with a view to promoting women's rights in the political, economic, social, and educational fields.

United Nations Economic and Employment Commission. One of the functional commissions working under the United Nations Economic and Social Council. The group concerns itself with recommendations seeking full employment among member nations and the development of world-wide economic policies against inflation and recessions. The commission's work is carried forward largely in two subcommittees on economic stability and economic development.

United Nations Economic and Social Council. [Called the ECOSOC.] Council of 18 members, who are elected by the General Assembly, which was established as one of the central bodies of the United Nations by the United Nations Charter. It is required to meet at least once a year, but had, after the first several years of its existence, been in almost continuous session. It is broadly responsible for problems of economic and social progress, human rights, cultural and educational cooperation, and standards of living. It has several commissions and sub-commissions, and has related to it such bodies as the International Labor Organization (ILO), United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), and the World Health Organization (WHO).

United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (á'zha, -shá). Commission of 11 members and five associate members under the general direction of the United Nations Economic and Social Council. It considers methods and policies for aiding the economy and trade of the Far East. Established in 1947 by its parent body, its periodic meetings were for several years primarily concerned with finding ways of obtaining greater economic integration and cooperation among Asiatic nations.

United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (ú'röp). [Called the ECE.] Commission set up under the terms of article 68 of the United Nations Charter in March, 1947. It is composed of representatives of 17 European nations and the U.S. It considers measures for the reconstruction and the raising of the level of economic activity in Europe, as well as for the strengthening of economic relations between the European states. Its general authority derives from the United Nations Economic and Social Council, but it is authorized also to make direct recommendations to its member governments.

United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization. [Called UNESCO.] Special organ collaborating with the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. It is the successor of the League of Nations International Committee for Intellectual Cooperation, but is intended to be of broader scope. This new international instrument was the outcome of a conference at London in November, 1945, sponsored by the British and French governments, and it became operative in November, 1946, when it had been ratified by 20 signatories of its constitution. By 1951, 59 nations had signified their adherence. The stated purpose of UNESCO is to advance peace and international security by effectuating cooperation among the nations in education, in the promotion of science, and in the mutual study of various cultures; and by inculcating respect for law, justice, and fundamental human rights without regard to differences of race, sex, or religion. In furthering its purposes, UNESCO gives special attention to education and to mass communication. It also, in connection with the rebuilding of war-devastated cities, has been instrumental in rehabilitating library collections and museums. One of its most appreciated services has been the book-coupon plan to facilitate the purchase of books in any country despite currency restrictions. In 1948 work was begun on the translation of a selection of the world's great books into all of the principal languages. Campaigns for the elimination of adult illiteracy have been undertaken in several of the "backward" countries. With headquarters at Paris, UNESCO is governed by a general conference, composed of representatives of member states, one for each. Programs decided upon by this authority are implemented by an executive board of 18 members, elected by the general conference, and by a secretariat. Some states not members of the United Nations hold membership in UNESCO, but the U.S.S.R. is not affiliated with it.

United Nations Fiscal Commission. One of the commissions of the United Nations Economic and Social Council, established in 1946, to advise the Council in fiscal matters.

United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization. [Called the FAO.] One of the affiliated bodies of the United Nations under the Economic and Social Council, the FAO grew out of the Hot Springs Conference of 1943. Headed by a director general and an executive committee of 15, its chief functions are: (1) collection, interpretation, and dissemination of information on food, agriculture, and nutrition; (2) recommending to its members research tasks and educational programs; (3) developing conservation methods and techniques in natural resources, and improving methods of agricultural production, distribution, and financing; (4) providing technical assistance on request.

United Nations General Assembly. A central organ of the United Nations, including representatives of all states of the United Nations. It meets annually and in special sessions to discuss and make recommendations on questions of the maintenance of peace and security, problems likely to imperil the peace in the future, and measures for the improvement of social, economic, and cultural standards. It is precluded, however, from considering disputes still under consideration by the Security Council. It is presided over by a president, elected for each session, makes most decisions on a two-thirds vote, and is assisted by the United Nations Secretariat and various special commissions. The basic work of the General Assembly is carried on during sessions in five committees, whose work is planned and coordinated by a steering committee and in plenary sessions.

United Nations Information Organization. [Also, United Nations Department of Public Information.] Official source of information about the United Nations and its specialized agencies. It carries on a wide network of information and publicity functions. Its chief divisions are Press and Publications, Radio, Films, and Visual Information, Special Services, Educational Liaison, and Lecturers. The organization also handles the library and much of the research and analysis work for the United Nations. Acting for the Secretariat of the UN this body also has 15 information centers in such places as Washington, Moscow, Cairo, and New Delhi.

United Nations Military Staff Committee. Committee whose membership includes representatives of the chiefs of staff of the U.S., the U.S.S.R., the United Kingdom, France, and China. It was established to advise and assist the United Nations Security Council on military questions, to explore ways for disarmament, and to command military forces of the United Nations.

United Nations Population Commission. One of the subsidiary working groups under the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. This body of 12 advises the Council on problems of population change, population trends, and migratory movements. It is designed to formulate recommendations mitigating the economic and social dislocations caused by large population increases and migrations.

United Nations Preparatory Conference at London (lun'don). First meeting (Jan. 10-Feb. 14, 1946) of the United Nations General Assembly. It selected Trygve Lie as the first secretary-general of the United Nations, and elected the first nonpermanent members of the Security Council, the membership of the Economic and Social Council, and the International Court of Justice. The conference also discussed questions of international friction which had arisen in Greece, Syria, Indonesia, and Iran. It decided to locate the organization's headquarters in the U.S. An important piece of practical success lent prestige to the organization at its start when the discussion on Iran led to Russia's withdrawal of her troops from that country.

United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. [Called UNRRA.] International agency designed to meet the temporary emergency needs for food, shelter, and the like which existed as a result of World War II in many parts of the world. It was established in December, 1943, at an international conference at Atlantic City. Though the financial support of the organization came largely from the U.S. and Great Britain, it had representation from all the United Nations and was directed by a council of the Allied nations. It was primarily concerned with meeting emergency involving food and shelter, health and medical service, restoration of utilities and essential services, and relocation of displaced persons. The organization, which was headed successively by Herbert Lehman and Fiorello LaGuardia, was finally dissolved as of July 1, 1947.

United Nations Secretariat. Body provided for the United Nations under its charter, and headed by the secretary-general of the United Nations, to serve as its chief staff and housekeeping agency. It furnishes staff personnel, prepares conferences and their agenda, handles matters of public information and publications, and is responsible for many details. It acts as a kind of international civil service, recruiting its members from all the member states of the United Nations.

United Nations Social Commission. Eighteen-member body under the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. It advises on broad social questions not explicitly treated by other specialized bodies. Among the matters it has considered are living and housing standards, child welfare, youth guidance, crime prevention, and means of combating the slave traffic.

United Nations Special Committee on Palestine (pal'es.tin). [Called UNSCOP.] Committee of nine members drawn from the smaller states belonging to the United Nations which was established after the announcement (1947) by Great Britain that it would remove its troops from Palestine. The committee was organized by a special meeting of the General Assembly in May, 1947, in order to survey the whole Palestine problem. In a report submitted on Aug. 31, 1947, the committee unanimously urged the termination of the British mandate in Palestine, and recommended recognition of the independence of Palestine after a short period of transition under the United Nations. In consideration of the existence of Palestine as an economic unit, it offered two alternatives for United Nations consideration: (1) partition into Jewish and Arab states, and (2) establishment of a single federal state. This report set in motion the removal of British troops and the eventual United Nations mediation and settlement.

United Nations Special Committee on the Balkans (bòl'kanz). Committee consisting of 11 representatives of the United Nations which was established by the General Assembly in October, 1947, to observe and report on conditions along Greece's northern frontiers, where disputes between Yugoslavia, Albania, and Greece had led to recriminations and actual guerrilla warfare. The committee issued reports to the General Assembly and was, to some extent, able to lessen the instances of open warfare which were at that time troubling northern Greece.

United Nations Statistical Commission. Twelve-member body established to promote the uniformity and improvement of statistical standards and methods throughout the world. It assists the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. Among the subjects its meetings have considered are the coordination of statistical work among all the UN agencies, the development of central statistical services for the UN, and proposals for comparability of classification for various branches of economic activity. Its work is aided by two sub-commissions on statistical sampling and statistical classification.

United Nations Subcommission on Freedom of Information and the Press. One of the subcommittees of the Commission on Human Rights of the United Nations Economic and Social Council. This group has since 1947 sought to find agreements for international standards for the maintenance of freedom of radio, press, and other media of information.

United Nations Transport and Communications Commission. Designed to assist the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations and on request the Security and Trusteeship councils on matters of transport, this 15-member working group has sought to coordinate the work of all UN agencies in transport and communication. It studies transport conventions and stands ready to act as conciliator in disputes on matters of transport and communications among states and specialized agencies.

United Nations Trusteeship Council. One of the constituent bodies of the United Nations provided for in the United Nations Charter. It has 12 members, six of whom administer dependent areas under the United Nations, two more of whom are permanent members of the United Nations but who are not administering states, and four others who serve three-year terms. Responsible to the General Assembly, the council has general supervision over the administration of the nine nonstrategic areas in Africa and the South Pacific, and the one strategic area in the Pacific, for which the Security Council has a primary responsibility. It formulates standards of administration and social and economic development for the trust territories, examines reports of administering states, considers petitions, and makes inspections. It has met periodically since December, 1948.

United Nations War Crimes Commission. Commission for the investigation of war crimes that held its first meeting on Jan. 18, 1944. Its discussions formed the basis for the agreement for the prosecution and punishment of the major war criminals of the European Axis signed at London on Aug. 8, 1945.

United Provinces or United Provinces of Agra and Oudh (ā'grā; oud). See Uttar Pradesh; see also under Northwest Provinces.

United Provinces of the Netherlands. The seven provinces of the Low Countries, Holland, Zealand, Utrecht, Friesland, Gelderland, Groningen, and Overijssel, which in 1579 formed the Union of Utrecht and laid the foundation of the republic of the Netherlands.

United Provinces of the Río de la Plata (rē'ō dā lā plā'tā). Name adopted (July 9, 1816) by the Latin American territories which later formed Bolivia, Paraguay, Uruguay, and a great part of Argentina. United only in their opposition to Spain and dominated by Buenos Aires, the United Provinces were torn from the start by internal conflicts and vanished as a political unit with the establishment of the Argentine Confederation in 1825.

United Railways and Electric Co. of Baltimore v. West, 280 U.S. 234 (1930) (bòl'ti.mōr, west). U.S. Supreme Court decision involving the valuation of assets in reference to the fixing of rates by a public commission. The court, declaring that the rates were too low and thus confiscatory, held that current depreciation should be based on present rather than original cost.

United Service Organizations. [Called the USO.] American group, largely volunteer, which during World War II and since has provided social, recreational, and spiritual facilities for trainees and members of the armed services, hospitalized veterans, families of service men, nurses, merchant seamen, and workers in areas of newly established or rapidly expanded war industries.

United Society of Believers in Christ's Second Appearing. [Called Shakers or Shaking Quakers.] American communal order with origins in English Quakerism and the Continental sect of French Prophets. Its basic tenets of celibacy (with the derivative principle of equality of the sexes), formal confession of sin ("the opening of the mind"), separation from the world, and common property ("a united inheritance") stem, in varying degrees, from the teachings of its founder the prophetess "Mother" Ann Lee, a spinner and wool-carder in the mills of Manchester, England. Affected by the injustices and depravity of industrial conditions in that region, and unstrung by ill health and the death of her four children in infancy, Ann found spiritual solace in a branch of the Quaker society led by Jane Wardley and her husband James. Preaching a gospel of regeneration and the doctrine of a masculine-feminine Deity and dual messiahship, she converted a few members of the Wardley society to her claim as the female reincarnation of the Christ spirit and, seeking freedom to expand her faith, came to America with eight followers in 1774. Eighteen communities, closely federated in a centralized theocratic system, were the eventual result of Ann Lee's mission. Those in New York and New England were the fruit of proselyting tours (during which the Shakers became beneficiaries of a widespread native revivalism), the dynamic leadership of "Father" James Whittaker (who succeeded Ann after her death in 1784), and the organizational genius of "Father" Joseph Meacham, a Connecticut farmer and lay preacher, who assumed leadership on Whittaker's death in 1787. After the turn of the century, the movement spread into Kentucky, Ohio, and Indiana, where three able missionaries (Benjamin S. Youngs, Issachar Bates, and John Meacham) took advantage of the great Kentucky Revival to establish seven religious communities in that frontier region. Another society was later formed at Sodas Bay, N.Y., but it was subsequently transferred to Groveland in the same state. Meacham organized these societies into groups or bishoprics, each with a presiding ministry of two elders and two elderses, all such branch "leads" being subordinate to the central ministry at New Lebanon, N.Y. Each society, or community, was itself divided into "family" units, with its own spiritual and temporal heads (elders and elderses, deacons, deaconesses, and trustees) and with an autonomous economic and social status subject to ministerial authority. Newcomers, or "new Believers," were usually received into a "Gathering" or Novitate Order, where they retained their property and from which they could freely withdraw; in the Junior Order, the next step towards full membership, they gave their time and the use of their worldly goods; but when they entered the Senior Order and signed the church covenant, they consecrated their lives and property irrevocably to the cause. Though sequestered from the world, the Shakers have made notable contributions to the country they chose for their home. Their "model farms" set standards in agricultural practice. Their craftsmanship and architecture, based on the principle of pure, logical form determined by function, have remained noteworthy. They pioneered in new industries and labor-saving techniques. Their worship was composed of spiritual songs and ritual dances which have enriched the American folk traditions. The Believers gave of their substance, unselfishly, to charity and the cause of peace. Today, with only three small communities extant, this religious society stands as the oldest and one of the most productive of American experiments in communal socialism.

United Spanish War Veterans (Spanish). National society composed of honorably discharged veterans who served in the armed forces of the U.S. during the Spanish-American War. It was founded in 1898.

United States. [Also: the Union, America, the States; official name, the United States of America; abbreviated U.S. or U.S.A.] Federal republic which occupies the C part of North America, comprising 48 states and the District of Columbia. It possesses also the outlying territories of Alaska and Hawaii, as well as the dependencies of American Samoa, Guam, Midway, Canal Zone, the Virgin Islands, and Wake Island. Puerto Rico became a self-governing commonwealth in July, 1952. The U.S. is bounded by Canada on the N, the Atlantic Ocean on the E, the Straits of Florida, the Gulf of Mexico, and Mexico on the S, and the Pacific Ocean on the W.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. The continental U.S. is divided for administrative purposes into 48 states and the District of Columbia. The separate states and the District of Columbia are covered in detail under their own headings. The following alphabetical list gives only their population, area, and, in the case of the states, date of admission to the Union. The admission dates given for the 13 original states are the dates on which each ratified the federal Constitution.

Name	Population (1950)	Land Area in sq. mi. (1950)	Date of Ratification or Admission
Alabama	3,061,743	51,078	Dec. 14, 1819
Arizona	749,587	113,575	Feb. 14, 1912
Arkansas	1,909,511	52,675	June 15, 1836
California	10,586,223	156,740	Sept. 9, 1850
Colorado	1,325,080	103,922	Aug. 1, 1876
Connecticut	2,607,280	4,899	Jan. 9, 1788
Delaware	318,085	1,978	Dec. 7, 1787
Florida	2,771,305	54,261	March 3, 1845
Georgia	3,444,578	58,483	Jan. 2, 1788
Idaho	588,637	82,769	July 3, 1890
Illinois	8,712,176	55,935	Dec. 3, 1818
Indiana	3,934,224	36,205	Dec. 11, 1816

Name	Population (1950)	Land Area in sq. mi. (1950)	Date of Ratification or Admission
Iowa	2,621,073	56,045	Dec. 28, 1846
Kansas	1,905,299	82,108	Jan. 29, 1861
Kentucky	2,944,806	39,864	June 1, 1792
Louisiana	2,683,516	45,162	April 30, 1812
Maine	913,774	31,040	March 15, 1820
Maryland	2,343,001	9,616	April 28, 1788
Massachusetts	4,690,514	7,867	Feb. 6, 1788
Michigan	6,371,766	57,022	Jan. 26, 1837
Minnesota	2,982,483	82,361	May 11, 1858
Mississippi	2,178,914	47,248	Dec. 10, 1817
Missouri	3,954,653	69,226	Aug. 10, 1821
Montana	591,024	145,878	Nov. 8, 1889
Nebraska	1,325,510	76,626	March 1, 1867
Nevada	100,083	109,789	Oct. 31, 1864
New Hampshire	533,242	9,017	June 21, 1788
New Jersey	4,835,329	7,322	Dec. 18, 1787
New Mexico	681,187	121,511	Mar. 29, 1848
New York	14,830,192	47,944	July 26, 1788
North Carolina	4,061,929	49,997	Nov. 21, 1789
North Dakota	619,636	70,057	Nov. 2, 1889
Ohio	7,946,627	41,900	Feb. 19, 1803
Oklahoma	2,233,351	69,031	Nov. 16, 1907
Oregon	1,521,341	96,315	Feb. 14, 1859
Pennsylvania	10,495,012	45,045	Dec. 12, 1787
Rhode Island	791,896	1,058	May 29, 1790
South Carolina	2,117,027	30,305	May 23, 1788
South Dakota	652,740	76,536	Nov. 2, 1889
Tennessee	3,291,718	41,797	June 1, 1796
Texas	7,711,194	69,513	Dec. 29, 1845
Utah	688,862	82,346	Jan. 4, 1896
Vermont	377,747	9,278	March 4, 1791
Virginia	3,315,680	39,893	June 20, 1788
Washington	2,378,963	66,786	Nov. 11, 1889
West Virginia	2,005,552	24,080	June 19, 1863
Wisconsin	3,434,575	54,705	May 29, 1848
Wyoming	290,529	97,566	July 10, 1890
District of Columbia	802,178	61
United States (total)	150,697,361	2,974,726

The 12 U.S. urbanized areas (cities with their suburban areas) with a population of more than a million in 1955 are listed in order of size below:

Name	Population (1950)	Land Area in sq. mi. (1950)	Population of City Only	Land Area in sq. mi.
New York	12,296,117	1,253.4	7,891,957	315.1
Chicago	4,920,816	638.0	3,620,962	207.5
Los Angeles	3,996,946	871.3	1,970,358	430.9
Philadelphia	2,922,470	311.6	2,020,605	127.2
Detroit	2,659,398	304.9	1,849,368	139.6
Boston	2,233,448	344.8	801,444	47.8
San Francisco	2,022,078	287.3	775,357	44.6
Pittsburgh	1,332,993	61.6	1,033,666	29.8
St. Louis	1,400,053	227.8	856,796	61.0
Cleveland	1,383,599	300.1	914,808	75.0
Washington	1,287,333	178.4	802,178	61.4
Baltimore	1,161,552	151.8	949,705	78.7

Capital, Washington, D.C.; total area of the continental U.S., 3,022,387 sq. mi. (including 47,661 sq. mi. of inland water); pop. 150,697,361 (1950); total area of territories and possessions and the commonwealth of Puerto Rico, 605,743 sq. mi.; pop. 2,945,359 (1950). The U.S. is also the trustee under a United Nations mandate of 625 islands in the Pacific formerly held by Japan. Among the nations of the world the U.S. ranks fifth in area and fourth in population.

Terrain and Climate. The U.S. may be subdivided into seven major physiographic divisions: the Atlantic and Gulf coastal lowland; Appalachian region; great interior lowland; Ozark and Ouachita highlands; Rocky Mountains; intermontane region; and Pacific Coast region. The Atlantic and Gulf coastal lowland extends from Long Island SW to S Texas and includes a vast area, largely a plain but hilly in places, bordering the ocean and extending inland up the Mississippi valley as far as Cairo, Ill. Though fertile in many areas, especially in the W part, large tracts of this plain have sandy soils. There are extensive tidal marshlands along the coast. The Appalachian region includes New England and extends SW to C Alabama. The terrain varies from flat river flood plains to hilly or rolling piedmont country, and culminates in the high rounded mountains of the Blue Ridge. In the W it includes the Allegheny-Cumberland plateau, an area of nearly horizontal rock strata which is, however, extremely hilly or mountainous, as it is intricately carved by river valleys. Important mountain groups of the Appalachians include the White Mountains, Green Mountains, Adirondacks, Catskills, and the Blue Ridge, which includes the Great Smoky Mountains. Mount Mitchell (6,684 ft.), in North Carolina, is the highest summit in the E part of the U.S. The great interior lowland extends from the S shore of Lake Ontario W to the front ranges of the Rockies in Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, and New Mexico, and from the Canadian border S to W central Texas. Most of its area is in the drainage basin of the Mississippi River. The W portion of this region is a vast, level to rolling natural grassland known as the Great Plains. The N part of the great interior lowland was glaciated and has numerous features such as lakes, swamps, and scattered boulders resulting from the action of the ice sheet; the S part was not glaciated. This region contains the most fertile farm land in the U.S. The terrain varies from flat to hilly, and there is an isolated group of low mountains in the region (the Black Hills of South Dakota). The Ozark and Ouachita highlands are an isolated uplifted hill and mountain region surrounded by lowlands. They occupy S Missouri, N and NW Arkansas, and E Oklahoma. The valley of the Arkansas River separates the Ozarks from the Ouachita Mountains. The Rocky Mountains extend from N central New Mexico to the Canadian border. They are rugged mountains, with numerous massive ranges, culminating in Mount Elbert (14,431 ft.), in Colorado. The mountain chain is broken by the broad Wyoming basin. The intermontane region is complex, and must be further subdivided into three major terrain regions: the Columbia Plateau, the Colorado Plateau, and the Basin and Range Province. The Columbia Plateau is a vast plateau of old lava materials, and is rolling or hilly, with occasional high mountainous areas (Blue Mountains of Oregon). There is also an extensive plain in the Snake River basin of S Idaho. The Colorado Plateau is at a high elevation (largely 5,000 to 8,000 ft.) and is very deeply cut by numerous canyons, of which the Grand Canyon is the most famous. In many areas the landscape is extremely colorful. The Basin and Range Province is the most arid region of the U.S. and is composed of a series of ragged mountain ranges, separated by broad, flattish basins. Many of these basins contain salt flats which are lakes only after a considerable rain. Because of elevation the N part of the Basin and Range Province is much cooler and is characterized by sagebrush or bunch-grass vegetation, while the S part is hotter and drier and is known for its variety of cactuses. The Pacific Coast region is also quite diverse, but in general has three zones: The Sierra-Cascade Mountain region on the E is a region of lofty snow-capped mountains culminating in Mount Whitney (14,495 ft.), the highest point in the U.S. There are several peaks of volcanic origin; of these only Mount Lassen has been active in historical times. The C part of the Pacific Coast region includes several depressions occupied by water or by valleys: Puget Sound, the Willamette valley of Oregon, and the great central valley of California. The W fringe of the Pacific Coast region consists of the series of Coast Ranges which border the Pacific Ocean. The entire U.S. may be thought of as divided into a humid E part and a dry to semiarid W part, with a very narrow wet fringe along the NW Pacific coast. There are only three great rivers in the E, the Columbia, Colorado, and Rio Grande. In the E, the Mississippi drains about two fifths of the entire U.S., and has numerous important tributaries including the Wisconsin, Missouri, Ohio, Arkansas, and Red rivers. The St. Lawrence is the outlet of the Great Lakes and forms part of the boundary between the state of New York and Canada. The Great Lakes also lie on the U.S.-Canadian border, except Lake Michigan, which is entirely within the U.S.

The U.S. possesses many natural wonders. Among the best known, to name only a few, are Niagara Falls, on the Canada-New York state border; the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, in Arizona; Yellowstone National Park, in Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana, known for its geysers, hot springs, lofty canyons, and waterfalls; Mammoth Cave, in Kentucky; and Yosemite National Park, in California. The many dams along the nation's waterways include Bonneville Dam, in the Columbia River; Grand Coulee Dam, in the Columbia River; Hoover Dam (formerly Boulder Dam), in the Colorado River; and the dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The nation has 160 national forests, 26 national parks, 51 battlefields, historic sites, and other similar sites, and 82 national monuments, as well as numerous recreation areas; the individual states also have set aside many parks, forests, and recreational areas. Valuable forests are scattered throughout the country, but the chief areas of timber production at present are the Pacific Northwest and the Southeast. The high mountain ranges of the Pacific Coast region have an important climatic effect by limiting the area of marine climate in the U.S. to a relatively narrow coastal region. In the N, this climate is characterized by cool, rainy winters and warm summers. In the S the climate is subtropical, with mild winters and hot summers. The seasonal temperature difference between winter and summer is much less in this region than elsewhere in the U.S. The greater part of the U.S., from the intermontane region E to the Atlantic coast, has a continental type of climate, with seasonal extremes of heat and cold in summer and winter. The only exception is S Florida, which has a tropical climate and no real winter season, though cold waves are experienced. Over all of the C and E U.S., excepting the highland regions, summers are hot; in the South, they are very hot and humid. Winters are severely cold in the N part of the Mississippi basin and along the N Great Lakes; they are quite cold as far S as Kansas, Missouri, and the Ohio River valley. In the S and SE U.S. winters are cool, with cold waves occasionally bringing severe winter conditions. In general, however, winters are shorter and summers longer than farther north. West of a line running roughly N and S from C Texas to C North Dakota is the semiarid or dry region of the U.S. Extending from this line W to the W limit of the intermontane region is an extensive region with too little rainfall to permit humid conditions. Except in the mountains, which are more humid, trees grow only along the streams or near permanent springs or other sources of water. The landscape has an entirely different aspect from the humid east; it is dry in appearance, mountains and tablelands are angular, and the barren rocks are often brilliantly colored; river beds are wide and stony and often contain very little or no water. Grazing is important over most of the region, and irrigation is extensively used for crop lands. The constant passage of storm centers, especially in the winter half-year, gives the U.S. climate a characteristic weather variability; sudden changes of weather are often experienced, and occasionally freakish extremes of unusual weather may occur, such as warm spells in midwinter or cold waves with near-freezing temperatures in May or early June. Since most of the "weather" moves from west to east, the Atlantic Ocean has only a relatively slight and localized effect on the climate of the U.S., the most pronounced characteristic being a cooling effect in summer along its coast, which has led to the establishment of many summer resort communities in the E U.S., such as Cape Cod, Mass., Atlantic City, N.J., and others.

Government. The federal government consists of three separate branches, the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. The executive branch is headed by the president, who is elected for a term of four years. A vice-president, also elected for a four-year term, succeeds to the presidency upon the death, resignation, removal, or any other inability to serve, of the president. The president and vice-president are elected by popular vote through an electoral college comprising electors from each state, the number of state electors being equal to the number of senators and representatives sent to Congress by each state. A cabinet chosen by the president and confirmed by the Senate assists the president in his work. Heading the legislative branch of the government is the Congress, comprising a Senate of 96 members (two from each state) elected for terms of six years and a House of Representatives of 435 members (the number from each state being proportional to its total population) elected for two-year terms. The vice-president of the U.S. presides over the Senate. Heading the judicial branch of the government is the U.S. Supreme Court, comprising a chief justice and eight associate justices all appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate. Below this court in the judicial system are the circuit court of appeals and the district courts. Each of the 48 state governments is composed also of an executive, legislative, and judicial branch, a governor serving as the chief executive. Nebraska is the only state having a one-chamber legislature, the other 47 states having bicameral legislatures. The District of Columbia is administered by three commissioners appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate. Alaska is headed by a governor appointed by the president, and is administered jointly by the Congress and a territorial legislative assembly; it sends one voteless delegate to the House of Representatives. Hawaii is headed by a governor appointed by the president and has a legislature; it sends one nonvoting delegate to the House of Representatives. The Virgin Islands of the U.S. (as distinct from those belonging to Great Britain) and Guam are under the jurisdiction of the U.S. Department of the Interior and have a U.S.-appointed governor and a popularly elected legislature. American Samoa, Midway, and Wake Island are controlled by the Department of the Navy. The Canal Zone is administered by a governor under the supervision of the U.S. secretary of the army. Puerto Rico is headed by a governor who since 1952 has been popularly elected; administered by a legislature; sends to the House of Representatives a popularly elected resident commissioner who has no vote; since 1952 has had commonwealth status.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. The U.S. is the world leader in output of agricultural products and livestock. The use of modern agricultural methods and the promotion of agricultural education have contributed heavily to making the nation the leader in this field. Corn is the country's leading crop. Other important crops are tobacco, oats, wheat, hay, flax, citrus fruits, potatoes, barley, sorghums, rye, buckwheat, rice, cotton, beans, peas, soybeans, peanuts, sugar cane, sugar beets, deciduous fruits, and nuts. The country ranks first among the nations as a grower of corn, oats, citrus fruits, cotton, and tobacco. Stock raising is carried on extensively, with cattle predominating; sheep, horses, hogs, mules, chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese, and goats are also raised. According to the Bureau of the Census there were in the U.S. in 1950 5,382,162 farms, averaging ab. 215 acres; total acreage in farms was 1,158,565,852. The volume of U.S. fisheries output far surpasses that of any country in the world, the country's fishing industry having taken root in colonial New England. Alaska and the Columbia River are widely known for their salmon, and Alaska is also known for its seal fishing. Long Island Sound is known for oysters; New England for lobsters, clams, halibut, cod, menhaden, and bluefish; the Great Lakes for lake trout and other freshwater fish; the Gulf of Mexico for shrimp. The nation possesses great mineral wealth. Among its leading minerals are petroleum, coal, iron, copper, helium, natural gas, clay, sand and gravel, aluminum, zinc, lead, sulfur, gold, lime, salt, phosphate rock, molybdenum, uranium, and silver. The total value of metallic and nonmetallic mineral production in the U.S. for 1949 was 10,554,000,000 dollars. Abundant natural resources, mass-production methods, and an outstanding system of transportation have contributed to making the U.S. by far the greatest manufacturing nation of the world. Its many products include food and beverages, machinery, automotive vehicles, aircraft, primary metals, chemicals, printed matter, paper, lumber and wood products (including furniture), clay, glass, and stone products, petroleum products, leather and leather products, rubber products, instruments, and tobacco products. In 1952 average employment in manufacturing establishments was 15,900,000, including ab. 12,800,000 production workers. New York City has the greatest employment in manufacturing of any U.S. city and leads in the production of clothing. New York and Chicago are major publishing centers. Automobile manufacturing is centered in S Michigan, especially in the Detroit area.

The chief center of the iron and steel industry is in the Pittsburgh-Youngstown-Cleveland industrial region, with important outlying centers in the Calumet district (South Chicago, Ill.), the Gary, Ind., Birmingham, Ala., Buffalo-Lackawanna, N.Y., E Pennsylvania, and Sparrows Point, Md. The greatest center of cotton textile industries, formerly New England, is now in the Southern Piedmont district extending from S Virginia SE to E central Alabama. New England has a diversified industrial structure with important manufactures of machinery, woolen textiles, boots and shoes, electrical equipment, metal products, and numerous other products. Petroleum refining is a vast industry, with about a dozen large centers scattered over the U.S.; the greatest centers are the Los Angeles area, the Gulf Coast ports from Houston, Tex., to Lake Charles, La., the Calumet district of NW Indiana, and the NE New Jersey section of the New York City urban area. The latter two centers are market locations of the industry, and obtain their crude petroleum from distant sources. Chicago is the leader in slaughtering and meat packing, and many other cities in the Middle West have a concentration of this type of industry. The aircraft and shipbuilding industries, which experienced a tremendous expansion during World War II, are scattered, although major centers of concentration are found on the W coast. In 1951 U.S. exports were valued at 14,877,000,000 dollars; general imports for the same year were placed at 11,599,000,000 dollars. The U.S. has the world's most extensive transportation facilities: 1,617,000 mi. of improved rural highways in 1949, of which 202,223 mi. were paved, New York leads in paved highway mileage (26,280 mi.) followed by Pennsylvania (18,781 mi.), Texas (13,212 mi.), and Illinois (12,137 mi.). The U.S. had 224,511 mi. of railroads in 1949, a great system of canals and inland waterways, and many excellent harbors. Its communications system is also outstanding; includes a government-operated postal system, more than 39 million telephones (1949), and the world's largest mileage of telegraph lines.

History. The earliest history of the region merges with that of North America, i.e., discovery and temporary colonization by the Northmen, c1000 A.D., and discovery (and claim for England) by John Cabot in 1497. What is now the U.S. itself was later explored by Ponce de León (1513-14), Verazaano (1524), De Soto (1539-42), and others. The first permanent settlement was made (1565) by the Spanish at St. Augustine, Fla. The first permanent English settlements were made at Jamestown, Va. (May 13, 1607) and at Plymouth, Mass. (Dec. 21, 1620). Thirteen colonies were settled, forming by their union in 1776 the 13 original states; they were Virginia, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maryland, Connecticut, Rhode Island, North Carolina, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, and Georgia, all founded by the English; New York and New Jersey, originally colonized by the Dutch; and Delaware, first settled by the Swedes. In the early days of colonization the settlers were much harassed by the Indians; among the wars carried on with the Indians were the Pequot War and King Philip's War; with the French and Indians, King William's War, Queen Anne's War, King George's War, and the French and Indian Wars, in which the British won decisive control of the seaboard colonies, maintaining this domination until the Revolutionary War. The following are among the leading events of U.S. history: the Revolutionary War (1775-83), hastened by the Stamp Act of 1765, taxes in 1767 on tea and other items, and the Boston Port Bill of 1774; the Declaration of Independence, 1776; the Articles of Confederation, ratified (1781) by the states and lasting until 1789; surrender of the British General Cornwallis, 1781; recognition of U.S. independence, 1783; the Ordinance of 1787 relating to the Northwest Territory; the Constitution framed, 1787; new form of government inaugurated (1789) with the capital at New York; capital removed to Philadelphia (1790) and to Washington (1800); Indian wars (1790-94), concluded by treaty in 1795; naval war with the French (1798-1800); Tripolitan War with the Barbary pirates (1801-05); the Louisiana Purchase (1803); Supreme Court decision in the case of Marbury v. Madison established the court's right to review state or federal laws (1803); the Embargo Act prohibiting foreign commerce (1807); war with Great Britain (1812-15); cession of Florida by Spain (1819); the financial panic of 1819; the Missouri Compromise (1820); the Monroe Doctrine (1823); the nullification movement flourished (1832-33); the financial crisis of 1837; annexation of Texas (1845); the NW boundary settled (1846) with Great Britain; Mexican War (1846-48); acquisition of New Mexico and California by the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, which ended the Mexican War, and of the S part of Arizona by the Gadsden Purchase (1853); discovery (1848) of gold in California resulting in the gold rush of 1849, a heavy migration to the W; the Omnibus Bill (1850), often called the Compromise of 1850, proposed by Henry Clay, including provisions for the admission to the Union of California as a free state, the organization of Utah and New Mexico as territories permitting settlers to decide the slavery issue for themselves; the Kansas-Nebraska Act (1854), setting aside the Missouri Compromise and permitting popular sovereignty on the slavery issue in Kansas and Nebraska; the financial crisis of 1857; the Dred Scott decision (1857); secession from the Union of 11 states (1860-61); the Civil War (1861-65); constitutional prohibition of slavery (1865), with the adoption of the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution; Reconstruction in the South (1865-70); purchase of Alaska from Russia (1867); the financial crisis of 1873; disputed presidential election (1876-77), resulting in decision by special electoral commission in favor of Rutherford B. Hayes, although his rival Samuel J. Tilden polled a majority of 250,000 popular votes; resumption of specie payments (1879); the Spanish-American War (1898), resulting in the acquisition by the U.S. of Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Philippines and the occupation of Cuba until 1902; annexation of Hawaii (1898); acquisition of the Canal Zone (1903) on the basis of perpetual rental from Panama; first powered airplane flight (1903) at Kitty Hawk, N.C., by Orville and Wilbur Wright; the financial panic of 1907; occupation of Veracruz for seven months during 1914 to protect American residents and American interests during the Mexican revolution; pursuit (1916) of Pancho Villa, Mexican revolutionary, by U.S. troops led by General John J. Pershing, after several border incidents; U.S. participation (1917-18) in World War I; Prohibition Amendment (Eighteenth Amendment), effective 1920 and supplemented that same year by the Prohibition Enforcement (Volstead) Act; rejection (1920) by the U.S. Senate of the nation's entry into the League of Nations; the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution, permitting women's suffrage (1920); World War I peace treaty with Germany (1921); Briand-Kellogg Pact to outlaw war formulated (1928) by U.S. Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg with French Foreign Minister Aristide Briand, and later endorsed by 60 other nations; U.S. stock market crash (1929) signaling the beginning of a depression, the most severe in U.S. history; election (1932) to the presidency of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who promised a "new deal" for the nation then suffering under the burden of thousands of bank and business failures and unemployment of more than 11 million; establishment under the so-called New Deal of many new government agencies such as the Civilian Conservation Corps, Works Projects Administration, Public Works Administration, National Recovery Administration, and the Social Security Administration; gold withdrawn from circulation in the U.S. (1933); repeal of Prohibition by the Twenty-first Amendment (1933); establishment of the Good Neighbor Policy (1933) to encourage friendship among nations of the Western Hemisphere; reduction of gold in the U.S. dollar (1934); passage (1940) of the Selective Service Act, first peacetime draft law in U.S. history; shattering of historic precedent with election of Roosevelt to a third term, first instance of a U.S. president being elected for more than two terms; Lend-Lease Act (1941), making U.S. resources available to nations fighting Italy and Germany; attack on the U.S. naval base at Pearl Harbor (Dec. 7, 1941) by Japan plunged U.S. into World War II; U.S. one of the nations meeting (April 25, 1945) at San Francisco, Calif., to draft the United Nations charter; war with Germany ended May 8, 1945, with Japan, Aug. 14, 1945; Japanese surrender hastened by the use of a new weapon, the atom bomb, dropped on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima (Aug. 6, 1945) and Nagasaki (Aug. 9, 1945); succession (April 12, 1945) to the presidency of Vice-President Harry S. Truman upon the death of Roosevelt, who had been elected (1944) to a fourth term; U.S. chosen (1946) as permanent seat of the United Nations; Philippines become an independent republic (1946); military and economic aid given (1947) to Greece and Turkey, under the Truman Doctrine, as a means of fighting the spread of Communism; U.S. given trusteeship by the United Nations of Pacific islands formerly held by Japan; the nation's armed services unified (1947) under the new Department of Defense; the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948 launched the European Recovery Program (popularly called the Marshall Plan) of postwar military and economic rehabilitation of Europe and China; Truman inaugurated (1949) as 33rd president called for a "bold new program" of aid to underdeveloped areas of the world (this proposal being known popularly as Point Four); the U.S. one of the 12 nations signing (1949) a North Atlantic defense pact; the nation's atomic weapon monopoly ended (1949) by atomic explosion in the U.S.S.R., and (1952) by a British atomic explosion in Australia; the U.S. one of the chief participants in the Korean War beginning in 1950.

Culture. Late in the 18th century the U.S. was primarily an agricultural nation with some small-scale shipping and manufacturing enterprises. Since the first census in 1790, however, the percentage of urban population has increased steadily from five percent to 64 percent in 1950. At the same time, the center of population has been moving steadily westward from 23 mi. E of Baltimore, Md., in 1790 to 8 mi. NW of Olney, Ill., in 1950. The shift in population may be explained in large measure by the westward movement of the frontier of settlement to the Pacific Coast, and by the Industrial Revolution which resulted in the drawing off of much farm population into expanding industry, and the great increase in commerce which both have led to great urban growth. Still another factor in the population shift from farm to city has been American technical progress (which has facilitated industry and rapid communication) as exemplified by the invention of the cotton gin (1793) by Eli Whitney, successful navigation of the steamboat Clermont (1807) by Robert Fulton, the building (1830) by Peter Cooper of the Tom Thumb, first American-built railroad locomotive to be put in actual operation, the invention (1831) of the McCormick reaper by Cyrus Hall McCormick, invention (1892-93) of the first successful gasoline automobile by the Duryea brothers, the invention (1911) of the automobile self-starting device by Charles F. Kettering, and the perfection in the early 1900's by Henry Ford of assembly-line and mass-production methods. Of the total U.S. population in 1950 6.8 percent were born in foreign countries. Whereas the earliest immigrants were principally from England, Ireland, and Germany, the foreign-born white population of the U.S. in 1950 had come principally from Italy, Germany, Russia, Poland, England, Scotland, Wales, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, the Irish Republic, and Northern Ireland. Large-scale immigration to the U.S. did not begin until the middle of the 19th century, when it was encouraged by European political dislocations and the existence of an American frontier. Late in the same century the tremendous industrial growth of the nation in such fields as steel, oil, meat packing, and railroads formed a great market for cheap labor and drew immigration from S and E Europe. Early in the 20th century a widespread belief that N Europeans were more readily assimilable brought about legislation instituting a quota system basing immigration from countries outside the Western Hemisphere on national origin. A Chinese Exclusion Act put into effect in 1882 because of an influx of Chinese labor to the W coast was not rescinded until 1943. Some refugees from Nazism and Fascism were admitted to the U.S. in the 1930's and 1940's under the quota laws; some others uprooted by World War II were admitted later under special postwar legislation relating to displaced persons. Indians in the U.S. in 1950 numbered 343,410. Many of these live on reservations totaling 55 million acres and located in various states. Estimates of the number of Indians in 1492 in what is now the U.S. range between 720,000 and one million, their subsequent decrease being variously attributed to such factors as wars, disease, starvation, and economic exploitation by the white man. Today, however, the

Indian segment of the population is one of the most rapidly increasing in the nation. The greater number of U.S. Indians are under the guidance of the U.S. Office of Indian Affairs, which seeks to assist them in adapting their culture and customs to contemporary conditions and in achieving economic independence. The Indian contribution to American culture is evidenced in arts and crafts, folklore, and in geographic nomenclature. Negroes in the U.S. in 1950 numbered 15,042,286, or 10 percent of the total population. The African Negro was first brought to the U.S. in 1619 when a Dutch vessel brought African slaves to Jamestown, Va., and the great bulk of the Negroes in America from that time until 1863 were slaves. Antislavery sentiment existed as early as colonial times but did not gain intensity until late in the 18th century, culminating in Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation of 1863. Demands for labor in urban areas, particularly during World Wars I and II, have resulted in large migrations of Negroes from the South to cities elsewhere in the nation. Today the Negro population is increasing in number but declining in proportion to the total population, a disparity partly attributable to the substandard dwelling and health facilities accessible to this group. Although Negro art, music, and folklore have made many contributions to American culture, the U.S. Negro is still relegated economically largely to menial labor and is for the most part segregated socially. There are more than 240 religious bodies in the country and a total church membership of some 79,500,000 (1949). The three largest groups are Protestants, comprising 60 percent of the total; Roman Catholics, 33 percent; and Jews, six percent. The major Protestant denominations include the Baptists, Methodists, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Protestant Episcopal Church, Disciples of Christ, Congregational Christian Church, Latter-Day Saints, Evangelical and Reformed Church, Evangelical United Brethren, and Friends. An individual American culture evolved slowly. At the outset the American arts and literature were heavily imitative of English models, and an approach to a common American style was slowed by the difficulty of communication. In the early colonial days theological writing was the most abundant; the first book published in the U.S. was the Bay Psalm Book (1640). Later Thomas Paine's Common Sense (1776) agitated in behalf of the American cause against the British, and the contemporary patriotic figures of the day published their writings. Patriotic poetry found an audience as America became more aware of itself. The first American novelist was Charles Brockden Brown (1771-1810), but American fiction did not bloom until the 19th century, with such writers as Washington Irving, James Fenimore Cooper, Herman Melville, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Henry James (who became an expatriate), Harriet Beecher Stowe, Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain), Bret Harte, and Joel Chandler Harris. Edgar Allan Poe produced both fiction and verse; other poets of the era were William Cullen Bryant, Oliver Wendell Holmes, James Russell Lowell, John Greenleaf Whittier, Sidney Lanier, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Emily Dickinson (whose works were not published until many years later), and Walt Whitman. Historians too, such as George Bancroft and Francis Parkman, were already at work evaluating and recounting the progress of the new nation. A note of realism was heard late in the century and developed rapidly into the naturalism which was the keynote of U.S. fiction early in the 20th century; these currents can be traced in the works of Stephen Crane, Frank Norris, Jack London, Upton Sinclair, Theodore Dreiser, and Sherwood Anderson. At the same time the nonfiction writers such as Lincoln Steffens and Ida Tarbell were exposing political and industrial conditions in the nation. During the 1920's Sinclair Lewis employed the novel as a device for satirizing American mores. H. L. Mencken and George Jean Nathan produced widely read essays and criticism which also often poked fun at middle-class American customs and taste. In the wake of World War I three American novelists of major stature, John Dos Passos, Ernest Hemingway, and William Faulkner, appeared. Immediately before and after the war new poets, such as Carl Sandburg, Edgar Lee Masters, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Amy Lowell, Robert Frost, Edwin Arlington

Robinson, Robinson Jeffers, and the experimentalist expatriates T. S. Eliot and Ezra Pound, were heard. Eugene O'Neill wrote important new plays. Portrait-ure was the principal form of painting in 18th-century America, with John Singleton Copley, Benjamin West, Gilbert Stuart, and Charles Willson Peale among the best-known painters of this sort. Eventually landscapes became acceptable subjects, and in the 19th century a more independent American style than seen previously was introduced by the group known as the Hudson River School of landscape painters. John James Audubon became known for his beautifully colored pictures of American birds. Prints of American life and history were produced by Nathaniel Currier and James Merritt Ives. After the Civil War a variety of individual styles of painting were displayed by Albert Pinkham Ryder, James McNeill Whistler, Thomas Eakins, Winslow Homer, and John Singer Sargent. A heavy French influence in the early 20th century, as evidenced in the work of such painters as Childe Hassam and Mary Cassatt, gave way to a new American influence exerted by Robert Henri. The famous "Armory Show" of 1913 signaled the arrival of the modern movement in U.S. painting, which since that time has shown a variety of European and American influences. The better-known later painters include John Marin, Georgia O'Keeffe, Charles Sheeler, Grant Wood, Thomas Hart Benton, John Stuart Curry, Charles E. Burchfield, and Edward Hopper, among many others. American music begins with the song My Days Have Been So Wondrous Free (1759), by Francis Hopkinson, the first music known to have been written in what is now the U.S. Religious music, folk music, and regional songs were characteristic of the 18th century. The American Negro contributed songs called spirituals, and blues (important in the development of jazz, the dance music which became popular after World War I). More modern times have seen wider attention given to serious American music ranging from the romantic works of Edward MacDowell to the "modern" music of Charles Ives, Virgil Thompson, Aaron Copland, Walter Piston, Roy Harris, Roger Sessions, and others. The development of radio (the U.S. had 75 million sets in use in 1943) provided a wide audience for the "popular" songs of George M. Cohan, Victor Herbert, George Gershwin, Irving Berlin, Jerome Kern, and numerous others. Almost every major U.S. city is the seat of a symphony orchestra, and important opera companies are located at New York, Chicago, and San Francisco. More than 1,700 daily newspapers (exclusive of foreign-language newspapers) and 530 Sunday newspapers are printed in the U.S. Some 9,000 books (including new editions of old works) were published in 1949. The many museums and planetariums located across the nation include the Smithsonian Institution and the Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.; the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, and the American Museum of Natural History (including the Hayden Planetarium), New York; the Art Institute of Chicago, the Adler Planetarium, and the Chicago Natural History Museum, Chicago; the Philadelphia Museum of Art and the Fels Planetarium, Philadelphia; the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; and the Griffiths Observatory, Los Angeles. Many other cities support fine museums, as do numerous states and universities. Outstanding among the nation's libraries are the Library of Congress, the Harvard University Library, and the New York Public Library (the world's largest public library system). Each of the states, cities, and local school districts of the U.S. has its own system of free public elementary and high schools. There are also numerous private schools, colleges, and universities. Each state also maintains institutions of higher learning. Land-grant colleges and universities receive support from the federal government according to provisions of the Morrill Acts of 1862 and 1890. The nation supports and operates, among others, the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. Harvard University (founded 1636), at Cambridge, Mass., is the oldest institution of higher learning in the U.S. Others founded at an early date are the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va.; Yale University, New Haven, Conn.; the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa.; Princeton University, Princeton, N.J.; Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.; Columbia University, New York City; Brown University, Providence, R.I.; Rutgers University (founded as Queens College), New Brunswick, N.J.; and Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H. Mount Holyoke College (founded 1837 as Mount Holyoke Seminary), at South Hadley, Mass., is the oldest U.S. college for women. Elmira College, Elmira, N.Y.; Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; Wells College, Aurora, N.Y.; Hunter College, New York City; Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.; Smith College, Northampton, Mass.; and Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pa., are among the other women's colleges founded at an early date. The motto of the U.S. is E Pluribus Unum, meaning "One Out of Many."

United States. American frigate, built at Philadelphia in 1797, which, under the command of Stephen Decatur, captured the British frigate Macedonian, Oct. 25, 1812.

United States. American passenger ship, 990 ft. long, of 51,500 tons, launched at Newport News, Va., June 23, 1951. On her maiden voyage, July, 1952, the United States set records in both west-east and east-west legs of her trip, 3 days, 10 hours, 40 minutes and 3 days, 12 hours, 12 minutes respectively, between Ambrose Light and Bishop's Rock, England.

United States Bank of the. See Bank of the United States, First, and Bank of the United States, Second.

United States, Gazette of the. See Gazette of the United States.

United States Chamber of Commerce. National federation, established in 1912, composed of local chambers of commerce and other trade units associated for the purpose of promoting and preserving their interests. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce formulates and expresses trade policy on a national level, while the various local chambers participate in community affairs.

United States Chess Federation. Chess organization in the U.S., formed in 1939 by merger of the American Chess Federation and the National Chess Federation. It is a nonprofit organization, incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois, and has as its aim the promotion of chess activities in the U.S. To this end it sponsors a biennial tournament for the U.S. championship, an annual U.S. "open" championship, an active junior chess program, and a program of chess instruction and events for veterans, hospitals, and institutions.

United States Christian Commission. Organization, formed in November, 1861, by members of the Young Men's Christian Association, for the purpose of promoting the physical and spiritual welfare of the Union soldiers and sailors in the American Civil War. About a million and a half Bibles and Testaments were distributed, besides much other reading matter, and upward of 5,000 delegates carried on the active work of the organization. It received government and public support.

United States Employment Service. [Called the USES.] Government employment agency originally established in 1918 and reestablished by the National Employment System Act of 1933. It cooperates with state employment units and is authorized to furnish financial aid to such state agencies. The USES was originally a part of the Department of Labor. It was placed under the Social Security Board in 1936, under the War Manpower Commission in 1942, and in 1948 was transferred to the Bureau of Employment Security of the Federal Security Agency.

United States Flag. [Legal name, The Flag of the United States; called the "Stars and Stripes."] National flag of the United States of America, consisting of a canton containing forty-eight white stars (one for each state) on a blue field, and thirteen stripes (one for each of the original states) alternately red and white in the fly. The original flag, according to a (now generally not believed) legend designed by Betsy Ross of Philadelphia, contained thirteen stars in the canton; after 1818 the number of stripes was standardized and provision was made for adding one star for each new state.

United States Housing Authority. [Called the USHA.] Federal corporation established under the National Housing Act of 1937. Operating under the National Housing Agency, the USHA extends financial credits and grants to state and local housing agencies to enable slum clearance and the construction of dwelling units for low-income groups.

United States Literary Gazette. Semimonthly critical and literary journal published (1824-26) at Boston and edited by Theophilus Parsons. It was consolidated (1826) with the New York Review and Athenaeum Magazine and was published for a year as the United States Review and Literary Gazette.

United States Magazine, The. Philadelphia monthly (January-December, 1779) published and edited by Hugh Henry Brackenridge.

United States Magazine and Democratic Review. Monthly journal of literature and politics published from 1837 to 1849. Contributors included Nathaniel Hawthorne, Edgar Allan Poe, and John Greenleaf Whittier. Its founder and editor was John L. O'Sullivan, who originated the phrase "manifest destiny" in an article published in its pages in 1845.

United States Maritime Commission. Federal agency set up by the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 for the purpose of encouraging and developing an American merchant marine. The commission has five members. It succeeded the U.S. Shipping Board and is empowered to grant three types of construction and operational subsidies in place of the mail contracts authorized by earlier merchant marine legislation. One of its primary objects is the enabling of American ocean-line operators to cope with foreign competition. The commission also enforces the labor sections of national maritime laws.

United States National Museum. Museum of the U.S. government, at Washington, D.C., under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution. It is the legal depository of all the government collections in zoology, botany, geology, ethnology, archaeology, the industrial and fine arts, and other fields. These collections have been secured through exploring expeditions, surveys, and other activities of the government, as in the Department of Agriculture and the bureaus of fishery and American ethnology, and by gift, exchange, and purchase. The museum includes a national gallery of art. A new building, provided for by Congress in 1903, was first occupied in 1910. It has a library of more than 236,000 volumes and publishes its Proceedings, Bulletin, and Contributions from the United States National Herbarium.

United States of Colombia (kō.lum'bī.ə). Official name of Colombia from 1861 to 1886, when a federal constitution was in force.

United States of Indonesia (in.dō.nē'zhā, -shā). See Indonesia, United States of.

United States Shipping Board. Independent federal agency established in 1919 for the purpose of constructing a merchant marine for use in World War I, when it operated the Emergency Fleet Corporation. The Shipping Board, which was continued under the Merchant Marine Acts of 1920 and 1928, took steps to promote the development of a U.S. merchant fleet by means of construction and mail-carrying subsidies. It was replaced by the United States Maritime Commission.

United States v. American Tobacco Co., 221 U.S. 106 (1911). U.S. Supreme Court decision notable for its reaffirmation of the "rule of reason" formula as recognized earlier in Standard Oil v. United States (1911). While the court ordered reorganization of the American Tobacco Company it did not decree dissolution, thus lending further support to the doctrine that only unreasonable combinations in restraint of trade were illegal under the terms of the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890. The suit was brought in 1907 by the U.S. against the American Tobacco Company and others subsidiary to it (in all, 29 individuals and 65 American and two English corporations) for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. The original American Tobacco Company of New Jersey was organized in 1890, by consolidating five competing concerns that made and sold 95 percent of the domestic cigarettes and less than 8 percent of all other domestic manufactured tobacco. It then bought other competing concerns, or their control, paying therefor in cash and in its own stock and that of combinations subsidiary to itself, organized for manufacture and sale. These were merged in 1904 under the original name and soon virtually controlled the tobacco industries of the U.S. The combined assets of the allied concerns forming the combination exceeded 400 million dollars. Chief among its methods of restraining and monopolizing trade were selling under cost and forcing owners who sold out to it into restrictive agreements that they should not reënter the field. The decision of the Supreme Court, handed down May 29, 1911, directed a dissolution of the combination and the recreating, out of the elements composing it, of a new condition honestly in harmony with the law. The decision allowed the trust a maximum of eight months to carry out these directions.

United States v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936) (but'ler). [Also known as the Hoosac Mills Case.] U.S. Supreme Court decision declaring unconstitutional the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 on the ground that the regulation of agriculture was reserved to the states and was not embraced by Congressional power. The processing of taxes levied by the federal government were invalidated, while the payment of crop benefits to farmers was ruled to be coercive. This sharp restriction of the general welfare power of the national government was one of the major judicial reverses suffered by the New Deal.

United States v. Classic, 313 U.S. 299 (1941). U.S. Supreme Court decision holding that the national government's regulatory powers over elections extended to primaries in instances where the election was an essential part of the apparatus for nominating candidates for federal offices. The case involved Negro disenfranchisement in Louisiana.

United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U.S. 542 (1876) (krük'shank). U.S. Supreme Court decision important for its interpretation of the Fourteenth Amendment in regard to the protection of the Negro freedman. The case concerned a provision of the Force Act of 1870. The court declared the amendment to be a guarantee of protection against the act of the state itself and was not intended to restrain or to punish individual offenders. The amendment, said Chief Justice Morrison R. Waite, "adds nothing to the rights of one citizen as against another. It simply furnishes a federal guaranty against any encroachment by the States upon the fundamental rights which belong to every citizen as a member of society."

United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation, 299 U.S. 304 (1936) (kér'tis-rit'). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding a presidential proclamation prohibiting the sale of arms and munitions to a foreign power. The opinion is notable for its affirmation of the broad authority of the U.S. president in the realm of foreign relations, and for its pronouncement of the doctrine that the national powers of external sovereignty were derived from a source in existence even before the establishment of the government under the Constitution. Thus, the powers of the central government in foreign relations are inherited as well as inherent.

United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100 (1941) (där'bi). Unanimous Supreme Court decision upholding the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. The court's opinion, formally overruling the judicial position in Hammer v. Dagenhart (1918), was notable for its broad assertion of the national commerce power.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co., 156 U.S. 1 (1895) (nīt). U.S. Supreme Court decision holding that the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890 did not embrace combinations for controlling manufacture, as distinguished from those controlling commerce. Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, who delivered the majority opinion, sharply delimited the national commerce power and effectively deprived the Sherman Act of the authority its framers had intended for it. This case was the first occasion on which the court interpreted the act. The case involved the E. C. Knight and other companies subsidiary to the American Sugar Refining Company.

United States v. Harris, 106 U.S. 629 (1883) (har'is). U.S. Supreme Court decision invalidating the Third Enforcement Act of 1871 (the so-called Ku Klux Klan Act) passed by the Radical Republicans as part of their Reconstruction program. The act authorized the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus and the use of the armed forces of the U.S. at the discretion of the president in instances where it had been determined that the provisions of the act had been violated. The court held that the national legislative power did not embrace the enactment of laws suppressing crime within the states and declared the act a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.

United States v. Lanza, 260 U.S. 377 (1922) (lan'za). U.S. Supreme Court decision clarifying the section of the Eighteenth Amendment providing that "Congress and the several states shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation." The unanimous decision delivered by Chief Justice William H. Taft held that the states need not enforce prohibition if such action was contrary to their policy. He also declared that the Eighteenth Amendment did not constitute the source of the power of the states to enact and enforce prohibition, for such power existed before that amendment was proclaimed.

United States v. Lovett, Watson, and Dodd, 328 U.S. 303 (1946) (luv'et; wot'son, dod). U.S. Supreme Court decision notable for its application of the constitutional safeguard against bills of attainder. The case involved federal employees who had continued to work for the national government after the passage of the Emergency Deficiency Appropriation Act of 1943, part of which provided that official funds should not be used in the payment of salaries to three government officials who had been designated as subversive by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

United States v. Peters, 5 Cranch 115 (1809) (pé'térz). U.S. Supreme Court decision notable for the forceful opinion of Chief Justice John Marshall upholding the extent and employment of federal authority within the constitutionally designated realm. The case arose over the Pennsylvania state legislature's authorization of the use of state militia to stay a federal marshal from serving a writ of execution obtained from the U.S. District Court of Pennsylvania. "If the legislatures of the several states may, at will, annul the judgments of the Courts of the United States," said Marshall, "and destroy the rights acquired under those judgments, the constitution itself becomes a solemn mockery, and the nation is deprived of the means of enforcing its laws by the instrumentality of its own tribunals." The decision provoked vigorous assertions of state sovereignty from the Pennsylvania state legislature; after a threatened show of force on both sides, the federal authority was sustained.

United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U.S. 644 (1929) (shvīm'er). U.S. Supreme Court decision involving the duties of citizenship on the part of an alien applying for naturalization. Rosika Schwimmer, a self-declared pacifist, stated on the ground of principle that, should the necessity arise, she would not bear arms in defense of the nation. In delivering the majority opinion denying citizenship to the appellant, Justice Pierce Butler declared that the duty to defend the national government was a basic principle of the Constitution. The dissenting opinion of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes pointed out that the issue at stake was "not free thought for those who agree with us, but freedom for the thought that we hate. I think that we should adhere to that principle with regard to admission into, as well as to life within, this country."

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Association, 166 U.S. 290 (1897) (trans.mi.zō'frī, -rā). U.S. Supreme Court decision declaring that a combination formed by several railroads to establish rail rates violated the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890. The case is notable chiefly for the railroad counsel's contention (with which the court majority did not agree) that only unreasonable combinations in restraint of trade were illegal. This "rule of reason" formula was later adopted by the court in United States v. American Tobacco Co. (1911) and Standard Oil Co. v. United States (1911).

United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U.S. 649 (1898) (wōng'kim'ärk'). U.S. Supreme Court decision upholding the contention of an American-born person of Chinese extraction that his birth in the U.S. conferred citizenship upon him and hence did not make him subject to the Chinese Exclusion Acts upon his return to the U.S. after a journey to China. The decision was a vital interpretation of the clause in the Fourteenth Amendment stating that "all persons born or naturalized in the U.S. and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside." The court's opinion held that "the opening sentence of the Fourteenth Amendment is throughout affirmative and declaratory. . . ."

United States v. Workingmen's Amalgamated Council of New Orleans, 54 Fed. 994 (1893) (nū ōr'lē.anz, ōr.lēnz'). Case involving the granting of an injunction restraining a strike action by trade unions at New Orleans on the ground that the strike violated the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890. The decree established the principle that the provisions of the act were applicable to labor organizations.

United Steelworkers of America. Industrial union, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, embracing workers in steel and aluminum production and fabrication units. It was originally known as the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee. Among its prominent leaders have been Philip Murray and James B. Carey. The union maintains headquarters at Pittsburgh. Membership: 798,000 (1944).

Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Enunciation of the fundamental rights of all human beings, prepared by the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, and adopted (Dec. 10, 1948) at Paris by the United Nations General Assembly. The declaration was designed by the Human Rights Commission, headed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, primarily to set forth "a common standard for achievement" regarding the freedoms of speech, religion, and assembly, the right to work, and the right to have an adequate living standard. Forty-eight nations were recorded as favoring the declaration, while six nations of the Soviet "bloc" abstained.

Universal Postal Union. Postal liaison agency, with some regulatory powers, established by the Postal Convention at Bern, Switzerland, in October, 1874. One of the most widely recognized and least controversial of all international bodies, it has carried on the collection, circulation, and publication of postal rates and information. It also refers disputes and answers postal inquiries. In the period since it was founded, several world postal conferences have modified and enlarged its duties and responsibilities.

Université Nationale de France (ū.nē.ver.sē.tā.nā.syo.nā.de frāns). Institution which virtually included the entire educational system of France. The organization of the old University of Paris having been destroyed by the Revolution, certain "écoles centrales" appeared at various points in the country. These were abolished by Napoleon, and the whole system was reconstructed (1808).

"Universities, Borough of." Nickname of Bronx, the University City (ū.ni.vēr'si.ti). City in E Missouri, in St. Louis County; a western residential suburb of St. Louis. 39,892 (1950).

University College. Oldest college of Oxford University, England. According to a baseless tradition, it was founded by King Alfred in 872 (it actually originated in a fund bequeathed by William, archdeacon of Durham, in 1249; and the college was practically established in 1280).

University College. Nonsectarian college at London, founded in 1828.

University Heights. Village in NE Ohio, in Cuyahoga County; an eastern residential suburb of Cleveland. 11,506 (1950).

University Park. City in C Texas, in Dallas County; a northern residential suburb of Dallas. 24,275 (1950).

Unkiar-Skelessi (ūng.kyār'ske.le.sē'). [Also, Hunkiar-Skelessi.] Small place in Turkey, near Istanbul, where, in 1833, Russia and Turkey concluded a treaty favorable to the russia.

Unknown Soldier, Tomb of the. American national shrine at Arlington National Cemetery, near Washington, D.C., containing the remains of an unknown American soldier selected from the unidentified dead of the American Expeditionary Forces who fell in World War I. The "Unknown Soldier" represents his 4,431 unidentified comrades who rest in Europe or in graves in the sea. His tomb bears the inscription: "Here Rests In Honored Glory An American Soldier Known But To God."

Ukumbi (ūng.kōm'bē). Native name of Mutano.

Unlearned Parliament. See Parliament of Dunces.
Unleavened Bread. Novel by Robert Grant, published in 1900.

Unleavened Bread, Feast of. See Feast of Unleavened Bread.

Unna (ūn'ā). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the province of Westphalia, Prussia, ab. 10 mi. E of Dortmund; marketing center of a fertile agricultural district. It also has coal mines, and machine, metal, chemical, electrical, shoe, and furniture industries. There are remains of medieval fortifications, and a Gothic church of the 14th century. 26,332 (1950).

Unna, Paul Gerson. b. at Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 8, 1850; d. there, Jan. 29, 1929. German dermatologist. He established (1891) the existence of "plasma cells" (to which he gave this name). He proposed (1891) his polychrome methylene blue, which soon became important in the modern technique of analysis of the blood. He conducted histological and physiological studies of the skin, described seborrheic eczema (1884), wrote on microscopic pathology of the skin, introduced (1886) ichthyol and resorcinol into medicine, and also introduced the so-called Unna pastes, the zinc oxide hard and soft pastes. He originated (1884) the idea of using coated pills to provide for local absorption in the duodenum.

Unnao (ūn'ou). [Also, Unao.] District in Uttar Pradesh, Union of India, E of Cawnpore; rice, wheat, sugar, and millet. Capital, Unnao; area, ab. 1,780 sq. mi.; pop. 959,542 (1941).

Unnatural Combat, The. Play by Philip Massinger, acted c1619 and printed in 1639.

Unpopular Review, The. Quarterly journal founded by Henry Holt and published from 1914 to 1921. Contributors included Brander Matthews, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Mary Austin, and Amy Lowell. In 1919 the name was changed to The Unpartisan Review.

Unready, the. Epithet of Ethelred II.

Unrest. Novel by Warwick Deeping, published in 1916.

UNRRA (ūn'rā'). See United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Unruh (ūn'rō), Fritz von. b. at Koblenz, Germany, May 10, 1885—. German poet, playwright, and novelist. His first play, Offiziere (1911), was staged by Max Reinhardt and resulted in the author's resignation from the German army. Louis Ferdinand Prinz von Preussen (1913) was kept off the stage and could not be produced until after World War I. While serving on the Western Front Unruh wrote Vor der Entscheidung (1914) and Opfergang (1916) and the drama Ein Geschlecht (published after World War I). His later works include Platz (1920), Flügel der Nike (1923), Heinrich aus Andernach (1925), Bonaparte (1926), and Phaea (1930). In 1932 he left Germany. Since his arrival in the U.S. (1941) he has written the novel The End Is Not Yet (1947; German edition, Der Nie Verlor, 1949) and The Saint (1950).

UNSCOP. See United Nations Special Committee on Palestine.

Unser Fritz (ūn'zēr frīts). [Eng. trans., "Our Fritz."] Nickname given by Germans to Frederick William, crown prince of Prussia and Germany, and later emperor as Frederick III of Prussia.

Unst (unst). Island in the Shetland Islands, in N Scotland, in the county of Shetland, ab. 37 mi. N of Lerwick. It is the northernmost of the Shetland Islands. Length, ab. 12 mi.; width, ab. 6 mi.

Unstrut (ūn'strōt). River in C Germany which joins the Saale near Naumburg. Length, ab. 108 mi.

Unter den Linden (ūn'tēr den līn'den). Street in Berlin which extends E from the Brandenburg Tor about three fifths of a mile. Width, 160 ft.

Unter-Elsass (ūn'tēr.ēl'sās). German name of Alsace, Lower; see also Bas-Rhin.

Unterfranken (ūn'tēr.frāng'kən). German name of Lower Franconia.

Untermeyer (ūn'tēr.mlēr), Jean Starr. b. at Zanesville, Ohio, May 13, 1886—. American poet and translator. She married (1907) Louis Untermeyer, from whom she was later divorced. Author of Growing Pains (1918), Dreams Out of Darkness (1921), Love and Need (1943), and other books of poetry. She was one of the original group which published the biennial A Miscellany of American Poetry (1920, 1922), and has translated Hermann Broch's The Death of Virgil (1945) and other books.

Untermyer, Louis. b. at New York, Oct. 1, 1885—, American poet, translator, and anthologist. Associated (1902-23) with a jewelry-manufacturing firm, he subsequently devoted his time to study and writing. He was poetry editor (1934-37) of The American Mercury. Author of First Love (1911), Challenge (1914), These Times (1917), The New Adam (1920), Roast Leviathan (1923), Burning Bush (1928), Food and Drink (1937), Selected Poems and Parodies (1935), and other volumes of verse. He also wrote several books of parodies including The Younger Quire (1910) and Collected Parodies (1926). His prose works include American Poetry Since 1900 (1923), Forms of Poetry (1926), and Heinrich Heine—Paradox and Poet (volume I, biography, volume II, translations, 1935). He has edited numerous anthologies, including Modern British Poetry (1920) and Modern American Poetry (1921), both subsequently revised several times.

Untermyer (ün'tér.mi.ér), Samuel. b. at Lynchburg, Va., June 6, 1858; d. at Palm Springs, Calif., March 16, 1940. American lawyer. As a member (subsequently senior partner) of the law firm of Guggenheimer and Untermyer at New York, he achieved prominence as counsel for James Hazen Hyde in the suit to have him ousted from the Equitable Life Insurance Society, which precipitated investigations into insurance companies and enactment of reform legislation in a number of states. He served as agent in the merger of Utah Copper Company with the Boston and the Nevada Consolidated Companies, as special attorney general for the Lockwood Committee in New York in prosecution of building-trades violators of antitrust legislation, as counsel for Rogers-Rockefeller-Lewisohn interests in litigation with F. Augustus Heinze over Montana copper mines, and as counsel for the Pujo Committee. He headed the board which drew up income-tax and excess-profits laws during World War I. He later served as counsel for the New York Transit Commission and had much to do with preservation of the nickel fare on the subways; he also was concerned in the unification of the city's subways. After 1933 he was a prominent leader in anti-Nazi organizations.

Unterpfalz (ün'tér.pfálts). See under Rhineland-Palatinate.

Untersberg (ün'ters.berk). Mountain in the Salzburg Alps, situated near the border between Salzburg and Bavaria, 8 mi. SW of Salzburg; celebrated in folklore (legends of Charlemagne). Elevation, 6,480 ft.

Untersee (ün'tér.zä). Name given to the W arm of the Lake of Constance. Length, 13 mi.

Unterseen (ün'tér.zä'en). Village in C Switzerland, in the canton of Bern, situated between the Lakes of Thun and Brienz, near Interlaken, on the Aare River, 3,107 (1941).

Unterwalden (ün'tér.väl.dén). One of the Four Forest Cantons of Switzerland, bounded by Lucerne, the Lake of Lucerne, Uri, and Bern. It comprises the two half-cantons Nidwalden and Obwalden. The surface is mountainous; highest point, the Titlis. The chief towns are Stanz and Sarnen; the prevailing language is German; the predominant religion Roman Catholic. It sends two representatives to the National Council. Unterwalden united with the other Forest Cantons in the leagues of 1291 and after. It was assigned to the canton of Waldstätten in 1798; the resistance of Nidwalden was suppressed by the French. It became again a canton in 1803, a position secured in 1815 after the resistance of Nidwalden had been suppressed by troops of the Swiss Confederation, and joined the Sonderbund. Area, 296 sq. mi.; pop. 37,688 (1941).

Unwin (ün'win), Sir Raymond. b. Nov. 2, 1863; d. June 28, 1940. English architect and town-planning expert. He began the practice of architecture in 1896, and early in his career was attracted to town planning. Near Letchworth, in Hertfordshire, Unwin laid out the first of the modern English garden cities. Others of his noted creations were New Larchwick in Yorkshire and Hampstead Garden near London. He lectured on town planning at the University of Birmingham (1911-14), became chief town-planning inspector of the Local Government Board, and during World War I was director of housing for the Ministry of Munitions. After the war he became chief housing architect of the Ministry of Health, and later chief adviser to the Greater London Regional Town Planning Commission. From 1936 to his death he lectured as a visiting professor at Columbia University at New York. His Town Planning in Practice, published in 1909, has continued to be an influential work.

Unwin, Thomas Fisher. b. Jan. 24, 1848; d. Feb. 6, 1935. English publisher. Purchasing (1882) the business of Marshall, Japp and Company, he established the firm of T. Fisher Unwin, published works by Mark Rutherford, John Oliver Hobbes, Ouida, Ralph Iron, Vernon Lee, and others in the Pseudonym Library, and brought out works by George Gissing, S. R. Crockett, F. Marion Crawford, and Robert Buchanan. He was the first to publish Joseph Conrad and W. Somerset Maugham, and also published the Mermaid series of dramatists.

Unyoro (ö.nyö'ró). See Bunyoro.

Upanishads (ö.pan'í.shadz, ö.pái.shädz). Philosophical treatises or metaphysical commentaries attached to the Brahmanas. They are probably the oldest speculative treatises of the Hindus; the oldest is believed to antedate 500 B.C. The word means "sitting close to" and refers to a group sitting around a teacher. The Upanishads discuss the origin of the universe, the nature of deity, the nature of the soul, and the relationship between spirit and matter. Their fundamental tenet is that the inner self of the individual should be identified with the universal self or soul. The ancient Vedic literature first became known outside of India through the Upanishads. They were translated first (1657) from Sanskrit into Persian, then the most widely read language of the East, and thus became generally accessible. Twelve of them were translated by Friedrich Max Müller, with introductions and notes, in the Sacred Books of the East.

Updike (up'dik), Daniel Berkeley. b. at Providence, R.I., 1860; d. at Boston, Dec. 28, 1941. American printer and publisher. He founded (1893) the Merrymount Press at Boston, and lectured (1910-17) on printing at the Harvard Business School. He is especially noted for his influence on the improvement of American typography, having been one of the first to put into practice the idea that even a minor job of printing, or a cheap book, deserved some consideration typographically. His writings include Printing Types: Their History, Forms and Use (2 vols., 1922), Notes on the Merrymount Press and Its Work, and In the Day's Work.

Upham (up'am), Charles Wentworth. b. at St. John, New Brunswick, Canada, May 4, 1802; d. at Salem, Mass., June 15, 1875. American Unitarian clergyman, author, and politician. He was a member of Congress from Massachusetts (1853-55).

Upham, Thomas Cogswell. b. at Deerfield, N.H., Jan. 30, 1799; d. at New York, April 2, 1872. American philosophical and religious writer and poet.

Upham, Warren. b. at Amherst, N.H., March 8, 1850; d. at St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 29, 1934. American geologist, secretary and librarian (1895 et seq.) of the Minnesota Historical Society (at St. Paul). He was an assistant on the geological survey boards of New Hampshire (1875-78), of Minnesota (1879-85, 1893-94), and of the U.S. (1885-95). His investigations were concerned chiefly with glaciology. Among his publications are The Glacial Lake Agassiz (1895), Greenland Icefields (1896; with G. F. Wright), and many geological reports and papers in scientific magazines.

Upholland (up.hol'and). Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, ar. 4 mi. W of Wigan, ar. 199 mi. NW of London by rail. 6,314 (1951).

Uphues (up'hüs), Joseph. b. at Sassenberg, in Westphalia, Germany, May 23, 1850; d. at Berlin, Jan. 2, 1910. German sculptor. He executed memorial statues for Mannheim, Berlin, Homburg, Wiesbaden, and other German cities.

Uppington (up'ing.ton). Town in S Africa, in the N central part of Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa. It is situated on the N bank of the Orange River and on the railroad line to South-West Africa, ar. 258 mi. NW of De Aar. It is the site of extensive government irrigation projects. 10,154, including 3,382 Europeans (1946).

Upis (ö'pis). Ancient pre-Hellenic goddess of childbirth, whose name was later given to Artemis in reference to her function as birth goddess.

Upjohn (up'jōn). Richard, b. at Shaftesbury, England, Jan. 22, 1802; d. at Garrison, Putnam County, N.Y., Aug. 16, 1878. American architect. He came to America in 1829 and in 1839 went to New York to undertake alterations in the old Trinity Church building. This project was soon abandoned, however, and the construction of a new church (which still stands) was entrusted to him. This and his many other designs, as well as his publications such as Upjohn's Rural Architecture, influenced over a long period the revival and adaptation of the Gothic style, especially in its simpler aspects, in American architecture. He was one of the founders of the American Institute of Architects and its first president (1857-76).

Upjohn, Richard Mitchell. b. at Shaftesbury, England, March 7, 1828; d. at Brooklyn, N.Y., March 4, 1903. American architect; son of Richard Upjohn. Among the buildings which he designed are Saint Paul's Church at Brooklyn, the Central Congregational Church at Boston, Saint Peter's Church at Albany, and the Capitol building at Hartford, Conn.

Upland (up'land). City in S California, in San Bernardino County, adjoining Ontario; packing center for citrus fruits. 9,203 (1950).

Upland. Borough in SE Pennsylvania, in Delaware County, near Philadelphia. 4,081 (1950).

Upland. A former name of Chester, Pa.

Upland, Jack. See Jack Upland.

Upper Alsace (als'ūs, al'sis, -sas). See Alsace, Upper.

Upper Angara (āng.ā.rā). See under Angara.

Upper Arlington (ār'ling.tŋn). Village in C Ohio, in Franklin County; a western suburb of Columbus. 9,024 (1950).

Upper Arrow Lake (ar'ō). See Arrow Lake, Upper and Lower.

Upper Austria (ōs'tri.ā). [German, Oberösterreich.] Province of Austria, bounded on the N by Czechoslovakia, on the W by Bavaria and Salzburg, on the S by Styria, and on the E by Lower Austria. The Inn and Enns rivers mark the borders on the W and E respectively. It falls into three major regions, namely the region N of the Danube (the Mühlviertel, a southern continuation of the Bohemian Forest), the rolling hill country between the Danube and the Alps, and the wooded N slopes of the Alps. It is traversed by the Danube and Traun rivers. The population is German-speaking, the prevailing religion Roman Catholic. The principal occupations are agriculture, stock raising, and lumbering, but there are also metal, machine, wood, paper, and textile industries, flour mills, and breweries. Lignite and salt are mined, and the tourist trade is of considerable importance. At the end of World War II, Russian troops occupied the region N of the Danube, and American troops the region S of the Danube. Capital, Linz; area, 4,625 sq. mi.; pop. 1,107,562 (1951).

Upper Avon (āv'vōn, av'vōn). See Avon River, in C and W England.

Upper Bann (ban). See under Bann.

Upper Bavaria (ba.vār'i.ā). [German, Oberbayern.] Regierungsbezirk (government district) of the Land (state) of Bavaria, S Germany, American Zone, touching the Danube River near Ingolstadt and extending S to the Alps; bounded on the W by the Lech River, on the E by the Salzach River; traversed by the Isar River. On the S and SE it borders on the Austrian provinces of Tirol and Salzburg. The region S of Munich contains many lakes and tourist centers. The population increased in the period 1939-46 by 21.4 percent. Capital, Munich; area, ab. 6,308 sq. mi.; pop. 2,349,727 (1946).

Upper Burgundy (bēr'gūn.di). See under Burgundy, 7; see also under Franch-Comté.

Upper Canada (kan'ā.da). Former name of Ontario province, Canada.

Upper Darby (dār'bi). Urbanized township in SE Pennsylvania, in Delaware County, adjoining Philadelphia. 84,951 (1950).

Upper Egypt (ē'jīpt). [Also: El Said, Said.] One of the two great divisions of Egypt, in NE Africa. Upper Egypt is the name applied to the land on either side of the Nile River above, or S of, the delta and the city of Cairo. It is an ancient term and is still used today to indicate administrative divisions. Included in Upper Egypt are the provinces of Giza, Faiyum, Beni Suef, Minya, Asyut, Girga, Qena, and Aswan. The most important centers in Upper Egypt are Asyut and Aswan. Settled area, 4,773 sq. mi.; pop. 7,229,233 (1947).

Upper Franconia (frāng.kō.ni.ā). See Middle and Upper Franconia.

Upper Lough Erne (lōēh.ēr'n). See under Erne, Lough.

Upper Lough Macnean (nāk.nēn'). See Macnean, Upper and Lower Lough.

Upper Mississippi (mis.i.sip'i). One of the two main phases of the Mississippi pattern of North American Indian culture, widely distributed in the Midwestern U.S. during the Temple Mound periods (c1400-1800). Unlike the Middle Mississippi phase, however, Upper Mississippi lacked temple mounds; it had only fortified villages with an occasional tumulus. In pottery and associated artifacts, the phase conforms more closely to the Mississippi pattern.

Upper Nile (nil). Province of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa, bounded by Equatoria province on the S and W, Blue Nile and Kordofan provinces on the N, and Ethiopia on the E. Capital, Malakal; pop. 759,360 (est. 1949).

Upper Norwood (nōr'wūd). Ward of Croydon county borough, in SE England, in Surrey, ab. 9 mi. S of London Bridge Station, London. It is a residential district. 21,755 (1931).

Upper Palatinate (pā.lat'i.nāt). See under Rhineland-Palatinate.

Upper Paraná (pā.rā.nā). See Paraná River.

Upper Peninsula. See under Michigan.

Upper Peru (pē.rō'). A colonial name of Bolivia; see also Characas.

Upper Republican (rē.pub'i.kan). North American Indian culture of Nebraska and Kansas during the late prehistoric period (c1300-1600). In the E parts of these states, Upper Republican was apparently replaced by Nebraska culture during the latter part of its period of existence; in the W, it is believed to have been ancestral to the culture of the Pawnee Indians. It is distinguished from the Nebraska culture by its pottery, which is globular, with collared rims and surfaces roughened by impression with a cord-wrapped paddle.

Upper Sandusky (sānd'us.ki). Village in C Ohio, county seat of Wyandot County, near the Sandusky River. Pop. 4,397 (1950).

Upper Saranac Lake (sar'ā.nak). See Saranac Lake, Upper.

Upper Senegal-Niger Colony (sen.ē.gōl.nī'jēr, sen.ē.gōl'). See Senegal-Niger Colony, Upper.

Upper Sunbury (sun'ber'i, -bēr.i). See Sunbury Common.

Upper Tunguska (tūn.gōs'ka). See Angara.

Upper Volta (vol'ta). [French, Haute-Volta.] Territory in W Africa, reconstituted Sept. 4, 1947, as part of the federation of French West Africa. The former colony had been dissolved on Jan. 1, 1935, and its territory had been divided among Niger, French Sudan, and the Ivory Coast. The territory was reconstituted in its old form, which meant that Niger, French Sudan, and Ivory Coast all ceded portions to it. It is administered by a governor, assisted by a privy council and a general council; three delegates are sent to the French national assembly, three to the Council of the Republic, and five to the Assembly of the French Union. In 1951 a railroad was under construction, leading from the terminus of the Dahomey railroad at Bobo-Dioulasso to Ouagadougou. Capital, Ouagadougou; area, 109,940 sq. mi.; pop. ab. three million.

Uppingham (up'ing.am). Rural district and market town in C England, in Rutlandshire, ab. 6 mi. S of Oakham, ab. 100 mi. N of London by rail. 5,416 (1951).

Uppingtonia (up'ing.tō'ni.ā). See under Ovamboland.

Uppsala (up'sā'lā, ūp'sā'lā). [Also, Upsala.] Län (county) in C Sweden. Capital, Uppsala; area, 2,051 sq. mi.; pop. 154,677 (1950).

Uppsala. [Also, Upsala.] City in C Sweden, capital of the län (county) of Uppsala, ab. 40 mi. NW of Stockholm. It has metalworking, garment, and furniture industries and publishing houses. It is the seat of the Lutheran archbishopric of Sweden and of a famous university, founded in 1477, with a valuable library containing more than one million volumes and manuscripts, numismatic and art collections, and with botanical, astronomical, and other institutes. The cathedral, in the Gothic style, erected between 1260 and 1435, with 18th and 19th century alterations, contains tombs of Gustavus Vasa, Linnaeus, Swedenborg, and others. There is a castle of the 16th century. The province of Uppsala represents the original core of Sweden; near Uppsala is Gamal Uppsala, which was the seat of priests and kings in pagan times. Until the 16th century, the city of Uppsala was the capital of Sweden. 63,072 (1950).

Upshur (up'shēr), Abel Parker. b. in Northampton County, Va., June 17, 1791; killer on the Potomac, Feb. 28, 1844. American politician, U.S. secretary of the navy (1841-43) and secretary of state (1843-44) under Tyler.

Upson (up'son), Ralph Hazlett. b. at New York, June 21, 1888. American aeronautical engineer; brother of William Hazlett Upson. He won the international balloon race (1913) and the U.S. national balloon race (1913, 1919, 1921), and as chief engineer (1914-20) of the aeronautical department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company helped produce many of the U.S. airships and balloons employed in World War I. Engaged in airplane development (1928-42), he designed (1929) the ZMC-2, the first practical metalclad airship.

Upson, William Hazlett. b. at Glen Ridge, N.J., Sept. 26, 1891. American fiction writer; brother of Ralph Hazlett Upson. He served (1917-19) with the U.S. field artillery in France, and was employed (1919-24) in the service department of the Caterpillar Tractor Company, Peoria, Ill. Author of The Piano Movers (1927), Me and Henry and the Artillery (1928), Alexander Bolts—Earthworm Tractors (1929), Earthworms in Europe (1931), Bolts in War, Bolts in Peace (1944), and How To Be Rich like Me (1947).

Upstalsbom (up'shtäls.bôm). See under Aurich, town.

Upstream. Autobiographical work by Ludwig Lewisohn, published in 1922.

Upton (up'ton), Emory. b. at Batavia, Genesee County, N.Y., Aug. 27, 1839; d. at San Francisco, March 15, 1881. American general. He was graduated from West Point in 1861, served in the Army of the Potomac and in Georgia and Alabama during the Civil War, attaining the rank of brigadier general in 1864, and was commandant of cadets at West Point (1870-75). He wrote New System of Infantry Tactics (1867), Armies of Asia and Europe (1878), and others.

Upton, Florence. b. at New York of English parents; d. at London, Oct. 16, 1922. American illustrator and portrait painter, creator of the Gollivog series of children's books.

Upton, George Putnam. [Pseudonym, Peregrine Pickle.] b. at Roxbury, Mass., Oct. 25, 1834; d. at Chicago, May 19, 1919. American music reviewer on the staff of the Chicago Tribune (1863-81); he was also associate editor (1872-1905) and editorial writer (1870-1919) for the Tribune. Author of Letters of Peregrine Pickle (1869), Life of Remenyi (1906), and The Song (1914). His Standard Concert Guide (1908) went through several revisions.

Upurui (ô.pô'rô.ë). See under Oyana.

Uqur (ô.kîr'). See Oqair.

Ur (ér). [Also: Ur of the Chaldees (kal.dêz', kal'dêz'), Tell al Muqayyar.] Ancient Mesopotamian city, the principal archaeological site for modern knowledge of Sumerian civilization; it is mentioned in the Bible as the home of Abraham. Ur, which in its great days stood near the head of the Persian Gulf and at the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, was an important place from the very beginnings of civilization in the area; its importance gradually waned with the rise of the great Babylonian and Assyrian empires and it was abandoned after about 300 B.C.; today it stands as a mound rising from the flat desert S and W of the Euphrates, whose shifting course left it centuries ago, and miles inland from the receding Persian Gulf. Excavation of the site began in 1854, but expeditions led by R. Campbell Thompson and H. R. Hall after 1918 and by C. Leonard Woolley from 1922 to 1934 thoroughly examined the ancient mound for the first time. Ur appears to have been one of the first settlements built by the ancient inhabitants of Mesopotamia soon after about 4000 B.C. in the marshlands N of the shore of the Persian Gulf. Some time after the site was first occupied it was destroyed by a flood, apparently the deluge told of in the Bible and in the Gilgamesh myth. The first dynasty of the kings of Ur arose probably about 3200 B.C. and ruled for nearly 200 years over the southern part of the Tigris-Euphrates valley, which was inhabited by the non-Semitic Sumerians; the predynastic graves of Ur excavated by Woolley indicate that a very rich civilization existed in the area just before and during this first dynasty. Some time before Sargon I of Akkad took Ur (c.2600 B.C.) a second dynasty ruled the country, but with Sargon's conquest Sumer and Akkad were, for a time at least, joined, and there was a strong intercultural exchange between the Semites of the north and the Sumerians. Ur's eclipse was ended with the rise of the third dynasty (c.2100), which in the following century extended Ur's hegemony over all of Sumer. In this period was built the ziggurat (tower-temple) of the moon god by Ur-Nammu and his son Dungi, the temple whose ruin was the basis of the tell or mound that led the excavators to the rediscovery of Ur; the ziggurat was restored, along with other parts of the city, by Nebuchadnezzar and his son Nabonidus in the 6th century B.C. Ur was destroyed by the Elamites, but the Sumerian kings of Isin and Larsa rebuilt the city, and presumably it was in this reconstructed city that Abraham was born. Ur was again destroyed by Babylon, was rebuilt, and after this had occurred a number of times the city was allowed to fall into decay, especially after the Persians, who under Cyrus the Great had conquered Babylonian Chaldea, adopted Zoroastrianism and thus had no incentive to preserve or restore the ancient religious structures, for the shifting rivers and the receding gulf had made the site economically unimportant.

Ural (û'ral; Russian, ô.räl'). River in the U.S.S.R. which rises in the Ural Mountains, flows SW and S, and empties by a delta into the N end of the Caspian Sea. It forms for a large part of its course part of the traditional boundary between Europe and Asia. Length, ab. 1,575 mi.; navigable for large vessels from Chkalov.

Ural-Altaic (û'ral.al.tä'ik). Linguistic grouping originally proposed by the Finnish scholar Matthias Castrén, which joins together the Finno-Ugrian, Samoyedic, and Altaic (Turkic, Mongol, Tungus-Manchu) families. Although many similarities have been found between these families, the validity of Ural-Altaic as a single linguistic stock comparable with Indo-European is still open to question. Finno-Ugrian and Samoyedic appear definitely related, but the likenesses between Finno-Ugrian and the Altaic languages may be due to contact rather than a common origin.

Uralic (û.räl'ik). See under Samoyeds.

Ural Mountains (û'ral; Russian, ô.räl'). [Also, Urals.] Mountain system of the U.S.S.R., forming part of the traditional border between Europe and Asia. They extend S from the Arctic Ocean to the N border of the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic. The chief divisions are the Northern Urals (N of latitude 61° N.), Middle Urals (between latitudes 55° and 61° N.), and Southern Urals (between latitudes 51° and 55° N.). The Northern Urals contain the highest peaks (Narodnaya, 6,178 ft.; Telpos-Iz, 5,413 ft.); in the Southern Urals, Yaman-Tau reaches 5,374 ft. The Central Urals are lowest in elevation, and in many areas present the appearance of hills rather than of mountains. The Urals are extensively wooded, largely by coniferous forest. The climate is marked by short, warm summers and long, severely cold winters. The Urals are noted as the greatest center of mineral wealth in the U.S.S.R.: among the important metals or minerals obtained here are iron ore, zinc, lead, silver, gold, platinum, manganese, nickel, tungsten, copper, chromite, magnesite, bauxite, asbestos, graphite, salt, potash, phosphorite, semiprecious stones, petroleum, and soft coal. Although some mining occurred as early as the 15th century, and iron smelting was established by the end of the 17th century, the modern industrial development of the Urals has taken place since the Russian Revolution. Entirely new industrial cities, such as Magnitogorsk, have sprung up around large new plants; the industries of the Urals are chiefly metallurgical (both ferrous and nonferrous), machinery, chemical, and other heavy industries. The Urals coal is not good coking coal, and a considerable amount of coal is therefore shipped into the region from Karaganda and the Kuznetsk Basin. During World War II the U.S.S.R. lost the heavy industry in the Donets Basin to the invading German armies, and the Urals became the principal center of Russian war industries, and underwent a great industrial expansion. Since World War II this expansion has continued, and in the period 1946-50 new iron and steel plants were built at Chelyabinsk and Nizhni Tagil, and the iron and steel plants at Magnitogorsk and Serov were expanded. Copper is mined and smelted at Krasnouralsk in the C Urals, and Mednogorsk (in Chkalov oblast) in the S Urals; there are numerous smaller copper-mining centers, and a refinery at Staro-Pyshminsk (in Sverdlovsk oblast). Sverdlovsk and Chelyabinsk are the two largest machine-building centers, as well as the two largest cities of the Urals. The Urals are crossed by four railroad lines, and a fifth is under construction. Industrial development has centered in the C and S Urals; the N Urals are still largely a wilderness. Length of range, ab. 1,500 mi.

Uralsk (ò.rálsk'). Former oblast (region) of Russia, in C Asia, lying between Astrakhan and Turgai. It is now a part of the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic in the U.S.S.R.

Uralsk. City in the U.S.S.R., in the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic, on the Ural River; meat-packing, tanning, and machinery industries; rail terminus of the line from Guriév. 66,201 (1939).

Urania (ù.rá.ni.à). In Greek mythology, the Muse of astronomy.

Urania. Asteroid (No. 30) discovered by J. R. Hind at London, July 22, 1854.

Uranus (ù.rá.nus, ù.rá'nus). In Greek mythology, the god and personification of the sky. He was both son and consort of Gaia or Ge (the earth), and by her the father of the Titans, Cyclopes, and others. He feared his children and confined them in Tartarus; but on the instigation of Gaia, Cronus, the youngest of the Titans, overthrew and dethroned him.

Uranus. Planet revolving in an orbit between Saturn and Neptune at a mean distance of 1,784,800,000 mi. (19.2 times Earth's distance) from the sun in a period of 84.015 years with a velocity of $4\frac{1}{2}$ mi. per second. Its magnitude of 5.7 makes it visible to the naked eye, but it is so inconspicuous that it was only discovered in 1781 by Sir William Herschel with a telescope. It has a diameter of 32,000 mi., a mass of 8.75 times 10^{26} tons, and a density 1.26 times that of water. It has a diameter four times that of the Earth, but consists largely of less dense matter. The period of rotation is 10.7 hours with the equator inclined 98 degrees to the plane of the orbit, or beyond the perpendicular, i.e., "backwards" compared with other planets. It reflects 45 percent of the light received from the Sun, and has an atmosphere in which methane is conspicuous. Uranus is accompanied by five satellites: Titania and Oberon (discovered by William Herschel in 1787), Ariel and Umbriel (by William Lassell in 1851), and Miranda (by G. P. Kuiper in 1948).

Urartu (ò.ràr.tò). See Ararat.

Urawa (ò.rà.wà). City in SE Honshu, Japan, ab. 15 mi. N of downtown Tokyo: suburban residential community. 115,019 (1950).

Urba (ér.ba). Latin name of Orbe.

Urbach (òr.bàch), Erich. b. at Prague, July 29, 1893; d. at Philadelphia, Dec. 17, 1946. Austrian dermatologist. He contributed to knowledge of the physiological and pathological chemistry of the skin, allergy of the skin, dermatoses of metabolism, dermatoses of children, and hay fever.

Urban (ùr.bàn), Georges. b. at Paris, 1872; d. there, Nov. 5, 1938. French inorganic chemist and artist. His extensive work on the rare earths was capped by his discovery (1907) with C. A. von Welsbach of the element lutecium in the element ytterbium. He may therefore be considered the actual discoverer of ytterbium.

Urban I (ér.bàn), Saint. b. at Rome; d. May 23, 230. Pope from 222 to 230. He reigned peacefully under the emperor Alexander Severus.

Urban II. [Original name, Udo (or Odo) of Lagery.] b. at Châtillon-sur-Marne, France, c1042; d. July 29, 1099. Pope from 1088 to 1099. He continued the policy of Gregory VII against lay investiture and in opposition to Henry IV, excommunicated Philip I of France, and furthered the first Crusade.

Urban III. [Original name, Uberto Crivelli.] b. at Milan, Italy; d. at Ferrara, Italy, Oct. 19, 1187. Pope from 1185 to 1187. He opposed the emperor Frederick I.

Urban IV. [Original name, Jacques Pantaléon.] b. at Troyes, France, in late 12th century; d. at Perugia, Italy, Oct. 2, 1264. Pope from 1261 to 1264. He opposed Manfred of Sicily, and sought to heal the schism of the East.

Urban V. [Original name, Guillaume de Grimoard.] b. at Griscac, in Languedoc, France, 1310; d. at Avignon, France, Dec. 19, 1370. Pope from 1362 to 1370. He promoted European peace, and for a time resided at Rome, returning to Avignon just before his death.

Urban VI. [Original name, Bartolommeo Prignano.] b. at Naples, Italy, c1318; d. at Rome, Oct. 15, 1389. Pope from 1378 to 1389. The papal schism began in his reign; the cardinals elected Clement VII antipope.

Urban VII. [Original name, Giambattista Castagna.] b. at Rome, Aug. 4, 1521; d. there, Sept. 27, 1590. Pope in 1590, for 13 days.

Urban VIII. [Original name, Maffeo Barberini.] b. at Florence, Italy, in April, 1568; d. at Rome, July 29, 1644. Pope from 1623 to 1644. He annexed the duchy of Urbino, and supported the policy of France in the Thirty Years' War. He promoted foreign missions, and forbade slavery in Brazil, Paraguay, and the West Indies. He condemned the Augustinus of Jansenism in 1642.

Urban (dér.bàn), Sir Benjamin d'. See D'Urban, Sir Benjamin.

Urban (ér.bàn), Joseph. b. at Vienna, May 26, 1872; d. at New York, July 10, 1933. American architect and theatrical designer. He decorated (1901) the Austrian building at the St. Louis Exposition, and in 1911 settled in America, serving (1911-14) as art director of the Boston Opera Company; in 1915 he designed the settings, for the first Ziegfeld Follies, and subsequently the stage sets for the Metropolitan Opera and for the Macbeth and Merry Wives of Windsor produced by James K. Hackett. His use of large areas of color, particularly the shade known as "Urban blue," in stage designs and architectural decoration, had a wide influence. He designed the New School for Social Research and the Ziegfeld Theatre, both at New York.

Urban, Wilbur Marshall. b. at Mount Joy, Pa., March 27, 1873—. American philosopher. He was professor at Dartmouth (1920-30) and Yale (1931-41). Author of Valuation—Its Nature and Laws (1909), The Intelligible World—Metaphysics and Value (1929), Fundamentals of Ethics (1930), Language and Reality (1939), and other works.

Urbana (ér.bàn.à). City in E Illinois, county seat of Champaign County, the twin city of Champaign, situated in a rich farming region. It is the seat of the University of Illinois. 22,834 (1950).

Urbana. City in W Ohio, county seat of Champaign County, ab. 42 mi. NW of Columbus, in an agricultural and livestock-producing area: manufactures of furniture, strawboard, tools, dies, and food products. It is the seat of a junior college. Pop. 9,335 (1950).

Urbibentum (ér.bi.ben'tum). See Orvieto.

Urbina (òr.bè.nà), José María. See Urvina, José María.

Urbino (òr.bè.nò). [Ancient name, Urvinum Metaurense; medieval Latin, Urbium (ér.bi'num).] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Marches, in the province of Pesaro e Urbino, NW of Ancona: agricultural trade center. It has manufactures of cheese and majolica. It is the seat of a university and an art academy. It was the capital of the former duchy of Urbino and a celebrated center of art and literature in the 15th and 16th centuries. The ducal palace, an excellent example of the early Renaissance style, is richly decorated. Urbino was the birthplace of Raphael (the house where he was born is now the seat of the Accademia Raffaello). Various medieval and Renaissance churches (San Bernardino, San Francesco, San Domenico, San Giovanni Battista, and others) contain works by Luca della Robbia and others; the cathedral, rebuilt in 1789, has works by Barocci and Giovanni Bologna. The town passed in the early Middle Ages to the States of the Church but was long actually ruled by the counts of Montefeltro, who received the ducal title in the 15th century. In 1508 it was taken over by the family of Pope Julius II (della Rovere); in 1631 it was reincorporated into the States of the Church. In World War II the town suffered no serious damage. Pop. of commune, 22,248 (1936); of town, 5,459 (1936).

Urbino, Duke of. Title of Medici, Lorenzo de'.

Urbino, Duchy of. Former duchy in Italy comprising Urbino, Pesaro, and other places in their vicinity. It was ruled by princes of the Montefeltro family, and later was under the house of della Rovere. It was annexed by the States of the Church in 1631, and by Victor Emmanuel II in 1860.

Urbs Turonum (érzb túrō.num). A former name of Tours.

Urbs Vetus (érzb vē'tus). Medieval name of Orvieto.

Urcharde (ér'kard, -kård), Sir Thomas. See Urquhart, Sir Thomas.

Urci (ér'si). An ancient name of Almería, city.

Urcinicus (ér.si.sí'nus). See Ursinus.

Urdaneta (úr.dá.ná'tá). Town in E Pangasinan province, Luzon, Philippines. 4,474 (1948).

Ure (úr). River in NE England, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. It rises on the Westmorland-Yorkshire boundary and flows generally SE to a confluence with the river Swale (forming the river Ouse) ab. 14 mi. NW of York. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Ure, Andrew. b. at Glasgow, 1778; d. at London, Jan. 2, 1857. Scottish chemist. He published Dictionary of Chemistry (1821), A New System of Geology (1820), Dictionary of Arts, Manufactures, and Mines (1837-39; revised by Hunt), and others.

Ures (úr'ás). Town in NW Mexico, in Sonora state; former state capital. 2,981 (1940).

Ureta (úr.á'tá), Alberto. b. at Lima, Peru, April 7, 1887—. Peruvian professor, lawyer, essayist, and poet, consul general (1939 et seq.) to Spain. He served as director of the journals Mercurio Peruano and Nueva Revista Peruana. Author of Rumor de almas (1911), El Parnaso y el simbolismo (1915), El Dolor pensativo (1917), Las Tiendas del desierto (1933), Elegías de la cabeza loca (1937), and others.

Urey (úr'i), Harold Clayton. b. at Walkerton, Ind., April 29, 1893—. American chemist. He taught at Johns Hopkins (1924-29), was associate professor (1929-34) and professor (1934-45) at Columbia and head of the chemistry department (1939-42), and served as professor (1945 et seq.) at Chicago. He was awarded the 1934 Nobel prize in chemistry for his discovery of heavy hydrogen (deuterium). He has done important research in the structure of atoms and molecules and the thermodynamic properties of gases. He was a member of the group engaged in producing the atomic bomb during World War II, being especially concerned with the separation of uranium isotopes to produce the U235 for the bomb and with the production of heavy water (water containing heavy hydrogen atoms). Author, with A. E. Ruark, of Atoms, Molecules, and Quanta (1930).

Urfa (úr.fá'). [Ancient name, Edessa.] City in S Turkey, ab. 170 mi. E of Adana, in an irrigated valley in the S foothills of Anatolia. It has cotton-weaving industries, and a regional trade in wheat, wool, cattle and cotton. 37,456 (1950).

Urfé (úr.fá'), Honoré d'. b. at Marseilles, 1567; d. in Spain, June 1, 1625. French writer. He is principally remembered as the author of L'Astrée (1610-27), a very long novel of pastoral setting and complex love affairs entailing long analyses of tender passion. The style became the fashion of the age in the novel and in drama.

Urfey (úr.fí), Thomas d'. See D'Urfey, Thomas.

Urga (úr.gá). See Ulan Bator.

Urganda (ér.gan.dá). Fairy and enchantress in the medieval French and Spanish romances of Amadis of Gaul.

Urgel (úr.gel'), Felix of. See Felix of Urgel.

Uri (úr'i). One of the Four Forest Cantons of Switzerland, bounded by the Lake of Lucerne, Schwyz, Glarus, Graubünden, Ticino, Valais, Bern, and Unterwalden. It is traversed by the Reuss River and by the St. Gotthard Railway. The language is chiefly German, the prevailing religion Roman Catholic. Uri sends one representative to the National Council. It united in leagues with other Forest Cantons in 1291 and after; conquered the Val Leventina in the 15th century; was assigned to the canton Waldstätten in 1798; was the scene of conflicts between the French and the Russians and Austrians in 1799; became a canton in 1803, with the Val Leventina; and joined the Sonderbund. Capital, Altdorf; area, 415 sq. mi.; pop. 28,556 (1950).

Uri, Lake of. [German, Urnersee.] Southeastern arm of the Lake of Lucerne, Switzerland. It is bordered by high mountains. Length, ab. 7 mi.

Uriah (úr.i'á). [Also, Urias (úr.i'ás).] In the Bible, a Hittite officer in the army of David; husband of Bathsheba. David ordered Joab, his general, to secure Uriah's death by abandoning him in the heart of battle. 2 Sam. xi.

Uriah Heep (hēp). See Heep, Uriah.

Urias (úr.i'ás), Sinus. Latin name of Manfredonia, Gulf of.

Uribia (úr.ré.nyá). City in N Colombia, capital of Guajira commissary. Pop. under 500 (1938).

Uriburu (úr.ré.bó'ró), José Evaristo. b. 1835; d. 1914. Argentine politician. He advanced (Jan. 21, 1895) from the vice-presidency to the presidency when Luis Sáenz Peña resigned. His administration, which ended in 1898, was marked by boundary disputes with Chile and Brazil, and by reforms in public finance which enabled Argentina to resume payments on its foreign debt.

Uriburu, José Evaristo. b. at Buenos Aires, 1880—. Argentine diplomat and historian; son of José Evaristo Uriburu (1835-1914). He served as minister plenipotentiary (1921-27) and ambassador (1927-31) to Great Britain.

Uriburu, José Félix. b. 1868; d. at Paris, April 29, 1932. Argentine politician, leader of the conservative party, notable as leader of the coup which deposed (1930) the radical party leader, Hipólito Irigoyen, from the presidency. He held office as provisional president of Argentina from Irigoyen's fall until February, 1932, when he was succeeded by Augustín Justo, and retired to Paris.

Uriconium (úr.i.kó'ní.um). [Also, Viroconium.] Ancient town in Britain, near the site of the modern Wroxeter, near Shrewsbury.

Uriel (úr.i.el). One of the seven archangels of Christian legend. He is spoken of in 2 Esdras as the good angel. He has been conceived to be an angel of light, and his station to be in the sun. He is introduced by Milton in Paradise Lost, and by Longfellow in the Golden Legend.

Urim and Thummin (úr'im; thum'in). See under Smith, Joseph.

Uri-Rotstock (úr.rót'shtók). Summit in the Alps, in the canton of Uri, Switzerland, W of Altdorf. Elevation, ab. 9,620 ft.

Uriu or Uryu (úr.yó), Baron Sotokichi. b. at Kanazawa, Japan, 1854; d. at Odawara, Japan, Nov. 11, 1937. Japanese vice-admiral. He studied at the U.S. Naval Academy, and was promoted to captain in the Japanese navy in 1891, and to rear admiral in 1900. He commanded the squadron which attacked the Russian vessels Variag and Korietz in the harbor of Incheon (Chemulpo), Korea, Feb. 9, 1904, and took part in the Battle of Tsushima, May 27-28, 1905.

Urk Island (érk). See under Noordostelijke Polder.

Urmia (úr'mí.á), Lake. [Also: Shahi, Urumiah, Urumiyeh; Latin, Lacus Mantiuanus (or Matianus).] Large salt lake in NW Iran, in Azerbaijan, W of Tabriz, intersected by lat. 38° N. It contains many small islands. The water is intensely salt and is shallow; it has no outlet. Length, ab. 85 mi.; elevation, ab. 12,388 ft.; area varies between ab. 1,500 sq. mi. in summer to ab. 2,300 sq. mi. in winter.

Urmson (ér'm'son), Garth. See under Garth.

Urmston (ér'm'ston). Urban district in NW England, in Lancashire, ab. 5 mi. SW of Manchester, ab. 188 mi. NW of London by rail. 39,233 (1951).

Urnersee (úr'nér.zá). German name of Uri, Lake of.

Uro-Chipaya-Pukina (úr.ché.pá'yá.pó.ké'ná). [Also, Uru-Chipaya-Puquina.] Independent South American Indian linguistic stock of the Andean highlands including two peoples, the Uru (with whom the Pukina are now usually classified) and the Chipaya. The Uru are a fishing and hunting people near Lake Titicaca in Peru; the Chipaya are a pastoral people near Lake Poopó in Bolivia.

Urquhart (ér'kart, -kärt), David, b. in the county of Cromarty, Scotland, 1805; d. at Naples, May 16, 1877. British publicist and politician. He fought (1827-28) under Thomas Cochrane in the Greek navy during the Greek war for independence and became so well-informed on Greek and Turkish affairs that in 1831 he was a member of Stratford Canning's embassy to Constantinople. His outspoken espousal of the Turkish cause and his consequent anti-Russian bias twice (1833, 1837) led to his recall from missions to Turkey because of the danger of international complications. He founded the Portfolio (1835) and the Free Press (1855); later the Diplomatic Review as vehicles for his views, which he further expressed as a member of Parliament (1847-52) opposed to the foreign policy of Viscount Palmerston. He was especially opposed to the interference of the European powers in Turkish affairs, notably in the Crimean War, which, he maintained, Turkey should have been permitted to fight on her own. He is credited with introducing the Turkish bath to England. He published Observations on European Turkey (1831), Turkey and its Resources (1833), Spirit of the East (1838), Pillars of Hercules (1850), The Lebanon (1860), and various works on Russia, the U.S., French affairs, and others.

Urquhart, Sir Thomas. [Also, Urchard.] b. 1611; d. 1660. Scottish Royalist, author, and translator. He possessed estates in Cromarty, was educated at King's College, Aberdeen, and traveled, having a good knowledge of foreign tongues. He was declared a rebel by Parliament, took arms on the king's side, fought in the battle of Worcester, and, though sent a prisoner to London, had some liberty. He escaped, and died abroad (during a fit of laughter, it is said, on hearing of the Restoration). He published several works, but is best known for his spirited but not literal translation of Rabelais (1653, 1693), completed by P. A. Motteux.

Urquiza (ör.ké'sä), Justo José de, b. near Concepción del Uruguay, Argentina, March 19, 1800; assassinated on his estate of San José, near the same place, April 11, 1870. Argentine general and politician. As a country shopkeeper he acquired great influence over the Gauchos, and in 1844-45, with an army of 4,000 of them, assisted Manuel Oribe against the government of Montevideo, defeating José Fructuoso Rivera March 28, 1845. In 1846 he was elected governor of Entre Ríos. The loose federated system then in vogue in Argentina gave practically unlimited powers to the governors. Urquiza ruled Entre Ríos as an independent state and for his own advantage, acquiring a very large fortune. As a leader of the Federalist Party he made war on the Unitarists of Corrientes. In 1851 he joined forces with Brazil and Montevideo, compelled Oribe to capitulate Oct. 8, ending the "nine years' siege" of Montevideo, and on Feb. 3, 1852, defeated and overthrew Juan Manuel de Rosas at the battle of Monte-Caseros. He was at once proclaimed provisional dictator of the Argentine Confederation, and in May, 1853, was elected president for six years. Buenos Aires refused to join the confederation until forced to do so by Urquiza's victory on Oct. 23, 1859. Urquiza retained the presidency until May, 1860, when he took command of the army. Buenos Aires revolted soon after, and the federalist army of Urquiza was defeated by Bartolomé Mitre at Pavón, Sept. 17, 1861. With this battle the federalist system came to an end. Urquiza retired to Entré Ríos, where he continued to rule in a kind of feudal state, though with somewhat diminished power, until his death.

Urraca (ör.rä'kä), d. 1126. Queen of Castile (1109-26); daughter of Alfonso VI of Castile. Her first husband, Raymond of Burgundy, had died by the time she succeeded her father and a marriage to Alfonso I of Aragón was arranged. Alfonso's attempts to control matters in Castile brought on a civil war in which Urraca, aided by the Castilian nobles and by her son by Raymond of Burgundy (who succeeded her as Alfonso VII), was able to retain Castile.

Urrea (ör.rä'ä), Blas. Pseudonym of Cabrera, Luis.

Urriolagoitia Harriague (ör'ryö.lä.goi'tyā är.ryä'gä), Mamerto, b. at Sucre, Bolivia, Dec. 5, 1895—. Bolivian statesman, president of Bolivia (1949-51). He entered the diplomatic service in 1918, participated in many international conferences, and became (1947) minister of foreign affairs. He was a member of the senate (1940-44) and in 1947 became vice-president and chancellor of the republic. The resignation of Enrique Hertzog in 1949 elevated him to the presidency (he had been acting president in 1947 and 1948 during Hertzog's absences from the country). In 1951 Urriolagoitia resigned the presidency and gave the government over to a military junta rather than permit the congress to elect (as a result of a national ballot in which he had won a plurality) the totalitarian-minded Victor Paz Estenssoro. Urriolagoitia is author of an Official Handbook of Bolivia (1924) and Bolivia 1825-1925 (1925).

Ursa Major (ér'sä mä'jör). Prominent circumpolar constellation of the northern heavens, representing a bear with an enormous tail; it is rivaled only by Orion. The figure of a wain or wagon is also widely used for this constellation. Both figures are mentioned by Homer. The myth of Callisto was exemplified in the constellation by the Greeks, who also recognized in the constellation the Septentriones, or seven oxen drawing the plow; the bear, oxen, plow, wagon, and dipper are widespread constructions applied to these stars, one or another generally appearing in the Indo-European languages. The bear was also recognized by the ancient Hebrews and the Arabs; the Chinese call it the Emperor's Chariot. The seven risish or wise men are figured here in Hindu astronomy and the Buriats of Siberia also recognize seven old men. The two stars at the outside of the quadrilateral (or bowl of the dipper) are known as the Pointers, since they point almost directly to the polestar, which is a star in Ursa Minor, the Little Bear or Little Dipper. The second star in the tail or handle, Mizar, has long been used as a test of visual acuity, since it appears with a fainter companion, Alcor. However, these two are only apparently a double star and do not form a true binary system. Mizar is nevertheless a visual binary, and its components, as is true also of Alcor, are spectroscopic binaries, Mizar being the first such binary discovered (1899).

Ursa Minor (mí'nör). Constellation near the celestial North Pole, the figure of which is made to imitate that of Ursa Major, which its configuration resembles. It also has the rival figure of a wagon, and is sometimes called the Cynosura (dog's tail), Callisto the huntress being thought to have been transformed into the bear figured in Ursa Major. At the time of the first recognition of these constellations the pole must have been near α Draconis, and during the greater part of history sailors have steered by Ursa Minor as a whole (in its tail is the polestar). The Little Dipper (which also includes the polestar) is also formed from stars in this constellation.

Ursern (ür'zern). See Andermatt.

Ursinus (ür.sí'nus). [Also, Urcicinus.] Antipope from 366 to 367, in opposition to Damasus I.

Urso (ür'sö). An ancient name of Osuna.

Urso (ür'sö), Camilla. [Married name, Luère.] b. at Nantes, France, June 13, 1842; d. at New York, Jan. 20, 1902. Italian violinist.

Ursua (ör.sö'ä), Pedro de. [Also, Orsua.] b. at Ursua, near Pamplona, in Navarre, Spain, c1510; killed at Machiparo, on the upper Amazon, Jan. 1, 1561. Spanish soldier. He was governor of New Granada (1545-46), led expeditions from Bogotá in search of El Dorado (1547, 1549-52), founding Pamplona (in Colombia) and other places, and subdued the rebellious Cimarrones of Panama (1555-57).

Ursula (ür.sö.lä), Saint, d. possibly in the 3rd or the 5th century. In Christian legend, a British saint and martyr who (with 11,000 other virgins) was said to have been put to death by an army of Huns near Cologne. In the first part of the 12th century, in digging foundations for new walls, the citizens of Cologne found a large number of bones in the cemetery of the old Roman town of Colonia Agrippina. These were announced by Elizabeth of Schönau, a visionary nun, as the relics of the 11,000 virgins, and for many years were so venerated. Bones of men and children, however, were found among them, and the remains are now considered to be those of Roman colonists. The Church of Saint Ursula of Cologne is, nevertheless, still visited by thousands of believers. One matter-of-fact explanation of the 11,000 reduces them to one in the person of a Saint "Undecemilla." Although the version of the legend put forth by Geoffrey of Monmouth is one of the best known, it is so filled with conflicts and other obvious errors as to be of little use in establishing a basis of fact concerning Ursula's life. In order to account for all the details in the legend, some scholars have advanced the probability that there were two separate massacres, one in the 3rd century and one in the 5th, and that later accounts have drawn from both.

Urswick (ér'wík), Christopher. b. at Furness, England, 1448; d. March 25, 1522. English cleric and diplomat who held several minor ecclesiastical positions while an adviser to Henry VII, and was elected (1495) dean of Windsor.

Uru (ó'ró). See under Uro-Chipaya-Pukina.

Uruapan (ó.rwá'pán). [Full name, Uruapan del Progreso (del pró.grá'só).] City in SW Mexico, in Michoacán state; agricultural products and Tarascan (Indian) lacquerware. Founded in 1540, it has come in recent years a popular tourist center. 20,583 (1940).

Urubamba (ó.ró.bám'bá). [Also, Vilcabamba.] River in C Peru flowing N to unite with the Apurímac, forming the Ucayali River. Length, ab. 450 mi.

Uruguai (ó.ró.gwí'). Epic poem by the Brazilian poet Basílio da Gama. It was published in 1769 and deals with the Indian settlements established by the Jesuits in the extreme south of Brazil.

Uruguaiana or Uruguayana (ó'ró.gwá.yu'ná). City in S Brazil, on the Argentine border, in the state of Rio Grande do Sul; the principal Brazilian port on the Uruguay River, and a railway junction; a shipping point for cattle and a center of the meat-packing industry. It is linked with Argentina, across the river, by an international bridge. It was the scene of the defeat (1865) of the Paraguayan army by the combined forces of Brazil, Uruguay, and Argentina. The emperor of Brazil and presidents Mitre and Flores took part in the siege. 33,272 (1950).

Uruguay (ó'ró.gwá; Spanish, ó.ró.gwí'). [Official name, República Oriental del Uruguay; Portuguese, Uruguai.] Republic in SE South America, the smallest of the South American republics, bounded on the NE by Brazil, on the W by Argentina (separated by the Uruguay River), on the S by the Rio de la Plata, and on the SE by the Atlantic Ocean. It is a republic, with executive power vested in a committee elected by the congress for a four-year term, and legislative powers vested in a congress consisting of a senate of 30 members and a chamber of deputies of 99 members; members of both houses have four-year terms, but senators are elected at large to represent the two major political parties (15 for each party). The present constitution, adopted in 1934, permits women to vote. Capital, Montevideo; area, 72,173 sq. mi.; pop. 2,353,000 (est. 1949).

Terrain and Climate. Uruguay is entirely a lowland country, traversed by a series of hilly ridges known as cuchillas, which reach a peak elevation of ab. 1,650 ft. Most of the country is a rolling, grassy plain. The S and SE coasts have numerous excellent sandy beaches, and areas of sand dunes. The climate of Uruguay is of a mild subtropical type; along the coast summers are warm and winters mild; freezing temperatures are rare. In the interior summers are distinctly hot and winters cool, with frost. Livestock may be kept on the open range the year round, however.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. The economy of Uruguay is to a high degree specialized in livestock raising and the export of livestock products. Sheep and cattle are the principal animals raised; the exports of beef, mutton, wool, sheepskins, and hides normally account for ab. 85 percent of the total value of exports, nearly all of which go to Europe. There is a considerable area of diversified farming in S Uruguay around the city of Montevideo and extending along the Rio de la Plata, in which dairy products, grains, luscious fruits, and wine grapes are raised. Citrus fruits are produced in several areas. Industries in Uruguay are engaged in processing exports (meat packing), or in supplying the domestic market (textiles, beverages, food-processing). Machinery, automotive vehicles, coal, and petroleum products are imported. In the 1940's a 120,000-kilowatt hydroelectric power plant was constructed in the Rio Negro in C Uruguay. There are over 1,800 mi. of railroads, and over 3,000 mi. of all-weather highways in the country. Montevideo is the only large city, and the chief seaport and center of communications; Salto and Paysandú are river ports accessible to medium-sized vessels.

History. Uruguay was visited by Spanish Jesuits in the 17th century. The first settlement was the town of Soriano, at the mouth of the Rio Negro, founded in 1624. Permanent settlement by Spanish colonists began only in the 18th century, and by the end of that century the population of Uruguay was only ab. 30,000. Montevideo was founded in 1726, and later Uruguay became a Spanish province, named Banda Oriental (meaning "Eastern Shore"), which was annexed to the viceroyalty of La Plata in 1776. The independence movement was led by Artigas in 1811, and, after acquiring freedom from Spain, the Banda Oriental was annexed by Brazil in 1821. In 1825 Uruguay revolted against Brazilian rule, and after a struggle the small country was finally recognized (1828) as independent by both Brazil and Argentina. It was established as a republic by the adoption of a constitution in 1830. The new country then entered upon a period of virtual anarchy, chiefly the result of intrigues by foreign countries for the control or domination of its government (Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, France, and Great Britain were all involved at various times). In the period 1842-51 the Uruguayan rebel Oribe and the Argentine dictator Rosas besieged Montevideo; the British and French aided the city, which finally surrendered in 1851. In 1864 Brazil invaded Uruguay; this act led to the War of the Triple Alliance (1865-70), in which Paraguay fought against Brazilian, Argentine, and Uruguayan forces. After 1870, the period of foreign intervention ended, but domestic politics were characterized by periodic revolutionary outbreaks involving the two major political parties, the Colorados ("Reds") and the Blancos ("Whites"). On March 1, 1919, a new constitution went into effect; it included much social legislation, though woman suffrage was not achieved until the third constitution was adopted (1934). On March 15, 1952, the office of president was abolished, and supplanted by a nine-man governing council, composed of six members of the majority (Colorado) party and three of the minority (Nacionalista) party. The cabinet continues to function as an adjunct to the council.

Population and Culture. The population of Uruguay is predominantly of South European origin: Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese. Other nationalities which have immigrated in significant numbers include Brazilian, Argentine, French, British, German, and Swiss. There was a great immigration into the country in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Spanish is the national language, and Roman Catholic the predominant religion; freedom of religion is guaranteed by law, and church and state have been separate since 1919. Uruguay has a very low illiteracy rate, and free public education, including normal schools and a national university. However, poverty in the extensive rural, ranching areas remains one of the nation's chief social problems. In recent years the beaches, with their modern hotels, have attracted many tourists from Argentina, Brazil, Europe, and the U.S. The people of Uruguay are referred to in South America as Orientales ("Easterners"), a term derived from the full name of their country.

Uruguay River. River which rises in SE Brazil, in the state of Santa Catarina, near the coast, flows W, SW, and S, forms the boundary between Rio Grande do Sul in Brazil and Uruguay on the E and Argentina on the W, and empties into the estuary of the Rio de la Plata. Its chief tributaries are the Ibicuí and Rio Negro. Length, ab. 981 mi.; navigable to Salto (ab. 200 mi.), and above that, for small vessels, ab. 300 mi. farther.

Uruk (ó'ruk). See Erech.

Urumchi (ó.róm'chā). [Chinese, Tihwa, Tihua.] City in NW China, the capital of the province of Sinkiang; an important trading center and oasis in far W China, on the trail followed by Marco Polo in 1275. It is now connected by motor road with Lanchow, in Kansu province, and with the U.S.S.R.; it has an airfield. Coal is mined nearby; leather goods from nomad herders are important trade items. Pop. 80,000 (est. 1945).

Urumiah or Urumiyeh (ó.ró.mé.ye'). Lake. See Urmia, Lake.

Urundi (ó.ró'u'ndé). Region in E central Africa, N and E of Lake Tanganyika. Until 1920 it was part of German

East Africa. At that time it was separated from the mandate given to Great Britain over Tanganyika territory; with Ruanda to the north, it was given as a trust territory (Ruanda-Urundi) to the Belgian Congo. It is one of the most densely populated native areas in Africa.

Urungu (ō.rōng.gō). See Alungu.

Urvashi (ōr.vā.shē). [Also, Urvasi.] In the Rig-Veda, a beautiful nymph, whose earthly counterpart was the lotus. She was conceived as the mother of Agni, the fire god.

Urvile (dūr.vēl), Jules Sébastien César Dumont d'. See Dumont d'Urvile, Jules Sébastien César.

Urvina or Urbina (ōr.bē'nā), José María, b. 1808; d. 1891. Ecuadorian army officer and political leader. He participated in the "March Revolution" (1845), led a military revolt placing Diego Noboa in the presidency, seized power (1851) himself, and served as president until 1856. During his term Negro slavery was abolished (March 6, 1854).

Urvinum Metaurensē (ēr.vī'nūm met.ō.ren'sē). Ancient name of Urbino.

Uryankhai (ō.ryāng.hī'). See Tuva Autonomous Oblast.

Uryu (ō.ryō), Sotokichi. See Uriu, Sotokichi.

Urziceni (ōr.zē.chān', -chā'nē). Town in S Rumania, in Muntenia, ab. 42 mi. NE of Bucharest; railroad junction. 4,425 (1948).

U.S. or U.S.A. See United States.

U.S.A. Trilogy (1938) by John Dos Passos. It includes the novels The 42nd Parallel (1930), 1919 (1932), and The Big Money (1936).

U.S. Air Corps Ferrying Command. See Air Transport Command.

Usakos (ō.sā.kōs). Town in the W central section of South-West Africa, important as the junction of the main railroad line of the territory and the narrow-gauge line running to the mining areas in the N and NE. European pop. 629 (1946).

U.S. Army Range. See Le May Range.

U.S. Coast Survey. Former name of Coast and Geodetic Survey, U.S.

Uscudama (us.kū.dā'ma). Ancient name of Edirne, city.

Usedom (ō'ze.dom). [Polish, Uznam.] Island in NE Germany and NW Poland, formerly in the province of Pomerania, Prussia, situated in the Baltic Sea N of Stettin (Szczecin). It is separated by the mouth of the Peene River from the mainland, by the mouth of the Swine River from the island of Wolin. It has agriculture, livestock raising, fisheries, and contains popular seaside resorts, particularly Ahlbeck and Heringsdorf. The E part of the island, with the town of Swinoujście (Swinemünde), now belongs to Poland. Area, ab. 172 sq. mi.

Usedom, Guido von. b. at Quanditten, Germany, Oct. 2, 1854; d. at Schwerin, Germany, Feb. 24, 1925. German admiral. He served in the China expedition (1900), and from 1902 to 1904 was commander of the Kaiser's yacht Hohenzollern. During World War I he was in charge of the defense of the Turkish coast, and defended (1914-15) the Dardanelles, Gallipoli, and the Bosphorus.

Usedom, Count Karl Georg Ludwig Guido von. b. on the island of Rügen, Germany, July 17, 1805; d. at San Remo, Italy, Jan. 22, 1884. Prussian diplomat, ambassador to Italy (1863-69).

Usener (ō'ze.nēr), Hermann. b. at Weilburg, Germany, Oct. 23, 1834; d. at Bonn, Germany, Oct. 21, 1905. German classical scholar, notable in the field of Greek philosophy and the history of religion. Author of Das Weisheitsfest (1889), Götternamen (1896), and Die Sinfthussagen (1899).

USES. See United States Employment Service.

USHA. See United States Housing Authority.

Ushant (ush'ant). [French, Île d'Ouessant; ancient name, Uxantis.] Island in NW France, in the department of Finistère, in the Atlantic Ocean W of Brest; the westernmost French territory in Europe. The chief place is Lampaul. 2,363 (1946).

Ushant, Battle of. Naval battle, inconclusive, fought near Ushant in 1778 between the French under Louis Guillouet, Comte d'Orvilliers, and the British under Augustus Keppel.

Ushas (ō'shas). Vedic dawn goddess. She was the daughter of Dyaus (the sky). She was ushered forth each morning by the Asvins (twin gods of light) and came leading the chariot of the sun.

Usher (ush'ēr), James. See Ussher, James.

Usher, John Palmer. b. Jan. 9, 1816; d. at Philadelphia, April 13, 1889. American lawyer, U.S. secretary of the interior (1863-65) in Lincoln's cabinet. He was named (1861) attorney general of Indiana, and served (1862-63) as U.S. assistant secretary of the interior.

Usher, Roland Greene. b. at Lynn, Mass., May 3, 1880—, American historian. He was an instructor (1907 et seq.) and professor (1914 et seq.) at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo. Author of The Reconstruction of the English Church (1910), Pan-Germanism (1913), Pan-Americanism (1915), The Story of the Great War (1919), The Story of the Pilgrims for Children (1920), The Institutional History of the House of Commons, 1547-1641 (1924), and other books.

Usher, The Fall of the House of. See Fall of the House of Usher, The.

Ushuaia (ō.swā'yā). Capital and port of Tierra del Fuego territory, Argentina, located on Beagle Channel, ab. 1,430 mi. S of Buenos Aires; southernmost town in the world. Pop. ab. 2,000 (1947).

Usipites (ū.sip'i.tēz). [Also: Usipes (ū.sip'pēz), Usippi (ū.sip'i.i).] Ancient Germanic tribes, first mentioned by Caesar, who describes them as having been driven by the Suevi (59 B.C.), together with the Tencteri, from their original homes. With the Tencteri they were defeated by Caesar on the W bank of the Rhine, whence they withdrew to the opposite side, to the north of the Sugambri. Ptolemy, who names them for the last time, places them further to the south, in the Main region. They were probably merged ultimately in the Alamanni.

Usk (usk). River in S Wales and W England. It rises on the Brecknockshire-Carmarthenshire boundary and flows E to Brecknock, SE to Abergavenny, in Monmouthshire, and generally S to the estuary of the river Severn, ab. 3 mi. S of Newport. Length, ab. 60 mi.

Usk, Thomas. b. at London; executed at Newgate, London, 1388. English poet and politician. Usk was an ardent supporter of John de Northampton, while the latter was attempting to reform London city government and morals during his term as mayor. When de Northampton fell with the defeat of John of Gaunt's party and was imprisoned for sedition, Usk betrayed him. Later (1388) Usk was condemned to death for his treacheries. Author of The Testament of Love, a prose allegory in which Usk tries to atone for his sins. The work was formerly believed to have been written by Geoffrey Chaucer, but later scholarship correctly attributed it to Usk.

Uskara (ūs.kā'ra). See Eskuara.

Üsküb (üs.küp'). Turkish name of Skopje.

Üsküdar (üs.kü.dār'). [Italian, Scutari; ancient name, Chrysopolis.] Former city, now a part of Istanbul, situated on the E (Anatolian) side of the Bosphorus opposite the old city of Istanbul (Constantinople). Since ancient times it has been the center of traffic between Anatolia and Istanbul (it is now the rail and road terminus, linked by ferries with the larger center). Pop. ab. 60,000.

Usnach (ush'nā). [Also, Usnech.] In Old Irish legend, a famous warrior of Ulster. He was the father of three even more famous sons, who eloped with Deirdre to Scotland and were treacherously slain on their return. Of these Naioise was the lover and husband of Deirdre. A hill (modern Usney) in the center of Ireland is named for Usnach.

U.S. Navy Range. See Colbert Range.

Usnech (ush'ne). See Usnach.

Usney (üs'nī). See under Usnach.

USO. See United Service Organizations.

Usolye-Solikamskoye (ō.sōl'yē.sō.lyē.kām'skōyē). Former name of Berezinski.

Uspallata Pass (ōs.pā.lā'tā). [Also: Cumbre Pass, Cambre Pass, La Cumbre; Spanish, Portillo de Uspallata, Boquete.] Pass over the Andes between Mendoza, Argentina, and Santiago, Chile. During the colonial period this pass was the principal means of communication between Santiago and the Chilean cities E of the Andes. It was the route taken by José de San Martín in his invasion of Chile, in January, 1817. The Transandine Railroad passes beneath it at an elevation of ab. 10,460 ft., through a tunnel ab. 2 mi. long. It is the site of Christ of the Andes, a statue erected (1904) to commemorate the settlement of the Argentina-Chile boundary dispute over Tierra del Fuego. Summit elevation, ab. 13,082 ft.

U.S. Road. See Cumberland Road.

Ussel (üs'el). Town in C France, in the department of Corrèze, between Tulle and Clermont-Ferrand. It is an old town, with houses from the 15th and 16th centuries, and small industries. The town suffered some damage in World War II. 5,893 (1946).

Usher (ush'ér), James. [Also, Usher.] b. at Dublin, Jan. 4, 1851; d. at Reigate, Surrey, England, March 21, 1856. British prelate, theologian, and scholar. He took the degree of M.A. at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1860, was regius professor of divinity there (1867-70), and chancellor of Saint Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, in 1865, was appointed bishop of Meath in 1861, and became archbishop of Armagh and primate of Ireland in 1865. He was on a visit to England at the outbreak of the English Civil War, and took sides with Charles I, with the result that he lost nearly all his property in Ireland, with the exception of his library. He was a preacher to the Society of Lincoln's Inn, London, from 1647 until shortly before his death. His most notable work is Annales Veteris et Novi Testamenti (1650-54), in which he proposed a scheme of Biblical chronology, long printed in marginal notation in the Authorized Version, that determined the date of the Creation to be 4004 b.c. Later investigations disproving his chronology have tended unfairly to cast a shadow over his other works, which display a profound scholarship.

U.S.-Soviet Joint Commission on Korea (kō.rē'ā). Commission established after the Moscow conference of foreign ministers in December, 1945, and charged with the task of holding consultations with Korean leaders in order to create a provisional Korean government. Its meetings, held through the spring of 1946, accomplished little because of disagreement over what constituted legitimate Korean groups for consultation. When General George C. Marshall, then U.S. secretary of state, early in 1947 threatened to take unilateral steps in South Korea, the commission met again in May, but was unable to agree on methods of representation or the supervision of elections. Eventually two governments were formed, with elections in South Korea, under United Nations supervision, being held on May 10, 1948.

U.S.S.R. See Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Ussuri (üs'sü'ri). River in SE U.S.S.R. and NE Manchuria, forming a part of the boundary between China and the U.S.S.R. It rises in several headstreams in the Sikhote-Alin Mountains of the Maritime Territory, and flows generally N to join the Amur River near Khabarovsk. The valley of the Ussuri forms a lowland corridor through the mountains to the Pacific, and is traversed by the Trans-Siberian Railway to Vladivostok. Length, ab. 550 mi.

Ust Abakanskoye (öst'ä.bä.kän'skō.ye). Former name of Abakan.

Ustan Haftum (öst'stän häf.töm'). See under Fars.

Uster (üs'tér). Town in N Switzerland, in the canton of Zurich, E of the city of Zurich. It has textile and machinery industries. 10,547 (1941).

Usteri (üs'té.ré), Johann Martin. b. at Zurich, Switzerland, 1763; d. at Rapperswil, Switzerland, 1827. Swiss poet, writing in German. He was the author of the song Freut euch des Lebens. With his books De Herr Heiri (1807) and De Vikari (1810) he inaugurated the movement of Swiss-Alamannic literature, which is now one of the main currents of German-Swiss creative writing.

Ústí (ös'té). Kraj (region) of Czechoslovakia, in N Bohemia. Capital, Ústí nad Labem; area, ab. 1,600 sq. mi.; pop. 622,747 (1947).

Ustica (ös'té.kä). Mountainous island in the Tyrrhenian Sea, belonging to the province of Palermo, in the compartimento (region) of Sicily, Italy, situated ab. 43 mi. N of Palermo. It is used as a penal colony. 1,141 (1936).

Ústí nad Labem (ös'té näd lä'bem). [Also: Ústí, German, Aussig.] City in Czechoslovakia, capital of the kraj (region) of Ústí, in N Bohemia, on the Elbe (Labe) River between Litoměřice and Děčín, ab. 44 mi. N of Prague. It is a river port and an industrial center. It has large chemical works, several metalworking plants, a dockyard for steam tugs, factories for electric bulbs, rubber, textiles, porcelain, and foodstuffs. Soap and margarine are also manufactured. In nearby Střekov (German, Schreckenstein) is a ruined castle and the Masaryk Dam, the largest dam of the republic, and a major hydroelectric station. Pop., including suburbs, 56,328 (1947).

Ustka (ös'tkä). [German, Stolpmünde, Stolpemünde.] Town in N Poland, in the województwo (province) of Szczecin, formerly in Pomerania, Germany, situated at the mouth of the Stolpe River on the Baltic Sea, ab. 75 mi. W of Danzig; seaside resort; fish-smoking plants. It became part of Poland in 1945. Pop. 4,783 (1939), 2,807 (1946).

Ust Kamenogorsk (öst' kä.mýi.no.gorsk'). Town in the U.S.S.R., in E Kazakhstan Soviet Socialist Republic, C Asia, on the Irtysh River ab. 150 mi. SE of Semipalatinsk; site of a large zinc refinery, using power from a nearby hydroelectric station on the Irtysh. 20,800 (est. 1935).

Ust Sysolsk (öst'si.sölsk'). Former name of Syktyvkar. Ust Ur (öst'ür). Desert plateau in the U.S.S.R., in NW Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic and SW Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic, C Asia, between the Aral Sea and the Caspian Sea.

Usude (ös'ödä). See under Angyo.

Usulután (ös'sölö.tän'). Department in SE El Salvador, bounded on the S by the Pacific Ocean. Capital, Usulután; area, 1,291 sq. mi.; pop. 164,967 (est. 1942).

Usulután. City in SE El Salvador, capital of Usulután department; bananas, beans, maize, and tobacco. 8,622 (est. 1942).

Usumacinta (ös'sö.mä.sën'tä). River in NW Guatemala flowing NW to the Grijalva River. It forms part of the boundary between Guatemala and the state of Chiapas, Mexico. Length, ab. 330 mi.

Usumbura (ösüm.b'ö'ra). Capital of the Belgian trust territory of Ruanda-Urundi, C Africa, at the NE end of Lake Tanganyika. 17,707, including 1,304 Europeans (1950).

Usuramo (ös.sö.rä'mö). See Uzaramo.

U.S. Zone. See under German Federal Republic.

Utah (ü'tä, ü'tä'). See also Ute.

Utah. [Called the "Beehive State"; also, the "Mormon State."] State of the W United States, bounded by Idaho and Wyoming on the N, Wyoming and Colorado on the E, Arizona on the S, and Nevada on the W.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. The state is divided for administrative purposes into 29 counties. It sends two representatives to Congress, and has four electoral votes. Leading cities are Ogden, Provo, and Salt Lake City. Capital, Salt Lake City; area, 82,346 sq. mi. (84,916 sq. mi., including water); pop. 688,862 (1950), an increase of 25.2 percent over the 1940 figure. The state ranks tenth in area, and 39th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The surface consists of mountains and a high plateau. The Wasatch Mountains run through the C part of the state from N to S. The Uinta Mountains lie in the NE, Kings Peaks (13,496 ft. and 13,498 ft.) in this group being the highest points in the state. The Great Salt Lake Desert, a part of the Great Basin, lies in the NE. In this desert lies the Great Salt Lake, largest lake in the state; it is strongly salty, and has no outlet to the sea. The principal rivers of the state are the Colorado, which flows across the SE part; its tributary the Green, flowing into the state from Wyoming and S down the E part of the state; and the Sevier, flowing N and SW and emptying into Sevier Lake, another saline lake. The climate of the state is dry, and irrigation is necessary for agricultural purposes. The state is subject to extremes of heat and cold.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Utah is rich in minerals. Gold, iron, copper, coal, silver, lead, zinc, sulfur, petroleum, and salt are found in considerable quantities, and mining is a leading occupation. Agriculture and stock raising (cattle and sheep) are important. Sugar beets, fruits, alfalfa, potatoes, wheat, oats, barley, and hay are the chief crops. Manufacturing is based primarily on the products of mining and agriculture. Since World War II the manufacture of steel has become a major industry, having its center at Provo. Beet-sugar refining, the production of oil and wool, and canning (fruits, vegetables, and fish from the lakes) are the other outstanding industries. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as 161 million dollars; from mineral output, as high as 97 million; from manufacturing, as high as 465 million.

History. Utah was first explored by Spaniards sent on their expedition by Coronado. Later, James Bridger, an American trapper, discovered (1824) the Great Salt Lake, and many later explorers, including Frémont and Kit Carson, visited the region. The real settlement of Utah did not begin, however, until 1847, when Brigham Young and a group of his Mormon followers arrived in the Great Salt Lake valley, having been driven from the Middle West by religious persecution. In 1848 Utah was included in the cession made to the U.S. by Mexico under the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo. The Mormons organized (1849) a state (comprising what are now Utah, Arizona, Nevada, and parts of New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, and California) which they called Deseret, but the U.S. Congress refused to recognize it. In 1850 the Territory of Utah (Utah and parts of Nevada, Colorado, and Wyoming) was organized. The Mormons were defiant of U.S. authority and engaged in many conflicts with the "Gentiles," or non-Mormons; one such incident was the massacre (1857) of an immigrant expedition at Mountain Meadows. A force of U.S. troops was sent to the state in 1857 to maintain order, and in 1858 the Mormons submitted to the authority of the U.S. Mormon conflict with the U.S. over the Mormon practice of polygamy continued for some years, however, and the state was admitted (Jan. 4, 1896) to the Union (as the 45th state) only after polygamy had been renounced.

Culture. Utah's urban population (65.3 percent as classified in the 1950 census) is somewhat greater than its rural population. About one fifth of the inhabitants are foreign born (mainly Germans and Scandinavians). A considerable percentage of the inhabitants are members of the Mormon Church (officially the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-Day Saints). Salt Lake City is the world headquarters of this church and the site of the Mormon Temple and Tabernacle. The Salt Lake City Tabernacle Choir is widely known. The canyons of Utah are among the most unusual scenery in the nation. Bryce Canyon National Park (56 sq. mi.; established 1923), in the S, and Zion National Park (ab. 147 sq. mi.; established 1919), in the SW, contain brilliantly colored formations. The institutions of higher learning in the state include the state-supported University of Utah, at Salt Lake City, and Brigham Young University, at Provo. The state motto is "Industry." The state flower is the Sego lily.

Utah Lake. Fresh-water lake in Utah, ab. 28 mi. S of Salt Lake City. Its outlet is by the Jordan into Great Salt Lake. Elevation, ab. 4,489 ft.; length, ab. 25 mi.; area, ab. 142 sq. mi.

Utaradit (ŭ'ta.ră.dit'). See Uttaradit.

Utatlán (ŭ.tă.tlăn'). [Also, Gumarcach.] Ancient seat of the Quiché Indians of Guatemala, in what is now Quiché department. It was an easily defensible place, of difficult access. It fell to the Spaniards in 1524, and was razed to the ground.

Ute (ŭtē). [Also, Utah.] North American Indian tribe formerly inhabiting a large area in W and C Colorado and E and C Utah. They were a nomadic, warlike people, who during the early 19th century preyed on the Pueblo Indians. Their culture was typical western plains culture. The languages and dialects of the various bands belong to the Uto-Aztecan family. Surviving members of the tribe (ab. 2,500) are now on reservations in Colorado and Utah.

Ute Peak. Peak in C Colorado, W of Central City, 12,298 ft.

Ütersen (ŭ'tēr.zen). See Uetersen.

Uther and Igraine (ŭ'ther; i.grăn'). Novel by Warwick Deeping, published in 1903 and issued in revised form in 1927.

Uther Pendragon (pen.drag'ŏn). Legendary king of Britain; reputed father of King Arthur of the Round Table. Pendragon was a title, meaning "chief dragon," which was used by a number of ancient British and Welsh chieftains who claimed primacy over lesser chieftains, and sovereignty over those peoples. It is said that their standards displayed the semblance of a dragon. Nothing really is known of Uther (probably a historical person whose story has been overlaid by myth and legend), but he is represented as the husband of Igraine and the father (although not by Igraine) of the renowned King Arthur.

Uthoff (ŭt'hof), Wilhelm. b. at Klein-Warin, in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, July 31, 1853; d. 1927. German ophthalmologist. He is known for his description of the nystagmus of multiple sclerosis (called Uthoff's sign).

Utica (ŭ'ti.kă). In ancient geography, a city in Africa, situated near the Bagradas (modern Medjerda) River, ab. 25 mi. NW of Carthage. It was founded by the Phoenicians, sided in the third Punic War with Rome, and succeeded Carthage as the leading city in Africa. It was held by Cato for the Pompeians in 46 B.C.

Utica. City in C New York, a county seat (with Rome) of Oneida County, on the Mohawk River and the Erie Canal, ab. 83 mi. W of Albany; manufactures of textiles, clothing, knitted goods, firearms, beer, and metal products. It was incorporated as a city in 1832. Pop. of city, 100,518 (1940), 101,531 (1950); of urbanized area, 117,424 (1950).

Utiel (ŭ.ti.yel'). Town in E Spain, in the province of Valencia, ab. 42 mi. W of Valencia, 12,411 (1940).

Utin (ŭ.tĕn'). See Eutin.

Utinum (ŭ.tin.um). An ancient name of Udine, Italy.

Utzitz (ŭ'tits), Emil. b. at Prague, May 27, 1883—. German philosopher and aesthetician who served (1925 et seq.) as a professor at the universities of Halle and Prague. Author of Grundlegung der allgemeinen Kunstwissenschaft (1914-20), Charakterologie (1925), and Geschichte der Ästhetik (1932).

Ütliberg (ŭt'lĕ.berk). See Unter Albis.

Utnapishtim (ŭt.nă.pish'tim). In the Babylonian Gilgamesh epic, the survivor of the Flood, to whom the gods gave immortality. When Gilgamesh after a difficult and dangerous journey arrived to ask him for the secret of immortality, Utnapishtim told him first to conquer sleep before he tried to conquer death. This Gilgamesh could not do. He fell asleep. But Utnapishtim took compassion on his failure and told him to seek a certain flower on the bottom of the ocean which could rejuvenate the aged and restore the dead to life.

Uto-Aztecan (ŭ'tŏ.az.tek'an). Large North American Indian language family, comprised of numerous languages and dialects. It spreads through the Southwest and the plateau area of the West, and in NW, W, and S central Mexico.

Utopia (ŭ.tŏ'pi.ă). Political romance by Sir Thomas More, published in Latin in 1516; so called from an imaginary island, the seat of an ideal commonwealth. The name itself means "no place." The original title was De Optimo Reipublicae Statu, deque Nova Insula Utopia. It was translated in 1551 by Ralph Robinson, and by Bishop Gilbert Burnet in 1683. The name Utopia has given rise to the adjective "utopian" with the meaning of "impracticable" or "ideal," especially as applied to schemes for the advancement of social conditions. Utopian literature, a genre widely used for the expression of social criticism, occurs in the literatures of many peoples throughout the ages.

Utraquists (ŭ'tra.kwists). See Calixtines.

Utrecht (ŭ'trekt; Dutch, ŭ'trecht'). Province in C Netherlands, bounded by North Holland on the W, South Holland on the SW, Gelderland on the S and E, and the IJsselmeer on the N; the Lek River, part of the Rhine delta, forms the S boundary. The surface is almost entirely flat, and the soil fertile. Market gardening, horticulture, and livestock raising are practiced. There are a number of industries and summer resorts. It is the smallest province of the Netherlands. Capital, Utrecht; area, 526 sq. mi.; pop. 584,176 (est. 1950).

Utrecht. [Latin, Trajectum ad Rhenum.] City in C Netherlands, capital of the province of Utrecht, situated on the lower Rhine, at its division into the Vecht and Oude Rijn (Old Rhine) rivers, ab. 20 mi. SE of Amsterdam; the most centrally located of all Dutch cities, situated at the point where the flat polderland and the wooded hill country meet. It is the seat of the central administration of the Dutch railroads, and of the administration of state forests, public hygiene, social insurance, and other governmental agencies. 195,121 (est. 1950).

Industry and Commerce. It has important railroad construction works, and machine, chemical, and instrument industries. There are specialized metalworking factories for the production of gold, silver, lead, zinc, and copper ware; concrete and asphalt works; tobacco, leather, and glassware manufactures. There are also great agricultural markets, particularly for livestock and cheese.

Chief Buildings and Institutions. Utrecht is the seat of a university, founded in 1636, with a good medical faculty and a library containing more than 300,000 volumes and manuscripts, among them the celebrated Psalter of Utrecht of the 9th century. The central museum contains archaeological and art collections. The old town of Utrecht is encircled by parks and waterways. The old cathedral, erected between the 13th and 16th centuries, was damaged by a hurricane in 1674. The medieval German emperors Conrad II and Henry V have their tombs there. The tower has a famed chime of bells. The so-called Pope's House was erected by Pope Adrian VI, who was the only Roman Catholic Pope of Dutch origin. The city hall was erected in classical style in 1824.

History. Utrecht was a Roman camp in ancient times. The bishopric was founded in 696, and during the Middle Ages the bishops of Utrecht were considered the representatives of the German emperor in the Netherlands, but the secular power was ceded to Charles V in 1527. In 1559 the bishopric was elevated to an archbishopric. The city was occupied (1672-74) by the French. The Union of Utrecht, the great step in the independence of the Netherlands, was concluded here in 1579; the Peace of Utrecht in 1713.

Utrecht, Peace of. [Also, Treaty of Utrecht.] Peace concluded in 1713, through several separate treaties, between France on one side and Great Britain, the Netherlands, Prussia, Savoy, and Portugal on the other, and acceded to by Spain. With the subsequent treaties of Rastatt and Baden (1714), it put an end to the War of the Spanish Succession. Philip V (of Bourbon) was confirmed as king of Spain (furthering England's desire to see that the crowns of France and Spain should never be united) and France recognized the Protestant succession in England. Prussia was recognized as a kingdom. Great Britain received Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and other areas in North America from France, and Gibraltar and Minorca from Spain, with the right to send African slaves to Spanish America. The Spanish Netherlands, Sardinia, Milan, and Naples were ceded to Austria. Savoy received Sicily from Spain. Prussia received Neuchâtel and part of Gelderland, and renounced its claims to Orange. Portugal received additional territory in South America.

Utrecht, Union of. See under United Provinces of the Netherlands.

Utrera (ô.trä.rä). Town in S Spain, in the province of Sevilla, ab. 20 mi. SE of Sevilla; stock raising, particularly for the bull ring. 30,440 (1940).

Utrillo (ô.trë.lyô; French, ô.trë.lô), Maurice. b. at Paris, Dec. 25, 1883—. French landscape painter, best known for his paintings of Paris streets; son of Suzanne Valadon. He first studied under his mother, then traveled to Brittany and Corsica. His early works were impressionistic, and later he developed into his "white period," which is unique, and which is most widely known. For many years he struggled against alcoholism and poverty, and his neurotic tendencies are reflected in his works, which depict human figures overwhelmed by architecture and isolated from each other. He has exhibited throughout Europe and in North America, and his work hangs in many of the important galleries in the world. Included in a list of his works are Landscape of Suburbs, Notre Dame de Paris, The Lapin Agile, Parisian Suburbs, On the Bank, Sacre Cœur de Montmartre, Rue Norvins, St. Pierre Square, Moulin de la Galette, Rue de Mont Cenis, Panorama of Paris, Saint Severin Church, Reims Cathedral, and The Barracks.

Utsunomiya (ô.tsô.nô.mä.yä). City in N central Honshu, Japan, ab. 60 mi. N of Tokyo; processing and shipping center for tobacco. 107,210 (1950).

Uttaradit or Uttaradit (ût'ä.mä.dit'). City in Thailand (Siam), the chief city in the N part of the country. A trading center and rail terminal ab. 400 mi. N of Bangkok, it is the center of the teakwood industry in Thailand. Pop. ab. 5,000.

Uttar Pradesh (ût'är prä.dësh'). [Former name, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh.] State in the Union of India, formerly a lieutenant-governorship in British India, so formed in 1902, consisting of the provinces in British India formerly known as the Northwest Provinces and Oudh, which in 1877 were united under one administrative head as lieutenant-governor of the Northwest Provinces and chief commissioner of Oudh. With the change of name in 1920 the title of chief commissioner was dropped. Several states were added in the period of changeover from British India to the republic, and the name was changed by the constitution of 1950. Capital, Lucknow; area, 112,523 sq. mi.; pop. 63,254,118 (1951).

Uttroeter (û.tok's.tër, u-; uk's.tër). Urban district and market town in C England, in Staffordshire, situated near the river Dove, ab. 28 mi. E of Birmingham, ab. 148 mi. NW of London by rail. 7,443 (1951).

Utu (ô'ô). [Also, Utug (ô'ô'g).] In Sumerian mythology, the sun god. He was identified with the Babylonian Shamash, and was the brother of Innana, the Sumerian equivalent of the Babylonian Ishtar.

Uusikaupunki (ô'si.kou'ping.ki). [Swedish, Nystad.] Small seaport in the lään (department) of Turku-Pori, Finland, situated on the Gulf of Bothnia. 4,390 (1951).

Uusimaa (ô'si.mä). [Swedish, Nyland.] Lään (department) in S Finland, bordering on the Gulf of Finland and bounded by Turku-Pori, Häme, and Kymi. Capital, Helsinki; area, 4,006 sq. mi.; pop. 676,113 (1951).

Uvalde (û.väl'de). City in C Texas, county seat of Uvalde County, SW of Austin; shipping center for mohair, honey, pecans, and asphalt. It was settled in 1853. Pop. 8,674 (1950).

Uvarov (ô.vär'ôf), Count Sergey. b. at Moscow, Aug. 25, 1875; d. there, Sept. 16, 1855. Russian statesman and scholar.

Uvedale (ûv'däl), John. See Udall, John.

Uvedale, Nicholas. See Udall, Nicholas.

Uxantis (uk.san'tis). Ancient name of Ushant.

Uxbridge (uks'brij). Urban district and market town in SE England, in Middlesex, situated on the river Colne ab. 16 mi. NW of Paddington Station, London. Uxbridge was the scene of unsuccessful negotiations between Parliamentary and Royalist commissioners at the beginning of 1645. Pop. 55,944 (1951).

Uxbridge. Town in SE Massachusetts, in Worcester County; manufactures of textiles. 7,007 (1950).

Uxellodunum (uks.el.ô.dû'num). Ancient name of Issoudun; see also under Capdenac-Gare.

Uxmal (ôsh.mäl', ôs-). Large Maya city in NW Yucatán, Mexico, ab. 70 mi. S of Mérida. It was founded in the early 11th century and, until its abandonment in the late 15th century, was an important religious and political center in late Maya history. The architecture at Uxmal is noteworthy for the excellence of the elaborate stone mosaic façades on the various temples and palaces. The remains are scattered over several square miles, but only a few of the buildings have the walls still standing. These are generally raised on terraced foundations (truncated pyramids). Some of them are very large. The one called "Casa del Gobernador" is 320 ft. long, but narrow. The "Casa de las Monjas" is built around a courtyard which measures 258 by 214 ft. There are no idols as at Copán, and nothing resembling the stucco work of Palenque. One of the most curious features is the great number of protuberant ornaments called "elephants' trunks" by F. de Waldeck.

Uz (uz). In Biblical geography, a land E of Palestine, the home of Job. It is sometimes placed in Hauran.

Uz (ôts, üt's), Johann Peter. b. at Ansbach, Germany, Oct. 3, 1720; d. there, May 12, 1796. German poet, one of the so-called Anacreontic poets grouped around Johann Ludwig Gleim. He emulated Horace and Anac-reón, whose odes he translated (1746). His own Lyrische Gedichte appeared in 1749. Following two other fads of the day he wrote in imitation of Alexander Pope his philosophical Theodioté (1755), as well as a mock heroic Sieg des Liebesgottes (1753) after the manner of The Rape of the Lock.

Uzanne (ü.zän), Louis Octave. b. at Auxerre, France, Sept. 14, 1852; d. at St.-Cloud, France, 1931. French journalist and bibliophile. Author of numerous studies on bookmaking, bindings, rare books, and curiosities revealed by the study of old prints and the like. Later he turned to such observations on contemporary folkways as are suggested by his titles: Visions de notre heure (1899), L'Art et les artifices de la beauté (1902), Sottisier des mœurs (1911), and others.

Uzaramo (ö.zä.rä'mö). [Also, Usuramo.] District in E Africa, near the Indian Ocean coast, in Tanganyika territory. From 1885 it was a possession of the German East Africa Company, and became part of the German colony of German East Africa, which in 1920 became Tanganyika, a mandated territory under Great Britain. Dar-es-Salaam lies within the district.

Uzbek (öz.bek', öz'bek, uz'-). Turkic people of the Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic and neighboring parts of the U.S.S.R. (ab. 4,500,000 in 1946), as well as Afghanistan (500,000) and Sinkiang province, China. Their culture is distinctly Persian, and their religion Moslem. Their language, Uzbek, belongs to the central Turkic group of the Turkic family of languages. Originally a part of the Golden Horde, the Uzbeks first appeared in history in the 14th and 15th centuries. Conquests in C Asia finally resulted in the formation of two Uzbek khanates, which lasted until the Russian Revolution, the Bukhara khanate and the smaller Khivan khanate. In 1740 these khanates were temporarily conquered by the Persian ruler Nadir Shah. Although they revived, the Uzbek states fell into feudal disorganization, which was further increased by Chinese pressure and later suzerainty over the Fergana valley (1758-59). Russian conquest took place between 1847 and 1855, the Bukhara and Khivan khanates being made vassal states.

Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic. [Also, Uzbekistan (öz.bek.istan', uz-, -stän').] Republic of the U.S.S.R., in C Asia, extending from the Aral Sea SE to the Afghanistan border, and E to include the Fergana valley. It is largely a desertic lowland region with extensive oases; in the SE and S there are some mountainous areas. Two great rivers, the Amu Darya and Syr Darya, with numerous smaller streams, furnish water for irrigation agriculture. The climate is dry and sunny, with long, hot summers and cold winters. Uzbekistan is the greatest cotton-growing region of the U.S.S.R., producing about two thirds of the total crop; other important crops include wheat, rice, fruits, silk, and tobacco. Sugar beets have been introduced. Caracul sheep, goats, and camels are raised in the dry regions. Industrial development has been rapid in recent years; textile industries were the first to become established on a large scale, but in the early 1940's a new iron and steel plant at Begovat, on the Syr Darya S of Tashkent, began operations, using hydroelectric power. Another power station at Chirchik, NE of Tashkent, supplies a large fertilizer plant. Machinery industries have also expanded greatly. Tashkent is the chief city of the republic, and Samarkand the most historic city. About three fourths of the population are Uzbeks, excepting in the Karakalpak Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, where they constitute only about one third. Russians constitute approximately a tenth of the population. There is a university at Tashkent. Capital, Tashkent; area, 156,650 sq. mi.; pop. 6,282,446 (1939).

Uzboi (öz.boi'). Old river valley depression in the Turkmen Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R., in C Asia, extending from the E shore of the Caspian Sea near Krasnovodsk E and N to the region S of the Aral Sea and W of the Amu Darya. It is generally supposed to be the ancient course of the river when it emptied into the Caspian Sea. The new Turkmen Canal (under construction in 1952) will traverse the Uzboi.

Uzès (ü.zes). Town in S France, in the department of Gard, ab. 12 mi. N of Nîmes. It produces earthenware, and contains the 17th-century cathedral of Saint Théodoret. 4,667 (1946).

Uzès (dü.zes), Anne, Duchesse d'. [Maiden name, de Rochechouart-Mortemart; pseudonym, Manuela.] b. at Paris, Feb. 10, 1847; d. at Château Dam pierre, France, Feb. 3, 1933. French sculptor, best known for her monuments of the playwright Émile Augier at Valence (1897) and of Joan of Arc at Mehun-sur-Yèvre (1901).

Uzi (ö.zi'). Turkish name of the Dnieper.

Uznam (ö.z'näm). Polish name of Usedom.

Uzobo (ö.zö.bö). See Sobó.

Uzziah (u.zi'ä). [Also: Azariah, Azarias, Ozias.] King of Judah; son of Amaziah. He reigned in peace and prosperity (c780-c740 B.C.). In his later years he was a leper and his son Jotham ruled the kingdom for him.

V

VA. See Veterans Administration.

Vaal (vål). River in S Africa, the chief headstream and tributary of the Orange River, Union of South Africa. It forms the chief part of the boundary between the Transvaal and Orange Free State provinces, and joins the Orange River W of Kimberley in Cape of Good Hope province. Length, ab. 700 mi.

Vaasa (vä'sä). [Swedish, Vasa.] Lääni (department) in W Finland, bordering on the Gulf of Bothnia in the W, and bounded by Oulu, Turku-Pori, Häme, and Kuopio. Capital, Vaasa; land area, 15,062 sq. mi.; pop. 613,574 (1951).

Vaasa. [Swedish, Vasa; former name, Nikolainkaupunki; Swedish, Nikolaistad.] City in W Finland, capital of the lääni (department) of Vaasa, situated on an inlet of the Gulf of Bothnia. A seaport, it has a lumber trade, and metal and cotton-textile industries, lumber mills, glass and chocolate manufactures. Founded by Charles IX of Sweden (Charles Vasa) in 1606, it was the scene of fighting in the Russo-Swedish hostilities of 1808-09 and in the Finnish civil war of 1918-19. There is a large Swedish-speaking population. 36,178 (1951).

Vác (váts). [Also: Vácz; German, Waitzen.] Town in N Hungary, situated on the E bank of the Danube River ab. 20 mi. N of Budapest: trade in wine, wool, grain, and cattle. The Turks were defeated here in 1597 and in 1684 by the imperial armies; in 1849 the Hungarian insurgents here defeated the Austrians, but were later overwhelmed by the Russians. 21,335 (1948).

Vaca (bá'ká), Álvar Núñez Cabeza de. See Cabeza de Vaca, Álvar Núñez.

Vaca de Castro (vá'ká dā kās'trō; Spanish, bá'-), Cristóbal. b. 1492; d. c1562. Spanish lawyer and colonial administrator. He was a member of the audience (audiencia) of Valladolid, and in 1540 was sent by Charles V to Peru to inquire into certain alleged abuses, with orders to act as governor in case of Francisco Pizarro's death. He landed on the coast of New Granada in the spring of 1541, and crossed to Popayán, where he heard of the assassination of Pizarro and the rebellion of the younger Diego de Almagro. Aided by loyal Spaniards, he advanced into Peru. Almagro was defeated (Sept. 16, 1542) and executed, and Castro held the government until the arrival (May 15, 1544) of the viceroy Blasco Núñez Vela. The latter imprisoned him on suspicion of conspiring with the rebels against the new laws, but he escaped and reached Spain in 1545. There he was arrested (on charges including that of peculation) but was exonerated in 1556, after 11 years' imprisonment.

Vacapa (vá.kä'pá). See under Matape.

Vacaria (vá.kä.ré'a), Campos de. See Campos de Vacaria.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, nê, hêr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; zh, then; d, d or j; z, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Vacaville (vak'a.vil). Town in California, in Solano County: fruit shipping, 3,169 (1950).

Vacca (vak'a). Ancient name of Béja, Tunisia.

Vach (väch). In the Rig-Veda, the personification and goddess of speech. In later Hindu mythology, she became identified with Sarasvati in her aspect as goddess of wisdom and eloquence.

Vachell (vächel), Horace Annesley. b. at Sydenham, Kent, England, Oct. 30, 1861—. English novelist, playwright, and essayist. Among his novels are Romance of Judge Ketchum (1894), Quinney's (1914; dramatized 1915), Whiteash (1920), Quinney's Adventures (1924), Vicar's Walk (1933), and Quinney's for Quality (1938). His plays include Her Son (1907; also published as a novel), Jelf's (1912), Searchlights (1915), The Case of Lady Cumber (1915), Who Is He (1915), Fishpingle (1916), Count X (1921), and Plus Fous (1923). He is author also of the essay collections My Vagabondage (1936) and Little Tyrannies (1940), and of A Writer's Autobiography (1937).

Vacherot (väch.rö), Étienne. b. at Langres, France, July 29, 1809; d. at Paris, July 28, 1897. French philosophical writer, professor of philosophy at the Sorbonne (1839-52). He was attacked by the clerical party because of his philosophical doctrines, was deprived of his office in 1852 for political reasons connected with the establishment of the new monarchy, and in 1859 was condemned to three months' imprisonment for his book La Démocratie. His other works include Histoire critique de l'école d'Alexandrie (3 vols., 1846-51), La Métaphysique et la science (1858), La Religion (1868), and La Science et la conscience (1870).

Vachopi (vä.chö'pé). See Chopi.

Vacquerie (vä.kré), Auguste. b. at Villequier, Seine Inférieure, France, Nov. 19, 1819; d. at Paris, Feb. 19, 1895. French journalist and dramatist. A follower and close friend of Victor Hugo, he was a founder (1869), with Paul Meurice and others, of the radical Le Rappel. His dramatic works include Tragédies, a melodrama (1848), Jean Baudry, a comedy (1863), and Jalousie, a comedy (1888). He also published poems.

Vacuna (vä.kü'na). Ancient Sabine goddess. She was probably originally a goddess of agriculture, but the Romans later identified her variously with Victoria Bellona, and Venus.

Vác (väs). See Vác.

Vadász (vö.däs), Nicolaus. b. at Budapest, June 27, 1884; d. at Paris, Aug. 10, 1927. Hungarian painter and illustrator.

Vadimonian Lake (vad.i.mö'n.i.nä). [Latin, Vadimonis Lacus (vad.i.mö'nis lä'kus)]. In ancient geography, a small lake in Italy, near the Tiber River; the modern Laghetto di Bassano. Here the Romans under Fabius Maximus Rullianus defeated (310 or 309 B.C.) the Etruscans; in 283 B.C. the Romans defeated the combined north Italians and Gauls here.

Vadø (väd'sé'). Town in NE Norway, in the fylke (county) of Finnmark, situated on the N coast of Varanger Fjord, an inlet of the Barents Sea. The chief occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. The town was destroyed by the Germans in 1944, but has been rebuilt, 2,107 (1946).

Vaes (vä's), Pieter Van der. See Lely, Sir Peter.

Vaga (vä'gä), Perino del. [Original name, Piero (or Perino or Perino) Buonaccorsi]. b. at Florence, Italy, 1500 or 1501; d. at Rome, 1547. Italian painter, a pupil and assistant of Raphael. He worked at Rome and Genoa, and painted chiefly historical and mythological subjects.

Vagabondia (vag.a.bon'di.a), Songs from. See Songs from Vagabondia.

Vaglieri (vä.lye'rë), Dante. b. at Trieste, May 31, 1865; d. at Ostia, Italy, Dec. 13, 1913. Italian classical scholar, especially remembered as the excavator of Ostia. He taught epigraphy at the University of Rome, served also as director of the Museo delle Terme, and directed the excavation of old Ostia and the Palatine Hill. He was coeditor (with De Unguerrero) of Dizionario epigrafico.

Vahalis (vä'a.lis). Ancient name of the Waal.

Vahlanganu (vä.hlang.gä'nö). See Hlanganu.

Vaillavi (vä.hlä'vö). See Ilavi.

Vahlen (fä'len), Johann. b. Sept. 27, 1830; d. Nov. 30, 1911. German classical philologist, professor at Berlin (1874-1911).

Vahumbi (vä.höm'bë). See Humbe.

Vai (vi). [Also: Gallinas, Veí.] Mande-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting an area in W Liberia. They are divided into a number of kingdoms ruled by hereditary kings. They have exogamous patrilineal clans. Boys and girls are isolated from society for three or more years in secret initiation schools, known as Beri for boys and Sande for girls, in which they are trained for their future roles as adult men and women. They practice hoe agriculture and their principal food is rice. A system of syllabic writing was invented (c1834) by Doalu Bukere, a Vai man.

Valda-Voevod (vī'dä.voi.vöd'), Alexandru. b. at Olpret, in Transylvania, 1871; d. at Bucharest, March 19, 1950. Rumanian political leader, prime minister (1919-20, 1933), minister of foreign affairs (1919-20), and minister of interior (1928-30, 1932-33). He was active in the Transylvanian nationalist movement and a member of the Hungarian parliament before World War I, and was a leader of the National Peasant Party after 1926. He is considered to have been chiefly responsible for obtaining the acceptance by the Allies after World War I of the addition of Transylvania and Bessarabia to Rumania.

Vaigach (vi.gäch'). Island in NW U.S.S.R., SE of Novaya Zemlya, in the Nenets National Okrug of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. Length, ab. 60 mi.; area, ab. 1,300 sq. mi.

Vaihinger (fī'ingér), Hans. b. at Nehren, Germany, Sept. 25, 1852; d. at Halle, Germany, Dec. 17, 1933. German philosopher who served (1884 et seq.) as professor at the University of Halle, and founded (1904) the Kantgesellschaft (Kant Society). His main work is Die Philosophie des Als Ob, System der theoretischen, praktischen und religiösen Fiktionen der Menschheit auf Grund eines idealistischen Positivismus (1911), in which he elaborates his "as if" philosophy, which holds that men must act "as if" what they believe is true, because reality can never be truly known. Other works include Goethe als Ideal universeller Bildung (1875), Kommentar zu Kants Kritik der reinen Vernunft (1881-92), and Nietzsche als Philosoph (1902).

Vaikuntha (vi.kún'tä). In later Hindu mythology, Vishnu's heavenly abode, described as situated in the northern ocean, or on the eastern peak of Mount Meru.

Vail (väil), Alfred. b. at Morristown, N.J., Sept. 25, 1807; d. there, Jan. 18, 1859. American pioneer in the development of the telegraph; a cousin of Theodore Newton Vail. He became (1837) associated with Samuel F. B. Morse in the development and promotion of the telegraph, signing an agreement whereby, in return for financial aid, Morse gave him a 25-percent interest in American rights and a 50-percent interest in foreign rights. After the first practical demonstration (Jan. 6, 1838) of the perfected electric telegraph, he was associated with Morse in the public exhibitions (1838) of the instrument at New York, Philadelphia, and Washington. He was Morse's chief aide in the noted test (May 24, 1844) of the Washington-Baltimore experimental telegraph line and was active in telegraph promotion until 1848.

Vail, Charles Henry. b. at Tully, N.Y., April 28, 1866; d. June 15, 1924. American Universalist minister.

Vail, Theodore Newton. b. near Minerva, Ohio, July 16, 1845; d. at Baltimore, April 16, 1920. American telephone pioneer and executive, notable for developing the long-distance system of telephony and for the technical improvement and financial development of the telephone industry. He helped to form (1885) the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and served (1885-89, 1907-19) as its president. In the interim (1894-1907) he developed utilities in Argentina.

Vaillant (vä.yäil), Édouard. b. at Vierzon, Cher, France, Jan. 26, 1840; d. at Paris, Dec. 18, 1915. French political leader, a member of the Paris Commune (1871). A member of the First International, he was elected a member of the Commune, and was therefore condemned to death but escaped to England, where he lived (1871-79) until amnestied. He was a Socialist deputy (1893-1915), and ran for the presidency on several occasions.

Vaillant, Father Joseph. Character in Death Comes for the Archbishop (1927), novel by Willa Cather.

Vaillant, Jean Baptiste Philibert. Comte. b. at Dijon, France, Dec. 6, 1790; d. at Paris, June 4, 1872. Marshal of France. He served as lieutenant and adjutant in the Napoleon war, as chief of battalion in Algeria, and as lieutenant colonel at the siege of Antwerp (1832). He directed, as engineer, the siege and capture of Rome in 1849, and was minister of war (1854-59). He fought at the battle of Solferino in 1859, commanded the army of occupation in Italy (1859-60), and was minister of the emperor's household (1860-70), and for part of the time minister also of the fine arts. He was banished in 1870, but returned to Paris in 1871.

Vaillant-Couturier (vā.vyā.kō.tū.rī.yā), Paul. b. at Paris, Jan. 8, 1892; d. there, Oct. 10, 1937. French political leader and journalist, one of the founders of the French Communist Party. A member of the Socialist Party before World War I, he took an internationalist position during the war, founded, with Henri Barbusse and Raymond Lefebvre, the Association Républicaine des Anciens Combattants, served (1919-37) as a deputy, and edited (1929-37) the Communist newspaper L'Humanité.

Väinämöinen (vī'nä.mē.i.nen). See Wäinämöinen.

Vainlove (vā'n.luv). Character in William Congreve's comedy The Old Bachelor.

Vaishya (vish'yaz). [Also, Vaisyas.] In the Sanskrit designation of castes, the third caste, the folk, ranking below the Brahmans, or priests, and the Kshatriyas, or warriors.

Vaisseau Fantôme (vē.sō fān.tōm), Le. [Eng. trans., "The Phantom Ship."] Opera in two acts by Pierre Dietrich, with a text adapted from Richard Wagner's Der Fliegende Holländer. It was produced at Paris in 1842.

Vajiravudh (vā'jī.rā.vōd'), Maha. See Rama VI.

Vakaranga (vā.kā.rāng.gā). See Karanga.

Vakh (vākh). River in the U.S.S.R., in W Siberia, in the Khanty-Mansi National Okrug of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, which flows W and joins the Ob ab. 400 mi. NW of Tomsk. Length, ab. 560 mi.

Vakhoka (vā.chō'kā). See Khoka.

Vakhtangov (vākh.tāng'gof), Eugene B. b. 1883; d. 1922. Russian actor and stage director. The most brilliant of Stanislavsky's pupils, Vakhtangov was thoroughly grounded in the Moscow Art Theatre system. He founded the Third Studio (1913), now known by his own name, after severing connections with the Moscow Art Theatre because he became dissatisfied with Stanislavsky's insistence upon an entirely subjective acting technique. To Vakhtangov the actor's performance had to be both subjective and objective, creating the image of the character but also conveying a comment upon the character's function in the play. Utterly nonpolitical, the director was interested only in the perfection of theatrical style and in finding a valid individual approach for each production. For this reason, he stylized and "theatricalized" some productions, as in the case of Turandot (1922), which he staged in the Chinese convention, and The Dybbuk, which he staged for the Hebrew-speaking Habima Company.

Vakhtangov Theatre. Famous Russian theater, founded in 1913 as the Third Studio of the Moscow Art Theatre under the direction of E. B. Vakhtangov. The theater produced both new and old plays with emphasis upon the special aesthetic requirements of each production; no production was like another, and each play had a special style. His most notable productions were The Miracle of Saint Anthony (1921) and Turandot (1922). When Vakhtangov died in 1922, the theater took his name, severed all connection with the Moscow Art Theatre, and carried on its founder's principles. Gorki's Yegor Bulachev (1932) was its most famous production after Vakhtangov's death.

Vakoka (vā.kō'kā). See Khoka.

Vakumbi (vā.kōm'bē). See Humbe.

Val. French (vāl) and Italian (vāl) word for "valley": for entries not found below see the specific element of the name.

Val (bāl), Marquis Alfonso de Merry del. See Merry del Val, Marquis Alfonso de.

Valadon (vā.lā.dōn), Suzanne Marie Clementine. b. Sept. 23, 1867; d. at Paris, in April, 1938. French painter and etcher, who started her career as a model for Renoir, Puvis de Chavannes, and Toulouse-Lautrec; mother of Maurice Utrillo. She started to sketch without formal training, and was encouraged by Toulouse-Lautrec. She worked mostly at Montmartre, but also in Corsica and in the Rhone area. She first exhibited in the Salon of 1894, and later became associated with Matisse and Derain. In 1909 she exhibited at the Salon. A list of her works includes Self-Portrait, Portrait of Utrillo, The Tub, Girl with Mirror, Joie de Vivre, The Dressmaker, Bathers, Gardens, Rue Cortot, The Bouquet, The Abandoned Doll, and Still Life.

Valais (vā.lē). [German, Wallis; Italian, Valsesia.] Canton of Switzerland, bounded by the Lake of Geneva, Vaud, and Bern on the N (separated from Bern by the Bernese Alps), Uri, Ticino, and Italy on the E, Italy on the S (separated by the high chain of the Pennine Alps), and France on the W. It comprises the upper valley of the Rhone River and the surrounding mountains. The inhabitants are about two thirds French-speaking and about one third German-speaking. The prevailing religion is Roman Catholic. Valais was incorporated in the Roman Empire in the time of Augustus. In the Middle Ages it was a part of Burgundy, and later was divided among various rulers, including Savoy, and the bishops of Sion. Upper Valais formed a league with the Swiss cantons in 1416, and by 1475 had absorbed most of lower Valais. Valais was made a canton of the Helvetic Republic in 1798, became a separate republic in 1802, was incorporated with France in 1810, and was made a canton in 1815. It was disturbed by civil dissensions, and joined the Sonderbund in 1845. It sends seven representatives to the National Council. Capital, Sion; area, 2,021 sq. mi.; pop. 159,178 (1950).

Valais Alps. Occasional name for the Pennine Alps.

Valangin (vā.lān.zhān'), Duke of. A title of Berthier, Napoleon Alexandre.

Valb-rt (vāl.bēr), G. Pseudonym of Cherbuliez, (Charles) Victor.

Val Cison (vāl chēz.mōn'), Count Cesare Maria De Vecchi di. See De Vecchi di Val Cison, Count Cesare Maria.

Valcken Eylandt (vāl'kēn'īlānt). Old Dutch name of Falkner Island.

Valcour Island (vāl.kōr', vāl'kōr'). Small island in Lake Champlain, ab. 4 mi. SE of Plattsburg, in New York. Off this island, on Oct. 12, 1776, boats under the command of Benedict Arnold were badly defeated by a small British flotilla under Sir Guy Carleton.

Valdagno (vāl.dā'nyō). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Vicenza, situated in the foothills of the Alps, on the Agno River ab. 15 mi. NW of Vicenza; agricultural commune; woolen industry; lignite mining. Pop. of commune, 20,836 (1936); of town, 5,267 (1936).

Valdai Hills (vāl.dī'). Group of moraine hills, in W U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. They extend N and S for ab. 400 mi. between Leningrad and Moscow, and form the watershed between the rivers which flow into the Baltic and the headwaters of the Volga. Peak elevation, ab. 1,138 ft.

Val d'Aosta (vāl dā.ōs'tā'). See Valle d'Aosta.

Val de Bagne (or Bagnes) (vāl dē bā'ny'). See Bagne or Bagnes, Val de.

Valdegamas (vāl.dā.gā'mās; Spanish, bāl), Marquis of. Title of Donoso Cortés, Juan Francisco María de la Salud.

Val-de-Grâce (vāl.dē.grās), Jean Baptiste du. See Cloots or Clootz, Baron de.

Valdemar (vāl.dē.mār). See Waldemar.

Valdepeñas (vāl.dā.pā'nyās; Spanish, bāl). Town in C Spain, in the province of Ciudad Real, ab. 30 mi. SE of Ciudad Real; famous for its red wines. 30,409 (1940).

Valdés (bāl.dās'), Armando Palacio. See Palacio Valdés, Armando.

Valdés (vāl.dās'; Spanish, bāl), Gabriel de la Concepción. [Pseudonym, Plácido.] b. 1809; executed for revolutionary activity, 1844. Cuban poet, now chiefly remembered for his protest in verse against Spanish oppression. Author of the poems Muerte de Gesler, A la fatalidad, Jicotencal, La Flor de la caña, and Plegaria a Dios.

Valdés (vál.dás'; Spanish, bál-), Juan de. b. at Cuenca, Spain, c1500; d. at Naples, 1541. Spanish theologian. He held several views which were at variance with Roman Catholic doctrines, making him an early advocate of some of the ideas of the Reformation; however, he remained a loyal member of the Roman Catholic Church. Author of Diálogo de Mercurio y Caron (c1528), Diálogo de la lengua (1533; a philological treatise), and others.

Valdés (vál.dás'; Spanish, bal-), Juan Meléndez. See Meléndez Valdés, Juan.

Valdese (vál.déz). Town in W North Carolina, in Burke County, near the Blue Ridge Mountains: manufactures of textiles, boxes, and shoes. It was settled (1893) by a group of Waldensians. 2,730 (1950).

Valdes Island (vál.des). Island belonging to British Columbia, Canada, situated in the Strait of Georgia, SW of the city of Vancouver. Length, ab. 9 mi.

Valdez (vál.déz, val.déz'). Town in S Alaska, situated at the head of a fjord of Prince William Sound. There is fur farming, fishing, and gold mining in the area. 554 (1950).

Valdez (vál.déz), Peter. See Waldo, Peter.

Valdieri (vál.dyé.ré). [French, Vaudier.] Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Cuneo, ab. 12 mi. SW of Cuneo: marble quarries and cattle markets; noted also for its thermal springs. Pop. of commune, 2,032 (1936); of town, 938 (1936).

Valdivia (vál.div.i.a; Spanish, bál.dé.byá). Province in C Chile. Capital, Valdivia; area, 7,723 sq. mi.; pop. 214,151 (est. 1950).

Valdivia. City in S central Chile, capital of Valdivia province, situated on the Valdivia River ab. 10 mi. from the sea: shipping center for agricultural produce; flour-milling, sugar-refining, shoe, lumber, and brewing industries; shipyards. Founded in 1552, it was a point of great importance during the wars with the Araucanians, and was destroyed by them in the great uprising of 1599; it was rebuilt in 1644. The city declared for independence in 1810, but fell to the Spaniards; it was finally taken by the patriots under Thomas Cochrane, after a three-day fight from fort to fort, Feb. 2-4, 1820. Pop. 34,496 (est. 1950).

Valdivia, Luis de. b. in Granada, Spain, 1561; d. at Valladolid, Spain, Nov. 5, 1642. Spanish Jesuit, missionary in Chile from 1590 to 1621. He published several works on the Araucanian and other Indian languages, and histories of the Indian wars.

Valdivia, Pedro de. b. near La Serena, Estremadura, Spain, 1498 or 1500; executed near the fort of Tucapel, southern Chile, about Jan. 1, 1554. Spanish soldier, conqueror of Chile. He served in the Italian wars, went to Venezuela (c1534), and in 1535 passed to Peru, where he served with Francisco Pizarro's forces at the battle of Las Salinas, April 26, 1538. After Diego de Almagro's death, Pedro Sanchez de Hoz, an incompetent man, was sent from Spain to complete the conquest of Chile; Pizarro associated Valdivia with him, and Hoz soon became a cipher in the expedition. Leaving Cusco in March, 1540, with 150 Spanish soldiers and a large body of Indians, Valdivia marched by the coast deserts, defeated a large body of natives in the valley of Chile, and on Feb. 12, 1541, founded Santiago. The Indians soon rose against him, and he was closely besieged until the arrival of reinforcements from Peru in December, 1543. Valparaiso was founded in September, 1544, and in 1546 Valdivia pushed into the Araucanian country to the Bio-Bio River. In the period 1547-49 he was in Peru, serving with Pedro de la Gasca to suppress the rebellion of Gonzalo Pizarro; during his absence the country was ruled by Villagra. In 1550-51 the Spaniards continued their conquest of the Araucanian country, passing the Bio-Bio and founding Concepción (1550), Imperial, and Valdivia (1552). Late in 1553 there was a great uprising of the Indians. Valdivia, with 50 horsemen, started from Concepción to relieve Tucapel, which was closely besieged, was attacked and defeated by the Indians, and was captured and put to death shortly after. Authorities do not agree as to the precise date of the battle and of Valdivia's death.

Valdivia River. [Also, Calle-Calle.] River in C Chile, in the province of Valdivia, flowing W to the Pacific Ocean. Length, ab. 100 mi.

Valdobbiadene (vál.dób.byá.dā.nā). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Treviso, situated near the Piave River where it enters the Venetian plain, ab. 22 mi. NW of Treviso: agricultural commune; stone quarries. Pop. of commune, 10,425 (1936); of town, 3,384 (1936).

Val d'Or (vál.dór). Town in W central Quebec, Canada, ab. 283 mi. N of Ottawa: center of a gold-mining area. 8,685 (1951).

Valdosta (vál.dos'ta). City in S Georgia, county seat of Lowndes County. It is the trade center of a cotton-growing district, and has lumber mills, cotton mills, and peanut-shelling plants. 20,046 (1950).

Valée (vál.lā), Sylvain Charles, Comte. b. at Brienne-le-Château, Aube, France, Dec. 17, 1773; d. at Paris, Aug. 16, 1846. Marshal of France. He served in the Napoleonic wars, especially in the Peninsular War, and supported Napoleon during the Hundred Days. He went to Algeria in 1837 in command of the artillery, captured Constantine (October 13), and was governor general of Algeria (1837-40).

Valera (vál.lá'ra). See Rega.

Valleggio sul Mincio (vál.dj'jō söl mēn'chō). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Verona, situated on the Mincio River ab. 14 mi. SW of Verona. It has a notable fortified bridge, crossing the Mincio River to Borghetto, built in 1393 on Roman foundations by Gian Galeazzo Visconti. Here on May 30, 1796, the French under C. J. Kléber defeated the Austrians under J. P. Beaulieu. Pop. of commune, 7,361 (1936); of town, 2,103 (1936).

Valença (vál.lān'sā). City in E Brazil, in the state of Bahia. 11,628 (1950).

Valençay (vál.lān.sā). Village in the department of Indre, France, ab. 46 mi. SE of Tours. In its castle Ferdinand VII of Spain was confined from 1808 to 1814.

Valence (vál.lāns). [Also, Valence-sur-Rhône (-sür-rōn); Latin, Valentia.] City in SE France, capital of the department of Drôme, situated on a height overlooking the Rhone River, S of Lyons. It is a center for the wine trade and has a number of industries. The Cathedral of Saint Apollinaire is a Romanesque building from the 11th and 12th centuries. 39,718 (1946).

Valence, Aymer de. See Aymer de Valence (or de Lusignan).

Valencia or Valentia (valen'shi.a, -sha). Island in the Irish Republic, in Munster province, and County Kerry, situated at the mouth of Dingle Bay, ab. 35 mi. SW of Tralee. The island is separated from the mainland by a very narrow channel. It was the terminus of the earliest submarine cables to Newfoundland. Length, ab. 7 mi.; greatest width, ab. 3 mi.; pop. 1,198 (1936).

Valencia (valen'shi.a, -sha; Spanish, bal'en'thyä). Moorish kingdom in Spain. It was conquered by Aragon (1233-53), and was permanently united with Aragon in 1319. It comprised what are now the provinces of Castellón, Valencia, and Alicante.

Valencia. Province in E Spain, bounded by Teruel and Castellón on the N, the Mediterranean Sea on the E, Alicante on the S, and Albacete and Cuenca on the W. The province is well cultivated, growing rice, wine, citrus fruit, and garden products; the climate is mild. Capital, Valencia; area, 4,239 sq. mi.; pop. 1,364,557 (1950).

Valencia. [Latin, Valentia Edetanorum.] City in E Spain, capital of the province of Valencia, situated on the Guadalquivir River near its mouth on the Mediterranean Sea, ab. 188 mi. SE of Madrid. It has a harbor which exports chiefly the agricultural products of the fertile huerta (plain), such as oranges, raisins, wine, oil, rice, and vegetables. The principal manufactures are silk and colored ties (azulejos), but woolen and esparto fabrics, hats, fans, leather, paper, cigars, glass, and pottery are also produced. The seaside resort of Cabanál (formerly Pueblo Nuevo del Mar) is north of the harbor area. Valencia is the seat of a university, founded in 1500; there is an academy of art, and an art museum containing the works of old Spanish masters and various modern exhibits. The Cathedral La Seo is a building with three naves, erected between 1262 and 1482, with a detached Gothic bell tower; it contains valuable paintings. The Lonja de la Seda (Silk Exchange) dates from the 15th century, the Casa de la Generalidad from the 16th century. 534,866 (1950).

History. According to Livy, the Romans founded the town as a settlement for Lusitanian prisoners of war; it was destroyed by Pompey in 75 B.C. but was speedily rebuilt. Taken by the Visigoths in 413, and by the Moors in 714, it was the capital of an independent Moorish kingdom from 1021; in 1094 it was taken by the Cid, but recovered by the Moors in 1101; it was finally reconquered in 1238 by James I of Aragon. The first Spanish printing press was set up here in 1474. The city was annexed to Castile at the close of the 15th century; in the Peninsular War it was occupied (1812-13) by the French. In the Spanish Civil War it was made the temporary capital of the Loyalists, in November, 1936; it was captured by the Nationalists in 1939.

Valencia (və.lən'ʃi.ə, -ʃə; Spanish, bā.lən'syā). City in N Venezuela, capital of Carabobo state, near Lake Valencia, ab. 86 mi. SW of Caracas; manufactures of leather, tobacco, lumber, and textiles. Pop., with suburbs, 88,674 (1950).

Valencia (və.lən'ʃi.ə, -ʃə; Spanish, bā.lən'thyā), Duke of. Title of Narváez, Ramón María.

Valencia (və.lən'ʃi.ə, -ʃə; Spanish, bā.lən'syā), Guillermino. b. Oct. 29, 1873; d. July 8, 1943. Colombian poet. Author of the poems Anarkos, Leyenda a síloa, and Los Camellos, found in Ritos (1898), Catay (1928), and Sus mejores poemas (1919).

Valencia, Lake. [Also, Tacarigua.] Lake in N Venezuela, W of Caracas, in a broad intermontane basin. Elevation, ab. 1,300 ft.; length, ab. 20 mi.; area, ab. 145 sq. mi.

Valencia de Alcántara (və.lən'ʃi.ə, -ʃə, də.əl.kən'tā.rā; Spanish, bā.lən'thyā də.əl.kān'tā.rā). Commune in W Spain, in the province of Cáceres, situated near the Portuguese border, ab. 45 mi. W of Cáceres; produces cork; antimony and phosphate mines are in the vicinity. 15,415 (1940).

Valenciana (və.lən'ʃi.ə, -ʃə; Spanish, bā.lən'syā'nā). Silver mine near Guanajuato, Mexico. It yielded 14 million dollars in less than five years, toward the end of the 18th century.

Valenciennes (və.lən'syen; Anglicized, vā.lən'si.ən'z). City in N France, in the department of Nord, on the Escaut River, E of Douai. It is the marketing center of an agricultural and coal-mining region, with metal industries and sugar refineries, and also manufactures of soap, woolen goods, salt, potash, gloves, and linen. The ancient Valenciennes lace industry is being revived. The center of the city was wrecked by bombings in World War II. 38,684 (1946).

Valenge (və.leng'gā). See Lenge.

Valens (vā'lenz). fl. 69 A.D. One of the principal generals of Vitellius. He defeated Otho at Bedriacum.

Valens. b. at Cibalee, in Pannonia, c328; killed in the battle of Adrianople, Aug. 9, 378. Roman emperor; younger brother of Valentinian I, by whom he was made emperor of the East in 364. He defeated and put to death his rival Procopius in 366, terminated the troubles with Persia by a truce (c377), and permitted the Goths to settle south of the Danube in 376. The Goths, mistreated by the Roman officials, revolted under Frithigern in 377, overcame the generals of the emperor, who was then in Syria, and totally defeated and slew Valens himself at Adrianople, one of the worst defeats ever suffered by a Roman army.

Valentia (və.lən'ʃi.ə, -ʃə). See under Britannia.

Valentia. A Latin name of Valence.

Valentia Edetanorum (və'de.tā.nō'rum). Latin name of Valencia, Spain.

Valentin (vā'len.tēn), Gabriel Gustav. b. at Breslau, July 8, 1810; d. at Bern, Switzerland, May 24, 1883. German physiologist, professor at Bern from 1836. Author of Lehrbuch der Physiologie des Menschen (1845), Grundriss der Physiologie des Menschen (1846), and others.

Valentine (vā'len.tin), Saint. fl. c270 A.D. Christian martyr of the reign of the emperor Claudius. His festival has been observed on February 14 from before the time of Pope Gregory the Great. The custom of sending valentines and choosing sweethearts on this day had its origin in the medieval European belief that birds wooed and chose their mates about this time. Its association with the saint is accidental, but from this practice Saint Valentine has come to be regarded as the patron saint of lovers.

Valentine. [Latinized, Valentinus.] b. at Rome; d. in September, 827. Pope for 40 days (some sources indicate only a month) in 827.

Valentine. City in N Nebraska, on the Niobrara River, county seat of Cherry County. 2,700 (1950).

Valentine. Light-hearted spendthrift in Beaumont and Fletcher's Wit without Money.

Valentine. One of the pair of chief characters in Shakespeare's Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Valentine. Gentleman attending on the duke in Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

Valentine. The principal character in Congreve's Love for Love. Betterson was famous in this part, with Mrs. Bracegirdle as Angelica.

Valentine. Novel by George Sand, published in 1832; so-called from the name of the heroine.

Valentine. Pseudonym of Weiss, Louise.

Valentine and Orson (vā'sən). Romance of the Charlemagne cycle, which was written during the reign of Charles VIII, and first printed in 1495 at Lyons. Valentine and Orson were twins, born in a forest. Orson was carried off and reared by a bear, and became rough and uncouth. Valentine was taken by his uncle, King Pepin, and grew up a courtier and knight. The point of the story lies in the affinity between twins, in that the two (knight and bear boy) recognize each other in the forest years later.

Valentine Bulmer (bul'mér). See Bulmer, Valentine.

Valentini (vā.lən.tē'nē), Pietro Francesco (or Pier Francesco). d. at Rome, 1654. Italian composer, notably of canons allowing for an immense number of variations. His other work includes stage works, madrigals, and songs.

Valentinian (vā.lən.tin'ian, -tin'yan). Tragedy by John Fletcher, produced before 1618 and printed in 1647.

Valentinian I. [Full Latin name, Flavius Valentinianus.] b. at Cibalee, Pannonia, c321; d. at Bregetio, near what is now Komárom, Hungary, Nov. 17, 375. Roman emperor (364-375). He was a soldier under Julian and Jovian and was proclaimed emperor by the army on Jovian's death. He took as his associate his brother Valens and they divided the empire between them, Valentinian keeping the West (Italy, Gaul, Spain, Britain, Illyricum, Africa). Much of his reign was concerned with wars against the inroads of the barbarians, in Gaul, along the Rhine and Danube, and in Britain. In Britain and Africa the general Theodosius performed valuable services against the Saxons, Picts, and Scots, and the Moors. Valentinian instituted various religious and civil reforms in the empire.

Valentinian II. b. c371; murdered in 392. Roman emperor; son of Valentinian I. He was made associate emperor of the West with his half-brother Gratian in 375, and after Gratian's death (383) sole emperor of the West. Though nominally ruler, he was under the control of his mother Justina. He was delivered from the rivalry of the usurper Maximus by the emperor of the East, Theodosius I (387-388), and was assassinated by his Frankish general Arbogast. Valentinian's reign was marked by a religious struggle between the Orthodox Catholics led by Ambrose of Milan and the Arians championed by Justina; through Theodosius's influence he adopted orthodoxy.

Valentinian III. [Full Latin name, Flavius Placidius Valentinianus.] b. 419; assassinated 455. Roman emperor of the West; son of Constantius and Placidia, daughter of Theodosius I. He was made emperor of the West in 425, but his mother remained regent for some 15 years. During these early years of his reign Africa and Britain were lost to the empire and parts of Gaul and Spain and Sicily and Italy were attacked or lost; the Vandals, Visigoths (under Genseric), and Suevi were the principal gainers at the empire's expense. His famous general Aëtius gained the victory of Châlons-sur-Marne over Attila in 451, but was murdered by Valentinian, from jealousy, in 454. In turn, he was killed by followers of Aëtius.

Valentino (vā.lən.tē'nō), Rudolph. [Professional name of Rodolpho d'Antongualla.] b. at Castellana, Italy, May 6, 1895; d. Aug. 23, 1926. American motion-picture actor. He lived (1913) in the U.S., became a dancer fat, fūte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pīn, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; TH, then; ō, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; and musical comedy actor, and subsequently rose to stardom as one of the most popular of all the screen's leading men. Among the motion pictures in which he appeared were The Four Horsemen, The Conquering Power, Camille, The Sheik, Blood and Sand, Monsieur Beaucaire, and The Sainted Devil.

Valentinois (vā.lān.tē.nwā). Former small county of France, in Dauphiné, in the vicinity of Valence.

Valentinois, Duke of. Title of Borgia, Cesare.

Valentinois, Duchesse de. A title of Diane de Poitiers.

Valentinus (valen.tī'nus), b. probably in Egypt; d. c.160 A.D. One of the chief Gnostic teachers. He was educated probably in Alexandria, went to Rome (c.138), and was an instructor of Origen and Clement of Alexandria. Fragments of his work have survived. Excommunication caused him to retire to Cyprus, where he is believed to have died. The sect he founded, known as the Valentinians, became the best-known of Gnostic groups; their philosophy is based on a trichotomy rather than on the usual Gnostic dichotomy.

Valenza (vā.lēn.'tsā). Town in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Alessandria, situated on the Po River ab. 9 mi. N of Alessandria: agricultural trading center, with some manufactures. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. Pop. of commune, 12,195 (1936); of town, 8,423 (1936).

Vale of Avalon (av'ā.lon). See Avalon.

Vale of Avoca (ā.vō'ka). See under Avoca.

Vale of Cashmere (kash.mir', kash'mir). See Kashmir, Vale of.

Vale of Gargaphia (gār.gā'fi.ā). See Gargaphia, Vale of.

Vale of Glendalough (glēn.dā'loĥ). See Glendalough.

Vale of Keshmir (kash.mir', kash'mir). See Kashmir, Vale of.

Vale of Ovoca (ō.vō'ka). See under Avoca.

Vale of Tempe (tem'pē). See Tempe, Vale of.

Vale of the White Horse. See White Horse, Vale of the.

Vale of York (yōrk). See York, Vale of.

Valera (vā.lā'rā; Spanish, bā-). City in NW Venezuela, in Trujillo state: sugar, cacao, and coffee. Pop., with suburbs, 20,888 (1950).

Valera (va.le'ra), Eamon De. See De Valera, Eamon.

Valera y Alcalá Galiano (vā.lā'rā ē ā.lkā.lā' gā.lyā'nō; Spanish, bā-). Juan. b. at Cádiz, Córdoba, Spain, 1824; d. at Madrid, April 18, 1905. Spanish writer and diplomat. He prepared himself for the practice of law at Granada and Madrid, but his many travels to Naples, Portugal, Brazil, Germany, and France led him into literary and diplomatic pursuits. In 1854 he published his first critical work, Sobre los cuentos de Leopoldo e del romanticismo en España. After that date he devoted himself to journalism and politics, and to furthering the causes of political liberalism and literary romanticism. He was deputy in the Cortes from 1863 and supported recognition of the Italian kingdom. He became assistant secretary of state in 1868, senator for life in 1881, and was ambassador extraordinary at various posts (Lisbon and Washington, 1883; Brussels, 1886-88; Vienna, 1893-95). His literary reputation, based on a wide variety of works, was international in scope. His novels include Pepita Jiménez (1874), El Comendador Mendoza (1877), and Doña Luz (1879).

Valère (vā.lēr). Character in a number of Molière's plays, usually a lover; found in L'Avare, Le Dépit amoureux, L'École des maris, Le Médecin volant, and others.

Valère. The principal character in Susannah Centlivre's play The Gamester.

Valeria (vā.lī'ri.ā). Character in Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

Valeria. Girl with a mania for biological research in Susannah Centlivre's The Basset-Table.

Valeria Augusta (ō.gus'tā). Latin name of Játiva.

Valerian (vā.lī'ri.ān). [Full Latin name, Publius Licinius Valerianus.] b. c.193; d. c.269 A.D. Roman emperor (253-260). He became princeps senatus in 238, and was censor in 251. He was chosen emperor after the death of Gallus and the short reign of Aemilianus. He appointed his son Gallienus as his colleague in 254. The empire was in great disorder during his reign, and was attacked by the Goths, Alamanni, Persians, and others.

After retaking Antioch from Shapur I, he was taken prisoner during a parley by the Persians in 260; he was kept in captivity and was put to death (c.269).

Valerian Vay. See Via Valeria.

Valgrien (vā.lā'ryān), Mont. Hill and fortress W of the Seine, ab. 6 mi. W of the center of Paris. It was a religious retreat in the Middle Ages, and was fortified after 1830. It was an important point of defense in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71. An unsuccessful sortie was made from it by the French on Jan. 19, 1871.

Valerius (vā.lī'ri.us), Marcus. [Surname Corvus.] b. c.371 B.C.; d. c.270 B.C. Roman general, distinguished in the first Samnite War, 343 B.C.

Valerius, Publius. [Surname Publicola.] According to tradition, the colleague of Brutus in the first year (509 B.C.) of the Roman republic. He introduced various liberal measures, and was four times elected consul.

Valerius Antias (an'ti.ās, -shi.ās). fl. in the first part of the 1st century B.C. Roman annalist.

Valerius Flaccus (flāk'us), Gaius. See Flaccus, Gaius Valerius.

Valerius Harpocration (hār.pō.krā'shi.ŋn). See Harpocration, Valerius.

Valerius Maximus (mak'si.mus). fl. in the first part of the 1st century A.D. Roman rhetorician and historian. Of his life nothing is known except that he accompanied Sextus Pompeius to Asia in 27 A.D. He dedicated to Tiberius a collection of anecdotes collected for rhetorical purposes.

Valero (vā.lā'rō), Marquis of. A title of Zúñiga, Baltazar de.

Valéry (vā.lā'rē), Paul Ambroise. b. at Sète, France, Oct. 30, 1871; d. at Paris, Aug. 20, 1945. French poet and philosopher. His books of poetry are La Jeune Parque (1917), Odes (1920), Le Cimetière marin (1920; Eng. trans., The Graveyard by the Sea, 1932), Album de vers anciens (1920), and Charmes (1922). His philosophical papers include Introduction à la méthode de Léonardo da Vinci (1895; Eng. trans., 1929), La Soirée avec M. Teste (1896; Eng. trans., An Evening with Mr. Teste, 1925), Eupulinos (1923), Variété (5 vols., 1924, 1929, 1936, 1938, 1944; Eng. trans., Variety, 1927, and Variety, Second Series, 1938), and Regards sur le monde actuel (1931; Eng. trans., Reflections on the World of Today, 1948). Educated at Montpellier for the law, he moved to Paris in 1891 and joined Stéphane Mallarmé's group, but renounced poetry after some early successes. He married Mallarmé's daughter, and supported his family by work at the war ministry (1897-1900) and at the Havas news agency. In 1917 he returned to poetry with the publication of La Jeune Parque and from that time until his death was a major literary figure.

Val-es-Dunes (vā.lā.dūn). Plain near Caen, in Normandy, where in 1047 William, Duke of Normandy (William the Conqueror), defeated the Norman rebels.

Valese (vā.lā'zā). Italian name of Valais.

Valespir (vā.lēs.pēr). Former small district in France, now included in the department of Pyrénées-Orientales.

Valetta (vā.lēt.ā). See Valletta.

Valette (vā.lēt). Jean Pariset de. See La Valette, Jean Pariset de.

Valguarnera Caropepe (vāl.gwār.nē.rā kā.rō.pā'pā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Enna, situated in the interior of the island ab. 10 mi. SE of Enna: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 14,696 (1936); of town, 13,228 (1936).

Valhalla (vāl.hal.ā). [Also, Walhalla.] In Old Norse mythology, the abode of Odin in Asgard, a warrior's paradise to which only those went who were slain in battle. Its roof was made of polished shields upheld by spears. Troops of heroes issued daily from its 540 doors to delight themselves in battle, and returned to drink and feast and hear heroic tales at evening, when Odin was the host and the Valkyries bore about the dead horns.

Valhorn (fāl'hörn), Joseph Gasser von. See Gasser von Valhorn, Joseph.

Vali (vā'lē). In Old Norse mythology, one of the high gods; a son of Odin. He was born for the purpose of killing Hoder, who killed Balder. He is construed as a personification of light, especially of the light that lingers as spring days grow longer.

Valiant-for-Truth (val'vant.for.trōth'). Character in the second part of John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.

Valin (vā.lān), Martial Henri. b. at Limoges, France, May 14, 1898–. French air force officer, chief of the Free French air forces during World War II. A cavalryman and infantry officer during World War I, he joined (1926) the air force, was a special air adviser (1940–41) to the Brazilian government, and became (September, 1941) commander in chief of the Free French air forces. He became (November, 1946) chief of the French military mission to the United Nations.

Valjean (vāl.jzhān), Jean. Principal character in Victor Hugo's Les Misérables.

Valkenswaard (vāl'kēns.wārt). Town in S Netherlands, in the province of North Brabant, situated near the Belgian border, S of Eindhoven: tobacco and shoe manufactures, 11,116 (1936).

Valkyries (val'kir'iz, val'ki'riz). [Also: Valkyrs; German, Walküren; Old Norse, Valkyrja.] In Old Norse mythology, the company of handmaidens of Odin, usually said to number nine, though the number varies. They were believed to serve at the banquets at Valhalla, but are best known as "the choosers of the slain," being sent forth by Odin to every battle. They ride through the air, and with their spears designate which heroes shall fall, afterward conducting the slain to Valhalla. In the Volsunga Saga Brynhild, the daughter of Odin, is one of them, as also in Wagner's Die Walküre.

Valla (vāl'lā), Lorenzo. [Latinized prename, Laurentius.] b. c.1407; d. at Rome, Aug. 1, 1457. Italian humanist and critic. He lived at Milan and Naples, and was papal secretary and canon of the Church of Saint John Lateran at Rome. He wrote on the Elegances of the Latin Language (1471; De Elegantijs Latinæ Linguae), De Voluptate, against the forged Donation of Constantine (in which he gave scholarly proof of its spuriousness), and others.

Valladolid (val'a.dō'lid; Spanish, bā'lyā.ṭhō.lēṭh'). Province in N Spain, bounded by León on the NW, Palencia on the N, Burgos on the E, Segovia on the SE, Ávila and Salamanca on the S, and Zamora on the W. It is a leading agricultural province, producing grain, wine, and potatoes. Capital, Valladolid; area, 3,155 sq. mi.; pop. 357,202 (1950).

Valladolid. [Medieval Latin, Vallisoleturn.] City in N Spain, capital of the province of Valladolid, ab. 98 mi. N of Madrid. A center of the Spanish grain trade, it has flour mills and sugar refineries, and manufactures of linen, silk, and woolen fabrics, gold and silver work, leather goods, and ironware. It is the seat of a university, founded in 1346, and has an art academy and museum. The house in which Cervantes lived (1603–06) has been preserved by the Hispanic Society of America. The cathedral, begun in 1585 by Juan de Herrera, is in the Renaissance style. Other churches are San Pablo and Santa María la Antigua, of the 13th century, San Benito and San Gregorio of the 14th and 15th centuries. The College of Santa Cruz contains paintings by Rubens. The former royal palace dates from the 16th century. Christopher Columbus died here in 1506. Pop. 130,475 (1950).

Valladolid (bā'lyā.ṭhō.lēṭh'). Former name of Morelia, Mexico.

Vallandigham (va.lan'di.gam), Clement Laird. b. at New Lisbon, Ohio, July 29, 1820; d. at Lebanon, Ohio, June 17, 1871. American politician, a leader of the Copperheads during the Civil War. He was the leader of the states-rights Democrats of Ohio in the years before the Civil War, editing (1847–49) the Dayton Western Empire and speaking (1845 et seq.) as a member of the Ohio lower house. In 1858 he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, where he strongly opposed the Republicans and became in time the chief of the so-called Peace Democrats. His strictures regarding the methods Lincoln was using to further the war effort caused much resentment, especially his criticisms of the administration's policies toward civil liberties, which, he claimed, were destroying the Constitution. He was not reelected to Congress in 1862, and in 1863, after speaking in Ohio, was arrested by the military authorities there for his openly expressed sympathies with the Confederates, tried by a military court, and sentenced to prison. Lincoln commuted the sentence to banishment behind the Confederate lines; from there Vallandigham went to Canada. He was nominated by the Peace Democrats for the governorship of Ohio in 1863, but was defeated. In 1864 he was back in the U.S. and was present at the Democratic National Convention at Chicago, helping to write the party platform; during the campaign he spoke in favor of G. B. McClellan's candidacy. He headed at the same time the Sons of Liberty, and after the war was a vigorous critic of the Reconstruction program.

Vallandigham, Ex parte, 1 Wallace 243 (1864). Opinion of the U.S. Supreme Court in which Justice James Wayne, speaking for the court, refused to review the case of Clement Laird Vallandigham, who had been sentenced to confinement by a military commission at Cincinnati in 1863. The court asserted it lacked jurisdiction over the proceedings of a military commission. The case is notable as one of the leading of its kind during the years of the Civil War, when the Supreme Court did not go officially on record as disapproving of presidential authority to set up military commissions to try civilians in areas where the civil courts were open.

Valle. Italian (vāl'lā) and Spanish (vā'lyā; in Latin America, vā'yā; Spanish, bā'lyā, -yā) word for "valley"; for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Valle (vā'yā; Spanish, bā'-). Department in S Honduras, on the border of El Salvador. Capital, Nacaome; area, 645 sq. mi.; pop. 65,349 (1950).

Valle (vā'lyā; Spanish, bā'-), Marqués del. See Cortés or Cortez, Hernando or Fernando.

Valle, Marqués del. See Cortés, Martín.

Valle (vāl'lā), Pietro della. b. at Rome, April 2, 1586; d. there, April 20, 1652. Italian traveler. He made a journey (1614–26) to Turkey, Egypt, Palestine, Persia, and India. His account of his travels was published in 1650–63 (Eng. trans., 1665).

Vallecás (vā.lyā'kās; Spanish, bā'-). City in C Spain, in the province of Madrid: a southeastern suburb of Madrid. 60,614 (1940).

Valle d'Aosta (vāl'lā dā.ōs'tā). [Also, Val d'Aosta.] Compartimento (region) in NW Italy, bordering on the W on France, on the N on Switzerland, and on the E and S on Piedmont, of which it was recently a part. It includes parts of the Mont Blanc, Monte Rosa, and Matterhorn massifs. Livestock raising and tourist trade are important, and there is some forestry and mining. The majority of the population speaks a French patois. The region, under the house of Savoy from the early Middle Ages (and hence of Italy since the middle of the 19th century), now enjoys special autonomy. Area, 1,260 sq. mi.; pop. 94,790 (1951).

Valle del Cauca (vā'yā del kou'kā; Spanish, bā'-). [Also, Valle.] Department in W Colombia. Capital, Cali; area, 8,085 sq. mi.; pop. 1,007,000 (est. 1950).

Valle de Santiago (vā'yā dā sán.ti.ā'gō; Spanish, bā'yā dā sán.tyā'gō). City in C Mexico, in Guanajuato state: agricultural products and shawls. 12,778 (1940).

Vallee (vā.lā). French word for "valley"; for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Vallee (val'ē), Rudy. [Stage name of Hubert Prior Vallee.] b. at Island Pond, Vt., July 28, 1901–. American bandleader. After playing in a band in England (1924–25), he came back to the U.S. and was leader (1926–27) of the Yale football band. He later toured the country with a college dance band and in 1928 formed the Connecticut Yankees. Vallee's peculiar vocal style, labeled "crooning" by critics who refused to call it singing, was well adapted to the microphone and soon after he began broadcasting in 1928 he became the matinee idol of the day. His two-year appearance on the stage of the New York Paramount Theater followed his first motion picture (1929), The Vagabond Lover. In 1929 Vallee began a series of weekly broadcasts which, partly because of his band and his singing, partly because of the guest artists who appeared, remained one of the most popular on the air for ten years. He appeared on the stage in George White's Scandals and made several motion pictures, developing a light comedy style as he gradually abandoned his vocal efforts. Especially associated with him are his "theme song" My Time Is Your Time, the Maine Stein Song, and the Yale Whiffenpoof Song.

Valleé des Dappes (vā.lā dāp). Small district in the Jura Mountains, canton of Vaud, Switzerland. It was a subject of dispute (1815-62) between France and Switzerland.

Valleé-Poussin (vā.lā.pō.sān), Charles Jean de la b. at Louvain, Belgium, Aug. 14, 1866—, Belgian mathematician, whose best-known work was in the theory of functions and who contributed also to mechanics, potential theory, Lebesgue integration, and the distribution of prime numbers.

Valle-Inclán (vā'lyā.ēng.clān'; Spanish, bā'-), Ramón María. b. at Villanueva, Spain, 1866; d. 1936. Spanish novelist, poet, and short-story writer. He was the author of the four Sonatas, one for each season, de Otoño, de Estío, de Primavera, and de Invierno, which describe the loves of the Marques de Bradomín, a kind of Don Juan; Flor de Santidad, La Lámpara maravillosa, Jardín umbrío, and many other works.

Vallejo (vā.lā'hō, -6). City in W California, in Solano County, on the Napa River at San Pablo Bay, a port ab. 28 mi. NE of San Francisco. The Mare Island navy yard adjoins the city. Vallejo served (1852-53) as the state capital. 26,038 (1950).

Vallejo (vā.ye'hō; Spanish, bā'-), Mariano Guadalupe. b. at Monterey, Calif., July 7, 1808; d. at Sonoma, Calif., Jan. 18, 1890. American pioneer and military leader. He supported the California rebellion (1832) against the Mexican administration, and backed his nephew, Juan Bautista Alvarado, in the revolt (1836) leading to the proclamation of Californian independence. Appointed (1838) commander of the California military forces, he subsequently retired to Sonoma, where he maintained his rule as a partly independent chieftain supported by his troops and by Indian allies. With the termination (1846) of Mexican rule in California, he played an influential role in bringing about the territory's submission to the U.S. He was a member of the constitutional convention (1849), and served in the first state senate.

Vallemaggia (vā.lā.mā.djā). Alpine valley district in the canton of Ticino, Switzerland, N of Lago Maggiore.

Valentine (val'ēn.tin), Benjamin Bennaton. b. at London, Sept. 7, 1843; d. at New York, March 30, 1926. American journalist and playwright. Arriving (1871) at New York, he helped found (1877) the comic magazine Puck, of which he served as managing editor (1877-84), writing the satirical "Lord Fitznoodle" papers. He was managing editor (1886-88) of a newspaper syndicate, and subsequently wrote many plays, among them In Paradise, A Southern Romance, and Fadette.

Valletta (va.le'tā). [Also, Valletta.] Capital and seaport of Malta colony, on the NE coast of the island of Malta, situated on a high peninsula between two harbors. Founded (1566) by Jean Parisot de la Valette, it contains many relics of the occupation of the Hospitalers of Saint John of Jerusalem (Knights of Malta), including several fine churches and the quarters for various national groups of the Knights; some of these were heavily damaged in World War II. It is an important commercial center and a British naval base. Pop. ab. 20,000.

Vallette (vā.let), Alfred. b. at Paris, July 31, 1858; d. there, Sept. 28, 1935. French writer and editor. He was the founder (1892), with his wife Marguerite, of the modern Le Mercure de France. This periodical, not to be confused with the 18th-century Mercure, was instrumental in bringing the symbolist movement in France to public attention. Vallette is credited with having encouraged André Gide and numerous other young writers of his day.

Vallette, Marguerite. [Maiden name, Eymery; pseudonym, Rachilde.] b. at Périgueux, France, 1862—. French novelist and critic. Author of Les Hors-Nature (1897), L'imitation de la mort (1903), and others. Her writing is regarded as less important than her influence in the founding (1892) and editing of Le Mercure de France, which became the chief organ of French symbolism.

Valle y Cavedes (vā'yā ē kā.vuā'thās; Spanish, bā'-), Juan del. b. at Porcuna, Spain, 1652; d. 1695. Peruvian satirical poet. Author of Diente de Parnaso (published posthumously) and Poestas diversas.

Valley City (val'i). [Former name, Worthington.] City in SE North Dakota, county seat of Barnes County, on the Sheyenne River; flour milling and dairying center. 6,851 (1950).

Valleyfield (val'i.fēld). [Full name, Salaberry de Valleyfield.] Industrial city in S Quebec, Canada, situated on the S bank of the St. Lawrence River at the E end of Lake St. Francis, near the W entrance of the Beauharnois Canal. There are important chemical industries in the town and considerable research was carried on here during World War II. 22,414 (1951).

Valley Forge (val'i.förj). Village in Chester County, Pa., on the Schuylkill River, near Norristown. A state park nearby marks the scene of the encampment (December, 1777-June, 1778) of the Continental Army under George Washington. The bitter cold of that winter, the lack of food and adequate clothing, and the consequent sickness of the troops mark the low point of colonial fortunes during the Revolutionary War. Desertions grew as morale fell and it seemed for a time that the hopes of the patriots were ended, but beginning in February the officers, notably Baron Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben, who began a series of military drills to restore discipline, brought the army back into shape for the campaigns of 1778.

Valley Forge. Verse play by Maxwell Anderson, produced and published in 1934. The plot concerns the difficulties faced by Washington in the winter of 1777-78.

Valley Junction. Former name of West Des Moines, Iowa.

Valley of Decision, The. Historical novel by Edith Wharton, published in 1902.

Valley of Humiliation. Scene of the contest between Christian and Apollyon, in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.

Valley of Mexico (mek'si.kō). See Mexico, Valley of.

Valley of Rephaim (ref'ā.im, rē.fā'im). See Rephaim, Valley of.

Valley of the Moon, The. Novel by Jack London, published in 1913.

Valley of the Shadow of Death. Valley traversed by Christian in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress.

Valley Park. City in E Missouri, on the Meramec River, in St. Louis County; a southwestern suburb of St. Louis. 2,956 (1950).

Valley Stream. Village in SE New York, in Nassau County; residential suburb of New York City. 26,854 (1950).

Vallière (vā.lyer), Françoise Louise de La Baume Le Blanc, Duchesse de La. See La Vallière, Françoise Louise de La Baume Le Blanc, Duchesse de.

Vallis Amsancti (val'is am.sangkt'i) or Amsancti (amp.sangkt'i). See Amsancti.

Vallisletum (val'is.let'um). Medieval Latin name of Valladolid, Spain.

Vallo della Lucania (vāl'ō del'lä lö.kā'nyā). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Salerno, SE of Salerno; agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 10,722 (1936); of town, 2,867 (1936).

Vallombrosa (val.ōm.brō'sā, -za; Italian, val.lōm.brō'zā). Benedictine abbey in a valley of the same name, E of Florence, Italy. It was founded c1038 by Saint John Gualbert, and the present buildings were erected in 1637.

Vallon de Soutz (vā.lōn de sōltz). See Ballon de Guebwiller.

Valls (vāls). Town in NE Spain, in the province of Tarragona, ab. 10 mi. N of Tarragona; textile and leather manufactures; distilleries. It is a health resort, with thermal springs. Medieval walls and towers are preserved. The partly ruined Cistercian Convent of Santos Creus, founded in 1157, is in the vicinity. The French defeated the Spaniards here in 1809. Pop. 10,866 (1940).

Valmer (val.mer), Jean Binet de. See Binet-Valmer, Jean.

Valmiki (vāl.mē'kō). Legendary author of the Ramayana. He is represented as taking part in some of the scenes, as, for example, receiving the banished Sita in his hermitage, and rearing her twin sons.

Valmy (val mi; French, vāl.mē). Village in NE France, in the department of Marne, ab. 36 mi. E of Reims. Here on Sept. 20, 1792, the French revolutionary army, under François Christophe Kellermann and Dumouriez, repulsed the Prussians under the Duke of Brunswick. The German author Goethe, who witnessed the battle, considered it a turning point in modern history. The battle, actually only an artillery exchange in the fog, was important psychologically; the Prussians had retreated at the threat of resistance, and the French republican armies had caused the withdrawal. 383 (1946).

Valmy, Duc de. Title of Kellermann, François Christophe.

Valmy, Duc de. Title of Kellermann, François Étienne.

Valnay (válnā), Raoul. See Hervé, Aimé Marie Édouard.

Valognes (vālōny'). Town in NW France, in the department of Manche, ab. 11 mi. SE of Cherbourg, in a dairying region. An old town, it was largely destroyed during the Normandy invasion in the summer of 1944. 4,357 (1946).

Valois (vāl'wā; French, vāl.wā). For French noblemen of this name, see also under Alençon.

Valois. Old territory of France which formed part of the government of Ile-de-France. It lay NE of Paris, and is comprised in the modern departments of Oise and Aisne. The chief town was Crespy. It was a countship in the Middle Ages, was united to the crown by Philip II in 1215, was given by Philip III to his younger son Charles (ancestor of the Valois house of French kings) in 1285, and was reunited to the crown in 1515.

Valois, Charles de. Original name of Angoulême, Duc d'.

Valois, Georges. [Original name, Alfred Georges Gressent.] b. at Paris, Oct. 7, 1878—. French writer and politician. Director (1919 et seq.) of the Revue Universelle, he withdrew (1925) from the Action Française to form his own right-wing Ligue des Chemises Bleues ("Blue-Shirts' League"). Among his works are L'Homme qui vient (1907), L'Economie nouvelle (1919), L'Homme contre l'esprit (1928), Le Nouvel Âge de l'humanité (1929), and Guerre ou révolution? (1931).

Valois, House of. French dynasty, a branch of the Capetian family, that reigned (1328-1589) as successor to the Capetians. Philip VI was the first Valois king; Charles VIII (d. 1498) the last of the direct line. Louis XII (1498-1515) represents the House of Valois-Orléans, and his successors, to Henry III, the House of Valois-Angoulême. Henry IV, who succeeded Henry III in 1589, was the first of the Bourbon kings.

Valois, Isabella of. See Elizabeth of Valois.

Valparaíso (val.pa.rī'zō, -rā'-; Spanish, bāl'pā.rā.ē'sō). Province in C Chile. Capital, Valparaíso; area, 1,860 sq. mi.; pop. 528,326 (est. 1950).

Valparaíso. Principal seaport in Chile, second largest city in the country and commercially the most important city on the Pacific coast of South America; capital of Valparaíso province, in the C part of the country; manufactures include textiles, leather, chemicals, sugar, and foundry products. It is the seat of a naval academy and a university. It consists of the old (lower) town, or Puerto, and the new (upper) town. Founded in 1536, it was taken by Sir Francis Drake in 1578, by Sir Richard Hawkins in 1594, and by Dutch pirates in 1600. It has often been devastated by earthquakes, most notably that of 1906, from which year the modernization of the city dates. 209,945 (est. 1950).

Valparaíso (val.pa.rā'zō). City in NW Indiana, county seat of Porter County, ab. 42 mi. SE of Chicago; manufactures of magnets, paints and varnishes, bearings, and castings. 12,028 (1950).

Valparaiso (val.pa.rī'zō, -rā'-; Spanish, bāl'pā.rā.ē'sō), Battle of. [Also called the Battle of Placillas.] Decisive battle of the Chilean civil war of 1891, fought on August 28. The congressional army (ab. 12,000) attacked Valparaíso, which was defended by ab. 9,000 Balmacedists under Generals Barboza and Alzoreca, taking the city after a bloody engagement of three hours. The congressionalists met with no further opposition. It is also called the Battle of Placillas from the place where the heaviest fighting began.

Valréas (vāl.rā.ā). Town in SE France, in the department of Vaucluse, ab. 32 mi. N of Avignon. It has commerce in olive oil and other agricultural products of the region; paperware is manufactured. 5,169 (1946).

Vals (vāls). [Full name, Vals-les-Bains (-lā.bān).] Town in S France, in the department of Ardèche, situated in the gorge of a tributary of the Ardèche River, ab. 20 mi. SW of Privas. It is a health resort, with mineral springs. Vineyards and mulberry plantations are in the vicinity. 3,691 (1946).

Valsalva (vālsāl'vā), Antonio Maria. b. at Imola, Italy, Feb. 15, 1666; d. at Bologna, Italy, Feb. 2, 1723. Italian anatomist, noted for his researches on the ear.

Valtellina (vāl.tel.lē'nā). [Also: Valtelline (vāl.tel.lē'nā), Val Tellina (vāl.tel.lē'nā).] Region in the province of Sondrio, Italy. It comprises, in a narrow sense, the valley of the upper Adda; in an extended sense, also the district of Bormio (sometimes also Poschiavo). It belonged in the Middle Ages to Lombardy and to Milan, and came in 1512 under the rule of Graubünden, Switzerland. It passed to the Cisalpine Republic in 1797, to the kingdom of Italy in 1805, to Austria 1814-15, and to the kingdom of Sardinia in 1859.

Valtournanche (vāltōr.nānsh). Alpine valley in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Valle d'Aosta, SW of the Monte Rosa group.

Vamana (vā'mā.nā). Fifth avatar or incarnation of Vishnu. This was the dwarf incarnation which Vishnu assumed in order to rescue the three worlds from the demon Bali. The dwarf presented himself before the demon and asked as much land as he could step over in three paces. His form expanding, he strode in two steps over heaven and earth, but in compassion left the lower world to Bali.

Vamanapurana (vā.mā.nā.pō.rā'nā). Purana of ab. 7,000 stanzas, containing, among other things, an account of the Vamana or dwarf incarnation of Vishnu.

Vámbéry (vām'bā.rē), Ármin. [Original name, Hermann Bamberger.] b. on the island of Shütt, in the Danube, Hungary, March 19, 1832; d. at Budapest, Sept. 15, 1913. Hungarian traveler, Orientalist, and historian. He served as professor at Budapest until 1905. He lived many years at Constantinople, and visited (1863-64) Persia, Khiva, Bukhara, Samarkand, Herat, and other parts of central Asia. Among his works are Travels in Central Asia (1865), Wanderings and Adventures in Persia (1867), Sketches of Central Asia (1868), History of Bokhara (1873), Central Asia and the Anglo-Russian Boundary Question, Islam in the 19th Century (1875), Manners in Oriental Countries (1876), Primitive Civilization of the Turko-Tatar People (1879), Origin of the Magyars (1882), The Turkish People (1885), The Future Contest for India (1886), Western Culture in Eastern Lands (1906), and various linguistic works, including a German-Turkish Dictionary and a Dictionary of the Turko-Tatar Languages (1878).

Vamire (vā.mē'rā). See Mari.

Vampyr (fam'pēr). Der. [Eng. trans., "The Vampire."] Opera in four acts by Heinrich Marschner, with a libretto by C. G. Häser, first performed at Leipzig on March 28, 1828.

Van (van, vān). See Ararat, in Armenia.

Van, Lake. [Ancient name, Thospitis.] Salt lake in E Turkey. It has no outlet. Elevation, ab. 5,400 ft.; length, 75 mi.; area, ab. 1,430 sq. mi.

Van Aarsen (vān ār'sēn), Francis. See Aarsens, Frans van.

Van Amringe (van am'rīn'), John Howard. b. at Philadelphia, April 3, 1835; d. at Morristown, N.J., Sept. 10, 1915. American teacher and educator. He taught (1860-1910) mathematics at Columbia and served (1894-1910) as dean of Columbia College. He compiled An Historical Sketch of Columbia College (1876).

Vanand (vā.nānd'). Armenian name of Kars.

Van Bibber and Others (van bib'ēr). Stories by Richard Harding Davis, published in 1892.

Vanbrugh (van'brū), Dame Irene. b. at Heavitree, Exeter, Devonshire, England, Dec. 2, 1872; d. at London, Nov. 30, 1949. English actress; wife of Dion Boucicault (1859-1929), son of the dramatist, whom she married in 1901.

Vanbrugh (van'brū', van'brū), Sir John. b. 1664; d. at London, March 23, 1726. English dramatist and architect. He studied the arts in France and spent some time (1690-92) in French prisons as an English spy. After 1697 he joined William Congreve in the management of a fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, her; pin, pine; not, nôte, nôve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; zh, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; theater which was not successful; the Haymarket theater which he built (1705) was architecturally imposing but acoustically poor. He was comptroller of the board of works (1702-12, 1715) and from 1704 to his death was Clarenceux king of arms, chief of the College of Heralds for South England (from 1715 to 1718 he acted as Garter king of arms), but his ridicule of the heraldic procedures in Aesop (1697) caused him to be disliked by the heralds. He built Castle Howard in Yorkshire (1701-14), a leading example of the Palladian style of architecture; Blenheim Palace in Oxfordshire (1705 et seq.), a sprawling mansion built as a tribute to the Duke of Marlborough (and completed without Vanbrugh's aid by the Duchess of Marlborough, who disliked him); and several other country houses. Vanbrugh wrote The Relapse (1697), a sequel to Colley Cibber's Love's Last Shift; Aesop (1697), an adaptation of Edmond Boursault's French play; The Provok'd Wife (1697; originally written 1690-92), a play giving rise to Jeremy Collier's allegation that all Vanbrugh's heroes were libertines and beginning a controversy in which Vanbrugh did not hold his own; The False Friend (1702), The Confeeder (1705), and other adaptations from the French; A Journey to London (unfinished, but completed by Cibber as The Provok'd Husband, 1728), and others.

Van Brunt (van brunt'), Henry. b. at Boston, Sept. 5, 1832; d. in 1903. American architect. He was graduated from Harvard University in 1854, and studied under Richard Morris Hunt at New York. He served in the Union navy during the early Civil War, and in 1863 entered the firm of Ware and Van Brunt. In 1881 he formed a new partnership, with F. M. Howe, and they erected the Mercantile Building at Kansas City, a series of stations along the Union Pacific Railroad, and other buildings in the West. He published a translation of Viollet-le-Duc's Entretiens (1875), a series of articles in The Century Magazine on the architecture of the World's Columbian Exposition (1893), and Greek Lines (1894). He was president of the American Institute of Architects in 1899.

Van Buren (van bū'ren). City in W Arkansas, county seat of Crawford County, 6,413 (1950).

Van Buren. Town (in Maine the equivalent of township in many other states) and unincorporated village in N.E. Maine, in Aroostook County, near the border of New Brunswick, Canada; lumber center. Pop. of town, 5,094 (1950); of village, 3,732 (1950).

Van Buren, John. b. at Hudson, N.Y., Feb. 10, 1810; d. at sea, Oct. 13, 1866. American lawyer; son of Martin Van Buren, and known as "Prince John," from his figure and manners. He was attorney general of New York (1845-46).

Van Buren, Martin. b. at Kinderhook, N.Y., Dec. 5, 1782; d. there, July 24, 1862. Eighth President of the United States (1837-41). Reared on a farm, he studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1803, and having been even as a boy an ardent exponent of Republican Party doctrine (the party of Jefferson, later to be known as the Democratic Party), he entered politics, was elected surrogate of Columbia County in 1808, and in 1812 a member of the state senate, where he sat through 1820. In 1812 he also aspired to the office of attorney general of the state, but lost out to Thomas Addis Emmet, who was backed by DeWitt Clinton. In 1815 Van Buren did become attorney general, but in 1819 Clinton, then governor, removed him. Van Buren's penchant for playing politics is witnessed by the fact that in 1820 he secretly supported Rufus King for reelection to the U.S. Senate. King was an arch-Federalist but he was also the arch-enemy of Thomas Addis Emmet. Van Buren was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1820, serving through 1828. As a member of the group known as the Albany Regency, which controlled New York state politics, he was slow to warm up to the claims of Andrew Jackson to Democratic Party leadership, but after the defeat of William H. Crawford, whom he backed for the presidency, in 1824, he became so ardent a Jacksonian that, although he was elected governor of New York in 1828, he resigned in 1829 to accept President Jackson's appointment as U.S. secretary of state. He seems to have supported Jackson with complete fidelity, and he had the latter's unlimited confidence. As secretary of state he concluded treaties settling disputes with Great Britain and France, and negotiated an agreement with Turkey giving American ships access to the Black Sea. Van Buren, whose political adroitness by this time was winning him such nicknames as the "Flying Dutchman" and the "Little Red Fox of Kinderhook," seemed to be aloof from the mounting tension between President Jackson and Vice-President John C. Calhoun, but some historians have intimated that he helped foment it. By resigning the portfolio of state in 1831 he brought about the resignation of the entire cabinet, which enabled Jackson to replace Calhoun men with his own adherents. Nominated by Jackson as minister to Great Britain, he failed of confirmation when Calhoun broke a tie by voting against him. The following year, as Jackson's running mate, he was elected vice-president, in 1836, with Jackson's backing, he was the Democratic nominee for president, and was an easy victor. A financial panic in 1837 quickly confronted his administration with problems which, as a staunch Jacksonian opponent of any such institution as the Bank of the United States, he proposed to meet by setting up an independent treasury system. This was finally accomplished in 1840, but in that year Van Buren, a candidate for reelection, was defeated by William Henry Harrison. In 1844 he was the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination, but his stand against the annexation of Texas, because he believed it would lead to war as well as strengthen the power of the slave states, cost him the nomination. In 1848 he and Samuel J. Tilden led the "Barnburner" faction out of the Democratic Party and helped launch the Free-Soil Party, whose unsuccessful candidate Van Buren became. Successively disappointed by Democratic presidents Franklin Pierce and James Buchanan, Van Buren at first recoiled from Abraham Lincoln, the presidential candidate of the new Republican Party, but later rallied to his support and reposed great confidence in him.

Vance (vâns), Ethel. See Stone, Grace.

Vance, Louis Joseph. b. at Washington, D.C., Sept. 19, 1879; d. Dec. 16, 1933. American novelist. Author of Terence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer (1905), The Brass Bowl (1907), The Fortune Hunter (1910), The Lone Wolf (1914), Linda Lee, Inc. (1922), They Call It Love (1927), The Woman in the Shadow (1930), Speaking of Women (1930), The Trembling Flame (1931), and The Lone Wolf's Son (1931).

Vance, Zebulon Baird. b. in Buncombe County, N.C., May 13, 1830; d. at Asheville, N.C., April 14, 1894. American politician. He was a member of Congress from North Carolina (1858-61), was a Confederate colonel in the Civil War, and was governor of North Carolina (1862-65). He was elected U.S. senator in 1870, but was not seated, was once more governor (1877-79) of North Carolina, and served as U.S. senator from North Carolina (1879-94).

Van Cortlaer (vân kôr'lâr), Arendt. See Van Curler, Arent.

Van Cortlandt (van kôr'tlant, -land; Dutch, vâk kôr'tlant), Olof (or Oliver) Stevens (or Stevenszen). b. near Utrecht, Netherlands, 1600; d. at New York, April 4, 1684. Dutch colonist and magistrate at New Amsterdam (now New York).

Van Cortlandt, Philip. b. at New York, Aug. 21, 1749; d. near Croton, N.Y., Nov. 5, 1831. American soldier and legislator. A colonel of New York troops during the Revolutionary War, he saw action at Yorktown, was a delegate (1788) to the New York state convention for ratification of the federal Constitution, was a member (1788, 1790) of the state assembly and served (1791-93) in the state senate, and was a member (1793-1809) of the House of Representatives.

Van Cortlandt, Pierre. b. at Cortlandt Manor, N.Y., Jan. 10, 1721; d. at New York, May 1, 1814. American magistrate, first lieutenant governor of the state of New York; great-grandson of Olof Van Cortlandt.

Van Cortlandt, Stephanus. b. at New Amsterdam (afterward New York), May 7, 1643; d. at New York, Nov. 25, 1700. Colonial magistrate in New York; son of Olof Stevens Van Cortlandt. He is said to have filled at one time or another every office of prominence in the province of New York, except the governorship, was three times (1677, 1686, 1687) mayor of New York, and was a justice of the New York supreme court (1691 et seq.) and chief justice (1700); in 1697 his estate was made the lordship and manor of Cortlandt by patent of William III.

Vancouver (van.kō'vēr). City in British Columbia, Canada, major Pacific port and one of the major industrial cities of Canada, situated on the S side of Burrard Inlet, opposite Nanaimo. It is the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway and of several steamship lines, and one of the two western termini of the Canadian National Railway. The city possesses an excellent harbor and is one of the most beautiful cities in Canada. Pop. of city, 275,353 (1941), 344,833 (1951); including suburbs, 530,728 (1951).

Vancouver. [Former name, Vancouver City.] City in SW Washington, county seat of Clark County, on the Columbia River ab. 9 mi. N of Portland, Ore.: lumber and grain shipping center; manufactures of flax and wool products. It was laid out in 1848. Pop. 41,664 (1950).

Vancouver, George. b. c1758; d. near London, May 10, 1798. British navigator. He served under Captain James Cook in his second and third voyages, and commanded an expedition to the Pacific (1791-95), on which he explored the Strait of Juan de Fuca, the Gulf of Georgia, and the shores of Vancouver Island, which he circumnavigated. He left a narrative of his voyage which was published by his brother under the title Voyage of Discovery to the North Pacific Ocean and Round the World (3 vols. and atlas, 1798).

Vancouver Island. Island belonging to British Columbia, Canada, situated W of the mainland of that province and NW of the state of Washington, and separated from them by Queen Charlotte Sound, Johnstone Strait, the Gulf of Georgia, and the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, is situated on the S end of the island. Vancouver Island was discovered in 1774 by a Spanish expedition, and was explored by James Cook in 1778, and by George Vancouver in 1792. It was settled by the Hudson's Bay Company in 1843, and from 1849 till 1866 it was a separate British colony known as Vancouver Island Colony. In the year 1866 it was united with the mainland area as a part of British Columbia. Length, 285 mi.; width, 40-80 mi.; area, 12,408 sq. mi.; pop., with adjacent islands, 129,130 (1951).

Vancura (vān.chō.rā), Vladislav. b. 1892; executed June 1, 1942. Czech novelist. Among his works are Pekář Jan Marhoul (The Baker John Marhoul, 1924), Pole Orná a Válečná (Fields and Battlefields, 1925), Poslední Soud (The Last Judgment, 1929), and Markéta Lazarová (1931). He was executed by the Nazis as part of their reprisal for the killing of Reinhard Heydrich, German "protector" of Czechoslovakia.

Van Curler (van.kēr'lər), Arent. [Also, Arendt Van Corlaer.] b. at Nijkerk, Netherlands, 1620; drowned in Lake Champlain, N.Y., in July, 1667. Dutch colonist in America. Arriving (1638) in America, he served as a New Netherland official. In 1661 he acquired the Indian tract of Schonow, along the Mohawk River, the site of present-day Schenectady, N.Y., settling there in 1662. He died by drowning when he set out on a mission to Canada. His sympathetic policy won him the friendship of the Indian tribes in the region.

Vandal (vān.dāl), Albert. b. at Paris, 1853; d. 1910. French historian. Author of Napoléon et Alexandre I^{er} (3 vols., 1894-97) and L'Avènement de Bonaparte (2 vols., 1902).

Vandalia (van.dā'l.i.ə). City in S Illinois, county seat of Fayette County, on the Kaskaskia River ab. 65 mi. SE of Springfield; formerly (1820-39) the state capital, 5,471 (1950).

Vandalia. City in N Missouri, in Audrain County, in an agricultural community; manufactures of bricks and other clay products. 2,624 (1950).

Vandals (van.dalz). Ancient Germanic tribe which first migrated from the Baltic region into Hungary as early as 170 A.D. In the first half of the 5th century they ravaged Gaul, Spain, and N Africa. They took Carthage (c435) and in 455 they sacked Rome itself, with great damage to the accumulated treasures of art and literature (whence the term "vandalism"). The Vandals founded a kingdom in Africa, with Carthage as its capital, which took to also the great islands of the W Mediterranean, including Sicily. In 533 the Romans captured Carthage, and the Vandals, as an ethnic unit, vanished from history.

Vandamme (vān.dām), Dominique René. [Title, Comte d'Unebourg.] b. at Cassel, Nord, France, Nov. 5, 1770; d. there, July 15, 1830. French general. He served in the Army of the North in 1793, fought in Germany (1795-97), obtained command of the 16th military division in 1803, fought at Austerlitz in 1805, and was defeated and taken prisoner at the battle of Kulm (Aug. 30, 1813). He was made a peer during the Hundred Days and placed in command of the 3rd army corps, and distinguished himself at Wavre, in the battle of Waterloo, June 18, 1815.

Vandau (vān.dou'). See Ndau.

Vandegrift (van'de.grift), Alexander Archer. b. at Charlottesville, Va., March 13, 1887—. American marine-corps officer. Educated at the University of Virginia and the marine-corps officer-training schools, he was commissioned 2nd lieutenant in 1909, served in Nicaragua, Mexico, Haiti, Cuba, and China, and was appointed brigadier general (1940) and major general (1942). He was commander of the 1st division of marines on Guadalcanal (August-December, 1942) and the 1st marine amphibious corps in the Bougainville landing (November, 1943). Commandant (January, 1944 et seq.) of the U.S. Marine Corps, he was the first marine-corps officer appointed to full general (1945) while on active duty.

Vandegrift, Margaret. Pseudonym of Janvier, Margaret Thomson.

Vandemark's Folly (van'de.mārks). Novel by Herbert Quick, published in 1922. It is the first volume in a trilogy containing also The Hawkeye (1923) and The Invisible Woman (1924).

Vandenberg (van'den.bērg), Arthur Hendrick. b. at Grand Rapids, Mich., March 22, 1884; d. there, April 18, 1951. American political leader. A copy boy on the Grand Rapids Herald, he advanced to reportorial and editorial work, meanwhile writing stories, songs, and verse. After more than 100 rejections, he finally began to sell his literary wares to some of the country's leading magazines. After a year of editorial work at New York, he returned to his home town and became a city hall reporter, attracting the interest of U.S. Senator William Alden Smith, who presently bought the Grand Rapids Herald and made his young protégé editor. Vandenberg rose rapidly in Republican Party councils, and in 1928, on the death of Senator Woodbridge Nathan Ferris, he was appointed to the vacancy, and later that year was elected for a full term; he was reelected in 1934, 1940, and 1946. By 1937 he was looked upon as the Republican Party leader in the Senate, and he was among the aspirants to the Republican nomination to the presidency of the U.S. in 1940, 1944, and 1948. In 1939 he opposed revision of the national neutrality law in a direction which it was thought would open the way for American intervention in European affairs, but in 1943 he voted for extension of reciprocal trade treaties, in 1945 supported the Bretton Woods agreement for the establishment of an international bank and monetary fund, and in fact in that year renounced "isolationism" and became a foremost supporter of bipartisanship in respect to foreign affairs. By appointment of President Roosevelt he was one of the U.S. representatives at the San Francisco conference which established the United Nations, and he was instrumental in having inserted in the United Nations Charter a provision permitting regional alliances for defense. Thereafter he was a U.S. delegate to several sessions of the UN. His diaries, subsequently published, reveal that as early as the final months of World War II he favored a "firm" policy toward the U.S.S.R., and early in 1947 he made one of the first speeches opening up a new policy toward that country. He was an early critic of the Yalta and Potsdam agreements. In 1947 he supported the "Truman Doctrine" of intervention in Greece and Turkey. During a period (1947-48) of Republican control of the Senate, Vandenberg as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee was a keystone of the bipartisan policy, and in 1948 was very influential in bringing about ratification of the European Recovery Program (or Marshall Plan). In addition to his Diaries, Senator Vandenberg was the author of three books about Alex-fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, nê, hêr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pull; th, then; d, d o r j; s, s o r sh; t, t o r ch; ander Hamilton, for whom his admiration was unbounded: Alexander Hamilton, the Greatest American (1921), If Hamilton Were Here Today (1923), and The Trail of a Tradition (1925).

Vandenberg, Hoyt Sanford. b. at Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 24, 1899—d. American soldier, specialist in aerial warfare; nephew of Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg (1884-1951). Graduating from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1923, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army Air Service (later known as the U.S. Army Air Corps, and now simply as the U.S. Air Force). Assigned successively to various airfields, he studied and taught that branch of warfare as he rose in rank; and by 1941, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt laid plans for a vast expansion of the air arm, Hoyt Vandenberg was one of those whose knowledge was called upon to formulate the necessary plans. After the U.S. became involved in World War II, he was assigned to duty in Great Britain and in North Africa, and in February, 1943, was named chief of staff of the strategic air force in that theater of war. In August, 1943, he was recalled to Washington to serve as a deputy chief of the air staff, but some months later he was made deputy commander in chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Forces, attached to General Eisenhower's headquarters at London. He was attached to President Roosevelt's military staff at the Quebec, Cairo, and Tehran conferences, and headed an air mission to the U.S.S.R. He is credited with having had much to do with persuading the Russian authorities to grant air bases during World War II to the Western Allies. As deputy commander and later commander of the Ninth U.S. Air Force, he had a large part in softening up German fortifications along the English Channel, in supplying fighter escorts to bombing missions against German strategic centers, and in disrupting German transport during the Battle of the Bulge, in January, 1945. In February, 1946, he was appointed assistant chief of staff of the intelligence division of the War Department, and in June of the same year became director of the Central Intelligence Office. Following the reorganization of the armed services, in April, 1948, he became chief of staff of the U.S. Air Force; he was succeeded (1953) by Nathan F. Twining.

van den Bosch (vân den bôsh'), Count Jan. See Bosch, Count Jan van den.

Van Depoele (van' de pôl), Charles Joseph. b. at Lichtervelde, Belgium, April 27, 1846; d. at Lynn, Mass., March 18, 1892. American inventor, noted for his scientific achievement in the fields of electric lighting and traction. Arriving (1869) in the U.S., he settled at Detroit, where he successfully demonstrated (1874) electric traction employing underground and overhead conductors and exhibited (1879) improved arc lights. His electric traction systems were adopted (1885 et seq.) by cities in the U.S. and Canada. Selling (1888) his electric railway patents to the Thomson-Houston Electric Company at Lynn, Mass., he became an electrician for that firm. Among his electrical inventions and improvements were a generator (patented 1880), a carbon contact (patented 1888), an alternating-current electric reciprocating engine (patented 1889), a multiple-current pulsating generator (patented 1890), a telpher system (patented 1890), a multiple rock-drill (patented 1891), a coal-mining machine (patented 1891), and a gearless electric locomotive (patented 1894).

Vanderbilt (van'dérbilt), Alfred Gwynne. b. at New York, Oct. 20, 1877; d. May 7, 1915. American sports enthusiast; son of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1843-99) and grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1794-1877). A noted horseman and exhibitor at horse shows, he perished in the sinking of the Lusitania.

Vanderbilt, Cornelius. [Called "Commodore" Vanderbilt.] b. on Staten Island, N.Y., May 27, 1794; d. at New York, Jan. 4, 1877. American financier and leading transportation figure of his era. He began his business career as a boatman, running a ferry between Staten Island and New York. He became a steamboat captain under Thomas Gibbons, the two opposing the Fulton-Livingston monopoly later overthrown in the case of Gibbons v. Ogden. He subsequently became owner and manager of steamboat lines on the Hudson, Long Island Sound, and various coastal routes. In the gold rush to California, he established a transit route through Nicaragua, with steamship connections on both oceans. He later operated steamships on the Panama route, and between New York and western Europe.

Development of Railroad Interests. In the 1860's he turned his attention to railroads, becoming president of the New York and Harlem Railroad, in the stock of which he carried out two successful corners on the New York Stock Exchange. He acquired control of the Hudson River and the New York Central railroads, which he consolidated. He later extended his control to the Lake Shore, the Michigan Central, and the Canada Southern lines. As a railroad manager, he was noted for the Grand Central Depot, the quadrupling of the tracks of the New York Central, and for his stock watering. In both water and rail transportation he was known as a ruthless competitor, but as a constructive figure he stands far higher than many of his rivals. He gave one million dollars to Vanderbilt University, named for him. At his death his fortune was estimated at about 100 million dollars, the vast bulk of which was left to his oldest son, William H. Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt, Cornelius. b. at New York, Sept. 5, 1873; d. off the coast of Miami, Fla., March 1, 1942. American railroad director and inventor; grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1794-1877). He patented more than 30 devices for improving locomotives and freight cars, was a director of railroad companies and banks, and acted as an organizer of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for the construction of the first subway at New York. An officer (1901-34) in the New York National Guard, he served (1917-18) in Europe as a colonel of engineers.

Vanderbilt, Cornelius. b. at New York, April 30, 1898—d. American journalist; son of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1873-1942). He was founder (1923) and president of Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., an associate editor (1925-26) of the New York Mirror, and travel columnist (1943 et seq.) for the New York Post. Author of Personal Experiences of a Cub Reporter (1922), Experiences of a Washington Correspondent (1924), Reno (1929), Park Avenue (1930), Palm Beach (1931), Farewell to Fifth Avenue (1935), Woman of Washington (1937), and other books.

Vanderbilt, Frederick William. b. Feb. 2, 1856; d. at Hyde Park, N.Y., June 29, 1938. American railroad manager and yachtsman; son of William Henry Vanderbilt (1821-85). He was trained in his father's railroad system, and was a director of many railroad corporations.

Vanderbilt, George Washington. b. near New Dorp, Staten Island, N.Y., Nov. 14, 1862; d. at Washington, D.C., March 6, 1914. American scientific farmer and stockbreeder, noted as a pioneer in U.S. scientific forestry; son of William Henry Vanderbilt (1821-85). Settling (c1889) in western North Carolina, he bought some 130,000 acres and built his spacious country residence, "Biltmore," at a cost of several million dollars. He devoted himself to the pursuit of scientific agriculture and the breeding of pedigreed stock.

Vanderbilt, Harold Stirling. b. at Oakdale, N.Y., July 6, 1884—d. American railroad officer and yachtsman; son of William Kissam Vanderbilt (1849-1920). He was associated with the management of the New York Central, the Chicago and Northwestern, the Boston and Albany, and other railroad lines. American skipper in international yacht competitions, he defeated Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V in his Enterprise (1930), T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour in his Rainbow (1934), and T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II in his Ranger (1937), retaining each time the America's Cup.

Vanderbilt, Reginald Claypoole. b. at New York, Dec. 19, 1880; d. Sept. 4, 1925. American sportsman; grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1794-1877). He was a director of various railroads and horse show associations.

Vanderbilt, William Henry. b. at New Brunswick, New Jersey, May 8, 1821; d. at New York, Dec. 8, 1885. American financier; son of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1794-1877). He extended the Vanderbilt system of railroads, and made large gifts to the College of Physicians and Surgeons (New York) and the Metropolitan Museum.

Vanderbilt, William Henry. b. at New York, Nov. 24, 1901—. American railroad executive and governor (1939–40) of Rhode Island; son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt (1877–1915). He was an executive of the New York Central and other railway lines.

Vanderbilt, William Kissam. b. on Staten Island, N.Y., Dec. 12, 1849; d. at Paris, July 22, 1920. American railroad executive, sportsman, and philanthropist; son of William Henry Vanderbilt (1821–85) and grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt (1794–1877). He served (1877–1903) as president and director of various railroads in the New York Central system but relinquished actual management in 1903 to a combination of Morgan, Rockefeller, and Pennsylvania Railroad interests. He was a benefactor of Columbia University, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and other institutions.

Vanderbilt, William Kissam. b. at New York, Oct. 26, 1878; d. there, Jan. 8, 1944. American railroad executive; son of William Kissam Vanderbilt (1849–1920). He became associated (1903) with the N.Y. Central system, of which he became assistant to the president (1910) and vice-president (1912). He was subsequently named a director of the N.Y. Central Railroad and its affiliated lines.

Vandercook (van'dér.kùk). Unincorporated community in Michigan, in Jackson County; a southern suburb of Jackson. 3,190 (1950).

Vandercook, John W. b. at London, April 22, 1902—. American radio news commentator, editor, explorer, and author. He was a reporter (1921–25) on the staff of the Baltimore Post, New York Graphic, and other publications, and served as a news commentator (1940 et seq.) for the National Broadcasting Company. He was an explorer for 12 years in Surinam (Dutch Guiana) and elsewhere in South America, and in Haiti, Liberia, the Solomon Islands, Fiji, and other regions. Author of Tom-Tom (1926), Black Majesty (1928), Murder in Trinidad (1933), Murder in Fiji (1935), Caribbean Cruise (1938), King Cane (1939), Empress of the Dusk (1940), and other books.

Van der Does (vân dêr dôs), Jan. See Dousa, Janus.

Van der Donck (vân dêr dôngk), Adriaen. b. at Breda, North Brabant, Netherlands, May 7, 1620; d. in America, c.1655. Dutch lawyer and colonist in America. He served (1641 et seq.) as an officer in the New Netherlands government. In 1645, after negotiating a treaty between the Dutch and the Mohawk Indians, he founded a colony along the Hudson where he was known as the "Jonkheer" or squire; the place, which became known as "the Jonkheer's," is today the site of Yonkers, N.Y. Author of a descriptive account of New Netherlands, Beschrijvinge van Nieuw Nederland (1655).

van der Driesche (vân dêr drê'sche), Jan. See Drusius, Johannes.

Vandergrift (van'dér.grift). Borough in W Pennsylvania, in Westmoreland County; manufactures of iron and steel. It was laid out in 1895. Pop. 9,524 (1950).

Vanderlip (van'dér.lip), Frank Arthur. b. at Aurora, Ill., Nov. 17, 1864; d. at New York, June 29, 1937. American banker and financial writer. Private secretary (1897) to Lyman Gage, U.S. secretary of the treasury, he was assistant secretary (1897–1901) of the treasury, and later served as vice-president (1901–09) and president (1909–19) of the National City Bank of New York. Author of Business and Education (1907) and Tomorrow's Money (1934).

Vanderlyn (van'dér.lin), John. b. at Kingston, N.Y., 1775; d. there, Sept. 23, 1852. American portrait and historical painter. As a young student he won the patronage of Aaron Burr, who, upon the return of Gilbert Stuart to the U.S. in 1791, arranged for him to study with the veteran portraitist. Vanderlyn established a studio at New York, where he had among his sitters Albert Gallatin and the beautiful daughter of his patron, Theodosia Burr, then a girl of 13 years. At this time also he did a portrait of Washington. With letters of introduction from Burr he went to France in 1796; exhibited at the Salon of 1800; returned to the U.S. in 1801, but by 1803 was back in Europe, where he met Washington Allston, with whom he traveled and subsequently lived at Rome. His first historical painting, The Massacre of Miss McCrea, based on an episode in the Indian wars, was shown at the Paris Salon of 1804; at the Salon of 1808 his Caius Marius amidst the Ruins of Carthage was personally chosen by Napoleon for a medal of honor. During this period Vanderlyn befriended Aaron Burr when the latter, to escape his numerous embarrassments, fled to Europe. In 1815 the painter returned to America and to disappointment. He found little market for his historical paintings, and though in the subsequent years his sitters included James Madison, James Monroe, DeWitt Clinton, John C. Calhoun, and Zachary Taylor, the slowness of his method, his irascibility, and his refusal to paint persons to whom he took a dislike, restricted his earnings from portraiture. He fell into extreme poverty and died penniless during a visit to his native city. Some of his portraits are to be seen in the City Hall, New York City, and 28 examples of his work are exhibited in the Senate House at Kingston. The Landing of Columbus, which is in the Capitol at Washington, is partly by his hand but partly executed by assistants. The Massacre of Miss McCrea hangs in the Wadsworth Athenaeum at Hartford, Conn.; the Marius is in the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts at Philadelphia.

van der Meersch (vân dêr mâr), Maxence. See Meersch, Maxence van der.

Vandermonde (vân.dér.mônd), Alexandre Théophile. b. at Paris, Feb. 28, 1735; d. there, Jan. 1, 1796. French mathematician and scientist, contributor to the solution of equations and the theory of heat, who is best known for work in determinants.

Van der Poorten-Schwarz (vân dêr pōr'ten.shvârts'), J.M.H. [Pseudonym, Maarten Maartens.]. b. at Amsterdam, Aug. 15, 1858; d. 1915. Dutch novelist. His novels were written in English and then translated into Dutch. His works include Joost Avelingh (1890), A Question of Taste (1891), God's Fool (1892), The Greater Glory (1894), My Lady Nobody (1895), Her Memory (1898), Some Women I Have Known (1901), My Poor Relations (1903), Dorothea (1904), The Healers (1906), The Woman's Victory (1906), The New Religion (1907), Brothers All (1909), Harmen Pols (1910), and Eve (1912). His The Jailbird, a one-act play, was produced in 1904.

Van der Stucken (vân dêr stuk'en), Frank Valentin. b. at Fredericksburg, Tex., Oct. 15, 1858; d. 1929. American composer and conductor. His compositions include choral and orchestral works, but his songs are more widely known.

Vandervelde (vân.dér.veld), Émile. b. at Ixelles, near Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 25, 1866; d. at Brussels, Dec. 27, 1938. Belgian statesman. He joined the Socialist Party, of which he became the leader, and was elected president of the Internationale Ouvrière Socialiste. Elected (1894) to the chamber of representatives, he became (1914) a minister of state, and served as minister of justice (1918–21), minister of foreign affairs (1925–27), and minister of public health (1936–37), resigning the latter post when the government refused support to the Spanish republicans in the Civil War. He signed the Locarno pact (1925) for Belgium. A powerful orator and impetuous debater, he was an exponent of legislation for social reform and in the interest of labor, and an advocate of universal suffrage. His writings, devoted to the cause of socialism, include Les Associations professionnelles d'artisans et d'ouvriers en Belgique (1892), Le Socialisme en Belgique (1898), La Belgique et le Congo (1911), and Le Parti ouvrier belge, 1835–1925 (1925).

Van der Walen (vân dêr wâl'en), Madame. See Fernig, Félicité de.

Van Devanter (van dê.van'tér), Willis. b. at Marion, Ind., April 17, 1859; d. at Washington, D.C., Feb. 8, 1941. American jurist. He practiced law (1881–84) at Marion, Ind. In 1884 he removed to Cheyenne, Wyo., where he held several city and state offices, serving as chief justice of the supreme court of Wyoming (1889–90). He was assistant U.S. attorney general (1897–1903), and U.S. circuit judge of the eighth judicial circuit (1903–10). In 1910 he was named associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, in which post he remained until 1937. Van Devanter, one of the conservative justices, consistently opposed the New Deal legislation of President F. D. Roosevelt and he was a principal target of the proposal for enlarging the number of justices in the 1937 Supreme Court battle; Van Devanter, 78 years old at the time, resigned in June, during the height of the struggle, permitting Roosevelt to make his first Supreme Court appointment.

Van de Water (van de wō'tēr, wot'ēr), Frederic Franklyn. b. at Pompton Lakes, N.J., Sept. 30, 1890—. American journalist and author. He served (1914-32) as reporter, night editor, and book critic on New York newspapers, and was a member (1922-28) of the staff of the Ladies' Home Journal. His works include Grey Riders (1921), Horsemen of the Law (1926), The Eye of Lucifer (1927), Havoc (1931), Thunder Shield (1933), Hidden Ways (1935), A Home in the Country (1937), Rudyard Kipling's Vermont Feud (1938), The Circling Year (1940), The Reluctant Republic (1941), Mrs. Applegate's Affair (1944), Fool's Errand (1945), The Sooner to Sleep (1946), Reluctant Rebel (1948), and Catch a Falling Star (1949).

Van Diemen (van dē'men; Dutch, vān dē'men), Anton. See Diemen, Anton van.

Van Diemen's Land (van dē'mēnz). Former name of Tasmania.

Van Dine (van din), S. S. See Wright, Willard Huntington.

van Dongen (vān dōng'en), Kees. b. Jan. 26, 1877—. Dutch painter and illustrator, noted for his paintings of elegant Parisian women. He went to Paris in 1897 and was first associated with Vuillard, then with the fauves.

Van Doren (van dō'rēn), Carl (Clinton). b. at Hope, Ill., 1885; d. at Torrington, Conn., July 18, 1950. American editor, historian, and literary critic; brother of Harold and Mark Van Doren. A teacher (1911 et seq.) at Columbia, he served as managing editor (1917-21) of the Cambridge History of American Literature, literary editor of The Nation (1919-22) and Century Magazine (1922-25), editor for The Literary Guild (1926-34) and The Living Library (1946 et seq.), and a member (1926-36) of the committee on management of the Dictionary of American Biography. His books include The Life of Thomas Love Peacock (1911), The American Novel (1921; revised ed., 1940), Contemporary American Novelists (1922), James Branch Cabell (1925), American and British Literature Since 1890 (1925, with his brother Mark), Swift (1930), Sinclair Lewis (1933), Secret History of the American Revolution (1941), Mutiny in January (1943), and The Great Rehearsal (1948). He was awarded the 1939 Pulitzer prize in biography for Benjamin Franklin (1938).

Van Doren, Dorothy. [Maiden name, Grafie.] b. at San Francisco, May 2, 1896—. American editor and writer; wife of Mark Van Doren. She was an editorial staff member (1919-36) of The Nation, and was associated with the Office of War Information (1942-45) and U.S. State Department Overseas Information Service (1946 et seq.). Her writings include Strangers (1926), Flowering Quince (1927), Brother and Brother (1928), Those First Affections (1938), and Dacey Hamilton (1942).

Van Doren, Harold Livingston. b. at Chicago, March 2, 1895—. American industrial designer; brother of Mark and Carl Van Doren. He was graduated (B.A., 1917) from Williams College, studied at the Art Students League (New York) and at the École du Louvre (Paris), was assistant director (1927-30) of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, and began practice as an industrial designer in 1940. He is the author of Industrial Design—A Practical Guide (1940).

Van Doren, Irita. [Maiden name, Bradford.] b. at Birmingham, Ala., March 16, 1891—. American editor. She married (1912) Carl Van Doren, from whom she was later divorced. She was an editorial staff member (1919-24) of The Nation, and associate editor (1924-26) and editor (1926 et seq.) of the New York Herald Tribune book section.

Van Doren, Mark (Albert). b. at Hope, Ill., June 13, 1894—. American poet, critic, novelist, editor, and professor of English; brother of Carl and Harold Van Doren. He served as an instructor (1920 et seq.) and professor (1924 et seq.) at Columbia, and as literary editor (1921-28) and motion-picture critic (1935-38) of The Nation. His works include Henry David Thoreau (1916), The Poetry of John Dryden (1920), Spring Thunder (1924), Jonathan Gentry (1931), Shakespeare (1939), Windless Cabins (1940), The Transparent Tree (1940), The Mayfield Deer (1941), Our Lady Peace (1942), The Private Reader (1942), Tilda (1943), Liberal Education (1943), Seven Sleepers (1944), The Noble Voice (1946), Country Year (1946), and The Careless Clock (1947). He was co-author with his brother Carl of American and British Literature Since 1890 (1925), and with Theodore Spencer of Studies in Metaphysical Poetry (1939), and was awarded the 1940 Pulitzer prize in poetry for Collected Poems, 1922-38 (1939). He was editor of several anthologies including An Anthology of World Poetry (1928; revised ed., 1936), The Oxford Book of American Prose (1932), and The Portable Walt Whitman (1945). Nathaniel Hawthorne (1949) is one of the American Men of Letters series.

Van Dorn (van dōrn), Earl. b. near Port Gibson, Miss., Sept. 17, 1820; killed in Tennessee, May 8, 1863. American general. He was graduated from West Point in 1842 served in the Mexican War and in the Indian wars, and entered the Confederate service in 1861. He was sent to Texas and there received (1861) the surrender of the Union forces. He was commander, as a major general, of the Trans-Mississippi district in 1862, was defeated at the battle of Pea Ridge (March 7-8, 1862), and was defeated with Sterling Price at Corinth (Oct. 3-4, 1862). He was shot to death by a private enemy.

Vandover and the Brute (van'dō.vēr). Novel by Frank Norris, published posthumously in 1914.

Van Druten (van drō'ten), John (William). b. at London, June 1, 1901—. English playwright. Author of the plays Young Woodley (1925; published as a novel, 1929), Diversion (1928), After All (1929), London Wall (1931), There's Always Juliet (1931), Behold We Live (1932), The Disfist Side (1933), Flowers of the Forest (1934), Leave Her to Heaven (1940), Old Acquaintance (1940), The Damask Cheek (1942; in collaboration with Lloyd Morris), The Voice of the Turtle (1943), I Remember Mama (1944), The Druid Circle (1947), Bell, Book, and Candle (1950), and I've Got Sixpence (1952). He wrote the autobiographical The Way to the Present (1938).

van Duyse (vān dōi'se), Prudens. See Duysse, Prudens van.

Van Dyck (van dik), Cornelius Van Alen. b. at Kinderhook, N.Y., Aug. 13, 1818; d. Nov. 13, 1895. American Orientalist and Congregational missionary. He was stationed at Beirut, Syria (now in Lebanon), and after the death of Eli Smith in 1857 undertook the completion of the latter's translation of the Bible into Arabic.

Van Dyck (van dik; Flemish, vān dik), Ernest Marie Hubert. b. at Antwerp, Belgium, April 2, 1861; d. 1923. Belgian tenor. In 1883 he made his debut in concert, and in 1887 in opera, as Lohengrin, at the Eden Theater at Paris. In 1888 he sang Parsifal at Bayreuth and later appeared at Vienna, London, and other cities.

Vandyke or Van Dyck (van'dik'), Sir Anthony. b. at Antwerp, Belgium, March 22, 1599; d. at London, Dec. 9, 1641. Flemish painter, best known as a portraitist. He was a pupil of Rubens, whom he assisted in some of his greatest compositions. He was in England (1620-21), in Italy (1621-25), later at Antwerp, and after 1632 chiefly in England. In 1632 he was knighted and made court painter to Charles I. Among his best-known works are Crucifixions (especially one at Mechelen), Elevation of the Cross (Courtrai), Saint Augustine in Ecstasy (Antwerp), and portraits of Charles I and members of his family, and of prominent men of the time.

Van Dyke (van dik), Henry. b. at Germantown, Pa., Nov. 10, 1852; d. at Avalon, N.J., April 10, 1933. American clergyman, educator, and author, professor of English literature (1899 et seq.) at Princeton University, and U.S. minister to the Netherlands (1913-16). He was the author of The Poetry of Tennyson (1889), Little Rivers (1895), The Story of the Other Wise Man (1896), The Gospel for an Age of Doubt (1896), The Builders, and Other Poems (1897), The Lost Word (1898), Fisherman's Luck (1899), The Telling of Felix, and Other Poems (1900), The Ruling Passion (1901), The Blue Flower (1902), House of Rimmon (1908), Out of Doors in the Holy Land (1908), The White Bees (1909), The Mavson (1911), The Sad Shepherd (1911), The Unknown Quantity (1912), and others.

Van Dyke, John Charles. b. at New Brunswick, N.J., April 21, 1856; d. at New York, Dec. 5, 1932. American writer and educator. He was librarian (1886-1932) of the Gardner A. Sage Library at the New Brunswick Theological Seminary and served as lecturer on modern art (1889-91) and professor of the history of art (1889-1929) at Rutgers. An art critic, he was the author of Old English Masters, with Cole's Engravings (1902), New Guides to Old Masters (1914), Rembrandt and His School (1923), and The Rembrandt Drawings and Etchings (1927).

Van Dyne (van din), Edith. A pseudonym of Baum, Lyman Frank.

Vane (vân), Sir Henry. [Called Sir Harry Vane.] b. at Hadlow, Kent, England, 1613; beheaded at London, June 14, 1662. English statesman. He was educated at Westminster and Oxford, and visited Vienna with the English ambassador in 1631. He emigrated to Massachusetts in 1635, partly because of his somewhat Puritan religious views, and was governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony from 1636 to 1637, when he failed of reelection on account of siding with Anne Hutchinson. He returned to England in August, 1637, entered Parliament in 1640, and in the same year was knighted and made joint treasurer of the navy. He was one of the commissioners who negotiated the Solemn League and Covenant with Scotland in 1643, furthered the Self-denying Ordinance and the New Model, and condemned Pride's Purge. He became a member of the council of state in 1649, fell out with Cromwell when the Rump Parliament was dissolved (1653), was imprisoned for four months in 1656 for his attack on the protectorate of Cromwell in a publication of that year, and was arrested at the Restoration (1660). Excepted from the Act of Pardon and Oblivion, he was executed on the charge of treason.

Vänern (ve'nêrn), Lake. [Also: Väner (ve'nêr), Vener.] Lake in SW Sweden, the largest lake in the country, situated at an elevation of ab. 145 ft. Its outlet is the Göta River, and it receives numerous rivers, of which the largest is the Klar. The lake is extensively used for inland navigation. Area, ab. 2,150 sq. mi.

Vänersborg (ve'nêrs.bôrg). [Also, Venersborg.] Town in S Sweden, the capital of the lan (county) of Älvsborg, situated at the S end of Lake Vänern, NE of Göteborg. It has a match factory; agricultural trade. 15,116 (1949).

Vanessa (va.nes'a). Jonathan Swift's poetical name for his friend Esther Vanhomrigh; composed of the first syllable of her surname and Essa for Esther.

Vane-Tempest-Stewart (vân'tem'pest.stô'art), Charles Stewart. [Title, 6th Marquis of Londonderry. b. 1852; d. 1915. British politician. He was lord lieutenant of Ireland (1886-89), and postmaster general (1900-02).

Van Fleet (van flêt), James Alward. b. at Coatesville, N.J., March 19, 1892-9. American soldier. Commissioned in 1915, he saw service in Mexico (1916-17) and commanded a machine-gun battalion and later a division (1918-19) during World War I. In 1944 he was commander of the 8th infantry regiment of the 4th division, the first unit to land at Utah Beach in the Normandy invasion, and he rose during the subsequent campaign through France and Germany to command of the 3rd corps. He was assigned (1948) to head the military personnel sent by the U.S. to aid the Greek government in subduing the Communist guerrilla fighters and served on the Greek war council. In 1951, when Douglas MacArthur was relieved of his Far Eastern command, Van Fleet succeeded Matthew Ridgway as head of the 8th army in Korea; he led the United Nations forces in the fighting in the Korean War until 1953, when he retired.

Van Gelder (van gêl'dêr), Robert. b. at Baltimore, Oct. 19, 1904; d. at New York, April 3, 1952. American journalist, critic, editor, and novelist. In 1928 he became a member of the staff of the New York Times, serving as reporter and book critic. In 1943 he became editor of the Times weekly book review and held that post until 1946. His works include Front Page Story (1937), Smash Picture (1938), The Enemy in the House (1940), Writers and Writing (1945), and Important People (1948).

Vangiones (van.jî'ô.nêz). Ancient Germanic tribe first mentioned by Caesar as in the army of Ariovistus. The Vangiones were situated on the left side of the middle Rhine, in the region about Worms. They were probably merged ultimately with the Alamanni.

Vanglon (vân.glôn), Henri. See Ghéon, Henri.

Van Gogh (van gô; Dutch, van chôch), Vincent. b. at Zundert, in Brabant, Netherlands, March 30, 1853; d. at Auvers-sur-Oise, France, July 29, 1890. Dutch postimpressionist painter, whose works and tragic life attracted much attention in the 20th century. His father, a clergyman, sent him to boarding school at Zevenbergen, in 1865; four years later, he started to work for Goupil and Company, art dealers, but in 1875 he became a religious fanatic and lost his position. He tried to become a preacher, but his unconventional enthusiasm prevented success. In 1880 he started to draw seriously, and with his brother's help went to school at Antwerp and The Hague. He went to Paris in 1886 and met, through his brother, many of the impressionist and neoimpressionist painters, as well as Gauguin. The discovery of Japanese prints and the work of the impressionists were important influences on him. In 1888 he went to Arles, where he was joined by Gauguin and where his period of insanity began. He was institutionalized at St.-Rémy, though he continued to paint, and finally went to Auvers, to be treated by a Dr. Gachet; he committed suicide there in 1890. His work is related to Gauguin's but is much more violent and motion-filled, is less exotic, and is freer in execution, though there is a similar sense of distortion. A few of his best-known works are The Vegetable Gardens, Sunflowers, Starry Night, Cypress Road, Cornfield with Black Crows, Portrait of Père Tanguy, Bridge at Arles, Vincent's House at Arles, Asylum Corridors, and several Self-Portraits. He also wrote a notable series of letters to his brother Theo.

Vanguard (van'gârd). British line-of-battle ship of 74 guns and 1,603 tons. She served in the Channel squadron of Richard Howe in 1793, and was flagship of Horatio Nelson in the battle of the Nile, Aug. 1-2, 1798.

Van Hise (van his), Charles Richard. b. at Fulton, Wis., May 29, 1857; d. at Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 19, 1918. American geologist, president (1903-18) of the University of Wisconsin. He was assistant professor and professor at the university (1883-1903), nonresident professor of structural geology at the University of Chicago (1892-1903), and assistant geologist and geologist (1883 et seq.) in the U.S. Geological Survey.

Vanhomrigh (van.um'ri), Esther. b. Feb. 14, 1690; d. 1723. Vanessa of Jonathan Swift's Cadenus and Vanessa (1712-13; published 1726). He made her acquaintance in 1708. She became his pupil, fell in love with him, and followed him to Ireland in 1714. She is said to have died of a broken heart because of his failure to return her love (although he was a devoted friend).

Van Hoogstraten (vân hêch'strâ'ten), Willem. b. at Utrecht, Netherlands, March 18, 1884-9. American orchestra conductor. He made his U.S. debut (1922) as guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic, of which he was later conductor (1923-25), and directed (1927-37) the Portland (Oregon) Symphony Orchestra.

Van Horne (van hôrn), Sir William Cornelius. b. near Joliet, Ill., Feb. 3, 1843; d. at Montreal, Sept. 11, 1915. American railroad administrator. He held various supervising and executive positions in connection with railroads in the U.S. (1867-81), but was most closely identified with the Canadian Pacific Railway, of which he was general manager (1881-84), vice-president (1884-88), president (1888-99), and chairman of the board of directors (1899-1910).

Vanhorne's Lessee v. Dorrance, 2 Dallas 304 (1795) (dor'ans). Decision by Justice William Paterson of the U.S. Supreme Court, rendered in the U.S. Circuit Court for Pennsylvania, notable for its assertion on the part of a federal court of the right to refuse to recognize a state law construed as contrary to the U.S. Constitution. Paterson pointed out that "if a legislative act oppugns a constitutional principle, the former must give way, and be rejected on the score of repugnance. . . . It is an important principle, which, in the discussion of questions of the present kind, ought never to be lost sight of, that the Judiciary in this country is not a subordinate, but co-ordinate, branch of the government." Paterson declared unconstitutional a Pennsylvania statute on the ground that it impaired the obligation of contract. His opinion is often cited as a precedent of the doctrine of judicial review.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hêr; pin, plîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ǵ, d, or j; ʒ, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Vanir (vā'nir). [Old Norse, Vanr.] In Old Norse mythology, a class of gods originally at war with the Aesir, but later received by them into Asgard. Njörd, Frey, and Freya were Vanir, and usually Nerthus is numbered as one of them. They were all fertility gods, who later were construed as weather deities and protectors of crops. The mythical war between the Aesir and the Vanir probably had its origin in the subordination of an older fertility cult to the newer cult of Odin.

Vanity Fair. Fair described in John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. It was held in the town of Vanity, and the phrase is often used as a synonym for the present world and its worldliness.

Vanity Fair. Novel by William Makepeace Thackeray, which appeared (1847-48) in monthly parts. A novel of English society in the early years of the 19th century, it is generally considered one of the best of all English novels; the amoral heroine, Becky Sharp, is probably Thackeray's greatest creation.

Vanity Fair. Weekly magazine (1868-1936) published at New York. Among its editors were Charles Godfrey Leland and Frank Harris. In 1913 it came under the control of Condé Nast; in 1936 the publication was absorbed by Vogue.

Vankala (väng'kä.lä). See O Kung.

Van Laun (van lö'n), Henri. b. in the Netherlands, 1820; d. at London, Jan. 19, 1896. British author and educator. Among his works are a number of textbooks, History of French Literature (1876-77), The French Revolutionary Epoch (1878), and translations of Hippolyte Taine's History of English Literature (1871), Molière's works (1875-76), and the Caractères de La Bruyère (1885).

Vanloo (vân.lö), Charles André. b. at Nice, France, 1705; d. at Paris, 1765. French painter; grandson of Jacques Vanloo and brother of Jean Baptiste Vanloo.

Vanloo, Jacques (or Jakob). b. at Sluys, Netherlands, 1614; d. at Paris, 1670. Dutch-French painter; grandfather of Jean Baptiste Vanloo and Charles André Vanloo. Until about 1660 he lived at Amsterdam, doing portraits and painting figures into the landscapes of Hobbema and others. About that time he moved to France, where he lived thereafter. His portrait of Michel Corneille the elder led to his admission to the French Academy, in 1663.

Vanloo, Jean Baptiste. b. at Aix, France, 1684; d. there, 1745. French painter of portraits and religious subjects; grandson of Jacques Vanloo and brother of Charles André Vanloo.

Van Loon (van lö'n), Hendrik Willem. b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, Jan. 14, 1882; d. 1944. American historian, journalist, and biographer. He was a newspaper correspondent (1906) in various European capitals, lectured on history at several U.S. universities from 1911 to 1914, and was a European correspondent during World War I. He was professor of history (1922-23) at Antioch College (Ohio) and was associate editor (1923-24) of the Baltimore Sun. His many works, a number of them illustrated with his own drawings, include The Fall of the Dutch Republic (1913), The Rise of the Dutch Kingdom (1915), The Golden Book of the Dutch Navigators (1916), A Short History of Discovery (1918), Ancient Man (1920), The Story of Mankind (1921), The Story of the Bible (1923), Tolerance (1925), America (1927), The Arts (1937), The Story of the Pacific (1940), and Van Loon's Lives (1942). His biographical works include The Life and Times of Pieter Stuyvesant (1928), R.v.R., an imaginative treatment of the life of Rembrandt (1930), and Thomas Jefferson (1943).

Vannes (vân). [Breton, Gwened; ancient name, Dariorigum.] Town in NW France, the capital of the department of Morbihan, situated on an inland lake connected with the Atlantic, E. of Lorient. It is an old Breton town surrounded by medieval ramparts. It has shipyards and manufactures rope, leather, lace, cotton textiles, and iron goods. The Cathedral of Saint Pierre was begun in the 13th century. The union of ancient Brittany with the French crown was proclaimed here in 1532. Pop. 28,189 (1946).

Vannin (van'in). An ancient name of Man, Isle of.

Van Nostrand (van nös'trand), David. b. at New York, Dec. 5, 1811; d. June 14, 1886. American publisher. He entered (1834) the publishing and bookselling business at New York, where he subsequently founded the firm of Van Nostrand and Company, one of the leading American publishers of technical and scientific works.

Vannotti (vân.nót'té), Alfredo. b. at Luino, Italy, Aug. 11, 1907— . Italian-Swiss clinician. He worked on porphyrins, porphyrin diseases, and the normal and pathological porphyrin metabolism in the human body, and on iron metabolism, respiratory ferments, physiology of the capillaries, and Vitamin B metabolism.

Vannoza dei Cattanei (vân.nót'sä dä'č käit.tä.nä'č). Mistress of Pope Alexander VI, and the mother of Cesare and Lucrezia Borgia.

Vannucci (vân.nöt'chê), Pietro. See Perugini.

Vanoise (vä.nwäz). [Full name, Massif de la Vanoise.] Range in the Tarentaise Alps, SE France. Highest point, ab. 12,180 ft.

Vanolis (va.nó's'lis), Bysse. A pseudonym of Thomson, James (1834-82).

van Paassen (van pä'ssen), Pierre. See Paassen, Pierre van.

Vanr (vân'ér). See Vanir.

Van Rensselaer (van ren'se.lér, -lir; Dutch, vān ren'se.lär), Kiliaen or Killian. b. at Amsterdam, Holland, 1595; d. there, 1644. Dutch merchant. He was a wealthy dealer in pearls and diamonds at Amsterdam, and was one of the founders (1621) of the West India Company. Through an agent he purchased from the Indians the territory comprised in much of the present counties of Albany, Columbia, and Rensselaer, New York, which received the name of Rensselaerswyck, and which he colonized.

Van Rensselaer (van ren'se.lér, -lir), Mariana. [Maiden name, Griswold.] b. at New York, 1851; d. Jan. 20, 1934. American art critic and author. Among her works are Henry Hobson Richardson and His Work (1888), Six Portraits (1889), English Cathedrals (1893), Art Out of Doors (1893), One Man Who Was Content (1896), History of the City of New York in the Seventeenth Century (1909), Poems (1910), and Many Children (1921).

Van Rensselaer, Martha. b. at Randolph, N.Y., June 21, 1864; d. May 26, 1932. American teacher and educator. She became the organizer and head (1900) of a Cornell University extension service for farm women, a lecturer (1907) on home economics at Cornell and professor in 1911, and director (1924) of the School of Home Economics. She was named (1925) director of the New York State College of Home Economics. She served on the executive staff of the U.S. Food Administration during World War I.

Van Rensselaer, Solomon. b. in Rensselaer County, N.Y., Aug. 6, 1774; d. at Albany, N.Y., April 23, 1852. American officer and politician; cousin of Stephen Van Rensselaer. He served with distinction under General Anthony Wayne against the Indians at the battle of Maumee Rapids (August, 1794), commanded the assault at the battle of Queenston Heights (October, 1812), and was a member of Congress from New York (1819-22).

Van Rensselaer, Stephen. [Called "The Patroon."] b. at New York, Nov. 1, 1764; d. at Albany, Jan. 26, 1839. American general. He was a descendant of Kiliaen Van Rensselaer, and was the eighth patroon of Rensselaerswyck, although his manorial rights were materially curtailed on the dissolution of the colonial government. He graduated at Harvard in 1782, became a major of militia in 1786 and a major general in 1801, and was lieutenant governor of New York (1795-1801). He was made commander of the U.S. forces on the northwestern frontier in 1812, and lost the battle of Queenston Heights (Oct. 13, 1812). He cooperated with De Witt Clinton in promoting the Erie Canal (completed in 1825), being president of the board of commissioners for 14 years. He was a member of Congress from New York (1823-29), and founded the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N.Y., which was incorporated in 1826.

van Rijn or van Ryn (vân rin), Rembrandt Harmenszoon. See Rembrandt.

Van Rooy (vân rô'), Anton. [Full name, Antonius Maria Josephus Van Rooy.] b. at Rotterdam, Netherlands, Jan. 1, 1870; d. 1932. Dutch baritone. He sang at Berlin and for many seasons at Covent Garden, London, and the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. He joined (1908) the Frankfurt Opera, and was also active as a concert singer.

Van Schaick (van skik), Goose. b. at Albany, N.Y., Sept. 5, 1736; d. there, July 4, 1789. American general. He served in the French and Indian Wars, in the Cherry Valley against the Indian Joseph Brant, and at Monmouth, where he acted as brigadier general. He destroyed the Onondaga settlements in 1779.

Vansittart (van.sit'art), Henry. b. at London, June 3, 1732; d. at sea, 1770. English politician and administrator in India. A personal friend of Robert Clive, he was appointed (1759) president of the council and governor of the settlements in Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa. He resigned (1764) and returned to England, where he was vigorously attacked by his opponents. The corruption in Bengal having been exposed by Clive, Vansittart was elected a director of the company and asked to return as investigator, but the ship on which he set out was lost at sea.

Vansittart, Nicholas. [Title, 1st Baron Bexley.] b. 1766; d. 1851. English politician. He was chancellor of the exchequer (1812 et seq.) in the Liverpool ministry, and later chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster.

Vansittart, Sir Robert Gilbert. [Title, 1st Baron Vansittart of Denham.] b. June 25, 1881—. British diplomat and writer. Secretary (1920-24) to the foreign secretary, Earl Curzon, he was appointed (1928) principal private secretary to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, served (1930-38) as permanent undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, and was chief diplomatic adviser (1938-41) to the foreign secretary. He became famous in the years just before and during World War II for the Cato-like severity of his pronouncements against Germany. Author of novels, plays, and poems, including Les Pariahs (1902) and Dead Heat (1939).

Vansittart Island. Island in the arctic region of North America, S of Melville Peninsula. It is part of the district of Franklin, Northwest Territories, Canada.

Van Slyke (van sliik), Donald Dexter. b. at Pike, N.Y., March 29, 1883—. American research chemist. He served as a research chemist (1907 et seq.) with the Rockefeller Institute and as chief chemist (1914 et seq.) of the Institute's hospital. He is noted for his researches in protein analysis and blood chemistry, and on the metabolic conditions of diabetes and nephritis.

Van Slyke, Lucius Lincoln. b. at Centerville, N.Y., Jan. 6, 1859; d. Sept. 30, 1931. American agricultural chemist. He made his most notable contributions, chiefly in the field of dairy chemistry, as chief chemist (1890-1929) at the New York state agricultural experiment station at Geneva, N.Y., and as professor of dairy chemistry (1920-29) at the New York State Agricultural College, Cornell University.

Van Tassel (van tas'el), Katrina. Village beauty in The Legend of Sleepy Hollow, by Washington Irving.

van't Hoff (vánt hof), Jacobus Henricus. b. at Rotterdam, Holland, Aug. 20, 1852; d. at Steglitz (Berlin), Germany, March 1, 1911. Dutch physical chemist, winner of the first Nobel prize in chemistry (1901), noted as the founder of stereochemistry. He developed and made well known most of the general thermodynamics of ideal solutions, much chemical thermodynamics generally, and much of elementary chemical kinetics (1884-86). Independently of J. A. De Bel, he brilliantly postulated that the bonds of carbon are tetrahedrally arranged, the "asymmetric" atom (1874). Much work paralleling his in thermodynamics was done independently at about this time by Willard Gibbs in America, but Gibbs's work did not become generally known until later. J. H. van't Hoff's monumental work on ideal solutions included equations for freezing-point depression, boiling-point elevation, and osmotic pressure, this work leading directly to Svante Arrhenius's theory of ionization. His work on chemical thermodynamics included the fundamental expression for the variation of constants of chemical equilibrium with temperature, expressions for "chemical affinities," and the like. He served as professor at Amsterdam (1878-96), and at Berlin (1896-1911). His works include Etudes de dynamique chimique (1884) and Zur Bildung der Ozeanischen Salzablagerungen (1905, 1909).

Van Tieghem (vân tyä'gäm), Philippe Édouard Léon. b. at Baillieux, France, April 14, 1839; d. at Paris, April 30, 1914. French botanist. He made notable studies in the myxomycetes and ascomycetes, and important contributions in the field of plant anatomy. Author of Traité de botanique (1891) and Éléments de botanique (1898).

Van Twiller (van twil'ér), Dutch, van twil'ér, Wouter (or Walter). b. at Nijkerk, Netherlands, c1580; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, c1656. Dutch governor of New Netherland (1633-37). He had disputes with the Massachusetts colony relating to Connecticut.

Van Tyne (van tin), Claude Halstead. b. at Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 16, 1869; d. March 21, 1930. American historian. He became (1903) assistant professor of history at the University of Michigan, where he became professor in 1906 and was named head of the department in 1911. Author of The Loyalists in the American Revolution (1902), The American Revolution, 1776-1783 (1905), The Causes of the War of Independence (1922), and The War of Independence, American Phase (1929), the latter being awarded the 1930 Pulitzer prize in history.

Vanua Levu (van.ó'á le.vó). See under Fiji.

Van Vechten (van vek'ten), Carl. b. at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, June 17, 1880—. American music critic and writer. He was music critic (1906-07, 1910-13) of the New York Times. Author of Music after the Great War (1915), Music and Bad Manners (1916), In the Garret (1920), Peter Whiffle, His Life and Works (1922), The Blind Bow-Boy (1923), The Tattooed Countess (1924), Nigger Heaven (1926), Spider Boy (1928), Sacred and Profane Memories (1932), Ex Libris: Carl Van Vechten (1942), and other books. He edited Selected Works of Gertrude Stein (1946), Nijinsky (1946), and other books.

Vanves (vānv). Town in N France, in the department of Seine, situated SW of Paris, near the city limits and N of Sceaux. It is an industrial suburb of Paris, known for the manufacture of chemical products and metal articles. 20,678 (1946).

Vanwalungu (vā.nwā.lūng'gō). See Nwalungu.

Vanwanati (vā.nwā.nā'tē). See Nwanati.

Van Wert (van wért). City in W Ohio, county seat of Van Wert County; the penny county center of the state; manufactures of cigars and overalls. Pop. 10,364 (1950).

Van Winkle (van wing'kl), Rip. See Rip Van Winkle.

Vanyamwezi (vā.nyām.wā'zē). See Nyamwezi.

Vanyaneka (vā.nyā.nā'kā). See Nyaneka.

Van Zandt (vān zānt), Marie. See Zandt, Marie Van.

Vanzetti (van zet'ti), Bartolomeo. See under Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

Vapereau (vā.prō), Louis Gustave. b. at Orléans, France, April 4, 1819; d. April 18, 1906. French author, known as editor of the Dictionnaire universel des contemporains (1858 and successive editions).

Vapincum (vā.ping'kum). Latin name of Gap.

Vaquez (vā.zeq), Louis Henri. b. at Paris, Aug. 27, 1860; d. there, April 16, 1936. French physician. He established (1892) the disease due to a primary excess of red blood cells known as erythremia or polycythemia vera (Vaquez-Osler erythremia), introduced the kymometer for studying peripheral pulsations (1931), described small painful nodules in the fingertips found in bacterial endocarditis (Vaquez' nodes), and established the doctrine (1913) of partial decompensation in cases of heart failure, i.e., of only one or two chambers in contrast to the idea that the heart fails as a whole.

Var (vár). See also Var River.

Var. Department in SE France, bounded by Basses-Alpes on the N, Alpes-Maritimes on the NE, the Mediterranean Sea on the SE and S, and Bouches-du-Rhône on the W. It was formed from part of Provence. A part of it, around Grasse, was ceded to the department of Alpes-Maritimes in 1860. Napoleon landed on the coast of Var when he returned from his Egyptian expedition in 1798 and from his imprisonment on Elba in 1815. In World War II the Allied invasion armies landed here on Aug. 15, 1944. The department, part of the French Riviera, has a mild Mediterranean climate, and its picturesque coasts are studded with resorts and bathing places, such as Bandol-sur-Mer, Fréjus, Hyères, St.-Raphaël, and St.-Tropez. The rocky soil permits little agriculture, but wine, olives, fruits, mushrooms, and flowers are produced. Flowers, as well as essential oils used in the perfume industry, are widely exported. There are bauxite mines and stone quarries, various food industries, silk manufactures, and an important iron, steel, and construction industry, including shipyards at Toulon and St.-Tropez. There are various ports. Toulon is the chief Mediterranean naval station of France. Capital, Draguignan; area, 2,333 sq. mi.; pop. 370,688 (1946).

Vara Aestuarium (vár'a es.tū.ār'i.um). Latin name of Moray Firth.

Varagine (vár.raj'inē), Jacobus de. See Jacobus de Voragine.

Varaha (vár.ā'hā). In Hindu mythology, the third avatar or incarnation of Vishnu, the boar incarnation. He became a boar in order to deliver the world from the demon Hiranyaksha, who had seized the earth and carried it down into the ocean. They battled for a thousand years until Varaha slew the monster and brought back the earth. In the Mahabharata, the earth, pressed down by superabundant population, was submerged by a deluge, when the boar descended and upheaved it on one of his tusks.

Varallo (vár.āl'lō). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Vercelli, situated on the Sesia River NW of Vercelli: marketing center of a cattle-raising region; textile manufactures. The nearby Sanctuary of Sacro Monte is a place of pilgrimage; founded in 1486, it consists of 46 chapels, with terra-cotta sculptures; the cathedral building dates from 1710, in rich baroque style. Buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 8,540 (1936); of town, 3,642 (1936).

Varanger Fjord (vár.rāng'ēr). Arm of the Barents Sea, indenting the NE extremity of Norway. Length, ab. 60 mi.

Varangian Guard (vár.rān'jī.ān). Bodyguard of the Byzantine emperors about the 11th century, formed around a nucleus of Varangians.

Varangians. [Also: Ros, Rosses, Russes.] Scandinavian people who conquered a part of Russia in the 9th century and gave the modern name to the country itself. Novgorod, in the north, and Kiev, in the south, became centers of Varangian power. About 866 A.D. they made incursions southward as far as Constantinople, which they again threatened in 941. They were finally absorbed into the Slavs.

Varas (vár.rās; Spanish, bá'-), Antonio. b. at Cauquenes, Chile, 1817; d. at Santiago, Chile, 1886. Chilean jurist. He was minister of justice under Bulnes (1845-50), and the principal minister of President Montt (1851-56, and for a short time in 1861).

Varasd (vár.rósh't). Hungarian name of Varaždin.

Varaville (vár.rā.vél). Place near Falaise, in Normandy, where in 1058 William of Normandy (William the Conqueror) defeated the forces of France and Anjou.

Varaždin (vár.rāzh'din). [Hungarian, Varasd; German, Varasdin.] Town in N Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Croatia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Savska, situated S of the Drava River, NE of Zagreb and E of Maribor. 17,176 (1948).

Varazze (vár.rāt'tsā). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Liguria, in the province of Savona, situated on the Gulf of Genoa ab. 18 mi. SW of Genoa: seaside resort; cotton-textile and paper manufactures. Pop. of commune, 11,769 (1936); of town, 7,055 (1936).

Varberg (vár.bery'). Town in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Halland, situated on the Kattegat ab. 45 mi. S of Göteborg. It has fisheries. 12,217 (1949).

Vardaman (vár.dā.man), James Kimble. b. near Edna, Tex., July 26, 1861; d. June 25, 1930. American politician. He edited (1890-93) newspapers at Greenwood, Miss., served in the Spanish-American War, was governor (1904-08) of Mississippi, and served (1913-19) in the U.S. Senate, where he was an outstanding opponent of President Wilson's foreign policy, being one of the six senators who voted against U.S. entry into World War I.

Vardanes (vár.dā.nēr). An ancient name of the Kuban River.

Vardar (vár.dār). [Latin, Axius.] River in S Yugoslavia and NE Greece which flows into the Gulf of Salonika ab. 15 mi. SW of Salonika. Its valley, connected with that of the Morava by a low pass (1,510 ft.), has furnished a great historic invasion route between E Europe and the Aegean. Length, ab. 229 mi.

Varden (vár'den), Dolly. Notable character in Charles Dickens's Barnaby Rudge; daughter of Gabriel Varden, a prosperous locksmith. She is a pert and attractive girl.

Vardø (vár'dé'). Town in NE Norway, in the fylke (county) of Finnmark; fisheries. 3,104 (1946).

Vardon (vár'don), Harry. b. in Jersey, Channel Islands, May 9, 1870; d. at Totteridge, Hertfordshire, England, March 20, 1937. English golfer who won the British open championship six times (1896, 1898, 1899, 1903, 1911, 1914), the American open (1900), and the German open (1911). He turned professional in 1903, and last competed in championship play in 1927. Vardon originated the standard overlapping grip.

Varè (vár.rē), Daniele. b. at Rome, Jan. 12, 1880—. Italian writer and diplomat. He served as ambassador to Luxembourg (1926), China (1927-31), and Denmark (1931-32). While in China he was instrumental in arranging (1928) an Italian trade agreement with that country. He wrote, among others, Storia d'Inghilterra (1923) and Diplomatico sorridente (1941).

Varel (fär'el). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the free state of Oldenburg, situated S of the Jade Bay, an inlet of the North Sea, ab. 34 mi. NW of Bremen: harbor; agricultural trade; machine, metal, textile, paper, and leather-goods industries; cement works. Pop. 13,939 (1950); with suburbs, 28,361 (1950).

Varela (vár.rā'lā; Spanish, bá-), Hector Florencio. b. 1833; d. 1891. Argentine journalist and author. He founded and edited the Buenos Aires Tribuna and El Americano, a literary journal published at Paris.

Varela, Juan Cruz. b. at Buenos Aires, 1794; d. 1839. Argentine poet. Author of the tragedies Dido and Argia, and the lyrics Campaña del ejército republicano (1827) and El 25 de mayo de 1838, en Buenos Aires (1838).

Varela (vár.rē'lā), Luís Nicolau Fagundes. b. on a farm near Rio Claro, Brazil, Aug. 17, 1841; d. at Niterói, Brazil, Feb. 18, 1875. Brazilian romantic poet. In addition to his volumes of lyric poetry he published (1875) an epic poem, Anchieta ou o Evangelho nas selvas, celebrating the famous Jesuit missionary.

Varela y Morales (vár.rā'lā ē mō.rā'lās; Spanish, bá-), Félix Francisco José María de la Concepción. b. at Havana, Cuba, Nov. 20, 1788; d. at St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 18, 1853. Spanish-American author. Ordained priest, he became a deputy to the Spanish Cortes (1822-23), and was one of the 66 deputies condemned to death in 1823. He escaped, and passed most of the remainder of his life in New York, where he was vicar-general from 1845. His writings, mainly on philosophical subjects, have had a wide circulation in Spain and Spanish America.

Varennes, Pierre Gaultier de. See La Vérendrye, Sieur de.

Varennes-en-Argonne (vár.ren'ān.nār.gon). [Also, Varennes.] Small town in the department of Meuse, France, situated on the Aire River ab. 18 mi. W of Verdun. It was here, on June 22, 1791, that Louis XVI and various members of his family were arrested in their attempt to escape from France. They were returned to Paris, under guard, by order of the National Assembly.

Varese (vár.rā'zā). Province in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy. Capital, Varese; area, ab. 463 sq. mi.; pop. 395,896 (1936).

Varese. Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, capital of the province of Varese, situated near the Lake of Varese, ab. 30 mi. NW of Milan. One of the industrial centers of Lombardy, it has shoe and luggage manufactures and cotton-textile, metal, and foodstuff industries. The Palazzo del Governo (or Palazzo d'Este), of the 18th century, now serves as town hall. Nearby is the place of pilgrimage Santa Maria del Monte, located on an Alpine slope, with a church in baroque style and 15 chapels. Pop. of commune, 44,823 (1936); of town, 23,348 (1936).

Varese, Lake of. [Italian, Lago di Varese.] Lake of N Italy, E of Lago Maggiore. Length, ab. 6 mi.

Vargas (vár.gās), Emiliano Chamorro. See Chamorro Vargas, Emiliano.

Vargas (vár.gās), Getulio Dornelles (or Dornelles). b. at São Borja, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, April 19, 1883—, Brazilian lawyer and politician, president (1935-45, 1951 et seq.) of Brazil. A defender of legal government during the revolution of 1923, he served (1926-27) as minister of finance, and governor (1928-30) of the state of Rio Grande do Sul. He led a successful revolution (1930) against President Washington Luiz Pereira de Souza after Julio Presto, a conservative, had been elected in what Vargas and his followers claimed was an illegal election. Provisional president (1930-34) of Brazil, he became president under the constitution (1934) of the second republic. This new constitution resulted partly from a serious revolt in São Paulo in 1932; it strengthened the central government greatly, but by 1937 Vargas had pushed through a still stronger constitution, under which his position as dictator was regularized in a corporate state not greatly different from that of Italy. Brazil in these years was torn by internal revolts; the Communists revolted in 1935 but were forcibly suppressed; the Integralists, the fascist Green Shirts, attempted a revolution in 1938 but were easily put down. Vargas's dictatorship, severe as far as civil liberties were concerned, resulted in a number of economic and social reforms that benefited Brazil; both industry and agriculture were aided. Brazil declared war (August, 1942) on Germany and Italy, and Vargas met U.S. President F. D. Roosevelt for a conference (January, 1943) in Natal. Having resigned the presidency, he founded (1946) the Partido Trabalhista Brasileiro, and served as a federal senator (1946 et seq.) from Rio Grande do Sul. In 1950 he was again elected president. Author of A Nova política do Brasil (9 vols.).

Vargas (vár'gás; Spanish, bár'-), José María. b. at La Guaira, Venezuela, March 2, 1786; d. at New York, July 13, 1854. Venezuelan politician. He was also an eminent physician, and rector of the University of Caracas. He was chosen president by the congress of Venezuela in February, 1835. Revolts broke out, and he resigned in April, 1836.

Vargas, Luis de. b. at Seville, Spain, 1502; d. there, c1568. Spanish painter of religious subjects. Many of his works are at Seville.

Vargha (vör'gó), Gyula. b. 1861; d. at Budapest, 1933. Hungarian poet.

Varginha (vár.zh'nyá). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Minas Gerais. 13,404 (1950).

Varia (vá'ryá; Spanish, bá'-). See under Logroño, city.

Varick (vár'ík), Richard. b. March 25, 1753; d. at Jersey City, N.J., July 30, 1831. American soldier and politician. He became (1775) a captain of New York troops, and was later named military secretary to General Philip John Schuyler. In 1780 he became aide to Benedict Arnold; following Arnold's treason, he requested a court of inquiry for himself, and was cleared. In 1781 he became recording secretary to General George Washington, and by 1783 completed more than 40 volumes of transcripts of the correspondence and records of Continental Army headquarters, material which he also arranged and classified. He was attorney general (1788-89) of New York state and mayor (1789-1801) of New York.

Varicourt (vá.ré.kör), Reine Philiberte de. d. 1778. Girl adopted in 1776 by Voltaire. She married (1777) Charles, Marquis de Villette. Voltaire called her "Belle et Bonne," and to her was due much of the happiness of his last years.

Varlété (vá.rýá.té). Collection of critical and philosophical essays (5 vols., 1924, 1929, 1936, 1938, 1944; Eng. trans., in 2 vols., Variety, 1927; Variety, Second Series, 1938, is incomplete), by Paul Valéry.

Varieties of Religious Experience. Psychological study by William James, published in 1902, originally presented as lectures (1901-02) at the University of Edinburgh.

Variety. Theatrical trade journal, published weekly since 1905 at New York. A Hollywood supplement was added in 1933.

Varina (vá.rí'na). Name given by Jonathan Swift to Miss Waring, the sister of an old college friend.

Varin (vá.rí'ni). Ancient Germanic people who dwelt near the Baltic Sea between the Elbe and Oder rivers.

Varius Avitus Bassianus (vá.rí.us á.ví'tus bas.i.á'n.us). Original name of Elagabalus.

Varius Rufus (ró'fus), Lucius. fl. in the last part of the 1st century B.C. Roman epic and tragic poet, author of a tragic poem Thyestes. Only short fragments of his works are extant.

Varlet (vár.le), Charles. See La Grange, Charles Varlet, Sieur de.

Varley (vár'lé), Cornelius. b. 1781; d. 1873. English painter in water colors; brother of John Varley.

Varley, John. b. Aug. 17, 1778; d. 1842. English water-color painter, noted for his landscapes; brother of Cornelius Varley.

Varley, John Philip. Pseudonym of Mitchell, Langdon Elwyn.

Varmia (vár'mí.a). Latin name of Ermeland.

Värmland (verm'lánd). Län (county) in W Sweden, near the Norwegian frontier; lumbering, iron mining and smelting, and machinery industries. Capital, Karlstad; area, 7,427 sq. mi.; pop. 278,633 (1950).

Varna (vár'na). [Official name, since 1949, Stalin.] Department in E Bulgaria, bounded by the Black Sea on the E, the department of Shumen on the W, the department of Burgas on the S, and Rumania on the N. Capital, Varna; pop. 880,484 (1946).

Varna. [Official name, since 1949, Stalin; ancient name, Odessus.] City in NE Bulgaria, in the department of Varna (officially Stalin), situated on the Black Sea ab. 55 mi. E of Shumen. The most important seaport of Bulgaria, and also a major railroad terminus, it has exports of grain and other agricultural products, and cattle. It also has cotton-textile, silk, tobacco, and flour-milling industries. It is a seaside resort. Here on Nov. 10, 1444, the Turks under Murad II defeated the Hungarians under János Hunyadi. In 1828 it was occupied by the Russians, and in 1878 it came to Bulgaria. Pop. 77,792 (1946); with suburbs, 82,501 (1946).

Värnamo (ver'ná.mö). Town in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Jönköping, situated on the Lagan River, SE of Göteborg. It is a railroad junction, and has a rubber industry. 11,067 (1949).

Varney (vár'ni), Richard. Master of the horse to the Earl of Leicester, in Sir Walter Scott's Kenilworth.

Varnhagen (vár.ná'gán), Francisco Adolfo de. [Title, Viscount of Pôrto Seguro.] b. at São João do Ipanema, São Paulo, Brazil, Feb. 17, 1816; d. at Vienna, June 29, 1878. Brazilian historian and diplomat. He undertook a diplomatic career (1842) and served at Lisbon, Madrid, several South American capitals, and finally at Vienna. His literary production is voluminous, and he is recognized as one of Brazil's greatest historians. His História geral do Brasil (2 vols., 1854-57; revised ed., 1875) is still considered one of the best Brazilian histories.

Varnhagen von Ense (farn'há'gen fon en'ze), Karl August. b. at Düsseldorf, Germany, Feb. 21, 1785; d. at Berlin, Oct. 10, 1858. German writer. He served in the Austrian and later in the Russian army, and after the War of Liberation was in the Prussian diplomatic and political service. Among his works are Deutsche Erzählungen (1815), a volume of poems (1816), Goethe in den Zeugnissen der Mitlebenden (1824), Biographische Denkmale (1824-30), lives of F. W. von Seydlitz, Queen Sophia Charlotte of Prussia, Marshal Keith, and others, Denkwürdigkeiten (1837-46), Tagebücher, correspondence with his wife, and Blätter aus der preussischen Geschichte.

Varnhagen von Ense, Rahel Antonie Friederike. [Maiden name, Levin.] b. at Berlin, May 19, 1771; d. there, March 7, 1833. German literary hostess, a famous figure in the intellectual life of Berlin in the first part of the 19th century; wife of K. A. Varnhagen von Ense. Her salon, internationally famous, was a gathering place for the intelligentsia and celebrities of the time.

Varnsdorf (várs'dorf). [German, Warnsdorf.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Liberec, in NE Bohemia, near the German border, SE of Rumburk. The town had important industries, particularly knitwear, cotton, and linen, prior to 1945. Pop. 15,661 (1947).

Varnum (vár'num), James Mitchell. b. at Dracut, Mass., Dec. 17, 1748; d. at Marietta, Ohio, Jan. 10, 1789. American lawyer and Revolutionary soldier. He was admitted (1771) to the bar, became (1776) a colonel of Continental troops, took part in the siege of Boston and in the battles of Long Island and White Plains, and in 1777 was commissioned brigadier general. He commanded Fort Mercer and Fort Mifflin, both along the Delaware River, in the outstanding but unsuccessful defense of these posts against the British in 1777; he was named (1779) commander of the department of Rhode Island.

He served (1780 et seq.) in the Continental Congress, was named (1787) a federal judge for the Northwest Territory, and moved (1788) to Marietta, where he took part in drawing up a code of territorial laws.

Varo (vár'ó). Italian name of Var River.

Varoli (vár'ó'le; vár'ó'le). Costanzo. b. c1543; d. 1575. Italian anatomist. The pons Varolii, the group of nerve fibers connecting the several parts of the brain, was first described by him and is named for him.

Var River (vár'). [Italian, Varo; Latin, Varus.] River in SE France, chiefly in the department of Alpes-Maritimes, which flows into the Mediterranean ab. 4 mi. SW of Nice. It was long the boundary between France and Italy, and in ancient times between Cisalpine and Transalpine Gaul. Length, ab. 80 mi.

Varro (vár'ó). Gaius Terentius. d. after 200 B.C. Roman politician. He was consul with Lucius Aemilius Paulus in 216 B.C., and was defeated with him at the battle of Cannae by Hannibal.

Varro, Marcus Terentius. b. at Reate, Italy, 116 B.C.; d. c27 B.C. Roman scholar and author, the most learned of the Romans of his time. He held various offices, and rose to the praetorship. He joined the party of Pompey, but was reconciled with Caesar and was made by him director of the public library. He was proscribed by the second triumvirate, but was saved by his friends. The total number of his works is about 74, comprising 620 books. Of these only two, De lingua latina and De re rustica, survive (the former only in part). Among his lost books are a work on geometry, one on mensuration, and a nine-book encyclopedia, covering grammar, dialectics, rhetoric, geometry, arithmetic, astrology, music, medicine, and architecture. His historical and archaeological studies, quoted by later writers, are the indirect source of much of our modern knowledge concerning ancient Rome.

Varro, Publius Terentius. [Surnamed Atacinus.] b. at Atax, in Narbonensis, 82 B.C.; d. c37 B.C. Roman poet, author of the epic Argonautica, a work fashioned after that of Apollonius of Rhodes. Only fragments of his works survive.

Varuna (vár'ó'na). In Sanskrit, literally, the encompasser of the universe; in the Rig-Veda, creator and supreme god of the cosmos. To him belong especially the waters, the night, and the west. He is associated with the moon in E Bengal, and is widely worshipped by fishermen. At marriages he is invoked for fertility. He is the noblest character of the Vedic pantheon. He is both a punisher and forger of sins, but is merciful even to the guilty.

Varus (vár'us). Latin name of the Var River.

Varus, Publius Quintilius. d. 9 A.D. Roman general. He was consul (13 B.C.), governor in Syria (6-4 B.C.), and commander in Germany (6-9 A.D.). His rigorous measures led to a German alliance against him, and he was totally defeated by Arminius in the famous battle in the Teutoburgerwald (9 A.D.). When he saw that the battle was lost, he fell upon his sword. This defeat profoundly affected the Romans, and the loss of his three legions was bitterly lamented by Augustus.

Vasa (vá'sá). Swedish name of Vasasa.

Vasa, Gustavus. See Gustavus Vasa.

Vasa, Sigismund. See Sigismund III (of Poland).

Vasari (vá'sá'r'e). Giorgio. b. at Arezzo, Italy, July 30, 1511; d. at Florence, Italy, June 27, 1574. Italian architect, painter, and writer on art. He painted many pictures at Florence, Rome, and elsewhere, and constructed part of the Uffizi Palace. He is best known from his biographies of artists (Vite de' più eccellenti architetti, pittori, e scultori italiani, 1550; enlarged 1568).

Vasconcelos (vás.kón.sá'los). Joaquim Pereira Teixeira de. See Pascoais, Teixeira de.

Vasconcelos (vás.kón.sá'los; Spanish, bás-). or Vasconcelos Calderón (káld.rón'). José. b. at Oaxaca, Mexico, 1882-. Mexican writer and educator. Author of La Raza cósmica (1925), Indología (1927; philosophical), Bolivarismo y Monroismo (1934), Ulises Criollo (1935; autobiographical), and others.

Vascones (vás.kón'ez). People which dwell in the N part of ancient Spain, the predecessors of the present Basques. They were subjugated by Augustus. When the Roman Empire disintegrated, they became subject to the Visigoths, but freed themselves at the end of the 6th century, at which time they migrated northward and settled Vasconia, now Gascony.

Vascongadas (bás.kóng.gá'ñas). Spanish name of the Basque Provinces.

Vasconia (vás.kón'ia). Latin name of Gascony.

Vasey (vá'zi). George. b. near Scarborough, England, Feb. 28, 1822; d. at Washington, D.C., March 4, 1893. American botanist. He practiced medicine at Dexter, N.Y., and at Elgin and Ringwood, Ill., where he carried out botanical studies. He was a botanist with the Colorado expedition led by Major John Wesley Powell in 1868, and was named (1872) botanist of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and placed at the head of the U.S. National Herbarium at Washington, D.C.

Vashekeli (vá.shé.ká'le). See O. Kung.

Vashka (vásh'ka). River in S.W. U.S.S.R. It flows generally N and joins the Mezen ab. 100 mi. from its mouth in the White Sea. Length, ab. 200 mi.

Vashti (vásh'ti). In the Bible, the proud queen of Ahasuerus, mentioned in the Book of Esther.

Vasili I or II (vá.sé'lyé). [Also, Basil.] Grand duke of Moscow (1389-1425); son of Demetrius Donskoi and grandson of Ivan II. During his reign Tamerlane defeated the Mongols.

Vasili II or III. [Also: Basil; called "the Blind."; Grand duke of Moscow (1425-62); son of Vasili I. He fought a series of civil wars against Yuri, son of Demetrius Donskoi and Vasili's uncle, and against Yuri's sons. He extended his lands and fought against the Mongols. During his reign the Russian Church broke definitely with Constantinople because of the Eastern Church's acceptance of the Filioque in the creed; Moscow now became the seat of the Orthodox Church.

Vasili III or IV. [Also, Basil.] Grand duke of Moscow (1505-55); son of Ivan III. He completed his father's consolidation of the territory from the White Sea to the Ukraine and from the Dnieper to the Urals by annexing Pskov (1510), Smolensk (1514), Ryazan (1517), and Novgorod. He was succeeded by his son Ivan IV (Ivan the Terrible).

Vasili IV or V. [Also, Vasili (or Basil) Shuisky (shó'i.ski).] Czar of Russia (1606-10). He led a group of boyars who overthrew the false Demetrius and established him on the throne. He was deposed in 1610 by a party favoring the Poles as against Vasili's Swedish allies.

Vasili (vá.zé'le). Comte Paul. Pseudonym of Adam, Juliette.

Vasilievsky (vá.sé.lyef'ski). Aleksandr Mikhailovich. b. 1897-. Russian soldier. During World War I he was a member of a Cossack regiment fighting in Caucasia and on the Eastern Front, and later joined the Red Army. In 1942 he was chief of the Red Army general staff, vice-chairman of the department of defense; as commander on the front at Voronezh, NW of Stalingrad on the Don, he prevented (1942) the Germans from breaking through. In 1944 he commanded the mopping-up operations in the Crimea and in 1945 led the Russian armies into Manchuria when the U.S.S.R. declared war on Japan. He became commander of the Russian forces in the Far East (1946) and served as chief of staff of the combined armed forces (1946). He was deputy minister of the armed forces (1947-49) and in 1949 became minister of the armed forces of the U.S.S.R.

Vaslui (vá.sé'lyé). Town in NE Rumania, in Moldavia, ab. 38 mi. S of Iasi; trade center, 13,738 (1948).

Vásquez de Ayllón (bás'keth dá'ilyon'), Lucas. See Ayllón, Lucas Vásquez de.

Vásquez de Coronado (dá.kó.ró.ná'thó), Juan. See Coronado, Juan Vásquez de.

Vassar (vás'ar). Village in E Michigan, near Saginaw, in Tuscola County. 2,530 (1950).

Vassar, Matthew. b. in Norfolk, England, April 29, 1792; d. at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., June 23, 1868. American philanthropist, founder of Vassar College. A wealthy Poughkeepsie brewer, he obtained a charter (1861) for the college, which opened in 1865; he endowed it finally with some 800,000 dollars.

Vassy (vá.sé). See Wassy.

Västerås (vé.stér.ós'). City in S Sweden, capital of the län (county) of Västermanland, situated on Lake Mälär, ab. 57 mi. NW of Stockholm. It has a shipyard, and manufactures of electrical equipment and supplies, nonferrous metal products, and household utensils. There is a Gothic cathedral of the 13th century with additions of the 17th century, and a castle of the 14th century. Many Swedish diets were held at Västerås in former centuries. 59,990 (1955).

Västerbotten (ves'tér.bót'en). Län (county) in N Sweden, situated on the Gulf of Bothnia. Capital, Umeå; area, 22,339 sq. mi.; pop. 231,736 (1953).

Västerdalälven (ves'tér.däl'el'ven). See under Dal.

Västernorrland (ves'tér.nór'länd). [Also: Westernorrland.] Län (county) in N Sweden. Capital, Härnösand; area, 9,925 sq. mi.; pop. 282,562 (1950).

Västervik (ves'tér.vík). Town and seaport in S Sweden, in the län (county) of Kalmar, situated on the Baltic Sea, ab. 73 mi. N of Kalmar. It has a shipyard, manufactures of machinery and matches, and stone quarries. 15,124 (1949).

Västmanland (vest'män.länd). Län (county) in S Sweden. Capital, Västerås; area, 2,611 sq. mi.; pop. 199,145 (1955).

Vasto (väs'tō). [Ancient name, Histonium.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Abruzzi e Molise, in the province of Chieti, situated near the Adriatic Sea; agricultural commune. 18,401 (1936).

Vasu (väs'ō). Title of the Hindu god, Vishnu, conceived as the immanent soul of the universe.

Vasuki (väs'ū.kē). One of the three serpent kings of Hindu mythology and legend.

Vatatzes (va.ta'tsez), Joannes (or John) III. See John III (of the Byzantine Empire).

Vatē (vā.tā). See Efatē.

Vatea (vā.tā'ā). See under Atea.

Väterländische Chronik (fä'tér.len.dī.shē krō'nīk). See Deutsche Chronik.

Vathek (vath'ek). Oriental romance by William Beckford, published in 1787. Its title is taken from the name of the hero. It was written in French; and the English translation was not by the author, but by a person (actually his friend Samuel Henley) whom he declared to be a stranger. This translation was published anonymously in 1786, before the French original.

Vathy or Vathi (vā.thē'). [Also, Limnē Vatheos.] Town in S Greece, capital of the nomos (department) of Samos, situated on the NE coast of the island of Samos; seaport. 7,211 (1940).

Vati (vā'tē). See Efatē.

Vatican City (vat'ī.kān). City-state, an enclave in Rome, Italy, whose ruler is the Pope (bishop of Rome and chief of the Roman Catholic hierarchy). The state (established by the Lateran Treaty of Feb. 11, 1929, between the Italian government and the Papal See, which ended a quarrel going back to 1870, when Italy absorbed the States of the Church) comprises 108.7 acres adjoining and including the Vatican Palace; several places outside Vatican City itself, such as Castel Gandolfo and a number of Roman churches, are administered by Vatican City. The head of the civil government is a governor. The Vatican state is fully independent and exchanges diplomatic representatives with other governments. 940 (1947).

Vatican Council. Twentieth ecumenical council, which met (Dec. 8, 1869) in the Vatican Palace, and declared belief in the infallibility of the Pope, when speaking ex cathedra, to be a dogma of the church. It was closed Oct. 20, 1870, owing to the occupation of Rome by Victor Emmanuel II.

Vatican Fragments. [Latin, Fragmenta Vaticana.] Collection of legal documents comprising parts of a summary of rules of law as extracted from the writings of jurists and from several imperial constitutions from 163 to 372 A.D., discovered by the librarian of the Vatican, and first published at Rome in 1823.

Vatican Hill. [Latin, Mons Vaticanus.] Hill in Rome, on the right bank of the Tiber River, opposite the Pincian Hill. On it stand Saint Peter's and the Vatican Palace.

Vaticano (vā.tē.kā'nō). Cape. [Italian, Capo Vaticano.] Headland on the W coast of Calabria, Italy.

Vatican Palace (vat'ī.kān). Palace at Rome, probably attached to the Basilica of Saint Peter under Constantine, remodeled and enlarged at intervals, and the chief residence of the Pope since the return of the papacy from Avignon in 1377. It is a vast congeries of constructions (most of them later than 1500), and includes, besides the papal apartments and ecclesiastical offices, the famous museums (founded by Pope Julius II), library, and archives. The space occupied is 1,151 by 767 ft.; there are over 200 staircases, 20 courts, and some 11,000 rooms, halls, chapels, and the like. It contains the celebrated Sistine Chapel, the stanz, or chambers, painted by Raphael, and the famous loggie, or galleries, with Raphael's graceful arabesques and paintings by him and other artists.

Vatke (fāt'kē), Johann Karl Wilhelm. b. at Behndorf, near Magdeburg, Germany, March 14, 1806; d. at Berlin, April 19, 1882. German Protestant theologian and philosopher.

Vatna Jökull or Vatnajökull (vāt'nä.yē.kùl). See under Iceland.

Vatonga (vā.tóng'gū). See Tonga.

Vatonga of Inhambane (in.hām.bā'nā). See Khoka.

Vatswa (vā.tswā'). See Tswa.

Vattel (vā.tel), Emerich de. b. at Couvet, Neuchâtel, Switzerland, Aug. 25, 1714; d. there, Dec. 20, 1767. Swiss publicist, in the diplomatic and political service of Saxony. He was Saxon ambassador at Bern. His Law of Nations (in full, Droit des gens, ou principes de la loi naturelle appliqués à la conduite et aux affaires des nations et des souverains, 1758) is famous as containing one of the first statements of the principle of the balance of power as a controlling influence over ambitious states.

Vättern (vet'ern) Lake. [Also: Vätter (vet'er), Vetter, Wetter.] Lake in Sweden, situated E and SE of Lake Vänern. Its outlet is by the Motala to the Baltic. It communicates with Lake Vänern by the Göta Canal. Elevation, ab. 288 ft.; length, ab. 80 mi.; area, 733 sq. mi.

Vau (vō), Louis Le. See Le Vau, Louis.

Vauban (vō.bän), Marquis Sébastien Le Prestre de. b. near Saulieu, Burgundy, May 15, 1633; d. at Paris, March 30, 1707. French military engineer and marshal, founder of the first engineering corps and builder of numerous fortifications in the reign of Louis XIV. He served a short time with the Spaniards under Condé in the Fronde, and afterward entered the French service. He distinguished himself as an engineer at the capture of Ste-Menehould in 1653, and was commissioned a royal engineer in 1655. Between that date and the peace of the Pyrenees in 1659 he conducted the sieges of Gravelines, Ypres, and Oudenarde. He besieged Lille, Maestricht, Valenciennes, Cambrai, Luxemburg, Mons, and Namur in succeeding wars, and was made commissary general of fortifications in 1677, and marshal of France in 1703. He constructed and improved many fortresses on the frontiers and elsewhere in France, and wrote on political economy and on engineering.

Vaubernier (vō.ber.nyā), Marie Jeanne Gomard de. See du Barry, Comtesse.

Vaucaire (vō.ker), Maurice. b. at Versailles, France, 1865; d. at Paris, 1918. French writer, now remembered for one very successful play, La Carrosse du Saint-Sacrement (1893). Among his other plays were Les Giroiettes (1899) and Le Fils surnaturel (1903).

Vaucelles (vō.sél). Hamlet in the department of Nord, France, near Cambrai. A truce between Henry II of France and the emperor Charles V was signed here in 1556.

Vauchamps (vō.shän). Village in the department of Marne, France, ab. 32 mi. SW of Reims. It was the scene of successes of the French under Marmont against the Prussians under Blücher, Feb. 14, 1814.

Vaucluse (vō.klüz). Department in S France, bounded by Drôme on the N, Basses-Alpes on the E, Bouches-du-Rhône (separated by the Durance River) on the S, and Gard (separated by the Rhone) on the W. The plains of the Rhone are in the W and the mountains of Ventoux and Lubéron in the E. The department was formed from Orange, Venaissin, Avignon, and parts of Provence. Peaches, apricots, strawberries, olives, and other fruits are produced, also wines, flowers (particularly lavender) for use in perfume, and honey. There are numerous olive presses, olive and fruit canneries, candy factories, distilleries, flour mills, and other food industries. The silk, paper, and metal industries are also well developed.

Capital, Avignon; area, 1,381 sq. mi.; pop. 249,838 (1946).

Vaucluse. Village in the department of Vaucluse, France, ab. 18 mi. E of Avignon; celebrated for the fountain of Vaucluse and as the dwelling place of Petrarch.

Vaucouleurs (vô.kô.lër). Town in the department of Meuse, France, situated on the Meuse River ab. 26 mi. SW of Nancy. It was the starting point of Joan of Arc on her military career.

Vaud (vô). [German, Waadt.] Canton of Switzerland, bounded by France on the W and NW, Neuchâtel, the Lake of Neuchâtel, and Fribourg on the N, Fribourg and Bern on the E, and Valais, the Lake of Geneva, and Geneva on the S. It is traversed by the Jura and by the Alps in the SE. It has 16 members in the National Council. The prevailing language is French, and the prevailing religion Protestant. Vaud came under Roman rule in 58 B.C. through the victory of Caesar at Bibracte, and passed to the Burgundians in the 5th century, and to the Franks in 534. The larger part of it was acquired by Savoy in 1265, and was conquered by Bern (1475-76, 1536, and 1555) and ruled as a subject land. An unsuccessful attempt to revolt was made in 1723. By French intervention it was constituted the Lemanic Republic in 1798, and in the same year made a canton of the Helvetic Republic. On the restoration of the Swiss Confederation in 1803, it remained a canton. Capital, Lausanne; area, 1,239 sq. mi.; pop. 377,553 (1950).

Vaudier (vô.dyä). French name of Valdiéri.

Vaudois (vô.dwä) or Vaudois des Alpes (dä zälp). French names of the Waldenses.

Vaudoucourt (vô.dô.kôr), Guillaume de. b. at Vienna, Sept. 24, 1772; d. at Passy, near Paris, May 2, 1845. French general and military writer.

Vaudreuil (vô.drëv'; Anglicized, vô.droi'), Marquis de. [Title of Philippe de Rigaud.] b. near Castelnau, France, c1640; d. at Quebec, Canada, Oct. 11, 1725. French soldier and public official in Canada. He was for many years commander of the French forces in Canada, and in 1703 became governor of that province.

Vaudreuil, Marquis de. [Title of Louis Philippe de Rigaud.] b. at Rochefort, France, Oct. 28, 1724; d. at Paris, Dec. 14, 1802. French naval commander; grandson of Philippe de Rigaud, Marquis de Vaudreuil. He served in various actions in the war with Great Britain (1778-83), commanding a division of Comte de Grasse's fleet at Yorktown in 1781. He protected the royal family against the mob at Versailles during the night of Oct. 5-6, 1789. He emigrated (1791) to England, but returned to Paris in 1800, and was granted a pension on the retired list by Napoleon.

Vaudreuil-Cavagnal (vô.drëv'.kâ.vâ.nyäl), Marquis de. [Title of Pierre François de Rigaud.] b. at Quebec, Canada, 1698; d. at Paris, Oct. 20, 1765. French colonial governor; son of Philippe de Rigaud, Marquis de Vaudreuil. He became governor of Canada in 1755, and capitulated to the English in 1760, after the defeat of Louis Joseph de Montcalm, commander of the French troops in Canada, by James Wolfe in the preceding year.

Vaughan (vôn), Benjamin. b. in Jamaica, April 19, 1717; d. Dec. 8, 1835. English politician, noted for his liberal views. As an advocate of independence for the American colonies, and as a friend of Benjamin Franklin, he took an active though unofficial part in negotiations for recognition of "the United States of America." He sided with the Irish patriots and the French revolutionists, and eventually fled to France. About 1798 he went to America and settled at Hallowell, Me.

Vaughan, Hannah. Maiden name of Pritchard, Hannah.

Vaughan, Henry. [Known as "the Silurist."] b. at Newton-by-Usk, Brecknockshire, Wales, April 17, 1822; d. at Seethrog, Wales, April 23, 1895. Welsh metaphysical poet. His epithet was derived from the Silures, the inhabitants of South Wales in ancient times. He wrote Poems (1846), Olor Iscanus (1851), and Silur Scintillans (1850-55). His mystical poetry, far more than his secular poems, make him important. Such poems as The Retreat, The World, and the one beginning "They are all gone into the world of light" place him in the first rank of the followers of George Herbert and influenced such later poets as William Wordsworth.

Vaughan, Henry. Original name of Halford, Sir Henry. Vaughan, Hilda. [Married name, Morgan.] b. at Bultih, Brecknockshire, Wales, 1892-. Welsh novelist; wife (married 1923) of Charles L. Morgan. Author of novels of Welsh life and character and stories of theatrical life, including The Battle to the Weak (1925), Here Are Lovers (1926), The Invader (1928), Her Father's House (1930), The Soldier and the Gentlewoman (1932; dramatized 1933), A Thing of Nought (1935), The Curtain Rises (1935), Harvest Home (1937), She, Too, Was Young (1938; a play), and Fair Woman (1942).

Vaughan, Robert. b. 1795; d. at Torquay, England, June 15, 1863. English clergyman and historian. In 1845 he founded the British Quarterly Review, of which he remained editor for 20 years. He wrote Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell (1838), History of England under the House of Stuart (1840), Revolutions in England (1859-63), and others.

Vaughan, William. b. at Golden Grove, Carmarthenshire, Wales, 1577; d. there, in August, 1641. English traveler and poet. He purchased (1616) land in Newfoundland, settling it with colonists, and visiting it in 1622 and later. Author of The Spirit of Detraction (1611), defending himself against charges in connection with his wife's death by lightning, a Latin poem (1625) celebrating the marriage of Charles I to Henrietta Maria, The Golden Fleece (1626), a combination of prose and poetry, The Newlanders Cure (1630), dealing with diseases peculiar to Newfoundland, The Church Militant (1640), and The Soul's Exercise (1641).

Vaughan Williams (vil'yamz), Ralph. b. at Down Ampney, Gloucestershire, England, Oct. 12, 1872-. English composer, professor at the Royal College of Music. Among his compositions are six symphonies, including A London Symphony (1914) and Sea Symphony; the suite Flos Campi (1925), The Lark Ascending (1921), and Five Variants on Dives; the stage works Sir John in Love (1929) and Hugh the Drover; the choral works Dona Nobis Pacem (1936) and Flourish for a Coronation (1937); a violin concerto, a concerto for two pianos, a Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; and chamber music and songs.

Vaughn (vou), Júlio César Ribeiro. See Ribeiro, Júlio César.

Vaulion (vô.lyôn), Dent de. See Dent de Vaulion.

Vaupés (vou.päs'; Spanish, bou-). Commissary in E Colombia. Capital, Mitá; area, 57,857 sq. mi.; pop. 7,900 (est. 1950).

Vaupés River. See Vaupés.

Vaurum (vôr'um). Latin name of Lavaur.

Vauvargues (vô.vâng), Marquis de. [Title of Luc de Clapiers.] b. at Aix, France, Aug. 8, 1715; d. at Paris, March 9, 1747. French moralist. He is best known for his Introduction à la connaissance de l'esprit humain (1748), to which were added some Réflexions et Maximes; the latter are often contrasted with those of La Rochefoucauld.

Vaux (vöks), Calvert. b. at London, Dec. 20, 1824; d. at Bensonhurst, N.Y., Nov. 19, 1895. American landscape architect. In connection with Frederick L. Olmsted he designed the plans of Central Park, in New York City, the state reservation at Niagara Falls, and numerous other parks. His design for Prospect Park, Brooklyn, was accepted in 1865.

Vaux (vô), La. See Lavaux.

Vaux (vöks), Roberts. b. at Philadelphia, Jan. 21, 1786; d. there, Jan. 7, 1836. American philanthropist. He helped plan the Eastern Penitentiary, was influential in the founding (1826) of a house of refuge for juvenile delinquents, and played an important role in the establishment of the Frankford Asylum for the Insane at Philadelphia. He also aided in establishing an institution for the schooling of the blind and another for the instruction of the deaf and dumb.

Vaux (vöks, vöks, vöz), Thomas. [Title, 2nd Baron Vaux of Harrowden.] b. 1510; d. in October, 1556. English lyric poet and courtier. Some of his poems appear in Tottel's Miscellany (1557) and the Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576); among them are The Aged Lover Renounceth Love; A Lover, Disdained, Complameth; Of a Contented Mind, and No Pleasure without Some Pain.

Vauxhall (voks'hól', voks'ól'). Ward of Lambeth metropolitan borough, in SW London, in the County of London, ab. 2 mi. SW of Waterloo Station, 29,056 (1931).

Vauxhall Gardens. [Original name, Foukes Hall; later, Fox Hall.] Once popular and fashionable London resort, formerly situated on the Thames above Lambeth. The gardens were laid out in 1661, and were at first known as the New Spring Gardens at Fox Hall to distinguish them from the Old Spring Gardens at Whitehall. They were finally closed in 1859, and the site was built over.

Växjö (vek'shé''). See also Kronoberg.

Växjö. [Also, Wexjö.] Town in S Sweden, capital of the län (county) of Kronoberg, NW of Kalmar. It has machinery and lumber industries, and is the seat of a Lutheran bishopric. The cathedral dates from the 13th century (according to tradition, however, it was founded by an English missionary in the 11th century). 20,104 (1950).

Vayu (vä'yü). In Hindu mythology, a god of wind, rain, and air. He was one of the three great gods of the Vedas (with Agni, fire, and Surya, sun). He is depicted riding on an antelope.

Vazov (vä'züf), Ivan Minchov. [Also, Ivan Minchoff Vazoff.] b. at Sopot, Bulgaria, June 27, 1850; d. at Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 22, 1921. Bulgarian nationalist poet, novelist, and dramatist. In his student days, he was inspired by the example of the French writers Hugo and Lamartine to turn to literature as a weapon in the national cause. His Epopëya na zbraveniye (Epic to the Forgiven, 1879) had a powerful appeal to Bulgarian patriots. Taking an active part in political affairs, he found it necessary to flee the country in 1886, but in 1889 he returned and, settling at Sofia, became the first Bulgarian to make his living as a professional man of letters. He achieved international fame with his novel Pod igolo (1893), which was translated into many languages, the English version, by Edmund Gosse, bearing the title Under the Yoke. He was elected to the national assembly in 1895, and was for a brief term (1897-99) minister of education. His work as a playwright included historical dramas such as Borislav (1909) and Ivaylo (1911), as well as comedies.

Vázquez (bäth'keth), José de Cadalso. See Cadalso Vázquez, José de.

Ve (vē). See under Vile.

Vealtown (vēl'toun). Original name of Bernardsville, N.J.

Véber (vä'ber), Jean. b. at Paris, Feb. 13, 1864; d. there, Nov. 28, 1928. French genre painter, engraver, and caricaturist, noted for his caricatures published in Rire and in the Assiette au Beurre; brother of Pierre Véber. He first exhibited at the Salon in 1890.

Véber, Pierre. b. at Paris, 1869—. French dramatist; brother of Jean Véber. Author of numerous plays, including L'Ami de la maison (1899), L'Affaire Champignon (1899), and Julien n'est pas ingrat (1913).

Veblen (veb'len), Oswald. b. at Decorah, Iowa, June 24, 1830—. American mathematician, who contributed to projective geometry, the foundations of geometry, analysis situs, differential invariants, and the theory of spinors. He taught at Princeton (1905-32) and the Institute for Advanced Study (1932 et seq.). His books include Introduction to Infinitesimal Analysis (with N. J. Lennes, 1907), Projective Geometry (with J. W. Young, 2 vols., 1910-18) Invariants of Quadratic Differential Forms (1927), Analysis situs (1931), The Foundations of Differential Geometry (with J. H. C. Whitehead, 1932), and coauthor of Geometry of Complex Domains (1936).

Veblen, Thorstein Bunde. b. in Manitowoc County, Wis., July 30, 1857; d. at Palo Alto, Calif., Aug. 3, 1929. American economist and social scientist. He grew up in Norwegian-American rural communities, at that time rather isolated from the main currents of American life, a circumstance which later gave him a degree of detachment without which his surveys of American society probably would have lacked their characteristic irony. After graduating from Carleton College at Northfield, Minn., he did postgraduate work at Johns Hopkins and, being especially interested in social theory and attracted by the fame of William Graham Sumner, at Yale. But even with a Ph.D. from Yale (1884), he could find no academic employment. For seven years he struggled with poverty on a farm, until in 1891 he obtained a fellowship at Cornell University. The next year he was appointed to a teaching fellowship at the University of Chicago, with which institution he remained associated for 12 years, becoming an assistant professor in 1900. There he edited (1896-1905) the university's Journal of Political Economy. Veblen had married, and in 1904 marital trouble brought such notoriety that his position at Chicago became untenable. In 1906 he was appointed an associate professor at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif.; in 1909 he lost this post. In 1911 he was given a professorial chair at the University of Missouri, which he held until, in 1918, he moved to New York City, becoming one of the editors of The Dial and, in the following year, a member of the faculty of the New School for Social Research. During his tenure at Chicago his first book, The Theory of the Leisure Class, was published (1899), and the scholar previously known only to a few readers of learned journals became famous overnight, winning a large popular audience but at the same time incurring considerable hostility among academic economists and sociologists. In this work, marshaling a vast array of learning, and employing a mocking irony new to such serious sciences as economics and sociology, Veblen accomplished a psychological analysis of the motivations and values of the business class in an acquisitive society, centering his argument about the addiction of this class to what he called "conspicuous waste." In contrast with the acquisitive motivation, he praised, in another notable book, The Instinct of Workmanship and the State of the Industrial Arts (1914), the inclination to good work which he found native to man, but which he found to be in all eras perverted by pecuniary motives and predatory practices. The Theory of Business Enterprise (1904) examined modern capitalism. His own irony was matched by the fate of his Imperial Germany and the Industrial Revolution (1915), which maintained that Germany's remarkable industrial expansion was due to the fact that capitalism favored, and was favored by, a semifeudal, militaristic regime; this book was simultaneously banned by the post office as subversive and used by the Committee on Public Information as pro-Allied propaganda. After his removal to New York, Veblen's thought grew more radical, and his attacks upon the existing economic social order more virulent. In The Higher Learning in America (1919) he criticized control of American universities by businessmen; in The Vested Interests and the State of the Industrial Arts (1919) he made a savage attack upon the conduct of business primarily for profit rather than production. The Engineers and the Price System (1921) suggested revolution by organization of technicians who would take over industry and run it for production rather than profits. His last book, Absentee Ownership and Business Enterprise in Recent Times, was published in 1923. Thereafter he wrote little. He was much lionized; but, still shy and unhappy, in 1926 he retired to Palo Alto; his few remaining years knew a measure of contentment, but before his death he decreed that his ashes should be given to the waters of the Pacific, and that no memorial should ever be raised to him and no biography written.

Vecchi (vek'kē), Orazio. b. probably at Modena, Italy, c1550; d. there, Feb. 19, 1605. Italian madrigalist, composer notably of L'Amfiparnasso, commedia harmonica (1594), a stage work in madrigals. He also wrote motets, hymns, and masses.

Vecchi di Val Cismon (vek'kē dē vāl chēz.mōn'). Count Cesare Maria de. See De Vecchi di Val Cismon, Count Cesare Maria.

Vecchio (vek'kyō), Il. See Amato, Giovanni Antonio d'.

Vecchio, Palma. See Palma, Jacopo (or Giacomo).

Vecelli (vā.chel'lē) or Vecellio (vā.chel'lyō), Tiziano. Italian name of Titian.

Vecht (vecht). [Also, Vechte (fēch'tē).] Arm of the Rhine which leaves it at Utrecht, Netherlands, and flows into the IJsselmeer E of Amsterdam; now canalized.

Vechna (fēch'tā). Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the free state of Oldenburg, ab. 35 mi. SW of Bremen:

lumber and grain trade; canneries; metal, machine, and shoe industries. 13,097 (1950).

Veck (vek), Toby. [Called "Trotty."] In Charles Dickens's The Chimes, a porter and runner of errands.

Vecses (ve'chsh). Town in N central Hungary, SE of Budapest, on the railroad line from Budapest to Cegléd. 13,509 (1948).

Vecta (vek'ta) or Vectis (vek'tis). Latin names of Wight, Isle of.

Vedanta (vā.dān'ta, vē.dan'ta). Certain of the Upanishads, appended to and commenting on the Vedas; also, a group of six philosophical systems seeking to propound the nature of reality; also, one of these systems. The six systems are called Darshanas (insights) and are in turn divided into three categories: (1) of faith, which explains the nature of the cosmos; (2) of understanding, which is a logical acceptance of the laws of nature plus yoga, the system of the practical application of these laws; (3) of realization, which seeks to effect the identification of the individual with reality. Vedanta specifically belongs in the category of realization, is the most famous of the six Hindu philosophic systems, and has become the loose term for the whole basic philosophy of Hinduism. It was founded by Badarayana sometime between c500 and 200 B.C. of the three schools into which it developed, the monistic school of interpretation of the sage Shankara (c800 A.D.) is the best known and the most deeply rooted in Hindu thought. It presents Brahma as creator of the cosmos, at once transcendent and immanent. Transcendence consists of the energizing quality which supports all creation plus Pralaya, the inevitable universal dissolution of all matter; immanence consists of pure spirit plus Maya, or that quality which gives matter its semblance of reality. Self-knowledge is the only road whereby the individual may attain understanding of the soul of the world, which is Brahma, and, through this understanding, release from material existence. The second school of interpretation came about 300 years later, when the philosopher Ramanuja (c1017) qualified Shankara's passionate monism into a modified duality. The third (that of Madva, c1199) posits complete duality, i.e., the belief in matter and spirit as separate entities. Authoritative works on the Vedanta are Max Müller's Vedanta Philosophy (1894) and his Six Systems of Indian Philosophy (1899), U. S. Urquhart's The Vedanta and Modern Thought (1928), and T. Bernhard's Hindu Philosophy (1947).

Vedas (vā'daz, vē'-). The books containing the sacred writings of Hinduism. There are four principal collections of hymns, prayers, and ritualistic instructions, setting forth the mythology, the religious philosophy, and the holy lore of Hinduism. And although the total Vedas comprise some 100 books in all, including commentaries, glosses, and appendices, these basic four are the Rig-Veda, the Sama-Veda, the Yajur-Veda, and the Atharva-Veda.

V-E Day. Day of Allied victory in Europe in World War II, May 8, 1945. On this day Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Admiral H. G. Friedberg, and General Stumpf, as chiefs of the German armed forces, signed the unconditional surrender of all German forces on land, at sea, and in the air, at the headquarters of Marshal G. K. Zhukov at Berlin. The deputy supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, British Air Marshal A. W. Tedder, signed for the Western powers. All hostilities ceased at midnight of May 8-9, although the Germans had already surrendered (May 7) at General Eisenhower's headquarters at Reims.

Vedda (ved'da). [Also, Veddah.] Ancient aboriginal people of Ceylon, now surviving only in a few isolated groups in the hills. Ethnically they have been classified as a group intermediary between the Australian aborigines and the Dravidians.

Vedder (ved'der), Elihu. b. at New York, Feb. 26, 1836; d. at Rome, Jan. 29, 1923. American genre and figure painter, illustrator, and writer. He was elected a member of the National Academy of Design in 1865. Among his best-known works are The Lair of the Sea-Serpent, The Roc's Egg, The Lost Nereid, The Pleiades, The Cumaei Sybil, Young Marsyas, The Questioner of the Sphinx, and The Monk upon the Gloomy Path. As a muralist he is best known for his five symbolic lunettes entitled Good and Bad Government, in the Library of Congress at Washington. He was perhaps most widely known for his admirable illustrations to Edward Fitzgerald's redaction of The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. Vedder is represented in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York, the Brooklyn Museum, the Boston Museum, and the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh. He was the author of Digressions of V. (whimsical and discursive commentaries, 1910), Miscellaneous Moods in Verse (1914), and Doubt and Other Things (1923).

Veddoid (ved'oid). [Also: Indo-Australoid, Veddoid (ved'id).] Individual conforming to a physical type characterized by short stature, slender build, brown skin, longish head, wavy, coarse, black hair, and round face with deep-set eyes, thin lips, and receding chin. The Veddoids are sometimes considered to constitute a branch of the Caucasian race. Typical groups of Veddoids are the Vedda of Ceylon, the Bhil and Gond of India, the central Sakai of Malaya, and many of the mountain tribes of Thailand (Siam) and Indochina. A Veddoid strain is observable in some tribes of Indonesia (e.g., Kubu and Batak of Sumatra, Toala of Celebes). A distinction is sometimes drawn between western Veddoids (India and Ceylon) and eastern Veddoids (Indochinese peninsula and Malay Archipelago). Some authorities do not admit a relationship between the two groups and reserve the term Veddoid for the Vedda and other western Veddoids.

Vedelago (vā.dā.lā'gō). Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Treviso, W of Treviso: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 10,969 (1936); of town, 1,244 (1936).

Vedinum (vē'di.num). An ancient name of Udine, city.

Vediovis (vē'di'vō.vis). [Also, Veduis (vē'di'is), Veiovis.] Ancient Roman god, interpreted as an underworld deity and god of the dead. His festival was celebrated on May 21 with sacrifices of a she-goat.

Veen (vān), Maarten van. See Heemskerk, Maarten van.

Veendam (vān.dām'). Town in NE Netherlands, in the province of Groningen, ab. 15 mi. SE of Groningen: trade center of a market-gardening and horticultural district. It also has shipyards, and knitwear and machine factories. 13,799 (1939).

Vega (vē'ga). Fourth brightest star in the sky, magnitude 0.14, in the constellation Lyra; α Lyrae.

Vega (bā'gi). Francisco Antonio Cajigal de la. See Cajigal de la Vega, Francisco Antonio.

Vega, Garcilaso de la. See Garcilaso de la Vega.

Vega, La. See La Vega.

Vega, Lope de. [Full name: Lope Félix de Vega Carpio; often called simply Lope.] b. at Madrid, Nov. 25, 1562; d. there, Aug. 27, 1635. Spanish dramatist and poet. He was educated at the Jesuit college of Madrid and at the University of Alcalá, was in the service of the Bishop of Ávila, and secretary to the Duke of Alva, and was twice married. He was obliged to live away from Madrid for several years on account of a duel. He joined the Spanish Armada in 1588, and returned to Madrid in 1590, and was soon known as a dramatic writer. He had previously, during his exile, written for the theater in Valencia. He was the inventor of a witty character known as the "gracioso," a parody of the heroic character of the play, which passed first to the French and from that to all other modern theaters. He entered the church (c1612), after the death of his second wife, and took (c1614) priest's orders. His plays fall into three classes: the first, called "Comedias de Capa y Espada" (cloak and sword dramas), the second class consisted of "Comedias Heroicas" or "Historiales," and the third of dramas founded on domestic life. He also wrote epics, romances, lyrics, pastorals, and prose novels. The number of works written by him has been placed as high as 1800 plays and 400 autos (of which fewer than 500 survive), besides the various prose and verse works not intended for the stage. He wrote poems on Francis Drake and Mary, Queen of Scots, but it is as the founder of Spanish drama that he is remembered.

Vega Real (vā'gā rā.āl'; Spanish, bā'-), Battle of the. Battle fought on a plain in the N part of Hispaniola, April 25, 1495, between a small force of Spaniards under Christopher and Bartholomew Columbus and the Indians of Caonabo and other chiefs. Las Casas says that the latter numbered 100,000, an evident exaggeration. The Indians were completely defeated.

Vega y Vargas (bā'gā ē bār'gēs), Sebastián Garcilaso de la. See Garcilaso de la Vega y Vargas, Sebastián.

Vehla (ve'lā). Italian name of Krk.

Vehmgericht (fām'ge.rīch.tē). [Also: Vehme, Fehme, Feme.] Tribunals which flourished in Germany, chiefly in Westphalia, in the disordered period of the 14th and 15th centuries. They were apparently descended from the cantonal courts, and at first afforded some protection against arbitrary oppression, as the regular machinery of justice had become demoralized. Later they misused their power, and practically disappeared with the increasing strength of the regular governments. The president of the court was called Freigraf, the justices Freischöffen, and the place of meeting Freistuhl. The sessions were open for the adjudication of civil matters, but secret when persons accused of murder, robbery, heresy, witchcraft, and other crimes, were summoned. Those convicted of serious crimes, or those who refused to appear before the tribunal, were put to death. A recrudescence of the tribunals (then usually called the Fehme), as a sort of "kangaroo court," occurred in Germany after World War I.

Vehse (fā'ze), Karl Eduard. b. at Freiberg, in Saxony, Germany, Dec. 18, 1802; d. at Striesen, near Dresden, Germany, June 18, 1870. German historian. He went to Berlin in 1853, but was arrested for political reasons, imprisoned for six months, and banished from Prussia. He lived thereafter near Basel and in Italy and at Freiberg. His chief work is Geschichte der deutschen Höfe seit der Reformation (1851-58).

Vei (vī). See Vai.

Veidt (fīt), Conrad. b. in Germany, 1893; d. at Hollywood, Calif., April 3, 1943. German stage and screen actor. Trained under Max Reinhardt, he made his debut at the Deutsches Theater at Berlin in 1913. In 1918 he went into motion pictures, appearing in such films as The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari (1919) and Waxworks (1924). In 1926, John Barrymore brought Veidt to Hollywood to play a role in The Beloved Rogue. Next Veidt appeared in a series of English films, notably The Passing of the Third Floor Back (1936). Among his American motion pictures were Blackout (1939), Casablanca (1942), and Above Suspicion (1943).

Veiga (vā'gā), José Augusto Ferreira. See Arneiro, Visconde de.

Veii (vē'tī). In ancient geography, a city in Italy, the most important of the Etruscan League, ab. 11 mi. NW of Rome. It was frequently at war with Rome, especially in behalf of the restoration of Tarquinius Superbus, at the time of the massacre of the Fabii (c476 a.c.). It was besieged and taken by the Romans under the leadership of Camillus in 396 b.c.

Veile (vī'le). See Veile.

Veiled Prophet of Khorassan (kō'ra.san, kō.ra.san'). The. First part of the poem Lalla Rookh by Thomas Moore; so called from the chief character, Mokanna.

Veile Fjord (vī'le). See Veile Fjord.

Veiller (vā'ler), Bayard. b. at Brooklyn, N.Y., Jan. 2, 1869; d. at New York, June 16, 1943. American journalist and playwright, noted as a writer of mystery dramas. He worked as a reporter and later as Chicago correspondent of the New York World. His plays include Within the Law (1912), The Thirteenth Chair (1916), and The Trial of Mary Dugan (1927).

Veintemilla (vān.tā.mē'yā; Spanish, bān-), Ignacio de. b. at Cuenca, Ecuador, 1830; d. July 19, 1909. Ecuadorian general and politician. He led the liberal revolt which overthrew President Antonio Borrero in December, 1876, was proclaimed president with extraordinary powers, and in 1882 became practically dictator with the title of supreme chief. He was deposed (July, 1883) and driven from the country, after several months of civil war.

Veit (fīt), Philipp. b. at Berlin, Feb. 13, 1793; d. at Mainz, Germany, Dec. 18, 1877. German painter; grandson of Moses Mendelssohn. Among his works are Seven Years of Plenty (Rome), Christianity Bringing Civilization to Germany (Frankfort on the Main), Assumption of Mary (Frankfort cathedral), and Egyptian Darkness.

Veitch (vē'ch), John. b. at Peebles, Scotland, Oct. 24, 1820; d. there, Sept. 3, 1894. Scottish philosophical writer and historian, professor of logic, rhetoric, and metaphysics at St. Andrews (1860-64) and of logic and rhetoric at Glasgow (1864-94). He wrote The Tweed, and Other Poems (1875), The Feeling for Nature in Scottish Poetry (1887), Merlin, and Other Poems (1889), The History and Poetry of the Scottish Border (1893), Dualism and Monism (1895), and others.

Veitch, William. b. at Spittal-on-Rule, Roxburghshire, Scotland, 1794; d. at Edinburgh, July 8, 1885. Scottish classical scholar.

Vejer de la Frontera (vā.ner' dā lā frōn.tā'rā; Spanish, bā-). Town in S Spain, in the province of Cádiz, overlooking the Strait of Gibraltar: seaport; orange groves; cattle raising. Pop. 10,110 (1940).

Veile (vī'le). [Also, Veile.] amt (county) in C Jutland, Denmark, bounded by the Great Belt and the anter (counties) of Haderslev, Ribe, Ringkøbing, and Aarhus. Capital, Veile; area, 907 sq. mi.; pop. 189,535 (1945).

Veile. [Also, Veile.] Town in Denmark, in SE Jutland, capital of the amt (county) of Veile, situated on the Veile Fjord, NW of Fredericia: exports of livestock and dairy products; textile and metal industries; brewery. The Church of Saint Nicholas dates from the 13th century. 27,107 (1949).

Veile Fjord. [Also, Veile Fjord.] Arm of the Great Belt which penetrates the E coast of Jutland, Denmark.

Vejovis (vej'ōvis). See Vediovius.

Vela (vā'lā; Spanish, bā'-), Blasco Núñez. See Núñez Vela, Blasco.

Velabrum (ve.lā'brum). Area in ancient Rome, between the Capitoline and Palatine hills and the Tiber River, extending NE to the Forum Romanum. It was a marsh before the construction of the Cloaca Maxima.

Velalcázar (bā.lā.kā'thār), Sebastián de. See Benalcázar, Sebastián de.

Velarde (vā.lār'vā; Spanish, bā-), Ramón López. See López Velarde, Ramón.

Velasco (bā.lās'kō), José Antonio Manso de. See Manso de Velasco, José Antonio.

Velasco (vā.lās'kō; Spanish, bā-), José Miguel. b. at Santa Cruz, Bolivia, c1795; d. there, 1859. Bolivian general and politician. He led a revolt in 1838, was elected president after the fall of Andrés Santa Cruz in 1839 (but was deposed in 1841), and was again president (1847-48) during a period of great disorder.

Velasco, Juan de. b. at Riobamba, in what is now Ecuador, c1727; d. at Verona, Italy, 1819. Jesuit historian.

Velasco, Luis de. [Title, Count of Santiago.] b. at Toledo, Spain, c1500; d. at Mexico City, July 31, 1564. Spanish administrator, second viceroy of Mexico (1550-64). He enforced the "New Laws" (emancipating, it is said, 150,000 Indians), put down revolts of the Chichimecs, and fitted out Miguel López de Legazpe's expedition to the Philippine Islands.

Velasco, Luis de. [Titles: Count of Santiago, Marquis of Salinas.] b. at Madrid, 1539; d. at Seville, Spain, c1617. Spanish administrator; son of Luis de Velasco (c1500-1564). He was viceroy of Mexico (1590-95), viceroy of Peru (1596-1604), and again viceroy of Mexico (1607-11). Subsequently he was president of the Council of the Indies.

Velasco Ibarra (ē.bār'rā), José María. See Ibarra, José María Velasco.

Velásquez (vā.lās'keth; Spanish, bā-), Diego. [Also, Velázquez (vā.lāth'keth; Spanish, bā-).] b. at Cuéllar, Segovia, Spain, c1465; d. at Havana, Cuba, c1523. Spanish soldier and administrator. He went to Hispaniola with Christopher Columbus in 1493, and was prominent in the affairs of that island until 1511, when he was sent by Diego Columbus to conquer Cuba. He had many conflicts with the Indians (whose principal chief, Hatuey, was captured and burned in February, 1512), founded Santiago (1514), Havana (1515), and other towns, and continued to rule the island, which was only nominally subject to the audience (audiencia) of Santo Domingo. He furnished a vessel for the expedition of Francisco de Córdoba, which discovered Yucatán in 1517; fitted out Juan de Grijalva's expedition in 1518; and in 1519 sent Hernando Cortés to conquer Mexico. The latter, as soon as he had left the island, refused obedience to Velásquez, who, in March, 1520, sent Pánfilo de Narváez to arrest him. Narváez was defeated by Cortés, and all subsequent efforts of Velásquez to secure the rich conquests of Mexico for himself ended in failure. His death, it is said, was caused by vexation at his loss.

Velásquez or Velázquez, Diego. [Full name, Diego Rodríguez de Silva y Velásquez.] b. at Seville, Spain (baptized June 6, 1599); d. at Madrid, Aug. 7, 1660. Spanish painter. He was a pupil of Herrera el Viejo and of Pacheco, whose daughter he married. He was patronized by Philip IV, became court painter (c1623), visited Italy (1629-31), and for 18 years painted portraits, landscapes, and historical and genre subjects at Madrid. From 1632 to 1660 he was quartermaster general of the king's household, and he died from over-fatigue in the preparations for the marriage of Louis XIV and the infanta Maria Theresa. Among his principal works in his earlier manner are The Water-Carrier of Seville (Apsley House) and The Adoration of the Shepherds (National Gallery, London). Among his other works are Los Borrachos, Las Meninas, Las Hilanderas, The Expulsion of the Moriscos, and Forge of Vulcan (Madrid Museum); Joseph's Coat (Escorial); Saint John the Evangelist (London); Boar Hunt, Lot and his Daughters, The Surrender of Breda, and a Crucifixion (in the Prado). His famous portraits include those of Philip IV, of which he painted about 40, Innocent X Quevedo (Apsley House), Admiral Pulido Pareja (National Gallery, London), Olivares, Prince Baltasar Carlos, and a series of portraits of jesters and dwarfs. His genius was not fully known till about the beginning of the 19th century, when the royal pictures were collected in the Prado Museum.

Velay (ve.lā). Old territory and county of France, which formed part of Languedoc. Capital, Le Puy. It is comprised in the modern department of Haute-Loire.

Velbert (fel'bért). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 15 mi. NE of Düsseldorf; iron foundries, and metal, electrical, chemical, leather-goods, and paper industries. 41,421 (1950).

Velchev (vel'chef), Damyan. b. at Gabrovo, Bulgaria, 1883—, Bulgarian military and political leader, minister of war (1944-46) in the "Fatherland Front" regime, and minister at Bern (1946-48).

Velde (vel'de), Henry van de. b. at Antwerp, Belgium, April 3, 1863—. Belgian architect and craftsman, noted as a pioneer of functionalism. Beginning as a painter at Antwerp and Paris, he turned (1890) to architecture and applied arts and founded (1892) the Ateliers d'Arts Industriels at Brussels for furniture, metalwork, wallpaper, and the like. He was a founder (1901) of the Academy of Applied Arts at Weimar and its director until 1914; founder (1926) of the Institut Supérieur des Arts Décoratifs at Brussels. Initiator of the "Werkbund Idea," he designed the Folkwang Museum (1901) at Hagen and the Werkbund Theater (1914) at Cologne.

Veldeke (fel'de.ke), Heinrich von. See Heinrich von Veldeke.

Veldes (fel'des). German name of Bled.

Veles (vel'es). [Also: Titov Veles; Turkish, Köprili.] Town in S Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Macedonia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Vardarska, situated on the Vardar River S of Skopje. It is the commercial center of a region which produces tobacco and hemp. It has manufactures of woolen articles. The town contains an old Turkish castle. 14,866 (1948).

Vélez de Guevara (vā'leth dā.gā.bā'rā; Spanish, bā'-), Luis. b. at Écija, Spain, c1579; d. at Madrid, 1644. Spanish dramatist. He was the author of numerous plays, among them Mas pesa el Rey que la Sangre (King before Kin) and Luna da Sierra (Diana of the Mountains). He also wrote the romance El Diablo cojeño (The Lame Devil, 1641), from which Alain Le Sage took Le Diable boiteux.

Vélez-Málaga (vā'leth.mā'lā.gā; Spanish, bā'-). Town in S Spain, in the province of Málaga, ab. 16 mi. NE of Málaga; sugar refineries; exports of raisins and wine. 28,894 (1940).

Vélez Rubio (ró'byō). Town in E Spain, in the province of Almería, ab. 54 mi. W of Murcia. There are iron and lead mines in the vicinity. 10,510 (1940).

Velhagen und Klasings Monatshefte (fel'hā.gen unt klā'zings mō'nāts.hef.te). German illustrated monthly family magazine founded (1886) by Velhagen and Klasing of Bielefeld. After 1911 a foreign edition appeared with the supplement Velhagen und Klasings Export-Anzeiger, which catered to German interests in all parts of the world.

Velho (vê'l'yo). See Pôrto Velho.

Velia (vê'li.a). Locality in ancient Rome, identified as the ridge which extends from the Palatine Hill to the Esquiline Hill, and on which stand the Temple of Venus and Roma and the Arch of Titus. As it now exists, it has been much cut down from its original height.

Veliche (vā'lē'chā). See Huilliche.

Velika Kikinda (vê'lē.kā kē'kin.dā). [Also: Kikinda; Hungarian, Nagykikinda, Nagy-Kikinda.] Town in N Yugoslavia, in the region of Banat, in the autonomous province of Vojvodina, in the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dunavska, situated NE of Novi Sad and SE of Subotica, near the Rumanian border; marketing town for a rich agricultural region. It belonged to Hungary until 1919. Pop. 23,070 (1948).

Veliki Bečkerek (vê'lē.kē bech.ke'rek). A former name of Zrenjanin.

Veliki Kvarner (vê'lē.kē kvār'ner). [Italian, Golfo di Quarnero.] Arm of the Adriatic Sea, SE of Istria.

Velikoruss (vilyē.ko.rūs'). See Great Russian.

Veli Lošinj (vê'lē'lo.shēn'y). See Lošinj, town.

Velino (vā'lē'nō). River in C Italy which joins the Nera above Terni. The Cascade delle Marmore are near its mouth. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Velino, Monte. One of the principal summits of the Apennines, near Tagliacozzo, ab. 50 mi. NE of Rome. Elevation, ab. 8,160 ft.

Velitrae (vê'lī'trē). Latin name of Velletri.

Velius Longus (vê'lius lōng'gus). fl. 2nd century A.D. Latin grammarian. He is the author of a work entitled De orthographia.

Velleius Paterculus (vê'lē.us pa.tēr'kū'lus), Gaius. See Paterculus, Gaius Velleius.

Velletri (vê'lā'trē). [Latin, Velitrae.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Roma, situated on a spur of the Alban Hills, ab. 20 mi. SE of Rome; agricultural trade center. The cathedral is an early Romanesque building reconstructed in the 17th century; the Church of Santa Maria del Trivio is of the same period. The Palazzo Comunale and Palazzo Ginetti were built in the 16th and 17th centuries, in Renaissance style. The town belonged to the States of the Church from the early Middle Ages; in 1849, Garibaldi defeated the Neapolitans here. The town sustained severe damage in World War II (the Palazzo Comunale and Palazzo Ginetti were all but destroyed). Pop. of commune, 31,029 (1936); of town, 22,500 (1936).

Velletri, Giovanni di. Original name of the antipope Benedict X.

Vellore (vê'lōr'). Town in North Arcot district, Madras, Union of India, ab. 87 mi. SW of Madras; trading center. It was the scene of a mutiny of Sepoy troops in 1806. Pop. 71,502 (1941).

Velsen (vel'sen). [Also, Velzen.] City in W Netherlands, in the province of North Holland, situated near the mouth of the North Sea Canal, NW of Amsterdam. It is connected with IJmuiden and Driehuizen-Zandpoort, forming with them one community. It serves as the outer port of Amsterdam, and is the center of herring fisheries in the Netherlands. There are shipyards, and cement, chemical, paper, and rubber factories. A port for German torpedo boats and submarines in World War II, the city and harbor installations suffered considerable damage through aerial bombing. 48,413 (est. 1951).

Velten (fel'ten). Town in NE Germany, in the Land (state) of Brandenburg, Russian Zone, formerly in the province of Brandenburg, Prussia, ab. 17 mi. NW of Berlin; iron and steel works; ceramics and linoleum manufactures. 10,301 (1946).

Velten, Johannes. b. at Halle, Germany, Dec. 27, 1640; d. at Hamburg, Germany, 1692. German actor, sometimes called the father of the German theater. He was generally known in his day as Magister Velten, because of his degree of M.A. from Leipzig (1661). He turned to acting (1666) and soon headed a troupe which played with success in many cities, particularly Dresden, where they finally settled. Velten worked against the degraded conditions of the theater, limited the role of the clown and all impromptu speaking, and presented the masterworks of Molière, Corneille, and Calderón. He introduced the innovation of having women's roles played by women. His reforms died with him and it remained for J. C. Gottsched to take them up again in the following century.

Velzen (vel'zen). See Velsen.

Venable (ven'a.bl), Francis Preston. b. in Prince Edward County, Va., Nov. 17, 1856; d. March 17, 1934. American educator. He served (1881-1900, 1914 et seq.) as professor of chemistry at the University of North Carolina, of which he was also president (1900-14).

Venables (ven'a.blz), George. b. 1821; d. Dec. 30, 1906. English clergyman, canon of Norwich from 1881.

Venabito (vā.nā.thē'tō; Spanish, bā-), Count of. Title of Apodaca, Juan Ruiz de.

Venado Tuerto (vā.nā.thē'twer'tō; Spanish, bā-). Town in Argentina, in Santa Fe province, ab. 95 mi. SW of Rosario; rail junction. 15,947 (1947).

Venaissin (ve.ne.sah), Comtat. See Comtat Venaissin.

Venango (ve.nang'gō). See under Franklin, Pa.

Venaria Reale (vā.nā.rē'ā rā.ā'lā). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Torino, ab. 5 mi. NW of Turin; textile industries. Slight damage was sustained in World War II by buildings of interest to tourists, including the castle chapel and the Villa Regia Mandria. Pop. of commune, 11,744 (1936); of town, 8,395 (1936).

Vence (vāns). [Latin, Vintium.] Town in SE France, in the department of Alpes-Maritimes, between Nice and Grasse. It is an old Provençal town, with a cathedral from the 11th and 13th centuries. 5,685 (1946).

Vencenna (ven.sen'ā). A medieval Latin name of the Vienne River.

Venda (vān'dā). [Also: Bavenda, Bawenda.] Bantu-speaking people of S Africa, living S of the Limpopo River in N Union of South Africa. Their population has been estimated at 150,000 (by H. A. Statt, The Bavenda, 1931). They are divided into numerous subgroups ruled by local chiefs, most of whom claim descent from a legendary king whose ancestors entered their present territory from what is now Southern Rhodesia. Descent and succession are patrilineal. They practice hoe agriculture and cattle herding, with the cattle complex, and their principal food is maize ("mealies").

Vendeans (ven.dē'anz). The partisans of the royalist insurrection against the French Revolution and the republic which was begun in W France in 1793, and the chief seat of which was in Vendée.

Vendée (vān'dā). Department in W France, bounded by Loire-Inférieure and Maine-et-Loire on the N, Deux-Sèvres on the E, Charente-Maritime and the Bay of Biscay on the S, and the Bay of Biscay on the W. It consists of marsh in the W, woodland in the N, and plain in the S. The Vendée corresponds largely to the former Bas-Poitou. It went to the crown of France under Charles VII. It was the center of a royalist insurrection during the French Revolution, the scene of Bourbon disturbances in 1815 and 1832, and remains to this day a region known for royalist and conservative sentiment. The Vendée has resorts with fine beaches on the Atlantic coast, but agriculture is its prime source of income. Grain, potatoes, fruits, and wines are produced, and livestock is raised. Sardine and tuna fisheries are considerable. There are coal mines, flour mills, and distilleries, and woolen and other textile manufactures. Capital, La Roche-sur-Yon; area, 2,690 sq. mi.; pop. 393,787 (1946).

Vendée, War of the. Royalist war against the first French republic which was carried on chiefly in Vendée and in Brittany. It broke out in Vendée in March, 1793, and reached its height in the Vendeau victory at Saumur in June, 1793. The Vendéans under Henri de La Roche-Jacquelin suffered a decisive defeat by the republicans under François Joseph Westermann and François Séverin Marceau at Le Mans, Dec. 12, 1793. The war was continued in Brittany (War of the Chouans), and was suppressed in Vendée by Louis Lazare Hoche in 1796. The chief Vendeau leaders were Jacques Cathelineau, La Rochejacquelein, J. N. Stofflet, and F. A. Charette de la Contrie. The complete submission of the Chouans was effected by Napoleon in 1800.

Vendémiaire (vān.dā.myer). Name adopted in 1793 by the National Convention of the first French republic for the first month of the year. It consisted of 30 days, beginning in the years 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 with September 22; in 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14 with September 23; and in 12 with September 24. The republican calendar came into use on the 14th Vendémiaire, year 2 (Oct. 5, 1793). It was on 13th Vendémiaire, year 4 (Oct. 5, 1795), that Napoleon's "whiff of grapeshot" broke up a Parisian demonstration against the Convention.

Vendôme (vān.dōm). Former countyship of France, made by Francis I a duchy. It afterward gave name to a Bourbon line.

Vendôme. [Latin, Vindocinium.] Town in W France, in the department of Loire-et-Cher, situated on the Loire River ab. 19 mi. NW of Blois. It has textile manufactures and printing establishments. The Church of the Trinity dates from the 12th century. Pop. 10,315 (1946).

Vendôme, Duc de. [Title of César de Bourbon.] b. in Picardy, 1594; d. 1665. French soldier and politician; legitimated son of Henry IV of France and his mistress Gabrielle d'Estrees. He took part in the intrigues against Louis XIII, Richelieu, and Mazarin, was imprisoned, and was forced to surrender his governorship of Brittany to regain his freedom. In 1650 he became governor of Burgundy and fought against the Spaniards.

Vendôme, Duc de. [Title of Louis Joseph de Bourbon; until his father's death, called Duc de Penthièvre.] b. at Paris, July 1, 1654; d. at Viñaroz, in Catalonia, June 15, 1712. French general. He served in the campaigns in the Low Countries, and at the victory of Marsaglia in 1693, commanded in Catalonia, and took Barcelona (Aug. 10, 1697). He commanded against Eugene of Savoy at Luzzara (Aug. 15, 1702), commanded in the Tyrol, Piedmont, and Lombardy, was defeated at Oudenarde (July 11, 1708), and defeated the Austrians in Spain (Dec. 10, 1710).

Vendôme, Column of. See Column of Vendôme.

Vendôme, François de. See Beaufort, François de Vendôme, Duc de.

Vendôme, Philippe de. b. 1655; d. 1727. French general; brother of Louis Joseph de Bourbon, Duc de Vendôme. He was grand prior of the Maltese Order, and fought against the Dutch and Imperialists.

Vendôme, Place. See Place Vendôme.

Vendôme et d'Alençon (ā dā.lān.sōn), Emmanuel, Duc de. See Alençon, Emmanuel, Duc de Vendôme et d'Alençon.

Vendsyssel-Thy (ven'süs.el.tū'). Danish island, which forms the N part of Jutland, located between the North Sea and the Kattegat, and separated from the mainland by Lim Fjord. 261,339 (1945).

Venedey (fā'ne.dī), Jakob. b. at Cologne, Germany, May 24, 1805; d. near Badenweiler, Germany, Feb. 8, 1871. German publicist and historian.

Venedi (ve.ned'i). [Also: Vends (vendz), Veneds (ve.nedz).] Name applied by Tacitus and Pliny to an ancient people living along the right bank of the Vistula. Tacitus classified them as Germans; they are, however, considered to have been the ancestors of the Wends.

Venedig (vā.nā'dīeh). German name of Venice.

Venediger (vā.nā'dī.gēr), Gross. [Also, Grossvenediger.] Peak in the Hohe Tauern, on the frontier of Tyrol and Salzburg provinces, Austria. W. of the Grossglockner: one of the highest summits of the E Alps, famous for its view. Elevation, ab. 12,005 ft.

Vener (ve'nēr), Lake. See Vänern, Lake.

Venerabilis Inceptor (ven.ērā'bīlis.in.sep'tōr). See Ockham or Occam, William of.

Venersborg (ve'nērs.bōrg). See Vänärsborg.

Veneti (ven'ē.ti). Ancient Celtic people of NW Gaul, who carried on a considerable trade with Britain. They were defeated by Caesar in 56 B.C., in a naval engagement. The name survives in the town of Vannes (capital of the department of Morbihan, France).

Veneti. [Also, Heneti.] Ancient people of Italy, dwelling near the head of the Adriatic, beyond the Po and Adige rivers. During the second Punic War the Veneti passed under Roman rule. Their principal towns were Patavium (now Padua) and Ateste (modern Este). Inscriptions from the 5th to 1st centuries B.C. indicate that they spoke an Illyrian language.

Venetia (vē.nē.shā). Ancient Roman province of Italy, included, in general, by the Po River, the Alps, and the Adriatic Sea. It was, afterward ruled by Venice, passed to Austria in 1797, and became finally united to Italy in 1866. As the modern compartimento (region) of Veneto it comprises the provinces of Venezia, Padova, Rovigo, Verona, Vicenza, Treviso, and Belluno.

Venetia. Latin name of Venice.

Venetia Giulia (jōl'yā). See Venezia Giulia.

Venetian Glass Nephew (vē.nē.shān), The. Novel by Elinor Wylie, published in 1925.

Veneto (vē.nā.tō). [Also: Venetia, Venezia; former name, Venezia Euganea.] Compartimento (region) in NE Italy, containing the provinces of Belluno, Padova, Rovigo, Treviso, Venezia, Verona, and Vicenza. It is bounded by Trentino-Alto Adige (formerly Venezia Tridentina) and Austria on the N, Yugoslavia and the Free Territory of Trieste on the E, the Adriatic Sea on the S, and Emilia-Romagna and Lombardy on the SW and W. It includes Alpine scenery in the N and flat marshlands along the coast, but the major part of the region is fertile plain and hill country. The agriculture produces ample harvests of grain, wine, grapes, and fruits; there are also textile, leather, chemical, and food-stuff industries. The region witnessed severe fighting in World War I but was largely spared in World War II. Area, 7,098 sq. mi.; pop. 3,905,064 (1951).

Veneto, Bartolommeo. See Bartolommeo Veneto.

Venezia (vē.nē.tsyā). See also Veneto.

Venezia. [English, Venice.] Province in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto. Capital, Venice; area, ab. 949 sq. mi.; pop. 629,123 (1936).

Venezia. Italian name of Venice.

Venezia Euganea (ā.ō.gā.nā.ā). Former name of Veneto.

Venezia Giulia (jōl'yā). [Also, Venetia Giulia.] Former compartimento (region) in NE Italy, before 1947 containing the provinces of Fiume, Gorizia, Pola, Trieste, and Zara, stretching along the NE coast of the Adriatic Sea. It was incorporated into Italy in 1919. By the peace treaty of Feb. 10, 1947, the entire region except the city of Gorizia and a small territory W of the Isonzo River was either ceded to Yugoslavia or incorporated into the Free Territory of Trieste; the territory remaining in Italy became the new compartimento (region) of Friuli-Venezia Giulia. The area was thus reduced from 3,457 sq. mi. in 1936 to 183 sq. mi. in 1947; pop. 977,257 (1936).

Venezia Tridentina (trē.den.tē.nā). See Trentino-Alto Adige.

Venezuela (ven.ē.zwē'lā, -zō.ē'lā; Spanish, bā.nā.swā'lā). [Official Spanish name, Estados Unidos de Venezuela, meaning "United States of Venezuela."] Republic in N South America, bordered on the N by the Caribbean Sea, on the NE by Trinidad (separated by the Gulf of Paria and the Dragon's Mouth, or Boca de la Sierpe), on the Atlantic Ocean, on the E by British Guiana, on the SE and S by Brazil, and on the SW and W by Colombia. It is composed of 20 states, a federal district, and two territories. By the constitution, executive power is vested in a president elected for a term of four years; there is a Congress composed of a Senate of 40 members (two from each state), and a Chamber of Deputies, elected for four-year terms. Since 1945 there has been suffrage for all persons 18 years of age and above. Capital, Caracas; area, ab. 347,030 sq. mi. (ab. 352,140 sq. mi. including water); pop. 5,090,836, including ab. 105,000 forest Indians (1950).

Terrain and Climate. Venezuela is subdivided into four major terrain divisions: the Maracaibo Lowlands, Cordillera de Venezuela, Llanos, and Guiana Highlands. The Maracaibo Lowlands, bordering the Lake of Maracaibo and the Caribbean, are generally low and level, with extensive swampy areas; the climate is hot and humid. The S part is covered by dense rain forest, but the C and N parts are more open, with less rainfall. The Cordillera de Venezuela is a continuation of the Andes, with the highest peaks reaching 16,400 ft. in the Sierra Nevada de Mérida, near the Colombian border. Farther E the mountains are much lower with several important basins and valleys. More than two thirds of the total population of Venezuela live in these highlands. The climatic conditions depend upon elevation, but between 3,000 and 6,500 ft. elevation the climate is mild, with warm days and cool nights. South of the mountains is a vast grassy lowland, the Llanos, extending from the Colombian border E to the Atlantic, N of the Orinoco River. This region has a hot climate, with a dry season from December to April. South of the Orinoco is a vast region of old rocks, largely a plateau with many hills, ridges, and groups of mountains, culminating in Mount Roraima, on the SE border. This region, the Guiana Highlands, is relatively inaccessible, and has a sparse population of tribal Indians.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Commercial agriculture is concentrated in the highlands of the Cordillera; coffee and cacao are the chief export crops; grains, rice, tobacco, maize, cotton, and other crops are grown chiefly for the home market. Cattle raising is an important industry in the Llanos. By far the most important export of Venezuela is crude petroleum; in 1950 production of this commodity was 78,235,000 metric tons, ab. 15 percent of world production. Venezuela ranks second (after the U.S.) in oil production among the countries of the world. Most of the oil is refined on the Dutch West Indian islands of Aruba and Curaçao. The two chief oil fields are Lagunillas, on the E shore of Lake Maracaibo, and the eastern fields located in the vicinity of Maturín. Iron-ore deposits are being developed (1952) in E Venezuela at El Pao and Cerro Bolívar (both in Bolívar state). The latter deposit, discovered in 1947, is estimated to contain 500 million tons of high-grade iron ore, and shipment (planned to reach 10 million tons yearly) to the U.S. is scheduled to begin in 1954. A railroad is under construction from the mine to the confluence of the Caroní and Orinoco rivers, where a new ore-shipment port, Puerto Ordaz, is to be built. Just across the Caroní is located the port of Palua, which shipped its first ore from El Pao in 1951, after completion of the 35-mile railroad between port and mine, and the establishment of a transshipment port on the Paria Peninsula. Manufacturing in Venezuela consists almost entirely of industries serving the domestic market, and the output of goods is generally much below the demand of the domestic market.

History. The first European to visit the shores of Venezuela was Columbus, who entered the Gulf of Paria in 1498. Spanish settlement of the area began with the establishment of Nueva Toledo in 1520 and Cumandá, the oldest existing town in South America, in 1523. There were no wealthy or prosperous Indian communities to attract the early adventurers, and the settlement of Venezuela proceeded relatively slowly. The commercial house of the Welsers, in Bavaria, held a grant of the country from 1528 to 1546, when a Spanish administrator was sent over. The captaincy-general of Caracas was established in 1731. Venezuela was the cradle of the liberation movement in South America, and the scene of the first insurrection, in 1810, at Caracas. Simón Bolívar assumed leadership of the movement, and erected an independent state, which issued a declaration of independence on July 5, 1811. Spanish military forces arrived in 1812-13, and suppressed the rebellion, driving Bolívar into exile. He persisted in his cause, and returned several times to counterattack, finally winning a decisive victory over Spanish and Royalist forces at Carabobo, on June 24, 1821. Venezuela formed a part of the greater federation of Colombia until 1830, when it seceded from the union, and established itself as an independent republic. The succeeding decades were marked by internal strife and instability and numerous conflicts, of which the most serious was the civil war of 1858-63. Juan Gómez established himself as dictator in 1909, and ruled with a firm hand until his death in 1935. Following the death of Gómez, his palace was torn to pieces by mobs, and a bloodless revolution followed, in which a new constitution was adopted (1936) and national elections were held. In October, 1945, there was another revolution in Caracas, in which the Acción Democrática (Democratic Action) party seized power; in 1947, however, free elections were held, and this party obtained a large majority, with Romulo Gallegos elected as president. In November, 1948, a military junta seized power from the elected government, and President Gallegos went into exile. The leader of this junta was assassinated at Caracas on Nov. 13, 1950. Since that date the dictatorship has retained control. Though politically unstable, the government of Venezuela is noted for its financial stability, based on an enormous revenue from royalties on oil.

Culture. The population of Venezuela is mixed ethnically, with white and Indian strains predominant. Estimates vary, but an approximate ratio is: five percent pure white, five percent predominantly Negro, five percent pure Indian, and 85 percent mestizo, of which the great majority are of mixed white and Indian descent. Spanish is the national language and Roman Catholic the predominant religion. There is free, compulsory primary education, and numerous secondary schools; universities are at Caracas and Mérida.

Venezuela, Gulf of. [Also, Gulf of Maracaibo.] Arm of the Caribbean Sea, N of Lake Maracaibo, NE Venezuela. Length, ab. 75 mi.; width, ab. 150 mi.

Venezuela (vā.nə.wā'lā; Spanish, bā-), Llanos de. See under Llanos.

Venezuela Boundary Controversy (ven.ə.zwē'lā, -zō-ē'lā). Extended dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela over the boundary between the latter country and British Guiana. The frontier demarcation had been in question as early as 1844. The failure of arbitration resulted (1887) in a break in diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Venezuela. Subsequent U.S. efforts to effect a settlement also failed, and on July 20, 1895, U.S. Secretary of State Richard Olney applied the Monroe Doctrine, lending to it a broad interpretation never before invoked. Great Britain's refusal to accept Olney's construction of the doctrine led to an Anglo-American crisis which was allayed when Venezuela and Great Britain agreed to a treaty of arbitration at Washington, D.C., on Feb. 2, 1897. The award was made by a mixed tribunal in 1899.

Vení (vā.nē; Spanish, bā-). See Beni River.

Venice (ven'is). See also Venezia.

Venice. City in SW Illinois, in Madison County; industrial suburb in the urbanized area of St. Louis, Mo.; steel mills, 6,226 (1950).

Venice. [Italian, Venezia; French, Venise; German, Venedig; Latin, Venetia.] City and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, capital of the province of Venezia, situated in an inlet of the Gulf of Venice on 117 small islands, separated from the Adriatic by a number of low, sandy islands. The islands of the city are separated by 150 canals and connected by 378 bridges. Pop of commune, 264,027 (1936); 323,216 (1951); of city, 170,830 (1936).

Industry and Commerce. Venice is the fourth largest seaport of Italy, with harbor facilities both in the city itself and in the suburb of Mestre, on the mainland. The bulk of the sea traffic is with other Adriatic ports, the Near East, and India. Venice is a major tourist center, and the Lido of Venice, a long sandbar separating the Gulf of Venice from the Adriatic Sea, is one of the most fashionable seaside resorts of Europe. There are famous glass manufactures in the suburb of Murano; Venice produces also gold and silver work, leather goods, wax, ware, soap, tobacco, lace, textiles, and macaroni products.

Cultural History. Venice was of the greatest importance in the development of the European stage and the opera from the 15th until the 19th century. It was also the seat of widely renowned schools of painting, particularly in the 15th century (Carpaccio, Conegliano, Bellini), in the 16th and 17th centuries (Giorgione, Pordenone, Titian, Palma Vecchio, Tintoretto), and in the 18th century (Guardi, Tiepolo).

Art and Architecture. Communication in the city is mostly by water (formerly in gondolas, now mainly in motorboats) and the main thoroughfare, the Grand Canal, is traversed by various bridges (the most famous being the Rialto), and lined by numerous palaces and town houses of the Venetian aristocracy, partly in the Gothic and partly in the Renaissance style: Palazzo Bernardo, Foscarini, Cà d'Oro, Dario, Vendramini-Calergi (where Richard Wagner died), Camerlengo, Grimaldi, San Micheli, Labia (murals by Tiepolo); Scuola di San Marco (beautiful relief sculptures on the portals); Scuola di San Rocco (paintings by Tintoretto); the Fondaco dei Turchi and the Fondaco dei Tedeschi served as office buildings and warehouses for merchants from the Near East and from Germany, respectively; the Arsenal, founded 1104, formerly a shipyard, has four marble lions of Greek origin, transported here as war trophies. The center of the city is the Saint Mark's Square (Piazza di San Marco), around which are the Gothic Palace of the Doges (Palazzo Ducale), the former library, now the Great Hall of the Palazzo Reale, the Basilica of Saint Mark (San Marco), the bell tower (campanile), and other buildings. The Palace of the Doges was started in the 14th century, but added to in later centuries, and contains beautiful interior decorations. The Basilica of Saint Mark was erected in 976, rebuilt (1043-73) in its present Byzantine style, with a number of changes in later centuries; it contains the famous four bronze horses and many columns of antique Greek origin, and beautiful mosaics; in 1902 the bell tower collapsed because of the settling of its foundations; it was reconstructed in the years 1903-12. Venice contains also three richly decorated synagogues (baroque style) in the ancient ghetto and an Armenian monastery on the island of San Lazzaro. In World War II buildings of interest to tourists escaped all but very slight damage, caused by the explosion of a German ammunition ship and one hit by a shell.

History. The historical origin of Venice as a city goes back to the destruction of the cities of Aquileia and Padua by Attila in 452 A.D.; people fled then from the mainland to the islands and established a new settlement. From 697 a doge (essentially the same word as "Duke," or "leader"), elected for life, was the head of the republic, sharing the powers of government with the Great Council and the Council of Ten. Venice occupied in early times an intermediate position between the Byzantine Empire and the European West. Originally under Byzantine protection, it developed from the 10th and 11th centuries onward as an independent power and became one of the greatest commercial powers of the world. Expansion along the Dalmatian coast was followed by long and bitter rivalry with Genoa for economic predominance in the Near East, and naval supremacy in the entire eastern Mediterranean basin. In the years 1202-04, the doge Enrico Dandolo led a crusade which culminated in the conquest of Constantinople and the foundation of the Latin Empire there; Venetian rule was established on many Greek islands, in the Peloponnese, and in the Black Sea. Finally, when the Genoese power was smashed in the naval battle of Chioggia in 1380, Venice became for a time the supreme ruler over the commerce between East and West; its wealth was fabulous. In the 15th century, Venice acquired the districts on the so-called terra ferma (Treviso, Bassano, Verona, Vicenza, Padua, Belluno, Brescia, Bergamo, Ravenna, and Cremona), thus creating a firm bridgehead while at the same time enlarging its eastern sphere of influence, as for instance in Dalmatia and on Cyprus; the height of political, economic, and cultural achievement was reached in the 15th and 16th centuries. The decline set in at the same time; the Turks occupied Euboea (1470), Scutari (1479), the Peloponnese (1499), and Durazzo (1501). The Spanish and Portuguese discoveries in America and India were another set-back. France, Spain, Pope Julius II, and Emperor Maximilian I combined against Venice in the League of Cambrai in 1508; Cremona and Ravenna were lost. In 1571 Venice took a leading part in the naval victory over the Turks at Lepanto; but Crete was lost in 1669 and the Peloponnese regained only temporarily (1685-1715). In 1797 Napoleon I occupied Venice without a fight, and the city was later under Austria (1814-66). By plebiscite (Oct. 21-22, 1866) the city declared overwhelmingly in favor of incorporation into Italy.

Venice, Gulf of. [Italian, Golfo di Venezia.] Northernmost portion of the Adriatic Sea.

Venice as Queen of the Sea. Allegorical picture by Tintoretto, on the ceiling of the Sala del Collegio in the Palace of the Doges in Venice.

Venice Preserv'd, or a Plot Discover'd. Tragedy by Thomas Otway, printed in 1682. The plot is from a work by C. V. de St. Réal.

Vening-Meinesz (vā'ning,mī'nēs), Felix Andries. b. at The Hague, Netherlands, July 30, 1887.— Dutch fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; engineer and teacher. He became (1910) an engineer of the royal state commission for land survey and gravitational studies, and experimented (1923) with the use of submarines for making underwater observations. He was professor of geodesy and cartography (1927-45) at Utrecht, associate professor of geophysics (1935 et seq.) at Delft, where he became (1937) associate professor of geodesy, and professor and chief director of the Royal Netherlands Meteorological Institute at De Bilt.

Venise (ve.něz). French name of Venice, Italy.

Venise, Carnaval de. See Carnaval de Venise.

Vénissieux (vā.ně.syē). Town in S France, in the department of Rhône, S of Lyons. It produces textiles, imitation pearls, and other products. 15,253 (1946).

Venizelos (ve.ně.ze'lōs), Eleutherios. b. in Crete, 1864; d. at Paris, March 18, 1936. Greek statesman. Educated at Athens, he returned to Crete, which was then under Turkish rule, and became a leader in the cause of emancipation and in the insurrection which led to the Greco-Turkish War (1896-97), following which the European powers constrained the Turks to evacuate the island, sending in British, French, Russian, and Italian occupation forces, but still refusing to permit the union of Crete with Greece. Under Venizelos's leadership the Cretan national assembly proclaimed a union in 1905, but the powers would not permit its consummation: Greece was, however, permitted to send a high commissioner to Crete. The first such commissioner was Prince George of Greece, but his attitude displeased Venizelos and his followers, who brought about his replacement. Taking advantage of the Young Turk revolution, the Cretans again asserted unity with Greece, and in 1909 the occupation troops were withdrawn. Crete was given representation in the Greek parliament in 1912, and was formally and finally made part of Greece in 1913. Meanwhile in 1909 Venizelos went to Athens, and in 1910 he became premier. He carried through constitutional revision and financial and military reforms, and shaped Greek policy so cannily during the Balkan Wars (1912-13) that the country emerged with enlarged territory and enhanced prestige. From the outbreak of World War I Venizelos, strongly pro-Ally, was in conflict with the pro-German King Constantine, and in consequence resigned his portfolio in March, 1915. Following his party's victory in elections later that year, he resumed the premiership in August. On the strength of British and French promises of adequate aid to Serbia, Venizelos persuaded the king to give secret consent to an Allied landing at Salonika, but in October the king forced his resignation. Thereupon Venizelos with Allied support set up a so-called provisional government at Salonika, which declared war on Germany and Bulgaria; and when Allied pressure forced the abdication of Constantine in 1917 Venizelos in June of that year became premier for the third time, taking Greece fully into the war on the Allied side. Allied victory enabled him to take a hand in shaping world events during the peace conference leading to the Treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations. Moreover, by the Treaty of Sèvres (August, 1920), he secured the cession by Italy to Greece of the Dodecanese Islands excepting Rhodes. (In 1923 Italy reclaimed the islands, but they went to Greece after World War II.) After World War I, Turkey, one of the losers, appeared to be hopelessly weakened, and the Greek government continued hostilities with that country, but the unpopularity of this war led to the defeat of the Venizelists in elections held in November, 1920, and the cabinet fell. In 1921 King Constantine was restored to the throne, but the disastrous defeat of the Greek army in Anatolia led to Constantine's second abdication in 1922. His successor George II fled Greece in 1923 under pressure of military and popular hostility, and Venizelos became premier again in January, 1924; but, at odds with the military leaders, he resigned in February and retired from Greece before the proclamation of the republic in May, 1924. After the country had been shaken by a series of coups, Venizelos was recalled, and formed a cabinet in 1928. He restored internal order and enhanced his country's international standing by treaties with Italy, Yugoslavia, and Turkey. Following the failure of his party to secure a parliamentary majority in the elections of September, 1932, he resigned; returning to power in January, 1933, he dissolved parliament, appealed to the electorate, but was defeated. The royalists were now in the ascendancy, and in the grim hope of forestalling a restoration of the monarchy Venizelos organized armed risings in Athens, in Macedonia, and in Crete. They were all suppressed, and he fled to Paris. King George resumed the throne later that year. In the elections of January, 1936, the Venizelists won more seats than any other party, but did not secure a majority; Venizelos stayed at Paris, where two months later he died.

Venizelos, Sophocles. b. in Crete, 1894—. Greek statesman; son of Eleutherios Venizelos. Elected deputy from Candia, Crete, in 1920, he served as military attaché at Paris (1922-31), and was active in his father's Liberal Party. He joined the Greek exile government in 1943 as minister of navy and air, and served also as prime minister (1944) and deputy prime minister (1944). On his return to Greece in 1946 he was elected deputy from Serres (Serrai), and split his party in dissatisfaction at the attitude of its leader toward the right-wing parties. He served as minister without portfolio (1946, 1949), minister of war and of coordination (1947), and minister of navy, merchant marine, and national economy (1947-48), and of labor (1949). He was deputy prime minister (1949, 1951-52), foreign minister (1950, 1951-52), defense minister (1952 et seq.), and prime minister (March-April, 1950; August, 1950-October, 1951).

Venlo (ven'lō). [Also, Venlo.] City in SE Netherlands, in the province of Limburg, situated on the Maas (Meuse) River, E of Eindhoven; egg, vegetable, and fruit markets; trade in grain and hogs; metal, chemical, textile, furniture industries. The Stadhuis (town hall) dates from the 16th century. Considerable damage was suffered by the city in World War II (the Church of Saint Martin, a Gothic building of the 13th century, completed in the 15th century, was gutted). 45,794 (est. 1951).

Venn (ven), John. b. 1834; d. 1923. English writer and lecturer on moral science. Among his works are The Logic of Chance (1866), On Some of the Characteristics of Belief, Scientific and Religious (1870), Symbolic Logic (1881), and The Principles of Empirical or Inductive Logic (1889).

Vennachar (ven'ā.chār), Loch. Lake in C Scotland, in Perthshire, ab. 2 mi. W of Callander. It is formed by an expansion of one of the headstreams of the river Teith. A part of the water supply of the city of Glasgow is obtained from here. Length, ab. 4 mi.; width, less than 1 mi.

Vennberg (ven'bery'), Karl Gunnar. b. at Blådinge, in Småland, Sweden, 1910—. Swedish poet and critic. During the 1940's he became known as one of the leaders of the new pessimistic and sarcastic movement (fjortitalismen) in Swedish literature. His poetry, influenced by the work of T. S. Eliot, includes Hymn och hunger (Anthem and Hunger, 1937), Halmfackla (Straw Torch, 1944), and Tideräkning (Calendar, 1945).

Venner (ven'ēr), Elsie. See Elsie Venner.

Venning (ven'ing), Sir Walter King. b. at Kimbolton, Huntingdonshire, England, Jan. 17, 1882—. English army officer. He headed (1942-46) the British supply mission to Washington.

Venosa (ve.nō'sā). [Latin, Venusia.] Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Basilicata, in the province of Potenza, ab. 23 mi. N of Potenza; marketing center of a livestock-raising district. Materials from the former Roman amphitheater were used for the Church of Santa Trinità, founded in the 11th century. The town was the birthplace of the Roman poet Horace (65 b.c.) and a station on the Appian Way. Pop. of commune, 11,045 (1936); of town, 10,855 (1936).

Venraij or Vcnray (ven'rī). [Also, Venraai.] Town in SE Netherlands, in the province of Limburg, ab. 20 mi. S of Nijmegen; agricultural and livestock trade; metal industry. 14,332 (1939).

Venta Belgarum (ven'tā bel.gā'rum). Latin name of Winchester, England.

Ventana (ven.tā'nā), Sierra de la. See Sierra de la Ventana.

Venth (vent), Carl. b. at Cologne, Germany, Feb. 16, 1860; d. at San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 29, 1933. American conductor and composer. He was concertmaster (1884) of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, organized (1888) the Venth College of Music, New York, and conducted the Brooklyn Symphony Orchestra, the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, and the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra. His compositions include a comic opera, cantatas, chamber music, and violin and piano pieces.

Ventimiglia (ven.tě.mě'lyā). [French, Vintimille.] Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Liguria, in the province of Imperia, situated on the Riviera di Ponente, between San Remo and Menton, close to the French border: a popular seaside and winter resort. There are also important flower markets. The cathedral dates from the 11th and 13th centuries; the Church of San Michele is in the Romanesque style (reconstructed in the 19th century). Much contested throughout the Middle Ages, Ventimiglia was incorporated into the Republic of Genoa in 1503. Some damage was sustained in World War II by buildings of tourist interest, including the cathedral, the churches of San Michele and San Francesco, the Ospedale di Santo Spirito, and the Oratorio di San Giovanni Battista. Pop. of commune, 15,787 (1936); of town, 11,216 (1936).

Ventnor (ven.'nɔr). Urban district and seaside resort in S England, ab. 14 mi. SW of Portsmouth. It is noted for its mild climate. 7,308 (1951).

Ventnor City. Also, Ventnor.] City in S New Jersey, in Atlantic County: seashore resort and residential community adjacent to Atlantic City. 8,158 (1950).

Ventose (văn.tɔz). Name adopted in 1793 by the National Convention of the first French republic for the sixth month of the year. It consisted of 30 days, beginning in the years 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7 with February 19; in 4, 8, 9, 10, 11, 13 with February 20; and in 12 with February 21.

Ventotene (văn.tɔ.tě.ně). Modern name of Pandataria.

Ventoux (văn.tɔ). Mont. Outlying peak of the Alps, in SE France, NE of Avignon. Elevation, ab. 6,270 ft.

Ventuari (ven.twā'rě; Spanish, ben-). River in C Venezuela flowing SW to the Orinoco River. Length, ab. 300 mi.

Ventura (ven.tur'ā). [Official name, San Buenaventura.] City in S California, in Ventura County. 16,534 (1950).

Ventura de' Signorelli (ven.tɔ'fā dā sě.nvɔ.rě'lě). Luca di Egidio di. See Signorelli, Luca di Egidio di Ventura de'.

Venus (ven'ŭ). Ben. See Ben Venus.

Venus (vē'nŭs). In Roman mythology, the goddess of grace and love. Originally she was an Italic goddess of gardens and growth, and only at a comparatively late period became identified with the Greek goddess of love, Aphrodite. In medieval times her name became synonymous with earthly love as contrasted with spiritual love.

Venus. Planet lying between Mercury and the Earth at a mean distance of 67,270,000 mi. from the Sun, around which it revolves in 224.7 days with a velocity of 22 mi. per second in an orbit with the low eccentricity of 0.007. At closest approach, inferior conjunction, it comes within 24,200,000 mi. of the Earth, nearer than any other body except the Moon, an occasional comet, and a few asteroids. In spite of this, little is known of the planet's surface, as it is completely obscured by cloudlike masses. Its greatest elongation from the sun is 48 degrees, but maximum brightness comes at 39 degrees, when it outshines all but the Sun, Moon, and very exceptional comets. At such times it is 13 times as bright as the brightest star. Its diameter of 7,700 mi., mass of 5.4 times 10²¹ tons, and density of 4.9 times that of water make Venus an only slightly smaller twin of the Earth, but it is likely that the surface conditions are far different, since excessive carbon dioxide and no water vapor have been observed in its atmosphere. Its period of revolution is uncertain, but probably lies between ten and 50 terrestrial days. It receives 90 percent more solar radiation than the Earth but reflects 59 percent of the light (the Earth, 29 percent) back into space. It has no satellite. The transit of Venus across the face of the sun, observable from Earth only once in about 60 years on the average because of the inclination of Venus's orbit, is an important astronomical event because of the possibility, through observations taken at several points on Earth, of measuring the Sun's parallax.

Venus and Adonis (ā.don'is). Poem by Shakespeare, published in 1593.

Venus and Adonis. Painting (c1630) by Peter Paul Rubens, in the Metropolitan Museum, New York.

Venusberg (vē'nŭs.běrg). [Eng. trans., "Mountain of Venus."] Mountain, probably in the Hørselberge, a group between Eisenach and Gotha, Germany, within whose caverns (the Hørselloch), according to medieval legend, Venus held her court with heathen splendor and revelry. Of those who, charmed by music and sensuous allurements, entered her abode, none ever returned except Tannhäuser.

Venus de Milo (mī'lō). [Also, Venus of Melos (mē'lŏs).] Greek statue in the Louvre, Paris, perhaps the most admired single existing work of antiquity. It was found in 1829 on the island of Melos, and in date appears to fall between the time of Phidias and that of Praxiteles, or c400 B.C. The statue represents a majestic woman, undraped to the hips, standing with the weight on the right foot and with the head turned slightly toward the left. The arms are broken off, and there is a dispute as to their original position.

Venusia (ve.nŭ'shi.ā). Latin name of Venosa.

Vêpres Siciliennes (vepr sě.sě.lyen). Les. Play by Casimir Delavigne.

Vêpres Siciliennes, Les. [Italian title, I Vespri Siciliani; Eng. trans., "The Sicilian Vespers."] Opera in five acts by Verdi, with a libretto by Scribe and Duveyrier, produced at Paris in 1855 and in England in 1859.

Vera (vā'rā). Augusto. b. at Amelia, Umbria, Italy, May 4, 1813; d. at Naples, Italy, July 13, 1885. Italian Hegelian philosopher, a professor (1861-85) at Naples. He translated various works of Hegel into French, and wrote Problème de la certitude (1845), An Inquiry into Speculative and Experimental Science (1856), Essais de philosophie hégélienne (1864), and others.

Veracini (vē.rā.kŭ'ně). Francesco Maria. b. at Florence, Italy, c1685; d. probably at Pisa, Italy, 1750. Italian violinist and composer of operas, symphonies, sonatas, concertos, and cantatas.

Veracruz (vē.rā.krŏz'; Spanish, bā.rā.krŏs'). State in E Mexico, bounded by the Gulf of Mexico and the states of Tamaulipas, San Luis Potosí, Hidalgo, Puebla, Oaxaca, Chiapas, and Tabasco. The surface is mountainous or hilly, except the coastal plain. Capital, Veracruz; area, 27,759 sq. mi.; pop. 2,057,175 (1950).

Veracruz. [Full name, Veracruz Liave (yā'vā); former names: Nueva Veracruz, Villa Rica de Vera Cruz.] City in SE Mexico, capital of Veracruz state, on the Gulf of Mexico; principal Mexican seaport; food, tobacco, and textile industries. It was founded by Cortés near the present site, was made a city in 1615, was bombarded and taken by the French in 1838 and by the U.S. troops under Scott in 1847, and was taken by the Spaniards in 1861. In 1914 American marines took and held the city for more than six months. 123,368 (1950).

Veragua (vā.rā.gwā; Spanish, bā-), Dukes of. Successors to the honors of Christopher Columbus. In 1536 Luis Columbus abandoned his claims to the viceroyalty of the Indies, receiving in return the title of Duke of Veragua, with a grant of 25 leagues square in W Panama, called Veragua (later the province of Veraguas), and the island of Jamaica, in fief. In 1556 he was deprived of the fiefs, but retained the title, with the honorary title of admiral of the Indies, and a pension. Diego Columbus, the great-grandson of the discoverer, died childless in 1578, and with him the male line of Columbus came to an end. A lawsuit for the succession to the titles followed; it lasted 30 years, and was settled in favor of the descendants of Isabel, sister of Luis Columbus. This line ceased in 1733, and the title, after new litigations, was settled on the descendants of Francesca, sister of the Diego Columbus who had died in 1758.

Veraguas (vā.rā.gwās; Spanish, bā-). [Also, Veragua.] Province in W Panama, near the Gulf of Chiriquí. It was named by Columbus, who discovered it in 1502 and attempted to found a settlement there but was driven off by the Indians. It was included in Castilla del Oro, granted to Diego de Nicuesa in 1509, who endured great sufferings while attempting to colonize it. Maria de Toledo, acting for her son, Luis Columbus, sent an expedition to conquer Veraguas in 1535, but the country was abandoned after nearly all the colonists had died. It was partly settled during the colonial period, and for a time formed a province of New Granada. Capital, Santiago; area, 4,669 sq. mi.; pop. 107,209 (1950).

Veranilda (ver.ănil'dă). Historical novel by George Gissing, published in 1904.

Vera Revendal (vir'ă rev'en.dôl). See Revendal, Vera.

Veras (vâ'ras), Humberto de Campos. See Campos, Humberto de.

Verbania (ver.bă'nîyă). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Novara, situated on Lago Maggiore, NW of Milan, constituted of the former communities of Intra and Pallanza: tourist center; cotton-textile and metal industries; hat manufactures. Pop. of commune, 21,753 (1936); of town, 13,526 (1936).

Verbano (ver.bă'nô), Lago di. See Maggiore, Lago.

Verbanus (ver.bă'nus), Lacus. Latin name of Maggiore, Lago.

Verbeck (ver'bek), William. b. at Nagasaki, Japan, Jan. 18, 1861; d. Aug. 24, 1930. American educator and inventor. He became (1888) head of St. Johns School (later the Manlius School) at Manlius, N.Y., was an officer of the New York National Guard, of which he was later adjutant general (1910-12), and was issued six patents (1883-1917) on photographic improvements.

Verboeckhoven (ver.bôk'hô'ven), Eugène Joseph. b. at Warneton, Belgium, July 8, 1798; d. at Brussels, Jan. 20, 1881. Belgian painter of animals.

Verbruggen (ver.brug'en), John. d. c1707. English actor. He was the original Oroonoko in Thomas Southerne's play, and so famous as Alexander that he was sometimes called by that name.

Verbruggen (ver.brug'en), Henri. b. at Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 1, 1873; d. at Northfield, Minn., Nov. 12, 1934. Belgian violinist and conductor. He played (1894-95) in the Lamoureux Orchestra, Paris, was concertmaster (1902-05) of the Queen's Hall Concerts, London, served as director (1915 et seq.) of the New South Wales Conservatory of Music, Sydney, Australia, and was conductor (1923-31) of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Vercelli (ver.chel'le). Province in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont. Capital, Vercelli; area, ab. 1,157 sq. mi.; pop. 366,146 (1936).

Vercelli. [Ancient name, Vercellae (ver.sel'e).] City and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Piedmont, in the province of Novara, situated on the Sesia River ab. 38 mi. SW of Milan. It is a center of the Italian rice trade, with large rice mills, and also has textile industries, and metal and chemical manufactures. The cathedral, dating in its present form from 1572, contains a valuable library. This and other buildings of interest to tourists escaped damage in World War II. Pop. of commune, 38,956 (1936); of town, 32,397 (1936).

Vercelli Book. Manuscript collection (c1000 A.D.) of early English poetry and Anglo-Saxon legends and homilies. It contains Cynewulf's Elene, The Dream of the Rood, and others. It was discovered by Friedrich Blume at Vercelli, Italy, in 1822.

Vercingetorix (ver.sin'jet'ô'riks). Executed c45 B.C. Chief of the Arverni in Gaul, the leader of the great rebellion against the Romans in 52 B.C. He gained various successes against Caesar, but was besieged by him at Alesia and surrendered in 52. He was exhibited in Caesar's triumph at Rome in 46, and then by Caesar's order beheaded.

Vercors (ver.kôr). [Pseudonym of Jean Bruller.] b. 1902—. French engineer, caricaturist, and writer. Author, during World War II, of the famous clandestine novel Le Silence de la mer (1942; Eng. trans., The Silence of the Sea, 1944) and cofounder of the underground publishing house Éditions de Minuit during the German occupation of France. He has also written Le Sable du Temps (1945), a collection of essays. His caricatures appear under his original name.

Verdaguer (ver.dă'ger'), Jacinto. b. in Catalonia, Spain, 1845; d. 1902. Catalan priest and poet. His two poems, written in Catalan, La Atlàntida and Canigó, establish him as the national epic poet of Catalonia.

Verde (vêrd), Cape. [Also: Cape Verd; French, Cap Vert.] Cape projecting into the Atlantic Ocean, the westernmost point of continental Africa, in Senegal, French West Africa.

Verden (fer'den). [Also: Verden an der Aller (ân dêr âl'êr); Saxon, Fardun.] Town in NW Germany, in the Land (state) of Lower Saxony, British Zone, formerly in the province of Hanover, Prussia, situated on the Aller River ab. 20 mi. SE of Bremen: distilleries; canneries; furniture, ceramics, and cigar manufactures. The Dom (cathedral) is a Gothic building of the 13th-15th centuries, with a Romanesque tower of the 11th century; the churches of Saint Andrew and Saint John date from the 12th and 13th centuries; the Rathaus (town hall) from 1730. Charlemagne executed here 4,500 hostages of the rebellious Saxon tribes in 782, and here founded a missionary bishopric in 786. Buildings of interest to tourists were undamaged in World War II. 18,821 (1950).

Verdi (ver'dê), Giuseppe. b. at Roncole, Italy, Oct. 10, 1813; d. at Milan, Jan. 27, 1901. Italian operatic composer. He received his musical education at Busseto and Milan, was appointed organist at Roncole when only 10 years old, settled in Milan in 1838, and lived in later life in Genoa and at his villa Sta. Agata (near Busseto). He was a member of the Italian Parliament for a short time in 1860, and was chosen senator in 1875, but never attended a sitting. His chief operas are Nabuccodonosor or Nabuco (1842), I Lombardi (1843), Ernani (1844), I due Foscarini (1844), Attila (1846), Macbeth (1847; revised 1865), Luisa Miller (1849), Rigoletto (1851), Il Trovatore (1853), La Traviata (1853), Les Vêpres Siciliennes (1855), Simon Boccanegra (1857; revised 1881), Un Ballo in maschera (1859), La Forza del destino (1862), Don Carlos (1867), Aida (1871), Otello (1887), and Falstaff (1893). His other works include Inno delle Nazioni (1862), Requiem Mass (1874), sacred compositions, a quartet, and others.

Verdigris (ver'dig'ris, -grê). River in SE Kansas and NE Oklahoma which joins the Arkansas River near Muskogee, Okla. Length, ab. 350 mi.

Verdon (ver.dôn). River in SE France which forms in large part the boundary between Basses-Alpes and Var. It joins the Durance ab. 21 mi. NE of Aix. Length, ab. 100 mi.

Verdun (ver.dun'; French, ver.dên). [Also: Verdun-sur-Meuse (-sûr.mêz); ancient name, Verodunum.] City in NE France, in the department of Meuse, on the Meuse River. It has small manufactures and a citadel. The Cathedral of Notre Dame is a building in the Rhinish Romanesque style. In 843 a treaty was concluded here which divided the Carolingian Empire into three parts, thus creating Germany, France, and an intermediate kingdom. The town was part of Lorraine, was later included in the Holy Roman Empire, and was incorporated into France in 1552. A fortified city, it formed the NE outpost of the French lines in World War I. German troops began to attack the French positions here on Feb. 21, 1916. The extremely bloody fighting lasted until early September, when the German army command finally recognized that it could not achieve a strategic success against the French defenders. The longest and bloodiest struggle of the war, this battle inspired the famous phrase: Ils ne passeront pas ("They shall not pass"). 14,609 (1946).

Verdun. City in the province of Quebec, Canada, situated on Montreal Island along the St. Lawrence River: a southern residential suburb of Montreal. 77,391 (1951).

Verdun, Treaty of. Treaty made at Verdun in 843 by the sons of the emperor Louis I (Louis le Débonnaire). Lothaire was confirmed as emperor, and received Italy and the region lying in general W of the Rhine and Alps and E of the Rhone, Saône, Meuse, and Schelde rivers. Louis the German (Louis II of Germany) received the region between the Rhine and the Elbe (the nucleus of Germany); and Charles the Bald (the emperor Charles II) obtained the region W of Lothaire's dominions (the nucleus of France).

Verdunois (ver.dû.nwâ). Region and former territory in E France, whose capital was Verdun. With the Pays Messin it formed one of the small governments of France prior to 1790. The name Verdunois was also given to a small district in Gascony, S France.

Verdurin (ver.dû.rân), Les. Bourgeois family in the cyclical novel À la recherche du temps perdu (1913-27; Eng. trans., Remembrance of Things Past, 1922-32), by Marcel Proust.

Verdy du Vernois (ver.dě' dū ver.nwá'), Julius von, b. at Freistadt, in Silesia, July 19, 1832; d. at Stockholm, Sept. 30, 1910. Prussian military writer and politician. He was minister of war (1889-90).

Vere (vir), de. See also Vere.

Vere, Edward de. [Title, 17th Earl of Oxford; called Lord Bulbeck.] b. April 12, 1550; d. at Newington, Middlesex, England, June 24, 1604. Elizabethan soldier, poet, and patron of poets and players. He married (1571) Anne Cecil, daughter of Lord Burghley. In September, 1579, he insulted Sir Philip Sidney by calling him "a puppy," a duel being prevented only by the interference of Queen Elizabeth. In October, 1586, he acted as judge at the trial of Mary, Queen of Scots, and in 1588 he served as a volunteer against the Spanish Armada. His poems were included after his death in the Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576), the Phoenix Nest (1593), and England's Parnassus and England's Helicon (both 1600); among the best known are Of the Mighty Power of Love, Who Taught Thee First to Stint, If Women Could be Fair, Of the Birth and Bringing Up of Desire, What Cunning Can Express, and the epigram "Were I a king, I could command content." He is one of the several writers held by some to be the author of Shakespeare's works.

Vere, John de. [Title, 13th Earl of Oxford.] b. 1443; d. March 10, 1513. English soldier, who fought for Henry VII in the Wars of the Roses. He helped Henry VI regain the throne and fought against Edward at Barnet. Edward later succeeding in battle, de Vere fled to France. He fought (1485) beside Henry VII at Bosworth, and Henry reversed the attainder attaching to him since 1475, restored his chamberlainship, and conferred other minor titles on him. He helped, by his military leadership against the Yorkists and other rebels, to consolidate Henry's position.

Vere, Maximilian Schele De. See Schele De Vere, Maximilian.

Vere, Robert de. [Title, 3rd Earl of Oxford.] b. c. 1170; d. Oct. 25, 1221. English nobleman who sided with the barons and became one of the 25 executors of the Magna Charta.

Vere, Robert de. [Titles: 9th Earl of Oxford, Duke of Ireland.] b. 1362; d. in a boar hunt in France, 1392. English courtier.

Vereeniging (vé.rā'ni.ging). City in S Africa, in the Transvaal, Union of South Africa, situated just inside the S boundary of the Transvaal, ab. 665 mi. NE of Port Elizabeth, with which it is connected by rail, and ab. 47 mi. SW of Johannesburg by rail. It is the chief center of a large and important coal-mining area and is one of the largest industrial centers of the country. Power companies are located in the city, and vast iron and steel works were established here in the late 1940's. It was here that the treaty between the British and Boers was signed in 1902. Pop. 40,490, including 11,742 Europeans (1946).

Vereeniging, Treaty of. Treaty concluding the Boer War, signed on May 31, 1902. It firmly established British hegemony over the two Boer republics of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. The treaty also stipulated that Boers who had taken part in the war were not to be punished, that self-government would be encouraged, that language rights were to be protected, and that Great Britain would pay an indemnity of three million pounds as compensation for damage to lands and other property.

Vereker (vé.rē.kēr), John Standish Surtees Prendergast. See Gort, 6th Viscount.

Vérendrye (vā.rān.drī), Sieur de La. See La Vérendrye, Sieur de.

Veres (vé'resh), Péter. b. at Balmazújváros, Hungary, 1897— Hungarian novelist, one of the leaders of peasant romanticism in Hungarian literature.

Veresayev (vi.rī.sā'yīf), V. [Pseudonym of Vikenty Vikentyevich Smidovich.] b. at Tula, Russia, Jan. 4, 1867; d. 1944. Russian author and physician. He won a reputation as a realistic novelist under the old regime, and his Memoirs of a Doctor (1916) achieved great popularity. Two of his post-revolutionary novels, Dead- lock and Sisters, were published in 1928 and 1936, respectively.

Verezhchagin (vi.rishchā'gin), Vasily. b. in Novgorod, Russia, in October, 1842; d. off Port Arthur, Manchuria, April 13, 1904. Russian genre and battle painter. He traveled through Turkistan, China, and India, served in Caucasus and in the Russo-Turkish War, was present at the storming of Plevna, acted as secretary in the negotiations for peace, and went to India again in 1882 and 1884. Among his pictures are cycles of 20 from the history of India, 20 from the campaign in Turkistan, 20 from the Russo-Turkish War, and a number of sacred subjects. He was killed in the sinking of the Russian battleship Petropavlovsk.

Vergara (ver.gā'rá; Spanish, ber-), Convention of. See Bergara, Convention of.

Vergara, Prince of. A title of Espartero, Baldomero.

Vergara, Ignacio Gutiérrez. See Gutiérrez Vergara, Ignacio.

Vergennes (vé.rjenz'). City in C Vermont, in Addison County, ab. 35 mi. SW of Montpelier, on Otter Creek; dairying. During the War of 1812, it was important for the production of cannon balls. The third oldest city in New England (and one of the smallest of all U.S. cities in population), it was settled in 1766 and incorporated in 1788. It was named for the Comte de Vergennes, 1736 (1950).

Vergennes (ver.zhen), Claire Elisabeth Jeanne Gravier de. See Rémusat, Comtesse de.

Vergennes, Comte de. [Title of Charles Gravier.] b. at Dijon, France, Dec. 28, 1717; d. Feb. 13, 1787. French politician and diplomat. He was appointed minister to Trier (Treves) in 1750, was ambassador to Turkey (1755-68), was made ambassador to Sweden in 1771, and became minister of foreign affairs in 1774. A consistent opponent of England in his policy, he promoted the alliance with the American colonists in revolt against England, and signed a defensive and offensive alliance with them; he negotiated the treaty of Paris in 1783. His bringing France into participation in the Revolutionary War had much to do with the subsequent French Revolution, since it drained France's resources dangerously.

Verges (vēr'jéz). In Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing, a "headborough," assistant to Dogberry.

Vergier (ver.zhā), Henri du. See La Rochejacquelein or La Rochejacquelein, Henri du Vergier, Comte de.

Vergier, Louis du. See La Rochejacquelein or La Rochejacquelein, Louis du Vergier, Marquis de.

Vergil or Virgil (vēr'jil). [Full Latin name, Publius Vergilius Maro.] b. in Andes, near Mantua, Cisalpine Gaul, Oct. 15, 70 B.C.; d. at Brundisium, Italy, Sept. 21, 19 B.C. Roman epic, didactic, and idyllic poet. He studied at Cremona, Mediolanum, Neapolis, and Rome, where he devoted himself to rhetoric, philosophy, and poetry. In 41 his paternal estate near Mantua, where he had grown up, was confiscated for the benefit of the soldiery which had assisted Octavian in the civil war against Brutus and Cassius; but he was later indemnified through the intercession of Maecenas. He enjoyed the friendship and patronage of Asinius Pollio, Maecenas (to whom he was introduced about 40), and Octavian (later Augustus). He was an intimate friend of Horace, whom he introduced to Maecenas. About 37 B.C. he settled at Rome; his later years were spent chiefly in Campania. His works include the Eclogues or Bucolics (written 42-37) and the Georgics (written about 37-30), poems celebrating rural life, and the Aeneid, an epic on Aeneas, and the great Latin poem, second only to Homer in the classical epic. The first printed edition of Vergil appeared at Rome about 1499.

Vergil or Virgil, Polydore. b. at Urbino, Italy, c. 1470; d. there, c. 1555. Italian-English ecclesiastic and historian. He was sent to England as deputy collector of Peter's pence by the Pope in 1501, was presented to an English living in 1503, and in 1504 was appointed the bishop of Hereford's proxy on his translation to the see of Bath and Wells. He was collated to the prebend of Scamblesby in Lincolnshire in 1507, was naturalized in 1513, and was collated to the prebend of Oxgate in Saint Paul's in 1513. He was imprisoned for a short time (c. 1515) on the charge of slandering Thomas Wolsey.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, nôve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; ǵ, d or j; ʂ, s or sh; ʔ, t or ch;

He returned (c1550) to Italy. His chief work is Historiae Anglicae libri xxi (1534; a 27th book was added in the 3rd ed., 1555).

Vergil the Magician. Legendary form which the historical Vergil assumed in the Middle Ages. The sortes Vergilianae, divination by the use of Vergil's Aeneid, used as early as the 1st century A.D., seems to be the nucleus of his reputation for magic. To this were added certain widespread legends, locally attributed to him but elsewhere to other prominent figures, and around and through this disconnected series of anecdotes was built a fictional biography that made him a great magician and completely ignored his literary achievements.

Vergne (ver'ny), Marie Madeleine Pioche de la Sa. See La Fayette, Marie Madeleine Pioche de la Vergne, Comtesse de.

Vergniaud (ver.nyô), Pierre Victorin. b. at Limoges, France, May 31, 1753; guillotined at Paris, Oct. 31, 1793. French orator and Revolutionary statesman. He practiced law at Bordeaux, and became, on the outbreak of the Revolution, a member of the government of the department of Gironde. He was elected deputy to the Legislative Assembly in 1791, and became its president, and was one of the chief Revolutionary orators, and the leader of the Girondists. He was a member of the Convention, was opposed by Robespierre, and was condemned to death in October, 1793.

Verhaeren (vér.hä'ren), Émile. b. May 21, 1855; d. at Rouen, France, Nov. 27, 1916. Belgian poet and art critic. He was educated at Brussels and Ghent, took a law course at Louvain and became a member of the Brussels bar, and was apprenticed to Edmond Picard, on whose advice he gave up the law in favor of letters. He was one of the first editors of La Jeune Belgique. In L'Art Moderne he championed impressionistic painters. He received the Prix Triennal de Littérature Dramatique for Le Cloître (1900), and the Prix Quinquennal (for 1898-1902) for Les Visages de la vie. In addition to his poetry he wrote many critical articles on art and notes on his travels in Germany, Italy, and Spain. His verse includes Les Flamandes (1880), Les Moines (1886); a trilogy of life, Les Soirs (1887), Les Débaîches (1888), and Les Flambeaux noirs (1890); Les Apparus dans mes chemins (1891), Les Campagnes hallucinées (1893), Les Villages illusoirs (1895), Les Villes tentaculaires (1895), Les Heures claires (1899), Petites légendes (1900), and Forces tumultueuses (1902). He also wrote lyrical dramas, including Les Arbes (1898) and Philippe II (1901).

Veria (ver'ryä). See Veroia.

Veríssimo (ver.sê.sô), Érico Lopes. b. at Cruz Alta, Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, Dec. 17, 1905—. Brazilian novelist, one of the most widely read writers in Brazil today. His novels include Clarissa (1933), Música ao longe (1934), Caminhos cruzados (1935), Um lugar ao sol (1936), Olhai os lírios do campo (1938), Saga (1940), and O Resto é silêncio (1943). He visited the U.S. and wrote two books about that country: Galo preto em campo de neve (1941) and A Volta do galo preto (1946).

Veríssimo, José. [Full name, José Veríssimo Dias de Matos.] b. at Óbidos, Pará, Brazil, April 8, 1857; d. at Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 2, 1916. Brazilian critic, journalist, essayist, and short-story writer, one of the outstanding figures in Brazilian literary criticism. He was the founder and editor of the Revista Brasileira, where the Brazilian Academy of Letters had its genesis (1897). Among his most important works are Estudos de literatura brasileira (6 vols., 1901-07) and História da literatura brasileira (1916).

Verkaufte Braut (fer.kouf'te brout), Die. German title of Bartered Bride, The.

Verkhne-Udinsk (vyer'n'ny'i.d'yinsk). Former name of Ulan-Ude.

Verkholsen Mountain (vir.ho.lyensk'). Siberian paleolithic site, situated W of Lake Baikal, near Irkutsk. The animal remains were found in two layers: the upper contained the remains of reindeer, bison, elk, and of partly domesticated wolf; the lower contained remains of rhinoceros, giant elk, and others. The possibility of two cultural horizons is therefore suggested. The stone industry appears to have been similar to that of the Krasnoyarsk sites (Afontova Mountain): the large tools, primitive in form and of rough workmanship, were made of quartzite and schist, and the smaller and better ones of flint, hornstein, and jasper. A peculiar combination of pseudo-Mousterian types, with the developed pressure flaking, is typical of both the Afontova and the Verkholsen mountains. On the other hand, the bifacial spear points made by pressure flaking, found at the latter site, are unique among the Siberian paleolithic tools. Bone industry used mostly reindeer horn; mammoth ivory is completely absent. Bone tools included harpoons, dart points, awls, and daggerlike implements. A large boulder which served as an anvil was discovered in a stone workshop in the center of the site.

Verkhoyansk (vir.ho.yansk'). Town in the U.S.S.R., in the Yakutsk Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, in the interior valley of the Yana River: long noted as the world's coldest inhabited spot in winter, with an average January temperature of about -59° F., and a minimum recorded temperature of -90° F. In recent years, however, a weather station at Oimyakon, ab. 360 mi. SE of Verkhoyansk, has recorded lower temperatures. Pop. ab. 500.

Verkhoyansk Range. Rugged mountain range in the U.S.S.R., in NE Siberia, extending in an arc E of the Lena and Aldan rivers, from the Laptev Sea on the N to the Pacific watershed on the SE. The higher parts are barren, the lower slopes forested. Peak elevation (in the SE), ab. 9,622 ft.; length, ab. 800 mi.

Verlaine (ver.lên), Paul. b. at Metz, France, March 30, 1844; d. at Paris, Jan. 8, 1896. French poet. He at first belonged to the Parnassians, but afterward became one of the most noted of the symbolists and the so-called decadents. Following, in part, the example of Villon, he used his misfortunes in prison and hospital as a theme for his poems and prose works. He lectured on poetry in England in 1893. Among his works are Poèmes saturniens (1865), Sagesse (1881), Jadis et naguère (1885), Romances sans paroles (1887), Bonheur (1891), and Mes hôpitaux (1891).

Verlorenes Loch (fêr.lô're.nes loch). Deep and narrow gorge of the Hinterrhein River, in the canton of Graubünden, Switzerland, through which the Via Mala passes.

Vermandois (ver.mân.dwâ). Region and former territory of France, in Picardy. It lay NE of Paris, and is comprised in the modern departments of Aisne and Somme. In the Middle Ages a countship, it was united to France by Philip II in 1183, was ceded to Burgundy by the treaty of Arras in 1435, and on the death (1477) of Charles the Bold was taken by Louis XI of France. Capital, St.-Quentin.

Vermeer (ver.mâr'), Jan. [Also, Jan van der Meer.] b. at Delft, Netherlands, 1632; d. there, 1675. Dutch painter.

Vermeer van Haarlem (vér.mâr' vãn hâr'lem), Jan. See Meer, Jan van der.

Vermejo (ver.me'hô; Spanish, ber-). See Bermejo.

Vermeulen (vér.mil'ên), August. b. 1872; d. 1945. Flemish author, long professor of the history of art at the University of Brussels. He stimulated a revival of the Flemish literature with his studies Kritiek van de Vlaamse Beweging (1895), Vlaamse en Europese Beweging (1900), and Van Gezelle tot Heden (1924). His novels include De Wandelerende Jood (The Wandering Jew, 1906) and Twee Vrienden (Two Friends, 1945). He also wrote essays on the history of art.

Vermilion Bay (vér.mil'yôn). Arm of the Gulf of Mexico, in the S coast of Louisiana. Length, ab. 20 mi.

Vermillion (vér.mil'yôn). City in SE South Dakota, county seat of Clay County, on the Missouri River near Yankton: seat of the University of South Dakota. 5,337 (1950).

Vermont (vér.mont'). [Called the "Green Mountain State."] State of the NE United States, bounded by the Canadian province of Quebec on the N, New Hampshire (separated by the Connecticut River) on the E, Massachusetts on the S, and New York (largely separated by Lake Champlain) on the W: a New England state.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Vermont is divided for administrative purposes into 14 counties. The state sends one representative to Congress, and has three electoral votes. Leading cities are Barre, Burlington, and Rutland. Capital, Montpelier; area, 9,278 sq. mi. (9,609 sq. mi., including water; pop. 377,747 (1950), an increase of 5.2 percent over the 1940 figure. The state ranks 42nd in area, and 46th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The state is traversed from N to S by the Green Mountains. Mount Mansfield (4,393 ft.) in the N, is the highest point in the state. The principal rivers, in addition to the Connecticut on the W boundary, are the West and the White, flowing into the Connecticut from the W; the Missisquoi, the Lamoille, the Poultney, and the Winooski rivers and Otter Creek, flowing into Lake Champlain. There are many small lakes.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Vermont is known as an agricultural and dairying state. However, industry has made notable gains in the last few years. Dairy products, maple products (in which Vermont ranks first), eggs, apples, corn, hay, oats, and potatoes are the chief agricultural items produced. Livestock other than cattle is raised in quantity also. Quarrying is an important industry, marble and granite being especially plentiful. Proctor is the center of the marble industry, and Barre is known as the granite-quarrying center. Asbestos, slate, talc, and copper are abundant. Manufacturing produces machinery, wood and paper products, plastics, cut stone products, woolen goods, and clothing. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as $131 million dollars; from mineral output, as high as $13 million; from manufacturing, as high as $300 million.

History. The first exploration of the state was made (1609) by Samuel de Champlain, who discovered the lake now bearing his name. The French made (1666) a temporary settlement on Isle La Motte in Lake Champlain, but the first permanent settlement was not made until 1724 when Fort Dummer was built by colonists from Massachusetts at the site of what is now Brattleboro. New Hampshire and New York both claimed the region but the claims of New York were recognized by the English throne. The Vermont inhabitants rebelled against repurchasing their land from New York and organized, under the leadership of Ethan Allen and Seth Warner, an armed band called the Green Mountain Boys which resisted the claims of New York. This band under Allen captured (May 10, 1775) Fort Ticonderoga, on Lake Champlain, from the British, and under Warner took (May 12, 1775) Crown Point. The Americans under General John Stark defeated (Aug. 16, 1777) the British at Bennington in a battle commemorated by the Bennington Battle Monument (302 ft.). The state issued a declaration of independence on Jan. 15, 1777, and adopted the name of New Connecticut; on June 4 of that year the name was changed to Vermont; in July of that year it issued the first American state constitution specifically forbidding slavery and establishing male suffrage; admitted to the Union (as the 14th state) on March 4, 1791, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and New York having previously settled their claims to it. Vermont was the scene of an engagement during the War of 1812. St. Albans was raided (1864) by Confederate guerrillas who fled with bank funds; served also as the headquarters of an attempted invasion (1866 and 1870) of Canada by the Fenians.

Culture. Vermont has the smallest percentage of urban population (ab. 36 percent in the 1950 census) of any of the N Atlantic states. The largest single group in the foreign-born population consists of Canadians. The state is a popular vacation area with many trails and picturesque inns. Among the institutions of higher learning in Vermont are the University of Vermont and State Agricultural College, at Burlington; Bennington College, at Bennington; Goddard College, at Plainfield; Middlebury College, at Middlebury; Norwich University, at Northfield. The state motto is "Freedom and Unity." The state flower is the red clover, the state tree the sugar maple.

Vermont Historical Society. Organization founded in 1838 for the purpose of collecting material relating to state and local history of Vermont and maintaining a museum and library pertaining to that field. Its headquarters are at Montpelier, Vt., where the society has a library containing ab. 20,000 volumes. It publishes Vermont Quarterly and Vermont Life (quarterly).

Vernadsky (vr.năt'ski), Vladimir Ivanovich. b. 1863; d. 1945. Russian mineralogist and geochemist. He worked out the very important method of calculating the age of rocks and minerals by means of the ascertained facts of radioactive attrition, and made other outstanding contributions to the study of mineralogy and of geochemistry. He established and directed the biogeochemical laboratory of the Academy of Sciences at Leningrad.

Vernal (vër'näl). City in E Utah, county seat of Uintah County; trading center for an agricultural and stock-raising area. 2,845 (1950).

Verne (vër'n; French, vern), Jules. b. at Nantes, France, Feb. 8, 1828; d. at Amiens, France, March 24, 1905. French novelist. He was educated at Nantes, and afterward studied law at Paris, but ultimately devoted himself to literature. After turning out a number of moderately successful plays, he struck a new vein in his scientific romances, which gained a world-wide popularity. They include Cinq semaines en ballon (Five Weeks in a Balloon, 1863), Voyage au centre de la terre (Journey to the Center of the Earth, 1864), De la terre à la lune (A Trip to the Moon, 1865), Vingt mille lieues sous les mers (Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Sea, 1870), L'Île mystérieuse (The Mysterious Island, 1870), Voyage autour du monde en quatre-vingts jours (Round the World in Eighty Days, 1872), Michel Strogoff (1876), and Le Rayon vert (1882).

Vernet (ver.ne), Carle. [Full name, Antoine Charles Horace Vernet.] b. at Bordeaux, France, Aug. 14, 1758; d. at Paris, Nov. 17, 1835. French historical and animal painter; son and pupil of Joseph Vernet.

Vernet, Horace. [Full name, Émile Jean Horace Vernet.] b. at Paris, June 30, 1789; d. there, Jan. 17, 1863. French genre and battle painter; son and pupil of Carle Vernet. He was decorated for bravery at the defense of the Barrière de Clichy in 1820, was director of the French school at Rome (1827-39), and was employed (1836-42) in painting for the gallery of Versailles. Many of his pictures after 1836 were of Arab life. They include Dog of the Regiment, Horse with the Trumpet, Grenadier of Waterloo, battles of Jemappes, Valmy, Hanau, Bouvines, Montmirail, Jena, Friedland, Wagram, and Isly, Campaign of Constantine, Capture of the Smala of Abd-el-Kader, Barrier of Clichy, Bridge of Arcola, Smala, Siege of Antwerp, various Moorish scenes, Judith, Rachel, and scenes from Molière's plays.

Vernet, Joseph. [Full name, Claude Joseph Vernet.] b. at Avignon, France, Aug. 14, 1712; d. at Paris, Dec. 23, 1789. French marine and landscape painter. He studied at Rome in 1732, and settled at Paris in 1753, after painting at many European courts.

Verneuil (ver.në'y'). [Also, Verneuil-sur-Avre (sür-ävr).] Town in NW France, in the department of Eure, situated on the Avre River SW of Evreux. It has preserved its medieval ramparts. The Church of Notre Dame is a Romanesque structure from the 12th century. The town, including the Church de la Madeleine, in the Gothic style of the 16th century, was damaged during World War II. 5,114 (1946).

Verneuil, Marquise de. See Entragues, Catherine Henriette de Balzac d'.

Vernéville (ver.nä.vël). Village in France, NW of Metz. The heights E of the village were the scene of hard fighting in the battle of Gravelotte, Aug. 18, 1870.

Vernier (ver.nä'y), Pierre. b. at Orans, France, c1580; d. there, Sept. 14, 1637. French mathematician, noted as the inventor of the vernier (named for him), a device for reading fractional parts of a fixed scale of measurements with accuracy. He wrote Construction, usage, et propriétés du quadrat nouveau de mathématiques (1631) and other works.

Vernoleninsk (vyer.nö.lyä'nyinsk). See Nikolaev or Nikolayev.

Vernon (vër'nön). City in S central British Columbia, Canada; apples and other fruits. Vernon is connected by rail with Vancouver, ab. 358 mi. to the W. 7,822 (1951).

Vernon. Town in N Connecticut, in Tolland County. 10,115 (1950).

Vernon (ver.nöh). Town in NW France, in the department of Eure, situated on the Seine, ab. 30 mi. SE of Rouen. The Church of Notre Dame dates from the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries. It suffered damage in World War II. The ballistics and aerodynamics research laboratory of Vernon is a center for the study and development of guided missiles. 11,242 (1946).

Vernon (ver'nŏn). City in N Texas, county seat of Wilbarger County, NW of Wichita Falls; processing center for cotton, cottonseed, flour, feed, meat; manufactures of mattresses. It was established in 1880. Pop. 12,651 (1950).

Vernou, Diana (or Di). High-spirited girl with a love for manly sports, the heroine of Scott's Rob Roy.

Vernon, Edward. b. at Westminster, London, Nov. 12, 1684; d. at Nacton, Suffolk, England, Oct. 30, 1757. English admiral. He entered the navy in 1700, served in the War of the Spanish Succession (1701-13), and entered Parliament in 1722. He bombarded and took Portobelo in 1739, was repulsed before Cartagena in 1741, and was struck from the list of admirals in 1746 for publishing a couple of pamphlets against the admiralty.

Verny or Vernyy (vyer'nŭi). Former name of Alma Ata, Vero Beach (vir'ŏ). City in E Florida, county seat of Indian River County, on the Indian River; processing and shipping point for citrus fruit; winter resort. 4,746 (1950).

Verocchio (vā.rŏk'kyŏ), Andrea. See Verrocchio or Verocchio, Andrea.

Verodunum (ver.ŏ.dŭ'num). Ancient name of Verdun.

Verolia (ve'ryā). [Also: Veria, Verria; Turkish, Karferieh; ancient name, Berea.] Town in N Greece, in the nomos (department) of Thessaloniki, in Macedonia, ab. 44 mi. SW of Salonika. Here Paul and Silas preached (Acts, xvii, 10). Pop. 24,273 (1951).

Verolanuova (ve.rŏ.lā.nwŏ.vā). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Brescia, between Brescia and Cremona; macaroni factory; silk manufactures. Pop. of commune, 11,078 (1936); of town, 4,604 (1936).

Veroli (ve.rŏ.lē). [Latin, Verulæ.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, in the province of Frosinone, ab. 50 mi. SE of Rome; agricultural trade center. During World War II the town was considerably damaged by shell-fire but, except for one church, buildings of interest to tourists were harmed only slightly. Pop. of commune, 18,258 (1936); of town, 3,205 (1936).

Veromandui (ver.ŏ.man'dŭ.i). [Also, Viromandui.] Ancient people of Belgic Gaul who lived on the upper Somme River in the vicinity of what is now St.-Quentin.

Verona (ve.rŏ.nā; Italian, vā.rŏ.nā). Province in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto. Capital, Verona; area, ab. 1,196 sq. mi.; pop. 585,893 (1936).

Verona. City and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, capital of the province of Verona, situated on the Adige River W of Venice. It is a railroad junction and an important center for trade in agricultural products, particularly for export to Germany and other countries N of the Alps. Industries include flour mills, cotton and woolen textiles, leather and shoe manufactures. Pop. of commune, 153,708 (1936), 186,555 (1951); of city, 84,862 (1936).

Art and Architecture. The city, which is surrounded by walls, gates, and bastions, has at its center the Piazza d'Erbe (vegetable and fruit market). In the adjoining area are many medieval and baroque buildings, such as the Casa dei Mercanti (1301) and the Palazzo Maffei (1668); nearby are the Palazzo del Comune (1193-95), Loggia del Consiglio (1476-93), and the Palazzo del Governo, a former residence of the Scaligers. The cathedral is a Romanesque basilica of the 12th century with Gothic additions, containing a painting by Titian. Verona has one of the best preserved Roman amphitheaters of Italy (still frequently used for outdoor concerts) and other Roman antiquities (theater, gates, collections in the archaeological museum). Considerable damage was sustained in World War II by structures of interest to tourists. Most serious loss was the demolition (April 25, 1945) by the Germans of all the city's bridges, including the Ponte della Pietra, which had been the oldest Roman bridge still in use, and the Ponte Scaligero, built in 1354. Many buildings were severely shaken when the bridges were blown up, or by bomb hits; a fresco by Tiepolo in the hall of the Palazzo Canossa was shattered.

History. Verona, a Celtic settlement in ancient times, became a Roman colony in 89 a.c. Here Theodorice, king of the Ostrogoths, defeated Odoacer in 49 A.D., making Verona his residence; Alboin, king of the Lombards, took up residence here in 568. The town, a free city after 1107, was a leader in the Lombard League's struggle against Frederick I (Frederick Barbarossa); it was later ruled by the Scaliger family (1260-1387), and from 1387 to 1404 by the Visconti of Milan. From 1404 to 1797 it was part of the republic of Venice; ceded in 1797 to Austria, it was transformed into a cornerstone of the four fortresses comprising the famous Quadrilateral; it was incorporated into Italy in 1866.

Verona (ve.rŏ.nā). Borough in NE New Jersey, in Essex County; residential suburban community. 10,921 (1950).

Verona. Borough in SW Pennsylvania, in Allegheny County, near Pittsburgh. 4,325 (1950).

Verona, Congress of. Congress of representatives from the principal European governments, held at Verona, Italy (October-December, 1822), and occasioned by the disturbances in Spain and SE Europe. It was attended by the monarchs of Prussia, Austria, Russia, and the Two Sicilies and Sardinia, the Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Montmorency, and others. Metternich presided. The chief result was the armed intervention of France in Spain in 1823.

Veronese (vā.rŏ.nā'zā), Paolo (or Paul). [Original name, Paolo Cagliari (or Callari).] b. at Verona, Italy, 1528; d. at Venice, April 19, 1588. Italian painter of the Venetian school. His first considerable commissions were executed at Mantua. In 1555 he went to Venice, where he remained. His first commission here was the Coronation of the Virgin, and four other subjects, for the Convent of Saint Sebastian. In 1563 Titian supported his claims to the award of the decoration of the Library of Saint Mark. In 1565 Veronese went to Rome. In 1573 he was called before the Inquisition to answer a charge of blasphemy for introducing in a Last Supper, painted for the friars of Saint John and Saint Paul, allegedly irrelevant and purely decorative figures. He was obliged to paint out his dwarfs, German soldiers, and others, and to paint the picture as it hangs in the Academy. After the fire of 1577 he was commissioned to paint the ceiling of the council chamber in the Doges' Palace at Venice. His works include Marriage at Cana (Louvre), Feast in the House of Simon (Louvre), Europa and the Bull (London), Leda and the Swan (London), Death of Adonis (London), Supper at Emmaus, Venice Enthroned, Calling of Saint Andrew, Presentation of the Family of Darius to Alexander, Saint Helena's Vision (both the last-named in the National Gallery, London), and many others.

Veronica (ve.rŏ.nŭ'kā), Saint. In Christian legend, a woman of Jerusalem, said to have died at Rome, who reputedly gave to Jesus on his way to Calvary a handkerchief to wipe his brow. He took it, and upon it was miraculously left an impression of his face. She is commemorated on February 4th.

Verplanck (vēr.plangk'), Gulian Crommelin. b. at New York, Aug. 6, 1786; d. there, March 18, 1870. American author, politician, and lawyer. He graduated from Columbia in 1801, was admitted to the bar, and settled as a lawyer at New York. He was in 1821 appointed professor of the evidences of revealed religion and moral science in the Protestant Episcopal General Theological Seminary at New York, a position which he occupied for four years. He was a member of Congress from New York (1825-33). He published, with William C. Bryant and Robert C. Sands, an annual entitled The Talisman (1827-29).

Verrall (ver'al), Arthur Woolgar. b. at Brighton, England, Feb. 5, 1851; d. at Cambridge, England, June 18, 1912. British classical and English scholar, professor of English literature (1911-12) at Cambridge University. He published Euripides the Rationalist (1895), also editions and translations of various plays of Aeschylus and Euripides, and other works.

Verrazano (ver.rā.tsā'nŏ) or Verrazzano (ver.rāt.tsā'nŏ), Giovanni da. b. in Italy, c.1480; d. c.1527. Italian navigator. He left France in command of a French exploring expedition in 1523, and explored the coast of North America from North Carolina to Newfoundland in 1524, discovering New York and Narragansett bays.

Verres (ver'z), Gaius (or Caius). Put to death by Antony, 43 a.c. Roman official, praetor in 74, who, as governor of Sicily (73-74), plundered the island of property, art treasures, and the like. He was brought to trial in 70 c., and was defended by Hortensius and prosecuted by Cicero. The trial resulted in his voluntary exile at Massalia (Marseilles). Of the six orations against Verres composed by Cicero, only the first was actually delivered.

Verria (ver'riä). See Verolia.

Verrill (ver'il), Addison Emory. b. at Greenwood, Me., Feb. 9, 1839; d. at Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec. 10, 1926. American zoologist, professor at Yale (1864-1907). He published many scientific papers, chiefly in the American Journal of Science.

Verrill, Alpheus Hyatt. b. at New Haven, Conn., July 23, 1871—, American naturalist, explorer, and author; son of Addison Emory Verrill. He made explorations (1889-1920) in the West Indies, Guiana, Central America, Panama, and Bermuda; invented (1902) autochrome process of photography in natural colors; rediscovered (1907) in Hispaniola the supposedly extinct insectivorous mammal Solenodon paradoxus; made ethnological expeditions (1916-28) to Panama, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, and Surinam (Dutch Guiana); discovered (1924-27) remains of unknown prehistoric culture in Central America; led (1928-32) explorations in Peru and Bolivia; and established (1940) experimental gardens and a natural science museum at the site of De Soto's first settlement in Florida. He is the author of adventure stories for boys and books on natural history.

Verrocchio (ver.rök'kyô), or Verocchio (vâ.rök'kyô), Andrea. [Original name, Andrea Cioni di Michele.] b. at Florence, Italy, 1435; d. at Venice, 1488. Italian sculptor, the most noted pupil of Donatello. He was early apprenticed to Giuliano Verrocchio, a goldsmith, from whom he took his name (Verrocchio, "the true eye"). He was a painter as well as a sculptor, but only one picture remains, the Baptism of Our Lord, in the Accademia at Florence. In 1467 he did compartments of the door of the sacristy of the Duomo (cathedral) at Florence for Luca della Robbia. From 1473 to 1476 (pontificate of Sixtus IV) he was at Rome. Immediately after his return to Florence in 1476, Verrocchio modeled and cast his famous little statue of David. From 1471 to 1472 he worked upon the mausoleum of Giovanni and Piero de' Medici for the sacristy of San Lorenzo. The last work upon which he was employed was the equestrian statue of Bartolommeo Colleoni (or Colone), captain-general of the Venetian forces, who died at Bergamo, leaving his silver, furniture, arms, horses, and the sum of 216,000 florins to the republic of Venice, on condition that his statue should be set up in Saint Mark's Square (Piazza di San Marco); it was really placed in the Piazza of the Scuola di San Marco. Verrocchio had nearly finished the horse when he died. The Colleoni was later finished by Leopardi, Lorenzo di Credi, Perugino, and Leonardo da Vinci were his pupils.

Verucosus (ver.û.kô'sus), Quintus Fabius Maximus. See Fabius Maximus Verucosus, Quintus.

Versailles (ver.sî', ver.sälz'; French, ver.sây'). City in N France, capital of the department of Seine-et-Oise, ab. 11 mi. SW of Paris. A residence of the court before the French Revolution, it retains the character of a royal city because of its famous chateau, mainly created by Louis XIV and Louis XV, and the magnificent park with the smaller buildings of the Grand Trianon and the Petit Trianon. A great part of the palace is now occupied by a museum of French history, but many of the apartments and rooms of state, among them the Galerie des Glaces (Hall of Mirrors), have been left as they were under Louis XVI. In the city are the Church of Notre Dame, the Cathedral of Saint Louis, transformed into a museum of the Revolution, and the Houdon Museum. Versailles was only a village before the time of Louis XIV; the main building activity took place from 1661 on. It was here that the National Assembly was established, and here that the rioting of the people forced Louis XVI and his family to go and live at Paris. The German Empire was proclaimed in the Hall of Mirrors on Jan. 18, 1871. The French government and the two chambers had their seat at Versailles from 1871 to 1879, and the Third Republic was proclaimed here on Feb. 25, 1875. Again, in the Hall of Mirrors, the peace treaty with Germany terminating World War I was signed on June 28, 1919. Pop. 70,141 (1946).

Versailles (ver.sälz'). City in N Kentucky, county seat of Woodford County, ab. 12 mi. SE of Frankfort. It was founded in 1792, and named for Versailles, France. 2,760 (1950).

Versailles (ver.sî', -sälz'), Preliminaries of. Preliminaries of peace between France and Germany signed at Versailles Feb. 26, 1871, and ratified by the Treaty of Frankfurt.

Versailles, Treaty of. Treaty of peace between the Allies and Germany after World War I. It was signed on June 28, 1919, in the Galerie des Glaces (Hall of Mirrors) of the palace at Versailles. Drafted by the Paris Peace Conference, which had begun its sessions on Jan. 18, 1919, the treaty incorporated a provision for the League of Nations with the terms for peace. The treaty reflected some concessions by each of its three main architects, Wilson, Lloyd George, and Clemenceau. For Germany the treaty meant the loss of Alsace-Lorraine, the cession of all colonies, the acknowledgment of war guilt, limitation of her army to 100,000 men (with no heavy arms or aircraft), a small navy and merchant marine, the internationalization of her rivers, admission of responsibility for all civilian damages caused during the war, the loss of most of the provinces of Posen and West Prussia, and the placement of the Saar and Danzig under international administration. The treaty was ratified by Germany and all major signatories except the U.S.

Verschoor (ver.shô'r), Anna Helena Margaretha Romein-. See Romein-Verschoor, Anna Helena Margaretha.

Versec or Versecz (ver'shets). Hungarian name of Vrsac.

Vert (ver), Cap. French name of Verde, Cape.

Verte (vert), Aiguille. See Aiguille Verte.

Vertot d'Auboeuf (ver.tô dô.bêf), Abbé René Aubert de. b. at Châteauneuf, in Normandy, France, Nov. 25, 1655; d. at Paris, June 15, 1735. French historian. He became secretary to the Duchess of Orléans in 1703 and historiographer of the Order of Malta in 1715. He wrote Histoire des révolutions de Portugal (1689), Histoire des révolutions de Suède (1696), Histoire des révolutions de la république romaine (1719), and Histoire des chevaliers de Malte (1726).

Vertou (ver.tô). Town in W France, in the department of Loire-Inférieure, SE of Nantes. It belongs to the metropolitan region of Nantes. 7,985 (1946).

Vertumnus (ver.tum'nus). [Also, Vortumnus.] Ancient Etruscan deity taken over by the Romans. Little is known of him except that he came to be regarded as presiding over gardens and orchards, and was worshiped as the god of the changing seasons.

Vertus (ver.tü). [Medieval Latin, Virtus.] Village in the department of Marne, France, ab. 18 mi. SW of Châlons-sur-Marne; noted for its wines.

Vert-vert (ver.ver). Burlesque poem by Gresset, giving the history of a parrot, the pet of a convent.

Vert-vert. Opera by Offenbach, with words by Meilhac and Nuitter, produced at Paris in 1869.

Verulæ (ver.û.lê). Latin name of Veroli.

Verulamium (ver.û.lâ'mi.um). Latin name of St. Albans, England.

Verulam of Verulam (ver.û.lam, -û-), 1st Baron. A title of Bacon, Francis.

Verus (vir'us), Lucius. d. 169 A.D. Adopted son of the emperor Antoninus Pius, and colleague of the emperor Marcus Aurelius (161-169).

Verus, Marcus Annianus. Original name of the emperor Marcus Aurelius.

Verver (ver'ver), Maggie. Heroine of The Golden Bowl (1904), novel by Henry James.

Verviers (ver.vyâ). City in E Belgium, in the province of Liège, ab. 13 mi. E of Liège. It is the center of the Belgian woolen industry; there are also cotton-textile, metal, glassware, foodstuff, and other manufactures; coal mines are in the vicinity. 40,673 (1947).

Vervins (ver.vân). [Medieval Latin, Vervinum (ver.vi-num).] Town in the department of Aisne, France, ab. 24 mi. NE of Laon. A treaty between France and Spain was concluded here May 2, 1598; conquests were mutually restored. Pop. ab. 3,000.

Verwey (vēr.wī'), Albert. b. 1865—. Dutch poet and essayist, professor of Dutch literature at Leiden University (1924-35). He was the founder and first editor of the literary monthly De Beving (The Movement, 1905-19), and had associations with the German poet Stefan George. Influenced by the writings of Spinoza he promoted more and more the idea of the poet as prophet and leader in life; works in this vein are Het Blank Heelal (The Pure Universe, 1908), Goden en Grenzen (Gods and Boundaries, 1920), De Legende van de Ruimte (The Legend of the Space, 1926), De figuren van de Sarkofaag (The Figures on the Sarcophagus, 1930), and In de koorts van het Kortstondige (In the Fever of the Momentary, 1936). He published several studies on the history of Dutch literature as well as translations of foreign poetry. English translations of his work may be found in Flowers from a Foreign Garden, by A. L. Snell, and Coming After, by A. J. Barnouw.

Verworn (fēr.vörn'), Max. b. at Berlin, 1863; d. 1921. German physiologist. He was noted for his investigations of the physiology of the cell, and made extensive studies in the development of lower organisms. Author of Allgemeine Physiologie (1895).

Vesey (vē'ī, vī'ī), Frank Washington. b. at Salem, Mass., Feb. 12, 1852; d. Nov. 24, 1927. American astronomer, and chief assistant for more than ten years to Samuel Pierpont Langley. He demonstrated the galaxial nature of the white nebulae, asserted the existence of gas and water vapor surrounding Mars, and invented an instrument for the measurements of the intensities of Fraunhofer lines in the solar spectrum.

Vesey, Jones. b. at Salem, Mass., Aug. 28, 1813; d. there, May 8, 1880. American poet and essayist. He graduated (1836) from Harvard and became a Unitarian minister, but preached only occasionally. His religious sonnets, according to his claim, were written after he had seen visions of the Holy Ghost. Author of Essays and Poems (1839), Poems (1883), and Poems and Essays (1886; edited by James Freeman Clarke).

Véry (vā.rē), Pierre. b. Nov. 17, 1900—. French novelist, specializing in mystery stories and fantasies. Author of Pont-Egaré (1929), Le Meneur de jeu (1934), L'Assassin du Père Noël (1934), Goupi-Mains Rouges (1937), and others. Best known in America for the film of Goupi-Mains Rouges, he is credited in France with having raised the detective tale to the status of serious literature.

Very Hard Cash. Novel by Charles Reade, published serially in 1863 as Hard Cash.

Very Woman, or the Prince of Tarent, A. Comedy printed in 1655 as the work of Philip Massinger. It was probably written by Fletcher and revised by Massinger.

Vesaas (vā.sās), Tarjel. b. at Vinje, Norway, Aug. 20, 1897—. Norwegian novelist. His deep but concise depiction of folk psychology, often in symbolic form, was fully appreciated only after he published his story of the resistance movement, Huset i Mørkret (House in Darkness, 1945).

Vesalius (vē.sā'li.us), Andreas. b. at Brussels, Dec. 31, 1514; d. in a shipwreck on the island of Zante, Oct. 15, 1564. Belgian anatomist, physician to the emperor Charles V, and after his abdication, to Philip II. He lived chiefly at Madrid, and was condemned to death by the Inquisition. His sentence was commuted by the king to a pilgrimage to the Holy Sepulcher, but he died in a shipwreck on his return. His chief work is De corporis humani fabrica libri septem.

Vesci (vē'sī), 1st Baron. A title of Clifford, Henry de (c1455-1523).

Vesci, 2nd Baron. A title of Clifford, Henry de (1493-1542).

Vesey (vē'zī), Elizabeth. b. c1715; d. near London, 1791. Irish lady of literary tastes, remembered as a leader of the London "Bluestocking" circle. Her chief ambition, to bring leading society and literary personalities to her drawing room, was realized before 1770. Until 1784 her famous parties, held on alternate Tuesdays, were attended by Samuel Johnson and other celebrated members of Johnson's group. She began (1786) to fail mentally, and by February, 1789, was in a state of imbecility. Hannah More alluded to her the poem, Conversation, beginning, "Vesey, of verse the judge and friend."

Vesey, William. b. at Braintree, Mass., Aug. 10, 1674; d. July 11, 1746. American clergyman. Graduated (1693) from Harvard College, he was ordained a priest in 1697, and served (1697-1746) as rector of Trinity Church at New York (both Vesey and Rector streets are named after him).

Vésinet (vā.zē.ne), Le. See Le Vésinet.

Vesontio (vē.son'shiō). Latin name of Besançon.

Vesoul (vē.zōl). Town in E France, capital of the department of Haute-Saône, situated on the Durceon River, a tributary of the Saône River, N of Besançon: trade in wine, grain, and hides. The Church of Saint Georges dates from 1745. Nearby is the hill of La Motte, with a chapel of the Holy Virgin which was gravely damaged in World War II, 11,825 (1946).

Vespasian (vē.spā'zhan). [Full Latin name, Titus Flavius Sabinus Vespasianus.] b. near Reate, Italy, Nov. 17, 9 A.D.; d. June 24, 79 A.D. Roman emperor (69-79). He was of humble origin, but rose to distinction in the army, and became consul in 51. He was afterward governor of Africa, and in 67 was appointed commander in chief against the insurgent Jews. He was proclaimed emperor in 69. His general Antonius Primus overthrew Vitellius in the same year, and Vespasian arrived at Rome in 70, leaving his son Titus to continue the Jewish war. The chief events of his reign were the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus (70), the victories of Agricola in Britain, and the suppression (70) of the revolting Batavians under Civilis. He restored discipline in the army and order in the finances, and expended large sums on public works, including the Colosseum (which, however, he did not live to finish).

Vesper (vē'spēr), Will. b. at Barmen, Germany, Oct. 11, 1882—. German literary figure whose chief works have been anthologies and adaptations of the work of others. He edited the anthologies Ernte aus acht Jahrhunderten deutscher Lyrik (1906) and Aus tausend Jahren, deutsche Balladen und Kriegslieder (1912), and the hymnal Der deutsche Psalter, geistliche Dichtungen (1913). His modern versions and translations include Simplicissimus, Landstörzerin Courasche, Schellmuffsky, Don Quichote, Dyl Uhlenpiegel, Robinson Crusoe, Gullivers Reisen, Münchenhausen, Tacitus's Germania, Hartmann von Aue's Armer Heinrich, and Luther's poems. He brought out popular editions of Goethe, Eichendorff, Hölderlin, Mörike, and Jean Paul. He wrote versions of Tristan und Isolde (1908), Parzifal (1911), Gudrun (1922), Nibelungen (1921), and Reineke der Fuchs (1926). The most important items from his seven volumes of published original poems are found in the collection Kranz des Lebens (1934), the best of his numerous stories are gathered in Geschichten von Liebe, Traum und Tod (1937). He has written several novels, the humorous stories Sam in Schnabelweite (1931) and Der entfesselte Säugling (1935), and the comedy Wer? Wen? (1927) after an Italian novella.

Vespri Sicilliani (vē'sprē sī.chē.lyā'ne), I. Italian title of Vêpres Siciliennes, Les.

Vespucci (vē.spō'chē; Italian, vās.pōt'chē), Amerigo. [Latinized, Americus Vespucius.] b. at Florence, Italy, c1451; d. at Seville, Spain, Feb. 22, 1512. Italian navigator; son of Nastagio Vespucci, a notary of Florence. He received his education from his uncle, a Dominican friar, and became a clerk in the commercial house of the Medici family. He was sent to Spain by his employers about 1490 and so on years after appears to have entered the service of the commercial house of Juanoto Berardi at Seville, of which he became a member in 1495. This house fitted out Columbus's second expedition (1493), and it has been suggested that Vespucci may have accompanied Columbus's first or second expedition, although the supposition is unsupported by any proof. Vespucci himself claims to have accompanied at least four expeditions to the New World. Two of these sailed from Spain by order of King Ferdinand in May, 1497, and May, 1499, respectively; the other two were dispatched from Portugal by King Emanuel in May, 1501, and June, 1503. The first expedition, in which he would appear to have held the post of astronomer, left Cádiz May 10 or 20, 1497, and after touching at the Canaries came "at the end of twenty-seven days upon a coast which we thought to be that of a continent." If this expedition is authentic, Vespucci reached the continent of America a week or two earlier than the Cabots and about 14 months earlier than Columbus. His account of these expeditions was contained in a diary said to have been written after his fourth voyage, and entitled Le Quattro Giornate, no portion of which is extant. He also wrote several letters to his former schoolfellow Soderini, gonfalonier of Florence, one of which remains in a Latin translation printed at St.-Dié in 1507. The German geographer Martin Waldseemüller (Hylacomylus), who made use of this letter in his Cosmographie Introductio, published at St.-Dié in the same year, was the first to suggest the name America for the new continent, in honor of Amerigo Vespucci.

Vesque von Püttlingen (vesk' fon püt'ling'en), Johann. [Pseudonym, J. Hoven.] b. at Opole, in Silesia, July 23, 1803; d. at Vienna, Oct. 29, 1883. Austrian operatic composer. His operas include Donna del Lago (1830), Turandot (1838), Jeanne d'Arc (1840), Der Liebeszauber (1845), Der lustige Rath (1852), and Lips Tellian (1854); composer also of piano pieces, songs, and string quartets.

Vesta (ves'ta). Hearth goddess of the ancient Romans, equivalent to the Greek Hestia. She presided over both the private family hearth or altar, and the central altar of the city, the tribe, or the state. She was worshiped along with the Penates at every meal, when the family assembled round the altar or hearth, which was in the center of the house. Aeneas was said to have carried the sacred fire (her symbol) from Troy, and to have brought it to Italy, and it was preserved at Rome by the state in the sanctuary of the goddess which stood in the Forum. There was no image of Vesta; she was represented entirely by the fire. This fire was watched by six virgins, called "vestals," who prevented it from going out. If it did, it was rekindled by friction. Her festival, the Vestalia, was observed June 9-15, during which time her sanctuary was cleaned.

Vesta. Asteroid (No. 4) discovered by Olbers at Bremen, March 29, 1807.

Vest-Agder (vest'äg'dér). [Former name, Lister og Mandal.] Fylke (county) in S Norway, bordering on the Skagerrak in the S and bounded by the fylke (counties) of Rogaland and Aust-Agder. Capital, Kristiansand; area, 2,815 sq. mi.; pop. 93,980 (1946).

Vestal (ves'tal). Unincorporated community in S New York, in Broome County, on the S bank of the Susquehanna River, opposite Endicott. 4,212 (1950).

Vestale (ves.tá'lá), La. Opera in three acts by Gasparo Spontini, with a libretto by Étienne de Jouy, first performed at the Paris Opéra on Dec. 15, 1807.

Vestalia (ves.tá'li.a). See under Vesta.

Vestdijk (vest'dik), Simon. b. 1898—. Dutch author and physician. His novels include Terug tot Ina Damman (Back to Ina Damman, 1934), Meneer Visser's Hellewaert (Mr. Fisher's Way to Hell, 1936), Het vijfde zegel (The Fifth Seal, 1937; a life of El Greco), De nadagen van Pilatus (Pilatus's After Life, 1938), and De Vuuraanbidders (The Fire-Worshippers, 1947; based on the Dutch war of independence). English translations of parts of his work may be found in Harvest of the Lowlands, by Jan Greshoff.

Vesterålen (ves'tér.á.len). Group of islands off the NW coast of Norway, in the Norwegian Sea, N of the Lofoten group. The chief islands are Andøy, Hadseløy, Hinnøy, and Langøy. Area, ab. 665 sq. mi.; pop. 27,800 (1946).

Vestfold (vest'fól). [Former name, Jarlsberg og Larvik.] Fylke (county) in SE Norway, bordering on the Skagerrak in the S, and bounded by the fylke (counties) of Telemark and Buskerud. Capital, Tønsberg; area, 903 sq. mi.; pop. 147,555 (1946).

Vestini (ves.tí'ni). Ancient people of C Italy, living E of the Sabines, and probably of Sabine affinities. The Vestini became allied with the Romans c300 a.c., and joined the Marsi in the Social War. They were subjugated by the Romans in 295 a.c.

Vestris (ves'tris), Madame. See Mathews, Lucia Elizabeth.

Vestrogothia (ves.trō.goth'i.a), Prince Oskar Carl Wilhelm, Duke of. Full name of Carl, Prince.

Vesulus (ves'ū.lus). Ancient name of Monte Viso.

Vesuna (vē.sō'na) or Vesunna (-sun'a). Ancient name of Périgieux.

Vesuvius (vē.sō'vi.us), Battle of. Victory gained near Mount Vesuvius, c340 a.c., by the Romans under Manlius Torquatus and Decius Mus over the Latin League.

Vesuvius, Mount. [Italian, Monte Vesuvio (vā.zō'-vyō).] The only active volcano on the mainland of Europe, and unquestionably the best-known one in the world, situated on the Bay of Naples, Italy, ab. 9 mi. SE of Naples. It has two summits, the volcano proper (ab. 4,200 ft. high), and Monte Somma to the N (3,730 ft.). It is now reached by a funicular railway. It was regarded in ancient times as extinct. Severe earthquake shocks occurred in 63 A.D., and the first recorded eruption took place in 79, destroying Pompeii, Herculaneum, and Stabiae. The most destructive eruption since that time happened on Dec. 16, 1631. Others, more or less notable, took place in 203, 472, 512, 685, 1139, 1707, 1779, 1794, 1822, 1855, 1872, 1906, and 1944.

Veszprém (ves'prēm). [Also: Veszprim (ves'prēm); German, Weissbrunn.] Town in W central Hungary, situated N of Lake Balaton and ab. 63 mi. SW of Budapest. Formerly a place of coronation of Hungarian royalty, it has a cathedral and a notable chapel from the 13th century (the latter is named after a queen of Hungary). The cathedral college was renowned during the Middle Ages. In the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries, the town was much contested between the German emperors of the house of Hapsburg and the Turks, 18,228 (1948).

Veta Madre (vā'tā mā'hē; Spanish, bā'). Silver lode, or system of lodes, near Guanajuato, Mexico. It is ab. 8 mi. long. It was discovered in 1558, and Humboldt calculated that, up to 1800, it had yielded one fifth of the silver then current in the world. It has been worked to a great depth.

Vetancour or Vetancur or Vetancurt (bā.tāng.kōr'), Agustín de. See Betancourt, Agustín de.

Vetera Castra (vet'ē.rā kas'tra). Latin name of Xanten.

Veterans Administration. [Called the VA.] U.S. government agency established on July 21, 1930, for the purpose of administering the national government's program of veterans' benefits and relief. It consolidated the activities of the Pension Bureau, the National Home, and the Veterans Bureau. It administers veterans' homes and hospitals and maintains regional offices for carrying out laws relating to pensions, education, loans, vocational training, insurance, and relief.

Veterans Bureau. U.S. government agency established in 1921 for the purpose of centralizing the administration of various veterans' affairs, including insurance, compensation, and occupational therapy. An investigation of the operations of the bureau under the Harding administration disclosed waste and some official misconduct in the handling of funds and contracts. The functions of the Veterans Bureau were absorbed by the Veterans Administration on July 21, 1930.

Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. [Called the VFW.] National society organized in 1913 which is composed of honorably discharged veterans who have served abroad with the U.S. armed forces in foreign wars. One of the largest veterans' organizations in the U.S., it maintains headquarters at Kansas City, Mo., and has approximately 8,500 local posts. It has been active in securing legislation for ex-service men's benefits.

Veterans Village. Unincorporated community in Oklahoma, in Payne County, NW of Stillwater. It has developed since World War II to house the families of students, many of whom are veterans. 3,555 (1950).

Veto Bill. See Parliament Act.

Verter (vet'ér), Lake. See Vättern, Lake.

Vetlerli (fet'ér.lē), Friedrich. b. in the canton of Thurgau, Switzerland, Aug. 15, 1822; d. May 21, 1882. Swiss inventor, director of the manufacture of firearms at Neuchâtel. His magazine gun was adopted by Switzerland in 1868 and by Italy in 1870.

Veillot (vē.yō), Louis. b. at Boyennes, Loiret, France, Oct. 11, 1813; d. at Paris, April 7, 1883. French journalist and publicist; leader of the French Ultramontanes. He was editor of the Paris Univers, and wrote various polemical and other works.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Veules-les-Roses (vè.là.rôz). Village in NW France, in the department of Seine-Inférieure, situated between high cliffs on the English Channel, ab. 15 mi. W of Dieppe; popular seaside resort. It suffered damage in World War II, 608 (1946).

Veurne (vèr'nè). Flemish name of Furnes.

Veuster (vès.ter), Joseph de. Original name of Father Damien.

Veuve (vè.v), La. Comedy by Pierre Corneille, produced in 1631 or 1632.

Vevey (vè.và). [Also: Vevay; German, Vivis; Latin, Viviscus.] Town in SW Switzerland, in the canton of Vaud, situated on Lake Geneva SE of Lausanne. It has manufactures of cigars, chocolate, and children's food. 12,598 (1941).

Vexin (vek.sah). Region and former territory in N France, NW of Paris. It was included partly in Normandy (the Norman Vexin) and partly in Île-de-France (the French Vexin). Norman Vexin now forms part of the departments of Eure and Seine-Inférieure; its capital was Gisors. French Vexin forms part of the departments of Oise and Seine-et-Oise; its capital was Pontoise.

Veygoux (vè.gò), Louis Charles Antoine Desaix de. See Desaix de Veygoux. Louis Charles Antoine.

Vézelay (vè.zè.là). [Medieval Latin, Vezeliacus (vez.e.l'i.a.kus), Vizeliacus.] Town in C France, in the department of Yonne, ab. 25 mi. SE of Auxerre: noted for its abbey, founded in the 9th century. The Church of Sainte Madeleine is one of the largest monastic church buildings in France. Saint Bernard preached the second Crusade here in 1140, and it was the rendezvous of Richard I of England (Richard the Lion-Hearted) and Philip Augustus before starting for the third Crusade. 1,532 (1946).

Vézère (vè.zer). River in France which joins the Dordogne ab. 23 mi. SE of Périgueux. Length, ab. 120 mi.

VFW. See Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

Via Aemilia (v'ia è.mil'i.a). [English, Aemilian Way.] Important ancient Roman highway, the earliest in N Italy, connecting Placentia (modern Piacenza) and Ariminum (Rimini), where it met the Flaminian Way. Later branches extended from Rimini to Bologna, and thence to Aquileia, and from Piacenza to Pavia, and the main road was extended from Piacenza to Milan and Aosta. The original highway was built by Marcus Aemilius Lepidus in 187 B.C., and is still in use.

Via Appia (ap'i.a). Latin name of the Appian Way.

Via Aurelia (òrè.l'i.a). [English, Aurelian Way.] One of the chief ancient Roman highways. It was built toward the close of the republic, and extended from Rome, for the most part along the coast, to Pisa, where it was continued along the Ligurian shore to the Maritime Alps, and by Augustus was carried into Gaul. There are considerable remains of the road, notably along the Italian and French Riviera.

Via Cassia (kash'i.a, kas'-). [English, Cassian Way.] Ancient Roman highway which extended from Rome through Etruria to Arretium (modern Arezzo), and thence to Florence and Lucca. It was in existence before the end of the republic, but the time of its construction is unknown.

Via Clodia (klò'di.a). [English, Clodian Way.] Ancient Roman highway of the time of the republic, extending through Etruria on a line about parallel with the Via Cassia. It was a branch of the Via Cassia, which it left ab. 10 mi. from Rome, where its pavement still exists.

Via Crucis (krò'sis). Romance by Francis Marion Crawford, published in 1898.

Viadana (vyà.dà.nà). Town and commune in N Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Mantova, situated on the Po River between Parma and Mantua; agricultural markets. Pop. of commune, 18,165 (1936); of town, 4,755 (1936).

Viadana, Lodovico. [Original surname, Grossi.] b. at Viadana, Italy, c1564; d. at Gualtieri, Italy, May 2, 1645. Italian composer, notably of the Cento concerti ecclesiastici a 1, a 2, a 3, e a 4 voci, con il basso continuo per sonar nell'organo (1602), the first publication using the "basso continuo." He also composed madrigals, psalms, and masses.

Via Dolorosa (v'ia dol.ò.rò'sa). Name given by Christians to the road from the Mount of Olives to Golgotha.

Viadua (vi.ad'ù.a) or Viadus (vi.ad'us). Latin names of the Oder.

Via Egnatia (v'ia eg.nà'shi.a). Important ancient Roman military road, running from the coast of the Adriatic at Dyrrhachium (modern Durrës) through Illyria and Macedonia to Thessalonica (Salonica), and thence by Philippi through Thrace to Cypselia (Ipsala), near what is now Edirne. The date of its construction is unknown. Its length was 534 Roman miles. There are abundant remains of the road, especially near Salonika.

Via Flaminia (fla.min'i.a). Latin name of the Flaminian Way.

Via Latina (la.ti'na). [English, Latin Way.] One of the great highways leaving ancient Rome. It ran to Casilinum (near Capua), where it united with the Appian Way. A branch was later carried from Teanum to Beneventum. Both the Via Latina and the Appian Way left Rome by the Porta Capena. The Via Latina undoubtedly existed as a road for a long period before it was regularly constructed and paved. The invading forces of both Pyrrhus and Hannibal followed its course.

Via Mala (vè'à mál'a). Picturesque portion of the road leading up the valley of the Hintere Rhein River, in the canton of Graubünden, Switzerland. It traverses a deep and narrow chasm, the Verlorenes Loch.

Viana (vyà'nà; Spanish, byà'n). Javier de. b. 1872; d. 1926. Uruguayan short-story writer, identified with the regionalism of the so-called Criollismo movement in Spanish-American literature. Author of Yuyos (1912), Leña seca (1913), and Guri y otras novelas (1916).

Viana do Castelo (vyu'na dò kash.te'lò). District in N Portugal, in the province of Minho. Capital, Viana do Castelo; area, ab. 814 sq. mi.; pop. 275,969 (1950).

Viana do Castelo. Town and concelho (commune) in N Portugal, in the province of Minho, capital of the district of Viana do Castelo, NW of Oporto; seaport; fisheries; lace manufactures; agricultural trade. The municipal palace dates from the 15th century, and the castle from the 16th and 17th centuries. Pop. of concelho, 62,700 (1940); of town, 11,819 (1940).

Vianney (vyà'nè), Saint Jean Baptiste Marie. [Called the Curé d'Ars.] b. at Dardilly, near Lyons, France, May 8, 1786; d. at Ars, France, Aug. 4, 1859. French Roman Catholic priest. After considerable difficulty with seminary studies, he was ordained priest in 1815 at Grenoble, and assigned to Écully. He became parish priest of Ars, in the diocese of Belley, in 1818, promoted a religious revival in the area, established several charitable works, and became famous as a guide of souls. Persons came to Ars from all parts of the world for advice, to the number of 20,000 or more a year. He was canonized in 1925 and declared patron of parish priests in 1929.

Via Ostiensis (v'ia ò.sti.en'sis). [English, Ostian Way.] Ancient highway from Rome to Ostia. It followed the left bank of the Tiber, cutting across the larger bends of the river.

Via Portuensis (pòr.tù.en'sis). Ancient highway from Rome to the new imperial seaport Portus Traiani (modern Civitavecchia). Its course, which can still be followed, is along the right bank of the Tiber.

Via Praenestina (pren.ès.ti'na). [English, Praenestine Way.] Very ancient highway from Rome to Praeneste (modern Palestrina), whence it was continued to join the Via Latina at Anagnina (Anagni).

Viardot (vyàr.dò), Louis. b. at Dijon, France, July 31, 1800; d. at Paris, May 5, 1883. French author. He studied law at Paris, became a journalist, and was manager (1838-41) of the Théâtre Italien. With George Sand and Pierre Leroux he founded in 1841 the Revue Indépendante. Author of Histoire des Arabes et des Maures d'Espagne (1851).

Viardot-Garcia (vyàr.dò.gàr.thè'à), Michelle Ferdinande Pauline. b. at Paris, July 18, 1821; d. there, May 18, 1910. French opera singer and actress; daughter of Manuel Garcia, sister of Malibran, and wife of Louis Viardot. Her voice was a mezzo-soprano. She was a pupil of her mother and of Liszt (for the piano) and made her first appearance as a singer at Brussels in 1837. In 1849 she created the part of Fidès in Meyerbeer's Prophète, which she sang more than 200 times in all the great cities of Europe. Among her other roles were Rachel (La Juive), Orphée in Gluck's opera of that name (the part was restored to the contralto register, for which it was written, by Berlioz), Alceste, Desdemona, Norma, Cenerentola, Romeo, Lucia, Azucena, Zerlina, and many others. Sheret red from the operatic stage in 1863, and later sang only in concerts. From 1871 on she lived at Paris and gave her time to teaching. She published songs and other works.

Viareggio (vyá.rád'jō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Lucca, situated on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 14 mi. NW of Pisa: a popular and fashionable seaside resort. The English poet Shelley drowned near here in 1822. Pop. of commune, 35,594 (1936); of town, 30,384 (1936).

Via Sacra (vī'á sá'kra). [English, Sacred Way.] First street of ancient Rome to be established on the low ground beneath the hills. It had its name either because on its line, according to tradition, Romulus made his treaty with the Sabine chief Tatius, or because on it lay several of the oldest and most revered sanctuaries of Rome. It began at the E end of the Forum Romanum, and ran along the S side of the Forum, past the Basilica Julia and the Temple of Castor and Pollux; then it turned at right angles and crossed the Forum, and turned again to skirt the N side of the Temple of Julius Caesar. It continued in front of the Temple of Antoninus and Faustina and the Basilica of Constantine to the Arch of Titus. Under the empire it was extended hence past the Colosseum to a point on the Esquiline Hill. The lava pavement of the Via Sacra, as it now exists, is almost all late in date; and it is probable that the course of the street was slightly altered from time to time to meet architectural exigencies.

Via Salaria (sa.lá'ri.a). [English, Salarian Way.] One of the most celebrated of ancient Roman highways. It ran from Rome up the Tiber valley to Reate (modern Rieti), then crossed the Apennines and went past Asculum Picenum (Ascoli Piceno) to the Adriatic. Here it branched, one road running N to Ancona and the other S to Adria. The date of this highway is unknown; it is undoubtedly very old, and existed as a route long before it was built as a public work.

Viatica (vyát'ka). Former name of Kirov; see also Vyatka.

Viator (vī'á.tōr), Saint. [French, Viateur (vī'á.tōr).] b. c.360; d. 389. French religious figure, confessor and lecturer of the cathedral at Lyons. He fled to Egypt with Saint Justus, where they lived in seclusion for several years. The Clerics of Saint Viator (called Viatiorians), founded in 1829, at Vourles near Lyons, take their name from him.

Viau (vyō), Théophile de. b. near Agen, France, 1590; d. at Paris, 1626. French poet. He wrote the tragedy Pyrame et Thisbé (1617), and for his part in the authorship of Parnasse Satirique (1622) was condemned to death. His sentence was commuted to banishment. His complete works were published in 1856.

Viaud (vyō), Dr. André. A pseudonym used by Auriol, Vincent, as a member of the French Resistance in World War II.

Viaud, Louis Marie Julien. Original name of Loti, Pierre.

Via Valeria (vī'á val'ri'á). [English, Valerian Way.] One of the principal highways of ancient Rome. It continued a road which led from Rome to Tibur (modern Tivoli) to Lake Fucinus (Fucino) and the Marsic territory, and was afterward extended to the Adriatic at the mouth of the Aternus (Aterno). The time of its construction as far as Lake Fucinus is unknown; its continuation through the Apennines and in the Aternus valley was built by Claudius. Many portions of the roadway survive.

Via Vicinalis (vis.i.nā'lis). Latin name of the Vicinal Way.

Vibert (vē'ber), Jehan Georges. b. at Paris, Sept. 30, 1840; d. there, July 27, 1902. French genre painter and writer. Among his works are Entry of Bull-Fighters, Cogelin as Mascarielle, Grasshopper and Ant, Monseigneur's Antechamber, The Despair of Polichinelle, The Arrival, The Apotheosis of M. Thiers, Committee on Moral Books (New York), and Theological Discussion (New York); many others are in the U.S. In 1879-80 he exhibited only in the exhibitions of the French Watercolor Society, of which he was one of the founders. He wrote a number of short plays, monologues, and other works, and also published La Science de la peinture (1891).

Viborg (vē'bōr). Amt (county) of Denmark, in N Jutland, bounded by the amt (counties) of Aalborg, Randers, Aarhus, and Ringkøbing and the Lim Fjord. Capital, Viborg; area, 1,180 sq. mi.; pop. 151,555 (1945).

Viborg. Town in Denmark, in N Jutland, the capital of the amt (county) of Viborg, NW of Aarhus. It has textile and machine factories, dairies, and an agricultural trade. Its port is Hjarbæk on the Lim Fjord. The cathedral, founded 1130, rebuilt in the 19th century, is a granite structure. Originally a pagan place of sacrifice, Viborg was until 1340 the place where the election of the kings of Denmark took place. 20,084 (1945).

Viborg (vē'bōry'). Swedish name of Viipuri; see also Vyborg.

Vibo Valentia (vē'bō val'en.tyā). [Also: Monteleone di Calabria; ancient name, Hipponium.] Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Calabria, in the province of Catanzaro, situated S of the Gulf of Sant' Eufemia, SW of Catanzaro: agricultural trade center. Pop. of commune, 17,779 (1936); of town, 10,073 (1936).

Vicálvaro (vē'kāl.vā.rō; Spanish, bē.kāl'vā.rō). Town in C Spain, in the province of Madrid: an eastern suburb of Madrid. 21,182 (1940).

Vicar of Bray (brā). See under Bray, England.

Vicar of Wakefield (wāk'fēld), The. Novel by Oliver Goldsmith, published in 1766. It has appeared in numerous editions and in several dramatizations.

Vicar's Daughter, The. Novel by E. H. Young, published in 1928. It is the story of a vicar unjustly suspected of being the father of a young woman in his household.

Vicchio (vē'k'kyō). Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Firenze, situated in the Apennines NE of Florence: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 11,551 (1936); of town, 1,644 (1936).

Viconia (vis.e.nō'ni.a). A medieval Latin name of the Vilaïne.

Vicente (vē.sān'te), Gil. b. c.1465; d. c.1537. Portuguese poet and playwright, who created Portuguese dramatic literature with his autos, comedies, tragicomedies, and farces. His first plays, and some of the works in other genres, were written in Spanish. Among his best-known works in Portuguese were Aulo da alma (1508), Barca do Inferno (1517), and Aulo da feira (1527). The first edition of his works was published by his sons in 1562.

Vicente López (vē.sen'tā lō'pēs; Spanish, bē). City in E Argentina, in Buenos Aires province: a northwestern residential suburb of Buenos Aires. 149,958 (1947).

Vicentino (vē.chen.tē'nō), Nicola. b. at Vicenza, Italy, c.1511; d. 1572. Italian composer and music theorist. In his madrigals he sought to recapture Greek modes, and invented the archiorgano, an instrument with six keyboards, to further his system.

Vicenza (vē.chen'tsā). Province in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto. Capital, Vicenza; area, ab. 1,051 sq. mi.; pop. 559,375 (1936).

Vicenza. [Latin: Vicetia; in the Middle Ages, Vicientia (vi.sen'shi.a, -sha).] City and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, the capital of the province of Vicenza, ab. 40 mi. NW of Venice: trade center for agricultural products; manufactures of silk and woolen textiles, gold and silver articles. Pop. of commune, 69,379 (1936); of city, 48,196 (1936).

Art and Architecture. The cathedral, started in the 12th century, has a Gothic façade of 1467; other medieval churches are Santa Corona and San Lorenzo; the bell tower was built in the 13th century on a Roman foundation. However, Vicenza's chief fame rests on the Renaissance buildings by Palladio and other masters of the period. Outstanding is the 16th-century Basilica Palladiana, but the Palazzo del Monte di Pietà, da Schio, Pigafetto, Trissino, Thiene, Barbaran, and Colleoni, the Loggia del Capitano, and others, mainly of the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries, are also noteworthy. In the vicinity are the 15th-century Basilica di Monte Berico, a place of pilgrimage, and the Villa Valmarana, built in 1669 according to designs by Palladio, containing murals by Tiepolo. Vicenza was heavily damaged in World War fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, n.ê, hêr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, nôve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; тн, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

II. The cathedral was almost entirely ruined, and many paintings were lost, in luding frescoes by Montagna and d'Altoso. Other churches were badly hit, in luding San Filippo Neri, San Gaetano, and Santa Maria della Scala: Santa Corona and San Lorenzo escaped all but slight damage. The roof of the Basilica Palladiana was destroyed; serious damage was also done to the Palazzo Collei (including Tiepolo frescoes), Cordellina (frescoes by Cignaroli lost), del Governo, da Schio, Thiene, and Trissino, and the Villa Valmarana.

Vicenza, Duke of. A title of Caulaincourt, Marquis Armand Augustin Louis de.

Vicetia (vī.sē'shi.ə, -sha). Latin name of Vicenza, city.

Vich (vēk). [Also: Vigue; ancient name, AUSA; later AUSAONA.] Town in NE Spain, in the province of Barcelona, ab. 38 mi. N of Barcelona: textile, hat, and paper manufactures. The cathedral, of the 11th century, was remodeled in the baroque style in 1780. Pop. 15,516 (1940).

Vichada (vē.chā'thā; Spanish, bē-). Commissary in E Colombia. Capital, Puerto Carreño; area, 39,764 sq. mi.; pop. 9,200 (est. 1950).

Vichy (vē'shi, vish'i; French, vē.shē). [Also: Vichy-les-Bains (-lā.bān); Latin, Aquae Calidae, meaning "Hot Springs."] Town in C France, in the department of Allier, situated on the Allier River ab. 32 mi. SE of Moulins. It is a health resort of world-wide reputation. During the German occupation from 1940 to 1944, the government of Marshal Pétain had its seat here. 29,391 (1946).

Vichy-Chamond (vē.shē.shān.rōn), Marie de. See Deffand, Marquise du.

Vicinal Way (vis'nal). [Latin, Via Vicinalis.] Old Roman road by which produce was brought from the farms of Essex to London. At first it left the city with Ermine Street at Bishopsgate, later at Aldgate when Bow Bridge was built. From Bishopsgate it ran E to what is now Romford in Essex, to what is now Chelmsford and to Camulodunum (now Colchester). The road crossed the Stour at what is now Stratford, and thence ran near Woodbridge to what is now Dunwich, on the coast, and terminated near Norwich. From Norwich a direct road ran to Cambridge.

Vicksburg (viks'bērg). [Called the "Hill City."] City in SW Mississippi, county seat of Warren County, at the confluence of the Mississippi and Yazoo rivers: processing and manufacturing center for cotton; shipping point for cotton, lumber, and cattle. A major strategic objective during the Civil War, it was captured by Union troops under General Ulysses S. Grant on July 4, 1863. Pop. 27,948 (1950).

Vico (vē'kō), Francesco de. b. at Macerata, Italy, 1805; d. 1848. Italian astronomer. He made observations of Venus and of Saturn's rings, and discovered several comets.

Vico, Giovanni Battista. b. at Naples, Italy, 1668; d. Jan. 21, 1744. Italian philosopher and jurist, professor of rhetoric at Naples and historiographer royal. His chief works are De antiquissimis Italorum sapientia (1710), De universi juris uno principio et fine uno (1720), and Principii d'una scienza nuova . . . (1725). He was the first philosopher of history to envisage a cyclical recurrence of evolutionary stages in human development, and to see a connection between artistic expression and the emotional and intellectual achievements of mankind as a whole.

Vico Equense (vē'kō ē.kven'sē). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Campania, in the province of Napoli, situated on the Gulf of Naples between Castellammare di Stabia and Sorrento: agricultural commune. Pop. of commune, 12,665 (1936); of town, 2,756 (1936).

Vicomte de Bragelonne (vē.kōnt de brāzh.lon). Le. See Dix Ans Plus Tard ou le Vicomte de Bragelonne.

Vicq d'Azyr (vēk dā.zēr), Félix. b. 1748; d. 1794. French comparative anatomist and physiologist.

Victor I (vik'tor), Saint. b. in Africa; d. 199. Pope from 189 to 199. He excommunicated the Monarchian Theodotus.

Victor II. [Original name, Gebhard.] b. in Germany, c1018; d. at Arezzo, Italy, July 28, 1057. Pope from 1055 to 1057. He endeavored to suppress simony and the marriage of priests.

Victor III. [Name as abbot, Desiderius; original name, Daferius or Daufar.] b. at Benevento, Italy, 1026 or 1027; d. at Rome, Sept. 16, 1087. Pope from 1086 to 1087. He was earlier abbot of Monte Cassino.

Victor IV. [Original name, Gregorio Conti.] Antipope, chosen in 1138 in opposition to Innocent II. Two months after claiming the papacy he submitted to the rightful Pope, Innocent II.

Victor IV. [Original name, Octavius.] b. at Montecelio, Italy; d. at Lucca, Italy, April 20, 1164. Antipope (1159-1164) in opposition to Alexander III. One of two antipopes by this name, he did not recognize his predecessor of 1138. Elected by a minority of cardinals on the death of Pope Adrian IV, Cardinal Octavius after the synod of Pavia (1160) obtained imperial support of Frederick I (Frederick Barbarossa), but failed to win support of Louis VII of France, who favored Alexander as the rightful Pope.

Victor (vēk'tor) or Victor-Perrin (-pe.rañ), Claude. [Title, Duc de Bellune (Duke of Belluno); original name, Claude Victor Perrin.] b. at Lamarche, Vosges, France, Dec. 7, 1764; d. at Paris, March 1, 1841. French marshal. He served as chief of battalion at Toulon in 1793, became brigadier general and was assigned to the army of the eastern Pyrenees near the end of the year, took part in the early Italian campaigns, becoming a general of division in 1797, commanded in Vendée, and fought at Marengo in 1800. He was ambassador to Denmark in 1805, became a marshal for his part in the victory of Friedland (now Prandins), in East Prussia, in 1807, was made Duke of Belluno after the peace of Tilsit, and was for a time governor of Berlin. He received command of the 1st army corps in Spain in 1808, gained various successes, but was defeated by Wellington at Talavera de la Reina, guarded the French retreat at the Beresina in 1812, and served in the campaigns of 1813-14. He presided over the trials of officers accused of treason during the Hundred Days, and was minister of war (1821-23).

Victor (vik'tor), Orville James. b. at Sandusky, Ohio, Oct. 23, 1827; d. at Hoboken, N.J., March 14, 1910. American editor and author. He conceived (1860) the idea of the dime novel, formulating the technique for mass-producing adventure stories by the use of writers schooled in this genre. These dime novels, published by the New York house headed by Erastus F. Beadle, attained wide sales running into the millions. Author of The History, Civil, Political, and Military, of the Southern Rebellion . . . (4 vols., 1861-68), The American Rebellion: Some Facts and Reflections for the Consideration of the English People (1861), Incidents and Anecdotes of the War (1862), and History of American Conspiracies (1863).

Victor, Sextus Aurelius. See Aurelius Victor, Sextus.

Victor Amadeus II (of Savoy) (am.ə.dē'us). [Also, Victor Amadeus I (of Sardinia).] b. 1666; d. 1732. Duke of Savoy and king of Sardinia. He succeeded to the duchy in 1675, sided with the Allies in the wars against France, received Sicily in 1713, ceded Sicily to Austria in 1720 and received Sardinia in exchange, assumed the title of king of Sardinia, and abdicated in 1730.

Victor Amadeus III (of Savoy). [Also, Victor Amadeus II (of Sardinia).] b. 1726; d. 1796. Duke of Savoy and king of Sardinia; son of Charles Emmanuel III. He reigned from 1773 to 1796, and lost Nice, Savoy, and places in Piedmont to France.

Victor Emmanuel I (of Italy) (ē.man'ū.ēl, ē-). See Victor Emmanuel I (of Sardinia).

Victor Emmanuel II (of Italy). [Also: Victor Emmanuel I (of Sardinia), sometimes Victor Emmanuel I (of Italy); Italian, Vittorio Emanuele.] b. at Turin, Italy, March 14, 1820; d. at Rome, Jan. 8, 1878. King of Italy; son of Charles Albert, king of Sardinia. He served with distinction at the battle of Goito in 1848, and in the campaigns of 1848-49, and was present at the battle of Novara (March 23, 1849), on the evening of which day he succeeded to the throne of Sardinia by the abdication of his father. In 1852 he made Cavour his chief political adviser, in accordance with whose policy he supported France and Great Britain in the Crimean War and allied himself with France against Austria in 1859. He received Lombardy from Austria in 1859, and in 1860 annexed Tuscany, Parma, Modena, the Romagna, the Two Sicilies, the Marches, and Umbria. He ceded Savoy and Nice to France in 1860, assumed the title "king of Italy" in 1861, and allied himself with Prussia against Austria in 1866, as a result of which he received the cession of Venetia from the latter country. The complete union of Italy was effected by the occupation of Rome in 1870.

Victor Emmanuel III (of Italy). [Italian, Vittorio Emanuele.] b. at Naples, Italy, Nov. 11, 1869; d. at Alexandria, Egypt, Dec. 28, 1947. King of Italy and emperor (1936 et seq.) of Ethiopia. He ascended the throne on the death of his father, Humbert, July 29, 1900, and abdicated (May 9, 1946) in favor of his son.

Victor Emmanuel I (of Sardinia) (f. man'ù.èl, e-). [Italian, Vittorio Emanuele.] b. 1759; d. 1824. King of Sardinia (1802-21); son of Victor Amadeus III. He ruled at first in Sardinia, but received Nice, Savoy, Piedmont, and Genoa (1814-15). He abdicated in 1821. Although he was never king of a united Italy, he is sometimes called Victor Emmanuel I of Italy.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə; Spanish, bek.tō'ryá). See also Vitória, Brazil; also Ciudad Victoria, Mexico.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə). [Full name, Alexandrina Victoria.] b. at Kensington Palace, London, May 24, 1819; d. at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, Jan. 22, 1901. Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, and empress of India. She was the only child of Edward Augustus, Duke of Kent, fourth son of George III, and was educated under the direction of her mother, Mary Louisa Victoria, daughter of Francis Frederick, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, and of the Duchess of Northumberland. On the death of William IV, the third son of George III, she succeeded to the throne, June 20, 1837. She was crowned June 28, 1838, and married Albert, Prince of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (who died Dec. 14, 1861), on Feb. 10, 1840. Her favorite residences were Balmoral Castle (in the Highlands of Aberdeenshire, Scotland), Osborne (Isle of Wight), and Windsor. She assumed the title of Empress of India in 1876. The jubilee of her reign was celebrated in 1887, and her diamond jubilee (60 years) in 1897. (For the leading events in her reign, see the article on England.) She was author in part of Leaves from the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands (private printing, 1867; publicly issued, 1868) and More Leaves from the Journal of a Life in the Highlands (1883). She supervised the preparation of lives of the Prince Consort by Charles Grey (1867) and Theodore Martin (1875-80).

Victoria. [Full name, Victoria Eugénie Julia Ena.] b. at Balmoral Castle, Scotland, Oct. 24, 1887—. Daughter of Prince Henry of Battenberg (1858-96) and Princess Beatrice of Great Britain (daughter of Queen Victoria), and wife of Alfonso XIII, king of Spain, whom she married May 31, 1906.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə; Spanish, bek.tō'ryá). City in E. Argentina, in Entre Ríos province, ab. 190 mi. NW of Buenos Aires, 17,711 (1947).

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə). State of Australia, in the SE part. It is bounded by New South Wales (largely separated by the Murray River) on the N and NE, the Tasman Sea on the SE, Bass Strait on the S, and South Australia on the W. Its governor is appointed by the crown, and is aided by a cabinet. There is a parliament of two chambers, the legislative council and legislative assembly (both elected). The state is represented in the federal Parliament by six senators and 20 representatives. Much of Victoria is mountainous or hilly; the Great Dividing Range enters the state in the NE and continues W to the Grampians, near the W border; the mountains are high in the E (reaching a peak elevation of 6,509 ft. in Mount Bogong) descending in the C and W to a series of high ridges. The most extensive lowland is the plain of the Murray River in the NW and N; the W part of this plain is rather arid, and irrigation is extensively used for agriculture in the entire lowland. The region bordering the coast has ample rainfall and a mild climate with warm summers and cool winters. Most of this area is hilly. Sheep raising is the principal occupation, but in addition wheat is a major crop in the Murray River basin (where Victoria normally produces about one fifth of the Australian wheat crop) and fruits, vegetables, and dairy products are produced in several areas. Forests cover about one fourth of the state and consist almost entirely of eucalyptus, which is a hardwood. Softwoods are imported. Gold was discovered in 1851, and gold mining was the chief mining industry in the early days of the colony, but has declined in recent years; in 1949 less than eight percent of Australian gold production came from Victoria. The chief mineral resource at present is lignite coal, of which over six million tons are mined annually in the vicinity of Yallourn, ab. 88 mi. by rail E. of Melbourne. Manufacturing has grown rapidly since the beginning of World War II; the diverse industries produce goods almost exclusively for the Australian market. Victoria has well-developed transportation facilities, with ab. 4,700 mi. of railroad (1949) and ab. 35,000 mi. of all-weather roads. Several hydroelectric power and irrigation projects have been developed in the state. Melbourne is the single large city of Victoria and, with its suburbs, contained 68 percent of the total population of the state in 1949. Victoria was first settled in 1835, formed at first a part of New South Wales (called the Port Phillip District), and was made a separate colony in 1851. Capital, Melbourne; area, 87,884 sq. mi.; pop. 2,054,701 (1947), 2,231,255 (est. 1950).

Victoria. Capital of the province of British Columbia, Canada, situated near the SE tip of Vancouver Island, on the Strait of Juan de Fuca. The city is the chief commercial center of the island, and is an important port, shipping lumber, coal, and canned fish; its industries include sawmills and paper mills, fish canneries, boat-building yards, and machine shops. Founded in 1849, it served as the capital of what was then the separate colony of Vancouver Island, before becoming the capital of British Columbia in 1866. The city contains many beautiful buildings and is widely known as a tourist resort (it is a favorite retirement spot for Englishmen because of the similarity of the climate to that of England). Pop. of city, 51,331 (1951); with suburbs, 104,303 (1951).

Victoria. Old city on the NW coast of Hong Kong island, located on the largest and best harbor in S China. Technically the capital and principal city of Hong Kong colony, it is not now usually distinguished from the urban part of the colony taken as a whole.

Victoria. [Also, Port Victoria.] Capital and chief port of the Seychelles Islands, Indian Ocean, situated on Mahé. The chief exports are copra, cinnamon, patchouli, vanilla, tortoise shell, and guano, 9,816 (est. 1947).

Victoria. City in S Texas, county seat of Victoria County, NE of Corpus Christi, in a cotton and petroleum region. 16,126 (1950).

Victoria. In Roman mythology, the personification of victory, equated to the Greek Nike. She was specifically a goddess of the Roman legions, and also of the emperors. Her temple at Rome dates back to 294 B.C.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə; Spanish, bek.tō'ryá). One of the vessels composing (1519-21) the squadron of Magellan. She was the only one to return to Europe around the Cape of Good Hope, and was thus the first vessel to circumnavigate the globe. Subsequently she was used in two voyages to the West Indies, and was lost while returning from the second one. The Victoria was of ab. 90 tons burden, and carried 45 men.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə). Asteroid (No. 12), discovered by Hind at London, Sept. 13, 1850.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə; Spanish, bek.tō'ryá), Guadalupe. [Original name, Juan (or Manuel) Félix Fernández.] b. in Durango, Mexico, 1807; d. at Perote, Mexico, March 21, 1843. Mexican general and politician, president (1824-29) of Mexico. He was a prominent supporter of Hidalgo in the war for independence (1810), and adopted the name Guadalupe Victoria to commemorate a victory over the Spaniards. He supported the Plan of Iguala (1821), revolted (1823) with Santa Anna against Iturbide, and was a member of the provisional government, March, 1823-October, 1824, the candidate of the federalists in the ensuing election, and the first president of Mexico, Oct. 10, 1824, to April 1, 1829.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ə), Lake. See also Alexandrina, Lake.

Victoria, Lake. [Also, Victoria Nyanza.] Great lake in equatorial Africa, the source of the Nile River. It is crossed in its N part by the equator and is divided among Tanganyika, Uganda, and Kenya. The Nile stream issues about centrally from the N end of the lake. It was discovered by Speke in 1858, and was visited by Grant, Stanley, and others. Area, ab. 26,828 sq. mi.; elevation, ab. 3,723 ft.

Victoria (vik.tō'ri.ä; Spanish, bek.tō'ryä), Tomás Luis de [Italian, Tommaso Lodovico da Vittoria]. b. at Ávila, Spain, c1540; d. at Madrid, Aug. 27, 1611. Spanish church composer. He was successor (1571) to Palestrina at the Collegium Romanum as maestro di cappella. Among his works are madrigals, the Officium Defunctorum for the empress Maria, motets, hymns, masses, and psalms.

Victoria and Albert Museum (vik.tō'ri.ä; al'bért). Museum at London, formerly known (1857-99) as the South Kensington Museum. It has departments relating to architecture, sculpture, painting, ceramics, woodwork, metalwork, textiles, engraving, illustration and design, and Indian art. It also has a library and extension division. The collections illustrate the fine and applied arts of all periods.

Victoria Cave. Cave in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated in the face of a cliff ab. 900 ft. above the river Ribble, ab. 2 mi. N of Settle. The cave, discovered in 1837, has yielded large numbers of prehistoric and later relics.

Victoria de Durango (bek.tō'ryä dā dō.rāng.gō). See Durango, city, Mexico.

Victoria de las Tunas (vëk.tō'ryä dā lās tū'nās; Spanish, bek-, tēk-). City in E Cuba, in Oriente province. 12,754 (1943).

Victoria Desert (vik.tō'ri.ä). See Great Victoria Desert.

Victoria Diamond. African diamond, weighing almost 185 carats; acquired by the former Nizam of Hyderabad.

Victoria Falls. Cataract in the Zambezi River, S central Africa, in the NW part of Southern Rhodesia on the Northern Rhodesia boundary, near the town of Livingstone. It is one of the largest and most spectacular waterfalls in the world. The falls were supposedly discovered in 1855 by the explorer David Livingstone, who named them after Queen Victoria, but they may have been known before that time. Height, ab. 360 ft.; width, 1 mi.

Victoria Falls. Former name of Iguassú Falls.

Victoriahavan (vik.tō'ri.ä.hou'n?). Former name of Narvik.

Victoria Land (vik.tō'ri.ä). Land in Antarctica which borders the Ross Sea on the W. It was discovered by James Clark Ross in 1841 and named by him in honor of Queen Victoria.

Victoria Nyanza (ni.an'za, nī-). See Victoria, Lake.

Victoria Tower. Tall tower on the Houses of Parliament, London.

Victoriaville (vik.tō'ri.ä.vil). Town in Quebec, Canada, on the Nicolet River, ab. 40 mi. SE of Three Rivers (Trois Rivières): furniture factory. 13,124 (1951).

Victor Mills (vik'tor). Unincorporated community in South Carolina, in Spartanburg County: cotton textiles. 2,654 (1950).

Victorville (vik'tor.vil). Unincorporated community in SE California, in San Bernardino County. It is a local trade center, situated near a base of the U.S. Air Force. 3,241 (1950).

Victory. British line-of-battle ship of 100 guns. She was the flagship of Vice-Admiral Lord Howe before Toulon and Corsica (1793-94), the flagship of Sir John Jervis in action with the Spanish fleet off Cape St. Vincent (Feb. 14, 1797), and the flagship of Vice-Admiral Lord Nelson at Trafalgar (Oct. 21, 1805).

Victory of Lepanto (lë.pan'tō), The. Memorial picture by Paolo Veronese, in the Sala del Collegio of the Doges' Palace at Venice. The future doge, Sebastian Venier, kneels before the descending Saviour, to whom he is recommended by Saint Mark and Saint Justin. To the left is a figure of Faith, and behind is Barbarigo with the victorious banners.

Victory of Samothrace (sam'ō.thrās). [Also, Winged Victory]. One of the greatest art monuments of antiquity, found in Samothrace in 1863, and now in the Louvre, Paris. The colossal winged figure (of which the head has been lost) stands, with full drapery blown by the wind, on the prow of a trireme. The work is of Hellenistic date.

Vicuña Mackenna (vë.kō'nyä mä.ke'nä; Spanish, bë-, Benjamín). b. at Santiago, Chile, Aug. 25, 1831; d. Jan. 25, 1886. Chilean historian. He took part in the revolts of 1851 and was obliged to leave the country, traveling in the U.S. and Europe until 1856, when he was allowed to return. He engaged in journalism but was again banished (1858-63), was elected to congress (1864), and was special envoy to Peru and the U.S. (1865-67). In 1875 he was the candidate of the liberal party for the presidency. His works, which are numerous, relate mainly to the history of Chile. Among the best-known are El Ostracismo de los Carreras (1857), Historia de la revolución del Perú (1860), El Ostracismo del general O'Higgins (1860), Historia de la administración Montt (1862), Historia de Chile (1868), and Campañas de Arica y Tacna (1880).

Vicus Elbii (vi'kus el'bi.i). See Viterbo.

Vicus Julii (jō'li.i). See Aire.

Vicus Julii. See Germersheim.

Vida (vë'dä), Marco Girolamo. b. at Cremona, Italy, c1480; d. Sept. 27, 1566. Italian poet. He was made by Pope Leo X prior at Frascati, and by Clement VII in 1532 bishop of Alba. His poems (all in Latin) include the religious epic Christus (in 6 books, 1535).

Vidal (vi'däl), Gore. b. at West Point, N.Y., Oct. 3, 1925-. American novelist. He served (1943-46) in the U.S. army during World War II. His novels include Williwaw (1946), In a Yellow Wood (1947), The City and the Pillar (1948), The Season of Comfort (1949), A Search for the King (1950), Dark Green, Bright Red (1950), and The Judgment of Paris (1952).

Vidal (vë'däl), Paul Antonin. b. at Toulouse, France, June 16, 1863; d. at Paris, April 9, 1931. French conductor and composer. He taught (1894 et seq.) at the Paris Conservatory, where he had previously studied. Among his compositions are the ballet Madellète (1893), the symphonic poem La Vision de Jeanne d'Arc, and the opera La Burgonde (1898).

Vidal, Pierre. b. at Toulouse, France; fl. c1175-1215. Provençal troubadour. He accompanied Richard I of England (Richard the Lion-Hearted) to Cyprus in 1190 on the third Crusade.

Vidalia (vi.däl'ya). City in E Georgia, in Toombs County. 5,819 (1950).

Vidar (vë'där). [Also: Vidharr, Vitharr]. In Old Norse mythology, a powerful god; son of Odin. At Ragnarök he killed the Fenris wolf.

Vidaurre (vë'thou'rë; Spanish, bë-), Santiago. b. in Mexico, c1803; executed at Mexico City, July 8, 1867. Mexican general and politician. He was a member of the government of Maximilian, and was condemned as a traitor.

Videla (vë'dä'lä), Gabriel González. See González Videla, Gabriel.

Vidharr (vë'thär). See Vidar.

Vidin (vë'din). [Also: Widin; ancient name, Bononia]. Town in NW Bulgaria, in the department of Vratsa, situated on the Danube River near the Yugoslav border and opposite Rumania, ab. 22 mi. NW of Lom, on the site of the Roman town of Bononia: manufactures of gold, silver, and leather articles; fisheries. It was important as a Turkish Danube fortress in the 18th and 19th centuries during the Turkish Wars, and came to Bulgaria in 1878. Pop. 18,580 (1946).

Vidocq (vë.dok), François Eugène. b. at Arras, France, July 23, 1775; d. at Paris, in May, 1857. French detective and adventurer. In early life he was a soldier and thief and was several times imprisoned. He became connected with the Paris police as a detective in 1809, but was discharged (1832) as chief of the detective force when it was discovered that he himself had committed some of the crimes under investigation. In 1832 he started a private detective establishment, soon closed by the government.

Viedma (vyed'mä; Spanish, byen'mä). Town in E Argentina, capital of Río Negro territory, on the Río Negro ab. 490 mi. SW of Buenos Aires: river port. Pop. under 2,000 (1947).

Viedma, Lake. Lake in SW Argentina, in the territory of Santa Cruz. It is connected with Lake Argentino by the Santa Cruz River.

Viehmännin (vĕ'män.in), Frau Katherina. See Gammerethel.

Vieille (vye'), Paul Marie Eugène. b. at Paris, 1854; d. 1934. French military engineer. He devised (1886) the military smokeless powder called Poudre B or Poudre BN, and formulated (1893) a law of ballistics named for him.

Vierra (vyä'ra), Antônio. b. at Lisbon, Portugal, Feb. 6, 1608; d. at Bahia (now Salvador), Brazil, July 18, 1697. Portuguese missionary, pulpit orator, author, and publicist. He was taken to Bahia when a child, entered the Jesuit order there in 1625, became celebrated as a pulpit orator, and in 1641 returned to Portugal. There he attracted crowds to his sermons, was nominated royal preacher in 1644, was an influential counselor of the king, and was sent on important diplomatic missions to Paris, The Hague, and Rome. In 1652 he was ordered to the missions of Maranhão; he returned to Lisbon for a short time in 1654 to secure protection for the Indians, was again in Maranhão from 1655 to 1661, when there was an uprising against the missionaries, and was sent a prisoner to Portugal. There his eloquence prevailed with the court, and a new governor was sent to Maranhão with orders to protect the Jesuits. Vierra remained in Portugal, but fell into ill favor with the court, and for a book which he published, Esperanças de Portugal, was tried before the Inquisition, imprisoned (1665-67), and forbidden to preach, but was soon reinstated. From 1670 to 1675 he was at Rome, where his brilliant oratory brought him renewed fame. He returned to Brazil in 1681, and was provincial of his order there from 1688. Vierra's published works consist mainly of sermons and letters, the latter often of much historical value. He wrote about 200 sermons and 500 letters, and is regarded as one of the most resourceful prose writers in the language.

Vierra, João Fernandes. See Fernandes Vierra, João.
Vieja California (bye'hä kä.lē.för'nyä). See Lower California.

Viele (vĕ'le), Egbert Ludovicus. b. at Waterford, N.Y., June 17, 1825; d. April 22, 1902. American army officer and civil engineer. Graduated (1847) from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, he served in the Mexican War, resigned (1853) from the army, and established a private practice as a civil engineer at New York. Made (1861) a brigadier general of volunteers, he took part in the Fort Royal expedition and in the seizure of Fort Pulaski and Norfolk, Va., serving (May-October, 1862) as military governor of the latter.

Vielé (vĕ'le), Egbert Ludovicus. [Name assumed as legal name, Francis Vielé-Griffin.] b. at Norfolk, Va., 1864; d. 1937. Poet, son of Egbert Ludovicus Viele (1825-1902). He was brought up in France, and wrote in French. Author of Cueille d'Avril (1886), Joies (1888), Chevauchée d'Ydalis (1893), Phocas le jardinier (1898), and others. His so-called complete works, Poèmes et poésies (1886-93), is incomplete. He was the founder of Enlrenties politiques et littéraires (1890), with Bernard Lazare, Henri de Regnier, and others), an important semi-periodical. He is credited with originating vers libre.

Vielé, Herman Knickerbocker. b. at New York, Jan. 31, 1856; d. there, Dec. 14, 1908. American writer and painter; son of Egbert Ludovicus Viele (1825-1902). His paintings were exhibited at New York. Author of The Inn of the Silver Moon (1900), The Last of the Knickerbockers (1901), Myra of the Pines (1902), Random Verse (1903), Heartbreak Hill (1908), and the play House of Silence (1906).

Vielle Garde (vĕ'ey' gärd). See Old Guard.

Vienna (vien'ä). [German, Wien; French, Vienne (vyen); Latin, Vindobona.] Capital of the republic of Austria and an independent city with the status of a province. Surrounded by the province of Lower Austria, it is situated on a plain between the E slopes of the Wienerwald and the Danube River, on the Wien River and the Danube Canal, at the meeting point of the trade routes from Styria and Italy to Bohemia and Moravia, and from Bavaria to Hungary and the Balkans. Area, 469 sq. mi.; pop. 1,760,784 (1951).

Chief Buildings. Vienna consists of the inner city and a number of municipal districts and outlying suburbs. The inner city is surrounded by the Ringstrasse, a broad tree-lined boulevard with many official buildings. Within this circle is the Cathedral of Saint Stephen, built in the 12th-15th centuries, one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in Europe. Here also is an extended group of buildings which comprised the former imperial Hofburg (residence), now containing numerous historical exhibitions. Other remarkable churches are the Charles Church, the Votive Church, and the churches of the Augustinians, the Minorites, the Jesuits, and the Dominicans. The imperial palace of Schönbrunn, surrounded by a public park, is SW of the city center. Vienna has a number of private houses and palaces of the former Austrian aristocracy which are of architectural and historical importance, as are the palaces of the Auersperg, Czernin, Kinsky, Schönborn, Liechtenstein, Starhemberg, and Schwarzenberg families and particularly the Winter Palace and the Belvedere, the latter two built for Prince Eugene of Savoy. Of these buildings, though many were hit, only the Cathedral of Saint Stephen and the Schwarzenberg Palace were very heavily damaged in World War II; both required extensive restoration. Some frescoes and other decorations in both buildings were lost, but the stained-glass windows of the cathedral had been safely stored.

Culture. The national library, with more than 1,200,000 volumes and many manuscripts, autographs, incunabula, prints, maps, and other materials, is one of the best in Europe. Vienna has a number of famous institutions of higher learning; among them the university, founded in 1365, an institute of technology, an academy of art, and an academy of commerce. Prior to World War II, the Viennese school of medicine was outstanding, as was that of Austrian jurisprudence and political science. Vienna is also famous as the birthplace of various schools of modern psychology, particularly psychoanalysis. The city has also played a great role in the history of music and the theater. The light opera was here developed to a high point by Johann Strauss, Suppé, Molnar, and Lehár. Leading composers, including Gluck, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms, Bruckner, Wolf, Mahler, Schönberg, and Richard Strauss, lived here.

Commerce and Industry. Prior to 1918, Vienna was the center of administration, commerce, and banking for the entire Danube basin. Most of these roles it has now lost to the capitals of the Austrian secession states, but it is still the commercial and administrative center of Austria proper, although it is situated at the extreme E edge of its territory. It is the seat of numerous industries, of which the foodstuff, brewing, chemical, textile, leather, woodware, art objects, and machine industries are the most important.

History. Vienna, originally a Celtic settlement, was later a Roman camp and became in the early Middle Ages the residence first of the Babenberg and then of the Hapsburg family. At various times it was in Bohemian and Hungarian hands. The Turks twice unsuccessfully besieged Vienna, in 1529 and 1683, and the Swedes in 1645. In 1805-06, and again in 1809, it was occupied by the army of Napoleon I. The Napoleonic era came to a close here at the Congress of Vienna (1815), the leading spirit of which was the Austrian chancellor Metternich. Vienna became the capital of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and a center of political, administrative, and cultural life for the Empire. From March 13 to October 31, 1848, the city was in the hands of a revolutionary government, but the liberal movement was suppressed by the imperial army. Vienna developed rapidly in the second half of the 19th century, but the stress of industrialization and the strife of nationalities in the Austro-Hungarian monarchy led to various conflicting political movements. The pan-German and anti-Semitic movement, the neo-Christian movement, and the socialist movement developed simultaneously, superseding mid-19th-century liberalism. In the 1900's, the municipal administration pioneered in the fields of public housing. The pan-German and anti-Semitic movement came to power in 1938. A National Socialist functionary was appointed burgomaster of Vienna and numerous Catholic and Socialist leaders, along with countless Viennese Jews, were put into con-fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; ʔ, d, or j; ʔ, s, or sh; t, t, or ch; centration camps, where many died. Toward the end of World War II Vienna was subjected to air raids. The bridges were blown up and the city itself was shelled by retreating German troops. Twenty percent of the houses in the city were either destroyed or damaged, and the sewage, water, and transport systems were paralyzed. The Cathedral of Saint Stephen was burned out and the Burgtheater was wrecked, but most other public buildings escaped serious damage. Since 1945 the city of Vienna has been host to many displaced persons and political refugees, particularly from Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, and Rumania. Vienna is surrounded by the Russian zone of occupation in Austria, but is itself under the joint administration of Russia, the U.S., Great Britain, and France.

Vienna. City in W West Virginia, in Wood County. It is an industrial center of some importance (its population more than doubled in the decade between 1940 and 1950). 2,338 (1940); 6,020 (1950).

Vienna. Latin name of the city of Vienne.

Vienna, Congress of. Congress of the principal European powers for settling the affairs of Europe, held at Vienna from September, 1814, to June, 1815. It was begun soon after the first abdication of Napoleon and the restoration of the Bourbons to the throne of France, and it closed, after an interruption, caused by Napoleon's return, ten days before the Battle of Waterloo ended Napoleon's "Hundred Days." Among the persons present at the Congress were the monarchs of Russia, Prussia, Austria, Denmark, Bavaria, and various smaller German states, Wellington and Castlereagh of Great Britain, Talleyrand of France, Nesselrode of Russia, Hardenberg of Prussia, Metternich of Austria, and Stein of Russia. The principal decisions were in the hands of the four major powers (Austria, Prussia, Russia, and Great Britain) and the larger group never met as a whole, though its members were called upon for minor decisions. Eventually Talleyrand, as the representative of the French Bourbon king, Louis XVIII, was admitted to the inner circle. The chief stipulations were: the retention by France of the limits existing at the outbreak of the Revolution; the restoration of the Austrian monarchy without Belgium, Breisgau, and W Galicia, but with the addition of Lombardy-Venetia, Dalmatia, the Tyrol, and other territory; the restoration of the Prussian monarchy without most of the territory taken in 1807 to form the duchy of Warsaw, and minus Ansbach and Bayreuth (ceded to Saxony, extensive territories in the region of the Rhine, and Swedish Pomerania); the formation of the German Confederation of 39 states under the hegemony of Austria (replacing the defunct Holy Roman Empire); the creation of a new kingdom of Poland under the ruling Russian dynasty; the establishment of the kingdom of the Netherlands, including Holland and Belgium; the retention of Norway (ceded by Denmark in 1814) by Sweden; the retention of Finland (acquired from Sweden in 1809) by Russia; the restoration of the Sardinian monarchy with the annexation of Genoa; the restoration of the States of the Church, Avignon and Venaissin being left to France; the reconstitution of the Swiss Confederation with enlarged limits; the retention by Great Britain of Cape Colony, Ceylon, part of Surinam (Dutch Guiana), Mauritius, Tobago, Malta, Helgoland, and others; the establishment of a British protectorate over the Ionian Islands; the restoration of the Bourbons and other former dynasties in Spain, Tuscany, and Modena. Also arising from the Congress, though not actually a part of its official activities, were the Holy Alliance (agreed to later in 1815) and a continuation of the wartime Quadruple Alliance. The Concert of Europe, a term often used to describe the agreement among the great powers to act only after conference, and specifically used of their general policy regarding Turkey and the Balkans, was an outgrowth of the Quadruple Alliance. The Congress system, despite numerous strains on its existence, lasted until the revolutionary period of 1848-49.

Vienna, Siege of. In Austrian history: 1. Unsuccessful siege by the Turks under the sultan Süleiman in 1529. 2. Siege by the Turks under Kara Mustapha in 1683. Vienna was defended by Rüdiger von Starhemberg. It was relieved by a German-Polish army under Sobieski and Charles, Duke of Lorraine, who defeated the Turks before the city, Sept. 12, 1683.

Vienna, Treaty of. See also Schönbrunn, Treaty of. Vienna, Treaty of. In European history: 1. Treaty signed Nov. 18, 1738, ratifying the preliminaries signed Oct. 3, 1735. It ended the War of the Polish Succession. Austria ceded the kingdom of the Two Sicilies as a secondogeniture to Don Carlos of Spain, and received the duchies of Parma and Piacenza; Stanislaus renounced Poland and received Lorraine (to devolve after his death on France); the Duke of Lorraine (Francis Stephen) received Tuscany. 2. Treaty signed Oct. 30 (preliminaries Aug. 1), 1864, which ended the Schleswig-Holstein war. The king of Denmark renounced all rights over Schleswig, Holstein, and Lauenburg. 3. Treaty between Austria and Italy, signed Oct. 3, 1866. Austria recognized the cession of Venice to Italy.

Vienna, University of. University founded at Vienna in 1365. It has long been especially famous for its medical faculty.

Vienna Protocol. Customs-union agreement signed (March 19, 1931) by Germany and Austria. France and the southeastern European states saw in it a move toward union of the two countries, and they began at once to bring great pressure to bear on Germany and Austria. In the face of mounting political pressure, and in view of certain financial troubles, Germany and Austria renounced the agreement two days before the Permanent Court of International Justice declared it to be a violation of the Geneva Protocol of Oct. 4, 1922.

Vienne (vye-n). Department in W France, bounded by Maine-et-Loire, Indre-et-Loire, Indre, Haute-Vienne, Charente, and Deux-Sèvres. It was formed from Poitou, and from parts of Touraine and Berry. In this region, near Poitiers, the Saracens were defeated by the Franks in 732, and in the Middle Ages the region was repeatedly under English rule. It went to France in the reign of Charles VII, at the end of the Hundred Years' War. Agriculture produces grain, vegetables, wine, and hemp. Most of the cattle raised in the department are sent to the markets of Paris. The paper and printing industries, the metal industry, and a number of agricultural industries are important. There are numerous stone quarries and an active lumber trade. Capital, Poitiers; area, 2,711 sq. mi.; pop. 313,932 (1946).

Vienne. [Latin, Vienna.] City in SE France, in the department of Isère, situated at the junction of the Gère and Rhone rivers, ab. 16 mi. S of Lyons. It is a river port and a textile center and has trade in wine and grain. It has various Roman and medieval monuments, including a Roman theater, the Church of Saint Pierre (one of the oldest church buildings in France, dating back to the 6th century), and the Church of Saint Maurice (12th-15th centuries; damaged in 1944). Vienne was one of the earliest Christian centers in Gaul, and was later the capital of the kingdom of Burgundy. A number of church councils took place here. 23,519 (1946).

Vienne, Haute. See Haute-Vienne.

Vienne River. [Medieval Latin, Vencenna, Vigenna, Vingenna.] River in W France, which rises in the department of Corrèze and joins the Loire ab. 8 mi. above Saumur. Length, ab. 231 mi.; navigable to Châtellerault.

Vienneis (vye-nwä). Region and former district in the neighborhood of the city of Vienne, France; now in the departments of Isère and Drôme.

Viereck (vir'ek), George Sylvester. b. at Munich, Dec. 31, 1884—. American author and publicist. He was brought to the U.S. at the age of 11, was graduated (B.A., 1906) from the College of the City of New York, was associate editor (1906-15) of Current Literature, and in 1942 was convicted and imprisoned for failing to register as a German agent in the U.S. (he was released in 1947). His works include A Game at Love and Other Plays (1906), The House of the Vampire (1907), Confessions of a Barbarian (1910), Songs of Armageddon (1916), My First Two Thousand Years—The Autobiography of the Wandering Jew (written with Paul Eldridge; 1929), Spreaen, G rns of Hate (1931), The Strangest Friendship in History (1932), The Kaiser on Trial (1937), and The Temptation of Jonathan (1938).

Vierge (vyer'hā; Spanish, byer'-), Daniel Urrubietta. b. at Madrid, March 5, 1851; d. at Boulogne-Billancourt, France, May 10, 1904. Spanish painter and illustrator. Shortly before the Franco-Prussian War (1870) he went to Paris and found employment on various illustrated papers. In 1876 his illustrations (1,000 drawings) for Michelet's History of France were published. By a paralytic stroke he lost the use of his right hand, but substituted the left, and thereafter produced several of his most important works, including illustrations for Pablo de Segovia, On the Trail of Don Quixote (published in America), Lazarillo de Tormes, Bachelier de Salamanca, and a four-volume edition of Don Quixote.

Vierkant (fēr'kânt), Alfred. b. 1867—. German sociologist. As a member of the "phenomenological" school of Husserl, he sought to penetrate the world of human relations to find an expression of the true nature of society. His method involved empathically reliving the experience of others. It was based on the assumption that in its fundamentals human nature is everywhere the same. His important works are Gesellschaftslehre (1922) and Handwörterbuch der soziologie (1931).

Viernheim (fēr'n'hīm). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of Hessen, American Zone, formerly in the free state of Hesse, NE of Mannheim: agricultural trade; chemical, tobacco, and furniture factories. 15,797 (1950).

Viersen (fēr'zen). City in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated near the Rhine River, ab. 35 mi. NW of Cologne: textile and garment industries; machine, furniture, leather-goods, and food-stuff manufactures. The Church of Saint Remigius, in the Gothic style, was destroyed in World War II. 36,974 (1950).

Viertel (fēr'tel), Berthold. b. at Vienna, June 28, 1885—. Austrian stage and (later) screen director. In 1918 he joined Reinhardt as a director, and by 1922 he had his own theater at Vienna. Later he was head of the Dresden State Theatre, where he staged productions of Shakespeare, Ibsen, Kaiser, Toller, and O'Neill's Desire under the Elms and Emperor Jones. In 1932 he came to Hollywood to direct films, and guided Charles Boyer and Claudette Colbert through their first movie appearances in The Man from Yesterday and The Wiser Sex respectively. In 1936 he went to England to direct Conrad Veidt in The Passing of the Third Floor Back, the first of many British pictures.

Vier Waldstätter (fēr vält'shtet'ēr), die. German name of the Four Forest Cantons.

Vierwaldstättersee or Vierwaldstätter See (fēr.vält'shtet'ēr.zä''). German name of Lucerne, Lake of.

Vierzehnheiligen (fēr.tsān.hi'li'gen). Village in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Bavaria, American Zone, in the Regierungsbezirk (government district) of Middle and Upper Franconia, situated above the Main River, ab. 20 mi. NE of Bamberg. It was a point of considerable tactical importance in the battle of Jena in 1806. 195 (1946).

Viesch (fēsh). [Also, Fiesch.] Village and tourist center in S Switzerland, in the canton of Valais, situated in the upper Rhone valley, on the Furka railroad connecting Andermatt and Brigue. 428 (1941).

Viesse de Marmont (vyes de mār.môn), Auguste Frédéric Louis. See Marmont, Auguste Frédéric Louis Viesse de.

Vieste (vyes'tā). Town and commune in SE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Apulia, in the province of Foggia, ab. 45 mi. NE of Foggia: agricultural trade center; fisheries. Pop. of commune, 10,309 (1936); of town, 10,203 (1936).

Viète (vyet), François. [Latinized, Franciscus Vieta.] b. at Fontenay-le-Comte, in Vendée, France, 1540; d. at Paris, Dec. 13, 1603. French mathematician, the greatest of the 16th century. His most important contributions were to trigonometry and the application of algebra to geometry. By some he is regarded as the inventor of analytic geometry, but there is in his treatises no clear-cut use of a coordinate system, and he leans heavily upon the solution of algebraic equations by means of constructions in the sense of synthetic geometry. He practiced law and became a member of the king's privy council. His interest in cryptanalysis enabled him to decipher Spanish secret messages for Henry IV of France. His Opera mathematica appeared at Leiden in 1746.

Viktinghoff (fē'ting'hof), Barbara Juliane. See Krüdener, Baroness Barbara Juliane von.

Viet-Minh (vēt'min', vē't-, vye't-). Abbreviation for Viet-Nam-Doc-Lap-Dong-Minh-Hoi, the Viet-Nam League for Independence, now generally classified as Communist. It was founded in 1942 by representatives of diverse revolutionary organizations in Annam, Tonkin, and Cochinchina to supersede the Viet-Nam Quoc-Dan-Dang (Viet-Nam Nationalist Party), which was liquidated after an unsuccessful uprising against French rule in 1930.

Viet-Nam (vēt'nām', vē't-, vye't-). [Also: Vietnam, Viet Nam; Eng. trans., "Southern Land."] Associated state of the French Union, in E Indochina, bounded on the N by China, on the E by the Gulf of Tonkin and the South China Sea, on the S by the South China Sea, and on the W by the Gulf of Siam, Cambodia, and Laos. It comprises the former French protectorates of Tonkin and Annam and former French colony of Cochinchina, these three units having been renamed (1949) North, Central, and South Viet-Nam, respectively. Chief towns are Hanoi and its port, Haiphong, in Tonkin; Hué and Tourane, the latter a naval base, in Annam; and Saigon and Cholon, adjoining cities, in Cochinchina. Capital, Saigon; area, ab. 127,000 sq. mi.; pop. ab. 23 million.

Terrain and Climate. Viet-Nam is separated from China by mountains reaching ab. 7,000 ft. elevation and is traversed from NW to SE by a continuous mountain chain which reaches over 8,000 ft. and which closely parallels the coast of Annam. The two chief river systems are that of the Red River, flowing SE from China through Tonkin, and that of the Mekong, which flows S from Cambodia and SE through Cochinchina; both form wide deltas which are the richest agricultural sections and most densely populated areas of the country. The highlands, because malaria is prevalent and the valleys are for the most part too steep or infertile to provide good farming land, are thinly populated. Cochinchina and much of Annam have a tropical climate, subject to monsoons, with most of the rainfall in summer; in Tonkin summers are hot and winters cool, with rains generally occurring both winter and summer.

Agriculture, Industry, and Trade. Rice is Viet-Nam's major item of food and amounts to well over three fourths of its export, raised chiefly in the Red and Mekong river deltas and on the narrow coastal plain of Annam. Extensive rubber plantations in NE Cochinchina have lost some of their importance in the international market since the manufacture of synthetic rubber. Corn is exported in fairly large quantities and in smaller amounts also pepper and other spices, sugar, tobacco, tea, kapok, dried vegetables, and hides. Raw silk is produced in Tonkin and Annam. Ocean, river, and lake fish are a principal item of food, and some dried fish and fish oils are exported. The country is rich in such resources as coal, tin, tungsten, zinc, iron, and other ores, salt, phosphates, and hardwoods, though both mining and lumbering have yet to be fully developed. Rice milling is the chief industry; there are also some sugar refineries, salt mills, textile mills, and cigarette factories, mostly in Cochinchina. Saigon and Haiphong are the leading seaports, Hanoi and Saigon major airports; the rail and highway systems, well developed before World War II, have been disrupted by that conflict and the subsequent civil war.

History. The Vietnamese (or Annamese), believed to be of Mongolian or Tibetan origin, first occupied the regions around the Red River delta, later colonizing the countries to the S. Much of Annamese territory was dominated by China from about the 3rd century B.C. to the 15th A.D. Early European traders and colonizers made little impression on the region. French influence, begun (c1787) in Annam, became decisive in the second half of the 19th century with the establishment of the colony of Cochinchina (1862) and the protectorates of Annam (1884) and Tonkin (1884). The movement for independence, which had produced several risings early in the 20th century, was encouraged during World War II by the Japanese occupation authorities, who sponsored (1945) an independent government under Bao Dai, fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ɔ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch; emperor of Annam, which later the same year was followed by the overthrow of Bao Dai and the establishment of a republic (including also Tonkin and Cochinchina) by the Viet-Minh party under Ho Chi Minh. An agreement (March, 1946) between the French and Vietnamese governments failed to prevent another Viet-Minh rising later in the same year. In 1949 the French sponsored a government led by Bao Dai, which the Viet-Minh party, generally characterized as Communist, refused to recognize. Civil war was still being waged in 1953.

Culture. The great majority of the population are Vietnamese; Annamese and French are the official languages of the country. Their religion is primarily Buddhist. The largest minority group is the Chinese, who make up most of the commercial class, living chiefly at Saigon and Hanoi. The Moi (non-Annamese) tribes inhabiting the highlands of S Annam are the largest indigenous minority. Besides public and private general schools, Viet-Nam has medical, scientific, law, and arts schools, most of which are at Saigon and Hanoi.

Viet-Nam, Central. Official name (since 1949) of Annam.

Viet-Nam, North. Official name (since 1949) of Tonkin.

Viet-Nam, South. Official name (since 1949) of Cochin China.

Vietnamese (vēt.nām.ēz', -ēs'; vēt.-, vyet-). [Also: Annamese, Annamites.] Southern Mongoloid people constituting three quarters of the population of Indochina. They number ab. 17,000,000 and are chiefly found in the lowlands of Viet-Nam (Tonkin, Annam, and Cochinchina). There are minor differences in physical type, dress, customs, and speech among the inhabitants of the three regions. The elements of Vietnamese civilization are in large part of Chinese origin; their religion is an amalgam of Confucianism, Taoism, and Buddhism, plus an animistic belief in the existence of innumerable spirits capable of intervening in human affairs. Their language, which is tonal and monosyllabic, contains a large number of Chinese loan-words, but its more basic affinities are with Mon-Khmer and Thai. It is usually called Annamese.

Viëtor (fē.ä.tör), Karl. b. at Wattenscheid, Germany, Nov. 29, 1892-.. German historian of literature, professor at the University of Gießen, since 1938 at Harvard. He wrote Die Lyrik Hölderlins (1921) and Der junge Goethe (1930). His Geschichte der deutschen Ode (1923) was intended as the first item in a series of histories of genres to be published in collaboration with Franz Schultz and Hans Naumann. In 1949 he published a centennial Goethe biography in English.

Vieuxtemps (vyē.tân), Henri. b. at Verviers, Belgium, Feb. 20, 1820; d. in Algeria, June 6, 1881. Belgian violinist and composer for the violin. He made many long and successful tours through Europe and America, and was teacher of the violin (1871-73) at the Brussels Conservatory and director of popular concerts there.

"Vig" (vig). See MacCarthy, Denis Florence.

Vigan (vē.gān). Town in NW Philippines, capital of Ilocos Sur province, Luzon, on the Abra River not far from the coast. 7,424 (1948).

Vigée-Lebrun (vē.žhā.le.brēn), Marie Anne Élisabeth. [Maiden name, Vigée.] b. at Paris, April 16, 1755; d. there, March 30, 1842. French portrait, historical, and landscape painter. In 1783 she was made a member of the French Academy. She was also an associate member of the academies at Bologna, Parma, Berlin, St. Petersburg, Copenhagen, and Geneva. She left over 650 portraits, 200 landscapes, and 15 historical pictures.

Vigeland (vē.gē.lān), Gustav. b. at Oslo, Norway, April 11, 1869; d. there, March 12, 1943. Norwegian sculptor. His ornamental reliefs and figure compositions reveal the influence of Rodin and of English and French Gothic sculpture. His chief works are a large collection of human figures and groups, culminating in a great monolith ab. 55 ft. in height, at Oslo.

Vignenna (vi.jē.nā). A medieval Latin name of the Vienne River.

Viger (vē.žhā), Denis Benjamin. b. at Montreal, Canada, Aug. 19, 1774; d. there, Feb. 13, 1861. Canadian statesman and lawyer.

Vigevano (vē.jē.vā.nō). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compagnamento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Pavia, situated on the Ticino River ab. 20 mi. SW of Milan: agricultural trade center; silk and cotton textile, cheese, shoe, and metal industries. The cathedral, on foundations of the 10th century, is a 14th-century building with a baroque façade of 1680; the castle of the Visconti family is a celebrated building of the 15th century, largely built from plans by Bramante. A Milanese stronghold, particularly of the Visconti and Sforza families, in the Middle Ages, Vigevano came to the house of Savoy in 1743. Pop. of commune, 38,039 (1936); of town, 24,609 (1936).

Vigfusson (vig'fös.sōn), Gudbrandr. b. in Iceland, 1825; d. at Oxford, England, Jan. 31, 1889. Danish philologist, a student of the Icelandic language and literature; lecturer in Icelandic at Oxford from 1884. He completed Cleasby's Icelandic-English Dictionary (1869-74).

Vigil (bē.hēl'), Francisco de Paula Gonzalez. See Gonzalez Vigil, Francisco de Paula.

Vigiles (vij'i.lēz). Corps of police and firemen, organized under military discipline, in ancient Rome. Under Augustus they numbered 7,000, were under the command of a prefect, and were divided into seven regiments, each of which had the guard of two of the 14 regiones of the city, and was subdivided into seven companies. The Vigiles were quartered in seven main barracks, or stationes, and 14 subordinate posts, or excubitoria. The remains of several of these barracks and posts have been discovered, and are remarkable for the magnificence of their decoration with marble incrustation and columns, mosaic pavements, statues, and mural paintings.

Vigilius (vij'i.li.ūs), b. at Rome; d. at Syracuse, Sicily, June 7, 555. Pope from 537 to 555. Elevated to the papacy on the urging of Belisarius in 537, his pontificate was largely occupied with intrigues relating to the decisions of the Council of Chalcedon.

Vignaud (vēn.yō'), Jean Henry. b. at New Orleans, La., Nov. 27, 1830; d. Sept. 16, 1922. American diplomat and author. He served in the Confederate army during the Civil War, acting as secretary of the Confederate diplomatic commission at Paris in 1863. From 1875 to 1909 he held secretaryships in the U.S. legation and embassy at Paris. He published La Lettre et la carte de Toscanelli sur la route des Indes (1901), Toscanelli and Columbus (1902-03), La Maison d'Albe et les archives colombiennes (1904), Études critiques sur la vie de Colomb (1905), and Le Vrai Christophe Colomb et la légende (1921). In all these works he expounded his controversial thesis that Columbus set out not to discover the Indies but to find precisely those western islands which he reached.

Vigneaud (vē.nyō), Vincent du. See du Vigneaud, Vincent.

Vignemale (vē.nyē.mäl), Pic de. One of the highest peaks of the Pyrenees, situated SW of Luz. Elevation, ab. 10,820 ft.

Vigneux-sur-Seine (vē.nyē.sūr.sēn). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated on the Seine River between Paris and Corbeil. It belongs to the metropolitan area of Paris. 8,102 (1946).

Vignola (vē.nyō.lā). (Original name, Giacomo Barozzi (or Barozzi).] b. at Vignola, Modena, Italy, 1507; d. at Rome, 1573. Italian architect. He wrote a treatise on the five orders of architecture, and one on perspective, which are well known. After the death of Michelangelo he succeeded him as the architect of Saint Peter's, Rome, and also designed the Escorial in Spain. He lived for several years in France, where he executed a number of bronzes.

Vignoles (vē.nyol), Étienne de. See La Hire.

Vigny (vē.nyē), Alfred Victor, Comte de. b. at Loches, in Touraine, France, March 27, 1799; d. at Paris, Sept. 17, 1863. French poet, dramatist, and novelist. At the age of 16 he entered the army, and he was promoted to captain in 1823. During various periods of inactivity in his military career he pursued his studies; as early as 1815 he composed a couple of essays, La Dryade and Symèle. His first collection of poems appeared in 1822 as Poèmes antiques et modernes. That same year he published Le Trappiste, and Eloa, ou la sœur des anges in 1824. Then came his last work of Biblical character, Le Déluge, and his first work in the new romantic vein, Dolorida. He published his great historical novel Cinq-Mars in 1826, and resigned from the army in 1828 because of ill health. As a dramatist he translated Shakespeare's Othello and Merchant of Venice into French verse, wrote an original historical drama, La Maréchale d'Ancre, and finally produced his best piece of work in this line, Chatterton (1835). This drama is related in its subject to Stello, ou les diables bleus (1832), in which De Vigny defined the position of a poet in modern society. Another work, in which a warrior's position is similarly defined, appeared as Servitude et grandeur militaires (1835). Among the last publications during the author's lifetime was a series of Poèmes philosophiques (1843). He spent the last 20 years of his life in retirement, and left several works unpublished at the time of his death. He was admitted to the French Academy on May 8, 1845.

Vigo (vē'gō; Spanish, bē'-). City in NW Spain, in the province of Pontevedra, situated on the Ria de Vigo, a bay of the Atlantic Ocean, ab. 17 mi. S. of Pontevedra. It has shipyards, sardine and tuna fisheries, fish canneries, sugar and petroleum refineries, flour mills and sawmills, tanneries, and distilleries; it is the port of call for various steamship lines. Vigo was attacked by Sir Francis Drake in 1585 and 1589. On Oct. 23, 1702, the Anglo-Dutch fleet destroyed the Franco-Spanish fleet in the bay, thereby capturing a huge treasure. In 1719 Vigo was captured by the British; in 1936 by the Spanish Nationalists. 118,154 (1950).

Vigo (vē'gō, vi'-), Joseph Maria Francesco. [Called Francis Vigo.] b. at Mondovì, Piedmont, Italy, Dec. 3, 1747; d. at Vincennes, Ind., March 22, 1836. American soldier, pioneer, and merchant, active in the old Northwest of the U.S. A fur trader with headquarters at New Orleans, he established (c1772) his chief trading post at St. Louis, and gave financial support to George Rogers Clark during the latter's campaign in the Northwest Territory which succeeded in eliminating British power from that area. He moved (before 1783) to Vincennes, and became a U.S. citizen.

Vihiers (vē'yā). Village in the department of Maine-et-Loire, France, ab. 24 mi. S. of Angers. Here on July 18, 1793, the Vendéens defeated a force of the Republic.

Viiipuri (vē'pū.ri). [Swedish, Viborg.] Former lään (department) in SE Finland. Most of it is now in the U.S.S.R., a part of the Karelo-Finnish Soviet Socialist Republic and of the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic. That portion which remained in Finland was reorganized into the lään of Kymi.

Vilipuri. Finnish name of Vyborg.

Vilayavada (vē'lā.yā.vā'dā). See Bezawada.

Vikings (vi'kingz). Bands of Northerners who, as pirates, harried the coasts of the British Isles and of N Europe in the 8th, 9th, and 10th centuries.

Vila (vē'lā). Administrative center of the New Hebrides, situated on Efate Island, towards the S part of the group. It is the chief commercial center and possesses one of the finest harbors in the group. Pop. ab. 1,200.

Vila do Conde (vē'lā dō kōn'de). Town and concelho (commune) in N Portugal, in the province of Douro Litoral and district of Pórtó, situated on the Atlantic Ocean ab. 18 mi. N of Oporto; marketing center of a wine-growing region. Pop. of concelho, 39,526 (1940); of town, 9,921 (1940).

Vila Franca de Xira (vē'lā frung'ka de shē'ra). Town and concelho (commune) in W central Portugal, in the province of Ribatejo and district of Santarém, situated on the lower Tagus (Tejo) River, ab. 18 mi. NE of Lisbon; marketing center of a wine-growing and livestock-raising region. Pop. of concelho, 27,836 (1940); of town, 8,094 (1940).

Vilaine (vē.lēn). [Medieval Latin, Vicenonia, Vincinonia.] River in France, principally in Brittany, which flows into the Atlantic ab. 17 mi. SE of Vannes. Length, ab. 140 mi.; navigable 88 mi.

Vila Nova de Gaia (vē'lā nō'va de gā'yā). Town and concelho (commune) in N Portugal, in the province of Douro Litoral and district of Pórtó, situated on the left bank of the Douro River, near its mouth, opposite the city of Oporto, of which it is a suburb. Pop. of concelho, 103,132 (1940); of town, 29,784 (1941).

Vila Nova de Portimão (de pōr.tē.mou'ā). See Portimão.

Vila Real (vē'lā rē.āl'). District in N Portugal, in the province of Trás-os-Montes e Alto Douro. Capital, Vila Real; area, ab. 1,636 sq. mi.; pop. 319,883 (1953).

Vila Real. [Also, Villa Real.] Town and concelho (commune) in N Portugal, in the province of Trás-os-Montes e Alto Douro, district of Vila Real, ab. 59 mi. NE of Oporto; trade in livestock, wine, citrus fruit; textile manufactures. Pop. of concelho, 42,865 (1941); of town, 6,602 (1940).

Vila Real de Santo António (de sun'tō un.tō'nyō). [Also, Villa Real.] Town and concelho (commune) in S Portugal, in the province of Algarve and district of Faro, situated near the mouth of the Guadiana River, opposite the Spanish town of Ayamonte, ab. 30 mi. E of Faro. The most important seaport of the province of Algarve, it has exports of copper ore, and sardine fisheries. Pop. of concelho, 12,583 (1940); of town, 8,174 (1940).

Vilas (vi'lās), William Freeman. b. at Chelsea, Vt., July 9, 1840; d. at Madison, Wis., Aug. 27, 1908. American politician. He was chairman of the Democratic national convention in 1884, postmaster general (1885-88), and secretary of the interior (1888-89). He was a senator from Wisconsin (1891-97).

Vila Vicosa (vē'lā vē.sō'za). Town and concelho (commune) in E Portugal, in the province of Alto Alentejo and district of Évora, ab. 25 mi. SW of Badajoz. Pop. of concelho, 9,874 (1940); of town, 5,023 (1940).

Vilcabamba (vē'l.kā.bām'bā; Spanish, bē'l-), Cordillera. Mountainous region of Peru, N of Cusco, between the Apurímac and Urubamba rivers. Peak elevation, ab. 20,551 ft.

Vilcabamba River. See Urubamba.

Vildrac (vē'l.drāk), Charles. [Pseudonym of Charles Messager.] b. at Paris, 1882—. French poet and playwright; brother-in-law of Georges Duhamel. Author of Images et mirages (1908), Le Livre d'amour (1910; Eng. trans., A Book of Love, 1923), Notes sur la technique politique (with Georges Duhamel, 1911); best known for his plays, Le Paquebot "Tenacity" (1920; Eng. trans., The Steamer Tenacity, 1921) and La Braville (1930). He began his career as one of the Abbaye group of poets, with Duhamel, Jules Romains, and others. During the German occupation in World War II he figured importantly in the Resistance.

Vile (vē'le). In Old Norse mythology, a brother of Odin, with whom (and with the help of Ve, a third brother) he killed the giant Ymir, from whose body the three created the earth. Later they created the first man and woman. Sometimes they are construed as aspects of Odin, rather than separate gods.

Vile Bodies. Novel by Evelyn Waugh, published in 1930.

Vilela (vē'lā'lā). See under Lules.

Vilenkin (vē.lyen'kin), Nikolay Maksimovich. See Minsky, N.

Vili (vē'lē). [Also: Bavili, Fiote, Fjort.] Bantu-speaking people of C Africa, inhabiting an area along the coast in SW French Equatorial Africa. Their powerful kingdom, Loango, was formerly ruled by a despotic king, while the four provinces located about the capital were ruled by sons of the queen sister. Descent is matrilineal, and at the death of a king the queen sister became queen mother. The Vili practice agriculture with iron spades. Their principal food is cassava.

Vilkomir (vē'l.ko.mēr'). Russian name of Ukmerge.
Villa (vē'yā; Spanish, bē'l-), Francisco. [Called Pancho Villa; original name, Doroteo Arango.] b. at Río Grande, Mexico, Oct. 4, 1877; assassinated July 20, 1923. Mexican bandit and revolutionary leader. He organized a band of rustlers, joined (1910) the Madero revolt against Díaz, was captured by Huerta but escaped into the U.S., and joined (1914) Carranza against Huerta. After defeating him the two generals contended (1914-15) for power, Obregón finally driving Villa from Mexico City. Wilson's recognition of Carranza's government induced Villa's raid (March 6, 1916) on Columbus, N.M., in which 16 people were killed and which resulted in the punitive expedition into Mexico under Pershing.

Villa Albani (vē'lā āl.bā'nē). See Albani, Villa.

Villa Boa de Goyaz (vē'lā bō'a de gō.yās'). Former name of GoIás, city.

Villacarillo (vē'lyä.kä.rē'lyō; Spanish, bē'-). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, ab. 40 mi. NE of Jaén: marketing center of an agricultural district; soap manufactures; distilleries. 18,234 (1940).

Villach (vil'ch). [Slovenian, Beljak.] City in S Austria, in the province of Carinthia, situated on both banks of the Drava River between Klagenfurt and Spittal and surrounded by the Karawanken and Julian Alps. It is an important railroad junction for the lines from Salzburg to Trieste, from Vienna to Venice, and from Maribor to Bolzano. It is a center of the lumber trade, particularly with Italy, and has iron, leather, and lumber industries and breweries. 30,061 (1951).

Villa Cisneros (vē'lyä.thēs.nā'rōs; Spanish, bē'-). Town in NW Africa, the only town of any importance in the Río de Oro zone of the Spanish Sahara colony, on the W coast of Africa. A military post and the site of an airport, it is the administrative center for the area. Pop. ab. 1,000.

Villa Concepción (bē'yä kōn.sep.syon'). See Concepción, city, Paraguay.

Villa de Canelones (bē'yä dā kā.nā.lō'nās). See Canelones, city.

Villa de Cura (vē'yä dā kō'rā; Spanish, bē'-). [Also, Ciudad Cura, Cura.] Town in V Venezuela, in Aragua state, SW of Caracas. 9,910 (1950).

Villa del Fuerte (bē'yä del fwer'tē). See El Fuerte.

Villa del Pilar (bē'yä del pē.lār'). See Pilar.

Villa de Orotava (bē'yä dā ō.rō.tā'ā). See La Orotava.

Villafior (vē.lā.flōr'). Count of. Additional title of Terceira, Duke of.

Villafranca (vē.lā.frāng'kā). Italian name of Villefranche.

Villafranca de los Barros (vē.lyä.frāng'kā dā lōs bār'rōs; Spanish, bē'-). Town in W Spain, in the province of Badajoz, ab. 35 mi. SE of Badajoz: marketing center of a grain and wine producing district. 15,360 (1940).

Villafranca del Panadés (vē.lyä.frāng'kā del pā.nā.thās'; Spanish, bē'-). Town in NE Spain, in the province of Barcelona, W of Barcelona: a center of the Catalonian wine trade. 11,109 (1940).

Villafranca di Verona (vē.lā.frāng'kā dē vā.rō'nā). [Also, Villafranca.] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Verona, ab. 10 mi. SW of Verona: agricultural trade center. Pop. of commune, 14,479 (1936); of town, 4,968 (1936).

Villa Garcia (vē'lyä gār.thē'ā; Spanish, bē'-). Marquis of. Title of Mendoza Caamaño, José Antonio de.

Villagarcía de Arosa (vē'lyä.gār.thē'ā dā ā.rō'sā; Spanish, bē'-). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Pontevedra, situated on the Bay of Arosa, an inlet of the Atlantic Ocean, ab. 13 mi. NW of Pontevedra: sardine fisheries, flour mills, a brick and tile factory, and manufactures of nails. 23,705 (1940).

Village, the. See Greenwich Village; see also Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Village Blacksmith, The. Poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, published in Ballads and Other Poems (1842).

Village Coquette, The. Short comedy, with songs, by Charles Dickens, published in 1836.

Village Romeo and Juliet (rō'mēō; jō.li'et, jō.li'et.-lyet), A. Opera in a prologue and three acts by Frederick Delius, first performed at Berlin in 1907. The work is taken from Gottfried Keller's Romeo and Julia auf dem Dorfe.

Villagrā (vē.lyä.grā; Spanish, bē'-) or Villagrān (vē.lyä.grān; Spanish, bē'-). Francisco de. b. at Astorga, in León, Spain, 1507; d. at Concepción, Chile, July 15, 1563. Spanish soldier. He was prominent in the conquest of Chile (1540-46), was acting governor (1547-49) during Valdivia's absence, and, after the latter was killed by the Araucanians (January, 1554), succeeded him as governor ad interim. He immediately marched against the Indians, but was disastrously defeated at Marihueno (February, 1554), and forced to abandon Concepción, which was burned by the Indians. In 1555 he was more successful, relieving Imperial and Valdivia, which had been closely besieged, and carrying on a war of extermination in the south. In 1557 he surprised, defeated, and killed the celebrated chief Lautaro. His right to rule was contested, and on the arrival of the new governor, Hurtado de Mendoza, he was sent a prisoner to Peru; but was quickly released, went to Spain, and in 1561 returned to Chile as governor, ruling until his death. In 1562-63 he had to deal with a fresh uprising of the Araucanians, in which his son was killed.

Villahermosa (vē'lyä.er.mō'sā; Spanish, bē'-). [Also, San Juan Bautista.] City in SE Mexico, capital of Tabasco state, on the Grijalva River: shipping point for tropical lumber and produce. 25,114 (1940).

Villalba (vē.lyāl'bā; Spanish, bē'-). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Lugo, ab. 15 mi. N of Lugo: cloth and pottery manufactures; agricultural trade. 17,935 (1940).

Villalobos (vē.lā.lō'bōs), Rui Lopez de. See Lopez de Villalobos, Rui.

Villamanrique (bē'lyä.mān.rē'kā), Marquis of. See Zúñiga, Alonso Manrique de.

Villa María (vē'yä mā.rē'ā; Spanish, bē'-). City in C Argentina, in Córdoba province, on the Tercero River ab. 320 mi. NW of Buenos Aires: shipping point for grain and dairy products; important rail junction. 30,362 (1947).

Villa Mercedes (bē'yä mer.sā'rē'ās). See Mercedes.

Villani (vē.lā.nē), Giovanni. b. at Florence, Italy; d. there, 1348. Italian historian; brother of Matteo Villani. He traveled in Italy, France, and Flanders, and held public offices at Florence. He wrote a Chronicle of Florence and other works.

Villani, Matteo. d. c1363. Italian chronicler; brother of Giovanni Villani, whose Chronicle he continued.

Villanova Baltea (vē.lā.nō'vā bāl.tā'ā). Italian name of Villeneuve, Switzerland.

Villanova de Portimão (vē.lā.nō'vā dē pōr.tē.mou'ñ). See Portimão.

Villanovans (vil.ā.nō'vanz). Pre-Etruscan people of N Italy, named from a cemetery excavated in 1853 at Villanova near Bologna. Their culture is believed to have been brought (c1000 B.C.) into the region by migrants from north of the Alps, who spread into Etruria, Latium, and through the Bologna area. It is characterized by cremation of the dead and urn-burial of the ashes.

Villanueva (vē.lyä.nwā'sā; Spanish, bē'-), Joaquín Lorenzo de. b. at Játiva, Spain, Aug. 10, 1757; d. at Dublin, March 26, 1837. Spanish patriot, scholar, and poet. On the restoration of 1823, he fled to Great Britain.

Villanueva de Córdoba (dā kōr'thō.sā). Town in S Spain, in the province of Córdoba, situated in the Sierra Morena, ab. 30 mi. N of Córdoba: coal mines; sheep raising. 16,037 (1940).

Villanueva del Arzobispo (del ār.thō.sē'pō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Jaén, ab. 45 mi. NE of Jaén: agricultural trade; stock raising. 14,739 (1940).

Villanueva de la Serena (dā lā sē.rā'nā). Town in W Spain, in the province of Badajoz, E of Badajoz: agricultural market town. 16,088 (1940).

Villanueva del Río (del rē'ō). Town in S Spain, in the province of Sevilla, on the Guadalquivir River NE of Sevilla: coal mines and a sugar refinery. 11,798 (1940).

Villanueva y Geltrú (ē hel'trō). Town in NE Spain, in the province of Barcelona, on the Mediterranean Sea ab. 25 mi. SW of Barcelona: cotton, woolen, linen, and paper manufactures; iron foundries; flour mills; considerable coastwise shipping. 17,091 (1940).

Villa Park (vil'ā). Village in NE Illinois, in Du Page County: a western residential suburb of Chicago. 8,821 (1950).

Villard (vil'ār, -lār'd'), Helen Frances. [Maiden name, Garrison.] b. at Boston, Dec. 16, 1844; d. July 5, 1928. American social reformer; wife of Henry Villard (1835-1900) and daughter of William Lloyd Garrison (1805-79). She took part in the woman's suffrage movement, established and was president (1919-28) of the Women's Peace Society, was head (1897-1922) of the Diet Kitchen Association at New York, and was active in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Villard, Henry. [Original name, Ferdinand Heinrich Gustav Hilgard.] b. at Speyer, Germany, April 10, 1835; d. at Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., Nov. 12, 1900. American journalist, railroad financier, and executive. Arriving (1853) in the U.S. after assuming the name Villard, he was a special correspondent (1858) for the New York

Staats-Zeitung, reporting the Lincoln-Douglas debates, served as a correspondent (c1859-60) for the Cincinnati Commercial, and was a correspondent (1861-63) for the New York Herald and the New York Tribune. He became connected with railroad enterprises in 1873, and in 1876 became president of the Oregon and California Railroad and the Oregon Steamship Company. In 1879, with the object of establishing a railway empire in the Pacific Northwest, he founded the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, and by the formation (1881) of the noted "Blind Pool" purchased control of the Northern Pacific line, of which he was president (1881-84) and chairman of the board until 1893. Through his holding company, the Oregon and Transcontinental, and another one of his properties, the Oregon Improvement Company, he was for several years the virtual ruler of transportation facilities in the Pacific Northwest. A large deficit in the operations of the Northern Pacific brought about his resignation (1884) as president of that road; he never succeeded in regaining the leading position he held in railway development from 1879 to 1883. He purchased (1881) a controlling interest in the New York Evening Post. He gave financial aid to Thomas A. Edison and established (1889) the Edison General Electric Company.

Villard, Oswald Garrison. b. at Wiesbaden, Germany, March 13, 1872; d. at New York, Oct. 1, 1949. American editor and author; son of Henry and Helen Frances Villard. He was editor and president (1897-1918) of the New York Evening Post, one of the founders (1917) of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, editor and owner of The Nation (1918-32), and its publisher and contributing editor (1932-35). His books include John Brown—A Biography Fifty Years After (1910), Germany Embattled (1915), Newspapers and Newspaper Men (1923), Prophecy True and False (1928), The German Phoenix (1933), The Fighting Years (1939), Within Germany (1940), and The Disappearing Daily (1944).

Villa Real (vē'lā.rē.āl'). See Vila Real.

Villa Real de la Santa Fé de San Francisco (bē'yā.rā.āl' dā.lā.sān'tā.fā dā.sān.frān.sēs'kō), La. Former name of Santa Fe, N.M.

Villaret de Joyeuse (vē'lā.rē.dē.zhwa.yēz), Louis Thomas, Comte. [Called Louis Thomas Villaret-Joyeuse.] b. 1750; d. at Venice, July 24, 1812. French naval officer. He commanded a fleet which, while conveying grain ships, engaged the English under Lord Howe near Brest (May 28-June 1, 1794). In 1801-02 he commanded the French naval forces in the Santo Domingo expedition. From 1802 to 1809 he was governor of the islands of Martinique and St. Lucia, finally capitulating to the English.

Villari (vē'lā.rē). Pasquale. b. at Naples, Italy, Oct. 3, 1827; d. at Florence, Italy, Dec. 17, 1917. Italian author, professor at Florence (1866-1906). He wrote a history of Savonarola (Storia di Savonarola e de suoi tempi, 1859-61), one of Machiavelli and his times (1877-82), essays, and works on education, art, philosophy, Italian literature, and others. He was elected senator in 1884, and was minister of public instruction (1891-92).

Villa Rica (vē'yā.rē.kā; Spanish, bē'-). First town founded in Mexico by Cortés, in May, 1519. It was formally established on the present site of Veracruz, and was then known as Villa Rica de Vera Cruz, but actual settlement was commenced farther north. In 1525 the site was changed again, and thenceforth the town was generally known as Veracruz. The final removal to the present site took place in 1599.

Villa Rica (vē'lā.rē.kā). Former name of Ouro Preto, Brazil.

Villa Rica de Vera Cruz (vē'yā.rē.kā dā.bā'rā.krōs). Former name of Veracruz, city, Mexico. See also under Villa Rica.

Villaroel (vē'yā.rō.el'; Spanish, bē'-), Gualberto. Killed by a mob, July 21, 1946. Bolivian army officer, president (1944-46) of Bolivia. He deposed (December, 1943) President Enrique Peñaranda, and his administration was refused recognition by the U.S. until June, 1944, because of suspected fascist sympathies. Upheld as president in the election of July, 1944, he was killed in the revolution of July, 1946.

Villarosa (vē'lā.rō.sā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Enna, situated in the interior of the island, NW of Enna; agricultural trade center; sulfur mines. Pop. of commune, 10,211 (1936); of town, 8,700 (1936).

Villarreal (vē'l'yār.rā.āl'; Spanish, bē'-). [Also, Villa-real.] Town in NE Spain, in the province of Castellón, ab. 7 mi. S of Castellón de la Plana; liquor and paper manufactures; agricultural trade. The Canal of Castellón, an example of Moorish engineering skill dating from the Middle Ages, irrigates orange groves and fruit gardens in the vicinity. Pop. 20,025 (1940).

Villarica or Villa Rica (vē'yār.rē.kā; Spanish, bē'-). Town in S Paraguay, capital of Guairá department, ab. 95 mi. SE of Asunción; lumber and flour mills, sugar refineries, and distilleries. Pop. ab. 40,000.

Villarica or Villarica (vē'yār.rē.kā; Spanish, bē'-). See Guairá.

Villarrobledo (vē'l'yār.rō.blā'thō; Spanish, bē'-). Town in E Spain, in the province of Albacete, situated in the district of La Mancha, ab. 42 mi. NW of Albacete; earthenware manufactures. 20,362 (1940).

Villars (vē.lār), Claude Louis Hector, Duc de. b. at Moulins, France, May 8, 1653; d. at Turin, Italy, June 17, 1734. French marshal. He served under Turenne, Condé, and Luxembourg, and filled various diplomatic missions. He defeated Louis of Baden at Friedlingen (Oct. 14, 1702), won the victory of Höchstädt (Sept. 20, 1703), and subdued the Camisards in 1704. He was defeated at Malplaquet (Sept. 11, 1709), defeated the Imperialists at Denain (July 24, 1712), and gained various successes in 1713. He was a member of the council of regency under Louis XV, and commanded successfully in Lombardy (1733-34).

Villa Rubén (vil'ā.rō.bān'). Novel by John Galsworthy, published (1900) under the pseudonym John Sinjohn. It is the story of a poor painter with radical views.

Villas (vē'yās; Spanish, bē'-), Las. See Las Villas.

Villa San Giovanni (vē'l'lā.sān.jō.vān'ē). Town and commune in S Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Calabria, in the province of Reggio di Calabria, situated on the Strait of Messina opposite the town of Messina and ab. 10 mi. N of Reggio di Calabria; agricultural trade; fisheries; manufactures of silk goods, citrus essences, and building materials. The town was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in 1908. Pop. of commune, 14,934 (1936); of town, 4,066 (1936).

Villa-Urditza (vē'l'yā.ōr.ōr'tyā; Spanish, bē'-), Wenceslao Ramírez, Marqués de. b. at Havana, Cuba, 1850; d. at Madrid, 1933. Spanish diplomat. He entered diplomacy at the age of 18 and became ambassador to Vienna, London, Paris, and Rome. In 1905 he accompanied Alfonso XIII on his first official visit to Paris and London.

Villavicencio (vē'yā.vē.sān'syō; Spanish, bē'yā.bē'-). City in C Colombia, capital of Meta intendency, 6,074 (1938).

Villaviciosa (vē'yā.vē.thy.ō'sā; Spanish, bē'yā.bē'-). [Also: Villaviciosa de Oviedo (dā.ō.vyā'thō), Villaviciosa de Asturias (dā.ās.tōr'yās).] Town in NW Spain, in the province of Oviedo, situated on the Ría de Villaviciosa, an inlet of the Bay of Biscay, ab. 20 mi. NE of Oviedo; iron mines; fisheries. 22,029 (1940).

Ville (vēl), Bernard Germain Étienne de la. See Lacépède, Bernard Germain Étienne de la Ville, Comte de.

Ville, Hôtel de. See Hôtel de Ville.

Villedieu (vēl.dyē), Sieur de. Title of Boesset, Antoine.

Villedieu, Madame de. Pseudonym of Desjardins, Marie Catherine Hortense.

Ville d'Is (vēl.dēs). Sunken city of Breton legend. It was traditionally situated on the coast of Brittany near modern Quimper, and was believed to have sunk into the sea in the 5th century because of the sins of its king's daughter.

Villefranche (vēl.frānsh). [Also: Villefranche-sur-Mer (sūr.mer); Italian, Villafranca.] Village in SE France, in the department of Alpes-Maritimes, situated on the Gulf of Nice ab. 3 mi. NE of Nice. It is a seaport, and a summer and winter resort. The port is dominated by a citadel of the 16th century. 4,437 (1946).

Villefranche-de-Rouergue (vêl.frânsh.də.rwɛrg). Town in S France, in the department of Aveyron, on the Aveyron River ab. 27 mi. W of Rodez. The Church of Notre Dame dates from the 13th-16th centuries. There are several industries, including the manufacture of hosiery, and meat packing. 9,257 (1946).

Villefranche-sur-Saône (vêl.frânsh.sür.sôn). [Also, Villefranche.] Town in E France, in the department of Rhône, situated near the Saône River, ab. 17 mi. N of Lyons. It was once the capital of the county of Beaujolais. It is the center of a winemaking region, and has industries producing cotton textiles and agricultural implements. 20,017 (1946).

Villegaignon (vêl.ɡe.nyôn), Chevalier de. [Title of Nicolas Durand, also, Villegaignon.] b. 1510; d. near Nemours, France, Jan. 9, 1571. French soldier. He served against the Turks and Algerians, was vice-admiral of Brittany, and in 1555 was given command of the expedition sent by Coligny to found a colony in Brazil. He sailed from Le Havre, July 12, with two ships, and in November entered the harbor of Rio de Janeiro, establishing friendly relations with the Indians. Coligny had intended the colony as a refuge for Protestants, but it was made up of different sects, including Catholics; quarrels arose, and Villegaignon expelled the Calvinists. In 1559 he went to France, ostensibly for reinforcements, but never returned, and the colony was destroyed by the Portuguese in 1567. Villegaignon published (in Latin) works on the wars in which he had been engaged.

Villegaignon (vêl.ɡe.nyôn), Ilha de. Small island in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro, fronting the city. It was occupied by the French under the Chevalier de Villegaignon in 1555, when the first settlement on the bay was established.

Villegas (vêl.yä.ɡäs; Spanish, bē-), José. b. at Seville, Spain, Aug. 24, 1848; d. at Madrid, Nov. 10, 1922. Spanish genre and historical painter, director of the Spanish Academy of Fine Arts at Rome, and of the Prado at Madrid. Among his works are At the Church, The Doge Foscarini after His Dismissal, The Guard and His Dog, Moorish Warrior, and Death of the Malador.

Villehardouin (vêl.är.dwan), Geffroi de. b. near Troyes, in Champagne, France, c1600; d. c1213. French chronicler. The only thing known concerning him before the time of the fourth Crusade (1202) is that he bore the title of marshal of Champagne in 1191. When his liege lord joined the Crusade preached in 1199, Villehardouin took service under him, and gained special reputation in negotiating with the Venetians for the transfer of the Crusaders by sea to the Holy Land. He followed the Crusade through all its disasters, and chronicled all the events of importance that extended over a period of 10 years (1198-1207). His Chronique is considered trustworthy from a historical point of view, but is more deserving still for its literary excellence, while being one of the oldest monuments originally written in French prose.

Villejuif (vêl.jüf). Town in N France, in the department of Seine: a southern suburb of Paris. 25,359 (1946).

Villela Barboza (vêl.lä bar.bô.za), Francisco. [Title (created 1825), Marquis of Paranaguá.] b. at Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 20, 1769; d. there, Sept. 11, 1846. Brazilian politician of the conservative party, notable for his influence on the emperor Pedro I. He was deputy to the Portuguese Cortes (1821-22), and during the reign of Pedro I was repeatedly a member of the cabinet. The unpopular acts of the emperor, which led to his enforced abdication in 1831, were largely due to Villela Barboza's advice. He was a poet of some repute.

Villèle (vêl.êl), Jean Baptiste Séraphin Joseph, Comte de. b. at Toulouse, France, Aug. 14, 1773; d. there, March 13, 1854. French statesman and financier. He served in early life in the navy, after the restoration was a leader of the ultraroyalists, entered the cabinet in 1820, became minister of finance in 1821, and was premier (1822-28).

Villemain (vêl.män), Abel François. b. at Paris, June 11, 1790; d. there, May 8, 1870. French writer. On graduating from the Lycée Louis-le-Grand, he studied law. In 1810 he was called to the chair of rhetoric at the Lycée Charlemagne, and from 1816 to 1826 filled the chair in French eloquence at the Sorbonne. His success as a teacher was such that his name was associated with those of Cousin and Guizot (thus forming a famous trio known as Les Trois Professeurs). He won his first laurels as a writer in successful competition before the French Academy for the prize offered for the best essay entitled Eloge de Montaigne (1812). He again took the prize in 1814 with his Avantages et inconvénients de la critique, and in 1816 with his Eloge de Montesquieu. The French Academy elected him a member in 1821. The success of his Histoire de Cromwell (1819) led him gradually into political life, so that after 1836 he gave up teaching altogether. From 1839 to 1844 he was almost continuously minister of public instruction. Besides a couple of essays on Greek themes, entitled Lascais, ou les Grecs du XV^e siècle and Essai sur l'état des Grecs depuis la conquête musulmane (1825), Villemain wrote several shorter papers and articles that were ultimately published in book form; prominent among these writings stand his Souvenirs contemporains d'histoire et de littérature (1856). His reputation, however, rests more particularly on the following three great works: Cours de littérature française, tableau du XVIII^e siècle, Tableau de l'éloquence chrétienne au IV^e siècle, and, in a somewhat lesser degree, Histoire de Grégoire VII (1873).

Villemarqué (vêl.mär.kä), Vicomte de La. See La Villemarqué, Vicomte de.

Villemomble (vêl.môbl). Town in N France, in the department of Seine: a northeastern suburb of Paris. 18,641 (1946).

Villena (vêl.yä.nä; Spanish, bē-), Marquis of. A title of López Pacheco Cabrera y Bobadilla, Diego.

Villeneuve-d'Ornon (vêl.näv.dör.nôn). Town in SW France, in the department of Gironde, situated near the Gironde River, S of Bordeaux. It is a suburb of Bordeaux, known for its wine. 6,764 (1946).

Villeneuve (vêl.név). [German, Neustadt; Italian, Villanova Baltea.] Town in SW Switzerland, in the canton of Vaud, situated at the head of the Lake of Geneva, near the mouth of the Rhone River, S of Montreux. 2,078 (1941).

Villeneuve, Jérôme Pétion de. See Pétion de Villeneuve, Jérôme.

Villeneuve, Pierre Charles Jean Baptiste Silvestre de. b. 1763; committed suicide, 1806. French admiral. He commanded the fleet which was supposed to support an invasion of England in 1805, but was defeated by Nelson at Trafalgar, Oct. 21, 1805.

Villeneuve-d'Agen (vêl.név.dä.zhän). See Villeneuve-sur-Lot.

Villeneuve-le-Roi (vêl.név.le.rwä). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, on the Seine River opposite Villeneuve-St.-Georges, SE of Paris. It has metal and construction industries. 14,794 (1946).

Villeneuve-lès-Avignon (vêl.név.le.sä.vê.nyôn). Town in the department of Gard, France, on the Rhone River opposite Avignon. Pop. ab. 4,000.

Villeneuve-St.-Georges (vêl.név.sän.zhörzh). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated at the junction of the Yeres and Seine rivers, opposite Villeneuve-le-Roi, SE of Paris. It is an industrial town, with railroad repair shops, shipyards, airplane factories, and other manufactures. The town suffered damage in World War II. 18,299 (1946).

Villeneuve-sur-Lot (vêl.név.sür.lot). [Also: Villeneuve-d'Agen; former name, Gajac.] Town in SW France, in the department of Lot-et-Garonne, on the Lot River ab. 16 mi. NE of Agen. An old fortified town, with remains of medieval ramparts, it is a center of the French trade in prunes and has fruit canneries. 17,055 (1946).

Villeneuve-sur-Yonne (vêl.név.sür.yon). Town in C France, in the department of Yonne, on the Yonne River N of Auxerre. The Church of Notre Dame dates from the 13th, 14th, and 16th centuries. The town suffered damage in World War II. 4,321 (1946).

Ville Platte (vêl.plät). Town in S Louisiana, parish seat of Evangeline Parish. 6,633 (1950).

Villeroi (vêl.rwä), Seigneur de. [Title of Nicolas de Neufville.] b. 1542; d. 1617. French minister of state; author of Mémoires d'état (1622).

Villeroi, Duc de. [Title of François de Neufville.] b. April 7, 1644; d. July 18, 1730. French marshal, a favorite of Louis XIV, with whom he was educated. He was commander in chief in the Low Countries in 1695, was defeated by Prince Eugene of Savoy at Chiari on Sept. 1, 1701, was surprised and taken prisoner by Eugene at Cremona on Feb. 1, 1702, and was defeated at Ramillies on May 23, 1706. He was a member of the council of regency under Louis XV.

Villiers-Cotterêts (vê.ler.ko.tre). Town in N France, in the department of Aisne, ab. 14 mi. SW of Soissons. The town suffered damage in World War I and again in World War II, in 1944. Pop. 3,607 (1946).

Villiers-sur-Mer (vê.ler.sür.mer). Resort in the department of Calvados, France, on the English Channel, ab. 12 mi. SW of Le Havre. Pop. ab. 1,500.

Villerupt (vê.lür.p). Town in NE France, in the department of Meurthe-et-Moselle, situated on the Alzette River and the border of Luxembourg, SE of Lougry. It has coal mines, blast furnaces, and iron and steel works. The town suffered damage in World War II, 9,041 (1946).

Ville St. Pierre (vê.lä.sän.pyer). See St. Pierre, Quebec.

Villeta (vê.yä.tä; Spanish, bë-). City in SW Paraguay. Pop. ab. 15,000.

Villette (vi.lët'). Novel by Charlotte Brontë, published in 1853.

Villette de Murçay (vê.let.de.mür.sä), Marie Marguerite Le Valois de. See Caylus, Marie Marguerite Le Valois de Villette de Murçay, Comtesse de.

Villeurbanne (vê.lür.bän). Town in E France, in the department of Rhône, adjoining Lyons on the E. It has numerous industries (silk and other textiles, perfumes, chemicals, and bronze instruments). 82,399 (1946).

Villi (vê.lë), Le. Opera in one act by Giacomo Puccini, with a libretto by Ferdinando Fontana, first performed at Milan on May 31, 1884.

Villiers (vil'yérz), Alan John. b. at Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 23, 1903—. Australian sailor and author of maritime adventures and histories. He went to sea at the age of 15, participated in antarctic whaling expeditions, won (1934) a windjammer grain race in the four-masted barque Parma with an 83-day passage from Australia to England, and captained (1934, 1935, 1936) his square-rigged ship Joseph Conrad on round-the-world cruises. His books on the sea include Whaling in the Frozen South (1925), Vanished Fleets (1931), Grain Race (1933), The Cruise of the Conrad (1937), The Making of a Sailor (1938), Sons of Simbad (1940), The Coral Sea (1948), and Monsoon Seas: The Story of the Indian Ocean (1952).

Villiers, Barbara. [Titles: Lady Castlemaine, Duchess of Cleveland.] b. 1641; d. 1709. Mistress of Charles II of England, by whom she became the mother of the dukes of Cleveland, Grafton, and Northumberland.

Villiers, Charles Pelham. b. at London, Jan. 3, 1802; d. there, Jan. 16, 1898. English statesman, noted for his continued opposition to the Corn Laws. Early in life he became (1825) acquainted with and a follower of Jeremy Bentham, and adopted his views toward free trade.

Villiers, George. See Buckingham, 1st and 2nd Dukes of.

Villiers (vê.yä), George. Pseudonym of Tardieu, André Pierre Gabriel Amédée.

Villiers (vil'yérz), George William Frederick. [Titles: 4th Earl of Clarendon, 4th Baron Hyde.] b. at London, Jan. 12, 1800; d. there, June 27, 1870. English diplomat. He was minister to Spain (1833-39), lord privy seal (1839-41), chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster (1840-41), lord lieutenant of Ireland (1847-52), foreign secretary (1853-58), plenipotentiary at Paris (1856), chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster (1864-65), and foreign secretary (1865-66, 1868-70).

Villiers de L'Isle-Adam (vê.yä.de.lê.lä.dän), Philippe de. b. at Beauvais, France, 1464; d. in Malta, 1534. Grand master of the order of Saint John of Jerusalem. He was elected grand master in 1521. In 1522, after six months' siege, he was compelled to surrender the island of Rhodes, the seat of the order, to Suleiman. In 1530 he secured from Charles V the cession of the islands of Malta and Gozo, which became the new seat of the order.

Villiers-sur-Marne (vê.yä.sür.märn). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, on the Marne River E of Paris. It is an industrial suburb of Paris. 7,020 (1946).

Villingen (fil'ing.ən). [Also, Villingen im Schwarzwald (im shvärts.väلت).] Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated in the Black Forest ab. 30 mi. NE of Freiburg im Breisgau; important manufactures of watches, electrical equipment, and furniture; sawmills and lumber trade. There is a Black Forest Museum, containing important folklore collections. 20,127 (1950).

Villmanstrand (vil'män.stränd). Swedish name of Lappeenranta.

Villon (vê.yän), François. [Original name perhaps François de Montcorbier (or Corbier or Corbeuil or des Loges); also known as Michel Mouton.] b. at Paris, 1431; d. after 1463. French poet. Lay court records and his writings are the chief sources of information concerning his life. Because of the protection afforded him by certain Bourbons, it is surmised that he may have been distant kin to that royal house. But he was born in humble circumstances, and after his father's death he was reared by Guillaume de Villon, canon of the Church of Saint-Benoît-le-Bestourné, whom he called "more than father" and whose name he took. His patron saw him through the Sorbonne, where he took the degrees of B.A. in 1449 and M.A. in 1452; at that time degrees were easily granted and Villon, by his own account, spent little time studying but much time roistering with the notoriously unruly students, drinking, wenching, brawling, engaging in petty thievery, and fighting the police. He seems to have taken clerical orders but never to have held a benefice. In 1455 he fatally stabbed a priest, undoubtedly in self-defense; Villon's punishment was banishment from France. He left Paris but not France, and roamed the countryside with a gang of ruffians, amusing them and celebrating their deeds and ways in numerous ballads in their special slang, known as le jargon. Villon at this time was already famous and had friends in high places, who presently managed to have his banishment revoked. Returning to Paris, he also returned to his former company and old ways, and presently was involved in an affray, for which he blamed Catherine de Vaucelles, following which he thought it discreet to flee his beloved city again. During this second period of exile the authorities, rounding up a criminal gang, came upon facts connecting Villon with a recent large-scale robbery. At this time he wrote a poem, Le Dil de la naissance Marie, dedicated apparently to a daughter of Charles, Duc d'Orléans. Charles d'Orléans himself was a poet, and seems to have become Villon's protector at this time. In or about 1457 Villon is known to have taken part in a contest of poets held by his Bourbon patron at Blois. In 1461 a church in the archdiocese of Orléans was burglarized; the archbishop of Orléans accused Villon, secured his conviction, and had him imprisoned all summer. Fortunately for the poet, 1461 also saw the accession to the French throne of Louis XI, and Villon was liberated in the course of a general amnesty proclaimed by the new monarch. He returned to Paris in 1462; with no great delay he was again convicted of theft and imprisoned. With the help, apparently, of influential personages, he was released, only to be convicted the following year of attempted murder, a charge of which for once he was innocent. He was sentenced to be hanged, but successfully appealed the case and was let off with a decree of ten years' banishment from Paris. Rabelais wrote that Villon thereafter found refuge at London, and there are other stories, but actually nothing is known of his movements after 1463 and it is generally supposed that he died shortly after his last escape from the gallows. Villon's principal poetical works can be dated by his misadventures with the law. We have seen that after his first arrest and banishment he wrote his ballads for thieves and ruffians in le jargon. After his second arrest he composed his poem to the Orleanist princess, and after his release through her or her father's good offices he wrote the Little (or Lesser) Testament. It was in the archbishop of Orléans's dungeon that he composed the Dialogue Between the Heart and Body of François Villon; it was after his rescue from that harrowing experience that he put together his Grand (or Great) Testament; and the Epitaph of Villon, also known as Ballad of the Hanged, was the fruit of his meditations when the noose threatened his neck at Paris. During the reign of classical ideals in the French literature of the 17th and 18th centuries, he was little regarded in his native land and almost unknown fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, më, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔ, then; ɔ, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

beyond its borders. He has since come to be regarded as the fountainhead of modern French poetry and acknowledged moreover as one of the great poets of all times. Villon seems preeminently to deserve the appellation "a genius." In the eyes of the law a criminal; in the view of the world a failure; socially, by the most generous estimate, an irresponsible wastrel, in him a great passion for life and a clear-eyed, searing honesty that did not spare himself were wedded to a spontaneous gift for lyrical utterance hardly ever surpassed. Boisterously humorous and mercilessly satiric, he could also be compassionate, as in the poem commiserating the lot of the chimney sweeps, and tenderly pious, as in the lines to the Blessed Virgin, written at his mother's request. The Little and the Grand Testaments are alike compositions in eight-line stanzas, interspersed with ballades and rondeaus, all alive with passion, ribaldry, piety, patriotism, pity, rebellion, contrition, and a pervading concern with death. The first extensive English translation of Villon was published in 1874, and the first modern definitive edition in French appeared in 1892. Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Algernon Charles Swinburne, and Andrew Lang have been among Villon's English translators, and Rossetti's version of the most famous of all Villon's poems, the Ballade of Dead Ladies, is especially effective, with its rendering of the haunting last line of each stanza, Mais où sont les neiges d'antan?, as "But where are the snows of yesterday?"

Villon, Jacques. [Original name, Gaston Duchamp.] b. at Damville, France, July 31, 1875—. French cubist painter and engraver; brother of Marcel Duchamp and Raymond Duchamp-Villon. He went to Paris in 1894, to study, and first exhibited a series of engravings in 1899. He became associated with the cubist painters later, first exhibiting with them in 1912. He did many color engravings after original works by Bonnard, Braque, Picasso, and Modigliani, and has contributed drawings to many periodicals. He later became a member of the creation-abstract group. Among his better-known works are Musical Instruments, The Dinner Table, Girl, Man Reading His Newspaper, The Bottles, Lines in Space, Rhythm, Still-Life, and Bouquet of Flowers.

Villon, Raymond Duchamp-. See Duchamp-Villon, Raymond.

Vilmar (vil'mär), August Friedrich Christian. b. 1800; d. 1868. German theologian and literary historian, professor of theology at the University of Marburg. His Geschichte der deutschen Nationalität (1845) was for many years the most widely used layman's work of reference in its field.

Vilna (vil'na). Former guberniya (government) in Russia, surrounded by the governments of Kovno, Vitebsk, Minsk, Grodno, and Suwalki. It is now included in Lithuania and in the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R.

Vilna. [Also: Vilnius, Vilnyus (vil'ni.üs); German, Wilna; Polish, Wilno.] City in SE Lithuania, the capital of Lithuania. Before World War II this city was in Poland (1920-39), but it was assigned to Lithuania by the U.S.S.R. It has a trade in timber and grain, and food-processing and machinery industries. During World War II the city was occupied from June, 1941, to July 13, 1944, by the Germans, who exterminated the large Jewish community, which prior to World War II had constituted about 50 percent of the total population. 209,400 (est. 1940).

Vilna Dispute. Dispute between Poland and Lithuania in the period after World War I over possession of the city of Vilna, which had been the medieval capital of the grand duchy of Lithuania. Under the Curzon Line formula and the treaty of Moscow (1920) Vilna was ceded to Lithuania. However, the Russo-Polish War, armed clashes between Lithuania and Poland, and the capture of Vilna by Polish freebooters in 1920 left its disposition in dispute. An international conference in 1923 allotted the city to Poland, in whose hands it remained until 1939 despite Lithuanian protests to the League of Nations.

Viluma (vêl.ümä), Marquis of. Title of Pezuela, Joquín de la.

Vilvoorde (vil.vör'de). [French, Vilvoorde (vêl.vörd).] Town in C Belgium, in the province of Brabant, ab. 5 mi. N of Brussels; marketing center of a horticultural district; textile and furniture manufactures. 25,955 (1947).

Vilyui (vil'yö'). River in the U.S.S.R., in NE Siberia, flowing SE and E from the C Siberian plateau to join the Lena River ab. 175 mi. NW of Yakutsk. Length, ab. 1,500 mi.

Vilyui Range. Range of mountains in the U.S.S.R., in the Yakut Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic, extending E and W for ab. 400 mi. between the Lena and Vilyui rivers. Peak elevation, ab. 3,000 ft.

Vimeiro (vê.mêr.ô). Place in the province of Estremadura, Portugal, ab. 33 mi. NW of Lisbon. Here on Aug. 21, 1808, the British under Wellington defeated the French under Junot.

Vimercate (vê.mer.kä'tä). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Milano, ab. 15 mi. NE of Milan: linen, cotton, and hemp industries. Pop. of commune, 11,776 (1936); of town, 5,793 (1936).

Vimeure (vê.mêr), Donatien Marie Joseph de. [Title, Vicomte de Rochambeau.] b. near Vendôme, France, April 7, 1750; killed at the battle of Leipzig, in Saxony, Oct. 18, 1813. French general; son of J. B. D. de Vimeure, Comte de Rochambeau. He served with his father in North America, and in 1792 was made lieutenant general and governor of the Leeward Islands, where he capitulated to the English (March 22, 1794). In 1802 he was second in command in the French expedition against Hispaniola, and after Leclerc's death (Dec. 2, 1802) succeeded him in the leadership. Closely besieged at Cap François (now Cap-Haïtien), he abandoned it (Nov. 30, 1803) and surrendered to the British admiral whose fleet was blockading the bay. He remained in captivity until 1811, and subsequently served under Napoleon.

Vimeure, Jean Baptiste Donatien de. See Rochambeau, Comte de.

Viminal Hill (vim'inal). [Latin, Mons Viminalis (vim.i.näl'is).] Northeasternmost of the group of seven hills of ancient Rome, E of the Quirinal and N of the Esquiline. The baths of Diocletian lie below it to the N.

Viña del Mar (vil'nyä del mär'; Spanish, be'). City in W Chile, in Valparaíso province: a northeastern residential suburb of the city of Valparaíso and a fashionable seashore resort with numerous hotels, casino, race track, and promenade. Industries include a sugar refinery and cotton mills. 65,916 (1940).

Vincennes (vin.senz'; French, van.sen). Town in N France, in the department of Seine: an eastern suburb of Paris. It is noted for its castle which, on the site of an earlier structure, was built (1364-73) by Charles V of France. Louis XIII had a pleasure castle built inside the enclosure of the fortress, and many French kings died at Vincennes. The castle was later used as a dungeon (the Prince of Condé, Diderot, and Mirabeau were all imprisoned here). The Duke of Enghien, Louis Antoine Henri de Bourbon-Condé, was shot in a moat here in 1804. The chapel dates from the 14th century. The town manufactures a variety of products, including chemicals and drugs, perfumes, guns, film, and rubber products. 49,226 (1946).

Vincennes (vin.senz'). City in SW Indiana, county seat of Knox County, on the Wabash River ab. 103 mi. SW of Indianapolis: railroad center with manufactures of glass, farm implements, paper products, shoes, and canned foods. It was settled by the French in 1702, and was the capital (1800-13) of Indiana Territory. 18,831 (1950).

Vincennes (van.sen), Bois de. See Bois de Vincennes.

Vincennes (vin.senz'; French, van.sen), Sieur de. [Title of Jean Baptiste Bissot.] b. in New France, Jan. 19, 1668; d. at what is now Fort Wayne, Ind., 1719. French soldier and explorer in the Mississippi valley. He took command (1696) among the Miami Indians, was a member of Henry de Tonty's party during the expedition (1698) to the West, and was later active in the Indian trade.

Vincennes, Sieur de. [Title of François Marie Bissot.] b. at Montreal, Canada, June 17, 1700; d. in what is now Mississippi, March 25, 1736. French soldier, trader, and explorer in the Mississippi valley; son of Jean Baptiste Bissot, Sieur de Vincennes. Upon the death of his father, he assumed command among the Miami Indians at a village on the site of what is now Fort Wayne, Ind., became (1722) an ensign in the French colonial army, and built (1731 or 1732) a fort at what is now Vincennes, Ind. He was tortured and put to death by the Chickasaw Indians.

Vincent (vin'sent), Saint. [Latin, Vincentius (vin-sen'shus).] b. at Huesca, Spain; martyred at Valencia, Spain, 304 A.D. Spanish martyr, archdeacon of Bishop Valerius of Saragossa. He died after torture during Diocletian's persecution.

Vincent (van'sän), Charles. b. 1851; d. 1920. French novelist who used the pseudonym "Pierre Maël" jointly with his collaborator Charles Cauter.

Vincent (vin'sent), Edgar. See D'Abernethy, 1st Viscount.

Vincent, George Edgar. b. at Rockford, Ill., March 21, 1864; d. at New York, Feb. 1, 1941. American educator and sociologist; son of John Heyl Vincent. He served as president (1907-15) and honorary president (1915-37) of the Chautauqua Institution. He was a professor (1904-11) and dean (1907-11) at the University of Chicago, president (1911-17) of the University of Minnesota, and president (1917-29) of the Rockefeller Foundation at New York. In this latter position, he traveled widely, both during and after World War I, surveying many areas for their needs in medical and hospital facilities. Author of Social Mind and Education (1896), and co-author with Albion Woodbury Small of An Introduction to the Study of Society (1895).

Vincent (van'sän), Jean Hyacinthe. b. at Bordeaux, France, Dec. 22, 1862; d. at Paris, Nov. 23, 1950. French physician, known for his studies (1889-1910) on the etiology and pathogenesis of tetanus and tetanus toxin, for his researches in typhus, dysentery, and an ulceromembranous angina and stomatitis, called Vincent's angina or trench mouth (1898), his method for staining capsules (1894), his discovery of Streptothrix (Actinomyces), the parasite of Madura foot (1894), and his clinical studies on occipital neuralgia, thyroidism, rheumatism, scleroderma, and meningitis. He introduced an antityphoid-paratyphoid vaccination by means of the méthode des vaccins à l'éther and recommended a polyvalent antigangrene serum, an antitoxin serum, and antistreptococcus and antiparatyphus serum.

Vincent (vin'sent), John Heyl. b. at Tuscaloosa, Ala., Feb. 23, 1832; d. May 9, 1920. American clergyman and educator, a bishop (1888 et seq.) of the Methodist Episcopal Church and, with Lewis Miller, one of the founders of the Chautauqua Assembly (1874). He was also the originator and chancellor of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle (1878). He published The Modern Sunday School, Studies in Young Life, Our Own Church, The Church School and its Officers, Sunday School Institutes and Normal Classes, The Chautauqua Movement, and others.

Vincent, Marvin Richardson. b. at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Sept. 11, 1834; d. Aug. 18, 1922. American clergyman, author, and educator, professor of New Testament exegesis and criticism at Union Theological Seminary from 1888. He entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1859 and that of the Presbyterian Church in 1863. Author of Word-Studies in the New Testament (1877-1900), The Age of Hildebrand (1896), and others.

Vincent (van'sän), Sténio Joseph. b. at Port-au-Prince, Haiti, 1874—Haitian lawyer, journalist, and diplomat, president (1930-41) of Haiti. He was founder of the newspapers L'Effort (1902) and Haiti-Journal (1930), a senator, and secretary of state and minister plenipotentiary. Elected (November, 1930) president of Haiti, he signed a treaty (August, 1933) with the U.S. arranging for gradual restoration of Haitian self-government. A plebiscite (June, 1935) extended his term five years.

Vincent Crummles (vin'sent krum'lz). See Crummles, Vincent.

Vincent de Paul (van'sän de pöl; Anglicized, vin'sent de pöl'), Saint. b. at Puy, Gascony, France, April 24, 1576; d. at St. Lazare, Paris, Sept. 27, 1660. French ecclesiastic, the founder of the Congregation of the Mission (1625), referred to as Lazarists, of the order of Sisters of Charity (1634), and of founding hospitals at Paris. He was canonized in 1737. The spirit of his charitable work has been carried on by the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, an organization within the Roman Catholic Church dedicated to social service, founded (1833) at Paris by Frédéric Ozanam and others.

Vincent Ferrer (vin'sent fer'rer'), Saint. b. at Valencia, Spain, 1350; d. at Vannes, in Brittany, France, 1418. Spanish Dominican friar. He was adviser to King John I of Aragon. In 1395 he was called to Avignon by Pope Benedict XIII, but returned to Valencia in 1398 grieved over the condition of the Church, and thereupon began to preach penance in the countries obedient to the Avignon popes, whom he defended in his writings. He made numerous conversions in Spain among the Moors and Jews, and among the Waldenses and Cathari in other parts of Europe. He urged Benedict XIII to resign the papacy for the welfare of the Church. He was canonized in 1455.

Vincenzio (vin-sen'shi.ō). Old gentleman of Pisa, a character in Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew.

Vincitorio. Reigning duke, a character in Shakespeare's Measure for Measure.

Vincent of Lerins (vin'sent; lä.rañs'), Saint. [Pseudonym, Peregrinus; Latinized, Vincents Lerinensis.] d. at Toul, France; d. c.450. French religious figure. At first a soldier, he retired to the Îles de Lérins, where he was ordained priest. In 435 he wrote under his pseudonym two Commonitoria in which he developed the principles of ecclesiastical tradition. Himself not free from semi-Pelagianism, he opposed extreme interpretations of Saint Augustine on grace.

Vinces (vën'säs; Spanish, bën'-). City in W Ecuador, in Los Rios province, 21,860 (est. 1944).

Vinci (vën'chē), Leonardo. b. at Strongoli, Calabria, Italy, 1690; d. at Naples, Italy, May 28, 1730. Italian composer of operas, oratorios, and masses.

Vinci, Leonardo (or Lionardo) d. b. at Anchio in the community of Vinci, near Florence, Italy, April 15, 1452; d. at Cloux, near Amboise, France, May 2, 1519. Italian painter, sculptor, musician, engineer, and scientist, considered by many to have been the first man of the modern age to anticipate what science and invention would achieve in man's struggle against nature. He anticipated Galileo's and Newton's discoveries, and man's conquest of the air. He was the illegitimate son of Ser Piero da Vinci, a noted lawyer at Florence, and Caterina, a country girl of Anchio. After a boyhood spent in his father's house at Vinci, he entered (c.1469) Andrea Verrocchio's workshop at Florence. There he learned many crafts: painting, goldsmithing and casting of monuments, construction, and engineering. In 1472 he was accepted in the painters' guild, but he still remained Verrocchio's coworker. His most important surviving works of this period are the angel in Verrocchio's painting of the Baptism of Christ (now in the Uffizi, Florence), the Annunciations (Uffizi and Louvre, Paris), the unfinished panels of Saint Jerome (Vatican, Rome) and of the Adoration of the Magi (Uffizi), commissioned by the monks of San Donato di Scopeto in 1481. In 1482 da Vinci entered the service of Lodovico Sforza, Duke of Milan, with whom he remained for 17 years until the end of the Sforza regime in 1499. His great paintings of this period are the Madonna of the Rocks (Louvre), ordered by the Confraternity of the Conception, and the Last Supper, painted on the wall of the refectory of the Convent Santa Maria delle Grazie for the Duke of Milan. This latter work has become world famous as a masterpiece of pictorial invention and psychological interpretation. Leonardo worked on it from 1495 to 1497, using oil tempera which after some years cracked. Further damage resulted through warfare and faulty restoration. The painting is now under expert care to avoid further damage. Leonardo worked through all his Milanese years on the great equestrian statue of Francesco Sforza, but the monument was never cast in bronze. When the French captured Milan (1499), French archers destroyed the model. Leonardo was also engaged in architectural and engineering tasks, both military and civil. He planned cities and fortifications, designed pageants, built the first revolving stage, and worked on projects for the diversion of rivers, developing a canal system with locks which are still in operation. He studied mathematics with Luca Pacioli, and designed the illustrations for a book (De Divina Proportione) written by this famous mathematician. "There is no certainty," Leonardo said, "where you cannot apply one of the mathematical sciences." He filled his notebooks with mathematical, anatomical, botanical, and geophysical observations; with studies in optics, hydraulics, mechanics, both practical and theoretical, with precepts for painters, and with philosophical reflections. Of his notebooks more than 7,000 pages are preserved. All are written in left-handed mirror script. This storehouse of knowledge, in its original form illegible to the general reader, has been carefully studied, transcribed, and edited during the past century. In 1500 Leonardo returned to Florence, and in 1502 he became military engineer for Cesare Borgia, for whom he drew maps of strategic zones which are the first examples of modern cartography. He designed such weapons as an armored tank, guided projectiles, and breechloading cannons. He studied the flight of birds and designed flying machines, conceiving the problem of flight in the modern sense of aerodynamic reciprocity. At Florence from 1500 to 1506 he painted the panel of Saint Anne (Louvre) and the portrait of Mona Lisa (or La Gioconda), famous and much discussed for the smile which gives it life; great for the simplicity and dignity of composition and for the mountain landscape which opens the background into infinite distances. Leonardo and Michelangelo were commissioned to paint frescoes in the Council Hall of Florence, but only the cartoons were completed, and these were later destroyed. We have, however, a record of them in a sketch which Peter Paul Rubens made of the middle scene of Leonardo's Battle of Anghiari. In 1507 Leonardo returned to Milan in the service of the French king. More and more interested in scientific problems, he left many paintings to be finished by his pupils: thus Ambrosio de'Predis finished another version of the Madonna of the Rocks (National Gallery, London). In 1513, at the age of 61, Leonardo went to Rome, but he did not get the support he expected from Cardinal de' Medici, a relative of the Pope. The Pope listened to secret and false accusations by enemies and forbade Leonardo the use of the hospital for dissections. While Michelangelo and Raphael executed their great frescoes in the Vatican, Leonardo lived in seclusion until Francis I requested him to come to France as "first painter and engineer to the King." Accepting this offer in 1516 Leonardo left Italy forever. Accompanied by his faithful pupil, Francesco Melzi, he spent the last four years of his life in the little castle of Cloux, near Amboise. He painted only one more panel, Saint John (Louvre), but was engaged in architectural and canal-engineering projects. He again staged a great festival with a repetition of the scenery of Milan in 1490. He was honored and admired, received many distinguished guests, and was frequently visited by the enthusiastic King Francis I. See The Notebooks of Leonardo da Vinci, edited by Edward MacCurdy (1948), Paragone, by Irma Richter (1949), Leonardo da Vinci, by Kenneth Clark (1939), Leonardo the Florentine, by Rachel A. Taylor (1927), The Renaissance, by Walter Pater (1893), and Leonardo da Vinci, A Study in Psychosexuality, by Sigmund Freud (1947).

Vincinonia (vin.si.nō'nī.a). A medieval Latin name of the Vilaine.

Vincy (vin'sī). Rosamond. One of the principal female characters in George Eliot's novel Middlemarch.

Vindelicia (vin.dġ.lish'ī.a, -lish'ā). [Also, Rhaetia Secunda.] In ancient geography, a Roman province; sometimes united with Rhaetia. It was bounded by the Danube, the Inn (separating it from Noricum), and Rhaetia. Its chief town was Augusta Vincllicorum (modern Augsburg). The early inhabitants were probably of Celtic origin. Vindelicia occupied in general what is now the S part of Baden, Württemberg, and Bavaria, and the N part of the Tyrol.

Vindhya Mountains (vind'vā). [Also, Vindhya Hills.] System of mountains and hills in N central Union of India, extending (E to W) across the Vindhya Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh for ab. 350 mi. They form part of the boundary of the Deccan. Elevation, ab. 2,000 to 3,000 ft.

Vindhya Pradesh (vind'sh). State of the Union of India, in the C part, bordering on Madhya Pradesh and Uttar Pradesh, formed by the merger (1948-50) of 35 former states of Central India. It has four seats in the Indian Council of States. Capital, Rewa; area, 24,600 sq. mi.; pop. 3,577,431 (1951).

Vindobona (vin.dō.bō'na, vin.dob'ŋ.na). Latin name of Vienna, Austria.

Vindocinium (vin.dō.sin'ū.um). Latin name of Vendôme.

Vindogladia (vin.dō.glā'di.ā). See under Bokerly Dyke.

Vindonissa (vin.dō.nis'ā). Latin name of Windisch.

Vinegar Bible, The. Edition printed at the Clarendon Press, Oxford, in 1717, with the heading to Luke xx the "Parable of the Vinegar" instead of the "Parable of the Vineyard."

Vinegar Hill. Place in Ireland, ab. 14 mi. N of Wexford: a stronghold of the Irish insurgents in 1798. In June of that year they were attacked by British troops and dispersed.

Vineland (vin'land). See also Vinland.

Vineland. Borough in SW New Jersey, in Cumberland County, ab. 33 mi. SE of Philadelphia: commercial center of an agricultural area; manufactures of glass. 8,155 (1950).

Vineland. A former name of Clarkston, Wash.

Viner (vī'nēr). Charles. b. at Salisbury, England, 1678; d. at Aldershot, England, June 5, 1756. English jurist, founder of the Vinerian common-law professorship, scholarships, and fellowships at Oxford University. He published A General Abridgment of Law and Equity (23 vols., 1742-53).

Vinet (vē.ne), Alexandre Rodolphe. b. near Lausanne, Switzerland, June 17, 1797; d. at Clarens, Switzerland, May 4, 1847. Swiss Protestant theologian and literary critic, professor at Basel (1819) and later (1837) at Lausanne. He was one of the leaders of the free-church movement at Vaud. His works include Chrestomathie française (1829), Discours sur quelques sujets religieux (1831), Études sur Pascal (1848) Études sur la littérature française au XIX^e siècle (1849-51), Théologie pastorale (1850), Histoire de la littérature française au XVIII^e siècle (1851), Homiletique (1853), and Études sur les moralistes au XVI^e et XVII^e siècles (1859).

Vineyard Sound (vin'yard). Sea passage SE of Massachusetts which separates Martha's Vineyard from the Elizabeth Islands. Width, 4 to 7 mi.

Vingenna (vin.jen'ā). A medieval Latin name of the Vienne River.

Vingt Ans Après (vañ tãñ zã.pre). [English title, Twenty Years After.] Novel by Alexandre Dumas père, published in 1845, a sequel to Les Trois Mousquetaires. It was followed by Dix ans plus tard, ou le vicomte de Bragelonne (1848-50).

Vinita (vin'ē'tā). City in NE Oklahoma, county seat of Craig County. 5,518 (1950).

Vinkovci (vēng'kōf.tse). Town in N Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Croatia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Savska, situated W of Novi Sad, in a rich agricultural region. It is a station on the Belgrade-Zagreb railroad line. 15,558 (1948).

Vinland (vin'land). [Also: Vineland, Wineland.] Region in which a Norse settlement was probably made (c1006) in North America. It was named from the grapes found there by the discoverers. It has been identified with various regions on the coast from Labrador to New Jersey.

Vinne (vin'ē), Theodore Low De. See De Vinne, Theodore Low.

Vinnitsa (vin'it.sa; Russian, vŷen'nyi.tsa). Oblast (region) in U.S.S.R., in Europe, in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 125 mi. SW of the city of Kiev. The land is hilly. The chief occupation of the people is farming; fine crops of sugar beets, wheat, corn, and tobacco are grown. Capital, Vinnitsa; area, 10,769 sq. mi.; pop. 3,004,000 (1933).

Vinnitsa. City in the U.S.S.R., capital of Vinnitsa oblast (region) of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, ab. 225 mi. NW of Odessa: rail center and large sugar-refining city; it also has manufactures of chemical fertilizers, and maintenance shops for agricultural machinery. 92,868 (1939).

Vinogradoff (vē.nō.grā'dōf), Sir Paul Gavrilovitch. b. at Kostroma, Russia, Dec. 1, 1854; d. at Paris, Dec. 19, 1925. Russian jurist and social and legal historian of medieval England, known for his thesis that many basic elements of English law stem directly from the character of the Anglo-Saxon freeman (as a type). He served as Corpus professor of jurisprudence, Oxford (1903-25), after having left his place as professor (1887-1901) at the University of Moscow, and lectured at numerous universities including Harvard, Columbia, Johns Hopkins, Yale, the University of Leiden, and the University of Calcutta. Author of Villainage in England (1887; Eng. trans., 1892), The Growth of the Manor (1905), English Society in the 11th Century (1908), Roman Law in Medieval Europe (1909), and others, and editor of eight volumes of the Oxford Studies in Social and Legal History.

Vinson (vin'son), Carl. b. in Baldwin County, near Milledgeville, Ga., Nov. 18, 1883—. American lawyer and politician. He served as a member (1909-12) of the Georgia house of representatives, as congressman (1914 et seq.) from Georgia, and as chairman of the House naval affairs committee (1931-47) and armed services committee (1949 et seq.).

Vinson, Fred M. b. at Louisa, Ky., Jan. 22, 1890; d. at Washington, D.C., Sept. 8, 1953. American jurist and administrator, chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1946 et seq.). He was a congressman (1923-29, 1931-37) from Kentucky, resigning to become an associate justice (1937-43) of U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. He left this position for that of director (May, 1943-March, 1945) of the Office of Economic Stabilization, and was appointed (March, 1945) Federal Loan Administrator. In April, 1945, he became director of the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion. He served (1945-46) as U.S. Secretary of the Treasury under Truman, and was appointed (1946) chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Vinteuil (vañ.téy'). Character in the cyclical novel À la recherche du temps perdu (1913-27; Eng. trans., Remembrance of Things Past, 1922-32) by Marcel Proust. A phrase of the sonata composed by Vinteuil haunts both Swann and the narrator at various crucial points in the story.

Vintimiglia (vañ.tē.mēl). French name of Ventimiglia.

Vintium (vin'shi.um). Latin name of Venice.

Vinton (vin'ton). [Former names: Northport, Freemont.] City in E Iowa, county seat of Benton County. 4,307 (1950).

Vinton. Town in SW Louisiana, in Calcasieu Parish: local trading center. 2,597 (1950).

Vinton. Town in C Virginia, in Roanoke County. 3,629 (1950).

Vinton, Frederic Porter. b. at Bangor, Me., Jan. 29, 1846; d. at Boston, May 20, 1911. American painter, known for his portraits. He was a pupil of William Morris Hunt at Boston, and studied also at Munich and Paris.

Vio (vë'ô), Giacomo de. Original name of Cardinal Cajetan.

Vio Gaetano (gä.ä.tä'nô), Tommaso de. See Cardinal Cajetan.

Viola (vi'ô.la). Principal female character in Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

Viola. Principal character in Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher's The Coxcomb.

Violet-Crowned City. Name sometimes given to Athens, Greece.

Viollet-le-Duc (vyo.le.le.dük), Eugène Emmanuel. b. at Paris, Jan. 27, 1814; d. at Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 17, 1879. French architect, archaeologist, and writer on art. He was employed in the restoration of many medieval buildings in France, including Notre Dame at Paris and the cathedrals of Amiens and Laon. His works include Dictionnaire de l'architecture française du XI^e au XVI^e siècle (10 vols., 1854-69), Essai sur l'architecture militaire au moyen âge (1854), Dictionnaire du mobilier français (1855), Description de Notre Dame de Paris (1856), Entretiens sur l'architecture (1858), and of Histoire d'une maison, Histoire d'une forteresse, Histoire de l'habitation humaine, and Histoire d'hôtel de ville et d'une cathédrale (all 1873-75).

Vionville (vyôñ.vēl), Battle of. [Also, Battle of Mars-la-Tour.] Battle between the French and Germans, fought near the villages of Vionville and Mars-la-Tour, ab. 12 mi. W of Metz, France, Aug. 16, 1870. The Germans (ab. 67,000) were commanded by Prince Frederick Charles; the French (120,000 to 138,000) by Marshal Bazaine. The result of the battle, which was one of the most fiercely contested and bloodiest of the century, was to prevent the retreat of the French from Metz to Verdun. The German loss in killed and wounded was ab. 16,000; the French loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners was ab. 17,000.

Viotti (vyô'tô'të), Jean Baptiste. [Original name, Giovanni Battista Viotti.] b. at Fontanetto, Piedmont, Italy, May 23, 1753; d. at London, March 3, 1824. Italian violinist and composer for the violin. He exerted a notable influence upon the modern style of violin playing. His time was spent chiefly at Paris and London, where he was engaged partly in managing operatic enterprises.

Viper (vi'për), Doctor. Character in Samuel Foote's play The Capuchin. Under this name the author severely castigated an Irish clergyman named Jackson, in the pay of Elizabeth Chudleigh Pierrepont, called the Duchess of Kingston, as a revenge for the suppression of Foote's play The Trip to Calais.

Vipiteno (vë.pë.te'nô). [German, Sterzing; Latin, Vipitenum (vi.pi.të'num).] Town in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Trentino-Alto Adige, in the province of Bolzano, S of the Brenner Pass. The population of the town and surrounding country is largely German-speaking. 3,428 (1936).

Vique (vëk). See Vich.

Vira (vi'ra). Medieval Latin name of the Vire River.

Viracocha (vë.rä.kô'chä). [Also: Viracocha, Pachayachac, Con-Tisci, Con-Ticci, Kon-Tiki, Ilia-Tisci.] Supreme deity of the Incas, who was conceived of as being the creator and ruler of all living things. He made the earth, the sky, and the stars, established order out of chaos, and gave mankind much knowledge, such as the practice of agriculture. It is postulated that he was the culture hero of some pre-Inca peoples who were raised to the status of a deity by the Incas. Viracocha was sometimes represented as white and bearded, hence this name was applied to the Spaniards. His full name was Con-Ticci-Viracocha-Pachayachac, meaning "ancient foundation, lord, and teacher of the world." He is now considered not to be the same god as Pachacamac.

Virchow (fir'chô), Rudolf. b. at Schivelbin, Pomerania, Prussia, Oct. 13, 1821; d. at Berlin, Sept. 5, 1902. German anatomist, physiologist, and anthropologist. Not only was he the founder of cellular pathology but his investigations into nearly every field of medicine brought advances. In physical anthropology and ethnology he also made valuable contributions. He did some archaeological work, too, among other things accompanying Heinrich Schliemann to Troy in 1879. He was a professor at Würzburg (1849-56), and at Berlin (1856-1902). He was a member of the Prussian Landtag (1862-1902) and of the German Reichstag (1880-93), and one of the leaders of the Progressive and later of the German Liberal Party, leading the opposition to Bismarck. He published numerous technical works, notably his Cellular-pathologie (1858). He was one of the founders of the Archiv für pathologische Anatomie und Physiologie.

Virden (vër'den). City in C Illinois, in Macoupin County, in a coal-mining area. 3,206 (1950).

Vire (vër). Town in NW France, in the department of Calvados, on the Vire River ab. 35 mi. SW of Caen. The town, seat of woolen manufactures, was almost completely destroyed in World War II. The Church of Notre Dame (13th, 14th, and 15th centuries) was seriously damaged. The Vau-de-Vire, valley where Oliver Basselin lived, is in the vicinity; his gay songs were called Vauz-de-Vire, whence the word "vaudeville." 5,917 (1946).

Vire River. [Medieval Latin, Vira.] River in Normandy, France, which flows into the English Channel ab. 30 mi. SE of Cherbourg. Length, ab. 75 mi.

Virgil (vër'jil). See Vergil.

Virgil, Polydore. See Vergil, Polydore.

Virgilia (vër.jil'i.a). Wife of Coriolanus, in Shakespeare's play Coriolanus.

Virgin. See Mary.

Virgin Fortress, The. Historical novel by Sir Max Pemberton, published in 1912.

Virginia (vër.jin'ya). [Called the "Old Dominion"; also, the "Mother of Presidents"; official name, the Commonwealth of Virginia. State of the SE United States, bounded by West Virginia on the N and NW, Maryland and the District of Columbia (separated by the Potomac River) on the N and NE, Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean on the E, North Carolina and Tennessee on the S, and Kentucky on the W; contains a large portion E of Chesapeake Bay; a Southern State, and one of the 13 original states of the American Union.

Population, Area, and Political Divisions. Virginia is divided for administrative purposes into 100 counties, and 24 independent cities having the status of counties. The state sends nine representatives to Congress, and has 11 electoral votes. Among the leading cities are Lynchburg, Newport News, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Richmond, and Roanoke. Capital, Richmond; area, 39,899 sq. mi. (40,815 sq. mi., including water); pop. 3,318,680 (1950), an increase of 23.9 percent over the 1940 figure. The state ranks 33rd in area, and 15th (on the basis of the 1950 census) in population.

Terrain and Climate. The E part of the state is in the Atlantic coastal plain. The coast section, consisting of four peninsulas, is often known as Tidewater Virginia. The Piedmont Region (or Plateau) lies in the C part of the state. In the W are the Blue Ridge Mountains and other ranges of the Appalachians. The Cumberland Plateau extends along the Kentucky border. Mount Rogers (5,719 ft.), in the S, is the highest point in the state. Immediately W of the Blue Ridge Mountains in the N is the fertile Shenandoah Valley. Shenandoah National Park (ab. 302 sq. mi.; established 1935) lies in the Blue Ridge. The principal rivers in addition to the Potomac are the Shenandoah, flowing NE to West Virginia, where it joins the Potomac; the Rappahannock, the York, and the James, draining into Chesapeake Bay; and the Roanoke, starting in the W and flowing SE into North Carolina. At the extreme SE is the Dismal Swamp. The E part of the state is warm and has a fairly uniform climate, while the W is subject to sudden changes in temperature. The mountain regions have snow, but it disappears in the spring.

Industry, Agriculture, and Trade. Chiefly agricultural, the state is a leader in the production of tobacco. Apples and corn are other important crops. Winter wheat, oats, peanuts, hogs, milk, cattle, and poultry products are also among the chief agricultural products. Virginia hams are world famous. The state fisheries produce crabs and oysters. Lumbering is an important occupation, the Blue Ridge section and the coastal plain being well forested. Tobacco products are the main industrial product. Printing, shipbuilding, and the manufacture of textiles, food products, chemicals, and paper are other leading industries. Richmond is a major national cigarette-making center. The port of Hampton Roads is an outstanding Atlantic port comprising the harbors of Newport News, Hampton, Norfolk, and Portsmouth. In this area are located huge shipbuilding yards and important U.S. naval and army yards and installations which made the port a busy area in both World Wars. The state's mineral resources include coal, stone, iron, titanium, sheet mica, manganese, zinc, gypsum, lead, and salt. Annual income in the state from agriculture ranges as high as $52 million dollars; from mineral output, as high as $3 million; from manufacturing as high as two billion.

History. Virginia was the first of the English colonies in North America. Sir Walter Raleigh surveyed the coast and attempted to start colonies in the region. The London Company, having received (1606) a royal grant of land, sent out an expedition which made (1607) the first permanent settlement at Jamestown. Among the early leaders were John Smith, Newport, Somers, Gates, and Lord Delaware. The settlement was governed at first by the London Company. In 1619 the Virginia House of Burgesses, the first popular American assembly, was convened. Negro slavery was introduced that same year. Virginia became a royal colony in 1624, was the scene of Bacon's rebellion in 1676, and took a prominent part in the French and Indian Wars. The state was active in resisting the Stamp Act and other restrictive British legislation, and took a leading part in events leading to the Revolutionary War. Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee, and Thomas Jefferson were active during this period. Yorktown was the scene of the surrender of Cornwallis to Washington in 1781. Virginia ceded (1784) its territory beyond the Ohio to the U.S.; ratified the federal Constitution on June 25, 1788, becoming the tenth state of the Union. Virginia was a leading influence in the early history of the nation, furnishing four of the first five presidents, seceded from the Union on April 17, 1861, although its W counties remained loyal to the Union cause and began steps toward becoming the separate state of West Virginia, became the center of the Confederacy, Richmond serving as the capital of the Confederate states. Virginia was one of the chief seats of the Civil War, more battles being fought in the state than in any other. Among the most notable events occurring in the state were the first and second battles of Bull Run (1861), the Peninsular and Valley campaigns, the Fredericksburg (1862 and 1863) and Chancellorsville (1863) campaigns, the Wilderness campaign (1864), the four-year siege and capture (1865) of Richmond, and the surrender (1865) of Lee's army at Appomattox Court House. The state was readmitted to the Union on Jan. 26, 1870.

Culture. The northernmost of the S coastal states, Virginia is more rural than urban, although the urban population (47 percent of the 1950 census) is increasing rapidly in connection with industrial development. The state has a small percentage of foreign-born inhabitants. There is still considerable illiteracy. Today the state is the site of many historic shrines intimately connected with the nation's early history. Mount Vernon, Washington's home, and Monticello, Jefferson's home, are chief among these. National military parks and national monuments commemorate battles and events of the Civil War. Arlington, a county on the Potomac, is a suburb of Washington, D.C., and the site of Arlington National Cemetery, which contains the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Williamsburg, a restoration of the colonial capital, contains hundreds of restored and reconstructed buildings; the program, begun in 1927, was sponsored by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Richmond is the site of the Commonwealth-owned Virginia Museum of Fine Arts containing masterpieces of European and American art. At Abingdon is the famous Barter Theater subsidized by the state. Among the numerous institutions of higher learning in the state are the state-supported University of Virginia at Charlottesville, with a branch (for women) at Fredericksburg, and Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington; the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, at Blacksburg; the College of William and Mary, at Williamsburg, with branches at Richmond and Norfolk; Hampden-Sydney, near Farmville; Hampton Institute (for Negroes), at Hampton; Randolph-Macon College, at Ashland; Sweet Briar College (for women), at Sweet Briar; Hollins College (for women), near Roanoke; Washington and Lee University, at Lexington; University of Richmond, at Richmond. The state motto is Sic Semper Tyrannis, meaning "Thus Always to Tyrants." The state flower is the American dogwood.

Virginia. City in NE Minnesota, in St. Louis County, ab. 56 mi. NW of Duluth; iron mining, 12,486 (1950).

Virginia. In Roman legend, the daughter of Virginius, a centurion, who was slain by her father to keep her from the power of the decemvir Appius Claudius (449 B.C.). This act led to the overthrow of the decemvirate.

Virginia. Tragedy by Count Vittorio Alfieri, printed in 1783.

Virginia. Asteroid (No. 50) discovered by Ferguson at Washington, Oct. 4, 1857.

Virginia Beach. Town in SE Virginia, in Princess Anne County, on the Atlantic Ocean E of Norfolk; seashore resort, 5,390 (1950).

Virginia City. Town in S Montana, county seat of Madison County, ab. 60 mi. SE of Butte; a 19th-century gold-mining center, and capital (1865-75) of Montana Territory, 323 (1950).

Virginia City. Unincorporated community in W Nevada, county seat of Storey County, on the slope of Mount Davidson, ab. 6,200 feet above sea level. Sometimes characterized as "the greatest silver-mining camp of all times," it was built in 1859 over the Comstock Lode, which contained both gold and silver, and produced (by 1877) ore valued at 36 million dollars. Today the mines are relatively unimportant. The population reached a peak of ab. 35,000 in 1874-75, was 10,917 in 1880, and declined rapidly after 1890, with the decline in mining activity. Pop. of township, 603 (1950).

Virginia Declaration of Rights. Statement of natural rights drafted by George Mason and adopted (June 12, 1776) with slight revisions by the Virginia convention. The article on religious freedom was formulated by Patrick Henry. It is the most famous of the declarations of rights of the original state constitutions, and exerted a wide influence not only in America but in France. It also served as a model for the Bill of Rights in the federal Constitution.

Virginia Dynasty. Name used for the line of succession of Virginia presidents (Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe), particularly for the period 1809-25.

Virginian (vēr-jin'yan). The. [Full title, The Virginian: A Horseman of the Plains.] Novel by Owen Wister, published in 1902. It has been produced as a play and several times as a film. The Virginian, a cowpuncher, woos and wins Molly Wood, a schoolteacher from Vermont. The novel is sometimes remembered for its use of the expression, "When you call me that, smile!"

Virginians, The. Novel by William Makepeace Thackeray, published in 1857-59. It is a sequel to Henry Esmond.

Virginia Park. Unincorporated community in Michigan, in Ottawa County, SW of Holland: residential suburb. 2,747 (1950).

Virginia Plan. Outline plan of a constitution for the U.S., presented to the Constitutional Convention of 1787 by Edmund Randolph of Virginia. It projected a national union differing radically from the old confederacy, providing for a national legislature of two houses, the members of the lower one to be elected directly by the people, and for representation in ratio to the wealth and population of each state. Members of the upper chamber were to be chosen by the lower house from individuals nominated by state legislatures. In the final compromise, some of the features of the Virginia Plan were adopted.

Virginia Quarterly Review, The. Journal of opinion and criticism, published since 1925 at the University of Virginia (it is not, however, an organ of that institution). The magazine, which is not regional in its outlook or contents, has printed work by T. S. Eliot, Conrad Aiken, Thomas Wolfe, Allen Tate, and Charles A. Beard, among others.

Virginia Resolutions. Resolutions prepared by James Madison and passed by the Virginia legislature, in December, 1798, which declared the Alien and Sedition acts "palpable and alarming infractions of the Constitution." Together with the Kentucky Resolutions drafted by Thomas Jefferson in 1798, they are generally cited as the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions. These were the basic documents in the Nullification controversy that erupted some 30 years later.

Virginia v. West Virginia, 11 Wallace 39 (1870). U.S. Supreme Court decision which by implication upheld the constitutionality of the separation of West Virginia from the state of Virginia during the Civil War. The court held that the separation had been the result of "a valid agreement between the two States consented to by Congress." The question of West Virginia's debt obligations to Virginia was left to a later day. West Virginia took steps (1919) to discharge her indebtedness shortly following the Supreme Court's announcement of its intention to enforce its decision of 1915, when it placed West Virginia's debt to the mother state at more than 12 million dollars.

Virgin Islands (vēr-jin'). Territorial possession of the U.S., consisting of three islands and adjoining islets of the Lesser Antilles, between the Caribbean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean, ab. 50 mi. E of Puerto Rico. The islands are administered by a governor, appointed by the president of the U.S., and by two municipal councils which have a total of 16 members, all elected by popular vote. Agricultural products include sugar, vegetables, and cattle; the chief industry of the islands is rum distilling. Charlotte Amalie, the chief port and town, is a naval station, and also has an important tourist traffic. The islands are of volcanic origin, and are largely hilly, reaching a peak elevation of 1,550 ft. on St. Thomas. St. Croix (area, 80 sq. mi.; pop. 12,103 in 1950) is the largest and St. John (area, 20 sq. mi.; pop. 749 in 1950) the smallest of the major islands. The islands were discovered by Columbus in 1493, and were first settled by Europeans in the 17th century. Dutch and English settled St. Croix in the early 17th century; it was taken by French buccanniers c1650; the island was ceded to Denmark in 1733. St. John was Danish from c1680. St. Thomas (area, 30 sq. mi.; pop. 13,813 in 1950) was originally settled by the Dutch in 1657, but was taken by the English in 1667 and passed to the Danish West India Company in 1671. The entire group thus was a Danish possession from 1733 until 1917, when the territory was purchased by the U.S. for 25 million dollars. Capital, Charlotte Amalie; area, 133 sq. mi.; pop. 26,654 (1950).

Virgin Islands, British. See British Virgin Islands. Virginius (vēr-jin'yus). In Roman legend, the father of Virginia.

Virginius. Tragedy by J. Sheridan Knowles, produced in 1820.

Virginius Affair. International affair (1873) which caused extreme tension between the U.S. and Spanish governments. It began in November, 1873, when the U.S. learned of the Spanish capture of the Virginius, an American ship engaged in filibustering and arms-running to the Cubans during the Ten Years' War. The execution of Captain Joseph Fry and most of his crew of 36 aroused widespread indignation in the U.S., and diplomatic handling of the affair by U.S. Secretary of State Hamilton Fish was required to avert hostilities. The affair ended in the Spanish surrender of the Virginius on Dec. 16, 1873, and the payment of an indemnity by Spain.

Virgin Martyr, The. Tragedy by Philip Massinger and Thomas Dekker, licensed in 1620 and printed in 1622.

Virgin Mary (mār'i). See Mary.

Virgin of Sorrows. See Mater Dolorosa.

Virgo (vēr-gō). Ancient constellation, between Leo and Libra, and the sixth sign of the zodiac. The figure represents a young girl in a robe holding a spike of grain in her left hand, a palm leaf in her right. The constellation has been identified everywhere with harvest and fertility goddesses: the Babylonian Ishtar, Assyrian Belit, Greek Persephone, and others. The constellation contains the white first-magnitude star Spica.

Viriathus (vir'i.ä.thus, vir.i.ä'thus) or Viriatius (vir'i.ä'tus, vir.i.ä'tus). Assassinated c139 B.C. Lusitanian shepherd who conducted a long and generally successful war (149-139 B.C.) against the Romans in the western part of the Iberian Peninsula.

Viroconium (vir.ö.kö'n.i.um). See Uriconium.

Viroflay (vēr.ö.flä). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise: an eastern suburb of Versailles. 12,262 (1946).

Viromandui (vir.ö.man'dü.i). See Veromandui.

Vironmaa (vir'ön.mä). Finnish name of Estonia.

Viroqua (vir.ö'kwä). City in SW Wisconsin, county seat of Vernon County: trading and processing center for dairy products. 3,795 (1950).

Virtanen (vir'tä.nen), Artturi Ilmari. b. at Helsinki, Finland, 1895—. Finnish biochemist. He discovered an important method for conserving fresh, protein-rich fodder, the so-called A.I.V. method (1929). His other work includes important, though as yet largely unconfirmed, experiments on the chemical mechanism of nitrogen fixation in leguminous root nodules. He was the winner of the 1945 Nobel prize in chemistry.

Virtus (vēr'tus). Medieval Latin name of Vertus.

Virués (vēr.ö.äs'; Spanish, bē.rwes'), Cristóbal d. b. at Valencia, Spain, c1550; d. c1610. Spanish epic and dramatic poet, a friend of Lope de Vega. Five of his plays are extant.

Virunga (vir.üng'gä). See Mfumbiro.

Viry-Chatillon (vēr.ö.shä.tē.yön). Town in N France, in the department of Seine-et-Oise, situated near the junction of the Seine and Orge rivers, between Paris and Corbeil. It has button factories and is the trade center of a vegetable and milk producing area. 9,234 (1946).

Vis (vēs). [Italian, Lissa; Latin, Issa.] Island in W Yugoslavia, in the Adriatic Sea, in the federative unit of Croatia. It was first settled by Greeks from Sicily, then fell successively under Roman, Hungarian, and Venetian domination. The climate is Mediterranean, the population largely Croatian, with an Italian minority. Vis is famous for its wine. In a naval battle fought near the island, July 20, 1866, the Austrians under Wilhelm von Tegetthoff defeated the Italians under Admiral Carlo di Persano. Area, ab. 35 sq. mi.; pop. 4,186 (1931).

Visalia (vis'ā'lī-yā). City in C California, county seat of Tulare County; cattle center; processing and shipping point for fruit, dairy products, and cotton. 11,749 (1950).

Visaya (vēs'ā-yā; Spanish, bis'ā-yā) or Visayans (vēs'ā-yā-nē). [Also, Bisaya, or Bisayan.] Largest of the Malayo-Polynesian-speaking, Christian peoples of the Philippines, occupying the central islands (Samar, Leyte, Bohol, Cebu, Negros, Panay, and the N and E coasts of Mindanao). Their language, Visayan, belongs to the northern Malagasy branch of the Indonesian group of the Malayo-Polynesian family of languages.

Visby (viz'bī; Swedish, vēs'bū'). [Also, Wisby.] Town in S Sweden, situated on the W coast of the island of Gotland, in the Baltic Sea, the capital of the län (county) of Gotland; sugar refineries, grain, and lumber trade. It contains a cathedral and other churches of the 11th–13th centuries, and impressive remains of very old city walls and towers. During the 12th and 13th centuries, Visby was one of the most powerful members of the Hanseatic League; conquered by King Waldemar IV of Denmark in 1361, it was returned to Sweden in 1645. Pop. 14,342 (1949).

Viscaíno (vēs.kā.ē'nō; Spanish, bēs-), Sebastián. See Vizcaíno, Sebastián.

Vischer (fish'ēr), Friedrich Theodor. b. at Ludwigsburg, in Württemberg, Germany, June 30, 1807; d. at Gmunden, Austria, Sept. 14, 1887. German critic, professor at Tübingen and Zurich. He was a member of the Frankfurt Parliament of 1848. His chief work is Ästhetik, oder Wissenschaft des Schönen (6 vols., 1846–57). His other works include Über das Erhabene und Komische (1837) and Kritische Gänge (1844).

Vischer, Peter. [Called Peter Vischer the Elder.] b. at Nuremberg, Germany, c1455; d. there, Jan. 7, 1529. German sculptor and bronze founder; father of Peter Vischer (1487–1528). For a time he was in the service of the elector palatine at Heidelberg, but his work was mainly done in his native city. It has been said that he continued in metal the tradition of the German school of sculptors in wood and stone, but it has also been said that he turned from their sentimental and mystical formula to a realism influenced by his enthusiasm for Luther. He was an architectural sculptor, and the best-known examples of his work are the tomb of Saint Sebaldus at Nuremberg, the tombs of Archbishop Ernst in the cathedral of Magdeburg, and of Eitel-Friedrich I and his wife at Hechingen; the figures of Theodorice and of King Arthur at Innsbruck, commissioned by the emperor Maximilian I; and the Crowning of the Virgin in the cathedral of Erfurt.

Vischer, Peter. [Called Peter Vischer the Younger.] b. in Germany, 1487; d. there, 1528. German sculptor; son of Peter Vischer the Elder (c1455–1529). He was the ablest, and became the most renowned, of the five sons who worked with their father Peter Vischer the Elder. He may have been one of the two of those sons who are known to have visited Italy, to whom are traced the Renaissance influences which mingled with the Gothic tradition in the later products of the Vischer workshop.

Visconti (vēs.kōn'tā), Ennio Quirino. b. at Rome, Nov. 1, 1751; d. Feb. 7, 1818. Italian archaeologist. He was conservator of the Capitoline Museum at Rome, and member of the provisional government at Rome. In 1799 he went to Paris, where he was made custodian of the collections in the Louvre and professor of archaeology. His chief work is Iconographie grecque (1808). His other works include the first volume of the Iconographie romaine (1817, completed by Antoine Mongez), and Museo Pio-Clementino (1782–87).

Visconti, Filippo Maria. b. 1392; d. 1447. Last Duke of Milan (1412–47) of the Visconti house; son of Gian Galeazzo Visconti. An ugly and sensitive man, he employed diplomacy and force to restore Lombardy to the duchy. Francesco Sforza, who married his daughter Bianca in 1441, succeeded him as duke.

Visconti, Gian Galeazzo. b. 1351; d. Sept. 3, 1402. Ruler of Milan (1378–1402); grandnephew of Giovanni Visconti, and son of Galeazzo Visconti. He became sole ruler of Milan in 1385, after ruling jointly with his uncle Bernabo, whom he had put to death, and was a patron of literature and art, founding Milan Cathedral. He took Verona (1387) and Padua (1388) and soon subjugated Mantua and Ferrara. He then he bought in 1399, the year he took Siena. He has acquired Perugia, Lucca, and Bologna, and was besieging Florence when plague killed him. He bought the title of duke of Milan from the emperor in 1395. His daughter Valentina married (1387) Louis d'Orléans; this marriage resulted in the claim of Louis XII of France to Milan.

Visconti, Giovanni. b. c1290; d. Oct. 5, 1354. Lord of Milan (1349–54). Archbishop of Milan (1342 et seq.), he annexed Genoa and ruled much of northern Italy. He was a friend of Petrarch. His dominions were divided among his three nephews.

Visconti, Teobaldo. Original name of Pope Gregory X. Visconti-Venosta (vēs.kōn'tē.vā.nōs'tā), Marchese Emilio. b. at Milan, Italy, Jan. 22, 1829; d. at Rome, Nov. 28, 1914. Italian diplomat and politician. A follower of Mazzini until 1853, he became a disciple of Cavour. He was minister of foreign affairs (1863–64, 1866–67, 1869–76, 1896–98, 1899–1901). He served as an arbitrator in the Bering Sea dispute (1894) and was a delegate to the Algeiras conference (1906).

Viscount Melville Sound (vi'kount mel'vil). [Also, Melville Sound.] Inlet of the Arctic Ocean, S of Melville Island and N of Victoria Island in the Arctic Archipelago, Canada. It is connected to the Arctic Ocean by McClure Strait.

Višegrad (vē'she.grād). Town in C Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Bosnia-Hercegovina, formerly in the banovina (province) of Drinska, on the Drina River, ab. 40 mi. E of Sarajevo. It is famous for its 11-arch bridge constructed in 1571. Pop. 4,699 (1931).

Viseu (vē.zā'ō). [Also, Vizeu.] District in C Portugal, in the province of Beira Alta. Capital, Viseu; area, ab. 1,933 sq. mi.; pop. 492,981 (1950).

Viseu. [Also, Vizeu.] Town and concelho (commune) in N central Portugal, in the province of Beira Alta, the capital of the district of Viseu, NE of Coimbra; agricultural market town. It has a cathedral of the 12th century (rebuilt 1512). Pop. of concelho, 67,761 (1940); of town, 9,610 (1940).

Vishinsky (vishin'ski), Andrei Yanuarievich. b. at Odessa, Feb. 10, 1883—. Russian statesman, foreign minister of the U.S.S.R. (1949–53). He was educated for the law, but from the age of 18 was a revolutionary, becoming a member of the Menshevik wing of the Russian Social-Democratic Party in 1902, and several times suffering imprisonment or exile. During the revolutionary year of 1917 he joined the Bolsheviks, and fought in the Red Army. In 1923 he was named attorney general of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic; in 1925 he became professor of jurisprudence at the University of Moscow; he was appointed All-Union deputy public prosecutor in 1933, and in 1935 advanced to the public prosecutor's post, which he held until 1939. During these years he presented the government's case in the famous trials of Bukharin, Zinoviev, Radek, and others. In 1940 he became vice-chairman of the Council of People's Commissariats, and also was made deputy commissar for foreign affairs. In 1943 he was named Russian representative on the Allied Mediterranean Commission and on the Allied Advisory Council for Italy. In 1944–45 he was the chief Russian agent in the Balkans, acting with great energy and not too much regard for diplomatic niceties (his procedures in Rumania in particular aroused not a little criticism in the West). At the United Nations Security Council meeting at London in January, 1946, and at numerous subsequent UN convocations he was the chief Russian delegate, and became noted for the vigor, and even violence, of his attacks upon American, British, and other Western policies. Events in Iran, Greece, Indonesia, Korea, and other areas were the occasions of spirited and angry debates before the Security Council and the UN Assembly, in which it seemed to be Vishinsky's (and the Russian government's) purpose to court public opinion in the Near East and the Far East, at no matter what cost of unfavorable reaction in the West. In March, 1949, he succeeded Vyacheslav M. Molotov as Soviet minister of foreign affairs. He is the author of The Law of the Soviet State (published in English translation in 1948).

Vishnevskii (vish.nyof'ski), Alexander Vasilievich. b. in Russia, 1874—. Russian surgeon. He propagated constructive surgery, recommending conservation of tissue by applying iodoform pads and emulsion as protective dressings, carried out researches on the physiology of intestinal innervation, and investigated the control of pain by local anesthesia. He developed an effective method of tissue infiltration by novocaine in saline solution which also had beneficial effect in the treatment of inflammatory processes, a method known as "novocaine blockade"; cervical, lumbar, and sacral block were developed as a result of these experiments. Another contribution in the treatment of inflammation and trauma was a dressing and bandage impregnated with a balsamic oil (the wound appears clean after ten days).

Vishnu (vish'nó). One of the three principal gods of the Hindu pantheon, the preserver of the triad (with Brahma as creator and Shiva as destroyer). He is a very popular deity, and his votaries worship him as the supreme one of the three. Vishnu's preserving and restoring power is believed to have been manifested to the world in ten different incarnations, called avatars. Two of these incarnations, Rama and Krishna, are specially honored and worshipped. He is usually portrayed as having four arms, holding a conch shell, the disc of the sun, a club, and a lotus. Sometimes he is seated on a lotus with his wife Lakshmi beside him.

Vishnugupta (vish.nó.góp'ta). See Chanakya.

Visigoths (viz'í.goths). [Also, West Goths.] The westerly of the two great historical divisions of the Goths. The Visigoths separated from the Ostrogoths in the 4th century and founded a monarchy which continued in S France until 507, and in Spain until 711.

Vision Concerning Piers Plowman (pírz plou'man), The. See Piers Plowman.

Vision of Don Roderick (don rod'ē.rik). Narrative poem by Sir Walter Scott, published in 1811.

Vision of Ezekiel (ē.zēk'yel). The. Small painting by Raphael, in the Galleria Pitti, Florence, representing God the Father with the symbols of the four Evangelists.

Vision of Judgment, A. Poem by Robert Southey, published in 1821.

Vision of Judgment, The. Burlesque (1822) by Byron of Robert Southey's A Vision of Judgment, in which Southey had apotheosized George III. Byron mercilessly pilloried the Tories, Southey, and the dead king.

Vision of Mirza (mér'za), The. Allegory by Joseph Addison, published in The Spectator, No. 159. It is a vision of human life, seen as a broken and ruined bridge along which people walk.

Vision of Piers Plowman (pírz plou'man). See Piers Plowman.

Vision of Sir Launfal (lón'fal). Poem by James Russell Lowell, published in 1848. The prelude contains the famous quatrain beginning "And what is so rare as a day in June?"

Visit from Saint Nicholas (sánt nīk'ó.las), A. Poem by Clement Clarke Moore, originally published in the Troy Sentinel (Dec. 23, 1823) and included in his Poems (1844). It is often known from its opening line as 'Twas the Night Before Christmas.

Visla (vīs'la). Russian name of the Vistula.

Viso (vēs'zō), Monte. [Also: Monviso; ancient name, Vesulus.] Peak of the Alps in NW Italy near the French border, ab. 42 mi. SW of Turin. It is the source of the Po River, and is one of the most conspicuous peaks of the western Alps. Elevation, ab. 12,615 ft.

Vistula (vis'tū.la). [Polish, Wisła; Russian, Visla; German, Weichsel.] Large river in N Europe. It rises in the Carpathians, traverses Poland, separates near its mouth into the Vistula and Nogat, and then divides into the Danziger Vistula and the Elbinger Vistula, of which the former flows directly into the Gulf of Danzig and the latter into the Frisches Haff. Its chief tributaries are the San, Pilica, Bug, and Brda, or Brahe; the chief towns on its banks, Kraków, Warsaw, Plock, Toruń, and Danzig (Gdańsk). Length, ab. 670 mi.; navigable for small vessels from Kraków, for large vessels from the mouth of the San. Poland.

Vistula Governments. Official name of former Russian Poland.

Visurgis (vis.sér'jis). Latin name of the Weser.

Viswa-Bharati University (vish'vā.bā'rā.tē). See Santiniketan.

Vital (vē'tāl), Orderic. See Ordericus Vitalis.

Vitalian (vi.tā.li'an), Saint. [Latinized, Vitalianus (vi.tā.li.ā'nus).] b. at Segni, Italy; d. Jan. 27, 672. Pope from 657 to 672. He promoted ecclesiastical harmony in England among Anglo-Saxons and Britons, and sought a modus vivendi with the Monothelite emperor Constans II. Vitalians (vi.tā.li'anz). Band of pirates who infested the Baltic and North seas at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th century.

Vitalis (vi.tā'lis), Ordericus. See Ordericus Vitalis.

Vita Nuova (vē'tā nwō'vā). [Eng. trans., "New Life".] Work by Dante, finished probably c1292. It consists of several types of song symmetrically arranged and interspersed by commentaries in prose. Much of it can be read as romantic autobiography, as a record of Dante's love for Beatrice; but in its deeper and more general sense it is a lyrical, philosophical, and theological analysis of the "new" or "marvelous" life of love in all its forms from romantic passion through Platonic, "courtly," and artistic love to the divine infusion of supernatural charity.

Vite (vē'tā), Giovanni della. See Miel or Meel, Jan.

Vitebsk (vē'tēpsk). Former guberniya (government) in W Russia, surrounded by Livonia, Pskov, Smolensk, Mogilev, Minsk, Vilna, and Courland. It is now incorporated in the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R.

Vitebsk. City in W U.S.S.R., in the Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic, on the (Western) Dvina River. It is a rail junction and river port with active trade; manufactures include linen textiles, lumber and wood products, agricultural machinery, and clothing. First mentioned in 1021, Vitebsk was the center of an early principality; it passed successively to Lithuania, Poland, and Russia. In World War II it was held by the Germans from July, 1941, until June, 1944, and suffered much damage. 167,424 (1939).

Vitellius (vi.tē'l'ius), Aulus. b. 15 A.D.; killed at Rome, in December, 69 A.D. Roman emperor (69 A.D.), a favorite of Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, and Nero. He was appointed governor in lower Germany by Galba in 68, and was proclaimed emperor by the army at the beginning of 69. His generals Caeina and Valens defeated Otho, and he entered Rome in the middle of 69. His brief reign was marked by a rise in debauchery and license, but when the forces of Vespasian marched on Rome his followers dwindled. The Romans are said to have insisted that he keep the purple. His forces were defeated by those of Vespasian under Antonius Primus, and he was taken from hiding and murdered.

Viterbo (vē'tēr'bō). Province in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium. Capital, Viterbo; area, ab. 1,391 sq. mi.; pop. 236,722 (1936).

Viterbo. [Ancient name, Vicus Elbii.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Latium, the capital of the province of Viterbo, ab. 40 mi. NW of Rome: agricultural trade center; macaroni and olive-oil manufactures; tanneries and distilleries. The cathedral, of the 12th century, has a façade of 1560 and contains the tomb of Pope John XXI; the Church of Santa Maria della Verità, of the 12th century, serves now as the civic museum; the Church of San Francesco (1236) contains the tombs of popes Clement IV and Adrian V. Viterbo came to the States of the Church through the donation of the Frankish King Pepin in the 8th century; it became an independent city in the 11th century, but was reincorporated into the papal domain in 1396. In World War II, severe damage was sustained by buildings of interest to tourists, including the cathedral, the Palazzo Comunale, and the churches of San Francesco and Santa Maria della Verità. Extensive restoration had to be made on the tombs of Clement IV and Adrian V, and the frescoes by Lorenzo da Viterbo in Santa Maria della Verità. Pop. of commune, 36,123 (1936); of town, 21,281 (1936).

Vitharr (vē'thār). See Vidar.

Viti (vē'tē). See Fiji.

Vitiges (vit'í.jez). Ostrogothic king who reigned from 536 to c540. He was taken as a captive to Constantinople by Belisarius.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; th, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Viti Levu (vē'tē lə'vō). See under Fiji.

Vitim (vī.tēm', vē.tyēm'). River in the U.S.S.R., in E central Siberia, which rises in the Buryat-Mongol Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic and flows E and N to join the Lena. Length, ab. 1,133 mi.

Vitkovice (vē'kō.vī.tse). [German, Witkowitz.] Former S suburb, now a part, of the city of Ostrava in Czechoslovakia. It is the site of one of the largest iron and steel works in Czechoslovakia.

Vitols (vē'tōls), Jazeps, b. in Latvia, July 27, 1863; d. in Germany, 1948. Latvian musician and composer. He was the first director of the national opera, and professor and rector of the Latvian conservatory until the Russian occupation in 1944. He composed approximately 150 choral selections, some 100 solo selections, and numerous works for orchestra, piano, and violin.

Vitoria (vē'tō'ryā). [Formerly also, Victoria.] Capital of the state of Espírito Santo, in E Brazil, on Espírito Santo island; seaport and rail center for tropical produce and iron; footwear, sugar, and cotton industries. It was founded in 1535 as Espírito Santo, by Vasco Fernandes Coutinho. 51,329 (1950).

Vitoria. [Also: Vitória de Santo Antão (dē sun'tō un.tou'ā); formerly also, Victoria.] City in NE Brazil, in the state of Pernambuco. 15,948 (1950).

Vitoria (vē'tō'ryā; Spanish, bē-). [Also, Vittoria.] City in N Spain, the capital of the province of Álava, ab. 50 mi. W of Pamplona; manufactures of textiles, leather goods, and pottery; trade in wine, mules, horses, and hardware. The Cathedral of Santa María dates from the 14th century, with later additions. The Church of San Miguel dates from the 12th century. On June 21, 1813, the Duke of Wellington defeated the French army here in the decisive battle of the Peninsular War. 52,206 (1950).

Vitré (vē.trā). Town in NW France, in the department of Ille-et-Vilaine, on the Vilaine River ab. 24 mi. E of Rennes. It preserves the character of a medieval town, with a feudal castle and ramparts. The Church of Notre Dame, in late Gothic style, dates from the 15th and 16th centuries. The town produces agricultural machinery. 9,367 (1946).

Vitruvius Pollio (vī.trō'vī.us pol'i.ō), Marcus. [Called Vitruvius.] b. at Verona, Italy; fl. 1st century B.C. Roman architect and engineer, a military engineer under Caesar and Augustus. His treatise on architecture, in ten books (De architectura), dedicated to Augustus, is the only surviving Roman treatise on the subject. He seems to have been an unsuccessful architect; his book, however, was well known to Pliny, and on it was based almost all the earlier theory and practice of Renaissance and pseudo-classical architecture.

Vitry-le-François (vē.trē.lē.frān.swā). Town in NE France, in the department of Marne, on the Marne River ab. 20 mi. SE of Châlons-sur-Marne. It was founded by Francis I. The town was almost entirely destroyed in World War II. 7,584 (1946).

Vitry-sur-Seine (vē.trē.sūr.sen). City in N France, in the department of Seine, on the left bank of the Seine River, SE of Paris. It is a river port and a suburb of Paris, known for manufactures of machinery and chemicals. 44,058 (1946).

Vitoria (vē'tō'ryā; Spanish, bē-). See also Vittoria, Spain.

Vittoria (vē'tō'ryā). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Ragusa, situated near the S coast of the island between Ragusa and Gela; trade in wine. Pop. of commune, 37,569 (1936); of town, 34,769 (1936).

Vittoria (vī.tō'ri.ā). Novel by George Meredith, published in 1866. It is a sequel to Sandra Belloni.

Vittoria (vē'tō'ryā; Spanish, bē-), Duke of. A title of Espartero, Baldomero.

Vittoria (vē'tō'ryā), Armando Díaz, Duca della. See Díaz, Armando, Duca della Vittoria.

Vittoria, Tommaso Lodovico da. Italian name of Vittoria, Tomás Luis de.

Vittoria Corombona (kō.rōm.bō'nā). See Corombona, Vittoria, and White Devil, The.

Vittorio Emanuele (vē'tō'ryō ā.mā.nwā'li). Italian form of Victor Emmanuel.

Vittorio Veneto (vē'nā.tō). [Also, Vittorio.] Town and commune in NE Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Veneto, in the province of Treviso, ab. 38 mi. N of Venice. It is composed of the two former towns Ceneda and Serravalle. It is a health resort and a tourist center, with remnants of medieval fortifications, a Gothic town hall, and churches of the 14th century; the Church of Sant'Andrea contains murals of the 15th century. The cathedral was rebuilt in the 17th century. The battle of Vittorio Veneto was the last decisive encounter between Austrians and Italians in World War I (Oct. 24–Nov. 4, 1918); it culminated in an Italian victory and an armistice (Nov. 3, 1918, the armistice being agreed upon the day before fighting stopped). In World War II, buildings of interest to tourists were unharmed except for the Church of Santa Giustina, which was slightly damaged. Pop. of commune, 23,475 (1936); of town, 12,034 (1936).

Vittorio Veneto, Battle of. Military operation on the Austrian-Italian front, in World War I. It shattered Austrian resistance and contributed directly to the collapse of the dual monarchy. It began on Oct. 24, 1918, when 56 Italian divisions launched an assault on 58 Austrian divisions. Quick advances were made all along the Italian line and almost half of the Austrian fighting force was destroyed or captured. On November 3 an armistice was agreed upon.

Vitus (vī'tus), Saint. fl. late 3rd century. Christian saint, a martyr under Diocletian. His festival is celebrated June 15. At Ulm and Ravensburg and other places in Germany it was believed in the 17th century that good health could be secured for a year by dancing before his image at his festival, and bringing gifts; whence it is said that Saint Vitus's dance came to be confounded with chorea, a nervous disorder, and he was invoked against it.

Vitznau (fīts'nou). Small village in C Switzerland, in the canton of Lucerne, situated on the Lake of Lucerne; the starting point of the Rigi mountain railway. 956 (1941).

Viva España! (bē'ā es.pā'nyā). Slogan of the republican forces during the Spanish Civil War (1936–39). The Falange and the nationalist forces used the slogan ¡Arriba España!

Vivaldi (vī.vāl'dī; Italian, vē.vāl'dē), Antonio. [Called (from his red hair) "Il Prete Rosso," meaning "the Red Priest."] b. at Venice, c1675; d. 1743. Italian violin virtuoso and composer, notably of violin concertos and concerti grossi. He served (1707–13) the landgraf Philip of Hesse-Darmstadt, and was appointed (1714) head of the concerts at a Venetian home for founding girls. He also wrote sonatas and chamber music.

Vivandière (vē.vān.dyer), La. Opera in three acts by Benjamin Godard, with a libretto by Henri Cain, first performed at the Paris Opéra-Comique on April 1, 1895.

Vivanti (vē.vān'tē), Annie. b. at London, 1868; d. at Milan, Italy, Feb. 25, 1942. Anglo-Italian novelist, short-story writer, poet, and dramatist. She studied singing in Italy, appeared on the New York stage, and traveled in Europe and Africa. Her works were written in Italian.

Vivarais (vē.vā.re). Old district in Languedoc, France, corresponding nearly to the modern department of Ardèche. Capital, Viviers.

Vivarias (vī.vār'ias) or Vivarium (vī.vār'ium). Medieval Latin names of Viviers.

Vivero (vī.vē.rō; Spanish, bē.nā'rō). Town in NW Spain, in the province of Lugo, on the Bay of Biscay ab. 42 mi. N of Lugo; fisheries; agricultural trade. 13,930 (1940).

Vivian (vī.vi.ān). [Also: Viviane, Vivien.] In the Arthurian cycle of romance, an enchantress, the mistress of Merlin. She brought up Lancelot in her palace, which was situated in or under a magical lake; hence her epithet of Lady of the Lake. Tennyson has used the subject of her subjugation of Merlin in his "Merlin and Vivien" in the Idylls of the King.

Vivian, Herbert. b. April 3, 1865; d. April 18, 1940. English travel writer, biographer, and journalist. He was special correspondent (1898–99) for the Morning Post and correspondent (1899–1900, 1918) for the Daily Express, and editor (1890) of The Whirlwind. Author of Servia—The Poor Man's Paradise (1897), Tunisia and Modern Barbary Pirates (1899), Abyssinia: Through the Lion-Land to the Court of the Lion of Judah (1901), The Servian Tragedy, with Some Impressions of Macedonia (1904), Italy at War (1917), Myself Not Lost, Being the Personal Reminiscences of "X" (1923), Secret Societies, Old and New (1927), Life of the Emperor Charles of Austria (1932), Kings in Waiting (1933), and Fascist Italy (1936).

Vivian Grey (grā). Novel by Benjamin Disraeli, published in 1826.

Viviani (vē.vyā'nē), René Raphaël. b. at Sidi-bel-Abbes, Oran, Algeria, Nov. 8, 1863; d. at Plessis-Piquet, Seine, France, Sept. 7, 1925. French political leader and lawyer, premier of France at the outbreak of World War I. A deputy (1893-1902, 1906-25), he collaborated with Jean Jaurès in the establishment of the newspaper L'Humanité and the organization of a united Socialist Party. He left the Socialists to become (1906) minister of labor in the Clemenceau cabinet, keeping the post till 1910. He was named (1913) minister of public instruction, and formed (June, 1914) a cabinet of Radical-Socialist leadership, which was expanded after the beginning of the war into a ministry of national union (August, 1914-October, 1915). He was minister of justice (1915-17), and withdrew from active politics except for two missions (1917, 1921) to America. He was French delegate (1920-21) to the council of the League of Nations.

Viviani (vē.vyā'nē), Vincenzo. b. at Florence, Italy, April 5, 1622; d. Sept. 22, 1703. Italian mathematician, a pupil of Galileo and his companion during the last years of the astronomer's life. His theoretical restoration of the lost books of Aristaeus and of Apollonius of Perga on conic sections was verified by the discovery of the text.

Vivien (viv'ī.en). See Vivian.

Vivien (vē.vyā'n), Renée. [Pseudonym of Pauline M. Tarn.] b. at London, 1877; d. at Paris, 1909. Anglo-American poet writing in French. Author of some 12 volumes of verse now collected in Poésies complètes (2 vols., 1934), she was also known as a translator of Sappho.

Vivien de Saint-Martin (vē.vyā'n də sã.mār.tãn), Louis. b. at St.-Martin-de-Fontenay, France, May 17, 1802; d. Jan. 3, 1897. French geographer, one of the founders of the Geographical Society of Paris. He founded (1852) the Athenaeum français and edited L'Année géographique (1863-76). He also wrote Étude sur la géographie grecque et latine de l'Inde (1858-60) and Le Nord d'Afrique dans l'antiquité grecque et romaine (1863), and edited (1876-95) Nouveau dictionnaire de géographie universelle.

Viviers (vē.vyā'). [Medieval Latin, Vivarias, Vivarium.] Small town in the department of Ardèche, France, situated on the Rhone River SE of Privas; known for its cathedral. It was the capital of Vivarais. Pop. ab. 1,800.

Vivin (vē.vān), Louis. b. July 27, 1861; d. at Paris, in May, 1936. French primitive painter, who worked for the French postal service from 1881 to 1922, and only then devoted himself fully to painting. He had always been interested in art but, like the Douanier, Henri Rousseau, was a "Sunday painter" for many years. Among his better-known works are Still Life with Oysters, Quai de l'Horloge, and many flower pictures and landscapes.

Vivis (vē'vis). German name of Vevey.

Viviscus (vi.vis'kus). Latin name of Vevey.

Vivonne (vē.von), Catherine de. [Title, Marquise de Rambouillet.] b. at Rome, 1583; d. at Paris, 1665. French social leader, celebrated for her influence on French literature and society through the meetings in her salon.

Viye (vē'yā). [Also: Bie, Bihe.] One of the 13 independent kingdoms of the Mbundu, a Bantu-speaking people of SW Africa, in C Angola.

Vizagapatam (vī.zag'p.a.ta.m). District in Madras, Union of India, ab. 300 mi. E of Hyderabad; rice, maize, and millet. Capital, Vizagapatam; area, 9,107 sq. mi.; pop. 3,845,944 (1941).

Vizagapatam. Seaport, capital of the district of Vizagapatam, Madras, Union of India, on the Bay of Bengal ab. 300 mi. E of Hyderabad. The harbor has been dredged and can now accommodate large vessels. The main exports are manganese, niger and rape seeds, and oil cakes. 70,223 (1941).

Vizayawada (vē.zā.yā.wā'dā). See Bezawada.

Vizcaíno (vēs.kā.ē'nō; Spanish, bēth.kā.ē'nō), Sebastián. [Also, Viscaíno.] b. at Huelva, Spain, c1550; d. at Acapulco, Mexico, c1615. Spanish navigator. In Mexico (c1586 et seq.), he commanded exploring expeditions from Acapulco to Lower California (1596-97), the Californian coast to the 43rd parallel (1602-03), entering the bays at Santiago, Monterey, and Point Reyes, where he anchored (1603); and Manila and Japan (1611-14). In the last he carried Franciscan missionaries to Japan, and made the first attempt to establish commercial relations between that country and Spain.

Vizcaya (vēs.kā'yā; Spanish, bēth.kā'yā). [English, Biscay.] Province in N Spain, bounded by the Bay of Biscay on the N, Guipúzcoa on the E, Álava on the S, Burgos on the SE, and Santander on the W; one of the Basque provinces. The surface is mountainous, but the province is densely settled, has intensive agriculture, and highly developed industries; there are fisheries along the coast. Capital, Bilbao; area, 836 sq. mi.; pop. 581,351 (1950).

Vizeliacus (viz.ē.lī'a.kus). Medieval Latin name of Vézelay.

Vizetelly (viz.ē.tel'ī), Frank. b. at London, Sept. 26, 1830; d. in the Sudan, c1883. English newspaper artist and war correspondent; brother of Henry Richard Vizetelly. He was a traveling correspondent and illustrator for the Pictorial Times, war correspondent (1859-83) for the Illustrated London News, and one of the founders and editor (1857-59) of Le Monde Illustré. His reports and sketches, from Solferino (1859), Sicily (1860), Spain, America, Sadowa (1866), and Egypt, appeared in the London Illustrated News. It is believed that he was killed during the massacre of Hicks Pasha and his army.

Vizetelly, Frank. [Full name, Francis Horace Vizetelly.] b. at London, April 2, 1864; d. at New York, Dec. 20, 1938. American lexicographer; son of Henry Richard Vizetelly. He was a member of the editorial staff (1891 et seq.) of Funk and Wagnalls Company, as associate editor (1891-1903), managing editor (1903-13), and editor (1914 et seq.) of the Standard Dictionary. He edited also A Practical Standard Dictionary (1922), The New Comprehensive Standard Dictionary (1937), The New Standard Encyclopedia of Universal Knowledge (25 vols., 1931, 1935), The New International Year Book (1932 et seq.), and the New Standard Encyclopedia Year Book (1932 et seq.). He conducted (1904-10, 1912-37) the "Lexicographer's Easy Chair" column in the Literary Digest, and was a radio broadcaster (1924 et seq.). He also wrote The Preparation of Manuscripts for the Printer (1905), Words We Misspell in Business (1921), Idioms and Idiomatic Phrases (1921), Our Color-Box of Speech (1933), and others.

Vizetelly, Henry Richard. b. at London, July 30, 1820; d. at Heatherlands, Farnham, England, Jan. 1, 1894. English engraver, journalist, and publisher; brother of Frank Vizetelly (1830-c1883). He established (1843) the Pictorial Times and founded (June, 1855) the Illustrated Times, and was Paris correspondent (1865-72) and Berlin correspondent (1872) for the Illustrated London News. He translated and published (1867-90) novels by French and Russian authors, including Flaubert, Daudet, Gogol, Dostoyevsky, and Tolstoy, and was fined (1888, 1889) and imprisoned (1889) for three months for publishing Zola's works. He was the author of Wines of the World (1875), Facts about Sherry (1876), Champagne (1879), and Port and Madeira (1880), as well as Berlin under the New Empire (1879) and Paris in Peril (1882; with his son, Ernest).

Vizeu (vē.zā'ō). See Viseu.

Vizzini (vēt.tsē'nē). Town and commune in SW Italy, on the island of Sicily, in the province of Catania, between Catania and Ragusa; agricultural commune. In World War II, damage to buildings of tourist interest was confined to one church. Pop. of commune, 14,706 (1936); of town, 14,326 (1936).

V-J Day. Date (Aug. 14, 1945) marking cessation of World War II hostilities between the United Nations and Japan, as the result of the Japanese acceptance of terms of the Potsdam Declaration and the American fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d, d o r; ʔ, s o r sh; ʔ, t o r ch;

note of August 11. The formal surrender came subsequently in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 2, 1945.

Vlaanderen (vlän'de.rən). Dutch name of Flanders. Vlaardingen (vlär'ding.en). City in W Netherlands, in the province of South Holland, ab. 6 mi. W of Rotterdam; herring and cod fisheries. There are machine and glass industries. 48,187 (est. 1951).

Vlachos (vlä'chös). Angelos. b. at Athens, 1838; d. 1920. Greek scholar, statesman, and dramatist. He served as a clerk in the foreign office (1859-61, 1863-65), head of the bureau of public education (1865-68), and bureau head in the foreign office (1875). A delegate to the Berlin Congress after the Russo-Turkish War, he became general secretary of foreign office (1880-84). He was a deputy from Attica (1885-86), served as ambassador to Germany (1887-90) and as governor of Corfu (1893-95), and held the ministries of education (1895-96) and finance (1895). He was director of the royal theater at Athens (1898-1901 and from 1906 until its dissolution), and general director of post and telegraph (1905-06). Editor of various periodicals, he was author of On Roman Consuls and the Consulship (1856), Dawn (1857), Phidias and Pericles (1865), Verses (1865), Neugriechische Grammatik (1864), The Homeric Question (1866), Comedies (1871), Lyric Poems (1875), and Neugriechische Chrestomathie (1876).

Vlachtwedde (vlächt'wed'ē). See Vlactwedde.

Vlaci (vlä'chēh). Matthias. Original name of Flavius Ilyricus, Matthias.

Vladikavkaz (vlä'dyē.käf.käs'). A former name of Dzardzhikau.

Vladimir (vläd'i.mir; Russian, vlä.dyē'mir). Saint. [Called Vladimir the Great; also Vladimir I, Volodymyr, Volodimir.] b. c956; d. July 15, 1015. Varangian war leader, grand prince of Kiev, Russia (c978-1015). He extended the Russian dominions and in his later life promoted peace. He also advanced the Christianization of Russia, being himself baptized (c988).

Vladimir. Former guberniya (government) of Russia, surrounded by the governments of Tver, Yaroslavl, Kostroma, Nijni-Novgorod, Tambov, Ryazan, and Moscow. It comprised the greater part of the ancient principality of Vladimir.

Vladimir. City in the U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 110 mi. E of Moscow. Known all over the U.S.S.R. for its precision instruments, it also has manufactures of tractors, machine tools, and plastics. 66,761 (1939).

Vladimir or Vladimir in Volhynia (vol.hin'ä, vol.in'ä). See Lodomeria.

Vladimir, Principality of. See Suzdal, Principality of.

Vladivostok (vläd'i.vos.tok', -vos'tok; Russian, vlä'dyē.vos.tök'). Seaport in the U.S.S.R., in the Maritime Territory, E Siberia, situated on an inlet of Peter the Great Bay: the chief Pacific port of the U.S.S.R., and E terminus of the Trans-Siberian Railway. It has ship-building, lumber, woodworking, fish-canning, machinery, flour-milling, and leather industries. It has a fine harbor, and is the chief Russian naval station on the Pacific. It was founded in 1860, and was occupied (1918-22) by Allied and Japanese forces. It is the seat of a university, and has other cultural institutions. 206,432 (1939).

Vlaenderen (vlän'de.rən). Flemish name of Flanders.

Vlactwedde (vlächt'wed'ē). [Also, Vlactwedde.] Town in NE Netherlands, in the province of Groningen, situated near the German border ab. 25 mi. SE of Groningen, in an agricultural region. 15,305 (1939).

Vlaminck (vlä.mänk), Maurice de. b. at Paris, April 4, 1876—. French fauve painter, illustrator, and writer, whose landscape and flower paintings have won him wide acclaim. He was a self-educated painter, first became associated with Derain and Matisse around 1900, and was one of the original members of the fauve movement. He was strongly influenced by Van Gogh. He first exhibited at Paris, in the famous Salon d'Automne of 1905. He has written several novels and an autobiography; illustrated R. Rodiguet's Devil in the Flesh, G. Duhamel's Three Stories of the Tribe, and Stories and Poems of My Time, by himself; also well known are the paintings Village Square, Village Street, Thatched Cottages, The Storm, Landscape, and many Flowers.

Vlieland (vlē'lānt). Island in NW Netherlands, belonging to the province of North Holland, the second island from the W of the five West Frisian islands, situated between the shallow Waddenzee and the North Sea. Length, ab. 10 mi.; pop. of the commune of Vlieland, 476 (1939).

Vlissingen (vlis'ing.en). [Also: Vlissingen (vlis'ing.en); English, Flushing; French, Flessingue.] Town in W Netherlands, in the province of Zeeland, situated on the S coast of the island of Walcheren, at the mouth of the western arm of the Schelde River, SW of Rotterdam. An important naval station and fortress up to 1867, it became later a commercial seaport and a popular seaside resort. Through railroad connections in conjunction with boat service it has become since 1872 one of the main routes for passenger traffic between England and the Continent. Harbor, docks, and canals were completed in 1872. In the Jakobskerk, founded 1328, are monuments to Admiral Michel de Ruyter (1607-76) and Jacob Belamy (1757-86). The town was the objective of an Allied drive in October-November, 1944, in order to clear the Schelde River estuary for access to Antwerp. Harbor installations, docks, airplane factory, and many dwellings were destroyed or heavily damaged. 24,048 (est. 1951).

Vlissingen, Frederik Hendrik Fentener van. See Fentener van Vlissingen, Frederik Hendrik.

Vlora (vlö'ra), Ismail Kemal, Bey of. b. 1844; d. 1918. Albanian national leader. He was premier (1912-14) of Albania.

Vitava (vul'tä.vä). [German, Moldau.] Principal river in Bohemia, Czechoslovakia. It rises in the Bohemian Forest and flows past Prague to the west into the Elbe (Labe) ab. 18 mi. N of Prague. Length, ab. 265 mi.

Vodena (vö.dhe.nä'). See Edessa.

Voegtlin (vekt'lin), Carl. b. in Switzerland, July 28, 1879—. American pharmacologist. He was an associate professor (1906-13) at the Johns Hopkins Medical School, chief (1913-39) of the division of pharmacology of the U.S. Public Health Service, chief (1938-42) of the National Cancer Institute, and a lecturer (1943-46) at the University of Rochester medical school. He is noted for researches in the pathology and physiology of the parathyroid, the pharmacological action of serum preservatives, and other fields.

Voerde (fär'dē). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, situated on the lower Rhine River ab. 10 mi. NW of Duisburg; metal, plastics, and paper industries. 14,030 (1950).

Voevod (voi.vöd'). Alexandru Vaida. See Vaida-Voevod, Alexandru.

Vogau (vö'gou). Boris Andreyevich. See Pilnyak, Boris.

Vogel (vö'gel), Charles Louis Adolphe. b. at Lille, France, May 17, 1808; d. at Paris, in September, 1892. French composer of operas and of songs, such as Les Trois Couleurs. His operas include Le Podesta (1833) and La Filleule du roi (1875).

Vogel (fö'gel), Eduard. b. at Krefeld, Germany, March 7, 1829; killed 1856. German explorer in Africa. While at London as astronomer he was commissioned by the British government to supplement the explorations of Heinrich Barth in the Sudan (1853). After three years of exploration around Lake Chad, where he met Barth, he was killed by native tribesmen as he was attempting to reach the Nile basin.

Vogel, Hugo. b. at Magdeburg, Germany, Feb. 15, 1855; d. at Berlin, Sept. 26, 1934. German historical, genre, fresco, and portrait painter, who was a professor and member of the Berlin Academy.

Vogel (vö'gel), Sir Julius. b. at London, Feb. 24, 1835; d. there, March 12, 1899. New Zealand journalist and political leader. He went to Australia in 1852, and to New Zealand in 1861. In 1863 he was elected to the national parliament, where he was vigorous advocate of public works, especially in the field of communications, to open up the country and bring in immigrants. He spent much time abroad seeking loans for this purpose. He served as premier from 1873 to 1875, and in 1876. He was a staunch imperialist, especially with regard to the South Sea islands. After serving as agent general at London (1876-80), he returned to New Zealand politics (1884-89), then retired to miscellaneous business ventures at London.

Vogel (fö'gəl), Walther. b. at Chemnitz, Germany, Dec. 19, 1850—. German historian, geographer, and political scientist. Author of Geschichte der deutschen Seefahrt (1915), and Politische Geographie (1921).

Vogeler (fö'g:ler), Heinrich der. See Heinrich der Vogeler.

Vogeler (vö'g:ler), Robert Alexander. b. at New York, Sept. 6, 1911—. American business executive. He attended Annapolis (1929-31) and graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1937. While acting as representative of a subsidiary of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company at Vienna, he was arrested (Nov. 18, 1949) by the Hungarian government and charged with conspiracy, espionage, and sabotage. In February, 1950, after a sensational trial at which he confessed his guilt, he was sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment; the confession quite apparently had been forced from him and strong representations were made by the U.S. government to Hungary demanding his release. After more than a year in prison he was set free in 1951 in return for certain concessions granted by the U.S.; it was rumored that these included the return to Hungary of the crown of Saint Stephen, a part of the Hungarian regalia, but this was denied.

Vogelweide (fö'g:vi:de), Walther von der. See Walther von der Vogelweide.

Vogesen (fö'g:zen). A German name of the Vosges Mountains.

Vogesus (voj'e:sus). A Latin name of the Vosges Mountains.

Voghera (vö'ge:rä). Town and commune in NW Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Lombardy, in the province of Pavia, ab. 15 mi. SW of Pavia; textile and hat manufactures; agricultural trade. Pop. of commune, 30,180 (1936); of town, 23,562 (1936).

Vogl (fö'gl), Heinrich. b. at Au, Germany, Jan. 15, 1845; d. at Munich, April 21, 1900. German Wagnerian singer and composer. His compositions include songs and the opera Der Fremdling.

Vogler (fö'g:ler), Georg Joseph. [Called Abt (or Abbé) Vogler.] b. at Würzburg, Germany, June 15, 1749; d. at Darmstadt, May 6, 1814. German organist, composer, and writer on music. He was kapellmeister successively at Mannheim (1755-78), Stockholm (1786-99), and Darmstadt (1807-14), and conductor of schools of music at those cities. A priest (ordained 1773), he traveled widely, demonstrating, especially on a portable organ or "orchestron" he invented, his method of simplified organ construction. His compositions include operas, orchestral and piano music, and masses and other church music.

Vogt (fökt), Alfred. b. at Aarau, Switzerland, Oct. 31, 1879; d. at Zurich, Switzerland, Dec. 10, 1943. Swiss ophthalmologist. He is known for the development of special methods of ophthalmoscopy, for his investigations of cataracts in glassworkers, for his description (1926) of glaucoma, and for his operation for glaucoma by cyclodiatomy (1937). His atlas summed up all the biomicroscopic knowledge of his period. He improved slit-lamp microscopy and made important discoveries in the field of hereditary diseases of the eye.

Vogt, Friedrich. b. 1851; d. 1923. German historian of literature. His published studies include Leben und Dichten der deutschen Spätleute (1876), Geschichte der mittelhochdeutschen Literatur (3rd ed., 1922), and volumes I and II of Geschichte der deutschen Literatur (Vol. III by Max Koch; 4th ed., 1919).

Vogt, Hans. b. in Bavaria, Germany, Sept. 25, 1890—. German inventor and electrical engineer. With Joseph Massolle and J. Engl he devised (1918 et seq.) a talking motion picture which had its first public display at Berlin in 1922. The sound was carried on a film band.

Vogt, Karl. b. at Giessen, Germany, July 5, 1817; d. at Geneva, Switzerland, May 5, 1895. German naturalist. He studied at Giessen (under Justus von Liebig) and Bern, and later associated himself with Louis Agassiz, taking an important part in the elaboration of the latter's great work on fishes. He was appointed professor of zoology at Giessen in 1847, but soon lost his position for political reasons. In 1852 he became professor of geology at Geneva, and subsequently obtained the additional chair of zoology at the same institute. He was an extreme Darwinist and a zealous advocate of the doctrine of materalism.

Vogt (vökt), Nils Collett. b. at Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, Sept. 24, 1864; d. 1937. Norwegian poet. Vogtland (fökt'lant). [Also, Voigtland.] Region in C and S Germany, subject in the Middle Ages to the empire and administered by officials called vögte, or bailiffs. It comprised the lands around the upper Elster and Saale rivers.

Vogüé (vo.gwä), Marquis de. [Title of Charles Jean Melchior.] b. at Paris, 1829; d. there, Nov. 10, 1916. French archaeologist and diplomat, ambassador at Constantinople and later at Vienna. He published Les Églises de la Terre Sainte (1860), Inscriptions hébraïques de Jérusalem (1864), Le Temple de Jérusalem, Essai sur la topographie de la Ville Sainte (1865), L'Architecture dans la Syrie centrale (1865), Mélanges d'archéologie orientale (1869), and Inscriptions sémitiques (1869-77); and he edited Mémoires du Maréchal de Villars (1884) and Villars d'après sa correspondance et ses documents (1888).

Vogüé, Vicomte de. [Title of Eugène Marie Melchior.] b. at Nice, France, Feb. 25, 1848; d. at Paris, March 24, 1910. French writer and diplomat. He was minister of foreign affairs in 1871, and was successively attached to the embassies and missions at Constantinople, in Egypt, and at St. Petersburg. He wrote a number of works of travel, and Le Roman russe (1886), Heures d'histoire (1893), and Les Morts qui parlent (1899).

Vogüé, Louis, Marquis de. b. at Paris, 1868; d. there, March 2, 1948. French businessman, chairman (1927-48) of the Suez Canal Company and known particularly for his activity in developing French agriculture. He was also a director of the Bank of International Settlements.

Vogüé, Melchior, Marquis de. [Full name, Charles Jean Melchior de Vogüé.] b. at Paris, Oct. 18, 1829; d. there, Nov. 10, 1916. French diplomat and archaeologist. He served as French ambassador to Turkey (1871-75) and to Austria (1875-79). His chief archaeological work was done in Palestine and Syria (1853-54).

Voguls (vö'g:ulz). [Also, Mansy.] Finno-Ugric people related to the Magyars and the Ostyaks, living between the Ural Mountains and the Ob River in Siberia. They numbered ab. 5,700 in 1926. They are fishermen, herdsmen, and farmers, now largely Russified.

Voi (voi). Town in Kenya colony, British East Africa, situated on the Kenya-Uganda railway ab. 104 mi. NW of Mombasa. From Voi a branch line runs S to the Tanganyika border and provides contact with the European settlements around Moshi and Arusha in the highlands of N Tanganyika. The Voi area is suitable for growing sisal hemp, and several nearby plantations are devoted to this crop. Pop. ab. 3,000.

Voice of the Turtle, The. Romantic comedy (1943) by John Van Druten.

Vogt (fökt), Woldemar. b. at Leipzig, Germany, Sept. 2, 1850; d. at Göttingen, Germany, Dec. 13, 1919. German physicist, noted for his researches in electrooptics, crystallography, and thermodynamics. Author of Elementare Mechanik (1889), Kompendium der theoretische Physik (2 vols., 1895-96), Thermodynamik (2 vols., 1903-04), Magnet- und Elektrooptik (1908), and Lehrbuch der Kristallphysik (1910).

Vogt-Dierichs (fökt'de:riks), Helene. b. at Marienhof, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, 1875—. German novelist. She has concerned herself with feminine characterization (Régime Vosgerau, 1901; Dreiviertel Stund vor Tag, 1905) and marital conditions (Mann und Frau, 1921; Ring um Roderich, 1929). She has also written children's tales (Kinderland, 1907) and stories of her homeland (Schleswig-Holstiner Landleute, 1898).

Voigtland (fökt'lant). See Vogtland.

Voilemont (vwäl.môn), Comte de. Pseudonym of Esterhazy, Marie Charles Ferdinand Walsin.

Voitotia (vö'tö:tä). See Boeotia.

Voirlch (vö'lich), Ben. See Ben Voirlch.

Voiron (vwä.rôn). [Latin, Oppidum Voronum.] Town in SE France, in the département of Isère, situated on the Morge River N of Grenoble. It has a paper, liqueur, chemical, and textile industries. 12,598 (1946).

fat, fäte, fär, äsk, färe; net, më, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ʔn, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Voiron (vwa.rôa), Les. Mountain range in the department of Haute-Savoie, France, ab. 10 mi. E of Geneva, Switzerland. Highest point, ab. 4,875 ft.

Voisin (vwa.zaŋ), Gabriel. b. at Lyons, France, Feb. 5, 1880— French aviator and airplane builder. With his brother he established an airplane factory and constructed the biplanes used in their pioneering flights by Henri Farman, Léon Delagrangé, and Louis Paulhan. In 1909 he divided with Louis Blériot the Osiris prize of 100,000 francs which was given that year (1909) for the most notable contribution to aeronautics.

Voit (foit), Karl von. b. at Amberg, Bavaria, Germany, Oct. 31, 1831; d. 1908. German physiologist, noted for his researches in digestion and assimilation. Author of Physiologisch-chemische Untersuchungen (1857) and Untersuchung der Kost in einigen öffentlichen Anstalten (1877).

Voiture (vwa.tür), Vincent. b. at Amiens, France, 1598; d. May 26, 1648. French poet and man of letters, patronized at court. He was noted for his letters and for his short poems.

Voivodina (voi'vô.dë.nä). See Vojvodina.

Vojtěch (voi'tyeh). Czech name of Saint Adalbert.

Vojvodina or Voivodina (voi'vô.dë.nä). Autonomous province of Yugoslavia, in the federative unit of Serbia, situated N of the Danube and Sava rivers, comprising those parts of Serbia which are former Hungarian territories (Bačka, Banat, and Srem) and were incorporated into Serbia in 1918. The population is predominantly Serbian but differs culturally from the rest of the Serbian population. New settlers are replacing the large population of German origin which supported Hitler during World War II and was repatriated to Germany after the conclusion of the war. The region includes some of the most fertile soils of the whole country. Capital, Novi Sad; pop. 1,663,212 (1951).

Vokes (vöks), Rosina. b. at London, 1858; d. near Torquay, England, Jan. 27, 1894. English actress. She first appeared in the English provinces in pantomime with her brother Fred and her sisters Victoria and Jessie. In 1870, with Fawdon Vokes, who assumed the name, they made a success at London as "the Vokes family." They were also very successful in America, where they appeared annually for many years.

Volans (vô.lanz). See Piscis Volans.

Volaterrae (vol.a.ter'ë). Ancient name of Volterra.

Volbach (fôl'bäch), Fritz. b. at Wipperfurth, Germany, Dec. 17, 1861; d. 1942. German conductor, composer, and musicologist. Among his compositions are the symphonic poems Easter and Es Waren Zwei Königskinder; a symphony; the choral works Raffael and Reigen; the comic opera Die Kunst zu Lieben; and chamber music and songs. He was the author of Life of Handel (1898), Beethoven (1905), Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft (2 vols., 1926–30), and Analysen für den Musikführer.

Volcae (vol'së). Celtic people of ancient Gaul, who, emerging from the Danube valley, pushed west and reached the Rhine during the 4th century B.C., and settled in the region later called Languedoc. Split up in their earlier migrations, one group of the Volcae moved through Greece in the 3rd century B.C., creating great havoc. By the time of the Roman conquest of Gaul, the Volcae tribes had already largely lost their tribal identities.

Volcán (vôl.kän'; Spanish, bôl-). Spanish word for "volcano"; see the specific element of the name.

Volcano Islands (vol.kä.nô). [Japanese, Kazan Retto.] Group of three small islands in the North Pacific, S of the Bonin Islands and ab. 700 mi. S of Tokyo. Iwo Jima, the largest (7.8 sq. mi.) of the group, was the site of a fierce battle (1945) between the Japanese and the U.S. marines during World War II. The island was taken by the marines after eight days of fighting. The noted flag raising on Mount Suribachi took place here.

Voldemaras (vôl.de.mä'räs), Augustinas. b. April 6, 1883; d. in Russia, 1946. Lithuanian statesman, first prime minister (1918) of independent Lithuania. He was again prime minister after the Dec. 17, 1926, coup d'état, but later, disagreeing with President Smetona, was forced to resign (1929). After an unsuccessful attempt at a coup d'état (1934), by his followers, he was sentenced to 12 years in prison, but was released in 1938, and went abroad. In 1940, following the occupation of Lithuania by the Russian armies, he returned, was arrested and deported to Russia.

Vol de nuit (vol de nwê). Novel (1931; Eng. trans., Night Flight, 1932) by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry.

Volendam (vôl.en.däm'). See under Edam.

Volga (vol'ga; Russian, vól'ga). [Ancient name, Rha.] Chief river of the European part of the U.S.S.R., and the longest river in Europe. It rises in the Valdai Hills. Its chief tributaries are the Mologa, Unzha, Vetluga, Kama, and Samara on the left, and the Oka and Sura on the right. The chief places on its banks are Astrakhan, Stalingrad, Saratov, Kuibyshev, Kazan, Gorki, Yaroslavl, and Kalinin. It divides into various branches, and flows into the Caspian Sea by a delta. It is of great importance as a medium of commerce, and carries about half the river freight of the U.S.S.R. The Volga has been the site of major hydroelectric projects. Farthest upstream are the power stations at Ivankovo (30,000 kilowatts) and Uglich (120,000 kilowatts). The dam at Shcherbakov creates a vast reservoir, and has an installed capacity of 300,000 kilowatts. Near Balakhna, above Gorki, is the first postwar project, completed c1951 (300,000 kilowatts). All of these are dwarfed by the gigantic undertakings of Kuibyshev (1,950,000 kilowatts), begun in 1950, completion planned for 1955, and Stalingrad (1,700,000 kilowatts). When completed these two will be the largest hydroelectric power stations in the world. Large areas of steppe land E of the Volga will be irrigated for farming, with power for pumping water into irrigation canals supplied by the hydroelectric power plants. All of the dams have navigation locks, to permit the continued flow of river traffic, and in addition the Volga-Don Canal, completed in 1951, furnishes a link between the Volga waterway system and the Black Sea. The Volga is also connected by a system of canals with the Baltic Sea and Moscow. Length, 2,292 mi.; navigable to Rzhev, above Kalinin.

Volga-Don Canal (vol'ga.don'). Canal in the U.S.S.R., in the Stalingrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, extending from the Don River to the Volga just below Stalingrad. The canal has 13 locks, with a rise of 296 ft. in elevation from the Volga to the Don. The level of the Don was raised by the construction of a dam below the entrance of the canal. The Volga-Don Canal was opened in 1952, and furnishes a direct link for navigation from the Black Sea to the Volga waterway system, which is in turn linked by canalized waterways with Moscow, Leningrad, and the White Sea. Length, ab. 62 mi.

Volga Republic, German. See German Volga Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic.

Volhard (fôl'härt), Franz. b. at Munich, May 2, 1872— German physician. He introduced (1903) a method of estimating the enzyme content of gastric secretion and elaborated (1914) a precise differential test of renal injury or function leading to better diagnosis and prognosis. He performed cardiectomy for constrictive pericarditis (1923).

Volhard, Jacob. b. at Darmstadt, Germany, 1834; d. at Halle, Germany, 1910. German analytical and organic chemist. His use of ammonium thiocyanate in volumetric work, volumetric method for silver titration, iodometric determination of sulfurous acid, and method for manganese determination all became standard analytical procedures.

Volhynia (vol.hin'ia, vol.in'ia) [Russian, Volyn; Polish, Wolyn.] Region and former guberniya (government) of Russia, bordering on Galicia and on the governments of Lublin, Siedlce, Grodno, Minsk, Kiev, and Podolia. The capital was Zhitomir. In the Middle Ages it was a Russian principality, acquired by Lithuania in the 14th century. Later it passed to Poland. It is now incorporated in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R. and in Poland.

Voljnac (vôly'näts). See under Dinaric Alps.

Volkel (fôl'kelt), Johannes Emanuel. b. in Galicia, July 21, 1848; d. at Leipzig, Germany, May 8, 1930. German philosopher, known for his work in the field of aesthetics. Author of System der Ästhetik (1905–14), Phänomenologie und Metaphysik der Zeit (1925), and Das Problem der Individualität (1928).

Völkerschlacht (fêl'kêr.shlächt). German name of Leipzig, Battle of (1813).

Völklingen (fölk'ling-en). City in the Saar territory (formerly Saarland, Germany), situated on the Saar River W of Saarbrücken: coal mines; iron and steel works. 35,150 (1939).

Volkman (fölk'män), Alfred Wilhelm. b. at Leipzig, Germany, July 1, 1801; d. at Halle, Germany, April 21, 1877. German physiologist. His works include Anatomia animalium (1831-33), Die Lehre vom leiblichen Leben (1837), and Physiologische Untersuchungen im Gebiete der Optik (1863-64).

Volkman, Friedrich Robert. b. at Lommatsch, Saxony, Germany, April 6, 1815; d. at Budapest, Hungary, Oct. 30, 1883. German composer. Among his compositions are two symphonies, in D minor and B flat, serenades for string orchestra, concertos for cello, a Schlummetried, and much vocal and piano music.

Volkman, Hans. b. at Halle, Germany, May 19, 1860; d. there, April 29, 1927. German painter, noted for his landscapes, etchings, and illustrations; son of Richard Volkman. His works include also lithographs and oil paintings. Some of the best known are Wooded Valley in Eifel, Field of Oats, Landscape with Flocks, and illustrations for Africa, Studies and Ramblings of a Painter.

Volkman, Richard. [Pseudonym, Richard Leander; hence generally called Volkman-Leander (fölk'män-lä'än-dér).] b. at Leipzig, Germany, Aug. 17, 1830; d. at Jena, Germany, Nov. 28, 1889. German surgeon and writer of fairy tales; son of Alfred Wilhelm Volkman. He was a military surgeon in the Franco-Prussian War, and interested himself in the introduction of anesthetics in surgery. Among his many medical works is Beiträge zur Chirurgie (1875). Under his pseudonym he wrote his best-known book, the fairy tales Träumereien an französischen Kaminen (1871). This was followed by Aus der Burschenzeit (1876), Gedichte (1875), Kleine Geschichten (1885), and Alle und neue Troubadourlieder (1889).

Volksbühne (fölk'sbü'ne). [English, People's Theatre; also known as the Volks-theater.] Union of subscription theaters in Germany, named for its most famous individual unit, the Volksbühne of Berlin. It was a union of two older "people's theaters": the Freie Volksbühne and the Neue Freie Volksbühne (New Free Theater). The Volksbühne attained a membership of 70,000 by 1915. Between 1918 and the advent of the Nazi regime, the Volksbühne, which was largely supported by the German labor movement, was often torn by controversies over its political orientation. By 1930 the Volksbühne had affiliated groups in some 300 large and small German cities and some 500,000 members. It was fundamentally an organization dedicated to artistic and democratic ideals, and was supported by its subscription membership. When Hitler came into power, the Volksbühne organization was dissolved at Berlin and throughout Germany, and was replaced with Nazi theatrical organizations.

Volksraad (fölk'srát). Central representative assembly in the government of the Netherlands East Indies, introduced in 1916, and superseded in 1949 by the government of the Republic of Indonesia.

Vollard (vö'lä'r), Ambrose. b. on Réunion island, 1867; d. 1939. French art collector, dealer, and publisher. Known particularly as the friend and sponsor of Edgar Degas, he also had much to do with winning recognition for Auguste Renoir, Odilon Redon, Georges Rouault, Raoul Dufy, Pierre Bonnard, Pablo Picasso, Marc Chagall, and other modern painters. He was among the first to recognize the genius of Paul Cézanne and of Vincent Van Gogh, though public coldness to their highly individualistic work made it impossible to do much for them during their lifetimes. Vollard published (1896-99) three Albums des peintres-graveurs containing prints by Degas, Cézanne, Bonnard, Renoir, and the Norwegian Edward Munch, among others, and thereafter for many years he issued fine editions with prints by these and other modern artists. Vollard wrote brief biographies of Degas, Renoir, and Cézanne, as well as his autobiographical Recollections of a Picture Dealer (1936).

Vollmar (fö'l'mär), Georg von. b. at Munich, March 7, 1850; d. at Urfeld, Germany, June 30, 1922. German politician. He was a Social Democratic journalist (1867 et seq.), a member of the Reichstag (1883-87), and served in the Bavarian diet (1893 et seq.). He was especially interested in the problems of farmers. During his second period of service in the Reichstag (1890-1918), he was the leader of the Social Democrats in South Germany.

Vollmer (vö'l'mér), Lula. b. at Keyser, N.C.—. American playwright, specializing in portrayals of North Carolina mountain people in such plays as Sunup (1923), The Duncan Boy (1925), Sentinals (1931), and The Hills Beyond (1938).

Vollmoeller (fö'l'möl'l'ér), Karl Gustav. b. at Stuttgart, Germany, May 18, 1878; d. at Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 17, 1948. German poet and dramatist, one of the aesthetes in the Stefan George circle. Author of Parvial, die frühen Gärten (1903), Catharina, Gräfin von Armagnac (1903), and Der deutsche Graf (1906). In Wieland (1911), an aviation play, he modernizes and burlesques the legend of Wieland (Wayland the Smith). His pantomime Mirakel (The Miracle, 1912), staged by Max Reinhardt, was produced at New York in 1924. He later made a novel of it. Vollon (vö'lön), Antoine. b. at Lyons, France, April 20, 1833; d. at Paris, Aug. 27, 1900. French landscape, genre, and flower painter. Among his works are Art and Gluttony (1864), Kitchen Interior (1864), and another (1865), Curiosities, Sea Fish, and Old Fisherman (in the Luxembourg), The Kettle (Lyons Museum), and Woman of Pollet at Dieppe (1876).

Volney (vö'ni; French, vol'nä), Constantin François de Chassebœuf, Comte de. b. at Craon, France, Feb. 3, 1757; d. at Paris, April 25, 1820. French scholar. He traveled (1783-87) in Syria and Egypt, and in the U.S., was a member of the Constituent Assembly, and was made a count by Napoleon and a peer by Louis XVIII. His works include Voyage en Egypte et en Syrie (1787), Considérations sur la guerre des Turcs avec les Russes (1788), and Ruines, ou méditations sur les révolutions des empires (1791).

Volodimir or Volodymyr (vö.lo.dë'mir), Saint. See Saint Vladimir.

Vologda (vö'log.da). Oblast (region) in NW U.S.S.R., in Europe, in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 300 mi. N of Moscow and ab. 300 mi. E of Leningrad. The surface is generally flat and in the W it is covered with swamps. Lumber and wood products are the most important item in trade. Finished lumber and paper are exported. Hunting and trapping for furs have long been important and in recent years many fur farms have been established; dairy products, flax, and potatoes are also produced. In the days of the Russian Empire, the guberniya (government) of Vologda occupied an area about three times the size of the present oblast. Capital, Vologda; area, 57,514 sq. mi.; pop. 1,662,258 (1939).

Vologda. City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Vologda oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated ab. 250 mi. N of Moscow, on the railroad from Leningrad to the Ural Mountains, at the junction of the branch line to Arkhangelsk. It has an important trade in lumber and dairy products, and has agricultural machinery, lumber, meat-packing, and food-processing industries. It became an important center of commerce after the founding of Arkhangelsk and of St. Petersburg (Leningrad). 95,194 (1939).

Volos (vö'lös). [Also, Bolos.] Town in NE Greece, in the nomos (department) of Larissa, in Thessalia, on the coast ab. 32 mi. E of Larissa; main harbor of Thessaly. In the vicinity are many ancient ruins; nearby were the sites of Iolcus and Pagasae, ancient seaports, both of which have been identified as the starting point of the Argonauts, and also of ancient Demetrias. 51,134 (1951).

Voloshin (vö'l'shin), Maksimilian Aleksandrovich. b. at Kiev, Russia, 1877; d. at Koktebel, in the Crimea, 1932. Russian poet.

Volosovo (vö.lo.sö'vo). One of the best-known neolithic sites, located on the right bank of the Oka River, near Murom, in C European U.S.S.R. Some of the burial sites date back to the Bronze Age, but most of the material found belongs to the Upper Neolithic.

Volpe (vö'pā), Gioacchino. b. at Paganica, Italy, Feb. 16, 1876— . Italian historian, remembered as a staunch supporter of Fascism. Author of Il Medio Evo italiano (1923), Fascismo (1932), and Storia del Movimento fascista (1933).

Volpi (vö'l'pē), Giuseppe. [Title, Conte di Misurata.] b. at Venice, Nov. 19, 1877; d. at Rome, Nov. 16, 1947.

Italian statesman. He served (1919-20) at the Paris Peace Conference. He was named (1921) governor of Tripolitania, joined (1922) the Fascist Party, and was appointed senator in the same year. As minister of finance (1925-29), he stabilized (1927) the lira.

Volpone, or the Fox (vol.pō'nē). Comedy by Ben Jonson, played in 1605 and printed in 1607.

Volscian Mountains (vol'shan). [Italian, Monti Lepini.] Group of mountains in Italy, SE of Rome. They are W of the main chain of the Apennines, and S of the Alban Hills. Elevation, ab. 4,420 ft.

Volscians (vol'shanz). [Also, Volsci (vol'si).] Ancient Italian people who dwelt in S Latium. They were noted for their long wars against Rome. They were subdued by Rome in the last part of the 4th century B.C.

Vol siniensis (vol.sini.en'sis), Lacus. Latin name of Bolsena, Lake of.

Vol sini (vol.sini'i). See under Bolsena.

Volsk (vōlsk). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Saratov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Volga River ab. 65 mi. NE of Saratov. One of the chief centers of the cement industry in the U.S.S.R., it also has manufactures of leather. 55,053 (1939).

Volstead (vol'sted), Andrew J. b. in Goodhue County, Minn., 1860; d. at Granite Falls, Minn., Jan. 20, 1947. American legislator, remembered for the famous Volstead Act (passed Oct. 28, 1919) which provided a framework of enforcement for the prohibition of the manufacture, sale, and transportation of intoxicating liquors under the Eighteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. He served as U.S. congressman (1903-23) from Minnesota, and was chairman of the judiciary committee of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Volstead Act. [Also, National Prohibition Act.] Law passed (October, 1919) by the U.S. Congress, over President Wilson's veto, in order to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. It defined intoxicating liquor as that containing one half of one percent of alcohol by volume, stipulated penalties for liquor sales, and permitted the search of hotels, restaurants, and similar establishments and the seizure of any liquor found.

Volsunga Saga (vol'sung.a sā.gā). [Old Norse, Völ-sunga-saga.] Old Icelandic prose saga. Its central hero is Sigurd, equated to the Siegfried of the Nibelungenlied. It was probably compiled about the 12th-13th centuries. Its material was based largely on old heroic poems, some of which are preserved in the second section of the Elder Edda. It, and not the Nibelungenlied, is the source of Wagner's Ring of the Nibelungs.

Volta (vōl'tā), Count Alessandro. b. at Como, Italy, Feb. 18, 1745; d. there, March 5, 1827. Italian physicist, famous for his researches and inventions in electricity. He served as professor at Como (1774) and Pavia (1779). He invented the electrophore, electroscope, condenser, and the voltaic pile (described 1800, and named for him). The volt, the standard unit of electromotive force, is also named for him.

Voltaire (vol.tār'; French, vol'ter). [Assumed name of François Marie Arouet; called the "Patriarch of Ferney."] b. at Paris, Nov. 21, 1694; d. there, May 30, 1778. French writer. He took the name of Voltaire, the origin of which is still in dispute, in 1718, a short time after the performance of his tragedy Œdipe. His father, a notary connected with the tribunal of the Châtelet, was a man of some wealth. Young Arouet was one of the most brilliant pupils of the Collège Louis-le-Grand (then in the hands of the Jesuits). Before he was out of college he began writing poetry. His wit, as well as the influence of his godfather, the Abbé de Châteaufort, secured for him an introduction into the most aristocratic circles of Parisian society. The freedom of his utterances soon brought him into trouble. Between 1716 and 1726 he was thrice exiled from Paris and twice imprisoned in the Bastille. He was first imprisoned in 1717 for having written verses against the regent, Philippe d'Orléans (1674-1723). His second imprisonment was the result of a quarrel with a dissolute young nobleman, the Chevalier de Rohan. He was soon liberated, however, and at once went to England, where he remained over two years (1726-29). While in England he published his epic poem on Henry the Fourth, La Henriade, the first edition of which was dedicated to the queen of England. He returned to France in 1729, and won success with the Histoire de Charles XII in 1731 and with Zaire in 1732. In 1734 he took up his residence with the Marquise du Châtelet in the chateau of Cirey in Champagne, where he resided most of the time until that lady's death in 1749. In 1745 he became royal historiographer and the following year "a gentleman of the king's bedchamber." He was also elected at this time to the French Academy. After Madame du Châtelet's death he returned to Paris, but soon left France for Prussia, where Frederick the Great, who had always admired him, had often requested him to take up his residence. There he remained from July, 1750, to March, 1753. Voltaire and Frederick parted bitter enemies, and the writer was arrested on his way through Frankfurt on the Main, at the request of the king's representative. During his stay at Berlin and Potsdam he had completed and published one of his most important works, Le Siècle de Louis XIV. His return to France was followed by a period of wandering caused by the refusal of the arbitrary government of Louis XV to allow him to come to Paris. He finally settled at Geneva (1755), whence in 1759 he moved to Ferney, a large estate only a few miles distant, which he purchased and where he lived until 1778. Much of his time was given to the defense and protection of the victims of religious intolerance and fanaticism. He thus spent about three years getting justice done to the family and memory of a Protestant, Jean Calas, who had been put to death upon a false accusation of killing one of his sons to prevent his turning Roman Catholic. He was also constantly at work revising his earlier published writings, issuing numerous pamphlets, both in prose and verse, in favor of freedom of thought, and carrying on an extensive correspondence. Early in 1778, during the reign of Louis XVI, he returned to Paris, where he was received with great enthusiasm. The fatigue of the journey and the excitement of his reception proved too much for his weakened frame, and he died at Paris.

Important Works and Evaluation. His most important works are: tragedies, Œdipe, Brutus, Zaire (considered the best), Mérope, Mahomet, Alzire, and Tancrède; poems, La Henriade, Épître à Uranie, La Mort d'Adrien Lecoureur, Discours sur l'homme, La Loi naturelle, Le Désastre de Lisbonne, Le Mondain, and La Pucelle; history, Histoire de Charles XII, Essai sur les mœurs et l'esprit des nations, Le Siècle de Louis XIV, and Histoire de Russie sous Pierre le Grand; philosophy, Lettres philosophiques, Traité de métaphysique, Traité de la tolérance, and Dictionnaire philosophique; literary criticism, Essai sur la poésie épique, Temple du goût, and Commentaire sur Corneille; fiction, Candide, La Princesse de Babylone, L'Ingénu, L'Homme aux quarante écus, and Zadig; and miscellanies which fill a very large number of volumes. His correspondence, which is enormous, is considered as fine as that of Madame de Sévigné. The important editions of his works are the Édition de Kehl (Kehl, 72 vols., 1784 et seq.), Beuchot's edition (Paris, 72 vols., 1829 et seq.), and Moland's edition (Paris, 52 vols., 1833 et seq.). Georges Bencoscio is the author of a bibliography of Voltaire's works, in four volumes; G. Lanson (Voltaire, Paris, 1910) has written the best biography of the man and estimate of his work. The outstanding trait of Voltaire is a feverish intellectual curiosity. He delved into natural science and in the social theories as they were then being discussed as well as into the more formal genres of literature. He laid the foundations of modern historical method, and established almost single-handed modern historical criticism, both in the field of art and letters and in the field of moral philosophy. He always regarded himself, however, as a man of letters. He is thus an excellent example of a man who is interesting to the historian, since he is probably the most representative figure of the Age of the Enlightenment; to the historian of ideas, since he took part in every intellectual movement of that time; and to the literary critic, since his constant preoccupation was turned to seeking an adequate literary form in which to cast the ideas of his time. His production, which is enormous, is distinguished by its variety (epic, light verse, philosophical verse, drama, history, tales, dialogues, essays, philosophical writings) and by its clear and lucid expression.

Volta Redonda (vól'ta re.dón'da). City in SE Brazil, in the state of Rio de Janeiro, situated on the Paraíba River ab. 90 mi. by rail NW of Rio de Janeiro. It was a small village until the construction of an iron and steel plant was begun by the Brazilian government in 1942; the plant began operations in 1947, and is the largest industrial establishment in Brazil, with a 1947 production of ab. 300,000 tons of pig iron and 255,000 tons of steel ingots. 33,110 (1950).

Volterra (vól'ter.rá). [Ancient name, Volaterrae.] Town and commune in C Italy, in the compartimento (region) of Tuscany, in the province of Pisa, ab. 35 mi. SW of Florence. The town is surrounded by ancient walls, and has several medieval castles; the cathedral, a Romanesque building of 1254, contains valuable paintings and works of art; the churches of Santo Stefano and San Francesco date from the 12th and 13th centuries. Volterra has a museum of Etruscan antiquities, and Etruscan gates and tombs. One of the 12 leading Etruscan towns, it came to Rome in 298 B.C.; it was incorporated into Florence in 1531. In World War II some damage was suffered by buildings of interest to tourists; worst hit was the cathedral, the roof and San Carlo Chapel of which were partly destroyed; some frescoes were damaged, but the more important works of art, including works by della Robbia, were unharmed. Pop. of commune, 23,633 (1936); of town, 11,740 (1936).

Volterra, Daniele da. [Original name, Daniele Ricciarelli.] b. at Volterra, Italy, 1509; d. at Rome, April 4, 1566. Italian painter and sculptor. His chief work is a Descent from the Cross (at Rome).

Volterra, Vito. b. at Ancona, Italy, May 3, 1860; d. at Rome, Oct. 11, 1941. Italian mathematician, contributor to analysis, mechanics, hydrodynamics, and mathematical biology. His outstanding work was in the development of the functional calculus.

Voltri (vól'trē). Former town in N Italy, now part of Genoa, situated on the Gulf of Genoa ab. 9 mi. W of the center of the city. In World War II the Church of San Nicolò was considerably damaged.

Volturno (vól.tór'nō). [Latin, Volturnus (vól'tér'nus).] River in Italy which traverses Campania and flows into the Mediterranean Sea ab. 21 mi. NW of Naples. Near it Garibaldi defeated the Neapolitan troops on Sept. 19 and 21 and Oct. 1, 1860. In World War II, the river was crossed (Oct. 15, 1943) in a night attack by American troops advancing from Naples. Length, ab. 95 mi.

Volumnia (vól'um'ni.á). Mother of Coriolanus, a character in Shakespeare's play Coriolanus.

Voluntaries. Poem by Ralph Waldo Emerson, published in 1863, commemorating the death of Robert Gould Shaw, commanding officer of a regiment of Negro troops, who fell in the Civil War.

Volunteers of America. [Also, American Volunteers.] Religious organization founded in March, 1896, by Ballington Booth and his wife, who separated from the Salvation Army.

"Volunteer State." Nickname of Tennessee.

Volyn (vól'iny'). Russian name of Volhynia.

Vondel (vón'del). Joost van den. b. at Cologne, Germany, Nov. 17, 1587; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, 1679. Dutch dramatist and poet. His parents, who had fled to Cologne from Antwerp, removed to Amsterdam in 1597. After his father's death in 1608 he married, and kept the stocking shop in which he had succeeded his father. This business was successfully continued long after he had acquired a literary reputation, but in 1657 the mismanagement of it by his eldest son led to bankruptcy. His own small fortune was sacrificed, and he was forced to accept a clerkship where from his seventieth to his eightieth year he labored for a pittance. In 1668, after he had been obliged to resign his position on account of the weakness of old age, he finally received a small state pension. His literary career was begun with the drama Het Pascha (The Pasha), produced in 1612. In 1619 came the performance of the first of his Biblical dramas, the tragedy Hierusalem verwoest (Jerusalem Destroyed). His subsequent works are the tragedy Palamedes (1625), Amsterdamse Heecba (The Amsterdam Heecba; a free version of Seneca, 1625), the tragedy (the greatest of his dramas), Gysbrecht van Aemstel (1637), Maegden (Saint Ursula, 1639), Gebroeders (Brothers, i.e., the sons of Saul, 1639), Joseph in Dothan (1640), Joseph in Egypten (1640), Peter en Pauwels (Peter and Paul, 1641), Maria Stuart (1646), De Leeuwendalers (a pastoral play in celebration of the peace of Westphalia, 1648), Salomon (Solomon, 1648), the choral drama Lucifer (1654), Salmonen (1657), Jephtha (1659), Koning David in ballingschap (King David in Exile, 1660), Koning David herstell (King David Restored, 1660), Samson (1660), Adonias (Adonis, 1661), Batavian Brothers (1662), Faeton (Phaëthon, 1663), Adam in ballingschap (Adam in Exile, 1664), Zungchin (1666), and Noah (1667). He was also the author of translations from the classics (among them Vergil's Aeneid, 1660, and Ovid's Metamorphoses, 1661), and of versions of classical originals: from Seneca, Hippolytus (1628); from Sophocles, the Electra (1638), Koning Oedipus (Oedipus Tyrannus, 1660), and Hercules (1663); from Euripides, Ifigenie in Taurien (Iphigenia in Tauris, 1666), and Feniciensche Ifigenie (The Phoenician Iphigenia, 1668). His literary works reflect clearly his own political and religious views. He was at the outset a supporter of the house of Orange, as is plainly visible in the Pascha, from 1612. The action of the Synod of Dort and the progress of Calvinism brought about a revulsion, and the Palamedes, with the subtitle of Murdered Innocence, from 1625, represents under a thin disguise the trial of Barneveldt, and cost the poet a summons before the court at Amsterdam and a fine of 300 gulden. In 1626 he wrote in popular verse against the Calvinistic zealots. In 1641 he joined the Roman Catholic Church, and subsequently wrote in praise of it. In this category of writings belong, among others, the didactic poems Alltaegeheimenissen (Mysteries of the Altar, 1645), Johannes de boetegezant (John the Evangelist, 1662), De heerlijkheid der kerke (The Glory of the Church, 1663), and the tragedy Maria Stuart, already mentioned. The dramatic poem Lucifer, the greatest of his works, is considered by many Dutch critics to be an allegorical account of the rise of the Netherlands against Philip II of Spain. He has been called "the Dutch Shakespeare."

Von Hügel (fon hū'gel), Baron Friedrich. See Hügel, Baron Friedrich von.

von Kármán (fon kár'mán), Theodor. See Kármán, Theodor von.

Von Neumann (fon noi'mán), John. b. at Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 28, 1903—. American mathematician who has contributed widely to point-set theory, group theory, quantum mechanics, operator theory, and mathematical logic. He taught at Berlin (1927-29), Hamburg (1929-30), Princeton (1930-33), and the Institute for Advanced Study (1933 et seq.). His works include Mathematische Grundlagen der Quantenmechanik (1932), Functional Operators (1933-34), Continuous Geometry (1936-37), and Theory of Games and Economic Behavior (with O. Morgenstern, 1944).

Voorburg (vōr'bérch). Town in W Netherlands, in the province of South Holland: an eastern suburb of The Hague. 36,614 (est. 1951).

Voorhees (vōr'hēz), Daniel Wolsey. b. Sept. 26, 1827; d. April 10, 1897. American politician. He was a member of Congress from Indiana (1861-66, 1869-73) and a U.S. senator (1877-97).

Voorst (vōrst). Town in E Netherlands, in the province of Gelderland, situated near the IJssel River, NW of Zutphen: agricultural trade. 15,258 (1949).

Vopiscus (vōp'is'kus), Flavius. fl. about the beginning of the 4th century A.D. Roman historian.

Voragine (vōr'aj'i.nē), Jacobus de. See Jacobus de Voragine.

Voralberg (fōr'äl.berk). Province of Austria, the westernmost of the Austrian provinces, bounded by Liechtenstein, Switzerland, the Lake of Constance, Bavaria, and Tirol. The surface, apart from the broad Rhine valley, is mountainous, rising to high peaks. Voralberg is known for its livestock and has various industries, particularly in textiles. The inhabitants speak an Alemannic dialect; the prevailing religion is Roman Catholic. In 1918 an unsuccessful attempt was made to affiliate with Switzerland. The province was in the French zone of occupation after World War II. Capital, Bregenz; area, 1,004 sq. mi.; pop. 193,715 (1951).

Vorbeck (fōr'bek), Paul von Lettow-. See Lettow-Vorbeck, Paul von.

Vorder-Eifel (fôr'dér.i.fél). See under Eifel.

Vorder Rhein or Vorderrhein (fôr'dér.rîn'). Northern of the two great streams of the Rhine, in the canton of Graubünden, Switzerland.

Vorheestown (vôr'êz.toun). Former name of Reading, Ohio.

Voringfoss (vô'ring.fôs). See under Hardanger Fjord.

Vorländer (fôr'len'dér). Karl. b. at Marburg, Germany, Jan. 2, 1860; d. at Münster, Germany, Dec. 6, 1928. German philosopher who served (1919 et seq.) as a professor at the University of Münster. Author of Kant und der Sozialismus (1900), Geschichte der Philosophie (1903), and Von Machiavelli bis Lenin (1926).

Vorlich (vôr'lih). Ben. See Ben Vorlich.

Voronezh (vo.rô'nesh). [Also, Voronetz (vo.ron'ets).] Oblast (region) in SW U.S.S.R., in the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 250 mi. NW of the city of Stalingrad. It is a farming area which is mostly flat to gently rolling, being partly in the plain between the Oka and Don rivers. Wheat, tobacco, cotton, barley, and sugar beets are grown here. The region is N of the great industrial and mining centers of the Donets Basin and supplies them with much of their food. Under the Russian Empire Voronezh was a guberniya (government) occupying much the same area as the present oblast. Capital, Voronezh; area, ab. 26,400 sq. mi.; pop. 3,551,009 (1939).

Voronezh. [Also, Voronetz.] City in the U.S.S.R., capital of the Voronezh oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, near the Don River, ab. 175 mi. NE of Kharkov. It is an important commercial center, with manufactures of machinery, Diesel motors, synthetic rubber, leather goods, foodstuffs, and many other products. Many sunflowers are grown in the area for the oil they yield. In World War II the city was captured by the Germans in July, 1942, and then recaptured by the Russians; it remained on the front lines, and was recaptured again by the Germans; finally liberated by the Russians in January, 1943. The city was very severely damaged. 326,836 (1939).

Voronoff (vo.rô'nof). Serge. b. at Voronezh, Russia, July 10, 1866; d. at Lausanne, Switzerland, Sept. 1, 1951. Russian physician, active at Paris. He took his medical degree (1893) at Paris and became (1917) director of the Laboratoire de Chirurgie Expérimentale at the Collège de France. He is known for bone grafting, which he performed during his position as a surgeon in chief of Russian and French hospitals during World War I. He discovered the influence of grafted glands on the increase in weight and size of sheep and on the growth of their wool, and discovered (1919) the possibility of rejuvenating the body and increasing physical and intellectual energy through the grafting of monkey testicular glands. In 1937 he announced his new discovery of the possibility of stimulating the intelligence of backward children and of obtaining the normal growth of their bodies by grafting the thyroid glands of monkeys.

Voroshilov (vo.ro.shê'lof). [Former name, Nikolsk-Ussuriiskii.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Maritime Territory of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, E Siberia, ab. 45 mi. N of Vladivostok; manufactures include butter, vegetable oil, sugar, milled rice, and clothing. It is a rail junction, with workshops. 70,628 (1939).

Voroshilov, Klimenty Efremovich (or Yefremovich). b. 1881— Russian general. He became a revolutionary in his youth, and in 1903 joined the Bolshevik wing of the Russian Social-Democratic Party. In the last months of World War I he organized guerrillas to harass the Germans then occupying the Ukraine, and after their withdrawal he became a member of the Ukrainian Soviet government. In 1921 he became a member of the central committee of the Communist Party, and was appointed military commander of northern Caucasus. In 1924 he became military commander of the Moscow area, and in 1925 was named commissar for the armed forces. When the Germans attacked the U.S.S.R. in 1941, Voroshilov principally organized resistance on the northern front, including the defense of Leningrad. Because of his age he was not thereafter given a field command, but became one of the chief strategists of the Red Army's defense and subsequent counteroffensive, working closely with Joseph Stalin, whose friend he had been since 1918, when they jointly directed the defense of Tsaritsyn (now Stalingrad). Voroshilovgrad (vo.ro.shê'lof.grát). Oblast (region) of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic of the U.S.S.R., in the Donets Basin. Capital, Voroshilovgrad; area, 10,229 sq. mi.; pop. 1,096,000 (1935).

Voroshilovgrad. [Former name, Lugansk.] Industrial city in the U.S.S.R., capital of Voroshilovgrad oblast (region) of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, in the Donets Basin, ab. 100 mi. N of Rostov; famous for its large blast furnaces and the manufacture of railway locomotives and other machinery. It is the center of a coal-mining region. The city was much damaged by the Germans during World War II; it was occupied by them from July, 1942, until Feb. 14, 1943. Pop. 213,007 (1939).

Voroshilovsk (vo.ro.shê'lofsk). [Former name, Alchevsk.] City in the U.S.S.R., in the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, in the Donets Basin, ab. 100 mi. NW of Rostov; iron and steel mills; heavy machine-construction and toolmaking industries. 54,794 (1939).

Voroshilovsk. Former name of Stavropol.

Vorpomern (fôr'pom.ern). See under Pomerania.

Vorse (vôrs). Mary. [Maiden name, Heaton.] b. at New York—. American writer. Her books include A Footnote to Folly (1935), Labors New Millions (1938), and Time and the Town (1942).

Vorst (vôrst). Flemish name of Forest, Belgium.

Vortigern (vôr'ti.gern). Legendary British king of the middle of the 5th century who, according to Bede, invited the Jutes under Hengist and Horsa to Britain to aid the Britons against the Picts and Scots.

Vortigern and Rowena (rô.wē'na). Play written in 1796 by William Henry Ireland, and assigned by him, with his other forgeries, to Shakespeare.

Vortumnus (vôr.tum'nus). See Vertumnus.

Vorwärts (fôr'verts). Marschall. See Blücher, Gerhard Leberich von.

Vos (vôs). Martin de. b. at Antwerp, Belgium; d. c1604. Flemish painter.

Vosges (vôzh). Department in NE France, bounded by Meuse, Meurthe-et-Moselle, Bas-Rhin, Haut-Rhin, Haute-Saône, and Haute-Marne. It contains part of the region and the medieval duchy of Lorraine and part of the formerly sovereign dioceses of Toul and St.-Dié. It went to the crown of France only in 1776. Joan of Arc was born here, in the village of Domrémy. In the E part of the department are the densely wooded W slopes of the Vosges Mountains, which make this one of the chief forest regions of France. The lumber trade is extremely active, the lumber and woodware industries, including the manufacture of wooden furniture and of musical instruments, well developed. The latter produces violins, guitars, organs, and other instruments. Agricultural industries, such as dairies, breweries, and distilleries, are of importance. There are also numerous stone quarries, and paper, textile, and metal industries. Capital, Épinal; area, 2,303 sq. mi.; pop. 342,315 (1946).

Vosges Mountains. [German, Vogesen, Wasgau; Latin, Vogesus, Vosegus (vos'ê.gus).] Range of mountains in NE France, the ridge of which forms the boundary between the departments of Vosges and Haut-Rhin (and has formed the Franco-German border when Alsace was part of Germany). It extends N from Belfort, parallel with the Rhine, and is continued by the Hardt Mountains in Bavaria and connected on the W by the Monts Faucilles with the plateau of Langres. Many of the mountains are round-topped, called ballons in French, Belchen in German. Highest point, the Ballon de Guebwiller (ab. 4,680 ft.).

Voskovec (vôs'kô.vets). George. [Stage name of Jiří Wachsmann.] b. 1905—. Czech comic actor who, with Jan Werich, established the cabarets Theatre Unbound (1929-35) and Theatre-Bound (1935-38) at Prague. In 1940 they came to America to be the guests of the Cleveland Playhouse, and produced there two of their plays, Heavy Barbara and The Ass and the Shadow. In 1945 they played the two clowns in the Margaret Webster revival at New York of The Tempest.

Voss (fôs). Johann Heinrich. b. at Sommersdorf, in Mecklenburg, Germany, Feb. 20, 1751; d. at Heidelberg, March 29, 1826. German poet, one of the founders of the poetic brotherhood known as the Göttingen Hainbund. In 1778 he was appointed rector of the school at Otterndorf, which position he exchanged in 1782 for one at Eutin. On account of ill health he afterward gave this up, and in 1802 went to Jena, and in 1805 to Heidelberg, where he lived until his death. His principal original work is the idyl Luise, published first in 1784 (in its complete form in 1795). His fame is based principally upon his translations of the classical writers, particularly of Homer; the Odyssey appeared in 1781; the Iliad, together with a revised version of the Odyssey, in 1793. He also translated Vergil in 1799, Horace and Hesiod in 1806, Theocritus and Bion and Moschus in 1808, Tibullus in 1810, and Aristophanes in 1821. He also translated, together with his sons Heinrich and Abraham, Shakespeare's plays (1819-29).

Voss, Richard. b. at Neugraue, Germany, Sept. 2, 1851; d. at Berchtesgaden, Germany, June 10, 1918. German novelist and playwright. His novel Zwei Menschen (1911) had a total sale of more than half a million copies.

Vossius (vos'ius), Gerardus Johannes. [Latinized name of Gerhard Johann Vos (vōs) or Voss (vōs), b. near Heidelberg, Germany, 1577; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, March 17, 1649. Dutch classical scholar, grammarian, and Protestant theologian, a professor successively at Dordrecht (1600), Leiden (1622), and Amsterdam (1632).

Vostochny (vos.tōch'nē), Mys. See East Cape, U.S.S.R.
Voto (vō'tō), Bernard Augustine De. See De Voto, Bernard Augustine.

Votaks (vo.tyāks'). See Udmurt.

Vought (vōt), Chance Milton. b. at New York, Feb. 26, 1890; d. at Southampton, Long Island, N.Y., July 25, 1930. American aeronautical designer and manufacturer. He became interested (1912) in aeronautics, and in 1914 began work on an advanced training plane which was used by the British in World War I. He designed (1916) the Vought-Wright Model V biplane while chief engineer of the Wright Company at Dayton, Ohio, and in 1917, with the financial support of Birdseye B. Lewis, organized the Lewis and Vought Corporation (later the Chance Vought Corporation) for the production of military and naval aircraft. His firm was consolidated (1929) with the Pratt and Whitney Aircraft Company (Hartford) and the Boeing Airplane Company to form the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation.

Vouillé (vō.yā), Battle of. See under Voulon.

Voulon (vō.lōn). Village in the department of Vienne, France, S. of Poitiers. Here or near here, in 507, the Franks under Clovis I defeated the Visigoths under Alaric II (generally called the Battle of Vouillé).

Vox Clamantis (voks klā.man'tis). Allegorical poem in Latin, by John Gower.

Voyage, The. Novel by John Middleton Murry, published in 1924.

Voyage, The. Novel by Charles Morgan, published in 1943.

Voyage au bout de la nuit (vō.yāzh ô bō də lā nwē). Novel (1932; Eng. trans., Journey to the End of Night, 1934) by Louis Fuch Destouches (Louis Ferdinand Céline).

Voyage autour de ma chambre (vō.yāzh ô.tōr də mā shānbr). [Eng. trans., "Journey around My Room."] Novel by Xavier de Maistre, published in 1794. It is a whimsical description of the author's meditations and experiences when confined to barracks for some petty military offense. He contemplates the various objects in his room, spins little romances to himself about them and about his beloved Madame de Hauteclat, and reflects upon the faithfulness of his servant Joannetti.

Voyages de Cyrus (vō.yāzh də sē.rūs). Les. Work by Andrew Michael Ramsay, the friend of Fénelon and tutor to the sons of the Pretender, James Edward Stuart, first published in 1727. It was translated into English in 1730.

Voynich (voi'nich), Ethel Lilian. [Maiden name, Boole.] b. 1864—. English novelist; daughter of the mathematician George Boole and wife of W. M. Voynich. She wrote The Gadfly (1897), Jack Raymond (1901), Olive Latham (1904), Put Off Thy Shoes (1945), and others.

Voynich, Wilfred Michael. b. 1855; d. 1930. Polish bibliophile, notable in the field of medieval manuscripts; husband of Ethel Lilian Voynich. After participating in the Polish national movement and spending several years in prison, he settled (1890) in England.

Vrakhori (vrā.čhō'rē). Former name of Agrinion.

Vratsa (vrā'tsā). [Also: Vrattsas, Vratza, Wratzia.] Department in NW Bulgaria, bounded by Rumania on the N, the department of Pleven on the E, the department of Sofia on the S, and Yugoslavia on the W. Capital, Vratsa; area, 4,298 sq. mi.; pop. 771,486 (1946).

Vratsa. [Also: Vrattsas, Vratza, Wratzia.] Town in NW Bulgaria, capital of the department of Vratsa, situated at the N foot of the Balkan Mountains, ab. 35 mi. NE of Sofia on the S, and Yugoslavia on the W. Capital, Vratsa; area, 4,298 sq. mi.; pop. 771,486 (1946).

Vrchlabí (vrch'lā.bē). [German, Hohenelbe.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in the kraj (region) of Hradec Králové, in NE Bohemia, situated on the upper Elbe (Labe) River, S of the Riesengebirge, ab. 62 mi. NE of Prague. The town has linen and cotton industries, and manufactures of paper. 5,992 (1947).

Vriendt (vrēnt), Frans de. Original name of Floris, Frans.

Vries (vrēs), David Pietersen de. See De Vries, David Pietersen.

Vries, Hendrik de. See De Vries, Hendrik.

Vries, Hugo de. See De Vries, Hugo.

Vriesland (vrēs'lānt). See Friesland.

Vrikodara (vrē.kō.dā'rā). See Bhima.

Vring (fring), Georg von der. b. at Brake, Germany, Dec. 30, 1889—. German novelist and poet, known for his first war novel, Soldat Suhren (1927). Camp Lafayette (1929) is drawn from his experiences in an American prison camp. Adrian Dehls (1928) is a novel about his boyhood. Two other novels are Station Marotta (1931) and Schwarzer Jäger Johanna (1934). His verse is found in Südergast (1925), Verse (1930), and Blumenbuch (1933).

Vritra (vrē'trā). [Also, Ahi.] Drought demon of Hindu mythology. Vritra was a gigantic serpent who drank up all the cosmic waters and the rain clouds and then coiled himself in clouds around the mountains. The god Indra killed him and released the waters from his severed belly, thus making possible human life on earth.

Vršac (vrē'shāts). [Hungarian, Versec, Versecz; German, Werschetz.] Town in N Yugoslavia, in the region of Banat, in the autonomous province of Vojvodina, in the federative unit of Serbia, formerly in the banovina (province) of Dunavska, situated NE of Belgrade and S of the Rumanian city of Timișoara. It is the marketing center of an agricultural region near the Rumanian border. 24,571 (1948).

Vryburg (fri'bērg). Town in S Africa, capital of British Bechuanaland, in Cape of Good Hope province, Union of South Africa. It is situated in the NE part of the province, ab. 774 mi. by rail NE of Capetown. It was the capital of the Stellaland republic, which was proclaimed in 1883 by the Boers in defiance of the treaty limiting the Boers to the Transvaal region, but which came under British control in 1885 after a military expedition under Sir Charles Warren occupied the territory. The town is in the heart of a livestock-raising region. Pop. 7,216, including 3,030 Europeans (1946).

Vsetín (se'tēn). [German, Wsetin.] Town in Czechoslovakia, in E Moravia, situated in the Beskids Mountains, ab. 60 mi. NE of Brno. 12,554 (1947).

Vught (vuht). [Also, Vucht.] Town in W Netherlands, in the province of North Brabant; a southern suburb of 's Hertogenbosch. 14,081 (1949).

Vugusu (vō.gō'sō). [Also, Kitosh.] Bantu subgroup of the Kavirondo peoples of Kenya, in E Africa. Their population has been estimated at ab. 50,000 (by G. Wagner, The Bantu of North Kavirondo, 1949). Under British rule they have been split into three independent chieftaincies.

Vuillard (vū.yār), Jean Édouard. b. at Cuseaux, France, Nov. 11, 1868; d. at Baule-sur-Mer, France, 1940. French neo-traditionalist painter and illustrator, a leader, with Bonnard, of this movement in France. He studied at the Académie Julian, Paris, where he met Bonnard, Serusier, and M. Denis. His style was strongly influenced by neimpressionism, Japanese prints, and Toulouse-Lautrec, and is rather closely related to Bonnard's.

Vuillaume (vū.yōm), Jean Baptiste. b. at Mirecourt, France, Oct. 7, 1798; d. at Paris, 1875. French violin-fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔh, then; ʔ, d or j; s, s or sh; ʔ, t or ch; maker. His models were based on the Stradivarius instrument. He invented a steel bow, the octobasse, and a form of mute.

Vulcan (vul'kan). In Roman mythology, the god of fire, especially volcanic fire. Originally an independent, and not benevolent, deity, he became completely identified with the Greek Hephaestus, and as such patron of metallurgy and handicrafts. He was the son of Jupiter and Juno, or of Juno alone, and was originally considered to have been born with deformed feet (according to late myths, however, his lameness came from his having been hurled from heaven by Jupiter in a fit of anger). He was the divine artificer and the creator of all that was mechanically wonderful. On earth various volcanoes, as Lemnos and Etna, were held to be his workshops. He had the power of conferring life upon his creations, and was thus the author of Pandora and of the golden dogs of Alecton.

Vulcan. Hypothetical planet between the sun and the planet Mercury. An object supposed to be a planet was reported to have crossed the sun's disk on March 26, 1859, and the possibility of another planet was hypothesized. It is now believed, however, that no object approaching planetary size revolves about the sun inside the orbit of Mercury.

Vulcanalia (vul.kan.ä.lä). Ancient Roman festival in honor of Vulcan, celebrated on Aug. 23 with games in the Flaminian circus, near the temple of the god, and with sacrifices of burnt fishes. It was a festival of appeasement, for the prevention of forest fires and of the burning of granaries.

Vulcaniae Insulae (vul.kän.ä.ä. in'şul.ä). A Latin name of the Lipari Islands.

Vulcan Pass (vul'kan). Pass in the W Transylvanian Alps, Rumania.

Vulgar Errors. See Pseudodoxia Epidemica, or an Enquiry into Vulgar Errors.

Vulgate (vul'gät). Latin version of the Bible long accepted as the authorized version of the Roman Catholic Church. It was prepared by Jerome about the close of the 4th century, partly by translation from the original, partly by revision of prior Latin versions. It gradually came into general use between the 6th and 9th centuries. The Anglo-Saxon translations were made from it, and also Wycliffe's English version, while other English versions from Tyndale's onward have been much influenced by it. The Vulgate was the first book printed (c1455). The Council of Trent (1546) ordered that the "old and vulgate edition," approved by the "usage of so many ages, should be the only Latin version used in "public lectures, disputations, sermons, and expositions." Authorized editions were afterward published under Pope Sixtus V in 1590 and Clement VIII in 1592-93. The latter, or Clementine edition, is at present the accepted standard of the Roman Catholic Church, and is the basis of the Douay Bible. In 1907 Pope Pius X entrusted to the Benedictine order the task of preparing a revision of the Vulgate. The religious terminology of the languages of W Europe has been in great part derived from or influenced by the Vulgate.

Vulpius (vul'pi.üs), Christian August. b. at Weimar, Germany, Jan. 22, 1762; d. there, June 25, 1827. German novelist; brother-in-law of Goethe. He was a writer of robber novels, of which the most famous is Rinaldo Rinaldini, der Räuberhauptmann (1797). It was translated into many languages (into English as early as 1800) and set the fashion in its day for this picaresque sort of story.

Vulso (vul'sö), Gnaeus (or Cnaeus) Manlius. See Manlius Vulso, Gnaeus (or Cnaeus).

Vulture (völ.tö.rä), Monte. [Latin, Vultur Mons (vul'tur monz).] Extinct volcano in S Italy, near Melfi. It was on the boundary of the ancient Apulia and Lucania. Elevation, ab. 4,365 ft.

Vutrinto (vö.trin'tö). Modern name of Buthrotum.

Vuvos (vö.vös). [Ancient name, Cocyus.] River in Epirus, Greece, a tributary of the Acheron.

Vyatka (vyät'kä). [Also, Viatica.] Former guberniya (government) of Russia. Most of its area is now incorporated in the Kirov oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic.

Vyatka. Former name of Kirov.

Vyatka, Principality of. Republican principality in N Russia, colonized from Novgorod at the end of the 12th century. It existed till 1489, when Moscow absorbed it.

Vyazma (vyäz'mä). City in W U.S.S.R., situated on the main highway and railroad to Minsk, ab. 135 mi. SW of Moscow. It is a rail junction, and has linen-textile and food-processing industries. An old town, founded in the 11th century, it passed to the principality of Moscow in the 16th century. In World War II it was captured by invading German armies on Oct. 13, 1941, after a series of intense tank and infantry battles in the area between Vyazma and Smolensk which lasted from July to October. The town was recaptured by the Russians in March, 1943. Pop. 20,800 (1926).

Vyborg (vë'börg; Russian, vvě'börk). [Finnish, Viipuri; Swed sh, Viborg.] Seaport in NW U.S.S.R., in the Leningrad oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, situated on the Gulf of Finland ab. 85 mi. NW of Leningrad. It exports timber, being connected by a canal with Lake Saimaa in Finland. There are woodworking and machinery industries. Vyborg contains a castle built in 1293, and was under Swedish control until its cession to Russia in 1721, after it had been seized by Peter the Great in 1709. After all of Finland passed to Russia (1809), Vyborg was incorporated into Finland, and passed in 1917 to the Finnish republic. In 1944 Vyborg passed to the U.S.S.R.; most of the Finnish population emigrated to Finland, 72,778 (1940).

Vyshni Volochek (vish'nyë vol'ö'chik). City in the U.S.S.R., in the Kalinin oblast (region) of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic, ab. 175 mi. NW of Moscow; sawmills; woodworking and cotton-textile industries. 63,642 (1939).

Vysoké Tatry (vü'sö.kä tä'tri). See Tatra Mountains.

Vyyan (viv'i.än), Sir Vyell. b. 1875; d. Sept. 30, 1935. English soldier. Appointed (1913) assistant to the chief of staff, he was coordinator (1914-15) of the naval, military, and air forces at the Dardanelles. He was appointed (1919) a vice-marshal of the Royal Air Force.

W

Wa (wä). See also Wala.

Wa. [In Thailand, Lawa.] Mon-Khmer-speaking hill people living between the Salween and Mekong rivers in the N Shan State of Burma and in N Thailand (Siam).

Waadt (vä't). German name of Vaud.

Waage (vö'ge), Peter. b. at Flekkefjord, Norway, 1833; d. at Christiania (now Oslo), Norway, 1900. Norwegian chemist. With C. M. Guldberg, he developed the fundamental law of mass action, i.e., that the rate of a homogeneous chemical reaction is proportional to the products of the molar concentrations of the reactants. He served as professor at Christiania (1862-1900).

Waal (wä'l). [Ancient name, Vahalis.] Arm of the Rhine, in Gelderland and South Holland, Netherlands. It separates from the other branch ab. 10 mi. SE of Arnhem, taking about two thirds of the entire stream, and unites with the Meuse (Dutch, Maas) and flows on as the Merwede and Old Meuse (Oude Maas).

Waal (wä'ls), Johannes Diderik van der. b. at Leiden, Netherlands, Nov. 23, 1837; d. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, March 9, 1923. Dutch physicist. His doctoral thesis (1873) developed the concept of the continuity of liquids and gases and his famous equation of state for gases, still the only important such equation (outside of the ideal gas law) with theoretical significance. He likewise enunciated the law of corresponding states, of practical value in gas liquefaction. He was self-taught, though he used Leiden University's facilities. He served as professor at Amsterdam (1877-1907), and was the winner of the 1910 Nobel prize in physics.

Waalwijk (wāl'wik). Town in S Netherlands, in the province of North Brabant, situated near a branch of the Meuse (Maas) River, N of Tilburg. It is a center of the leather and shoe industries in the Netherlands. 11,242 (1939).

Waesland (wās'lānt). [Also: Waesland; French, Pays de Waas (or Waes).] Well-cultivated district in the province of East Flanders, Belgium, lying N and W of the Schelde River and NE of Ghent.

Wabana (wō.ban'a). [Former name, Bell Island.] Town on Bell Island, off the coast of Newfoundland. It is Canada's greatest center of iron-ore mining and export, with a 1952 output of more than 1½ million tons. 6,460 (1951).

Wabarwe (wā.bār'wā). See Bargwe.

Wabash (wō'bash). City in N Indiana, county seat of Wabash County, on the Wabash River ab. 75 mi. NE of Indianapolis. 10,621 (1950).

Wabash River. River which rises in Mercer County, Ohio, flows W and SW through Indiana, forms part of the boundary between Indiana and Illinois, and joins the Ohio at the union of Indiana, Illinois, and Kentucky. Its chief tributary is the White River. On its banks are Logansport, Lafayette, Terre Haute, and Vincennes. Length, 475 mi.

Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway Co. v. Illinois, 118 U.S. 557 (1886) (sānt lō'is; pā.sif'ik; il.lnoi'). U.S. Supreme Court decision invalidating an Illinois law prohibiting rail rate discrimination on the ground that the state action, in attempting to regulate interstate commerce, intruded upon the realm of the national commerce power. As a result, railway rate regulation ultimately became an issue for federal action.

Wabemba (wā.bem'bā). See Bemba.

Wabisa (wā.bē'sā). See Bisa.

Wabudja (wā.bō'jā). See Buja.

Wace (wās, wās). [Also: Eustace; erroneously called Robert Wace.] b. on the island of Jersey, c1100; d. c1175. Anglo-Norman poet. He received a prebend at Bayeux under Henry II, and was attached to the Anglo-Norman court. He wrote two poetical romances: Roman de Brut, a version of Geoffrey of Monmouth's history with additions from what seems to have been oral tradition, such as the first literary references to the Round Table of King Arthur, and Roman de Rou or Romance of Rollo, which was a poetical version of the story of the Norman conquest written by William of Poitiers, chaplain to William the Conqueror. Wace made some additions, including a third part.

Wace (wās). Henry. b. at London, Dec. 10, 1836; d. at Canterbury, England, Jan. 9, 1924. English scholar, dean of Canterbury from 1903. He was principal of King's College, London (1883-97), and rector of Saint Michael's, Cornhill, London (1896-1903). With Sir William Smith he edited the Dictionary of Christian Biography (1877-87).

Wachaga (wā.chā'gā). See Chaga.

Wachau (vā'chou). Region in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, comprising the Danube valley between Melk and Krems. It is rich in legends, and has picturesque towns, castles, and monasteries.

Wachikunda (wā.chē.kōn'dā). See Chikunda.

Wachsmann (vāks'mān), JIFI. See Voskovec, George.

Wachsmuth (vāks'mōt), Charles. b. at Hanover, Germany, Sept. 13, 1829; d. Feb. 7, 1896. American paleontologist. Arriving (1852) in the U.S., he devoted himself to business pursuits until 1865, when he retired to give his full time to the study and collection of rare fossil crinoids. His notable collection of specimens and of literature on the subject was acquired (1873) by the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Cambridge, Mass. He worked with Louis Agassiz until the latter's death.

Wacht am Rhein (vācht'ām rīn), Die. [English title, The Watch on the Rhine.] German song, with words by Max Schneckenburger (1840), music by Karl Wilhelm (1854). It enjoyed great vogue in the Franco-Prussian War (1870-71), becoming a national song. Other composers also wrote music for it.

Wachtel (vāch'tel), Theodor. b. at Hamburg, Germany, March 10, 1823; d. in Germany, Nov. 14, 1893. German tenor singer.

Wachusett Mountain (wō.chō'set, wō-). Isolated mountain in the town of Princeton, Mass., ab. 16 mi. NW of Worcester. Elevation, ab. 2,108 ft.

Wackenroder (vāk'en.rō.dēr), Wilhelm Heinrich. b. at Berlin, 1773; d. there, Feb. 13, 1798. German writer of the romantic school, a close friend of Ludwig Tieck.

Wackernagel (vāk'ēr.nā.gel), Philipp. b. 1800; d. 1877. German teacher and hymnologist. He brought out the first modern reader for German schools, Deutsches Lesebuch (1845), and two comprehensive collections of church songs, Das deutsche Kirchenlied von Luther bis Hermann (2 vols., 1841) and Das deutsche Kirchenlied von der ältesten Zeit bis zum Anfang des 17. Jahrhunderts (5 vols., 1863 et seq.).

Wackernagel, Wilhelm. b. at Berlin, April 23, 1806; d. Dec. 21, 1869. German historian of literature and philologist, professor at the University of Basel. Many of his occasional poems (especially those in Weinbüchlein, 1845) have been set to music.

Wackford Squeers (wak'ford skwīrz), Mr. See Squeers, Mr. Wackford.

Wackles (wak'lz). Name of a mother and her daughters, characters in Charles Dickens's novel The Old Curiosity Shop.

Waco (wā'kō). City in C Texas, county seat of McLennan County, on the Brazos River ab. 93 mi. NE of Austin: cotton center; manufactures of cottonseed oil, cotton textiles, and milk products. It is the seat of Baylor University. It was laid out in 1849. Pop. of city, 84,706 (1950); of urbanized area, 92,834 (1950).

Wadai (wā'dī). [French, Ouadaï.] Former Mohammedan kingdom in E Sudan, Africa, bordering on Kanem and Baguirmi in the W, on Borku in the N, on Darfur in the E, and on Dar Runga (its tributary) in the S. Capital, Abeshr (now Abéché). In 1903 it became a French protectorate, but the French were forced to fight a difficult war (1909-11) finally to subjugate the country. The country is generally an arid sandy plain, where the camel and the ostrich thrive; only in the S and E parts can it be called tolerably fertile. In 1909 it became part of French Equatorial Africa. The chief exports are ivory and feathers.

Wad-al-Hajarah (wād'al.hā.jā'ra). Arabic name of Guadalajara.

Wadan (wō.dan'). See Ouadaï.

Waddell (wō.del'), Helen. b. at Tokyo, May 31, 1889—. British author. Author of The Wandering Scholars (1927), Peter Abelard (1933), Beast and Saints (1934), The Desert Fathers (1936), and others.

Waddell, Hugh. b. at Lisburn, County Down, Ireland, c1734; d. in North Carolina, April 9, 1773. American colonial soldier. In 1771 he became general and commander in chief of the North Carolina forces under the royal governor, William Tryon, in carrying out the military suppression of the Regulators.

Waddell, James Iredell. b. at Pittsboro, N.C., July 13, 1824; d. at Annapolis, Md., March 15, 1886. American Confederate naval officer; great-grandson of Hugh Waddell. Entering (1841) the U.S. Navy as a midshipman, he served in the Mexican War, and in 1862 became a lieutenant in the Confederate naval forces. He commanded (1864-65) the Shenandoah, the Confederate raider which preyed upon Northern vessels in Pacific waters until August, 1865.

Waddington (wōd'ing-ton), Mount. Highest peak of the Coast Mountains of British Columbia, Canada, situated in the W central part of the province near the head of an inlet of Queen Charlotte Sound. Elevation, ab. 13,260 ft.

Waddington, William Henry. b. at St.-Rémy-sur-Avre, Eure-et-Loire, France, Dec. 11, 1826; d. Jan. 13, 1894. French statesman and archaeologist. He entered the National Assembly in 1871 and the Senate in 1876, was minister of public instruction (1873 and 1876-77) and minister of foreign affairs (1877-79), and was French plenipotentiary at the Congress of Berlin (1878). He was premier (February-December, 1879), and ambassador to Great Britain (1883-93). He wrote memoirs of an archaeological journey to Asia Minor, Mélanges de numismatique et de philologie (1861), and Voyage archéologique en Grèce et en Asie Mineure (1868-77).

Wade (wād), Arthur Sarsfield. See Rohmer, Sax.

fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pull; ʔH, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Wade, Benjamin Franklin. b. near Springfield, Mass., Oct. 27, 1800; d. at Jefferson, Ohio, March 2, 1878. American lawyer and statesman. The law partner of Joshua R. Giddings, prominent antislavery leader, Wade served (1851-69) in the U.S. Senate as a Whig and then a Republican member from Ohio. He was outspoken in his opposition to the fugitive slave laws and similar measures and when the Civil War broke out was an advocate of strict countermeasures against the seceders. Lincoln's moderate policy was too slow for Wade's taste and in the radical joint Congressional committee on the conduct of the war, of which he was chairman, he forwarded his ideas. He was sponsor, with Representative Henry Winter Davis, of the Wade-Davis bill embodying the Congressional Reconstruction program and which was given a pocket veto by Lincoln; the two then published (Aug. 5, 1864) in the New York Tribune the Wade-Davis Manifesto, calling Lincoln's leadership and honesty into question. Wade saw the victory of the Congressional plan over the presidential after Johnson succeeded to the presidency and, elected president pro tempore of the Senate (1867), voted (improperly as many thought because he was next in succession to the presidency) for Johnson's conviction in the impeachment proceedings. He served (1871) on the Santo Domingo commission.

Wade, George Edward. Original name of Robey, George.

Wade, Sir Thomas Francis. b. at London, Aug. 25, 1818; d. at Cambridge, England, July 31, 1895. English soldier, diplomat, and Chinese scholar. He is remembered for his leading role in the establishment of the foreign maritime customs in China, for his negotiation of the treaty of Tientsin (1857), one of the bases of the unequal treaties in Chinese international relations, and as the first professor of Chinese (1888-95) at Cambridge. He wrote several books on China and the Chinese which are still standard studies. He devised a system of transliterating Chinese proper names into the Roman alphabet; this system, later modified by H. A. Giles, and called the Wade or the Wade-Giles system, is still the most widely used transliterating method.

Wade-Davis Bill (wā.dā.vīs). Bill passed (July 2, 1864) by the U.S. Congress, embodying the Radical Republican plan of Reconstruction. Its sponsors were Senator Benjamin F. Wade and Representative Henry Winter Davis. The bill, providing for the reorganization of the government of a seceded state only after a majority of its white male citizens had taken an oath of allegiance, was the culmination of Congressional hostility to Lincoln's plan of Reconstruction as outlined in his message of Dec. 8, 1863. Lincoln pocket-vetted the bill, and issued a proclamation (July 8, 1864) giving his reasons for refusing to accept the Radical Republican plan. In reply, the Radicals issued the Wade-Davis Manifesto (Aug. 5, 1864), a vindictive attack on Lincoln calling his action "a studied outrage on the legislative authority of the people."

Wadelai (wā'de.lī). Village in E Africa, in Northern Province, Uganda protectorate, on the Nile River N of Lake Albert.

Wadema (wā.dā'mā). See Dema.

Wadena (wō.dē'nā). Village in C Minnesota, county seat of Wadena County; shipping point for livestock. 3,958 (1950).

Wädenswil (vā'den.svël). Town in N Switzerland, in the canton of Zurich, on the Lake of Zurich; experiment station for grape growing, fruit growing, and horticulture. 9,436 (1941).

Wadesboro (wādz'bur'ō). [Former name, New Town.] Town in W North Carolina, county seat of Anson County; manufactures of cotton textiles. 3,408 (1950).

Wadham College (wōd'am). College of Oxford University, England, founded in 1612 by Nicholas Wadham.

Wadi (wā'dī). [Also, Wady.] Arabic word (French transliteration also oued or ouad) for "river," "river bed," or "valley" (actually nearest in general application to "arroyo," since many stream beds in Arab countries are dry most of the time); for entries not found immediately below see the specific element of the name.

Wadigi (wā.dē'gō) or Wadigu (wā.dē'gō). See Digo.

Wadi Halfa (wā'dī haf'fā). [Also: Halfa, Wady-Halfa.] Capital of Northern Province, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, in NE Africa, on the E bank of the Nile River below the second cataract, almost on the border between Egypt and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. It is connected by rail with Khartoum and with Egypt. 12,700 (est. 1949).

Wadjak Man (wā'jak). Type of prehistoric man ascertained from two fossil human skulls found in Java in 1891, and regarded by their discoverers as representing the prototype of the Australian aborigines. Wadjak Man represents a somewhat more advanced stage of man than Pithecanthropus erectus, the Java Man.

Wadman (wōd'man), Widow. Character in Laurence Sterne's Tristram Shandy. She has a tender feeling for Uncle Toby.

Wad-Nun (wād.nōn'). See Oued Noun.

Wadoma (wā.dō'mā). See Duma.

Wadonde (wā.dōn'dā). See Ndonde.

Wadsworth (wōdz'wērth). City in NE Ohio, in Medina County; manufactures of matches, valves, and lubricators. 7,966 (1950).

Wadsworth. Former name of Riverton, Wyo.

Wadsworth, Fort. Fort on Staten Island, situated on the W side of the Narrows at the entrance of New York Harbor.

Wadsworth, James. b. at Durham, Conn., April 20, 1768; d. at Geneseo, N.Y., June 7, 1844. American pioneer. Graduated (1787) from Yale, he subsequently joined with his brother in acquiring extensive land holdings on the east bank of the Genesee River embracing what are now Geneseo and Avon townships in New York. He moved (1790) to this site, becoming a leading land agent and agriculturist in the region, and was active in the improvement of the common-school system in New York.

Wadsworth, James Samuel. b. at Geneseo, N.Y., Oct. 30, 1807; d. near Chancellorsville, Va., May 8, 1864. American general. He served in the first Battle of Bull Run and was made a brigadier general in the same year. He became military governor of Washington in 1862, was distinguished as a division commander at Fredericksburg and Gettysburg, was sent on a tour of special service in the South and West in 1864, and was mortally wounded during the Battle of the Wilderness, on May 6, 1864.

Wadsworth, James Wolcott. b. at Philadelphia, Oct. 12, 1846; d. Dec. 24, 1926. American politician; son of James Samuel Wadsworth. He served as a member (1878-79) of the New York assembly, comptroller (1880-81) of New York, and representative (1881-85, 1891-1907) to the U.S. Congress.

Wadsworth, James Wolcott, Jr. b. at Geneseo, N.Y., Aug. 12, 1877; d. at Washington, D.C., June 21, 1952. American politician; son of James Wolcott Wadsworth (1846-1926). He was U.S. senator (1915-27) and congressman (1933-51) from New York state, and cosponsor with Senator Edward R. Burke of Nebraska of the 1941 Selective Training and Service Act, the first U.S. peacetime draft.

Wadsworth, Jeremiah. b. at Hartford, Conn., July 12, 1743; d. there, April 30, 1834. American Revolutionary soldier and legislator. He served (1778-79) as commissary general of the Continental forces, and also served in that capacity to the French troops in America. He was a member (1788) of the Connecticut convention for ratification of the federal Constitution, was elected (1787, 1788) to Congress, and was a member (1795-1811) of the Connecticut executive council. He helped develop the Hartford Manufacturing Company, a pioneer wool-manufacturing concern, and founded (1794) the first Connecticut insurance partnership.

Wadsworth, Peleg. b. at Duxbury, Mass., May 6, 1748; d. at Hiram, Me., Nov. 12, 1829. American general in the Revolutionary War. He served in the Penobscot expedition in 1779, and was member of Congress from the Maine district of Massachusetts (1793-1837).

Waduma (wā.dō'mā). See Duma.

Waduruma (wā.dō.ro'mā). See Duruma.

Wady (wā'dī). See Wadi.

Waerden (wā'den), Bartel Leendert van der. b. at Amsterdam, Netherlands, Feb. 2, 1903—. Dutch mathematician, known especially for his work in algebra and quantum mechanics. He taught at Groningen (1929) and Leipzig (1931), and wrote a number of books, including a number of works on ancient mathematics.

Waeregem (wā're.chem). See Wareghem.

Waesland (wās'lānt). See Waastrand.

Wafd (wä'f), Egyptian nationalist party founded (1919) with the aim of winning complete independence from British rule. Although various groups broke away from the Wafd party, it was for many years the strongest political party in Egypt. During the early phase of World War II it refused support to a coalition cabinet committed to a program of Anglo-Egyptian defense; on Feb. 5, 1942, an all-Wafdist cabinet took over the government; on Oct. 8, 1944, it fell from power. After the war the Wafd party led the agitation for a revision of the Anglo-Egyptian treaty. The Wafdists returned to power after the election of Jan. 3, 1950, ousting the Saadists, a group that had broken away in 1938. In 1952, with the ousting of King Farouk by General Naguib, its power was eclipsed, and Naguib's subsequent actions tended to suggest that the new government would not accept Wafdist domination.

Wafer (wä'fär), Lionel. b. probably in Wales, c1640; d. at London, after 1700. British surgeon and traveler. After making several voyages to the East Indies, he settled in Jamaica, and in 1679 joined the buccaneers. He was with William Dampier on the Isthmus of Panama in 1689, and on account of a quarrel was left among the Indians, living with them until 1684. In the period 1688-90 he was in North America. He published A New Voyage and Description of the Isthmus of America (1699; French, German, and Swedish translations). It is the first good English description of the Isthmus, and is important in connection with the history of the buccaneers.

Wafungwe (wä'fäng'gwä). See Chikunda.

Wagadugu (wä.gä.dö.gö). See Ouagadougou.

Wagala (wä.gä.lä). See Gala.

Wagalagansa (wä.gä.lä.gän.sä). See Galaganze.

Waganda (wä.gän.dä). See Ganda.

Wagenaar (wä'che.när), Johan. b. at Utrecht, Netherlands, Nov. 1, 1862; d. 1941. Dutch composer and organist. He was organist (1888 et seq.) of Utrecht Cathedral, and director (1918-38) of the Royal Conservatory at The Hague. Among his compositions are the operas De Cid and De Doge van Venetie; Cyano de Bergerac, an overture, and the overture to Der Widerspänstigen Zähmung; the humorous cantata De Schipbreuk (1899); the tone poem Sail and David; the burlesque opera Jupiter Amans (1925); Trauermarsch, for orchestra; and piano pieces and songs.

Wageningen (wä'che.ning.en). Town in E Netherlands, in the province of Gelderland, situated on the N bank of the Lower Rhine River, W of Arnhem: resort town; agricultural markets. The town suffered heavy damage in World War II. 14,397 (1939).

Wager Bay (wä'jër). Long, narrow lakelike inlet of Hudson Bay in the E coast of the Keewatin district, Northwest Territories, Canada, N of Chesterfield Inlet and W of Southampton Island.

Wages and Hours Act. See Fair Labor Standards Act.
Wages of Virtue, The. Romantic novel by P. C. Wren, published in 1916.

Waggerl (väg'el), Karl Heinrich. b. at Bad Gastein, Salzburg, Austria, Dec. 10, 1897—. Austrian novelist, strongly influenced by Knut Hamsun. He is best known for his novel Brod (1930; Eng. trans., Bread, 1931).

Waghäusel (väk'hoi.zel). Village in Baden, Germany, in the neighborhood of Karlsruhe. Here on June 21, 1849, the Prussians defeated the Baden insurgents.

Wagh-el-Bahri (wäg'el.bä.ré). Arabic name of Lower Egypt.

Wagiriama or Wagiryama (wä.gë.r'yä.mä). See Gir-yama.

Wagnalls (wäg'nälz), Adam Willis. b. at Lithopolis, Ohio, Sept. 24, 1843; d. Sept. 3, 1924. American publisher. He was a founder (1867) and pastor (1867-69) of the First English Lutheran Church at Kansas City. Moving (1876) to New York to engage in publishing, he was one of the organizers, with I. K. Funk, and president of the Funk and Wagnalls Company.

Wagner (wag'nër; German, väg'nër). Faust's famulus, a pedant, in Goethe's Faust. He also appeared in Christopher Marlowe's Dr. Faustus, with some of the same characteristics. The character is early attached to Faust, appearing in the Faustbuch, as the chapbook containing the story is called.

Wagner (väg'nër), Adolf Heinrich Gotthilf. b. at Erlangen, Bavaria, Germany, March 25, 1835; d. at Berlin, Nov. 8, 1917. German political economist; son of Rudolf Wagner. He became (1870) professor at Berlin.

Wagner, Cosima. b. Dec. 25, 1837; d. 1930. German musical patron; daughter of Franz Liszt and the Comtesse d'Agout (Daniel Stern). After being divorced by her first husband, the conductor Hans Bulow, in 1870, she married Richard Wagner, by whom she had already had several children. Cosima furthered the establishment of the Bayreuth Opera Festival and served as art director of the opera house until 1908.

Wagner (wag'nër), Fort. Fortification on Morris Island: one of the defenses of Charleston, S.C. It was reduced by Union forces on Sept. 6, 1863.

Wagner (väg'nër), Heinrich Leopold. b. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, Feb. 19, 1747; d. at Frankfurt on the Main, Germany, March 4, 1779. German writer of the literary movement known as the Storm and Stress. He was the author of Die Reue nach der Tat (1775) and Die Kindermöderin (1776). Goethe knew him when they were both studying law at Strasbourg. His pasquinade in verse, Prometheus, Deukalion und seine Recensenten (1775), was directed against those who attacked Goethe's Werther, but Goethe did not appreciate the help. When Die Kindermöderin appeared, Goethe accused Wagner of stealing the plot, dealing with the Margaret episode, from the early draft of his Faust, which he had discussed with him.

Wagner, Hermann. b. at Erlangen, Bavaria, Germany, June 23, 1840; d. at Wildungen, Hessen, Germany, June 18, 1929. German geographer and statistician, professor of geography (1880-1919) at the University of Göttingen.

Wagner, Johanna Jachmann. b. at Hanover, Germany, Oct. 13, 1826; d. at Würzburg, Germany, Oct. 16, 1894. German soprano singer; niece of Richard Wagner. As leading soprano at the Dresden opera, she originated (1845) the role of Elisabeth in Wagner's Tannhäuser, and was active (1861 et seq.) as an actress.

Wagner (wag'nër), John Peter. [Called "Honius" or "Hans" Wagner, and "the Flying Dutchman."] b. at Carnegie, Pa., Feb. 24, 1874—. American baseball player, one of the first elected (1936) to baseball's Hall of Fame. He played with Louisville (1897-99) and Pittsburgh (1900-17) in the National League. Noted for his all-round batting and his fielding ability as a shortstop, he set many batting records and won the league batting championship eight times. He was active (1932-52) as a coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Wagner (väg'nër), Karl Willy. b. at Friedrichsdorf, Germany, Feb. 22, 1883—. German electrical engineer. He was director (1913 et seq.) of the electrical department of the National Physical Laboratory at Berlin, professor of electrical engineering and vibration theory (1927 et seq.) at the Berlin Technische Hochschule, and director (1927 et seq.) of the Heinrich-Hertz Institute at Berlin.

Wagner, Moritz Friedrich. b. at Bayreuth, Bavaria, Germany, Oct. 3, 1813; d. at Munich, 1887. German traveler, naturalist, and geographer; brother of Rudolf Wagner. He traveled in Algeria (1836-38), in the Black Sea regions, Caucasia, Kurdistan, Armenia, and Persia (1842-45), in North America (1852-55), and in Panama and Ecuador (1857-59). His works include Reisen in Algier (1841), Der Kaukasus (1847), Reise nach Kolchis (1850), Reise nach dem Ararat (1850), Reise nach Persien (1852), Naturwissenschaftliche Reisen in tropischen Amerika (1870), and Die darwinische Theorie (1868) and other works on evolution.

Wagner, Otto. b. at Penzing, near Vienna, July 13, 1841; d. at Vienna, April 12, 1918. Austrian architect and critic, an exponent of modern ferroconcrete architecture. He was professor at the Art Academy at Vienna, where he designed the Palace of Justice, the Postal Savings Bank, and the Steinhof Church, in addition to many apartment houses. He set forth his ideas in Moderne Architektur (1896) and Die Baukunst unserer Zeit (1914).

Wagner, Richard. [Full name, Wilhelm Richard Wagner.] b. at Leipzig, Germany, May 22, 1813; d. at Venice, Feb. 13, 1883. German composer and poet. His father died six months after his birth, and, nine months later, his mother married Ludwig Geyer. That

Wagner was the natural son of Geyer, a Jewish actor, has been the subject of considerable speculation but of no satisfactory proof. Of Wagner's numerous early compositions the most important are his Symphony in C (1832), two operas, Die Feen (1834) and Das Liebesverbot (1836), and the Faust Overture (1840). From 1833 to 1839 Wagner lived a precarious existence as conductor of one small opera company after another. In 1836 he married Minna Planer, an actress. In 1839 he traveled to Paris, with his unfinished grand opera, Rienzi, in the hope of conquering the French operatic stage. All his efforts proved futile. He completed Rienzi in 1840, and Der Fliegende Holländer, a somber work which is a truer product of Wagner's characteristic artistry than the derivative Rienzi, in 1841. Performances of these two works at Dresden led to Wagner's appointment as court Kapellmeister (choir-master) there in 1843. Tannhäuser was produced at Dresden in 1845 under Wagner's direction, but was not well received. The third act especially was bewildering to the opera public of that day. Lohengrin, which has proved to be his most popular work, was completed in 1848. Accused of active participation in the abortive Dresden revolution of 1849, Wagner was forced to flee from Germany. The exact extent of his revolutionary activities has long been debated, particularly because Wagner's own unreliable autobiography, Mein Leben (published posthumously in 1911), belonds the issue. It now seems certain, however, that he had an active part in the supervision of the revolutionary troop movements. In the succeeding three years, Wagner suspended creative composition and devoted himself to a detailed theoretical exposition of the new art form which had been gradually crystallizing in his mind, the word-tone-drama, an organic synthesis of poetry, music, and stage action, in which all the set patterns of opera were discarded in favor of a continuous flow of melodic dialogue carefully synchronized with the action, and supported by a rich orchestral commentary in which leitmotifs constituted the chief unifying principle. Details of this theory are to be found in the essays Das Kunstwerk der Zukunft (1850) and Oper und Drama (1851). By 1852, Wagner had completed the poems of his major work, Der Ring des Nibelungen, a cycle of three full-length music-dramas (Die Walküre, Siegfried, and Götterdämmerung) preceded by the shorter Das Rheingold. The texts of all these were constructed according to the unique prosodic principles he had expounded in Oper und Drama. The music to Das Rheingold was finished in 1854. Die Walküre which is the most complete artistic realization of these theories, was completed in 1856. His inspiration for the impassioned love music in this work, as well as in Tristan und Isolde, was Mathilde Wesendonck, the wife of a wealthy Zurich merchant, who befriended the Wagners and in 1857 invited them to live permanently on the Wesendonck estate. In a little over a year, however, the untenable situation had reached a crisis, and Wagner separated from his wife and left Zurich for Venice. Under the spell of his renunciation of Mathilde and the pessimistic doctrines of Schopenhauer, he completed Tristan und Isolde (1859). Wagner's enthusiastic acceptance of Schopenhauer's metaphysics of music brought about a significant shift in his concept of the role of music in the music drama, with the result that in Tristan und Isolde and all succeeding works the music is considerably more independent and the exact synthesis of word and tone formerly required is no longer a central factor. In 1861 a revised Tannhäuser was produced at Paris and gave rise to the famous Jockey Club scandal which kept the audience in a turmoil throughout most of the performance. Wagner had interrupted the composition of his Nibelungen cycle in 1857, at the end of the second act of Siegfried, and, uncertain whether it would ever be completed and performed, he published the poems in 1862. At possibly the darkest period of his life, Wagner was dramatically rescued by young Ludwig II, shortly after the latter had ascended the Bavarian throne. He called Wagner to Munich in 1864, and relieved him of all concern save for the completion and production of his works. Tristan und Isolde was given a fine première performance at Munich in 1865, and Die Meistersinger, a somewhat romanticized picture of 16th-century Nuremberg, in 1868. Court intrigue, mounting expenses, Ludwig's eccentricities, and Wagner's tactlessness soon led to trouble and Wagner was forced to leave Munich for Switzerland in 1865, though continuing to enjoy a generous annuity. With him went Cosima, the daughter of Franz Liszt, wife of Hans von Bülow. They were married in 1870 at Lucerne, after the death of Wagner's estranged wife, Minna, (and Bülow's divorce of Cosima). From this union there were three children, Isolde, Eva, and Siegfried, all born before their parents' marriage. Wagner moved to Bayreuth in northern Bavaria in 1872, where he supervised the erection of his Festival Theater, in which the first complete performances of the Ring dramas, an event which commanded world-wide attention, were given in 1876. In 1882, Wagner completed his last work, Parsifal, which he called a Consecrational Festival Play. It was given the same year at Bayreuth. Wagner died the following year in his suite in the Palazzo Vendramini at Venice.

Wagner (wag'nér), Robert Ferdinand. b. at Nastatten, Germany, June 8, 1877; d. at New York, May 4, 1953. American lawyer and politician. He served as New York state senator (1909-18) and supreme court justice (1919-26). As U.S. senator (1927-49) from New York, he introduced the National Industrial Recovery Act, the Social Security Act, the National Labor Relations Act (Wagner Act), the Railway Pension Law, the U.S. Housing Act of 1937 (Wagner-Steagall Housing Act), the National Housing Act of 1938, and other social legislation, including the laws establishing the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Wagner (väg'nér), Rudolf. b. at Bayreuth, Bavaria, Germany, June 30, 1805; d. at Göttingen, Germany, May 13, 1864. German physiologist, comparative anatomist, and anthropologist; brother of Moritz Friedrich Wagner. He was professor at Erlangen (1832-40) and at Göttingen (1840 et seq.). In 1835 he announced the discovery of the germinal vesicle in the human ovum. Among his works are Lehrbuch der vergleichenden Anatomie (1834-35), Icones physiologicae (1839-40), Lehrbuch der Physiologie (1839), Handatlas der vergleichenden Anatomie (1841), Handwörterbuch der Physiologie (1842-53), Neurologische Untersuchungen (1854), Der Kampf um die Seele (1857), and Vorstudien (1860-62).

Wagner, Rudolf Johannes von. b. at Leipzig, Germany, Feb. 13, 1822; d. at Würzburg, Germany, Oct. 4, 1880. German chemist and technologist.

Wagner, Sándor von. b. at Budapest, April 16, 1838; d. at Munich, Jan. 19, 1919. Hungarian historical, genealogist, and landscape painter, professor at the Munich Academy.

Wagner, Siegfried. b. at Triebsehn, Germany, June 6, 1860; d. at Bayreuth, Germany, Aug. 4, 1930. German composer and director; son of Richard Wagner and Cosima Wagner. Conductor (1896 et seq.) of performances at Bayreuth, he was art director and supervisor (1909 et seq.) of plays there, succeeding his mother. Among his compositions are the opera Der Kobold, the symphonic poem Sehnsucht, the orchestral scherzo Und wenn die Welt voll Teufel wär, and a violin concerto.

Wagner Act (wag'nér). See National Labor Relations Act.

Wagner-Steagall Housing Act (wag'nér.stē.gól'). [Also, National Housing Act of 1937.] Act of the U.S. Congress passed in 1937 which authorized the establishment of the U.S. Housing Authority for financing and supervising slum clearance and the building of dwelling units for low-income families.

Wagner von Jauregg (väg'nér fon you'rek), Julius. [Also, Wagner-Jauregg.] b. at Wels, Upper Austria, March 7, 1857; d. at Vienna, Sept. 27, 1940. Austrian neurologist and psychiatrist. He worked on endemic goiter and cretinism and recommended successfully the addition of potassium iodide or sodium to salt, with resulting decrease in goiter. He was awarded (1927) the Nobel prize in physiology and medicine for his discovery of the therapeutic value of malarial inoculation in the treatment of general paresis (dementia paralytica).

Wagogo (wä.gō'gō). See Gogo.

Wagoner (wag'on.ér). City in NE Oklahoma, county seat of Wagoner County; marketing center for an agricultural area. 4,395 (1950).

Wagram (vä.gräm). [Also, Deutsch-Wagram.] Village in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, ab. 9 mi. NE of Vienna. Here, July 5-6, 1809, the French under Napoleon defeated the Austrians under Archduke Charles. The armistice of Znaim followed a week after the battle. 232 (1946).

Wagram, Prince of. A title of Berthier, Louis Alexandre.

Wagrowiec (võng.grô'vyets). [German, Wongrowitz.] Town in NW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Poznań, ab. 35 mi. SE of Pila: lumber mills; machine factory. It came to Poland in 1919. Pop. 10,006 (1946).

Wagstaff (wag'stáf), Simon. Pseudonym of Jonathan Swift in his Polite Conversation.

Wahabis or Wahabees (wá.há'bêz). [Also, Wahhabites (wá.há'bíts).] Followers of Abd el-Wahhab (1691 or 1703-1787), a Mohammedan reformer, who opposed all practices not sanctioned by the Koran; the Wahabis form a kind of Puritan sect of the Sunnites, in that they accept some of the Sunna, or way of life of Mohammed, and reject the multiplication of saints and other additions to the basic law, but they are not figured as Sunnites. El-Wahhab's successors formed a powerful dominion whose chief seat was at Nejd in central Arabia. They were overthrown by Ibrahim Pasha in 1818, but afterward regained much of their former power in central Arabia. Under Ibn-Saud the Wahabite domains in Arabia were consolidated as Saudi Arabia in the 20th century.

Wahaya (wá.há'yá). See Haya.

Wahehe (wá.há'há). See Hehe.

Wahiawa (wá'hi.a.wá). City in C Oahu, Hawaiian Islands, ab. 16 mi. NW of Honolulu: residential community. 8,369 (1950).

Wahl (vål), Hans. b. 1885—. German scholar, director of the National Goethe Museum at Weimar.

Wahlstatt (vål'shtát), Prince of. Title of Blücher, Gebhard Leberecht von.

Wahlstatt, Battle of. See Liegnitz, Battle of.

Wahlverwandschaften (vål'fêr.vánt.sháf.tên), Die. Novel by Goethe, published in 1809.

Wahnfried (vån'frêd). Villa where Richard Wagner lived during the later years of his life at Bayreuth. He was buried in the grounds.

Wahoo (wá'hô). City in E Nebraska, county seat of Saunders County. It is the seat of Luther College. 3,128 (1950).

Wahpeton (wó'pê.tôn). [Former name, Chahinkapa.] City in SE North Dakota, county seat of Richland County, on the Red River: shipping point for wheat and dairy products. 5,125 (1950).

Wahrheit und Dichtung (vår'hît ûnt diêh'tûng). See Dichtung und Wahrheit.

Wahrmund (vår'mûnt), Adolf. b. at Wiesbaden, Germany, June 10, 1827; d. at Vienna, May 15, 1913. German Orientalist. He served (1885 et seq.) as director of the Oriental Academy at Vienna.

Wahsatch Range (wó'sach). See Wasatch Range.

Wahutu (wá.hú'tô). See Hera.

Waiblingen (vî'bling.en). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Württemberg-Baden, American Zone, formerly in the free state of Württemberg, ab. 7 mi. NE of Stuttgart: metal, chemical, textile, paper, and leather industries; sugar refinery. Saint Michael's Church, in the Gothic style, dates from the 15th century; there are various other churches and medieval towers. The town was once the center of the Swabian domain of the Hohenstaufen family. 16,000 (1950).

Waiblinger (vî'bling.ér). A surname of the Hohenstaufen family, who held the town of Waiblingen in the 12th century. The adherents of the Hohenstaufen were called Waiblingers and from this came the Italian Ghibelline, as Guelph came from the Welfs.

Waiblinger, Wilhelm. b. at Heilbronn, Germany, Nov. 21, 1804; d. at Rome, Jan. 17, 1830. German poet and prose writer. As a schoolboy he wrote a novel, Phaeton (not published till 1823), about his fellow countryman Friedrich Hölderlin, and like Hölderlin he turned his attention to Greece (Lieder der Griechen, 1823; Vier Erzählungen aus der Geschichte des jetzigen Griechenlands, 1826). He went to Italy in 1827, and sent back from Rome and Naples sketches and poems (Blüten der Muse aus Rom, 1829; Taschenbuch aus Italien und Griechenland, 1829-30). His collected prose works were published posthumously in 1839, his poems in 1844.

Waicuri (wí.kô'ri). Indian tribe, now extinct, that inhabited the S peninsula of Baja California, Mexico. The language formerly gave its name to a linguistic stock which also included the extinct Perico; but it is now classified as Hokan.

Waidhofen an der Ybbs (vî't'hôf.en án der ips). Town in E Austria, in the province of Lower Austria, situated on the Ybbs River between Steyr and St. Pölten. It has been a center for the Austrian iron industry since the 16th century. 5,201 (1951).

Wailatpuan (wî.lát'pó.an). [Also, Wailatpuan (wî.lát'-.)] North American Indian linguistic stock. It comprised two tribes, the Cayuse and the Molala, formerly living in N and W Oregon and W Washington. A few still survive on a reservation in Oregon, but the language is practically extinct.

Waikiki Beach (wí.kí.kê'). Bathing beach on the SE coast of Oahu, Hawaiian Islands, near Honolulu.

Wain (wân), Charles's. In astronomy, the seven brightest stars in the constellation Ursa Major, or the Great Bear. Two of the stars are known as "the pointers," because, being nearly in a straight line with the polestar, they direct an observer to it. This combination of stars has also been called the Plow, the Great Dipper, the Northern Car, and sometimes the Butcher's Cleaver.

Wainämöinen (vî.ná.méi.nen). [Also, Vainämöinen.] Hero of the Finnish national epic, the Kalevala. He was a powerful magician, invented the harp, composed the runes, built ships, and gave the people barley. He was also a great warrior, and protected the country against its enemies, especially the Lapps.

Wainfleet (wân'flêt), William of. See Waynflete, William of.

Wainwright (wân'rit), Jonathan Mayhew. b. at Liverpool, England, Feb. 24, 1792; d. at New York, Sept. 21, 1854. American Protestant Episcopal clergyman. He was ordained a priest in 1817, served (1821-34) as rector of Grace Church at New York, and in 1852 was consecrated as bishop of New York.

Wainwright, Jonathan Mayhew. b. at New York, July 21, 1821; killed in action at Galveston, Tex., Jan. 1, 1863. American naval officer; son of Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright (1792-1854). Entering (1837) the U.S. navy as a midshipman, he was a lieutenant at the outbreak of the Civil War. As commander of the flagship of a mortar flotilla, he played a leading role in the operations of David G. Farragut and David D. Porter against Forts Jackson and St. Philip along the lower Mississippi River. He took part in the seizure (October, 1862) of Galveston, and was killed when the Confederates recaptured it.

Wainwright, Jonathan Mayhew. b. at Walla Walla, Wash., Aug. 23, 1883; d. at San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 2, 1953. American soldier, hero of Bataan and Corregidor in World War II; grandson of Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright (1821-63). He served in the Philippines (1909-10) and in France and Germany during World War I. He was appointed (1940) major general and assigned to the Philippines, where he was commander of the northern front from the Japanese invasion (December, 1941) until he succeeded Douglas MacArthur as commander in chief. Appointed (March, 1942) lieutenant general, he led the defense of Bataan and Corregidor until forced to surrender (April, 1942) to the Japanese. He was appointed (1945) general and awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. He was rescued (August, 1945) from a Japanese prison camp.

Wainwright, Richard. b. at Charlestown, Mass., Jan. 5, 1817; d. at Donaldsville, La., Aug. 10, 1862. American naval officer. Entering (1831) the U.S. navy as a midshipman, he was promoted (1861) to the rank of commander, and during the passage of a Union fleet past Forts Jackson and St. Philip along the lower Mississippi River was in command of the Harford, flagship of David G. Farragut. He also took part in the naval operations against Vicksburg and was in command of the Harford during its engagement (July 15, 1862) with the Arkansas, a Confederate ram. He died aboard his ship after suffering an attack of remittent fever.

Wainwright, Richard. b. at Washington, D.C., Dec. 17, 1849; d. March 6, 1926. American naval officer; son of Richard Wainwright (1817-62). He was graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1868, was executive officer of the Maine when she was blown up in the harbor of Havana, and commended the Gloucester in the battle of Santiago, on July 3, 1898.

Wairu (wā.ē.rō). See Hera.

Wait (wāt), William Bell. b. at Amsterdam, N.Y., March 25, 1839; d. Oct. 25, 1916. American educator of the blind. He served (1863-1915) at New York as superintendent of an institution for the blind, of which he was later emeritus principal (1915-16). He was the inventor of a punctographic method of publishing, called the New York Point System, which was based on the Braille system.

Waite (wāt), Morrison Remick. b. at Lyme, Conn., Nov. 29, 1816; d. at Washington, D.C., March 23, 1888. American jurist. He was graduated from Yale in 1837, was admitted to the bar in 1839, became a leader of the bar in Ohio, was counsel for the U.S. before the Geneva tribunal of arbitration (1871-72), and was appointed chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court in 1874, serving until his death.

Waiting for Lefty (lef'ti). Play by Clifford Odets, produced and published in 1935.

Waitz (vīts), Georg. b. at Flensburg, Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, Oct. 9, 1813; d. at Berlin, May 24, 1886. German historian. He aided G. H. Pertz in editing the Monumenta Germaniae historica, became professor at Kiel in 1842, was agent of the provisional government of Schleswig and Holstein in 1843, and served as a member of the Frankfurt Parliament in 1848. He became professor at Göttingen in 1849, and removed to Berlin as editor of the Monumenta Germaniae in 1875. Among his works are Deutsche Verfassungsgeschichte (8 vols., 1844-78), Schleswig-Holsteins Geschichte (2 vols., 1851-54), Lübeck unter Jürgen Wullenweber und die europäische Politik (3 vols., 1855-56), Grundzüge der Politik (1862), a life of Ufilas (1840), and Deutsche Kaiser (1872).

Waitz, Theodor. b. at Gotha, Germany, March 17, 1821; d. at Marburg, Germany, May 21, 1864. German philosopher and anthropologist. He wrote Grundlegung der Psychologie (1846), Lehrbuch der Psychologie (1849), Allgemeine Pädagogik (1852), Anthropologie der Naturvölker (6 vols., 1859-71), and Die Indianer Nordamerikas, and edited Aristotle's Organon.

Waitzen (vīt'sen). German name of Vác.

Waiyung (wī'yūng'). [Also: Hui-yang; former name, Hui-chow-fu.] City in SE China, in Kwangtung province, ab. 75 mi. E of Canton. It is an important commercial city, and a former treaty port, opened in 1902. Pop. ab. 35,000.

Wakamatsu (wā.kā.mā.tsō). [Former name, Aizu.] City in N central Honshu, Japan, situated in an interior basin ab. 130 mi. N of Tokyo. It has manufactures of cotton textiles, lacquerware, and ceramics, and is also an important center for trade in silk and agricultural products. The city was an important stronghold in the Middle Ages, with a castle erected in 1393, which was destroyed during the civil war in 1688. Pop. 60,034 (1950).

Wakamatsu. City in N Kyushu, Japan, a port on the N coast ab. 3 mi. N of Yawata. It is one of the chief coal-shipping ports of Japan, and an important industrial center with metal, machinery, and petroleum-refining in lustries. 89,574 (1950).

Wakamba (wā.kām'bā). See Kamba.

Wakambe (wā.kām'bī). See Kambe.

Wakaranga (wā.kā.rāng'gā). See Karanga.

Wakashan (wā.kash'an, wō'ke.shān). North American Indian language family, including the languages and dialects spoken by tribes inhabiting Vancouver Island and the facing shores of British Columbia, and the Cape Flattery area of Washington. It includes Nootka and Kwakiutl.

Wakatsuki (wā.kā.tsō.kē). Baron Reijiro. b. in Shimane prefecture, Japan, 1866; d. at Ito, Japan, Nov. 21, 1949. Japanese statesman, prime minister (1926). He served as chief delegate to the London Naval Conference (1929-30), and was again premier (1931).

Wakavirondo (wā.kā.vē.rōn'dō). See Kavirondo.

Wakawai (wā.kā.wā'ē). See Acawai.

Wakayama (wā.kā.yā.mā). City in Japan, on the island of Honshu, ab. 4 mi. SW of Ōsaka. It is an industrial city specializing in spinning, weaving, dyeing, and the bleaching of cotton and silk fabrics. A tidal wave and earthquake caused damage here in 1945. Pop. 191,337 (1955).

Wakea (wā.kā'ā). See Atea.

Wakefield (wā.k'fēld). Unincorporated community in SE Arizona, in Pima County; southern residential suburb of Tucson. 8,903 (1950).

Wakefield. City and county borough, market town, and manufacturing center, in N central England, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, situated on the river Calder ab. 8 mi. S of Leeds, ab. 176 mi. N of London by rail. It is a manufacturing town, formerly noted for its production of cloth and yarn, and now has a heavy iron and steel industry. Wakefield is an important coal-mining center, located on the Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire, and Derbyshire coal field. It is the administrative center of the West Riding. Here on Dec. 31, 1460, the Lancastrians under Queen Margaret defeated the Yorkists under Richard, Duke of York, who was killed in the battle. 60,380 (1951).

Wakefield. Town in E Massachusetts, in Middlesex County, ab. 10 mi. N of Boston; manufactures of rattan. 19,633 (1950).

Wakefield. City in the W part of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, in Gogebic County; iron mining. 3,344 (1950).

Wakefield, Arthur. b. Nov. 19, 1799; d. at Wairau, New Zealand, June 17, 1843. English naval officer; brother of Edward Gibbon Wakefield. He founded (1841) the settlement at Nelson, New Zealand, and was killed two years later in a Maori uprising.

Wakefield, Edward Gibbon. b. at London, March 20, 1796; d. at Wellington, New Zealand, May 16, 1862. English colonial statesman whose ideas on scientific colonization influenced subsequent English colonial development. In 1820 he resigned as attaché of the British legation at Turin to attempt to make a living as a journalist. An unfortunate adventure in abduction and marriage resulted in Wakefield's imprisonment (1827). While in prison he studied both penal and colonial problems, writing several authoritative pamphlets and obtaining some influence. He advocated the sale, rather than the grant, of colonial lands and the use of the funds thus obtained to finance further immigration; the cessation of transportation of criminals; and the regulation of emigration, especially with regard to demand for colonists and the distribution of the sexes. He became a manager of the company that founded South Australia and in 1837 managing director of the New Zealand Association. He was for a time private secretary to J. G. Lambton, 1st Earl of Durham, in his mission to Canada; the Durham Report, the basis for the unification of Canada, was based largely on Wakefield's theories, and he had much to do with publicizing the report. Returning to England, he evaded government restrictions on emigration to New Zealand and, by sending a group of English colonists there, forced England to annex the islands, thus forestalling the French. In the next years he was active in developing New Zealand into a prosperous colony. After 1853 he lived in New Zealand but opposition to his policies forced him out of an active part in the government in 1854. The more important of his works include Facts Relating to the Punishment of Death in the Metropolis (1831), A Letter from Sydney (1829), England and America, 2 vols. (1834), and A View of the Art of Colonization (1849).

Wakefield Plays. [Also Towneley Plays.] Cycle of 32 mystery plays, of uncertain date, perhaps earlier than the 14th century, but growing during the 15th century into the cycle now extant. Twenty-four of the plays are from the New Testament and eight are from the Old. They were played at the fairs of Woodkirk (Widkirk), near Wakefield, and are called by all these names. They were first printed by the Surtees Society, in 1836, as The Towneley Mysteries, from the fact that the manuscript (15th century) in which they are preserved belonged to the library of the Towneley family, Towneley Hall, Lancashire, England. This cycle is notable for the writing of the unknown "Wakefield master," who appears to have written several of the plays and revised others some time before 1450; his work is recognizably that of the first great English dramatist and his Second Shepherds' Play is famous for its humor.

Wake Forest (wāk'fɔrɛst). Town in E central North Carolina, in Wake County, 3,704 (1950).

Wake Island (wāk). [Former name, Halcyon Island.] Coral atoll in the N Pacific Ocean, about midway between Hawaii and Guam, in lat. 19°18' N., long. 166°35' E., comprising the three small islands of Wake, Peale, and Wilkes. Discovered in 1796, it was claimed in 1898 by the U.S. In the period 1935-39 Wake was developed as a trans-Pacific civil air base, and it had been made a naval air station at the beginning of World War II. Attacked (Dec. 7, 1941) by the Japanese, it was heroically held for 15 days by a small force of U.S. marines and civilians. Allied forces bombed it heavily during the war and recaptured it in 1945.

Wakem (wāk'em), Philip. One of the principal characters in George Eliot's novel The Mill on the Floss, a deformed youth in love with Maggie Tulliver.

Wakikuyu (wāk.kē.kō'yō). See Kikuyu.

Wakimbu (wāk.kēm'bō). See Kimbu.

Wakonongo (wāk.kō.nōng.gō). See Konongo.

Waksman (waks'man), Selman Abraham. b. at Pri-luka, Kiev government, Russia, July 2, 1888-. American biochemist, an authority on soil microbiology. He taught at Rutgers (1918 et seq.) and was professor of microbiology there (1942 et seq.). He was microbiologist (1921 et seq.) of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station at New Brunswick and marine bacteriologist (1930-42) at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute. Waksman's investigations into the soil molds led to his discovery of streptomycin, one of the notable antibiotic substances and useful in the treatment of tuberculosis; for this he was awarded the 1952 Nobel prize in physiology and medicine. Author of Principles of Soil Microbiology (1927, 1932), Humus (1936, 1938), Streptomycin, Its Nature and Application (1949), and others.

Wakua (wāk.kō'ā). See Makua.

Wakwanyama (wāk.kwān.yā'mā). See Kwanyama.

Wala (wāl'ā). [Also, Wa.] Sudanic-speaking people of W Africa, inhabiting NW Northern Territories of the Gold Coast. Their language is related to those of the Mossi and Dagomba. Their population has been estimated at ab. 72,000 (based on A. W. Cardinal, The Gold Coast, 1931). They practice hoe agriculture, and their principal food is millet. They are non-Mohammedan.

Walachia or walachia (wō.lāk'i.ə). Region and former principality in S Rumania, originally part of the ancient Roman province of Dacia. It is bounded by Hungary and Transylvania on the NW and N, by Moldavia on the N, and by the Danube on the E, S, and SW, and W, separating it from Dobruja, Bulgaria, and Serbia. It was one of the so-called Danubian Principalities, Moldavia being the other. The Olt River divides it into Muntenia, or Greater Walachia, and Oltenia, or Little Walachia. The chief cities are Bucharest, capital of Iumania, and Ploesti, great oil center. The principality of Walachia arose in the 13th century. From about the close of the 14th century it was tributary to Turkey under its national princes, and from 1716 to 1821 under the Phanariot rulers appointed by the Turkish sultan. An era of greater autonomy began in 1829, inaugurated by the intervention of Russia. Walachia was united under the same prince with Moldavia in 1859, and in 1861 the two principalities were united into the principality of Rumania.

Walamba (wāl.lām'bā). See Lamba.

Walam Olum (wāl.lam'ō'lum). [Also, Walum Olum.] Mythological chronicle of the Delaware Indians. The words mean "red painted stick record," and the document is so named because tally sticks with red symbols were the devices by which the myths and legends were originally remembered and recited.

Walapai (wāl.lā.pī'). North American Indian tribe, now greatly reduced in numbers, formerly inhabiting W central Arizona. The language is of the Yuman family.

Walays (wōl'ās). See Wallace, Sir William.

Walbrzych (vāl'brzhi). [German, Waldenburg.] Town in SW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Wrocław, formerly in Silesia, Germany, situated on the Polnitz River, ab. 40 mi. SW of Wrocław (Breslau). A center of the lower Silesian coal-mining district, it has iron foundries, ceramics and porcelain manufactures, and a chemical industry (nitrogen works, and since World War II production of artificial leather). The town came to Prussia in 1742, and to Poland in 1945. There has been much migration since World War II from Upper Silesia and C and E Poland. 64,136 (1939), 72,976 (1946).

Walch (vālch), Christian Wilhelm Franz. b. at Jena, Germany, 1726; d. at Göttingen, Germany, March 10, 1784. German Protestant church historian. His chief work is Entwurf einer vollständigen Historie der Ketzererei (11 vols., 1762-85).

Walcheren (wāl'chē.rən). Island in SW Netherlands, belonging to the province of Zeeland, in the North Sea at the mouth of the Schelde estuary. The chief towns are Vlissingen (Flushing) and Middelburg. It was the scene of an unsuccessful attack on Antwerp by Sir John Pitt, 2nd Earl of Chatham, in 1809. A German strong point in World War II, it was subjected to heavy Allied bombing attacks; occupied by British Nov. 1-3, 1944. The dikes broke during the war and the island was flooded (drained in 1945); the damage was considerable. Length, 11 mi.; area, ab. 82 sq. mi.

Walckenaer (vāl.kē.nār), Baron Charles Athanasie. b. at Paris, Dec. 25, 1771; d. there, April 27, 1852. French entomologist, geographer, and biographer.

Walcot (wōl'kot, wōl'-), Charles Melton. b. at London, 1816; d. at Philadelphia, May 13, 1868. English actor.

Walcott (wōl'kot, wōl'-), Charles Doolittle. b. at New York Mills, N.Y., March 31, 1850; d. Feb. 9, 1927. American geologist and paleontologist, secretary (1907 et seq.) of the Smithsonian Institution. He was connected with the U.S. Geological Survey from 1879, was director of the survey (1894-1907), was secretary of the Carnegie Institution (1901-05), and was honorary curator (1902 et seq.) of the department of paleontology in the U.S. National Museum. His researches related chiefly to the stratigraphy and paleontology of the Lower Paleozoic formations.

Walcott, Jersey Joe. [Pseudonym of Arnold Raymond Cream, Jr.] b. at Camden, N.J., Jan. 31, 1914-. American prize fighter. He began his ring career in 1929, but left the ring and for a time was on the public relief rolls. He again began his boxing c1947 and in December, 1947, met Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion, at New York; Walcott knocked Louis down, and in the eyes of many won the fight. For a time he was called the uncrowned champion, but Louis knocked him out in a return bout. Louis having retired, Walcott fought Ezzard Charles for the heavyweight championship in 1948, but lost; Charles again beat him in April, 1951, but in July, 1951, at Pittsburgh, Walcott knocked out Charles in the seventh round and became champion. In September, 1952, Walcott was knocked out in the 13th round at Philadelphia by Rocky Marciano and lost the heavyweight title.

Walcz (vālch). [German, Deutsch-Krone.] Town in NW Poland, in the województwo (province) of Szczecin, formerly in Germany, situated between two lakes NW of Pila: livestock markets; agricultural industries. It came to Poland in 1945. Pop. 14,941 (1939), 7,516 (1946).

Wald (vālt), Der. [Eng. trans., "The Forest."] Opera in one act by Dame Ethel Smyth, with a libretto by the composer, first performed at Dresden in September, 1901.

Wald (wōld), Lillian D. b. at Cincinnati, Ohio, March 10, 1867; d. at Westport, Conn., Sept. 1, 1940. American social worker, founder (1893) and president of the Henry Street Settlement at New York, where she also organized (1902) public health nursing. She originated (1902) at New York the first city school nursing service, and suggested the idea of a federal children's bureau, enacted (1908) by Congress. Author of The House on Henry Street (1915) and Windows on Henry Street (1934).

Waldai (wāl'dī). Subgroup of the Kipsigis, a Nilo-Hamitic-speaking people of SW Kenya, in E Africa.

Waldbröl (vāl.brē'l). Town in W Germany, in the Land (state) of North Rhine-Westphalia, British Zone, formerly in the Rhine Province, Prussia, ab. 30 mi. SE of Cologne: cattle trade; shoe and leather industry. 11,203 (1950).

Waldeck (vāl'dek), Heinrich Suso. [Pseudonym of Augustin Popp.] b. at Wsherau, near Pilsen (now Plzeň), in Bohemia, Oct. 3, 1873; d. at St. Veit, in the fat, fāte, fār, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; ʔh, then; d, d or j; s, s or sh; t, t or ch;

Mühlviertel, Upper Austria, Sept. 4, 1943. Austrian lyric poet.

Waldeck-Rousseau (väl'dek.rö.sö), Pierre Marie René Ernest. b. at Rennes, France, Dec. 2, 1846; d. at Paris, Aug. 10, 1904. French barrister and statesman. He was counsel for Ferdinand de Lesseps in the Panama case, was a member (1879-89) of the Chamber of Deputies, and in 1891 was elected to the Senate. He was minister of the Interior (1881, 1883-85) and premier (1899-1902). His premiership was marked by the culmination of the Dreyfus affair, the resultant peaceful suppression of the antidemocratic forces, measures taken against religious associations, and a series of international incidents handled by his foreign minister Théophile Delcassé.

Waldegrave (wól'gräv), Robert. b. at Blockley, Worcestershire, England, c1554; d. at London, 1604. English Puritan printer, original publisher of the Martin Marprelate tracts. He began (1575) his London publishing business with A Castell for the Soule, later printing (1588-89) the controversial Marprelate tracts. He was (1590-1603) at Edinburgh as the royal printer, where he published books by John Napier, James VI (afterward James I of England), John Penry, Alexander Hume, Thomas Cartwright, and William Alexander. In 1603 he returned to England and reestablished his London business. Waldegrave also published pirated editions of Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia (1599), Thomas Tusser's 500 Points of Good Husbandry (1599), and Robert Southwell's Saint Peter's Complaint (1600).

Waldemar (wól'de.mär, väl'-) or Valdemar (väl'de.mär) (of Brandenburg). [Called "The Great."]. d. 1319. Margrave of Brandenburg (1308-19). He waged war successfully against a league of German princes, Denmark, Sweden, and Poland.

Waldemar or Valdemar I (of Denmark). [Called "Waldemar the Great."]. b. 1131; d. 1182. King of Denmark (1157-82). On the death of Eric III (1147), he contested the throne with Sweyn III and Canute V, and after defeating Sweyn (1157) became sole king. He campaigned against the Wends and extended his realm eastward. He established his capital at Copenhagen and, by the marriage of his daughters, provided political bonds between Denmark and Sweden, France, and the Holy Roman Empire.

Waldemar or Valdemar II (of Denmark). [Called "Waldemar the Victorious."]. b. 1170; d. 1241. King of Denmark (1202-41); son of Waldemar I. He conquered Estonia and many of the lands near the Baltic and built a great Baltic empire. In 1223, however, he was made prisoner by one of his German vassals, and during his three-year imprisonment his empire dissolved. Under Waldemar Denmark became a feudal state in which the monarchy was supreme.

Waldemar or Valdemar IV (of Denmark). [Called "Waldemar Atterdag."]. b. c1320; d. 1375. King of Denmark (1340-75). He came to the throne of a country almost stripped of its possessions and prey to a rapacious nobility. By strict adherence to the feudal law, Waldemar obtained the submission of the nobles and regained, in a series of wars against Sweden, Holstein, and Schleswig, much of his lost domain. In 1361 he succeeded in waging a war against the cities of the Hanseatic League that reduced greatly their privileges, but the wars brought taxation so high that Waldemar fled (1368) to Germany to escape a revolt. The Hanseatic League attacked and, by the time Waldemar returned to Denmark, the Peace of Stralsund (1370), giving back the Hanseatic commercial privileges and permitting the Hanseatic cities a voice in the future selection of Danish kings, was forced from Denmark.

Walden (wól'den). Village in SE New York, in Orange County. 4,559 (1950).

Walden, 1st Baron Howard de. A title of Howard, Lord Thomas (1561-1626).

Walden, 2nd Baron Howard de. A title of Howard, Theophilus.

Walden (väl'den), Paul. b. 1863—. Russian chemist. He discovered the Walden inversion (1895), a theoretically important substitution reaction in organic stereochemistry in which a "d" (dextrorotatory) compound is changed to an "l" (levorotatory) one.

Waldenburg (väl'den.bürk). German name of Walbrzych.

Walden, or Life in the Woods (wól'den). Work by Henry David Thoreau, published in 1854, describing in 18 essays his solitary life in a cabin on the northwest shore of Walden Pond, near Concord, Mass. Thoreau occupied the hut from July 4, 1845, to Sept. 6, 1847. The work is especially notable for its philosophical individualism and its observations of nature.

Waldenses (wól'den.séz). [Also: Leonists, Waldensians (wól'den.sianz); French, Vaudois, Vaudois des Alpes.] Members of a reforming body of Christians, followers of Peter Waldo (Valdo) of Lyons, formed c1170. Their chief seats were in the Alpine valleys of Piedmont, Dauphiné, and Provence; hence the French name Vaudois des Alpes, or Vaudois. The Waldenses, refused recognition by the papacy, drifted into heresy and, when it arose in the 16th century, joined the Reformation movement. They were often severely persecuted, and were the object of several crusades.

Waldensee (väl'de.zä), Count Alfred von. b. at Potsdam, Germany, April 8, 1832; d. at Hanover, Germany, March 5, 1904. German general. He was chief of the general staff of the 10th army corps in the Franco-Prussian War, became (1881) quartermaster general and deputy chief of staff, and succeeded Helmuth von Moltke as chief of staff in 1888. He became commander of the ninth army corps in 1891, inspector general of the third army corps in 1898, and field marshal in 1899. He was commander in chief of the European forces in China in 1900 during the Boxer rebellion, but arrived after the fighting at Peiping.

Waldheim (väl'thim). Town in E Germany, in the Land of Saxony, Russian Zone, ab. 32 mi. W of Dresden: stone quarries; soap, perfume, cigar, and lumber industries. 12,721 (1946).

Waldheim, Gotthelf Fischer von. See Fischer von Waldheim, Gotthelf.

Waldinger (väl'ding'er), Ernst. b. possibly at Vienna, Oct. 16, 1896—. Austrian lyric poet and essayist.

Waldis (väl'dis), Burkard. b. at Allendorf, in Hesse, Germany, c1495; d. at Aterode, in Hesse, probably in 1557. German poet. The greater part of his early life was spent in Livonia. In 1523 he was sent by Archbishop Jasper van Linden to the Pope to solicit aid against the invaders of Protestantism. On his return from Rome he was taken prisoner by the Protestants at Riga, where he himself went over to Protestantism. Subsequently he was a ceryman at Aterode, in Hesse. He wrote fables in verse. His Verlorener Sohn (1527) is a Shrovetide play; his Esopos, containing 100 fables in verse, was written in 1548 (republished 1862).

Waldo (wól'dö, wól'-), Peter. [Also: Valdez, Valdo; Latin, Petrus Waldus.] fl. in the last part of the 12th century. Merchant of Lyons who became (c1170) a preacher and leader of the Waldenses, who were named after him. The refusal of the papacy and the church councils to permit them to preach as lay brothers was ignored and Waldo and his followers were excommunicated and driven from their communities.

Waldron (wól'dron), George. Original name of Barrington, George.

Waldeemüller (vält'zä.mül'er), Martin. [Called by himself Ilacamilus or Hylacomyllus.] b. probably at Radolfzell, on Lake Constance, Germany, between 1470 and 1475; d. c1522. German geographer. In 1507 he was, with his friend Philseus Klingmann, in the printing establishment of Walter Ludd at St.-Dis. In this year he published a little treatise in Latin, the Cosmographiae Introductio. . . . In this book he says: " . . . and a fourth part (of the earth) has been discovered by Amerigo Vespucci. . . . Inasmuch as both Europe and Asia received their names from women, I see no reason why anyone should justly object to calling this part Amerige, i.e. the land of Amerigo, or America, after Amerigo, its discoverer." The publication met with success and soon ran through several editions. Waldeemüller made a "mappemonde" for which the volume was explanatory, entitled Universalis Cosmographia (1507), 8 ft. long and 4½ high, on which the name America was used (on South America) for the first time. No copy was known to exist till 1900, when one was discovered in the library of Castle Wollfegg in Württemberg.

Waldshut (vált'shót). Town in S Germany, in the Land (state) of Baden, French Zone, formerly in the free state of Baden, situated on the Rhine River opposite the Swiss border, ab. 30 mi. SE of Freiburg im Breisgau; swamps; chemical and cotton-textile industries. Pop. 6,968 (1946).

Waldstätter (vált'shtet'ér). Popular term for the (Four) Forest Cantons of Switzerland: Uri, Unterwalden, Schwyz and Lucerne, so called since the 13th century.

Waldstein (vált's'tín), Albrecht Wenzel Eusebius von. See Wallenstein, Albrecht Wenzel Eusebius von.

Waldstein (wóld'stín), Charles. Original name of Walston, Sir Charles.

Waldféfel (vált'fét'el), Emil. b. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, Dec. 9, 1837; d. at Paris, in February, 1915. French waltz composer. He was pianist (1865 et seq.) to the empress Eugénie and composed over 200 dances.

Waldwick (wóld'wik). Borough in NE New Jersey, near Paterson; residential suburb. 3,963 (1950).

Walen (wá'lén), Madame Van der. See Fernig, Félicité de.

Walenje (wá.lén'já). See Lenje.

Walensee or Walen Se (wá'lén.zá). German name of Wallen, Lake.

Wales (wá'z). [Welsh, Cymru; Latin, Cambria]. Titular principality of Great Britain, part of the United Kingdom. It is bounded by the Irish Sea on the N, the English counties of Cheshire, Shropshire, Herefordshire, and Gloucestershire on the E, the Bristol Channel on the S, and St. George's Channel on the W. Its surface is largely mountainous, reaching 3,560 ft. in Snowdon, the highest point in S Britain. It is noted for mineral wealth, producing iron, coal, copper, lead, zinc, slate, and limestone. The N and NW sections of Wales (Anglesey, the valleys of North Wales, and the Lleyn peninsula) raise many sheep and beef cattle. The SW part is important for dairy cattle and pigs. The C portion of the country is mostly in rough hill pasture for sheep. The Vale of Glamorgan is an area of mixed farming. The Welsh Borderland (with England), or Welsh Marches, is mainly an area of permanent pasture where many cattle and sheep are raised. The country is divided into North Wales, containing the counties Anglesey, Caernarvonshire, Denbighshire, Flintshire, Merionethshire, and Montgomeryshire; and South Wales, containing the counties Brecknockshire, Cardiganshire, Carmarthenshire, Glamorganshire, Pembrokeshire, and Radnorshire. South Wales is highly industrialized, with a great coal field and large iron and steel works, chemical plants, and other heavy industries. The inhabitants of Wales are largely of Welsh stock, and the Welsh language is commonly spoken by about 40 percent of the population. The ancient inhabitants were the Celtic tribes Ordovices, Demetae, and Silures. Wales was not subdued by the Romans; maintained prolonged struggles with the Anglo-Saxons; was made tributary by Athelstan, Harold II, and William the Conqueror; and after repeated efforts was subdued (1276-84) by Edward I, and united to England. An unsuccessful rebellion, under Owen Glendower, broke out in 1400. The principality was incorporated with England in 1536. Area, ab. 8,016 sq. mi.; pop. 2,596,986 (1951).

Wales, Prince of. Title usually conferred on the heir apparent to the throne of England. The kings who have held it at the time of their accession are Edward II (the first holder of it), Henry V, Edward V, Henry VIII, Charles I, Charles II, George II, George IV, Edward VII, George V, and Edward VIII, sons of the sovereigns preceding them, and Richard III and George III, grandsons of their predecessors. Edward III, Henry VI, and Edward VI, though heirs apparent, did not hold the title; Edward, the Black Prince, Edward, son of Henry VI, Edward, son of Richard III, Henry, son of James I, and Frederick Louis, son of George II, all held the title but never reigned. James Francis Edward Stuart, the Old Pretender, was also Prince of Wales.

Walewski (vá.lef'ské), Alexandre Florian Joseph Colonna, Comte. b. at Walewie, Poland, May 4, 1810; d. at Strasbourg, in Alsace, Sept. 27, 1868. French politician, diplomat, and author; illegitimate son of Napoleon I and Countess Marie Walewska. He served in the Polish revolutionary army and in the French army, and filled various foreign missions. He was minister of foreign affairs (1855-60) and later president of the Corps Législatif under Napoleon III. He signed the treaty of Paris, and was president of the Congress of Paris in 1856.

Waley (wá'li), Arthur David. [Original surname, Schloss.] b. 1889-. English translator of Chinese and Japanese literature and assistant curator in the department of prints and drawings of the British Museum. Among his translations are 170 Chinese Poems (1919), Japanese Poetry (1919), The No Plays of Japan (1919), Tale of Genji by Baroness Murasaki (1925 et seq.), The Analects of Confucius (1939), Monkey by Wu Ch'ing-shan (1942), The Life and Times of Po Chü-an (1948), and others.

Walfishchbai (vált'fish.bi). German name of Walvis Bay.

Walfishch Bay or Walfish Bay (wó'l'fish). See Walvis Bay.

Walford (wó'l'ford), Lucy Bethia. [Maiden name, Colquhoun.] b. at Portobello, Scotland, April 17, 1845; d. 1915. Scottish novelist. Her works include Mr. Smith (1874), Pauline (1877), The Baby's Grandmother (1885), A Mere Child (1888), One of Ourselves (1900), Charlotte (1902), The Stay-at-Homes (1903), Leonora Stubbs (1908), Recollections of a Scottish Novelist (1910), and others.

Walhalla (vált'hál'á). See also Valhalla.

Walhalla (wó'l'hál'á). Town in NW South Carolina, county seat of Oconee County, in the Blue Ridge Mountains; manufactures of cotton textiles. 3,104 (1950).

Walintone (wá'lin.tón). Name of Wellington, England, in the Domesday Book.

Walke (wók), Henry. b. Dec. 24, 1808; d. March 8, 1893. American admiral. He served in the Mexican War, and in the Civil War rendered important services on the Mississippi River. He commanded the Corandele in the important action at Island No. 10 and at Memphis. Later he fought at Vicksburg and was in command of the Sacramento against Confederate raiders (1863-65) in the Atlantic.

Walker (wó'kér). River which rises in the Sierra Nevada Mountains in E California, and flows E to Nevada. Length, ab. 50 mi.

Walker, Amasa. b. at Woodstock, Conn., May 4, 1799; d. at Brookfield, Mass., Oct. 29, 1875. American political economist. He lectured on political economy at Oberlin (1842-48) and at Amherst (1859-69), held various political offices in Massachusetts, and was a member of Congress from Massachusetts (1862-63). He wrote Nature and Uses of Money and Mixed Currency (1857) and The Science of Wealth (1866).

Walker, Charles Howard. b. at Boston, Jan. 9, 1857; d. April 12, 1936. American architect. He studied at Boston, New York, and abroad, was a member of an archaeological expedition to Asia Minor in 1881, and from 1884 practiced architecture at Boston. In 1889 he became a partner in the firm of Walker and Kimball, who were architects in chief of the Omaha Exposition (1898) and members of the board of architects of the St. Louis Exposition (1904). In 1894 he was a lecturer at the Lowell Institute, and he also gave lecture courses at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at Harvard, Yale, and other universities. From 1902 he was director of the department of design of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. He was a member of the National Art Commission, appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1909.

Walker, Francis Amasa. b. at Boston, July 2, 1840; d. there, Jan. 5, 1897. American statistician and political economist; son of Amasa Walker. He graduated from Amherst in 1860, and served in the Civil War. He was commissioner of Indian affairs (1871-72) and professor of political economy and history in the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale (1873-81). He was subsequently president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was superintendent of the ninth and tenth U.S. censuses (1870 and 1880), and was U.S. commissioner of the international monetary conference at Paris in 1878. Among his works are Statistical Atlas of the United States (1874) and The Wages Question (1876).

Walker, Frank Comerford. b. at Plymouth, Pa., May 31, 1886-. American politician and lawyer, U.S. postmaster general (1940-45) under F. D. Roosevelt.

fat, fâte, fâr, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; ы, then; d, d or j; g, s or sh; t, t or ch;

He was district attorney (1909-12) of Silver Bow County, Mont., and was a member (1913) of the Montana legislature. Active in banking and real estate, he also took part in Democratic politics, serving as treasurer (1932 et seq.) of the Democratic national committee and as its chairman from January, 1943, to January, 1944. He was succeeded as U.S. postmaster general by Robert E. Hannegan soon after Harry S. Truman became president and was appointed alternate U.S. representative to the first part of the first session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Walker, Frederick. b. at London, May 26, 1840; d. at St. Fillans, Perthshire, Scotland, June 4, 1875. English painter and illustrator. In 1863 he exhibited his first oil painting at the Royal Academy, and in 1871 was elected an associate of that institution.

Walker, Henry Oliver. b. at Boston, May 14, 1843; d. Jan. 14, 1929. American artist. He was best known for his mural paintings, some of which are in the Library of Congress and in government buildings at Boston, St. Paul, and Newark, N.J.

Walker, Horatio. b. in Canada, 1858; d. Sept. 27, 1938. American painter. The formation of his style was most influenced by Millet and Troyon, especially the latter. He was elected a member of the National Academy of Design, New York, in 1891, and was also a member of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water-colours at London, and was a member of the Society of American Artists at New York.

Walker, James. b. at what is now Burlington, Mass., Aug. 16, 1794; d. Dec. 23, 1874. American clergyman and educator. He was ordained in 1818, helped found (1825) the American Unitarian Association, and was editor (1831-39) of The Christian Examiner. He served (1839-53) as professor of natural religion, moral philosophy, and civil polity at Harvard, of which he was president from 1853 to 1860.

Walker, James John. b. at New York, June 19, 1881; d. there, Nov. 18, 1946. American politician. He was admitted (1912) to the bar, having already been elected to the New York State assembly, and became (1915) a member of the state senate. He was elected (1925) mayor of New York and was reelected to that post in 1929. Walker, whose early career included a period as a songwriter, instituted a number of administrative reforms in the city government, but despite his popularity was the target of criticism because of evidences of corruption in his administration. The so-called Seabury investigation which brought to light municipal corruption and misgovernment under Walker's regime resulted in his resignation (1932) from office. He served (1940-46) as impartial chairman for the cloak and suit industry.

Walker, John. b. at Colney Hatch, Middlesex, England, March 18, 1732; d. at London, Aug. 1, 1807. English actor and lexicographer. After leaving (1768) the stage, he became a teacher of elocution at London. His best-known work is Critical Pronouncing Dictionary and Exposition of the English Language (1791); this was the first dictionary after Thomas Sheridan's of 1780 in which pronunciation was systematically recorded. He also published a Rhyming Dictionary (1775 and subsequent editions to the present day).

Walker, John. b. c1781; d. at Stockton, England, May 1, 1859. English druggist, inventor (1827) of a friction match.

Walker, John Brisben. b. near Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 10, 1847; d. July 7, 1931. American publisher and promoter. He was managing editor (1876-79) of the Washington Chronicle, purchased and published (1889-1905) the Cosmopolitan Magazine, which he also edited, and in 1898 acquired the Stanley Automobile Company and began manufacturing steam cars. He was the first president of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association. Through his affiliation with the Friends of Peace and Justice, he became active in the movement to keep the U.S. out of World War I.

Walker, John Grimes. b. at Hillsborough, N.H., March 20, 1835; d. at York Beach, Me., Sept. 15, 1907. American naval officer. He was graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, in 1856, and was instructor in mathematics in the academy (1859-60). He was in active service during the Civil War. He was president of the Nicaragua Canal Commission (1897-99), and was appointed president of the Isthmian Canal Commission in 1899.

Walker, Joseph Reddeford. b. probably in Virginia, Dec. 13, 1798; d. in California, Oct. 27, 1876. American trader, trapper, and guide. He maintained (1820-32) his headquarters at Independence, Mo., and was a member (1832-34) of Benjamin Bonneville's expedition to the West. He acted as a guide to J. C. Frémont's third expedition (1845-46), was among the first of the Forty-Niners to reach California, and was later active in gold prospecting in Arizona. A lake and a pass are named in his honor, as is Walker River.

Walker, Mary Edwards. b. at Oswego, N.Y., Nov. 26, 1832; d. near there, Feb. 21, 1919. American physician and supporter of women's rights. Granted (1855) a physician's certificate by the Syracuse Medical College, she practiced at Columbus, Ohio, and at Rome, N.Y.; she served (1861-64) as a nurse in the Union army and was an assistant surgeon (1864-65). After the close of the Civil War she became a physician at Washington, D.C., where she was active in advocating women's rights, a cause to which she had been drawn as early as 1845. She attracted wide attention by wearing men's attire. She established (1897) a women's colony called "Adamsless Eden."

Walker, Mildred. [Married name, Mildred Merrifield Walker Schemm.] b. at Philadelphia, May 2, 1905—. American novelist. Her novels include Fireweed (1934), Light from Arcurus (1935), Dr. Norton's Wife (1938), The Brewers' Big Horses (1940), Unless the Wind Turns (1941), Winter Wheat (1944), The Quarry (1947), and Medical Meeting (1949).

Walker, Nellie Verne. b. at Red Oak, Iowa, Dec. 8, 1874—. American sculptor, chiefly of memorial groups and portrait statues. Her works include memorials at Colorado Springs and at Cadillac, Mich.; portrait of Senator Harlan, U.S. Capitol, Washington, D.C.; Chief Keokuk, Keokuk, Iowa; Her Son, Art Institute of Chicago.

Walker, Robert John (or James). b. at Northumberland, Pa., July 23, 1801; d. at Washington, D.C., Nov. 11, 1869. American statesman and financier. U.S. secretary of the treasury (1845-49) under Polk. Though an opponent of nullification, he was U.S. senator from Mississippi (1836-45), and supported the Homestead Bill, and the independence and later the annexation of Texas. He was successful in obtaining Polk's nomination in 1844, was rewarded with the treasury secretaryship, and proved to be an extremely able administrator. He carried through the "Walker Tariff" of 1846, a notable antiprotectionist measure, and promoted the warehouse system and the department of the interior. He was governor of Kansas (1857-58), resigning in the dispute over the Leecompton Constitution, and was a financial agent of the U.S. in Europe (1863-64). He furthered the Alaska treaty.

